EMPLASTRUM PICIS BURGUNDICÆ, E. Picis, Burgundy Pitch or Pitch Plaster, (Picis Burgund. lbvj, ceræ flavæ, lbss.—Ph. U. S.)

EMPLASTRUM PICIS COMPOSITUM, E. picis cephal'icum, Cephal'ic plaster, Compound pitch plaster. (Picis arid. lbij, abietis resinæ lbj, resinæ flavæ, ceræ flavæ, aa ℥iv, myrist. ol. ℥j, ol. oliv., aquæ, aa f℥ij. To the pitch, resin, and wax, melted together, add the other matters and mix. Ph. L.) It is stimulant and rubefacient. Sometimes used in headach,—applied to the temples. See Depilatory.

EMPLASTRUM PICIS CUM CANTHARIDE, E. Callefaciens.

EMPLASTRUM DE PICÆ ET RESINIS GLUTINANS, E. Andrææ de Cruce, Emplâtre d'André de la Croix, ou collant de poix et de résines, Adhesive plaster of pitch and resins. (Picis albæ, p. 123, resin elemi, p. 32, terebinth. pur. p. 16, ol. laur. p. 16. Melt with a gentle heat, and pass through linen. Ph. P.) Used in contusions and fractures as a support.

EMPLASTRUM PLUMBI, E. lythar'gyri seu communè seu diach'ylon seu oxidi plumbi semivitrei seu ex oxido plumbi semivitreo, Diach'ylon simplex, White Diach'ylon, Lead or Diach'ylon plaster. (Plumbi oxid. semivitr. in pulv. lbv., olei oliv., cong., aquæ Oij. Boil together over a slow fire, stirring constantly until the oil and oxide of lead cohere. Ph. U. S.)

EMPLASTRUM POLYCHRESTUM, E. resinæ.

EMPLASTRUM POTASSII IODIDI, Plaster of Iodide of Potassium (Potass. iodid. ℥j, Thuris. ℥vj; Ceræ, ℥vj, ol. oliv. f℥ij. Ph. L.) This plaster, spread on leather, is applied to indolent tumours.

EMPLASTRUM RESINÆ, E. adhesivum seu lithar'gyri cum resinâ seu resinòsum seu nygnat'icum seu communè cum resinâ seu Polychrestum seu lithar'gyri cum resinâ pini; Resin, Adhesive or Sticking plaster. (Resin, lbss. emp. plumb. lbij. Melt the plaster, with a gentle heat, add the resin, and mix. Ph. U. S.) Employed in wounds and ulcers.

Baynton's adhesive plaster is made by melting one pound of lead plaster and six drachms of resin together.

EMPLASTRUM RESINOSUM, E. Resinæ—e. Roborans, E. Ferri (Ph. U. S.), E. oxid. ferri rubri—e. Rubefians, E. lyttæ.

EMPLASTRUM SAPONIS, E. saponaceum, Soap plaster. (Saponis concis. ℥iv, emplast. plumb. lbij. Mix the soap with the melted plaster, and boil to a proper consistence. Ph. U. S.) It is a mild discutient. Applied to tumours, corns, &c.

EMPLASTRUM SIMPLEX, E. ceræ—e. Spermatis ceti, Ceratum cetacei.

rubr. ℥ij, Ph. D.), Use:—the same as the plaster of red oxide of iron.

EMPLASTRUM VESICATORIUM, Blister, E. lyttæ—e. Vigo cum mercurio emendatum, E. hydrargyri compositum.

EMPLÂTRE, Emplastrum—e. d'André de la Croix, Emplastrum de pice et resinis glutmans—e. de Ciguë, Emplastrum cicutaë—e. Collant de poix et de résines, Emplastrum de pice et resinis glutmans—e. de Gomme résine, Emplastrum cum gummi-resinis—e. de Nuremberg, Emplastrum Norimburgense.

EMPLATTOMENOS, Emphracticus.

EMPNEUMATOSIS, Emphysema, Inspiration.

EMPOISONNEMENT, Poisoning.

EMPO'RION, εμποριον, (em, 'in,' and πορευω, 'I transport or send.' The brain was so called, of old, because there all the mental affairs are transacted.

EMPORIUM SPIRITUUM, Sensorium.

EMPOSIS, Imbibition.

EMPREINTE, Impression.

EMPRESMA, Empresma.

EMPRES'MA, Empres'mus, Empres'sis, from εμπερνω, 'future,' εμπερνω, 'I burn internally.' Inflammation. Phlegmat'icæ membranosæ et purynchymatosæ, Phlogisticæ, Febres continuæ inflammator'icæ, Inflammatio inter'na, Cav'ma, Inter'nal inflammation. A genus in the class hæmatica, order phlogotica, of Good.

EMPRESMA BRONCHITIS, Cyanache trachealis—e. Bronchlemmitis, Cyanache trachealis—e. Carditis, Carditis—e. Cephalitis, Phrenitis—e. Cystitis, Cystitis—e. Enteritis, Enteritis—e. Gastritis, Gastritis—e. Hepatitis, Hepatitis—e. Hysteritis, Metritis—e. Nephritis, Nephritis—e. Orchitis, Hernia humoralis—e. Otitis, Otitis—e. Paristhmitis, Cyanache—e. Paristhmitis tonsillarum maligna, Cyanache maligna—e. Paristhmitis pharyngea, Cyanache pharyngea—e. Paristhmitis tonsillarum, Cyanache tonsillarum—e. Parotitis, Cyanache parotidæa—e. Peritonitis, Peritonitis—e. Peritonitis mesenterica, Mesenteritis—e. Peritonitis omentalis, Epiploitis—e. Pleuritis, Pleuritis—e. Pleuritis diaphragmatica, Diaphragmitis—e. Pneumonitis, Pneumonia—e. Splenitis, Splenitis.

EMPRESMUS, Empresma.

EM'PRION, from em, and πριων, 'a saw.' Serrated. Galen has given this name to the pulse, when the sensation produced by the artery under the fingers is analogous to that which would be caused by the unequal teeth of a saw.

EMPROSTHO CYRTOMA, Lordosis.

EMPROSTHOTONOS, Emprosthoton'ia, Enta'sia tel'anus anti'cus, Tetanus anticus, from εμπροσθεν, 'forwards,' and τεινω, 'I stretch, 'I extend.' A variety of tetanus, in which the body is drawn forwards by the permanent contraction of the muscles, EMPSYCHO'SIS, from εμψυχωω, (em, and ψυχω, 'life,') 'I animate,' 'I vivify.' A word formerly used for the act of animating. The union of the soul with the body.

EMPTOE, Hæmoptysis.

EMPTOICA PASSIO, Hæmoptysis.

EMPTYSIS, Hæmoptysis.

EMPTYSMA, Sputum.

EMPYE, Empyema.

EMPYE'MA, Empy'e'sis, Em'pye, from em, 'in,' and πωω, 'pus,' Aposte'ma empy'e'ma. A collection of blood or pus, and, conventionally, of other fluid, in some cavity of the body, and particularly in that of the pleura. Empyema is one of the terminations of inflammation of the pleura, and is called also, Pytho'rax verus, Pleuro'rthæ'a purulent'a, Diapye'ma, Ecpy'e'ma, Ecpy'e'sis, Em'pye'sis seu Pyo'sis pec'toris, Hydrotho'rax purulentus, Dyspnœ'a pyothorac'ica, Pneumo'ni'a suppurato'ria, Abces'sus pectoris seu Thora'cis, Pleurapost'e'ma, Pleuropye'sis, (F.) Empyème, Pyopleurite.

The operation for empyema properly means the making of an opening into the thorax for the purpose of giving issue to the matter collected in the cavity of the pleura, although it has been used for the operation required for the evacuation of any fluid from the chest, or synonymously with Paracentesis thoracis.

EMPY'E/SIS; same etymon. Suppuration. An eruption of phlegmonous pimples, gradually filling with a purulent fluid, and terminating in thick scabs, frequently leaving pits or scabs. Pustulous Ecan'them. A genus in the order Exanthematica, class Hæmatica of Good. See Empyema.

EMPYESIS OCULI, Πυρρῶν—e. Pectoris, Empyema—e. Variola, Variola.

EMPYMELIUM POLYSARCIA, Polysarcia adiposa.

EMPYOCE'LE, from εμ, 'in,' πυον, 'pus,' and κηλη, 'tumour,' 'hernia.' A tumour, formed by an accumulation of pus in the scrotum. Different diseases have been described under this name, such as suppuration of the testicle, empyema of the tunica vaginalis, accumulation of pus in the cavity of a hernial sac, abscesses of different kinds formed in the cellular texture of the scrotum, &c.

EMPYOM'PHALUS, from εμ, 'in,' πυον, 'pus,' and ομφαλος, 'the navel.' This word has been used to designate a suppurating tumour at the umbilicus; or, at times, umbilical hernia, the sac of which is filled with blood.

EMPYOS, Purulent.

EMPYREU'MA, from εμπυρνω, (εμ, and πυρ, 'fire,') 'I kindle.' The burnt smell and acrid taste, which volatile products—gaseous and liquid—contract, when animal or vegetable substances are decomposed by a strong heat. The cause of this smell is seated in an oil, called empyreumatic, which does not exist in the substance subjected to the operation, but is the result of its decomposition. If the empyreuma occurs when the organic substance is placed in a still with a liquid, it is owing to the solid matter touching the bottom of the vessel to which the fire is applied.

EMPYREUMAT'IC, Empyreumaticus; same etymon. Belonging to empyreuma,—as an empyreumatic odour.

EMPYROS, Febricitans. Same etymon. One who has fever.—Hippocrates.

EMS, MINERAL WATERS OF. Celebrated springs on the river Lahn, duchy of Nassau. They are thermal (from 83 to 115° Fahrenheit,) and carbonated salines, containing carbonic acid, bicarbonate of soda, and chloride of sodium; and are much used in gastric and intestinal affections, &c.

EMUL'GENT, Emul'gens, from emulgere, (e, and mulgere, mulsum), 'to milk out,' 'to draw out.' A name given to the renal artery and vein, because the ancients imagined they milked, as it were, the urine through the kidneys. See Renal.

EMUL'SIFY, (F.) Émulsionner, from emulsiō, and fiō, 'to become.' To make or form an emulsion.

EMULSIN, see Amygdalin.

EMUL'SIO, Emul'sum, Emul'sion; same etymon. A pharmaceutical preparation, of a milky-white opaque appearance, which is composed of oil, divided and held in suspension in water by means of mucilage. Emulsions have been divided into the true and oily, and into the false or not oily; the latter being composed of resinous substances, balsams, or camphor, rubbed up with dilute alcohol, mucilage, or yolk of egg.

EMULSIO ACA'CIÆ, E. Arabica, Gum Ar'abice Emul'sion. (Nucleol. amygd. comm. ℥j, aquæ ℥ijss., mucilag. acac. ℥ij, sacch. ℥iv. While beating the decorticated almonds with the sugar and water, add the mucilage.—Ph. E.) Used in the same cases as the next. Under the name Mistu'ra ACA'CIÆ, Gum Ar'abice Mixture, the Edinburgh Pharmacopœia has the following. Mucilag. Acaciæ f℥ijj; Amygdal. dulc. ℥j, and ℥ij; Sacchar. ℥v; Aquæ Oij, (Imper. meas.) Blanch the almonds; peel them; beat to a smooth pulp first with the sugar, and then with the mucilage; add the water gradually, stirring constantly, and strain through linen or calico.

EMULSIO AMYGDALÆ, E. Simplex, Lac amygdalæ, Amygdalatum, Mistu'ra amygdalæ, Emul'sio sive Lac Amygdalarum or Almond Emulsion; Mixture or Milk, (F.) Lait d'amandes. (Amygdal. dulc. ℥ss; Acaciæ, in pulv. ℥ss; Sacchar. ℥ij; Aquæ destillat. f℥vij. Macerate the almonds in water, and having removed their external coat, beat them with the gum Arabic and sugar, in a marble mortar, till they are thoroughly mixed; then rub the mixture with the distilled water gradually added, and strain.—Ph. U. S.) It is used as a diluent and demulcent.

EMULSIO ANTIHYSTERICA, Mistura asafœtidæ—e. Arabica, Emulsiō acaciæ Arabicæ.

EMULSIO CAM'PHORÆ, E. Camphorata, Mistu'ra Camphoræ; Camphor Emulsion. (Camphoræ ℥j, amygd. com. decortic., sacch. dur., āā ℥iv, aquæ ℥vj.—Ph. E.) A convenient form for giving camphor.

EMULSIO GUAIACINA, Mistura guaiaci—e. Leniens, Looch ex ovo.

EMULSIO O'LEI AMYGDALARUM; Emulsion of Oil of Almonds, (Ol. amygd. ℥j, gum acac. pulv. ℥ij, syryp. ℥j, aquæ destill. ℥iv. Mix. A good pectoral or cough mixture.

EMULSIO O'LEI RIC'INI; Castor Oil Emulsion (Ol. ricini ℥ss, vitelli ovi q. s., aquæ destillat. ℥j.) An aperient draught.

EMULSIO O'LEI TEREBIN'THINÆ; Emulsion of Oil of Turpentine, (Ol. tereb. rect. ℥ij, sacch. alb. ℥ss, vitell. ovi j, emuls. amygd. vel aquæ destillat. ℥vj. Mix. In rheumatic and nephritic affections. Dose f℥iss.

EMULSIO OLEOSA, Looch ex ovo.

EMULSIO PURGANS CUM JALAP'Æ RESI'NA, Purging Emulsion with Resin of Jalap. (Jalapæ resin. gr. xij, sacch. alb. ℥ij. Triturate for some time, and add gradually half the yolk of an egg; continue to triturate, adding by degrees emuls. simpl. ℥v, aq. flor. aurant. ℥ij.—Ph. P.)

EMULSIO PURGANS CUM SCAMMO'NIO; Purging Emulsion with Scammony. It is prepared like the preceding, substituting only Scammony for the jalap.

EMULSIO SIMPLEX, E. Amygdalæ.

EMULSION, Emulsiō—e. Almond, Emulsiō amygdalæ—e. Camphor, Emulsiō Camphoræ—e. Castor oil, Emulsiō olei ricini—e. Gum Arabic, Emulsiō acaciæ Arabicæ—e. Hulleuse, Looch ex ovo—e. of Oil of Almonds, Emulsiō olei amygdalarum—e. of Oil of Turpentine, Emulsiō olei terebinthinæ—e. Purging, with resin of jalap, Emulsiō purgans cum jalapæ resinâ—e. Purging, with scammony, Emulsiō purgans cum scammony.

ÉMULSIONNER, Emulsify.

EMULSIVE, Emulsi'vus; same etymon. An epithet given to seeds whence oil may be extracted by expression; such as almonds, apricots, peaches, hemp, rape, melons, gourds; those of the nut kind, and cucurbitaceous and cruciferous plants in general.

EMULSUM, Emulsiō.

EMUNCTORIUM, Emunctory—e. Cerebri, Nasus.

EMUNCTORY, Emuncto'rium, from emungere, (e, and ungere, munctum,) 'to drain off,' 'to cleanse.' Emissa'rium, (F.) Emonctoire, Émissaire. Any organ whose office it is to give issue to matters which ought to be excreted. The ancients believed that some organs were more particularly destined to serve as emunctories of others; the nasal fossæ, for example, they believed to be the emunctories of the brain.

EMUNDANTIA, Detergents.

EMYS PALUS'TRIS, Salt Water Ter'rapin. This species of turtle is found exclusively in salt or brackish waters, near the sea shore, along the whole Atlantic coast. It is much prized by the epicure, and is nutritious and tolerably easy of digestion when dressed plain.

EN, see Em.

ENADELPHIA, Emboîtement.

ENÆMA, Hæmostatica.

ENÆMON, Stypticæ.

ENÆORE'MA, from en, 'in,' and αιωρεω, 'I lift up,' 'that which hangs or floats in.' (F.) Enéorème. The Neph'elè, Nubes, Sublimamen'tum, Sublimatio, Sublim'e, Suspen'sum, S. Ur'ina, Suspen'sa, Nube'ula or cloud, which is suspended in the urine as it cools.

ENAMEL, E. of the teeth, (en, and (F.) émail,) Dentium Nitor, Cortex, C. striat'a, Substantia filamentosa of Malpighi, S. Adamantina seu vit'rea, Crusta Dentium adamantina, Adamantine or vitreous substance. (F.) Substance vitrée ou émaillée, Émail des Dents. The substance which covers the coronæ of the teeth. The enamel is of a milky white colour, and sufficiently hard to strike fire with steel. Its surface is very smooth and polished, and it forms a thicker layer towards the part where the teeth come in contact, and becomes thinner towards the cervix. The fibres of the enamel are perpendicular to the surface of the teeth, on the ivory of which they seem, as it were, planted. This gives them a velvety appearance, when examined by the microscope. The enamel has no blood vessels, and is not renewed when removed. It is formed of phosphate of lime, and a very small portion of animal matter. A delicate membrane covers the enamel—the cuticle of the enamel, Nasmyth's membrane; but so closely united with it, that it can be demonstrated only by the use of chlorohydric acid.

ENAMEL, CUTICLE OF THE, see Enamel.

ENANTHE'MA, same etymon as the next. A name recently given to certain eruptions of the mucous membrane, as exanthema is to certain eruptions of the skin.

ENANTHE'SIS, from en, 'in,' and ανθω, 'I flourish.' Rash exan'them. Eruption of red, level or nearly level, patches, variously figured, irregularly diffused, often confluent, and terminating in cuticular exfoliations. A genus in the order Exanthematica, class Hæmatica, of Cullen, including scarlet fever, measles, &c.

ENANTHESIS ROSALIA, Scarlatina—e. Urticaria, Urticaria.

ENANTIOPATHIC, Palliative.

ENARTHRO'SIS, Inarticulatio, Ball and Socket-joint, from en, 'in,' and αρθρωσις, 'an articulation.' A kind of diarthrodial articulation, in which the head of a bone is received into the cavity of another, and can be moved in all directions. The joint of the os femoris with the os innominatum is one of this character.

ENAR'THRUM, from en, 'in,' and αρθρον, 'a joint.' A foreign body in a joint.

ENAU'SMA, Fomites.

ENCAN'THIS, from en, 'in,' and καυθος, 'the angle of the eye.' A tumour, formed by an increase in size, or a degeneration, of the caruncula lacrymalis. Any morbid growth in the inner angle of the eye.

ENCANTHIS BENIG'NA. Simple excrescence of the caruncula. It commonly yields to astringent collyria.

ENCANTHIS FUNGO'SA. A condition of the semilunar fold and lachrymal caruncle, in which they are the seat of morbid growths.

ENCANTHIS INFLAMMATO'RIA. Inflammation with enlargement—swelling—of the semilunar fold and lachrymal caruncle.

ENCANTHIS MALIG'NA has often a cancerous character, and requires extirpation before it has attained any considerable size.

ENCARDITIS, Endocarditis.

ENCARPOS, Pregnant.

ENCASING, Emboîtement.

ENCATALEPSIS, Catalepsy.

ENCATHIS'MA, Semicu'pium. With the ancients Encathis'ma, εγκαθισμα, (en, and καθίζω, 'I seat upon,') meant a vapour-bath taken sitting.

ENCAU'MA, from en, 'in,' and καυω, 'I burn.' Epicau'mis, Epicau'sis, Encau'sis. A tumour produced by a burn. A burn. Also, an ulcer of the transparent cornea, occasioning loss of the humours.—Ætius, Gorræus.

ENCAUSIS, Burn, Encauma, Moxibustion.

ENCAUSSE, MINERAL WATERS OF. Encausse is a village in the department of the Haute-Garonne, which possesses several saline, acidulous springs.

ENCAVURE, Argema.

ENCEINTE, Pregnant.

ENCENS, Juniperus lycia.

ENCENSIER, Rosmarinus.

ENCEPHALALGIA, Cephalalgia—e. Hydro-pica, Hydrocephalus internus.

ENCEPHAL'IC, Encephal'icus, from en, 'in,' and κεφαλη, 'the head.' That which is situate in the head. A name given to several parts which relate to the encephalon, as the encephalic membrane, muscles, &c.

ENCEPHALITIS, from Encephalon, and itis, denoting inflammation. This term has been used, by some nosologists, synonymously with Cephalitis and Phrenitis. By others, it has been appropriated to inflammation of the brain, in contradistinction to that of the membranes.

ENCEPHALUM, Cerebellum.

ENCEPHALOC'E'LÈ, from encephalon, and κηλη, 'a tumour.' Hernia seu Fungus Cerebri, Cranioce'lè, Hernia of the Brain. This may be a congenital or accidental affection. In the former case, it is dependent upon tardy ossification of the fontanelles or some faulty conformation. In the latter, it is owing to some considerable loss of substance in the parietes of the cranium, produced by fractures, wounds with a cutting instrument, caries, the application of the trephine, &c. In slight congenital encephalocèle, gentle pressure may be exerted upon the protruded portion. When the disease is of considerable extent, it is fatal. In accidental encephalocèle, similar means must be used for confining the tumour, and preserving it from the action of external bodies.

ENCEPHALOCY'SIS, Hydrocephalus internus—e. Senilis, Apoplexy, serous.

ENCEPHALODYNIA, Cephalalgia.

ENCEPHALOHÆMIA, Cephalæmia.

ENCÉPHALOHÉMIE, Cephalæmia.

ENCEPH'ALOID, Encephaloides, Ceph'aloid, Cephaloides, Cephaloma, from encephalon, and αἶδος, 'resemblance.' Laënnec has given the term Enceph'aloid or Cer'ebriform matter to one of the morbid substances commonly formed by scirrhous or cancerous tumours. It is either encysted, in irregular masses without cysts, or infiltrated into the texture of the diseased organ. This name was given to it in consequence of its resemblance, when fully developed, to the medullary substance of the brain. It is also called Fungus medullaris seu Cancerosus medullaris seu Cerebralis, Sarcoma medullarē, Spongoid inflammation, Cancer cerebriformis seu mollis seu medullaris, Carcinoma medullarē seu spongiosum, Carcinoma spongiosum, Struma fungosa, Myeloma, Myelomyces, Myelospongius, Tela accidentalis medullaris, (F.) Matière cérébriforme, Carcinome mou et spongieux, Tumeur encéphalôide ou spongieuse ou ossifère ou pulpeuse ou fongôide ou fongueuse ou spléniforme, Fongus médullaire, Carcinôme sanglant, Cancer mou ou encéphalôide ou médullaire; Milt-like tumour, Medullary sarcoma, Cellular cancer, Fungoid or Hæmatoc'er'ebriform disease. See Cancer.

ENCEPHALOID TUMOUR OF THE LUNG, Pthisis, cancerous.

ENCEPHALOLOG'IA, from encephalon, and λογος, 'a description.' A description of the encephalon.

ENCEPHALOMALACIA, Mollities cerebri.

ENCEPHALOMALAXIS, Mollities cerebri.

ENCEPHALO-MENINGITIS, Meningo-encephalitis.

ENCEPH'ALON, Encephalum, Enceph'alus, Enceph'alon; from εν, 'in,' and κεφαλη, 'the head.' That which is situate in the head. This name has generally been given to the brain, cerebellum, and mesocephalon. At times, it includes likewise the medulla spinalis, when it is also called the Cer'ebro-spinal, and Neural axis. Under the term Cranio-spinal axis or centre of automatic actions, Dr. Carpenter includes the sensory ganglia—the respiratory and stomato-gastric ganglia forming the centre of the medulla oblongata and the spinal ganglia or true spinal cord.

ENCEPHALOPATHIA, (F.) Encéphalopathie, from encephalon, and παθος, 'disease.' A disease of the encephalon.

ENCEPHALOPATHIA LITERATO'RUM. The condition of brain, supposed to be produced by over-tasking it.

ENCEPHALOPATHIA PUERPERALIS, Mania, puerperal—e. Saturnina, see Encéphalopathie saturnine.

ENCÉPHALOPATHIE, Encephalopathia—e. Crapuleuse, Delirium tremens.

ENCÉPHALOPATHIE SATURNINE, Encephalopathie Saturnina. Encephalic disorder occasioned by the poison of lead.

ENCEPHALOPHY'MATA, Phymatoses seu Strumoses seu Tubercula cer'ebri; from encephalon, and φύμα, φυματος, 'a tumour.' Tubercles of the brain.

ENCEPHALOPHTHISIS, see Encephalopyosis.

ENCEPHALOPYO'SIS, from encephalon, and πυον, 'pus.' Apostema seu Abscessus seu Helcosis cer'ebri. Suppuration of the brain. When accompanied with emaciation and hectic, it is called Encephalophthisis.

ENCEPHALO-RACHIDIAN, Cephalo-spinal. ENCEPHALORRHAGIA, see Apoplexy.

ENCEPHALOSCOPIA, Craniology.

ENCEPHALOSEPSIS, Mollities cerebri.

ENCEPHALOSIS OF THE LIVER, Hepato-scirrhus.

ENCEPHALOSISMUS, Concussion of the brain.

ENCEPHALOSTRUMOSIS, see Hydrocephalus internus.

ENCEPHALUM, Encephalon.

ENCEPHALUS OPISITHIUS, Cerebellum.

ENCEROSIS, Inceration.

ENCHARAXIS, Scarification.

ENCHATONNEMENT, Chatonnement.

ENCHEIRE'SIS, Enchire'sis, Enche'ria, from εν, and χειρ, 'the hand.' Galen uses this term as a part of the title to one of his works, which treats of dissection. It means the manual treatment of any subject.

ENCHEIRIA, Encheiresis.

ENCHIFRÈNEMENT, Coryza.

ENCHIRESIS, Encheiresis.

ENCHONDROMA, Chondroma.

ENCHORIONOSUS, Endemie.

ENCHORIOS, Endemie.

ENCHRISTON, Liniment.

ENCHYLOSIS, Extraction.

ENCHYMA, Infusum, Plethora.

ENCHYMO'MA, Enchymosis, from εν, and χυνω, 'I pour.' By the ancients, this word was used to designate the sudden effusion of blood into the cutaneous vessels, which arises from joy, anger, or shame; in the last instance constituting blushing. It differs from ecchymosis in there being, in the latter, extravasation of blood into the areolar texture, and its being produced by an external cause; a contusion, for example.—Hippocrates.

ENCHYSIS, Infusion.

ENCLAVÉ, Wedged.

ENCLAVEMENT, see Wedged.

ENCLUME, Incus.

ENCLYDASTICOS, intus fluctuans, from εγκλυδαζομαι, (εν, and κλυω, 'I wash.') 'to float in.' Applied to liquids, e. g., to serum, pus, &c., contained in any cavity.

ENCLYSMA, Clyster, Enema.

ENCE'LIA, from εν, 'in,' and κοιλια, 'the belly.' The abdominal viscera. The entrails.

ENCELIALGIA, Tormina—e. Inflammatoria, Encelitis.

ENCELITIS, Encelitis, Encelialy'ia inflammationis, Inflammatio abdominalis; from εγκοιλια, 'the abdominal contents,' and itis, inflammation. Inflammation of any of the abdominal viscera.

ENCOLPIS'MUS, from εν, 'in,' and κολπος, 'the vagina.' Injection or introduction of any thing into the vagina.

ENCOLPITIS, Colpoplegmymenitis; from εν, 'in,' κολπος, 'the vagina,' and itis, denoting inflammation. Inflammation of the lining membrane of the vagina.

ENCOPE, Diapoco, Incision.

ENCRANTON, Cerebellum.

ENCRANIS, Cerebellum.

ENCRE, Atramentum.

ENCYESIS, Fecundation, Pregnancy.

ENCYMON, Pregnancy.

ENCYMOSIA, Fecundation, Pregnancy.

ENCYSIS, Pregnancy.

ENCYST'ED, Cystidē obductus, Saccatus, Sacculatus, Sac'cated, Sac'culated, Pouched. Enclosed in a kyst or cyst, or pouch; from εν, 'in,' and κυστις, 'bladder.' (F.) Encystē. An epithet given to certain tumours, or solid or fluid collections enclosed in a particular envelope or cyst. They are movable and often elastic to the touch.

ENCYSTIS, Tumor tunica'tus seu cysticus, Emphy'ma encys'tis. Same etymon. Λυψία, Glandula Avicennæ, Nodus. An encysted tumour.

ENDADELPHIA, see Emboîtement.
 ENDANGIUM, properly Endangi'on or Endangi'um, Membra'na vaso'rum commu'nis, (F.) Tunique commune de Bichat; from ενδω', 'within,' and αγγειον, 'a vessel.' The serous or lining membrane of vessels.

ENDEICTICOS, Indicant.
 ENDEIXIOL'OGY, Endeixiologi'ia, from ενδειξις, (ev, and δεικνω, 'I show,') 'indication,' and λογος, 'a discourse.' The doctrine of indications.

ENDEIXIS, Indication.
 ENDEMIAM, Endemic.

ENDEMIC, Endemical, Ende'mia, Regiona'lis morbus, Endem'icus; from εν, 'in,' and δημος, 'the people,' Encho'rios, Enchorion'osus, Vernac'ulus seu Endemius mor'bus, Endemy, (F.) Endémie, Maladie régionale. A disease said to be endemic, (F.) Endémique, or to arise from endemic'ity, (F.) endémicité, when it is owing to some peculiarity in a situation or locality. Thus, ague is endemic in marshy countries; goître at the base of lofty mountains, &c. Some authors use the term in the same sense as epidemic. We have no accurate knowledge of the emanations or other circumstances which give occasion to endemic affections. We seem to know that some emanation from marshy lands does produce intermittents; but we are ignorant of the nature of such emanation.

ENDÉMICITÉ, see Endemic.
 ENDEMICITY, see Endemic.
 ENDEMIOL'OGY, Endemiologi'ia, from 'endemic,' and λογος, 'a discourse.' The doctrine of endemic diseases.

ENDÉMIQUE, Endemic.
 ENDEMY, Endemic.
 ENDEPIDERMIS, Epithelium.
 ENDERMIC, Enderm'icus, Endermat'icus, Emplas'tro-endermie, (F.) Endermique, from εν, and δερμα, 'the skin.' An epithet given to the method of treating diseases by placing the therapeutical agent in contact with the skin, especially after the cuticle has been removed; Endern'ism, Enderm'ismus, Endermo'sis, Méth'odus enderm'ica seu endermat'ica, Diadermat'ica. Morphina, strychnia, &c., are often administered in this way.

ENDERMIS, see Endermic.
 ENDERMISMUS, see Endermic.
 ENDERMOSIS, see Endermic.
 EN'DESIS, from εν, 'in,' and δεω, 'I bind.' A ligature, bandage, connexion. Hippocrates has so termed the ankle-joint.

ENDIVE, Cichorium endivia—e. Wild, Cichorium intybus.
 ENDIVIA, Cichorium endivia.
 ENDIXIS, Indication.

ENDO, from ενδω, 'within.' A common prefix, as in the following terms:

ENDO-AÖRTI'TIS, from ενδω, 'within,' and aortitis, 'inflammation of the aorta.' Inflammation of the lining membrane of the aorta.

ENDO-ARTERITIS, see Arteritis.
 ENDOBLAST, see Periblast.
 ENDOCARDE, Endocardium.

ENDOCAR'DIAC, Endocar'dial, Endocardi'acus: same etymon as the next. Relating to the endocardium, or to the interior of the heart; as 'endocardiac sound or murmur,'—a sound produced within the cavities of the heart, in contradistinction to exocardiac or exocardial sounds or murmurs, which are induced by conditions of the external surface of the organ.

ENDOCARDI'TIS, Encarditis, Cardi'tis interna, Inflammat'io superfic'iei interna cordis, Internal Carditis, Inflammation of the internal membrane of the heart, (F.) Endocardite, from endocard'ium, the lining membrane of the heart, and itis, inflammation. In this disease, the heart's action is visibly increased, and very manifest to the touch; the hand is strongly repelled, and, at moments, is sensible of a trembling vibratory motion. Percussion gives a dull sound over a surface of several inches, owing, according to Bouillaud, to the inflammatory turgescence of the heart, and the engorged state of its cavities. On auscultation, a bruit de soufflet is generally heard, masking one or both sounds of the heart; and the ear is sensible of a metallic ringing with each systole of the ventricle. The pulsations are rapid as well as strong, and, with few exceptions, irregular, unequal and intermittent. The pulse, by the way, does not always indicate the force or number of the heart's contractions.

ENDOCARDIUM, from ενδω, 'within,' and καρδια, 'the heart.' (F.) Endocarde. The membrane that lines the interior of the heart.

ENDOCHORION, see Chorion.
 ENDOCOLITIS, Dysentery.

ENDOCYMIEN, from ενδω, 'within,' and χυμα, 'the product of conception.' A double monster by inclusion—Isidore G. St. Hilaire. See Emboîtement.

ENDODONTI'TIS, (F.) Inflammation de la Pulpe dentaire, Inflammation of the Dental membrane, from ενδω, 'within,' οδους, οδοντος, 'a tooth,' and itis, denoting inflammation. Inflammation of the lining membrane of a tooth.

ENDO-ENTERITIS, see Enteritis.
 ENDOGASTRI'TIS, Esogastri'tis; from ενδω, 'within,' and gastritis, 'inflammation of the stomach.' Inflammation of the lining membrane of the stomach.

ENDOGEN, see Endogenous.
 ENDOG'ENOUS; from ενδω, 'within,' and γεννω, 'I engender.' A term first applied to plants—hence called Endogens—in which the new woody matter is deposited within the old, and towards the centre. In the animal, cells are often formed endogenously, or within the cells, as in the case of the sperm vesicles.

An endog'enus aneurism is one that originates spontaneously from lesions of the inner coat of the arteries.

ENDOLYMPH, Vitrine auditive.
 ENDOMETRI'TIS, from ενδω, 'within,' and metritis, 'inflammation of the uterus.' Inflammation of the lining membrane of the uterus. When accompanied with a diphtheritic exudation, it is sometimes called Endometri'tis eroupo'sa.

ENDONARTERITIS, see Arteritis.
 ENOPHLEBITIS, Phlebitis.
 ENDOPLAST, see Perioplast.
 ENDORMIE, Datura stramonium.

ENDOSIS, Remission.
 ENDO-SKELETON, see Skeleton.

ENDOSMOSE, Endosmo'sis, Double Imbibit'ion, from ενδω, 'within,' and ωρεμος, 'Impulse.' A term first used by Dutrochet, to express the action by which fluids pass from without to within organic membranes. The action of two fluids on each other, when separated by a membrane. The general conditions of the phenomena are—first, that they should have an affinity for the interposed membrane; and se condly, that they should have an affinity for each other, and be miscible.

At the present day, endosmose is generally used to signify the passage of the more transmissible fluid, whilst ecosmose signifies that of the least transmissible. The rapidity with which endosmose is accomplished varies according to the nature of the septum or tissue and of the penetrating body, and to the penetrability of the tissue.

ENDOSMIC, Endosmotic.
 ENDOSMOTIC, Endosmot'icus, Endos'mic,

Endos'micus; same etymon. Belonging to endosmose:—as an 'endosmotic current.'

ENDOSTEÏTIS, from εὐδόν, 'within,' οστέον, 'a bone,' and itis, denoting inflammation. Inflammation of the internal periosteum.

ENDOSTEUM, Medullary membrane.

ENDOÛTERITIS, see Metritis.

ENDUIT (F.), from induere, 'to put upon,' 'to put on.' A coat; a fur. This term is often applied to a layer of greater or less thickness which covers the surface of certain organs, and particularly of the tongue and the interior of the mouth. The enduit is designated variously, according to its appearance,—enduit bilieux, jaune, blanc, &c.—a bilious, yellow, white coat or fur, &c. It is at times owing to the evaporation of the watery portions of the secretions; at others, to a morbid condition of the secretions:—generally, to both causes combined. The tongue, in such a condition, is said to be coated or furred; sometimes, loaded.

ENDUIT CHOROÏDIEN, see Choroid.

ENDURCISSEMENT, Induration—e. du Cerveau, Sclerencephalia—e. Rouge, see Hepatization—e. du Cœur, Cardiosclérose—e. du Tissu cellulaire, Induration of the cellular tissue.

ENDYMA VENTRICULORUM, Ependyma ventriculorum.

ENECHEMA, Tinnitus aurium.

ENECIA, Synocha—e. Cauma, Synocha—e. Synochus Puerperarum, see Peritonitis—e. Synochus, Synochus.

EN'EMA, ενεμα, from εμπνι, (ev, and μπνι, 'to inject.' Clyma, Clysmus, Enclys'ma, Lavamen'tum, Lo'tio. An Injection, Clyster, (F.) Clystère, Lavement. A well-known form of conveying medicine into the intestinal canal. See Clyster.

ENEMA ALOËS, Clyster of aloes. (Aloës, $\mathfrak{D}\bar{i}$; Potass. carbon, gr. xv; Decoct. Hordei, Oss. (Imp. meas.) M. Ph. L.) Used in cases of ascariides and amenorrhœa.

ENEMA ANOD'YNUM, Enema O'pii; An'odyne or Starch and Opium Clyster. (Decoct. amyli $\mathfrak{f}\bar{i}\bar{v}$; tinct. opii \mathfrak{M} . xxx. M. Ph. L.) Exhibited in cases of severe diarrhœa or dysentery.

ENEMA CATHARTICUM; Cathartic or Purging Clyster. (Olei. oliv. $\mathfrak{f}\bar{3}\bar{j}$; sulph. magnes. $\mathfrak{3}\bar{j}$; mucilag. acaciæ $\mathfrak{f}\bar{3}\bar{x}\bar{i}\bar{v}$; M. Ph. D.)

ENEMA COLOCYNT'IDIS, Clyster of Col'ocynth. (Ext. Colocynth $\mathfrak{3}\bar{s}$; Sapon. mollis $\mathfrak{3}\bar{j}$; aquæ, Oj. (Imp. meas.) M. Ph. L.) An efficient cathartic clyster.

ENEMA COMMUNĒ; Common or Domestic Clyster. (Water gruel or molasses and water Oss or Oj; add a little oil or lard, and a spoonful of common salt.) Given as a cathartic enema; and, without the common salt, as an emollient.

ENEMA FETIDUM, E. assafœ'tidæ, Fetid Clyster, Clyster of assafetida; Mis'tura assafœ'tidæ pro clysmatē, Clyma ton'icæ et antispassmod'icæ seu in'citans et sedans, (F.) Lavement anti-spasmodique. (The last, with the addition of $\mathfrak{3}\bar{i}$ of the tincture of assafetida. Ph. D.) Given as an antispasmodic and anodyne.

ENEMA NICOTI'ANÆ; Tobac'co Clyster. This generally consists of from half a pint to a pint of the Infusum Tabaci. It is employed in cases of strangulated hernia; but occasionally acts as a fatal poison when given in this way. The smoke of tobacco is sometimes thrown up the rectum to produce the same medicinal effects as the infusion.

ENEMA OPII, E. anodynum.

ENEMA TEREBIN'TINÆ; Tur'pentine Clyster. (Ol. tereb. $\mathfrak{f}\bar{3}\bar{j}$. Decoct. hordei $\mathfrak{f}\bar{3}\bar{x}\bar{i}\bar{x}$, one yolk of egg. Incorporate the turpentine with the yolk, then add the gruel. Ph. L.) To be administered in cases of ascariides, (oxyures.)

ENEPIDERM'IC, Enepider'micus, from εν, 'in,' εντ, 'upon,' and δερμα, 'the skin.' An epithet given to the method of treating diseases, which consists in the application of medicines; as plasters, blisters, &c., to the skin.

ENEREÏSIS, Compression.

ENERGIA, Action, Force.

ENERGY, Energ'ia, from ενεργεω, (ev, and εργον, 'action,') 'I act.' Action. Acting power. Also, vigour; as the 'muscular energy;' the 'brain acts with energy.'

ENERVATIO, Aponeurosis, Enervation.

ENERVATION, Enerva'tio, from e, 'out of,' and nercus, 'strength.' The act of weakening—the state of being weakened. See Debility.

ENERVATIONES TENDINÆÆ, Inscripti-ones tendinææ musculorum.

ENERVITAS, Inertia.

ENFANCE, Infancy.

ENFANT, Infans—e. à Terme, see Fœtus—Légitime, see Legitimate.

ENFANTEMET, Parturition.

ENFLURE, Swelling, Œdema—e. des Jambes et des cuisses de la femme accouchée, Phlegmatia dolens.

ENFONCEMENT SCAPHOÏDE, Scaphoides fossa.

ENFONCEURE, Arthrodia.

ENFONCURE, Arthrodia.

ENGASTERION, Laboratory.

ENGASTRIMISME, see Engastrimyth.

ENGASTRIMYSME, see Engastrimyth.

ENGASTRIMYTH; Engastrim'ythus, Englottogast'or, Gastril'oquus, Ventril'oquus, Gastril'oquist, En'rycles, Eurycl'itus, Euteroman'tis, Gastroman'tis, from εν, 'in,' γαστρῆς, 'the belly,' and μῦσταται, 'I discourse.' A Ventri'l'oquist. (F.) Ventri'loque, Gastri'loque. One who possesses the art of modifying his natural voice, so that it seems to come from a greater or less distance, and from different directions. It was formerly believed that such persons spoke from the belly; hence their name. It is an imitative art, and is called VENTRILOQUISM. (F.) Engastrimisme, Engastrimysme.

ENGELSOMA, Engisoma.

ENGELURE, Chilblain.

ENGHIEN MONTMORENCY, MINERAL WATERS OF. Eng'hien-les-Bains. A hydro-sulphurous water, four leagues from Paris, near Montmorency, which is possessed of some celebrity. It contains chloride of sodium, chloride of magnesium, sulphate of magnesia, sulphate of lime, carbonate of magnesia, carbonate of lime, silica, sulphohydrate of lime and magnesia, sulphohydric acid, carbonic acid and nitrogen.

ENGISO'MA, Engeis'o'ma, Engizo'ma, from εγγίζω, 'I approximate.' (F.) Embarrure. A species of fracture of the skull, in which a splinter passes beneath the sound portion of the bone, and compresses the brain.—Galen. Also, a kind of instrument used in fractures of the clavicle.

ENGLISH DISEASE, Rachitis.

ENGLOTTOGASTOR, Engastrimyth.

ENGOMPHOSIS, Gomphosis.

ENGOUEMENT, from εν, 'in,' and gorge, 'the throat.' An obstruction occurring in the vessels of a part, giving rise to augmentation of volume. Congestion.

ENGOUEMENT DES MEMBRES ABDOMINAUX À LA SUITE DES COUCHES, Phlegmatia dolens—e. Hepatic, Hepatohæmia—e. Laitéux des membres abdominaux, Phlegmatia dolens.

ENGOUEMENT (F.), Obstruc'tio, Iner'tia, from angere, 'to choke.' Accumulation in a hollow organ, of the matters secreted by it or carried into it. There is said to be Engouement des bronches, when the mucus accumulates in the bronchia; and Engouement des intestins, when the matters which ought to pass through the intestines are detained; as in a case of strangulated hernia.

ENGOUEMENT DES POUMONS, E. of the lungs, in Pathological Anatomy, signifies that state of the lungs, in which a mixture of air and thin fluid escapes from them when cut into.

ENGOURDISSEMENT, Torpor.

ENGRENURE, Suture.

ENHĒMATOSIS, Hæmatisis.

ENIXA, Puerpera.

ENIXIO FĒTŪS, Parturition.

ENIXUS FĒTŪS, Parturition.

ENKEPHALON, Encephalon.

ENKYSTĒ, Encysted.

ENKYSTEMENT, Chatonnement.

ENMETRITIS, see Metritis.

ENNEAPHARMACOS, from εννεα, 'nine,' and φαρμακον, 'a medicine.' A medicine, composed of nine simple ingredients. A pessary, so formed.—Galen, Paulus. The Antidotus Heraclidis, described by Galen, and some plasters by Aëtius and Celsus, are, likewise, termed Enneapharmaca.—Gorræus.

ENORMIS, Abnormous.

ENORMITAS CORDIS, Heart, hypertrophy.

ENORMON, ενορμον, Hormon, Impetum faciens, from εν, 'in,' and ορμω, 'I rouse,' 'excite.' A word used by Hippocrates in the same sense as vital principle is by modern physiologists.

ENOSIS, Insertion.

ENOSTOSIS, Entostosis, from εν, 'in,' and οσσειν, 'a bone.' A morbid growth of bone inwards—the opposite to exostosis.

ENRAGĒ, Rabid.

ENRHUMER, See Cold.

ENROUEMENT, Raucedo.

ENRYTHMOS, from εν, and ρυθμος, 'number.' Having rhythm. An epithet applied to the pulse when its pulsations occur with some degree of order. It is opposed to Arythmos, and differs from Eurythmos, which signifies 'regular.'

ENS, A being. Paracelsus meant, by this term, the power exerted by certain beings on our body. He speaks of the Ens Dei, E. Astro-rum, E. naturalē, E. virtutis, E. morborum, E. de potentibus spiritibus, &c. These absurd denominations suggested to some of the ancient chymists a name for certain chymical preparations. The muriate of ammonia and iron was called Ens martis; the muriate of ammonia and copper, Ens veneris; and Ens primum was, with the alchemists, the name of a tincture which they considered possessed of the power of transmuting metals.

ENS MARTIS, Ferrum ammoniatum—e. Veneris, Boylei. Ferrum ammoniatum.

ENSIFORM, Ensiformis, from ensis, 'a sword,' and forma, 'form.' Sword-like.

ENSIFORM APOPHYSES or PROCESSES are the lesser alæ of the sphenoid bone.

ENSIFORM APPENDIX or CARTILAGE is the xiphoid appendix of the sternum, &c. See Xiphoid.

ENSIFORMIS, Xiphoid.

ENSISTERNAL. Relating to the ensiform process of the sternum. Béclard gave this name to the last osseous portion of the sternum. He also called it los ultimi-sternal. See Ultimo-sternal.

ENSOMATOSIS, Incorporation.

ENSTALAXIS, Instillation.

ENSTROPHĒ, from εν, 'in,' and στρεφω, 'I turn.' Inversion of a part, as of the eyelids.

ENTABLEMENT, Depression.

ENTAILLE (F.), from en, 'in,' and tailler, 'to cut.' Excisio, Ec'copē, Ec'tomē. A deep wound made by a sharp instrument obliquely. Entailles and Taillades are, also, used to designate deep scarifications, made for the purpose of producing a speedy dégorgement of any tumefied part; such, for example, as are made in the tongue in certain cases of glossitis.

ENTAMURE (F.). A slight incision or laceration.

ENTANTHEMA, Eisanthema.

ENTASIA, Tonic spasm—e. Articularis, Contractura—e. Loxia, Torticollis—e. Priapismus, Priapismus—e. Systemma, Cramp—e. Tetanus, Tetanus—e. Tetanus anticus, Emprosthotonos—e. Trismus, Trismus.

ENTASIS, Tonic spasm.

ENTATICUS, Intensivus, from εντεινω, 'I make tense.' A medicine which excites the venereal appetite.

ENTELEPATHIA, Nymphomania.

ENTELEMINTHA, Worms.

ENTENDEMENT, Intellect.

ENTERADELPHIA, see Emboitement.

ENTERAD'ENES, from εντερον, 'an intestine,' and αδην, 'a gland.' The mucous glands of the intestines. See Peyeri glandulæ.

ENTERADENOGRAPHY, Enteradenographia, from εντερον, 'intestine,' αδην, 'gland,' and γραφη, 'a description.' A description of the intestinal glands.

ENTERADENOLOGY, Enteradenologia, from εντερον, 'intestine,' αδην, 'gland,' and λογος, 'a treatise.' That part of anatomy which treats of the intestinal glands.

ENTERAËRECTASIA, Tympanites.

ENTERAL'GIA, Enterodyn'ia, from εντερον, 'intestine,' and αλγος, 'pain.' Pain in the intestines. Colic.

ENTERALGIA ACUTA, Enteritis—e. Inflammatoria, Enteritis—e. Saturnina, Colica metallica.

ENTERANGEMPHRAXIS, Enterangiemphraxis.

ENTERANGIEMPHRAXIS, Enterangiemphrax'is, from εντερον, 'intestine,' αγγω, 'I strangle,' and εμφρασσω, 'I obstruct.' Obstruction of the vessels of the intestines.

ENTERATROPH'IA, Atroph'ia Intestino'rum, from εντερον, 'intestine,' and atroph'ia, 'want of nutrition.' Atrophy of the coats of the intestines.

ENTERAUX'E, from εντερον, 'intestine,' and αυξη, 'increase.' Hypertrophy of the muscular coat of the intestines.—Fuchs.

ENTERECHE'MA, from εντερον, 'intestine,' and ηχη, ηχω, ηχημα, 'sound.' Son'itus intestinalis. The sound of the movement of the intestines, heard by the stethoscope.

ENTERECTASIS, Dilatatio Intestino'rum, from εντερον, 'intestine,' and εκτασις, 'dilatation.' Dilatation of the intestines, as in tympanites.

ENTERELCO'SIS, Enterhelco'sis, Enterohelco'sis, from εντερον, 'intestine,' and ελκωσις, 'ulceration.' Ulceration of intestines—Ulceratio intestinalis, Ul'cera intestinalia.

ENTERELESIA, Ileus.

ENTERELOSIS, Ileus.

ENTEREMPHRAXIS, Infarctus Intestino'rum, Incarceratio intestino'rum interna, (F.) Étranglement des Intestins, É. Intestinale, from εντερον, 'intestine,' and εμφραξις, 'obstruction.' Obstruction of the Intestines from accumulation of fæces or otherwise. Also, Enterangiemphraxis.

ENTEREN'CHYTA, Enteren'chytes, from εντερον, 'an intestine,' εν, and χω, 'I pour.' Any surgical instrument for administering injections.—Sculetus.

ENTEREPILOCELE, Enterœpiplocèle.

ENTEREPILOMPHA LOCELĒ, from εντερον, 'intestine,' επιπλοον, 'omentum,' ομφαλος, 'navel,' and κληη, 'rupture.' Hernia of the umbilicus, with protrusion of the omentum and intestine.

ENTERHELICOSIS, Enterelcosis—e. Nervosa, Typhus (abdominal.)

ENTERHYPERTROPHIA, Hypertroph'ia intestino'rum, from εντερον, 'intestine,' and hypertrophia, 'excessive nutrition.' Hypertrophy of the coats of the intestines.

ENTERIC, Intestinal.

ENTERICA, from εντερον, 'an intestine.' Diseases affecting the alimentary canal. Order I., Class I. (Calicæ), of Good. Also, medicines affecting the alimentary canal.

ENTERICUS, Intestinal.

ENTÉRIQUE, Intestinal.

ENTÉRITE FOLLICULEUSE, see Typhus—e. Typhohémique, Typhoid fever.

ENTERITIS, from εντερον, 'an intestine,' and itis, denoting inflammation. Inflammation of the intestines. Empres'ma Enterit'is, Intestino'rum inflammatio, Ileo-colit'is, Chordop'sus, Cævna Enterit'is, Enterophlog'ia, Enterophlog'osis, Colica acuta seu inflammato'ria, I'eus inflammato'rius, Enteral'gia acuta seu Inflammato'ria, Febris intestino'rum seu ill'aca inflammato'ria, Enterop'lyra, (F.) Entérite, Inflammation des Intestins. The essential symptoms of this disease are:—violent abdominal pain, increased on pressure; with vomiting and inflammatory fever. Enteritis may affect both the peritoneal and the mucous coat of the intestines; and, in violent cases, all the coats may be implicated. The structure of the mucous and peritoneal coats is different; so are their functions in health and disease. The inflammation of the serous coat, Sero-enteritis, resembles that of the cellular membrane; the inflammation of the mucous coat, that of the skin. The former is usually, therefore, of a more active character. Inflammation of the mucous coat, Eso-enterit'is, Endo-enterit'is, Muco-enterit'is, Mucous Enterit'is, Phlegmymenit'is enterica, is generally attended with diarrhoea, and its pathology is identical with that of dysentery. Inflammation of the peritoneal coat is, on the other hand, generally attended with constipation.

Enteritis of the peritoneal coat, for such usually is the meaning of the word in the abstract, requires the most active treatment. Copious bleeding, followed up by a large dose of opium—and, if the symptoms be not decidedly ameliorated, repeating the bleeding and opium—warm fomentations, and blisters, are the chief agents to be relied upon. Purgatives ought not to be exhibited until the inflammation and spasm are abated by the use of the bleeding and opium. When the physician is called early, this plan will usually succeed. Sometimes, Enteritis passes into a chronic state, requiring much careful management. Broussais considered inflammation of the mucous coat of the stomach and intestines as the proximate cause of the phenomena of fever.

ENTERITIS ARTHRITICA, Cæliagra—e. Colica, Colitis—e. Epiploitis, Epiploitis—e. Follicular, Typhoid fever—e. Folliculosa, see Typhus—e. Mesenterica, Mesenteritis—e. Mucous, see Enteritis—e. Pustulosa, Dothinenteritis.

ENTERO, from εντερον, 'an intestine,' in compound words signifies intestine, as in the following:—

ENTEROBRO'SIS, Enterorrhæ'is, Perforatio Intestino'rum, (F.) Perforation des Intestins, from εντερον, 'an intestine,' and βρωσις, 'the act of gnawing.' Perforation of the intestines.

ENTEROC'ACÆ, Dysente'ria pu'trida seu typho'des seu scorbutica seu maligna, from εντερον, 'an intestine,' and κακος, 'evil.' Adynamic dysentery, accompanied by phenomena indicating a pseudo-membranous and gangrenous state of the lining membrane of the large intestine.

ENTEROCE'LE, Hernia intestinal'is, from εντερον, 'an intestine,' and κληη, 'a hernia,' 'tumour.' Abdominal hernia, which contains only a portion of intestine, is so called.

ENTERO-CEPHALOPYRA INFANTUM, Hydrocephalus Internus.

ENTEROCE'LICUS, from εντερον, 'intestine,' and κοιλια, 'the cavity of the abdomen.' Relating to the cavity of the abdomen.

EN'TERO-COLIT'IS, (F.) Entéro-colite, from εντερον, 'intestine,' and colitis, 'inflammation of the colon.' Inflammation of the small intestine and colon.

ENTEROCYSTOCE'LE, from εντερον, 'an intestine,' κυστις, 'a bladder,' and κληη, 'a tumour.' Hernia formed by the bladder and a portion of intestine.

ENTERODAR'SIS, from εντερον, 'intestine,' and δαρσις, 'skinning.' Excoriation of the mucous membrane of the intestines.

ENTERODOTHYENIA, Dothinenteritis.

ENTERODYNIA, Enteralgia.

ENTERO-EPIPLOCE'LE, Enteropiploce'le, Hernia intestinal'is omenta'lis, from εντερον, 'intestine,' επιπλοον, 'the omentum,' and κληη, 'tumour.' Hernia, formed by intestine and omentum.

ENTERO-EPIPLOM'PHALUS, from εντερον, 'intestine,' επιπλοον, 'the omentum,' and ομφαλος, 'the umbilicus.' Umbilical hernia, containing intestine and omentum. Almost all umbilical hernie are of this kind.

ENTEROG'RAPHY, Enterogra'phia, from εντερον, 'intestine,' and γραφη, 'description.' The part of anatomy which describes the intestines.

ENTERO-HÆMORRHAGIA, Hæmatochezia.

ENTEROHELICOSIS, Enterelcosis.

ENTERO-HYDROCE'LE, from εντερον, 'intestine,' υδωρ, 'water,' and κληη, 'tumour.' Intestinal hernia complicated with hydrocele.

ENTERO-HYDROM'PHALUS, from εντερον, 'intestine,' υδωρ, 'water,' and ομφαλος, 'the navel.' Umbilical hernia, in which the sac contains, along with a portion of intestine, a quantity of serum.

ENTERO-ISCHIOCE'LE, from εντερον, 'intestine,' ισχιον, 'ischium,' and κληη, 'tumour.' Ischiat'ic hernia, formed of intestine.

ENTEROLITHIASIS, from εντερον, 'intestine,' and λιθιασις, 'the formation of stone.' The formation of concretions in the intestines.

ENTEROLITHUS, Calculi of the stomach and intestines—e. Bezoardus, Bezoar—e. Scybalum, Scybala.

ENTEROL'OGY, Enterolog'ia, from εντερον, 'intestine,' and λογος, 'a discourse.' The part of anatomy which treats of the intestines.

ENTEROMALA'CIA, Enteromalax'is, (F.) Ramollissement de l'Intestin, from εντερον, 'an intestine,' and μαλασσω, 'I soften.' Softening of the mucous or other coats of the intestine.

ENTEROMALAXIS, Enteromalacia.

ENTEROMANTIS, Engastrimyth.

ENTERO-MEROCE'LE, from εντερον, 'intestine,' μηρος, 'the thigh,' and κληη, 'tumour.' Crural hernia, formed of intestine.

ENTERO-MESENER'IC, Entero-mesenter'icus, (F.) Entéro-mésentérique. Relating to the intestine and mesentery.

ENTERO-MESENER'ICA FEBRIS. MM. Petit and Serres have given this name to the typhoid form of adynamic fever, in which the intestines are ulcerated, with enlargement of the corresponding mesenteric glands. See Typhus.

ENTÉRO-MÉSÉNTÉRITE, Tabes mesenterica—e. Mésentérite typhoïde, see Typhus.

ENTEROMOR'PHIA COMPRES'SA. One of the algae, used by the Sandwich Islanders as an esculent.

ENTEROMPHALOCELE, Enteromphalus.

ENTEROMPHALUS, Enteromphalocœlê, from εντερον, 'intestine,' and ομφαλος, 'umbilicus.' Umbilical hernia, formed of intestine.

ENTEROMYCODORITIS, from εντερον, 'intestine,' μυκος, 'slime,' δωρα, 'skin,' and ιτις, denoting inflammation. Inflammation of the mucous membrane of the intestines.

ENTERON, Intestine.

ENTEROPARALYSIS, Enteroplêgia, Paralysis intestino'rum, from εντερον, 'intestine,' παρالىσις, 'paralysis.' Paralysis of the intestines.

ENTEROPARISAGOGE, Intussusception.

ENTEROPATHIA, Enteropathy, from εντερον, 'intestine,' and παθος, 'disease.' Disease of the intestines in general.

ENTEROPATHIA CANCEROSA, Enteroscirrhus, Enterostenosis scirrhusa seu organica, Enterosarcœmia, Induratio seu Scirrhus seu Cancer seu Carcinoma Intestino'rum, (F.) Cancer des Intestins. Cancer of the intestines.

ENTEROPERISTOLE, Enterospêgma, Hernia incarcerationis, Incarceratio intestino'rum, from εντερον, 'intestine,' and περιστλω, 'I contract.' Constriction or obstruction of the intestines, from a cause which acts either within the abdomen, or without it, as in strangulated hernia.

ENTEROPHLOGIA, Enteritis.

ENTEROPHLOGOSIS, Enteritis.

ENTEROPHTHISIS, from εντερον, 'intestine,' and φθισις, 'consumption.' Consumption of the bowels. Consumption owing to suppuration in the intestines.

ENTEROPHYMATA, Tubercula intestinorum.

ENTEROPLASTY, Enteroplasticê, from εντερον, 'intestine,' and πλασσω, 'I form.' A plastic operation for the restoration of an intestine.

ENTEROPLÉGIA, Enteroparalysis.

ENTEROPYRA, Enteritis. Also, enteromenteric fever, Entéropyræ.—Alibert.

ENTEROPYRA ASIATICA, Cholera—e. Biliosa, Fever, bilious.

ENTERORRHAGIA, from εντερον, 'intestine,' and ραγη, 'violent rupture.' Hemorrhage, or excessive discharge, from the bowels.

ENTERORRHAGIA SIMPLEX, Hæmatochezia.

ENTERORRHAPHIA, Enterorraphê, from εντερον, 'intestine,' and ραφη, 'a suture.' Suture of the intestines, for the relief of injuries done to them.

ENTERORRHEUMA, Rheumatismus Intestino'rum, from εντερον, 'intestine,' and ρευμα, 'defluxion, rheumatism.' Rheumatism of the intestines.

ENTERORRHEXIS, Enterobrosis.

ENTERORRHŒA, Diarrhœa, Melæna.

ENTEROSARCOCELE, from εντερον, 'intestine,' σαρξ, 'flesh,' and κηλη, 'a tumour.' Intestinal hernia, complicated with fleshy excrecence, or rather sarcocele.

ENTEROSARCOMIA, Enteropathia cancerosa.

ENTEROSCHEOCELE, Enteroschoelê, from εντερον, 'an intestine,' σχηον, 'the scrotum,' and κηλη, 'tumour.' Scrotal hernia consisting of intestine.

ENTEROSCIRRHUS, Enteropathia cancerosa.

ENTEROSES, from εντερον, 'an intestine.' A class of diseases, comprehending all those that are seated in the intestines.—Alibert.

ENTEROSPHEMA, Enteroperistole.

ENTEROSTENOSIS, from εντερον, 'intestine,' and στενωσις, 'stricture.' Stricture or constriction of the intestines. See Ileus.

ENTEROSTENOSIS VOLVULUS, Ileus—e. Organica, Enteropathia cancerosa—e. Scirrhusa, Enteropathia cancerosa.

ENTÉROTOME, Enterotomus, from εντερον, 'intestine,' and τομω, 'I cut.' A name given by J. Cloquet to an instrument for promptly opening the intestinal canal through its whole extent. It consists of a pair of scissors, one blade of which is much longer than the other, and rounded at its extremity. This is passed into the intestine.

ENTEROTOMIA, Enterotomy, same etymon. In anatomy, it signifies dissection of the intestines. In surgery, it means an operation, little used, which consists in opening the intestines, in order to evacuate the fæcal matters accumulated in it; for example, in certain cases of hernia, accompanied with contraction of the intestinal canal; in operations for an artificial anus, performed on the new-born, where the rectum is imperforate or not existing, &c.

ENTEROTOMY, Enterotomia.

ENTEROPYPHUS, see Typhus.

ENTEROZOA, Worms.

ENTERYDROCELE, Enterohydrocœlê, from εντερον, 'intestine,' υδωρ, 'water,' and κηλη, 'rupture.' Intestinal hernia with hydrocele.

ENTHELMINTHES, Worms.

ENTHEOMANIA, Demonomania.

ENTHLASIS, Esphlêsis, Illisio, from εν, 'in,' and θλαω, 'I break.' A fracture of the cranium, with comminution, in which the bone is depressed, or has lost its level.

ENTHLASIS CRANII, Effractura Cranii.

ENTITÉ, Entity.

ENTITY, Entitas, (F.) Entité; from ens, entis, 'a being.' The being or essence of anything. It has been used somewhat vaguely, in modern French medicine more especially, to signify apparently a general or essential disease, the nature and seat of which cannot be determined.—Nysten.

ENTOCELE, Ectopia.

ENTOCELE LENTIS, Dislocation of the crystalline into the anterior chamber of the eye.

ENTOGONYANCON, Genu varium, Calf knee, X leg, from εντος, 'within,' γωνν, 'the knee,' and αγκων, 'a bend.' Bending of the knees inwards. The state of being knock-kneed, or in-kneed. (Prov.) Knap-kneed, (Sc.) Nule-kneed.

ENTOHYALOID MUSCÆ, see Metamorphosis.

ENTONIA, Tension, Tonic spasm.

ENTONIC, Entonicus, from εν, denoting excess, and τονος, 'tone.' Having great tension or exaggerated action.

ENTONNOIR, Calix, Infundibulum—e. du Ventricule Moyen du Cerveau, Infundibulum of the brain.

ENTOPARASITES, Worms.

ENTOPHTHALMIA, from εντος, 'within,' and οφθαλμος, 'inflammation of the eye.' Ophthalmia affecting the interior of the eye.

ENTOPHYTE, Entophyton, (pl. Entophyta), from εντος, 'within,' and φυτον, 'a vegetable.' A vegetable parasite, and especially one growing in the interior of the body. The following are the chief entophytes:—

Alga	of the mouth.
Achorion Schœnleinii	in Porrigo favosa.
Achorion Lebertii	in Porrigo decalvans.
Microsporion Audouini ..	in Porrigo decalvans.
Mycoderm	of Plica Polonica.
"	of Mentagra.
"	of Muguet.
"	of ulcerated and mucous surfaces.
Sarcina ventriculi	of the stomach.
Torula	" "

ENTOPHYTIC, Entophyticus, same etymon. Of or belonging to an entophyte, —as 'an entophytic growth.'

ENTOPTERYGOID, see Pterygoid.
 ENTOP'PIC, Entop'pticus, from εντος, 'within,' and οφθις, 'vision.' Relating or appertaining to the vision of objects within the organ of sight,—as of the bloodvessels of the retina.

ENTORSE, Sprain.
 ENTOSTHETHIDIA, Entrails.
 ENTOSTHIA, Entrails.
 ENTOSTOSIS, Enostosis.
 ENTOTORRHŒA, Otirrheæa.
 ENTOTOZÆNA, Ozæna.
 ENTOXICISMUS, Poisoning.
 ENTOXISMUS, Poisoning.
 ENTOZOA, (sing. Entozoon.) Worms.
 ENTOZOAIREs, Worms.
 ENTOZOARIA, Worms.
 ENTOZOOGENESIS, Helminthiasis.
 ENTOZON FOLLICULORUM, Acarus Folliculorum.

ENTRAILLES, Entrails.
 EN'TRAILS, Splanchna, Encæ'lia, Vis'cera, Entosthid'ia, Entos'thia, Entosthethid'ia, Inter'nea, from enteralia, a word of bad Latin, coming from εντερον, 'intestine.' It is used for the viscera enclosed in the splanchnic cavities, and especially for those in the abdomen; Bowels, Guts, (F.) Entrailles, Viscères. Eceta has had this latter signification, but it was most frequently used by the ancients, as by Pliny, for the thoracic viscera.

ENTREFESSON, Chafing.
 ENTRICHO'MA, from εν, 'in,' and τριχωμα, (τριξ, τριχος), 'hair.' The tarsal cartilage, and the edge of the eyelids, in which the cilia are implanted.

ENTROP'ION, Entrop'ium, from εν, 'in,' and τροπω, 'I turn.' Inver'sio palpebrarum, Capillit'ium, Trich'iasis, Introsuscep'tio seu Blepharopto'sis entropium, Blepharelo'sis, Trich'ia, Tricho'sis. A name given to the inversion or turning inwards of the eyelids, so that the eye-lashes are directed towards the globe of the eye; irritate and inflame it, and give rise to the affection called Trich'iasis.

The contact of the hair with the surface of the eye occasions considerable irritation of the conjunctiva, which is soon followed by chemosis, ulceration of the eye, and other symptoms, such as fever, watchfulness, &c.

If the disease be entropion, as above defined, that is, dependent upon the inversion of the eyelids, it must be remedied,—either by dispersing the œdema or swelling of the eyelids, or by cutting out a portion of the skin. When the disease is dependent on a vicious direction of the cilia, they must be plucked out and the bulbs be cauterized.

ENTROPIUM, Entropion.
 ENTYPOSIS, see Glene.

ENUCLEATION, Enucleat'io, from enucleare, enucleatum, (e, and nucleus), 'to take out a kernel.' This term has been proposed for the operation of removing tumours, &c., without cutting into them.—Percy.

The word is used in Pharmacy for the operation of shelling or removing the kernels of any nut.

ENULA CAMPANA, Inula Helenium.

ENULON, from εν, 'in,' and ουλον, 'the gum.' The inner part of the gums. The external part was called ουλον, and that between the teeth αρμος.—Pollux.

ENURE'SIS, from ενουρω, (εν, and ουρω), 'I void the urine in bed.' Paru'ria incont'inens, Incontine'ntia ur'inae, Exere'tio Urinae involunta'ria seu inopportu'na, Mic'tio involunta'ria, Uraera'tia, Urorrhœ'a, Perirrhœ'a, Strangu'ria, (Galen.) Anischu'ria, Hyperure'sis, Dian'nes, Involuntary discharge of urine, Incontinence of urine. This affection is most common in advanced life. It may depend on too great irritability of the bladder, or on distension, or injury of the fibres about its neck, paralysis of the organ, Cysto-paraly'sis, Cysto-ple'gia, the presence of an irregularly shaped calculus impacted in the urethra near its commencement; rupture of the bladder and urethra; renal disease; or on pressure exerted on the bladder by the distended womb or by a tumour. It often occurs after difficult labour, but generally yields, in the course of a week or ten days; the catheter being introduced twice a day in the mean time.

The treatment must of course vary according to the cause; and when the affection on which it is dependent cannot be removed, the discharge of urine may be prevented by exerting a degree of compression on the urethra, by means of appropriate instruments; or a urinary may be employed to receive the urine as it passes off.

ENVIE, Hangnail, Malacia, Nævus—e. de Vomir, Nausea.

ENYPNION, Somnium.
 ENYSTRON, Abomasus.
 ENZOÏTIA, Entozoy.

ENZOÏTY, Enzoït'ia, (F.) Enzoïtie, from εν, 'in,' and ζωον, 'animal.' An endemic disease attacking animals.

EP, EPH, EPI, επ, εφ, επι, 'upon, above;' in composition, generally means, 'augmentation, addition, increase, reciprocal action, repetition.' Hence:

EPACMAS'TICOS, from επι, and ακραζω, 'I increase.' An epithet applied to fevers, Febres epacmas'ticae, whose symptoms go on augmenting in violence, from the commencement to the termination. Such fevers are, also, called Epanudidont'es.

EPAGOGIUM, Phimosi, Prepnce.
 EPANADIPLOSI, Anadiplosis.
 EPANALEPSIS, Anadiplosis.
 EPANAS'TASIS, from επαιστημι, 'to cause to rise up.' Pustule. The formation of a tumour. The breaking out of an eruption—Eruptio exanthematis. A pustule.

EPANASTEMA, Exanthem, swelling.
 EPANCHEMENT, Effusion
 EPANESIS, Remission.
 EPANETUS, Remittent—e. Hectica, Hectic fever—e. Malignus flavus, Fever, yellow—e. Mitis, Remittent fever.

EPANORTHOSIS, Restauratio.
 EPANTHEMA, Exanthem.
 EPANTHISMA, Exanthem.

EPAPHŒ'RESIS, from επαφαιρω, (επι, απω, and αιρω), 'I take,' 'I take away.' Repet'ta subla'tio seu evacua'tio. A repeated abstraction or evacuation. It was formerly used synonymously with repeated bloodletting; Phlebotom'ia itera'ta.—Galen.

EPAPHRISMOS, Despumatation.
 EPARMA, Tumour.
 EPARSIS, Tumour.

EPAULE, Humerus.
 EPENCRANIS, Cerebellum.
 EPENDYMA, Membrane.

EPENDYMA VENTRICULO'RUM, En'dyma seu Indumentum ventriculo'rum, from επι, and ενδυω, (εν, and δυω), 'I enter;' hence, επένδυμα, 'an upper garment or cloak.' The lining membrane of the ventricles of the brain, formed by a prolongation of the pia mater, and probably also of the arachnoid.

ÉPERON, Hippocampus minor—é. des Ar'tères, Spur.

ÉPÉRVIER, Accipiter.

ÉPÉRVIERÈ DES MURAILLES, Hieracium murorum.

EPHEBÆON, Ephēbæ'um, from επι, and ἠβη, 'pubes.' The parts of generation: also, the region of the pubes, as well as the hair upon the pubes. It meant, likewise, a part of the ancient gymnasium in which the rhetoricians, philosophers, &c., disputed.

EPHEBEUM, Mons veneris.

EPHEBIA, Ephēbi'a, Pubertas. Same etymology. The age of puberty.

EPHEBOSYNE, Puberty.

EPHEBOTES, Puberty.

EPHEBUS, Pubens, Puber, (F.) Pubère, Éphèbe. One who has attained the age of puberty.

EPHEDRANA, Nates.

EPHEL'CIIS, from επι, and ἔλκος, 'an ulcer.' The crust or scab of an ulcer.

ÉPHELIDE SCORBUTIQUE, Chloasma.

EPHE'LIDES, from επι, and ἠλιος, 'the sun.' Epicthro'sis, Mac'ula sol'aris, Mac'ula fusca seu lentacula'ris, Vitilig'ines, Phaci, Pannus lentacula'ris, Lentic'ula, Lentigo, Ephelis Lentigo seu Lentic'ula seu à solè, Nigre'do à solè Spilo'sis ephelis, Asta'tes, Effila, Freckles, Sunburn, (Prov.) Fern'tickles, Fant'ickles, Furn'tickles, Furn'tickles, Fern'freckles, Fanf'ekles, Forn'peckles, Freckens, Mur'fles, (F.) Taches de rousseur, Hâle. This term includes not only the yellow lentiginous, which appear on persons of a fair skin, and the larger brown patches, which also arise from exposure to the direct rays of the sun, but also those large dusky patches which are very similar in appearance, but occur on other parts of the surface, that are constantly covered. See Chloasma. They do not extend farther than the skin. Many cosmetics have been recommended for their removal. Simple spirituous lotions or weak mineral acids, applied a few times in the day, are as effectual as any other means.

One, affected with freckles, is said to be freckled, (Sc.) Fair'tickled, Fern'tickled, (Prov.) Furn'tickled, Fant'tickled, Fern'freckled, Forn'peckled, Freckened, Mur'fled, (F.) Tacheté de Roussours.

EPHELIS, see Ephelides—e. Lentigo, Ephelides—e. Sole, Ephelides.

EPHELOTES, Leucoma.

EPHEM'ERA, Di'a'ria, from επι, and ἡμερα, 'a day.' That which continues a day. This epithet is given to diseases, and particularly to fevers, which last only a day.—Febris dia'ria seu simplex seu Ephem'era, Ephemero'pyra, Febric'ula, Ephem'eral, Di'ary or Simple Fever, (F.) Fièvre éphémère. The term prolonged ephemer'a is sometimes used for fevers, which cease after two or three days' duration.

EPHEMERA ANGLICA PESTILENS, Sudor anglicus—e. Britannica, Sudor Anglicus—e. Maligna, Sudor Anglicus—e. Mortifera, Plague—e. Pestilentialis, Plague—e. Sudatoria, Sudor Anglicus.

EPHEMEROPIRYA, Ephemera.

EPHEMERUS, Quotidian.

EPHIALTES HYPOCHONDRIACA, Incus vigilantium—e. Nocturnus, Incus—e. Vigilantium, Incus vigilantium.

EPHIDRO'SES, (G.) Ephidrosen. A division of the family Ekzematosen, of Fuchs, comprising morbid varieties of sweating.

EPHIDRO'SIS, from επι, and ἵδρωσ, 'I sweat.' Hidro'sis, Idro'sis, Sudatio, Sweating. Of old, it meant, at times, a slight sweating, sudatio'cula, of no value, and of bad augury; at others, a good and critical sweat. It has likewise been used for a copious sweat.

EPHIDROSIS PROFUSA, E. spontanea seu idiopathica, Hydropede'sis, Exsudatio, Exudatio, Hyperphidros'sis, Hyperhydro'sis, Hydrorrhœ'a, Hydropede'sis, (F.) Flux de Sueur. An excessive sweating. A colliquative sweat. Such copious perspirations are generally owing to debility of the exhalants, and require the use of tonics, especially of the mineral acids, opium, &c.

EPHIDROSIS, Desudatio—e. Cruenta, Sudor cruentus—e. Saccharata, Sudor dulcis.

EPHIPPIUM, Sella Turcica.

EPH'ODOS, from επι, and ὁδος, 'a way,' 'a road or avenue to a place.' Hippocrates uses this word in three senses: 1. For the vessels or canals, which give passage to the excrements of the body. 2. For a periodical attack or accession of fever; and 3. For the approach of similar or dissimilar things which may be useful or hurtful to the body.—Castelli.

EPH'RATA SPRINGS. These are in Lancaster County, Pennsylvania. The water is pure; and facilities are afforded for bathing—warm and cold.

ÉPI, Spica.

EP'IALOS, Hepi'alos, Quer'cera, Quer'quera. A name given by the ancients to fever, when the hot stage was mingled with irregular chills. Also, the cold stage of fever.

EPIALTES, Incus.

EPIAMA, Lentive.

EPIAN, Framboesia.

EPIBLEMA, Catablema.

EPIBOLE, Incus.

EPICANTHIS, Canthus.

EPICAN'THIS, from επι, and κανθος, 'the angle of the eye.' A defective formation, in which a fold of skin passes from the root of the nose over the inner canthus of the eye.

EPICAR'PIUM, Pericar'pium, from επι, and καρπος, 'the wrist.' An application made to the wrists, or to the region of the pulse, was so called.

EPICAUMA, Encauma.

EPICAUSIS, Encauma.

EPICRASTICA, Emollients.

EPICHOLOS, Bilious.

EPICHOORDIS, Mesentery.

EPICHOIRION, Decidua.

EPICHOIRIUM, Epidermis.

EPICHRISIS, Inunctio.

EPICHR'O'SIS, Spilo'sis, from επι, and χρωμα, 'colour.' Simple discoloration of the surface.—Good, Ephelides.

EPICHRISIS SPILI, see Nævus.

EPICHYSIS, Affusio.

EPICŒLIDES, Cilia, Palpebra (superior.)

EPICŒMASIS, from επικοιμασμαι, (επι, and κοιμασμαι, 'to lie down to rest,' 'to sleep.') Decubitus ad dormien'dum et Dormit'io. The position of sleeping, as well as sleeping itself.

EPICOL'IC, from επι, and κωλον, 'the colon.' The epicolic regions, regio'nes epicol'ica, are those parts of the abdomen which correspond to the colon.

EPICOLLESIS, Agglutination.

EPICONDYLE, Epicondylus, from επι, and κονδυλος, 'a condyle.' A name given, by Chausier, to an eminence at the outer part of the inferior extremity of the os humeri; so called, because it is seated above the condyle. The epicondyle gives attachment to the outer lateral ligament of the elbow joint, and to a very strong tendon to which several of the muscles of the posterior part of the forearm are attached.

EPICONDYLO-CUBITALIS, see Anconeus—e. Radial, Supinator radii brevis—e. Sus-mittacarpian, see Radialis—e. Sus-phalangietien commun, Extensor digitorum communis—e. Sus-phalangietien du petit doigt, Extensor proprius minimi digiti.

EPICOPHO'SIS, from επι, and κωφωσις, 'deafness.' Deafness supervening on another disease.

EPICRANIUM, from επι, and κρανιον, 'the cranium.' A name given to different parts seated on the cranium. The skin, aponeurosis between the occipital and frontal muscles, and the whole of the scalp, have been so called. Portal includes under this name the occipito-frontalis muscle, pyramidalis nasi, and superior and anterior auricular muscles. The pericranium.

EPICRANIUS, Occipito-frontalis.

EPICRAN'ISIS, Contemperatio, from επικραννυμι, (επι, and κραννυμι, 'I mix,') 'I temper.' A term used by the humourists for an amelioration of the humours. They called Cure by Epierasis—per epierasin, a mode of treatment by imagined alteratives, which they supposed to be possessed of the power of gradually correcting the vitiated humours.

EPICROUSIS, Percussion.

EPICTENIUM, Pubes.

EPICTETI MORBI, Acquired diseases.

EPICYEMA, Superfætation.

EPICYESIS, Superfætation.

EPICYSTOTOMIA, see Lithotomy.

EPIDEISIS, Deligation.

EPIDEMIC, Epidem'ius, Epidem'icus, (F.) Epidémique. Same etymon as Epidemy. Appertaining to an epidemy. An epidemy.

EPIDEMIC CONSTITUTION, Epidemy—e. Disease, Epidemy—c. Influence, Epidemy.

EPIDEMICITÉ, see Epidemy.

EPIDEMICUS, Epidemy.

EPIDEMIOG'RAPHY, Epidemiograph'ia, from επι, 'upon,' δημος, 'the people,' and γραφη, 'a description.' A history or description of epidemics.

EPIDEMIOLOG'Y, Epidemiolog'ia, from epidemy, and logos, 'a description.' The doctrine of epidemics.

EPIDÉMIQUE, Epidemy.

EPIDEMIUS, Epidemy.

EPIDEMY, Epidem'ic, Epidem'ia, Morbus publicus seu popul'aris seu epidem'icus seu epidem'ius, Epidem'ic disease, E. influence, E. constitution; from επι, and δημος, 'the people.' (F.) Epidémie. A disease which attacks at the same time a number of individuals, and which is referred to some particular constitutio aeris, or condition of the atmosphere, with which we are utterly ignorant. It differs from endemic, the latter being owing to locality; but it is obvious, that should a particular epidemic consitution of the air—epidemic'ity, (F.) épidémicité—exist along with a favouring endemic condition, these combined influences may act in the causation of several of those serious and fatal complaints, which at times visit a district, and are never afterwards met with, or at least not until after the lapse of a considerable period.

EPIDENDRUM VANILLA, see Vanilla.

EPID'ERIS, Epider'rhis, Epider'rhion, Hypod'eris, Hypoder'mis, Hypoder'rhis, from επι, and δερμα, 'a skin.' This word, with some, means the nymphæ; with others, the clitoris; with others, again, the prepuce of the clitoris.

EPIDERMA, Epidermis.

EPIDERMATIS, Epidermis.

EPIDERMIC, Epiderm'icus, Epiderm'al, Epiderna'tis, (F.) Épidémique: same etymon as epidermis. Belonging to the epidermis,—as EPIDERMIC CELLS, see Cell, epidermic.

EPIDERMIDON'OSI, Epidermidona'si, from επίδερμις, 'epidermis,' and νοσος, 'disease.' Diseases of the epidermis.

EPIDERMION, Epidermis.

EPIDER'MIS, Epider'mion, Epider'matis, Epider'ma, Epicho'rium, Sum'mitas cutis, Cutic'ula, C. ext'ima seu extre'ma, Cutis extima seu summa seu ul'tima, Pellis summa, Pell'ic'ula summa seu super'ior, Lam'ina prima cutis, Oper'culum cutis, from επι, 'upon,' and δερμα, 'the true skin.' Scarf-skin, Cuticle. (F.) Surpeau, Cuticule. A transparent, dry, thin membrane, devoid of nerves and vessels, which covers all the surface of the body, except the parts that correspond to the nails. It appears to consist of minute scales, placed one above the other. Chaussier considers it to be formed and reproduced by an excretory action of the true skin; to act like a dry varnish, which prevents the immediate contact of bodies with the nervous papillæ, and consequently to deaden tactile impressions, which, without its intervention, might be painful. The Epider'mic, Epider'meous, or Epider'moid (as Bichat called it) System, in general anatomy, comprises three parts. 1. External Epidermis. 2. Epidermis spread over the mucous membranes. 3. The Nails and Hair.

EPIDERMIS LINGUÆ, see Tongue.

EPIDERMOID, Epidermoid'es, from epidermis, and ειδος, 'resemblance.' Resembling the epidermis.

EPIDERRHION, Epideris.

EPIDERRHIS, Epideris.

EPIDERRHITIS, Nymphitis.

EPIDESIS, see Bandage—e. Hæmostasia, Ligature.

EPIDESMIS, Epidesmus.

EPIDESMUM, Epidesmus.

EPIDESMUS, Epides'mis, Epides'mum, Superliga'men, from επι, and δωω, 'I bind.' A fascia, bandage or ligature, by which dressings are secured.—Hippocrates.

EPIDID'YMISS, from επι, 'upon,' and ιδιδυμος, 'a testicle.' Epidid'ymus, Did'ymis, Paras'tata, Testic'ulus accessorius, Caput testis, Corpus varicosum seu variciform'e testis, Supergemina'tis, (F.) Corpus variqueux ou variciforme. That which is placed upon the testicle. A small, oblong, vermiform, grayish body, lying along the superior margin of the testicle. The Epididymis is a canal formed by the union of all the seminiferous vessels folded several times upon themselves, after having traversed the Corpus Highmorianum. Its lower portion or tail, Cauda seu globus seu caput minor, is curved upwards, and is continuous with the vas deferens; the opposite extremity is called the head, globus seu caput major. The length of this canal, folded as it is upon itself and describing numerous curvatures, is, according to Munro, 32 feet.

EPIDIDYMITIS, Parastatitis—e. Blennorrhagic, Hernia humoralis.

EPID'OSIS, from επι, 'upon,' and ιδωμι, 'to give.' Augmentation, increase. A word applied to the natural increase of the body, or to the increase of a disease.

EPID'ROMÉ, Epidrom'ia, Epiph'ora, from επίδρωμι, (επι, and δρωμι, 'I run,') 'I run upon.' An afflux or congestion of humours.—Galen.

EPIDROMIA, Epidrome.

EPIFAGUS AMERICANUS, Orobanche Virginiana—e. Virginianus, Orobanche Virginiana.

EPIGÆ'A (properly EPIGÆ'A) REPENS, (επι, 'upon,' and γη, 'the earth,' from its trailing growth.) Trailing Arbutus, Ground Laurel, Mayflower, called, by the Shakers, Gravelplant. A small, trailing plant, of the Family Ericaceæ, which grows in sandy woods, or in rocky soil, especially in the shade of pines. Its flowers appear in early spring, and exhale a rich, spicy fragrance. The leaves and stems are prepared and used like uva ursi.

EPIGASTRAL'GIA, from epigastrium, and algos, 'pain.' Pain at the epigastrium.

EPIGASTRIC, Epigast'ricus, Epigast'ricus, from επι, 'upon,' and γαστρη, 'the stomach.' This name has been given to several parts.

EPIGASTRIC ARTERY, Ar'teria epigast'rica, Ar'tère sus-pubienne, (Ch.) It arises from the external iliac, on a level with the crural arch; sometimes by a trunk proper to it, at others by one common to it and the Obturator artery. It ascends upwards and inwards, behind the spermatic cord, follows the outer edge of the rectus abdominis muscle, and anastomoses, towards the umbilicus, with the internal mammary. The epigastric artery anastomoses, also, with the obturator, spermatic, lumbar, and intercostal vessels.

EPIGASTRIC REGION, Regio epigast'rica seu cardi'aca seu stomach'ica seu stomacha'lis, is the superior region of the abdomen, comprised between the false ribs on each side, and extending from the lower surface of the diaphragm to two fingers' breadth above the umbilicus. It is divided into three parts, one middle, the epigast'rium,—and two lateral, the hypochond'ria.

EPIGASTRIC VEIN follows nearly the same course as the artery.

EPIGASTRICUS, Epigastric.

EPIGAST'RUM. Same etymon. The belly; the epigastric region.

EPIGASTRICUS, Epigastric.

EPIGASTROCE'LE, from επι, γαστηρ, 'the stomach,' and κηλη, 'a tumour.' Hernia, formed by the stomach; Gastrocele. This name has been given more especially to hernia, which occurs towards the upper part of the linea alba or in the epigastric region, whether formed or not by the stomach.

EPIGEA, Epigæa.

EPIGENEMA, Epigenesis.

EPIGENESIS, from επι, and γενεσις, 'generation.' A theory of conception, according to which the new being is created entirely anew; and receives at once from each parent the materials necessary for its formation. Also, a new formation.

EPIGENESIS, as well as Epigene'ma, or Epigene'ma, is, also, applied to any symptom occurring during a disease, without changing its nature. An accessory symptom. Epiginomenos, Superve'nens, has a similar acceptation.

EPIGNOMENOS, see Epigenesis.

EPIGLOT'TIC, Epiglott'icus: same etymon as Epiglottis. Relating to the epiglottis.

EPIGLOTTIC GLAND, Periglott'is, Caro glandulosa. A collection of small, glandular granula, situate in the adipose, areolar texture at the base of the anterior surface of the epiglottis, in a triangular space, bounded anteriorly by the thyro-hyoid membrane and thyroid cartilage. It pours out an unctuous and mucous fluid, which lubricates the epiglottis, keeps it supple and movable, and prevents the larynx from being irritated by the constant passage of the air, in the act of respiration.

EPIGLOT'TIS, from επι, and γλωττις, 'the glottis.' Épiglott'ic cartilage, Lig'ula, Operculum laryng'is, Lingua Ex'igua, Ling'ula fist'ula, Subling'uis, Superlig'ula. A fibro-cartilage, situate at the upper part of the larynx, behind the base of the tongue. Its form is oval; texture elastic; thickness greater below than above, and greater in the middle than at the sides. By its smaller extremity, which is the lower, it is attached to the thyroid cartilage; its two surfaces are covered by the mucous membrane of the pharynx and larynx. The special use of the epiglottis would seem to be to cover the glottis accurately at the moment of deglutition, and, thus, to assist in opposing the passage of alimentary substances into the air tubes.

EPIGLOTTITIS, Inflamma'tio Epiglott'idis, Angi'na epiglottide'a, (F.) Inflammation de l'Épiglotte. Inflammation of the epiglottis.

EPIGLOT'TUM. An instrument, mentioned by Paracelsus, for raising the eyelids. It resembled the epiglottis in shape.

EPIGLOU'TIS, from επι, and γλωτος, 'the buttocks.' The superior region of the nates.—Gorraus.

EPIGNA'THIUS, from επι, 'upon,' and γναθος, 'the jaw.' A double monster, in which an incomplete fœtus is rooted, with its blood vessels in the palate of one more complete.

EPIG'ONÉ, Goné, Hypoph'ysis, Progen'ies, Proles, Sob'oles, Sub'oles, from επι, and γονη, 'sperm.' Offspring. Progeny. Also, Superfœtation.

EPIGONION, Fœtus.

EPIGONIS, Patella.

EPIGONON, Superfœtation.

EPIGOUNIS, Patella.

EPIGUNIS, Patella.

ÉPILATOIRE, Depilatory.

EPILATORIUM, Depilatory.

EPILEPSIS, Epilepsy.

EPILENTIA, Epilepsy.

EPILEPSIA, Epilepsy—e. Acuta Infantum, Eclampsia—e. Algetica, see Algos—e. Febrilis infantum, Eclampsia—e. Nocturna, Incubus—e. Puerilis, Eclampsia infantum—e. Saltatoria, Chorea—e. Uterina, Loriud matricis.

ÉPILEPSIE, Epilepsy—e. Utérine, Hysteria—e. Vertige, see Epilepsia.

EP'ILEPSY, 'ιερη νοσος, σεληναια νοσος, Epilep'sia, Epilep'sis, Epilen'tio, Syssa'pa'sia Epilepsia, Catalent'ia, Decident'ia, Pas'sio cad'i'va, Heracl'eus morbus, Hieran'osus, Deprehensio, Clonus epilep'sia, Prehensio, Perdit'io, Epilep'tica pas'sio, Morbus comit'ialis seu cadu'cus seu Hercule'us seu sacer seu astral'is seu siderat'us seu dæmoni'acus seu Sancti Johan'nis seu fœdus seu pueril'is seu magnus seu major seu interlu'nus seu divi'nus seu dæmoni'us seu son'ticus seu seleni'acus seu lunat'icus seu mens'al'is seu deif'icus seu scelles'tus seu vitriol'd'us seu viridel'us seu Sancti Valenti'ni, Malum cadu'cum, Analep'sia, Catapto'sis, Insa'nia cad'i'va, Apoplex'ia parva, Cadu'ca pas'sio, Lues divi'na, Vit'ium cadu'cum seu divi'nium seu Hercule'um, Falling sickness, Falling-down, (Old E.) Fallandevyl, (F.) Mal caduc ou divin ou Saint-Jean ou de Terre, Hautmal, Goutte caduque. The word is derived from επιλαμβανω, 'future,' επιληψω, (επι, and λαμβάνω, 'I seize,') 'I seize upon.' It is a disease of the brain, which may either be idiopathic or symptomatic, spontaneous or accidental, and which occurs in paroxysms, with uncertain intervals between. These paroxysms are characterized by loss of consciousness and by convulsive motions of the muscles. Frequently, the fit attacks suddenly; at other times, it is preceded by indisposition, vertigo, and stupor. At times, before the loss of consciousness occurs, a sensation of a cold vapour is felt, hence called aura epilep'tica. This appears to rise in some part of the body, proceeds towards the head; and as soon as it has reached the brain the patient falls down. The ordinary duration of a fit is from 5 to 20 minutes. Sometimes it goes off in a few seconds; at others, it is protracted for hours. In all cases, there is a loss of sensation, sudden falling down, distortion of the eyes and face; countenance of a red, purple or violet colour; grinding of the teeth; foaming at the mouth; convulsions of the limbs; difficult respiration, generally stertorous; with, sometimes, involuntary discharge of feces and urine. After the fit, the patient retains not the least recollection of what has passed, but remains, for some time, affected with head-ach, stupor, and lassitude.

The disease is in the brain, and is generally organic; but it may be functional and symptomatic of irritation in other parts, as in the stomach, bowels, &c. The prognosis, as to ultimate recovery, is unfavourable. It does not, however, frequently destroy life, but is apt to lead to mental imbecility. Dissection has not thrown light on its pathology.

To the attacks of epilepsy which are unaccompanied by convulsions, as is sometimes the case, the French give the name Petit-mal, and Épilepsie Vertige, Cerebral Epilepsy. Fully formed epilepsy is the Grand-mal of the French, Spinal Epilepsy. When furious mania succeeds to a paroxysm, it is termed Mania epileptica and Epileptic Delirium.

In the treatment, the cause must be sought after, and if possible removed. In the paroxysm, but little can be done, but as the tongue is liable to be injured by the teeth, the jaws may be kept open by putting a cork or piece of wood between them. If the fit has been brought on by indigestible food, the stomach must be cleared. It is between the paroxysms that the great effort must be made. Generally, there is considerable irritability and debility of the nervous system, and hence tonics have been found the best remedies. Of these, perhaps the most powerful, in epilepsy, is the argenti nitras, given regularly and continued for months, if necessary. Preparations of iron, copper, and zinc, have also been used, and vegetable tonics and antispasmodics in general. Counter irritants, as blisters, moxa, &c., may be employed, if necessary, along with this course.

Unfortunately, in many cases, these means are found insufficient, and all that can be done is to palliate, removing carefully the exciting causes; such as the use of spirituous liquors, strong emotions, violent exercise, &c.; and regulating the diet.

EPILEPSY, CEREBRAL, see Epilepsy—e. Spinal, see Epilepsy.

EPILEP'TIC, Epilep'ticus, Epilep'tus, Lunat'icus, Cadi'caeus; same etymon. One affected with epilepsy. Any thing relating to epilepsy; as an epilep'tic individual; an epilep'tic symptom. Some authors also speak of epileptic remedies.

EPILEP'TOID, Epilep'toides; same etymon. Resembling epilepsy—as epilep'toid symptoms.

EPILO'BIIUM ANGSTIFO'LIIUM, (from επι, λοβον, and ιον, 'a violet on a pod,') Great Willow herb. An indigenous plant, Order, Onagraceæ, which flowers in July. The root is emollient and slightly astringent.

EPILOBIUM COLORA'TUM, Purple-veined Willow herb, has similar properties.

EPILOBIUM VILLO'SUM, a South African plant, is used at the Cape of Good Hope as a domestic remedy for cleansing foul ulcers.

EPI'MANES, from επιμανομαι, (επι, and μανομαι, 'I am in a rage at.')

A name given to a maniac when in a paroxysm.

EPIMELE'TAI, from επιμελεσθαι, (επι, and μελω, 'I take care,')

'I take care of.' A name by which the ancient Persians called the curers of wounds, who followed their armies.

EPI MOR'IOS, 'unequal;' from επι, and μερω, 'I divide.' An epithet applied to the pulse when unequal.—Galen.

ÉPINARD, Spinacia—é. Sauvage, Chenopodium bonus Henrius.

ÉPINE, Spine—é. de Cerf, Rhamnus—é. du Dos, Vertebral column—é. Gutturale, Nasal spine, inferior and posterior—e. Sphénoïdale, Sphenoidal spine—é. Vînette, Oxyacantha Galeni.

EPI NEMESIS, Dispensation.

EPINEPH'ELOS, Nubilo'sus. Presenting a cloud. Applied to the urine.—Hippocrates.

ÉPINEUX, Spinous—é. du Dos, grand, Spinialis dorsi major: see Interspinales dorsi et lumborum—é. du Dos, petit, see Interspinales dorsi et lumborum.

ÉPINGLE, Pin.

ÉPINIÈRE, Spinal.

EPINOTION, Scapula.

EPINYC'TIDES, from επι, and νυξ, νυκτος, 'the night.' Eruptions which appear on the skin in the night, and disappear in the day. Pustula livens et noctibus inquit'ans.—Pliny.

EPINYCTIS PRURIGINOSA, Urticaria.

ÉPIONE, Decidua.

EPIPAROXYSMUS. A paroxysm superadded to an ordinary paroxysm.

EPIPASTUM, Catapasma.

EPIPE'CHU, επιπυχνυ, from επι, and πυχνυς, 'the elbow.' The upper part of the elbow. The part above the elbow.—Gorræus.

EPIPEPHYCOS, Conjunctiva.

EPIPHENOM'ENON, Post appa'rens, Epiphenomenon; same etymon as the next. Any kind of adventitious symptom which occurs during the progress of an affection; and which is not as intimately connected with the existence of the disease as the symptoms properly so called.

EPIPHAN'IA, from επι, and φανω, 'I exhibit.' The external appearance of the body.—Castelli.

EPIPHEGUS VIRGINIANA, Orobanche Virginiana.

EPIPHENOMENON, Epiphænomemon.

EPIPH'LEBUS, from επι, and φλεψ, φλεβες, 'a vein.' An epithet given to those whose veins are very apparent.—Hippoc., Aretæus.

EPIPHLEGIA, Inflammation.

EPIPHLOGISMA, Erysipelatous inflammation.

EPIPHLOGOSIS, Hyperphlogosis.

EPIPH'ORA, Dacryno'ma, Lacryma'tio, De-lacryma'tio, Ilacryma'tio, Stillicid'ium lacryma-rum, Oc'ulus lacrymans; from επιφωρω, (επι, and φωρω), 'I carry to.' Weeping. (F.) Larmoiement. The watery eye;—an involuntary and constant flow of tears upon the cheek. It is almost always symptomatic of some disease of the lacrymal passages, and occurs when the tears cannot pass into the ductus ad nasum. Occasionally, it is owing to the tears being secreted in too great quantity; as in certain cases of ophthalmia. The treatment must of course be directed to the removal of the cause.

EPIPHORA, Epidrome, Ophthalmia—e. Alvi, Diarrhœa—e. Ptyalismus, Salivation.

EPIPHYMATA, Cutaneous diseases.

EPIPH'YSIS, Additamen'tum, from επι, and φωω, 'I arise.' Any portion of a bone, separated from the body of the bone by a cartilage, which becomes converted into bone by age. The epiphysis of the fœtus becomes the apophysis of the adult.

EPIPHYSIS CRURIS LONGIORIS INCUDIS, Os orbiculare.

EPI'PHYTE, Epiph'yton, (pl. Epiph'yta.) from επι, and φωρον, 'a plant.' Phyto-parasite. A parasite derived from the vegetable kingdom. Epiphytes are divided by Vogel into, 1. Vegetations in the human fluids, as the tor'ula cerevis'ia in vomited fluids, and fœcal evacuations, and the sar'cina ventric'uli. 2. Vegetations on the external skin and its appendages, as in tinea favosa, mentagra, herpes tonsurans and plica polonica; and, 3. Vegetations on the mucous membrane,—as in the aphthæ of children; in the cicatrices of the mucous membrane after typhus, &c. By some, the term epiphytes is restricted to those vegetable parasites which grow on the surface of the body.

EPIPLASMA, from επιπλασσω, (επι, and πλασσω, 'I smear,') 'I plaster.' Cataplasm. Galen uses it especially for an application of wheat flour, boiled in hydrelæum, and applied to wounds.

EPIPLE'GIA, from επι, and πληγη, 'a stroke.' Paralysis of the upper extremities.

EPIPLERO'SIS, from επι, and πληρωσις, 'repletion.' Excessive repletion; distension.

EPIPLOCĒ, from επι, and πλεκω, 'I twine.' Coition. Entanglement.

EPIPLOCĒ INTESTINA'LIS, Conglomeratio intestino'rum. Conglomeration of the intestines.

EPIPLOCE'LĒ, from επιπloon, and κληη, 'tumour.' Epip'loic her'nia, Zirba'lis hernia, Hernia omenta'lis, Omental hernia, (F.) Hernie de l'épiploon. Omental hernia is recognised—but at times with difficulty—by a soft, unequal, pasty tumour, in which no gurgling sound is heard on pressing or reducing it. It is less dangerous than hernia of the intestines.

EPIPLO-ENTEROCE'LĒ, from επιπloon, εντερον, 'intestine,' and κληη, 'tumour.' Hernia, formed by the epiploon and a portion of intestine. It is more commonly called En'tero-epiploce'lĒ.

EPIPLOĒTEROÖSCHEOCE'LĒ, Epiplo-entroschoce'lĒ, from επιπloon, εντερον, 'intestine,' σσχων, 'scrotum,' and κληη, 'rupture.' Hernia with omentum and intestine in the scrotum.

EPIPL'LOIC, Epip'loicus. Relating to the epiploon.

EPIPLOIC APPENDAGES, Appendiculæ pinguedinosæ.

EPIPLOIC ARTERIES; Arte'ria Epip'loica. The arterial branches, which are distributed to the epiploon, and which are given off by the gastro-epiploica.

EPIPLO-ISCHIOCE'LĒ, from επιπloon, ισχιον, 'the ischium,' and κληη, 'a tumour.' Hernia formed by the epiploon through the ischiatic notch.

EPIPLOÏTIS, from επιπloon, and itis, denoting inflammation. Inflammation of the omentum; Omenti'tis, Empresma peritonitis omenta'lis, Omenti inflamma'tio, Enteri'tis epiploï'tis, Omenti'tis. A form of partial peritonitis.

EPIPLOMEROCE'LĒ, from επιπloon, μηρος, 'the thigh,' and κληη, 'a tumour.' Femoral hernia, formed by the epiploon.

EPIPLOMPHALOCELE, Epiplomphalon.

EPIPLOMPHALON, Epiplo'm'phalon, Epiplomphaloce'lĒ, Hernia umbilica'lis, from επιπloon, and ομφαλος, 'the navel.' Umbilical hernia, formed by the epiploon.

EPIPLOMPHRASIS, from επιπloon, and εμφρασσω, 'I obstruct.' Induration of the epiploon.

EPIPLOCOMIS'TES, from επιπloon, and κομιζω, 'I carry.' One who has the omentum morbidly large. Also, one labouring under epiplocele.

EPIPL'LOŌN, Epip'loum, from επι, 'above,' and πλω, 'I swim or float.' Omen'tum, Retē, Reti'culum; Dertro'n; Zirbus, Gan'gamē, Gangamum, Operimentum intestino'rum, Saccus epiploicus, Sage'na, The Caul, (Prov.) Flick, Web. A prolongation of the peritoneum, which floats above a portion of the intestines, and is formed of two membranous layers, with vessels and fatty bands distributed through it. Anatomists have described several epiploons. The uses of the omentum are but little known. The chief one seems to be, to retain the viscera in situ, and to give passage to vessels.

EPIPLOON, COLIC, Colic Omen'tum, Omentum co'licum, Third Epiploon or Omentum, is a duplicature of the peritoneum, situate along the as-ending portion of the colon, as far as its junction with the transverse portion. It is behind the great epiploon, and fills up the angle formed by the junction of the ascending with the transverse colon. Its two laminae are separated by colic arteries and veins.

EPIPLOON, GASTRO-COLIC, Great Omentum, Omentum gastro-co'licum seu majus, Peritonæ'um duplicat'um, Retē majus, Zirbus adipi'nus, consists of an extensive duplicature, which is free and floating on the folds of the intestines. It is quadrilateral, and longer on the left side than on the right:—its base being fixed, anteriorly, to the great curvature of the stomach; and, posteriorly, to the arch of the colon. It is formed of two laminae, each consisting of two others. In this epiploon a number of vessels is distributed, and there is much fat.

EPIPLOON, GASTRO-HEPATIC, Lesser Omentum, Omentum hep'ato-gas'tricum seu minus, Membra'na macilentior, is a duplicature of the peritoneum, which extends transversely from the right side of the cardia to the corresponding extremity of the fissure of the liver, and downwards from this fissure to the lesser curvature of the stomach, the pylorus and duodenum. Below it is the foramen or hiatus of WINSLOW; and between its laminae are lodged the biliary and hepatic vessels. It contains but little fat. If air be blown in at the foramen of Winslow, the cavity or sac of the omentum, Sac'cus Peritonæ'i retrotruncula'ris, Bursa omenta'lis, will be rendered perceptible.

EPIPLOON, GASTRO-SPLENIC, Gastro-Splenic Omentum, Omentum Gastro-sple'nicum. A reflection of the peritoneum, which passes between the concave surface of the spleen and the stomach, from the cardiac orifice to near its great curvature, and which lodges the vasa brevia and splenic vessels between its laminae.

EPIPLoSARCOM'PHALUS, from επιπloon, σαρξ, σαρκος, 'flesh,' and ομφαλος, 'the navel.' Umbilical hernia, formed of indurated omentum.

EPIPLoSCHEOCE'LĒ, Epiploschoce'lĒ, from επιπloon, σσχων, 'the scrotum,' and κληη, 'tumour.' Scrotal hernia, formed by a displacement of the epiploon.

EPIPLOUM, Epiploon.

EPIPNOIA, Afflatus.

EPIPORO'MA, from επιπωρω, (επι, and πωρω,) 'I harden.' A topaceous concretion which forms in the joints. The callus of fracture.

EPIR'RHOĒ, Epirr'hœa, from επι, and ρρω, 'I flow.' Afflux or congestion of humours.—Hippocrates.

EPIRRHŒA, Epirrhœe.

EPISARCIDIUM, Anasarca.

EPIS'CHESIS, Retention; from επισχω, 'I restrain.' A suppression of excretions.

EPISCHET'ICUS; same etymon. Sistens, Repr'imens, Co'hibens. 'Restraining.' An agent that diminishes—secretion, for example.

EPISCHION, Abdomen, Pubes, Pubis os.

EPISCOPALES VALVULÆ, Mitral valves.

EPISEION, Pubis (os), Vulva, Labium Pudendi, Tressoria.

EPISEMA'SIA, from επισημαινω, (επι, and σημα, 'a sign,') 'I afford some sign.' Sema'sia. It has been used synonymously with signa, and also with the invasion of an attack of fever. See Annotatio.

EPISCOCELE, see Hernia, vulvar.

EPISEDE'MA, from επισσειον, (modern,) 'the labium pudendi,' and οιδημα, 'œdema.' Œdema of the labia pudendi.

EPISEOI'TIS, from επισσειον, 'the labium pudendi,' and itis, denoting 'inflammation.' Inflammation of the labia pudendi.

EPISEION, Episeion.

EPISEION'CUS, Episio'phy'ma, from επισσειον,

(modern,) 'the labium pudendi,' and ογκος, 'a tumour.' Tumor labio'rum. A swelling or tumour of the labia pudendi.

EPISIOPHYMA, Episioncus.

EPISIORRHAG'IA, from επισιον, 'the labium pudendi,' and ραγη, 'rupture.' Hemorrhage from the labia pudendi.

EPISIORRHAPHY, Episiorrhaph'ia, from επισιον, 'the labium pudendi,' 'the vulva,' and ραφη, 'suture.' An operation practised in cases of prolapsus uteri, which consists in paring the opposing surfaces of the labia pudendi, bringing them together and uniting them by suture, so as to diminish the outlet of the vulva.

EPISPA'DIA; Hyperspa'dia; same etymon as the next. The condition of an Epispadias.

EPISPA'DIAS, Epispadia'us, Anaspa'dias, Anaspadia'us, Hyperspa'dias, Hyperspadi'us, from επι, 'above,' and σπασω, 'I draw.' The opposite to Hypospadias. "One who has a preternatural opening of the urethra at the upper part of the penis.

EPISPA'S'TICS, Epispas'tica, Ves'icants, Helc'tica, (F.) Épispastiques; same etymon. An epithet for every medicinal substance which, when applied to the skin, excites pain, heat, and more or less redness, followed by separation of the epidermis, which is raised up by effused serum. Cantharides and mustard are epispastics. See Blister, and Derivative.

EPISPASTICUM, Blister.

ÉPISPASTIQUES, Epispastics.

EPISPASTUM, Cataplasma.

EPISPHÆ'RIA, from επι, and σφαира, 'a sphere.' Some physiologists have applied this term to the different convolutions and sinuosities presented by the external surface of the brain.

EPISPIHAGISMOS, Signature.

EPISPLENITIS, see Splenitis.

EPISTACTIS'CHESIS, from epistaxis, and αχειν, 'to restrain.' Arrest of bleeding from the nose.

EPISTAPHYLINI, see Azygos Muscle.

EPIS'TASIS, Insiden'tia, from επι, and στω, 'I rest.' A substance which swims at the surface of urine. It is opposed to the hypostasis or sediment. Epistasis has also been employed synonymously with suppression.

EPISTAX'IS, from επι, and σταζω, 'I flow drop by drop.' Hæmorrhag'ia acti'ea na'rium, H. narin'ea seu na'rium, Epistax'is junio'rum seu arterio'ea, Hæmorrhin'ia, Hæmorhinorrhag'ia, Hæmatismus, Choanorrhag'ia, Rhinorrhag'ia, Stillicid'ium seu Stilla'tio Sang'uinis e nar'ibus, Hem'orrhage from the pitu'itary membrane, Bleeding at the nose, Nosebleed, (F.) Hémorrhagie nasale, Saignement du nez, Hémorrhinie. This is one of the most common varieties of hemorrhage; the organization of the Schneiderian membrane being favourable to it, as the blood-vessels are but slightly supported. It does not generally flow from both nostrils, and is very apt to recur. Puberty is the period at which it is most common. Its exciting causes are:—any thing that will induce local congestions, as running, coughing, blowing the nose, &c., provided there be a predisposition to it. A common cause of epistaxis requires but little treatment, especially if in a young person. Light diet and a dose or two of the sulphate of magnesia will be sufficient. In more severe attacks, cold and astringent washes of alum, sulphate of zinc, weak sulphuric acid, or creosote, may be used, and the nostrils be plugged anteriorly; but if the bleeding goes on posteriorly, the posterior nares must be plugged likewise,—the patient being kept with the head raised. The flow of blood has been arrested by directing the patient to stand up with his head elevated, compressing the nostril whence the blood flows with the finger, raising the corresponding arm perpendicularly, and holding it in this position for about two minutes. A less vigorous circulation through the carotids appears to result from the increased force required to carry on the circulation through the upper extremities when raised.—Négrier. To prevent the recurrence, strict diet must be inculcated.

EPISTER'NAL, Episterna'lis, from επι, and στερον, 'the sternum.' An epithet applied to two bones which form part of the sternum, and are situate upon its superior and lateral part. In the young subject, they are attached to the sternum by a synovial membrane, and a fibrous capsule. They have somewhat the appearance of the pisi-form bones, but are of a greater size.

According to Professor Owen, the piece of a segment of an articulate animal, which is immediately above the middle inferior piece or sternum.

EPISTHOT'ONOS, from επισθεν, 'forwards,' and τενω, 'I extend.' A spasm of the muscles, drawing the body forwards. The word emprosthotonos is more commonly employed.

EPISTROPHE, Relapse.

EPISTROPHEUS, Axis.

EPISTROPHUS, Axis.

EPISYNA'GHÈ, (επι, and synanche or cynanche), Episyngi'na. A Greek word, used by a modern writer for spasm of the pharynx, by which deglutition is prevented, and the solid and liquid food driven back towards the mouth or nasal fossæ.

EPISYNTHET'IC, Episynthet'icus, from επισυρτηθηναι, (επι, συν, and τιθηναι), 'to collect, accumulate.' The name of a medical sect, whose object it was to reconcile the principles of the Methodists with those of the Empirics and Dogmatics. Leonides of Alexandria seems to have been one of the first partisans of this sect; of which we know little.

EPIT'ASIS, from επι, and τενεν, 'to extend.' The period of violence of a fever, (Febris intensio), attack or paroxysm; sometimes it is used in the same sense as epistasis, for 'suppression.'

EPITELIUM, Epithelium.

EPITHE'LIAL, Epithelial'is; same etymon as epithelium. Appertaining or relating to the epithelium,—as epithelial cells, and scales.

EPITHELIAL CANCER, Canceroid of the skin, Epithelio'ma, Carcino'ma epithelio'des, is a morbid growth of epithelial cells; forming an epithelial tumour, which, by some, is regarded as carcinoma. See Canceroid.

EPITHELIOMA, Epithelial cancer.

EPITHE'LIUM, Epitel'ium, Epithe'lis, Epithe'lia, Endepidem'is, from επι, and θηλη, 'a nipple.' The thin layer of epidermis, which covers parts deprived of derma, properly so called,—as the nipple, mucous membranes, lips, &c. Modern histological researches have shown that it exists, in different forms, pavement, cylinder, and vibratile or ciliated epithelium. Tesselated, pavement, scaly, lamel'lar, tubular, or flattened epithelium, Epithelium polyed'ricum, and E. lamello'sum, (F.) Épithélium pavimenteur, covers the serous and synovial membranes, the lining of blood-vessels, and the mucous membranes, except where cylinder epithelium exists. It is spread over the mouth, pharynx and œsophagus, conjunctiva, vagina, and entrance of the female urethra. Cylinder, Columnar or Prismat'ic epithelium, Epithe'lium cylind'ricum, (F.) Épithélium cylindrique is found in the intestinal canal, beyond the cardiac orifice of the stomach; in the larger ducts of the salivary glands; in the ductus communis choledochus, prostate, Cowper's glands, vesiculæ seminales, vas deferens, tubuli uriniferi, and urethra of the male; and lines the urinary passages of the female, from the orifice of the urethra to the beginning of the tubuli uriniferi of the kidneys. In all these situations, it is continuous with tessellated epithelium, which lines the more delicate ducts of the various glands. For the uses of the ciliated epithelium, Epithelium vibrans, see Cilia.

Mr. Bowman has applied the term spheroidal to a variety of epithelium, the cells of which, for the most part, retain their primitive roundness; or, being flattened where they touch, acquire a polyhedral figure. At times, these show a disposition to pass into the columnar, or the tessellated variety; and, hence, this form has been called the transitional. The spheroidal epithelium is found in the urinary passages, where it succeeds the columnar epithelium of the urethra at the internal orifice of that canal, and lines the whole of the bladder, ureters and pelves of the kidneys. It is found, also, in the excretory ducts of the mammary, perspiratory, and of many mucous, glands; and a modification of it lines the inmost secreting cavities or commencing ducts of glands generally.

EPITHEM, Epith'ema or Epithe'ma, from επι, and τιθημι, 'I put.' This term is applied to every topical application, which cannot be classed either under ointments or plasters. Three sorts of epithems have been usually distinguished, — the liquid, dry, and soft, which comprise fomentations, bags filled with dry substances, and cataplasms.

EPITH'ESIS. Same etymon. The rectification of crooked limbs by means of instruments.

EPITHYM'IAE, from επι, and θυμος, 'desire.' Morbid desires or longings.

EPITHYMIAMA, Fumigation.

EPITHYMUM, Cuscuta epithymum — e. Officinarium, Cuscuta Europæa.

EPITROCH'LEA, from επι, and τροχαλια, 'a pulley.' (F.) Epitrochlée. That which is situate above a pulley. Chaussier gives this name to the unequal, round protuberance situate on the inside of the inferior extremity of the humerus above its articular trochlea. It is the part usually called the inner or lesser condyle of the humerus. From it originate several muscles of the forearm, to which it has given part of their names, according to the system of Chaussier.

ÉPITROCHLO-CARPI-PALMAIRE, Palmaris longus—é. Cubito-carpien, see Cubital muscles—é. Métacarpien, Palmaris magnus—é. Phalangium commune, Flexor sublimis perforatus—é. Radialis, Pronator radii teres.

EPIZO'A, (sing. Epizo'on), (F.) Epizoïres, Ectoparasites, from επι, and ζωον, 'an animal.' Parasitic animals, which infest the surface of the body, or the common integument.

EPIZOÏ'TIA, Epizoïty, (F.) Epizoïte. Same etymon. A disease which reigns amongst animals. It corresponds, in the veterinary art, to epidemic in medicine.

EPIZOÏ'TIC, Epizoït'icus, same etymon. Relating or appertaining to an epizoïty, — as an 'epizoïtic aphtha.'

EPOCHÈ, from επι, and χω, 'to have or to hold.' Doubt, suspension of judgment—Suspensa sententia. Sometimes employed in the same sense as epischesis or suppression.

EPOCHETEUSIS, Derivation.

EPODE, Incantation.

EPO'MIS, Superhumeral'is, from επι, and ωμος, 'the shoulder.' The acromion. The upper part of the shoulder.—Hippocrates, Galen.

EPOMPHALICUM, Epomphalium.

EPOMPHALION, Uterus.

EPOMPHA'LIIUM, Epomphal'icum, from επι, and ομφαλος, 'the navel.' A medicine, which, when placed upon the umbilicus, moves the belly.—Paulus of Ægina.

ÉPONGE, Spongia—é. d'Eglantier, Bedegar.

ÉPOQUES, Menses.

EPOSTOMA, Exostosis.

EPOSTOSIS, Exostosis.

ÉPREINTES, Tenesmus.

EPSEMA, Decoction.

EPSESI, Decoction, Elixatio.

EPSOM, MINERAL WATERS OF. Epsom is a town in Surrey, about 15 miles from London. The water is a simple saline;—consisting chiefly of sulphate of magnesia, which has consequently received the name of Epsom salts, though no longer prepared from the Epsom water.

ÉPUISEMENT, Exhaustion.

EPU'LIS, from επι, and ουλον, 'the gum.' Odon'tia excrescens, Sarco'ma epu'lis, Ulon'eus, Excrescentia gingivæ. (F.) Épulide, Épulis. An excrescence on the gum, sometimes ending in cancer.

EPULOSIS, Cicatrization.

EPULOTICA, Cicatrissantia.

ÉPURGE, Euphorbia lathyris.

EQUAL, Æqual'is. An epithet applied particularly to the pulse and to respiration. The pulse and respiration are equal, when the pulsations and inspirations which succeed each other are alike in every respect.

EQUILIB'RIMUM, from æquus, 'equal,' and librare, 'to weigh.' In medicine, this word is sometimes used to designate that state of organs, fluids and forces, which constitutes health.

EQUINA CAUDA, see Cauda Equina.

EQUIN'IA, from equinus, 'belonging to a horse.' Glanders, (F.) Morve. A dangerous contagious disorder, accompanied by a pustular eruption, which arises from inoculation with certain diseased fluids generated in the horse, the ass and the mule. Two forms are met with,—E. mitis, contracted from horses affected with grease, and E. glandulo'sa, a dangerous and commonly fatal disease communicated to man, either in the acute or chronic form, from the glandered horse. The veterinary surgeons make two varieties of the disease in the horse—Glanders, Mal'ia, Malias'mus, Mal'ie, Malis, Malleus; and Farcy glanders, Farcino'ma, Farcin'en, Malleus farcinoidens, Morbus farcinoid'is, Cachex'ia lymphat'ica farcinoid'is, (F.) Morve farcineuse, Farcin;—the former affecting the pituitary membrane and occasioning a profuse discharge from the nostrils, with pustular eruptions or small tumours, which soon suppurate and ulcerate, being attended by symptoms of malignant fever and by gangrene of various parts:—the latter being the same disease, but appearing in the shape of small tumours about the legs, lips, face, neck, &c. of the horse; sometimes very painful, suppurating and degenerating into foul ulcers. They are often seen together.

The mild cases require little treatment but rest; the more severe generally resist all remedies.

EQUSETUM ARVENSE, &c., see Hippuris vulgaris—e. Minus, Hippuris vulgaris.

EQUITA'TION, Equita'tio, Hippe'ia, Hippa'sia, Hippe'is, from equitare, equitatum, 'to ride on horseback.' Horseback exercise. A kind of exercise, advisable in many diseases, although improper in others—in uterine affections, for instance. It has been much recommended in phthisis pulmonalis. It is less fatiguing than walking, and consequently more available in disease. But to prevent disease, where much exercise is required, the latter is preferable.

EQUIV'OROUS, Equiv'orus, Hippoph'agus.

from equus, 'a horse,' and voro, 'I devour.' Feeding or subsisting on horseflesh.

EQUIVOCAL, Equiv'ocus, from æquus, 'equal,' and vox, voeis, 'voice.' Those symptoms are occasionally so denominated which belong to several diseases. Generation is said by some to be 'equivocal,' when it is, or seems to be, spontaneous. See Generation.

EQUUS, Hippius.

ÉRABLE, Acer saccharinum.

ERADICATION, Eradica'tio, from e, 'from,' and radix, radicis, 'a root.' The act of rooting out, or completely removing a disease.

ERADICATIVE, Eradic'ans: same etymon. Any thing possessed of the power of completely rooting out a disease.

ÉRAILLEMENT DES PAUPIÈRES, Ec-tropion.

ERCLE, Blistér.

EREBINTHUS, Acer arietinum.

ERECTEUR DU PÉNIS, Ischio-cavernosus.

ERECTHITES HIERACIFOLIA, Sene'cio hieracifolius, Fireweed. An indigenous plant, Order Compositæ, which flowers from July to September. It is said to be an acrid tonic, and astringent, and in large doses emetic.

ERECTILE TISSUE, Tela seu Textus erectilis, from erigere, erectum, (e, and rigere), 'to erect,' 'to become erect.' A tissue, whose principal character is, to be susceptible of dilatation, i. e. of turgescence and increase of size. It is formed of a collection of arteries and veins, intermixed with nervous filaments; which form, by their numerous anastomoses, a spongy substance, whose areolæ communicate with each other. Smooth muscular fibres have been detected in it. This tissue exists in the corpora cavernosa of the penis and clitoris, at the lower and inner surface of the vagina, in the spongy part of the urethra, the lips, nipples, iris, &c. Sometimes it is developed accidentally, and constitutes a kind of organic transformation.

ERECTIION, Erec'tio, Arrec'tio; same etymon. The state of a part, in which, from having been soft, it becomes stiff, hard, and swollen by the accumulation of blood in the areolæ of its tissue, as in the case of the penis—Styma, Stysis.

ERECTOR CLITORIDIS, Ischio-cavernosus —e. Penis, Ischio-cavernosus.

EREMACAU'SIS, (F.) Éremacausie, from ερημος, 'waste,' and καυσis, 'combustion.' A term applied by Liebig to the slow combustion, oxidation, or decay of organic matters in the air.

EREMIA, Acinesia.

ÉRÉSIPLE, Erysipelas.

ERETHILYTICUM HÆMATOLYTICUM, Spanæmic.

ERETHISM, Erethis'mus, Erethis'ia, Irrita'mentum, Irrita'tio, (F.) Éréthisme, from ερεθίζω, 'I irritate.' Irritation. Augmentation of the vital phenomena in any organ or tissue. Orgasm. Under this name, Mr. Pearson has described a state of the constitution produced by mercury acting on it as a poison. He calls it Mercurial Er'ethism or Erethis'mus. It is characterized by great depression of strength; anxiety about the præcordia; irregular action of the heart; frequent sighing; tremors; small, quick, sometimes intermitting pulse; occasional vomiting; pale, contracted countenance, and sense of coldness; but the tongue is seldom furred, nor are the vital and natural functions much disturbed. In this state any sudden exertion may prove fatal.

ERETHISMA, Rubefacient.

ERETHISMUS, Erethism, Irritation—e. Ebri-orsum, Delirium tremens—e. Hydrophobia, Hydrophobia—e. Oneirodynia, Incubus, Paroniria—e. Simplex, Fidgets.

ERETHISTICUS, Erethiticus, Rubefacient.

ERETHIT'IC, Erethitic'us, Erethis'ticus. Belonging or relating to erethism—as "erethitic phenomena," or phenomena of irritation.

ÉRÉTISME, Erethism.

EREUGMOS, Eruetation.

EREUXIS, Eruetation, Flatulence.

ERGASMA, Myrrha.

ERGASTERION SPIRITUS, Pulmo.

ERGASTERIUM, Laboratory.

ERGOT, (F.) Ergot, 'a spur.' Er'gota, Seca'lê cornu'tum seu mater'num seu tur'gidum seu temulentum seu luxurians seu clavatum, Clavus secalinus seu secalis seu Silig'inis, Spermoë'dia clavus, Mater secalis, Calcar, Secalis mater, Ustilago, Fruen'tum cornu'tum seu corniculatum seu luxurians seu tur'gidum seu temulentum, Brizoc'eras [?], Melanoph'na, Spurred or Horned Rye, Spur, Hornseed, Cockspur Rye, Cockspur, (F.) Seigle ergoté ou corau ou coronpu ou à Éperon ou Ergotisé, Blé cornu, Ergot ou clou ou mère de seigle, Bled avorté ou farouche, Faux seigle. Ergot is generally considered to be the result of a disease in rye, occurring most frequently when a hot summer succeeds a rainy spring. Decandolle, however, regards it as a parasitic fungus, and calls it Sclero'tium clavus; whilst Leveillé esteems it to be a fungus giving a coating to the diseased grain; the medical virtues residing in the coating. This parasitic fungus he calls Sphac'elia seg'etum. More recently, it has been maintained, that it is a diseased state of the grain occasioned by the growth of a fungus not previously detected, to which the names Ergotæ'tia abortans seu abortif'iciens, Oidium abortif'iciens, Ergot-mould, have been given. It is found projecting from among the leaves of the spike or ear, and is a long, crooked excrescence, resembling the spur of a cock, pointed at its extremities, of a dark brown colour externally, and white within.

This substance has been long used in Germany to act on the uterus, as its names Mutterkorn and Gebärrpulver ('womb-grain,' pulvis parturientis, pulvis ad partum) testify. Upwards of forty years ago, it was recommended in this country, by Dr. John Stearns, of Saratoga County, New York, for accelerating parturition; and since that period, numerous testimonials have been offered in its favour. Half a drachm of the powder is gently boiled in half a pint of water, and one-third part given every 20 minutes, until proper pains begin. Some recommend the clear watery infusion; others advise the powder; others the oil; and others the wine. It is obvious that, in many cases, the uterine efforts would return in the period which would necessarily elapse in the administration of ergot; so that several of the cases, at least, of reputed efficacy, may not have been dependent upon the assigned agent. Ergot also possesses, it is affirmed, narcotic virtues, which have rendered it useful in hemorrhagic and other affections of excitement.

Bread, made of spurred rye, has been attended with the effects described under ERGOTISM.

ERGOT, Hippocampus minor—e. de Seigle, Ergot.

ERGOT-MOULD, see Ergot.

ERGOTA, Ergot.

ERGOTÆTIA ABORTANS, see Ergot—e. Abortifacients, see Ergot.

ER'GOTIN, Extractum Er'gotæ, Extract of Ergot, (F.) Ergotine, Extrait hémostatique de Bonjean. The extract of ergot has been found an excellent hemastatic in the dose of two grains several times a day. It has also been used externally.

ERGOTINE, Ergotin.

ERGOTISM, Ergotis'mus, from ergota, 'ergot.' Morbus cerealis. Poisoning by ergot. An affection produced by the use of spurred rye. At times, the symptoms are limited to vertigo, spasms, and convulsions. See Convulsio cerealis. Most commonly, there is torpor with numbness of the hands and feet, which waste away, lose sensation and the power of motion, and separate from the body by dry gangrene,—Ergotis'mus Sphacelosis, Sphac'elus cerealis, Necrosis cerealis, Gangræ'na ustilaginea, Necrosis ustilaginea, Ergot or Milder mortification, (F.) Ergotisme gangrèneux, Gangrène des Solonois, Mal de Solagne.

ERGOTISME CONVULSIVE, Convulsio cerealis.

ERGOTISMUS, Ergotism—e. Spasmodicus, Convulsio cerealis—e. Sphacelosis, Ergotism.

ERICA VULGARIS, Calluna vulgaris seu Eri'ca, Common Heath, (Sc.) Heather, (F.) Bruyère vulgaire. This has been regarded as diuretic and diaphoretic.

ERIGERON AMBIGUUM, E. Philadelphicum—e. Annuum, see E. Canadense.

ERIG'ERON BELLIDIFOLIUM, Robin's plantain, Rosy Betty, (ῥιψιῶνον, from ῥη, 'spring,' and ῖππον, 'an old man;') owing to the hoary appearance of some of the vernal species.) An indigenous plant of the Composite family; flowering in May. It is said to possess properties like those of E. Philadelphicum.

ERIGERON CANADENSE, Canada Fleabane, Prideweed, Horseweed, Butterweed, is considered to be allied in properties to E. Philadelphicum; and the same may be said of Erigeron Heterophyllum, E. annuum, Sweet Scabious or various-leaved Fleabane; all of which are in the secondary list of the Pharmacopœia of the United States.

ERIGERON HETEROPHYLLUM, see E. Canadense—e. Integrifolium, E. Philadelphicum.

ERIG'ERON PHILADELPHICUM, E. strigosum seu ambiguum seu integrifolium, Scabious, Skevish, Philadelphica or Skevish or Narrow-leaved Flea-Bane, Daisy, Cocash, Frostweed, Fieldweed, Squaw-weed, (F.) Vergerette de Philadelphie. The plant has been used in decoction or infusion for gouty and gravelly complaints, and is said to operate powerfully as a diuretic and sudorific. The essential oil has been given in uterine hemorrhage. Dose, five drops.

ERIGERON STRIGOSUM, E. Philadelphicum.

ERIGERUM, Senecio.

ÉRIGNE, Hook.

ÉRINE, Hook.

ERIOCEPHALUS UMBELLULATUS, Wild Rosemary. A South African shrub, Ord. Composite, which is diuretic, and used by the farmers and Hottentots in various forms of dropsy.

ERIOSPERMUM LATIFOLIUM. A South African plant, the tuber of which is muculent, and used externally in abrasions of the skin, and in superficial ulcers. It is also employed by the Mohammedans, in decoction, in amenorrhœa.

ERIX, ερίξ. This word signifies, in Galen, the upper part of the liver.

ERODENS, Caustic.

ERODIUM MOSCHATUM, Geranium moschatum.

EROMANIA, Erotomania.

ERON'OSUS, Eronu'sos, from ῥη, 'spring,' and ὄσος or ὄσος, 'disease.' A disease which appears chiefly in spring.

EROS, Love.

EROSIO, Corrosion—e. et Perforatio spontanea Ventriculi, Gastromalacia.

EROSION, Erosio, Diabrosis, Anabrosis, Corrosion, from erodere, erosum, (e, and rodere,) 'to eat away.' The action of a corrosive substance, or the gradual destruction of a part by a substance of that kind. It is often employed in the same sense as ulceration,—spontaneous erosion.

EROSION, GANGRENOUS, OF THE CHEEK, Cancer aquaticus.

EROTIC, Eroticus, from eros, erosos, 'love.' That which is produced by love—as Erotic melancholy, E. delirium, &c.

EROTICOMANIA, Erotomania.

EROTION, Melissa.

EROTOMANIA, Eromania, Mania erotica, from eros, erosos, 'love,' and mania, 'mania.' A species of mental alienation caused by love. Erotic melancholy is Love melancholy. Some authors write it Erotico-mania. Also, Nymphomania.

ERPEDES, Herpes.

ERRABUNDUS, Planetes.

ERRAT'IC, Erraticus, Atactos, At'ypos; from errare, erratum, 'to err.' Wandering, irregular. That which disappears and recurs at irregular intervals. This name is given to intermittents, Febres erraticæ, which observe no type. Most commonly, it is applied to pains or to any diseased manifestations which are not fixed, but move from one part to another, as in gout, rheumatism, erysipelas, &c.

ERREUR DE LIEU, Error loci.

ERRHINE, Errih'num or Er'rhinum, Sternutatorium, Sternutatory, Ptar'micum, Apoplegmatians per nares, Nasa'tiz, from ev, 'in,' and ῥη, 'the nose.' A remedy whose action is exerted on the Schneiderian membrane, exciting sneezing and increased discharge. Errhines have been mainly used as local stimulants in head affections. The chief are: Asari Folia, Euphorbia gummi-resina, Hydrargyri sulphas flavus, Tabacum, and Veratrum album.

ERRHINUM, Sternutatory.

ER'RHYSIS, from ev, 'in,' and ῥη, 'I flow.' With some, a draining of blood. A trifling hemorrhage.

ERROR LOCI, Apoplane'sis, (F.) Erreur de Lieu. A term, frequently used by Boerhaave to express deviation of fluids, when they enter vessels not destined for them. Boerhaave admitted several orders of capillary vessels, the diameters of which went on decreasing. The largest received red blood, those which came next received only white, others only lymph, whilst the last of all were destined for yet more subtle fluids—for a kind of vapour. When the red globules entered vessels destined for the white, or the white those intended for the thinner fluids, there was, according to the theory of Boerhaave, an error loci, the proximate cause of inflammation and other mischiefs. See Aberration.

ERUCTA'TION, Ructa'tio, Ereug'mus, Er'ygge, Eructa'tio, Ructus, Ructa'tion, Ructua'tio, Ereucis, Restagat'io, (Old. Eng.) Bolke, Bouffe, Belke, (Sc.) Bocking, Bokking, Rucking, Rift, (Prov.) Kelking, Rasping, Rosping, Riving, Ruft (N. of England); from eructare, eructatum, (e, and ructare, 'to belch.') Belching, (F.) Rot, Rapport. A sonorous emission, by the mouth, of flatus proceeding from the stomach. When so frequent as to occasion a diseased condition, this is termed Ructuositas, Morbus ructuosus.

ERUGATORIA, Tetanothra.

ÉRUGINEUX, Eruginous.

ERUPTIO, Eruption—e. Exanthematis, Epanastasis—e. Sanguinis, Hæmorrhagia.

ERUPT'ION, Eruptio, from erumpere, eruptum, (e, and rumpere,) 'to issue with violence,' 'to break out.' This word has several meanings. 1. The sudden and copious evacuation of any fluid from a canal or cavity—of serum, blood, pus, &c., for example; 2. The breaking out of an exanthem; and, 3. the exanthem itself, whether simply in the form of a rash, or of pustules, vesicles, &c.

ÉRUPTION ANOMALE, Roseolæ — e. Roseolæ, Roseolæ — e. Violet, Ionthus.

ÉRUP'TIVE, Eruptivus. Same etymon as Eruption. That which is accompanied by an eruption. Thus small-pox, measles, scarlet fever, millaria, &c., are eruptive fevers. The term eruptive disease is nearly synonymous with cutaneous disease.

ERVA DE SANCTA MARIA, Arum Dracunculus — e. do Rato, Palicourea Marcgraavii.

ERVALENTA, see Ervum.

ERVUM, E. Ervil'ia, E. plicatum, Vic'ia ervil'ia, Or'obus, (F.) Lentille Ers on Orobe. In times of scarcity, the seeds have been made into bread, but it is said not to be wholesome. The meal was once much used in poultices: it was formerly called Orob'ion, οροβιον. Under the name Érvalent'a, a secret dietetic preparation has been introduced. It is a vegetable powder, which, when mixed with milk and soup and taken night and morning, is said to have succeeded in removing old and obstinate obstructions! Buchner thinks it is bean-meal, Ditterich, the meal of the seed of Ervum Ervilla. — Aschenbrenner.

A specimen of Warton's Érvalenta, obtained at the dépôt, and analyzed by Dr. Hassall, was found to contain a mixture of the French and German lentil, reduced to powder, including portions of the shells or husks, and of a substance very closely resembling, in its microscopic characters, corn meal. A sample of Du Barry's Revalent'a Arab'ica was found to consist of a mixture of the Egyptian or Arabian lentil and barley meal.

ERVUM ERVILLA, Ervum.

ERVUM LENS, Cicer Lens, Lens esculen'ta, Phacos, the Lentil, (F.) Lentille. The seed, Phacē, Pha'cea, Phacos, is eaten in many places like peas: they are flatulent and difficult of digestion.

ERVUM PLICATUM, Ervum.

ERYGE, Eructation.

ERYNGIUM, Ἐρυγγιον, Ἐρυγγος, see E. Aquaticum.

ERYNGIUM AQUATICUM, E. yuccæfolium, Water Eryn'go, Button Snake Root. Order, Umbelliferae. This root, Eryn'gium, (Ph. U. S.,) is nearly allied to the contrayerva of the shops, and acts more especially as a sudorific. It is a secondary article in the Pharm. U. S.

ERYNGIUM CAMPESTRĒ, E. vulgærē, Centum Cap'ita, Lyrin'gium, Aster inquina'lis, Capitulum Martis, Acus Ven'eris, (F.) Panicaut, Char-don-Roland, is sometimes used for E. maritimum.

ERYNGIUM FÆTIDUM; indigenous, is said to possess properties like those of valerian and contrayerva.

ERYNGIUM MARITIMUM SEU MARI'NUM. The Sea Holly or Eryngo, Æth'rea Herba, (F.) Panicaut Maritime. Eryngo root has a slightly aromatic odour, and sweetish and warm taste. It is considered to be diuretic and expectorant, but its powers are so weak, that it is scarcely ever used.

ERYNGIUM VULGARE, E. Campestre — e. Yuccæfolium, E. aquaticum.

ERYNGO, SEA, Eryngium maritimum — e. Water Eryngium aquaticum.

ERYSIMUM, E. officina'le, from ερωσ, 'to draw,' from its power of raising blisters. Sisymbrium officina'le, Chama'plion. Hedge-mustard, (F.) Vélar, Tortelle, Herbe aux Chantres. This was, formerly, much used for its expectorant and diuretic qualities. The seeds greatly resemble mustard.

ERYSIMUM ALLIARIA, Alliaria.

ERYSIMUM BARBARE'A, E. lyratum, Ar'abis barbare'a, Sisymbrium barbare'a, Eru'ca barbare'a, Barbare'a, B. stric'ta, (F.) Herbe de Sainte

Barbe, has been ranked amongst the antiscorbutic plants. See Alliaria.

ERYSIMUM CORDIFOLIUM, Alliaria — e. Lyratum, E. barbarea.

ERYSIPEL'ACEA. Same etymon as the next. A family of eruptive diseases, comprising erysipelas, variola, rubeola, and scarlatina.

ERYSIP'ELAS, from ερωσ, 'I draw in,' and πelas, 'near,' from its tendency to spread. Febris erysipelato'sa seu erysipela'cea, Erythro'p'gra, Em'phlysis Erysip'elas, St. Anthony's fire, Wild-fire, Ignis Sancti Anto'nii seu Columellæ seu Sacer, Hieropyr, Icterit'ia rubra, Rose, Rubea icterit'ia, Vicinitra'ha, Vicinitra'ctus, Brumus, Lugdus, (F.) Érysi'pèle, Érésipète, Feu St. Antoine, Feu sacré, Mal Saint Antoine. A disease, so called because it generally extends gradually to the neighbouring parts. Superficial inflammation of the skin, with general fever, tension and swelling of the part; pain and heat more or less acrid; redness diffused, but more or less circumscribed, and disappearing when pressed upon by the finger, but returning as soon as the pressure is removed. Frequently, small vesicles appear upon the inflamed part, which dry up and fall off, under the form of branny scales. Erysipelas is, generally, an acute affection: its medium duration being from 10 to 14 days. It yields, commonly, to general refrigerant remedies. Topical applications are rarely serviceable. At times, when the disease approaches the phlegmonous character, copious bleeding and other evacuations may be required, as in many cases of erysipelas of the face; but this is not commonly necessary. In most cases, indeed, the general action seems deficient, and it becomes necessary to give tonics.

When erysipelas is of a highly inflammatory character, and invades the parts beneath, it is termed Erysip'elas phlegmono'sdes, (F.) Érysi'pèle phlegmoneux: when accompanied with phlegmonæ, and the inflammation terminates in gangrene, Erysip'elas gangrano'sum, (F.) Érysi'pèle gangréneux; and when associated with infiltration of serum, Erysip'elas œdamato'sum, (F.) Érysi'pèle œdamateux.

At times, the surface in erysipelas has a bronzed rather than a red hue — bronzed erysipelas.

ERYSIPELAS, BRONZED, see Erysipelas — e. Gangrenosum, see Erysipelas — e. Œdematosum, see Erysipelas — e. Phlegmonodes, see Erysipelas — e. Periodica nervosa chronica, Pellagra — e. Phlyctenoides, Herpes zoster — e. Pustulosa, Herpes zoster — e. Zoster, Herpes zoster.

ERYSIPELATODES, Erysipelatous.

ERYSIPEL'ATOUS, Erysipelato'sdes, Erysi'pelato'sus. Belonging to erysipelas; as an erysi'pel'atous affection.

ERYSIPEL'ATOUS INFLAMMATION, Inflamm'atio erysi'pelato'sa, Epiphlogis'ma, Cuti'tis, Dermati'tis, is the character of inflammation which distinguishes erysipelas, Erythe'ma erysi'pelato'sum.

ÉRYSIPE'LE, Erysipelas — é. Ambulant, see Ambulant — é. Gangréneux, see Erysipelas — é. Œdemateux, see Erysipelas — é. Phlegmoneux, see Erysipelas — é. Serpiginéux, see Serpiginous — é. Pustuleux, Herpes zoster.

ERYSOS, Erythema.

ERYTHE'MA, from ερυθραιος, ερυθρος, 'red, rose-coloured,' ερυθραια, 'to reddens.' Inflammatory blush, Eryth're'ma, (F.) Érythème. This name is, sometimes, given to erysipelas, especially when of a local character. It is, also, applied to the morbid redness on the cheeks of the hectic, and on the skin covering the bubo, phlegmon, &c. It forms the 6th genus of the 3d order, Exanthemata, of Bateman's classification of cutaneous diseases; and is defined, 'a nearly continuous redness of some portion of the skin, attended with disorder of the constitution, but not contagious.' Many varieties are described by dermatologists, — for example, E. intertrigo, E. fugax, E. papulatum, E. tuberculatum, E. nodosum, E. lævè, E. centrifugum, E. marginatum, and E. acrodygia.

ERYTHEMA ACRODYNIA, Acrodynum — e. Am-bustio, Burn — e. Anthrax, Anthrax.

ERYTHEMA CENTRIFUGUM. A variety of erythema attacking the face, commencing with a small red spot, and spreading around, so as, at times, to affect the whole face.

ERYTHEMA ENDEMICUM, Pellagra — e. à Frigore, Chilblain.

ERYTHEMA FUGAX. Patches of erythema, that sometimes appear on the body in febrile diseases, teething children, &c., and which are of brief duration.

ERYTHEMA GANGRENOSUM, Anthrax — e. Ichorosum, Eczema mercuriale — e. Intertrigo, Chafing.

ERYTHEMA LÆVÈ, (F.) Érythème léger. Slight erythema affecting the skin, as in œdema.

ERYTHEMA MARGINATUM, (F.) Érythème marginal. A form in which the prominent patches of erythema are distinctly separated from the skin at their margins.

ERYTHEMA MERCURIALE, Eczema mercuriale.

ERYTHEMA NODOSUM, (F.) Érythème noueux. A more severe form of Erythema tuberculatum.

ERYTHEMA PAPULATUM, (F.) Érythème papuleux. Patches of erythema, which are at first papulated, appearing on the face, neck, breast, &c., of females, and young persons more especially.

ERYTHEMA PELLAGRUM, Pellagra — e. Pernio, Chilblain.

ERYTHEMA SOLA'RÈ. A name given by the Italians to Pellagra, owing to its being attended with an eruption of small red spots or patches on the parts that are exposed to the sun.

ERYTHEMA TUBERCULATUM, E. tuberculatum, (F.) Érythème tuberculeux. A form of erythema in which the patches are in small lumps.

ERYTHEMATOUS, Erythemat'ic, Erythemat'ous, Erythemat'icus, (F.) Erythémateux. Appertaining or relating to Erythema.

ÉRYTHÈME, Erythema — é. Léger, Erythema lævè — é. Marginal, Erythema marginatum — é. Noueux, Erythema nodosum — é. Papuleux, Erythema papulatum — é. Tuberculeux, Erythema tuberculatum.

ERYTHRÆA CENTAURIUM, Chironia centaarium — e. Chilensis, Canchalagua, Chironia Chilensis.

ERYTHRÆMIA, Plethora.

ERYTHRAN'CHÈ, Angi'na erysipelato'sa, from ερυθρος, 'red,' and αγγω, 'I suffocate.' Erysipelatous or erythematous sore throat.

ERYTHREMA, Erythema.

ERYTHRINA MONOSPERMA, Butea frondosa.

ERYTHROCHERAS, Cynanche parotidæa.

ERYTHRODANUM, Rubia.

ER'YTHROID, Erythro'des, Erythroï'des. Reddish.

ERYTHROID COAT, Tu'nica erythro'des. Vaginal coat of the testis.

ER'YTHROID VES'ICLE, Vesic'ula Erythroï'dea. A vesicle of the foetus described by Pockels and others. It is pyriform, and much longer than, although of the same breadth as, the umbilical vesicle. Velpeau, Weber, and others, doubt its being a physiological condition.

ERYTHRONIUM, E. Americanum.

ERYTHRONIUM AMERICA'NUM, E. flavum seu dens canis seu lancolet'um seu longifolium, Common Erythro'nium, (from ερυθρος, 'red,' which does not, however, apply to the American species,) Yellow Snake-leaf, Yellow Adder's tongue, Adder-leaf, Dog violet, Dog's tooth violet, Rattlesnake violet, Lamb's tongue, Scrof'ula root, Yellow Snowdrop. Ord. Liliacæe. This plant is possessed of emetic properties, but is rarely, if ever, used. The root and herb, Erythro'nium, (Ph. U. S.,) are in the secondary list of the Pharmacopœia of the United States.

ERYTHRONIUM DENS CANIS, E. Americanum — e. Flavum, E. Americanum — e. Lanceolatum, E. Americanum — e. Longifolium, E. Americanum.

ERYTHROPHLEUM JUDICIALE, Sassy-bark tree.

ERYTHROPYRA, Erysipelas.

ERYTHRORRHIZA ROTUNDIFOLIA, Galax apylla.

ERYTHROSIS, Plethora.

ES'APHÈ, from εσαφω, (εισ, and αφω, 'I feel,') 'I feel inside,' (F.) Le Toucher, Le Toucher vaginal. The introduction of a finger or fingers into the vagina, for the purpose of examining the condition of the uterus. It is employed to verify the existence or non-existence of pregnancy and its different stages; to detect certain affections or faults of conformation in the genital organs and pelvis; and, during the process of accouchement, to examine into the progress of labour, &c.

ESCA, Aliment.

ESCARA, Eschar.

ESCARGOT, Helix pomatia, Limax.

ESCHALOTTE, Échalotte.

ESCHAR, Es'chara, εσχαρα, (Old Eng.) Asker, a slough, a crust or scab. The crust or disorganized portion, arising from the mortification of a part, and which is distinguishable from the living parts by its colour, consistence, and other physical properties. The inflammation which it excites in the contiguous parts, gives occasion to a secretion of pus between the living and dead parts, which ultimately completely separates the latter.

ESCHARA, Vulva.

ESCHAROT'IC, Escharot'icum, from εσχαρα, 'eschar.' Any substance, which, when applied upon a living part, gives rise to an eschar, such as caustic potassa: the concentrated mineral acids, &c.

ESCHAROTIC POISON, see Poison.

ESCHELLOHE, MINERAL WATERS OF. This water rises at the foot of a mountain near the convent of Etal in Bavaria. It is a sulphuro-saline.

ESCHID'NA OCELLA'TA. A very poisonous viper, which inhabits the sugar-cane fields of Peru. Its bite is almost instantaneously fatal.

ESCORZONERA, Scorzonera.

ESCREVISSE, Crab.

ESCULAPIAN, Medical.

ES'CULENT, Esculent'us, Ed'ible, Eat'able, Ciba'rious, from esca, 'food.' (F.) Comestible. Such plants or such parts of plants or animals as may be eaten for food.

ESÈRE, Ordeal nut.

ESKIN, Singultus.

ESO, εσω, 'within.' A prefix which signifies an affection of an internal part; as Esoenter'itis, inflammation of the inner membrane of the intestines: — Esoastr'itis, inflammation of the inner membrane of the stomach, &c.

ESOCHAS, Esoche.

ES'OCHE, Es'ochas. A tumour—as a hemorrhoid—within the anus.

ESOCOLITIS, Dysentery.

ESODIC, Aferent.

ESOENTERITIS, see Enteritis.

ESOGASTRITIS, Endogastritis.

ESOTERIC, εσωτερος, 'interior,' from εσω, 'within.' Private; interior; in contradistinction to Exoter'ic, public, exterior. Hence, we speak of 'esoteric and exoteric causes of disease.'

ESOTERISM, MEDICAL. Same etymon as Esoteric. A term used by M. Simon, in his Dé-ontologie médicale, for that esotery, or mystery and secrecy, with which the practitioner performs his daily duties, and which, he conceives, he is compelled to adopt by the prejudices and ignorance of his patients.

ESPACES INTERCOSTAUX, see Costa.

ESPÈCES, Species, see Pulvis — e. Pulvéru- lentes, see Pulvis.

ESPÈCES VULNÉRAIRES, Falltranek.

ESPHLA'SIS, from es, eis, 'inwards,' and φλαω, 'I break, bruise,' &c. A fracture of the skull by comminution, the fragments being depressed. See Depression, and Enthlasis.

ESPRIT, Spirit — e. d'Ammoniaque, Spiritus ammoniæ — e. d'Anisi, Spiritus anisi — e. de Bois, Spiritus Pyroxylicus — e. de Camphre, Spiritus camphoræ — e. de Cannelle, Spiritus cinnamomi — e. de Carvi, Spiritus carui — e. d'Éther Sulfurique, Spiritus ætheris sulphurici compositus — e. de Genièvre composé, Spiritus juniperi compositus — e. d'Iva, Achillea moschata — e. de Lavande, Spiritus lavandulæ — e. de Lavande composé, Spiritus lavandulæ compositus — e. de Menthe poivrée, Spiritus menthæ piperitæ — e. de Muscade, Spiritus myristicæ — e. de Poultier, Spiritus pulegii — e. Pyroxylique, Spiritus pyroxylicus — e. de Raifort composé, Spiritus armoraciæ compositus — e. de Romarin, Spiritus rosmarini — e. de Vin délayé, Spiritus tenuior — e. de Vin rectifié, Spiritus rectificatus.

ESPRITS ANIMAUX, Nervous fluid.

ESQUILLE, Splinter.

ESQUINANCIE, Cynanche, Cynanche ton- sillarlis.

ESQUINE, Smilax China.

ES'SENCE, Essentia, corrupted from existentia, 'standing out,' [?] or, from esse, 'to be.' By some, used synonymously with volatile oil; by others, with simple tincture. The oil of pepper- mint is the oil obtained by distillation; the essence, the oil diluted with spirit. See Tinctura olei menthæ.

ESSENCE OF ANISE, Essentia anisi — e. of Bar- dana, Hill's, Tincturæ guaiaci ammoniata — e. of Caraway, Essentia Carui — e. of Cinnamon, Essen- tia Cinnamomi — e. of Coltsfoot, see Tinctura ben- zoini composita — e. of Fennel, Essentia Fœniculi — e. of Musk, Tinctura moschi — e. of Mustard Pills, Whitehead's, see Sinapis — e. of Mustard, Whitehead's, see Sinapis — e. of Pennyroyal, Essentia menthæ pulegii — e. of Peppermint, Tinc- tura olei menthæ piperitæ — e. of Pimento, Essen- tia Pimentæ — e. of Rosemary, Essentia Rosma- rini — e. of Roses, see Rosa centifolia — e. of Spearmint, Tinctura olei menthæ viridis — e. of Spruce, see Pinus Abies.

ESSENCES, Olea volatilia.

ESSENTIA, Essence, Tincture — e. Abietis, see Pinus abies — e. Aloes, Tinctura aloes — e. Absinthii amara, Tinctura A. composita — e. Ab- sinthii composita, Tinctura A. composita.

ESSENTIA ANISI, Essence of Anise. (Ol. Anisi, f3j; Sp. rectific. f3ix. M. Ph. D.) Dose, ℥xx to f3j, as a carminative.

ESSENTIA ANTIMONII SEU STIBII, Vinum anti- monii tartarizati — e. Antiseptica Huxhami, Tinc- tura cinchonæ composita — e. Aromatica, Tinctura cinnamomi composita.

ESSENTIA CARUI, Essence of Caraway. (Ol. Carui f3j; Sp. rectific. f3ix. Ph. D.) Dose, gt. xx to f3j, as a carminative.

ESSENTIA CASTOREI, Tinctura castorei — e. Catho- licæ purgans Rothii, Tinctura jalapii compo- sita — e. de Cedro, Oleum cedrinum — e. Chinæ, Tinctura cinchonæ composita — e. Cinnamomi, Tinctura cinnamomi.

ESSENTIA CINNAMOMI, Essence of Cin'namon. (Ol. Cinnam. f3j; Sp. rect. f3ix. M.) Dose, gt. x to xx.

ESSENTIA FœNICULI, Essence of Fennel. (Ol. Fœnic. f3j; Alcohol. f3ix, M. Ph. D.) Dose, gt. xx to f3j.

ESSENTIA MENTHÆ PIPERITÆ, Tinctura olei menthæ piperitæ.

ESSENTIA MENTHÆ PULE'GII, Essence of Penny- royal. (Ol. Puleg. f3j; Sp. rectific. f3ix. Ph. D.) Dose, gt. xv to xxx.

ESSENTIA MENTHÆ VIRIDIS, Tinctura olei men- thæ viridis.

ESSENTIA MYRISTICÆ MOSCHA'TÆ, Essence of Nutmeg. (Ol. Myrist. f3j; Sp. rectific. f3ix. M. Ph. D.) Dose, gt. xx — xxx.

ESSENTIA NEROLI, see Citrus aurantium — e. Corticis Peruviani antiseptica Huxhami, Tinctura cinchonæ composita — e. Corticis Peruviani compo- sita, Tinctura cinchonæ amara.

ESSENTIA PIMENTÆ, Essence of Piment'o. (Ol. Piment. f3j; Sp. rectific. f3ix. M. Ph. D.) Dose, gt. xxx ad lx.

ESSENTIA ROSMARI'NI, Essence of Rose'mary (Ol. Rosmari'ni f3j; Sp. rectific. f3ix. M. Ph. D.) Dose, gt. xxx ad gtt. lx.

ESSEN'TIAL, Essentia'lia. The word essentia has been applied to the immediate or active prin- ciples of vegetables, which were believed to be endowed with the properties of the plants from which they were extracted. Essential oil was so called because it was regarded as the only imme- diate principle which was essential. This ex- pression is retained. Essential salts are true salts or extracts which exist, ready formed, in vegetables; and which are obtained by distillation, incinera- tion, or some other process.

An essential disease is synonymous with a gen- eral disease; that is, one not depending on any local affection,—not symptomatic. See Entity.

ES'SERA, Es'seræ, Sora, Saire, Sare, Morbus porci'nus, Rosa saltans, Urtica'ria porcell'ana, (F.) Amoules, Porcelaine. Of Arabic deriva- tion. A species of cutaneous eruption, consist- ing of small, reddish tubercles over the whole body, accompanied by a troublesome itching. It seems to be a variety of lichen or urticaria. See Lichen tropicus.

ESSIEU, Axis.

ESSOUFFLEMENT, Anhelatio.

ESTHEMA, Vestitus.

ESTHESIS, Vestitus.

ESTHIOMÈNE, Esthiomenus.

ESTHIOM'ENUS, Estiom'enus, from εσθιω, 'I eat.' Ex'edens. (F.) Esthiomène. That which devours or eats away. Certain ulcers and eruptions—Dartres rongeantes—are so called.

ES'TIVAL, Æstivus; from æstas, æstatis, 'summer.' Happening in summer, belonging to summer. This epithet is given to summer dis- eases, so called because they reign at that season, and appear to depend on the influence exerted by it on the animal economy. In the United States, the term summer disease or complaint means disorder of the bowels; as diarrhœa, cholera morbus, &c.

ESTOMAC, Stomach.

ESTRAGON, Artemisia dracunculus.

ESULA CYPARISSIAS, Euphorbia cyparis- sias — e. Major, Euphorbia palustris — e. Minor, Euphorbia cyparissias.

ÉSULE, GRANDE, Euphorbia lathyris.

ESURIES, Hunger.

ESURIGO, Hunger.

ESURITIO, Hunger.

ESYCHIA, Acinesia.

ÉTAGE, Stage.

ÉTAÏN, Tin—é. de Glace, Bismuth—é. Gris, Bismuth.

ÉTAT, Acme—é. Granuleux du Rein, Kidney, Bright's Disease of the.

ÉTERNUEMENT, Sneezing.

ESTECULATIO, Castration.

ETHER, Æther, Æther sulphuricus—e. Acetic, see Æther—e. Acétique, see Æther sulphuricus—e. Azotoux, see Æther sulphuricus—e. Azoteux alcoolisé, Spiritus ætheris nitrici.

ETHER, CHLORIC, see Chloroform. Under the names concentrated chloric ether and strong chloric ether—a compound of pure chloroform and nearly absolute alcohol, in the proportion of one-third of the former to two-thirds of the latter—has been used as an anæsthetic by inhalation, in the same cases as sulphuric ether and chloroform. It is properly an alcoholic solution or tincture of chloroform.

ETHER, CHLOROHYDRIC, CHLORINATED, see Æther muriaticus—é. Chlorohydrigue, see Æther sulphuricus—é. Chlorohydrigue chloré, see Æther muriaticus.

ETHER, COMPOUND. A preparation consisting of a solution of chloroform in sulphuric ether, which has been used as an anæsthetic by inhalation, in the same cases as chloroform.

ÉTHER, HYDRATIQUE, Æther sulphuricus—e. Hydriodic, Æther hydriodicus—é. Hydrique alcoolisé, Spiritus ætheris sulphurici compositus—e. Hydrochloric, see Æther—e. Hydrochloric, Spirit of, Spiritus ætheris muriatici—e. Hydrocyanic, Æther hydrocyanicus—e. Iodhydric, Æther hydriodicus—e. Marine, Æther muriaticus—e. Muriatic, Æther muriaticus—*e. ETHEREAL, Æthereal.

ÉTHÉRÉ, Æthereal.

ETHEREOUS, Æthereal.

ETHERINE, HYDROCYANATE OF. Æther hydrocyanicus—e. Muriate of, Æther muriaticus.

ETHERISM. The aggregate of phenomena induced by the inhalation of ether—Ætherism'us.

ETHERIZA'TION, Ætherisa'tio. The administration of ether by inhalation, as an anæsthetic.

ETHERIZED, Ætherisa'tus. Presenting the phenomena induced by the inhalation of ether.

ÉTHÉROLAT, Éthérat. The product of the distillation of ether on aromatic substances.

ÉTHÉROLATURE, see Tincture.

ÉTHÉROLÉ. A liquid medicine formed of ether and medicinal principles united with it by direct solution or simple mixture.—Béral.

Éthérolé d'essence de térébinthine. See Liquor anodynus terebinthinatus.

ÉTHÉROLIQUE, Etherol'ic. A medicine which has ether for excipient.—Béral.

ÉTHÉROLOTIE. An etherolic medicine which is exclusively employed externally.

ETHICS, MEDICAL, Deontology, medical.

ETHIC, Hectic.

ETHIOPIAN, see Homo.

ETHIOPS, see Æthiops.

ETHISIS, Filtration.

ETHISMUS, Filtration.

ETHMOCEPHALE, Ethmoceph'alus; from $\eta\sigma\mu\sigma$, 'a sieve,' 'the ethmoidal portion of the nose,' and $\kappa\epsilon\phi\alpha\lambda\eta$, 'head.' A genus of monsters, with eyes closed together, but distinct; the nasal apparatus atrophied and rudimental.—I. G. St. Hilaire.

ETHMOID, Ethmo'des, Ethmo'i'des, Ethmo'i'deus, from $\eta\sigma\mu\sigma$, 'a sieve,' and $\epsilon\iota\delta\omicron\varsigma$, 'form.' Shaped like a sieve.

ETHMOID BONE, Os ethmoïdeum seu multifor'mē seu spongio'sum seu spongōi'des seu cribro'sum seu cribrifor'mē seu cu'bicum seu crista'tum seu foraminulentum seu colifor'mē seu colato'rium, (F.) Os cribloux. One of the eight bones which compose the cranium; so called, because its upper plate is pierced by a considerable number of holes. The ethmoid bone is situate at the anterior, inferior, and middle part of the base of the cranium. It seems to be composed of a multitude of thin, fragile, semi-transparent laminae, which form more or less spacious cells, called the Ethmoidal labyrinth or cells, distinguished into anterior and posterior. These communicate with the nose, and are lined by a prolongation of the pituitary membrane. The ethmoid bone is constituted of compact tissue, and is surrounded by the Ethmoid suture. It is articulated with the frontal and sphenoidal bones, the cornua sphenoidalia, the superior maxillary bones, the palate bones, the ossa turbinata inferiora, the vomer, the proper bones of the nose, and the lacrimal bones.

ETHMOID'AL, Ethmoïda'lis. Belonging to the ethmoid bone: as, Ethmoidal cells, E. suture, &c. The Ethmoidal apoph'ysis or process is the advanced part of the sphenoid bone, which articulates with the ethmoid. The ethmoidal arteries are two in number, the anterior of which arises from the ophthalmic artery. The origin of the other varies. The Échanerure ethmoïdale of the os frontis receives the ethmoid bones. The Ethmoidal veins correspond to the arteries.

ETHMOSE, Cellular tissue.

ETHMOSYNE, Habit.

ETHMYPHE, Cellular tissue.

ETHMYPHITIS, Inflamma'tio telæ cellulosa, from $\eta\sigma\mu\sigma$, 'a sieve,' $\psi\eta\eta$, 'texture,' and itis, denoting inflammation. Inflammation of the cellular membrane.

ETHMYPHOTYLOSIS, Induration of the cellular tissue.

ETHNOG'RAPHY, Ethnograph'ia; from ethnos, 'nation,' and $\gamma\rho\alpha\phi\eta$, 'a description.' A history of the races and families of man.

ETHNOL'OGY, Ethnolog'ia; from ethnos, 'nation,' and $\lambda\omicron\gamma\omicron\varsigma$, 'a discourse.' The science of the races and families of man.

ETHOS, Habit.

ÉTHUSE, Æthusa cynapium—é. Meum, Æthusa meum.

ETHYLE, CHLORIDE OF, Æther muriaticus—e. Cyanuret of, Æther hydrocyanicus.

ETICK, Hectic.

ETIOLA'TION, Blanching, (F.) Étiollement. That state of plants which occurs in consequence of privation of light, when they become pale and watery. In pathology, it is sometimes used to denote the paleness produced in those persons who have been kept long without light; or a similar paleness, the result of chronic disease.

ÉTIOLEMENT, Etiolation.

ETIOLOGY, Etiologia.

ETIQUETTE, MEDICAL. Deontology, medical.

ÉTISE, Hecticis—é. Mésentérique, Tabes mesenterica.

ETNAGH-BERRIES, see Juniperus communis.

ÉTOILE, Stella.

ÉTONNÉE, Stunned.

ÉTOUFFEMENT, Suffocation.

ÉTOUPE, Stupa.

ÉTOURDISSEMENT, Vertigo.

ÉTRANGLE-LOUP, Paris.

ÉTRANGLEMENT, Strangulation, Hysteria—é. des Intestins, Enteremphraxia.

ÉTRANGUILLON, from étrangler, 'to strangle.' An ancient French appellation for a violent angina accompanied by symptoms of imminent asphyxia.

ÉTRIER, Stapes.

ÉTRON, Abdomen, Hypogastrium.

ÉTRON'CUS, from ητρον, 'the lower belly,' and ογκος, 'a tumour.' A tumour of the lower belly.

ÉTTICK, Hectic fever.

ÉTTLE, Urtica.

ÉTUI DE L'HIPPOCAMPE. A name given by Vicq d'Azyr to the upper part of the sphenoidal portion of the lateral ventricle of the brain, which is bounded by the lateral cornu of the corpus callosum.

ÉTUVE, Stove—é. Humide, Bath, vapour.

ÉTUVER, to Foment.

EU, eu, 'good, proper,' when prefixed to words. Hence:

EU'EMIA, from eu, and αιμα, 'blood.' A good condition of the blood.

EUÆSTHE'SIA, from eu, and αισθησις, 'perception.' Vigorous perception. A good condition of the perceptive faculties.

EUÆSTHE'TOS. Same etymon. One whose senses are in full vigor.

EUANALEP'SIS, from eu, and αναληψις, 'recovery.' Rapid restoration to strength.

EUANTHEMON, Anthemis nobilis.

EUCALYP'TUS MANNIF'ERA, (eu, 'well,' and καλυπτος, 'covered.') From this Australian species, Order, Myrtaceæ, a manna-like substance exudes, which has similar properties to manna.

EUCALYPTUS RESINIFERA, see Kino.

EUCHRE'A, from eu, and χρoια, 'colour.' A good or healthy colour of the skin. A good appearance of the surface.

EUCHYM'IA, from eu, and χυμος, 'juice.' A good state of the humours.

EUCRA'SIA, from eu, and κρασις, 'temperament.' A good temperament.

EUADIAPNEUS'TIA, from ευδιαπνευστος, (eu, and διαπνοη,—δια, and πνοη, 'breath'); 'one who breathes well.' Easy transpiration.

EUÆCTICA (medicina), Gymnastics.

EUËL'CES, from eu, and ελκος, 'an ulcer.' One in whom wounds and ulcers are readily healed.

EU'EMES, Euēm'etos, from eu, and εμεω, 'I vomit.' That which readily excites vomiting. One who vomits with facility.

EUETHES, Benign.

EUEX'IA, from eu, and εξις, 'constitution.' A good constitution.

EUFRAISE, Euphrasia officinalis.

EUGENIA CARYOPHYLLA'TA, called after Prince Eugene. Garraphyllus, Caryophyllus aromaticus, Myrtus caryophyllus. The Indian tree which affords the clove. Order, Myrtaceæ. The Clove, Caryophyllus, C. aromaticus, is the unexpanded bud, (F.) Girofle, Gérofle, Gyrophle, Clou de Girofle. Its odour is strong, aromatic, and peculiar; taste, pungent and acrid. Like all substances whose virtue depends upon essential oil, it is stimulant and carminative. It is generally used as a corrigent to other remedies, and in cases where substances containing the essential oils are demanded. The oil—(F.) Huile de Gérofle; Oleum caryophylli, Oil of Cloves—has the properties of the cloves.

EUGENIA PIMENTA, Myrtus pimenta.

EUGION, Hymen.

EULË, εული, 'a worm.' Eulæ, ευλαι, with Hippocrates, meant especially worms bred in a wound or ulcer.

EULOPHIA, see Salep.

EUNUCH, Eunuchus, from ευνη, 'the bed,' and εχω, 'I keep.' Hemian'drus, Hemianor, Hemianthro'pus, Seminas, Seminas'culus, Semimascula'tus, Semivir, Thla'dias, Thla'sias, Thlib'ias, Castra'tus, Gallus, Excastra'tus, Eviva'tus, Emascula'tus, Spado, Essec'tus, Extesticula'tus, Extom'tus. (F.) Eunuque. One whose organs of generation have been removed, or so altered, that he is rendered incapable of reproducing his species, or of exercising the act of venery. Eunuchs were common with the ancient Romans. In Italy, this horrible mutilation still takes place to improve the voice; and in the East, eunuchs have the surveillance of the seraglio.

EUNUCHISMUS, Castration.

EUNUCHIUM MECONIS, Lactuca.

EUNUCHUS, Castratus, Eunuch.

EUNUQUE, Eunuch.

EUODES, Beneolentia.

EUONYMUS, Quassia simarouba.

EUONYMUS AMERICANUS, Strawberry bush, Strawberry tree, Burning bush, Indian arrow-wood. A shrub of the Ord. Celastraceæ, Sex. Syst. Pentandria Monogynia, which, like the next, is found throughout the United States and Canada; flowering from May to June.

EUONYMUS ATROPURP'REUS, Burning bush, Spindle tree, Indian Arrow-wood, flowers from June to July.

From these varieties of Euonymus the Wahoo or Whahoo bark is said to be obtained. It is diuretic, antiperiodic, tonic, and a hydragogue cathartic, and has been used in dropsy in infusion, in the proportion of an ounce to a pint of water.

EUPATHI'A, from eu, and παθος, 'suffering.' A disposition for being affected by pain easily. Also, a good state of health—Euphor'ia.

EUPATOIRE D'AVICENNE, Eupatorium cannabinum—c. Percefeuille, Eupatorium perfoliatum.

EUPATORIUM, (called after Mithridates Eupator.) Eupatorium perfoliatum.

EUPATORIUM AGERATOÏ'DES, E. Urticifolium, Ageratum altiss'imum, White Snakeroot; indigenous; flowering in August and September; has the same properties as Eupatorium perfoliatum.

EUPATORIUM AROMAT'ICUM, Aromatic Eupatorium or Hempweed, has similar properties.

EUPATORIUM CANNAB'INUM, Eupatorium, E. Arabiceum seu Japonicum seu trifoliatum, E. of Avicenna, Cannab'ina aquatica, Trifolium cervinum, Orig'anum aquaticum, Hemp agrimony, Herb of Saint Cuneonde, (F.) Eupatoire d'Avicenne. Ord. Compositæ. Sex. Syst. Syngenesia equalis. The juice of this plant proves violently emetic and purgative, if taken in sufficient quantity. It has been considered diuretic, cathartic, and emetic.

EUPATORIUM CONNATUM, E. perfoliatum—e. Guaco, Guaco—c. Japonicum, E. Cannabinum—e. Mesues, Achillea ageratum.

EUPATORIUM PERFOLIATUM, E. Conna'tum, Boneset, Thor'oughwort, Thor'oughsten, Thor'oughweax, Veg'table ant'imony, Crosswort, Aquweed, Feverwort, Indian sage, Joe-pye, Teazel, Sweating plant, (F.) Eupatoire percefeuille, is a plant which grows in low, wet meadows throughout the United States. The tops and leaves—Eupatorium, (Ph. U. S.)—are considered to be stimulant, tonic, emetic, purgative, diuretic, and sudorific. Dose, gr. xv of the powder, as a gentle purgative.

EUPATORIUM, PURPLE-STALKED, E. purpureum.

EUPATORIUM PURPUREUM, Mohawk tassel, Purple-stalked Eupatorium, Trumpet weed, Joe Pye-weed, Gravelroot, is used in similar cases, as well as EUPATORIUM ROTUNDFOLIUM, Round-leaved Hempweed, Wild horehound;

EUPATORIUM SESSILIFOLIUM, Upland Boneset, and EUPATORIUM TEUCRIFOLIUM, Wild horehound, Germaner-leaved horehound, Rough boneset.

EUPATORIUM TRIFOLIATUM, E. Cannabinum — e. Urticifolium, E. ageratoides.

EUPEPSIA, from eu, and πεψω, 'I digest.' A good digestion. The antithesis to dyspepsia.

EUPEPTIC, Eupeptus, Eupeptica. Same etymon. Relating to a good digestion. One endowed with a good digestion.

EUPHLOGIA, from eu, and φλεγω, 'I burn.' Mild inflammation. Variola.

EUPHONY, Euphonia, from eu, and φωνη, 'voice.' An agreeable or regular voice.

EUPHORBE CYPRESS, E. cyparissias — e. des Marais, E. palustris — c. Vomitive, E. ipecacuanha.

EUPHORBIA CAPITATA, Caecica. Ord. Euphorbiaceæ. Called after Euphorbus, physician to king Juba. A Brazilian plant, which is strongly astringent and not poisonous. It is considered to be one of the best remedies for the bites of serpents. It is, also, called Colubrina Lusitanica.

EUPHORBIA CAPUT MEDUSÆ. A South African plant, with which, according to Bruce, the wild inhabitants poison their arrows. The Ethiopians use, for the same purpose, Euphorbia heptagona, E. virosa, and E. cereiformis; the savages, in the most southern part of America, the sap of E. cotinifolia.

EUPHORBIA CEREIFORMIS, see Euphorbia caput Medusæ.

EUPHORBIA COROLLATA, Large flowering spurge, Milkweed, Snakes' milk, Ipecacuanha, Hippo, Picac, Ip'cac, Milk purslain, Purge root, Emetic root, Bowman's root, Apple root, Indian Physic; indigenous; has similar properties to the last. The dose of the root is the same.

EUPHORBIA COTINIFOLIA, see Euphorbia caput Medusæ.

EUPHORBIA CYPARIS'SIAS, E. Cypress'ino, Es'ula minor seu Cyparissias, Tithym'alus Cypariss'ias, Cypress spurge, Welcome to our house, (F.) Euphorbe cypès. This, like most of the spurges, is very acrimonious. Amongst the rustics, it was formerly called poor man's rhubarb, and was, consequently, a laxative. It is not used.

EUPHORBIA CYPRESSINA, E. Cyparissias.

EUPHORBIA HELIOSCOP'IA, E. obturata, Sun spurge, Wartwort spurge; indigenous. The juice has been given in syphilis. It is said to be cathartic.

EUPHORBIA HEPTAGONA, see Euphorbia caput Medusæ.

EUPHORBIA HYPERICIFOLIA, Large spotted spurge, Eyebright. A native of the United States. It is astringent and tonic. Used in infusion — f̄ss to Oj of boiling water. Dose, a table-spoonful. EUPHORBIA MACULATA, Milk Purslane, Spotted spurge, has similar properties.

EUPHORBIA IPECACUAN'HA, Anisophyllum Ipecacuanha, Ipecacuanha spurge, Wild ip'cac. (F.) Euphorbe vomitive. This species of spurge is common in the southern and middle parts of the United States. The root is a powerful emetic, in the dose of from five to fifteen grains: twenty grains act as a cathartic likewise. In large doses, it acts as a narcotico-acrid.

EUPHORBIA LATH'YRIS. The systematic name of the plant which affords the lesser cataputia seeds, Cataputia minor, Caper Spurge, Lath'gris, Garden spurge, Caper plant, Mole-plant, Tithym'alus latifolius seu lath'gris, Galarhœus Lath'gris, (F.) Épurga ou grande Ésule. The seeds possess cathartic properties, and an expressed oil of the seeds — O'leum Euphor'biæ Lathyr'idis, (F.) Huile d'Épurga — has been given as a cathartic in the dose of six to twelve drops.

EUPHORBIA MACULATA, see E. hypericifolia — e. Myrtifolia, Pedilanthus tithymaloides — e. Obturata, E. helioscopia.

EUPHORBIA OFFICINARUM. The systematic name of the plant which affords the Euphor'bitum, Euphor'biæ gummi-resi'na, Gummi euphorbiæ, in greatest abundance. The euphorbium is an inodorous gum-resin, in yellow tears, which have the appearance of being worm-eaten. It enters into the composition of some plasters, and has been used as an errhine.

EUPHORBIA PALUS'TRIS, E. paniculata, Greater spurge, Es'ula major, Tithym'alus palustris, Galarhœus palustris, Marsh spurge, Wret-weed, (F.) Euphorbe des marais. The juice is given, in Russia, as a common purge. It is used, too, as an irritant in tinea, warts, &c.

EUPHORBIA PALUSTRIS and E. VILLOSA, or E. PILOSA have been brought forward as preventives of hydrophobia — the bitten part being washed with a decoction, and, at the same time, the decoction being taken internally.

EUPHORBIA PANICULATA, E. palustris.

EUPHORBIA PARALIAS, Tithym'alus paralius, Sea spurge. This is violently cathartic and irritating, and is seldom used.

EUPHORBIA PEPLUS, Petty spurge; indigenous. The powdered root is actively cathartic. It has been given in dropsy.

EUPHORBIA PILOSA, see Euphorbia palustris — e. Tithymaloides, Pedilanthus tithymaloides — e. Villosa, see Euphorbia palustris — e. Virosa, see Euphorbia caput Medusæ.

 All the spurges are vesicant and rubefacient, when applied externally.

EUPHORBIEUM, Euphorbia officinarum.

EUPHORIA, Eupathia.

EUPHRAGIA, Euphrasia officinalis.

EUPHRA'SIA (εὐφρασία, cheerfulness; so called from its effects), E. Officina'lis seu Min'ima seu Imbricata, Oculo'ria, Euphra'gia, Ophthalmica, Eyebright, (F.) Enfraise, Euphraise, Casse-Lunette. It has been recommended in diseases of the eye, but is unworthy of notice.

EUPLASTIC, Euplasticus, (F.) Euplastique: from eu, and πλασσω, 'I form.' Having the capacity of becoming organizable in a high degree, — as in false membranes resulting from acute inflammation in a healthy person.

EUPLEURUM SERRULATUM, Diosma crenata.

EUPNG'EA, from eu, and πνέω, 'I respire.' Freedom or facility of respiration.

EURHYTH'MIA, from eu, and ρυθμος, 'rhythm.' Regularity of the pulse.

EURIBALL, Juribali.

EURODES, Caribus.

EURODON'TICUS, from euρος, 'caries,' and οδων, οδοντος, 'a tooth.' Suffering from carious teeth.

EURUS, europs, 'mould, putrefaction,' Mucor, Caries. Corruption of the humours.

EURYCHORIA, Sinus.

EURYCLES, Engastrimyth.

EURYCLITUS, Engastrimyth.

EURYSMUS, Dilatation.

EURYTH'MIA, Euryth'mus, from eu, and ρυθμος, 'rhythm.' Regularity of pulse, both as regards quantity and quality.

EUSAR'CUS, from eu, and σαρξ, σαρκος, 'flesh.' One who is fleshy, robust, muscular.

EUSEM'IA. (F.) Eusēmitē, from eu, and σημειω, 'a sign.' A collection of good signs.

EUSOMPHALIEN from eu, and ομφαλος,

'navel.' A double monster in which each being has a separate navel, and is able to execute, independently, almost all the vital functions.

EUSPLANCHNIA, from eu, and σπλαγχνον, 'a viscous.' A healthy state of the viscera.

EUSTA'CHIAN TUBE, Tuba Eustachia'na seu Aristotell'ica, Syrin'ga, Syrinx, Meat'us cæcus, Ductus auris palati'mus, Iter a Pala'to ad Aurem, (F.) Trompe on Conduit d'Eustache, Conduit guttural de Foreille—Ch. So called from its discoverer, Eustachius. It is partly bony and partly cartilaginous: extending from the cavity of the tympanum to the upper part of the pharynx. Its length is about two inches; the bony portion which belongs to the temporal bone, is about three-fourths of an inch long. It is lined, internally, by a prolongation of the lining membrane of the pharynx. Its nerves are furnished by the palatine branches of the ganglion of Meckel, and its vessels proceed from those of the pharynx and velum pendulum. The use of the tube seems to be, to permit the renewal of air in the cavity of the tympanum.

EUSTA'CHIAN VALVE, Valve of Eustachius, Valvule d'Eustachi ou d'Eustache. A membranous, semilunar fold, which corresponds to the opening of the vena cava inferior into the right auricle of the heart.

EUSTHEN'IA, Vigor, Ecuberan'tia, from eu, and σθενος, 'strength.' Flourishing, exuberant health.—Hippocrates.

EUSTOM'ACHUS, from eu, and στομαχος, 'stomach.' Digesting rapidly. Having a good stomach.

EUSTRONGYLUS GIGAS, Strongylus gigas.

EUTAX'IA, from eu, and τασσω, 'I arrange.' Euthe'sia. A well-ordered constitution, in which every part has its proper relation. The ready return of a rupture, or of a luxated bone.

EUTHANA'SIA, from eu, and θανατος, 'death.' An easy death. The opposite to this is Cacothana'sia.

EUTHESIA, Eutaxia.

EUTHYENTERON, Rectum.

EUTHYENTEROSTENOMA, Stricture of the Rectum.

EUTHYM'IA, An'imi tranquil'itas, from eu, and θυμος, 'mind.' Tranquillity of mind. A good state of the mental faculties.

EUTHYPNOE, Orthopnoea.

EUTHYPNOEA, Orthopnoea.

EUTO'C'IA, from eu, and τοκος, 'delivery.' An easy labour. Fecundity.

EUTROPH'IA, from eu, and τροφή, 'nourishment.' A good state of nutrition.

EUTROPH'IC, Eutroph'icus, same etymon. A term introduced into medical terminology, by the author, for an agent whose action is exerted on the system of nutrition, without necessarily occasioning manifest increase of any of the secretions.

The chief eutrophics are.—mercurials, the preparations of iodine, bromine, cod liver oil, the preparations of gold and silver, sulphur, sugar, and sarsaparilla.

EUZOODYNAMIA, Sanitas.

EVACUANTS, Evacuan'tia, from e, and vacuare, 'to empty.' (F.) Évacuatifs. Medicines are so called which occasion a discharge by some emunctory; such as purgatives, emetics, &c.

ÉVACUATIFS, Evacuants.

EVACUATIO, Evacuation. Excretion.

EVACUATION. Same etymon. Lapac'is. The discharge of any matter whatever by the natural passages or by an artificial opening.

ÉVANOUISSEMENT, Syncope.

EVAN ROOT, Geum Virginianum.

EVAPORA'TION, Evaporatio, Vapora'tio,

Exhalatio, from e, and vaporare, vaporatum, 'to emit a vapour.' Transformation of a liquid into vapour, in order to obtain the fixed matters contained in it dry and separate from the liquid. When the vapour is received into a proper vessel and condensed, the process is called distillation. Evaporation produces cold, and this is one of the processes by which the body is cooled, through the evaporation of the perspiratory fluid.

ÉVAUX, MINERAL WATERS OF. Evaux is situate in Auvergne, in France. The waters are hydrosulphurous and thermal.

EVENTRA'TION, Eventru'tio, Hypogastro-riax'is, from e, 'out of,' and venter, 'the belly.' A tumour, formed by a general relaxation of the parietes of the abdomen, and containing a great part of the abdominal viscera. Also, ventral hernia, or that which occurs in any other way than through the natural openings of the abdominal parietes. Lastly, any very extensive wound of the abdominal parietes, with issue of the greater part of the intestines.

EVEN'TUS, from e, 'out of,' and venire, ventum, 'to come.' Apobat'ion, Apobesom'enon, Ec-besom'enon, Termina'tio morbi. The event or issue of a disease, either favourable or unfavourable.

EVERLASTING, DICËCIOUS, Antennaria dioica.

EVERRIC'ULUM, Specil'lum, from everrere, 'to clean out.' A sort of sound or scoop, used for extracting sand or fragments of stone or clots of blood from the bladder, after or during the operation of lithotomy.

EVERSIO PALPEBRÆ, Ectropion.

ÉVIGILATTON, see Sleep.

EVIL, THE, Scrofula—e. King's, Scrofula.

EVIRATIO, Castration.

EVIRATUS, Castratus, Eunuch.

EVISCERATION, Exenterismus.

EVOLUTIO, Development—e. Spontanea, Evolution, spontaneous.

EVOLUTION OF GERMS, see Generation.

EVOLU'TION, SPONTA'NEOUS, Ver'sio seu Evo-lutio sponta'nea, from e, and volvere, volutum, 'to roll.' Sponta'neous ver'sion, Sponta'neous expul-sion, Duplication of the fetus. A term, applied, by Dr. Denman, to what he considered to be a spontaneous turning of the fetus in utero, in an arm presentation, in consequence of powerful uterine contractions forcing out the breech and feet, whilst the arm recedes. It is now usually considered to be a doubling of the fetus, so that the arm changes its position but little, whilst the breech is forcibly expelled before the upper extremity;—the case becoming similar to a breech presentation.

EVOLUTION, VESICLE OF, Vesicle of develop-ment.

EVOMITIO, Vomiting.

EVONYMUS, Eponymus.

EVUL'SION, Avulsion, Ecul'sio, from evellere, evulsio, (e, and vellere), 'to pluck out.' Apotil'mos, Ecit'inos, Tilmos. The action of plucking out; forcible extraction. (F.) Arrachement. This word is oftener used by the French than by the English surgeons, for the act of extracting certain parts, the presence of which is injurious,—as the teeth, &c.

EW-GOWAN, Bellis.

EX MARIBUS, Castratus.

EXACERBATIO, Exacerbation, Paroxysm.

EXACERBATION, Exacerba'tio, Exaspera'tio, Excrescen'tia, from exacerbare, exacerbatum, (ex, and acerbus), 'to provoke.' (F.) Rédoublément. An increase in the symptoms of a disorder. Often used synonymously with paroxysm.

EXACUM SPICATUM, Coutoubea alba.

EXÆMATOSIS, Hæmatisis.

EXÆMIA, Anæmia.

EXÆMOS, Exanguinus.

EXÆRESIS, from $\epsilon\acute{\xi}$, 'out of,' and $\alpha\iota\rho\omega$, 'I take away.' A surgical operation, which consists in drawing, extracting, or removing, from the human body, every thing that is useless, noxious, or extraneous. It is a generic term, which includes extraction, evulsion, evacuation, excision, ablation, amputation, &c.

EXÆRESIS, Extraction.

EXAG'GERATED, Exaggeratus, (F.) Exagéré, from exaggero, (ex, and aggero, 'I heap up,') 'I magnify.') Heightened. Increased by expression. An epithet for sounds heard on auscultation and percussion, when much increased—Hypereche'sis, Hypereche'ma.

EXA'GION. The sixth part of an ounce:—four scruples.—Actuarius.

EXAL'MA, from $\epsilon\acute{\xi}$, 'out of,' and $\alpha\lambda\lambda\omicron\mu\alpha\iota$, 'I leap.' Exalsis. Hippocrates calls thus the displacement of the vertebrae.

EXALSIS, Exalma, Leap.

EXALTA'TION OF THE VITAL FORCES. Exaltatio vi'rium, from exalto, (ex, and alto,) 'I raise.' This expression has been used, by modern pathologists, to designate a morbid increase in the action of organs, and partly that which occurs in an inflamed organ. Some use exaltation of the vital forces, and inflammation, synonymously.

EXAMBLOMA, Abortion.

EXAMBLOSIS, Abortion.

EXA'MEN RIGOROSUM. 'Rigorous examination.' An examination of a Candidate for the degree of Doctor of Medicine in the Prussian Universities, which, like the Tentamen medicum, is conducted in Latin, and takes place before the medical faculty on all branches of medicine.

EXANASTOMOSIS, Anastomosis.

EXANASTROPHE, Convalescence.

EXANGI'A, from $\epsilon\kappa\alpha\gamma\gamma\iota\omega$, ($\epsilon\acute{\xi}$, and $\alpha\gamma\gamma\omicron$, 'a vessel,') 'I evacuate from a vessel.' Exange'ia. An enlargement or rupture of a blood-vessel, without external opening. A genus in the order Dysthetica, class Hæmatica of Good. It comprises aneurism and varix.

EXANGIA ANEURISMA, Aneurism.

EXAN'GUIOUS, Exsang'vine, Exsanguineus, Exæmos, Exsang'uis, (F.) Exsangue, from ex, 'out of,' and sanguis, 'blood.' Seeming to be bloodless; as a female, who has suffered largely from uterine hemorrhage. See Anæmic.

EXANIA, Proctocele.

EXANIMA'TION, Exanima'tio, from ex, 'out of,' and anima, 'the spirit.' This word has two acceptations. Sometimes, it means real death, corresponding with the Greek $\theta\alpha\nu\alpha\tau\omicron\varsigma$, mors. At others, it signifies apparent death, corresponding with the Greek $\alpha\psi\upsilon\chi\iota\alpha$, $\epsilon\kappa\psi\upsilon\chi\iota\alpha$, $\epsilon\kappa\lambda\upsilon\sigma\iota\varsigma$, An'imi deli'quium.

EXAN'THEM, Exanthe'ma, Anthe'ma erupt'io, Epanthe'ma, Efflorescent'ia, Exanthis'ma, Ecthy'ma, Epanaste'ma, Epanthe'ma, Epanthis'ma, Éfflorat'io, from $\epsilon\kappa\alpha\nu\theta\epsilon\omega$, ($\epsilon\acute{\xi}$, and $\alpha\nu\theta\epsilon\omega$,) 'I flourish.' A rash. (F.) Ecanthème, Élevure. Under this term, is comprehended, by some, every kind of eruption, of which the skin is the seat. Others comprehend by it those eruptions that are accompanied by fever, Febres exanthemat'icæ: including, under the head of the major exanthemata, those which attack a person but once in his life, and which are communicated by specific contagion; and, under the minor exanthemata, those which are not marked by these characteristics. Small-pox, measles, cow-pox, &c., belong to the major:—chicken-pox, herpes, lichen, &c. to the minor. The general acceptance of Exanthem is, however, a more or less vivid, circumscribed, or diffuse redness of the skin, which diminishes, or disappears transiently, under the pressure of the finger.

EXANTHEM, CARBUNCULAR, Anthracia—e. Ichorous, Emphysis—e. Pustulous, Empyesis—e. Rash, Eranthisis.

EXANTHEMA, Eminence—e. Internum, Eis-anthema.

EXANTHE'MA IŪD'ICUM. An eruption of dark-red definite spots, of various sizes, spreading over the whole body, without the formation of scales, and disappearing only after a long time, which seems to be produced occasionally by the use of iodine.

EXANTHEMAT'ICA. Same etymon. Eruptive fevers. Cutaneous eruptions, essentially accompanied with fever;—the third order in the class Hæmatica of Good.

EXANTHEMATIS'CHESIS, Exanthematosis, from $\epsilon\kappa\alpha\nu\theta\eta\mu\alpha$, 'exanthem,' and $\alpha\chi\epsilon\iota\nu$, 'to withhold.' Suppression of a cutaneous eruption.

EXANTHEMATOL'OGY, Exanthematolog'ia, from $\epsilon\kappa\alpha\nu\theta\eta\mu\alpha$, 'exanthem,' and $\lambda\omicron\gamma\omicron\varsigma$, 'a discourse.' The doctrine of cutaneous eruptions.

EXANTHEMATOPHTHAL'MIA, Ophthalm'ia exanthemat'ica, from $\epsilon\kappa\alpha\nu\theta\eta\mu\alpha$, 'exanthem,' and $\omicron\phi\theta\alpha\lambda\mu\alpha$, 'inflammation of the eye.' Ophthalmia in the course of, or succeeding to, a cutaneous eruption.

EXANTHEMATOUS, Exanthemat'osus. Exanthemat'icus, (F.) Exanthématique. Relating or appertaining to exanthem, as "an exanthematous eruption." (F.) Éruption exanthématique.

EXANTHÈME INTESTINALE, see Typhus.

EXANTHESIS, see Efflorescence—e. Arthrosia, Dengue—e. Roseola, Roseola—e. Rubeola, Rubeola.

EXANTHISMA, Exanthem.

EXANTHROPIA, Misanthropia.

EXAPISIS, Inflammation.

EXARAG'MA, from $\epsilon\kappa\alpha\rho\alpha\sigma\omega$, 'I tear away,' 'I break.' Collision, violent fracture or friction.

EXARCHIA'TER, Exarchiat'ros. Chief of the archiatri, or chief of physicians, a title, like that of Comes Archiatrorum, given to the chief physician of an emperor or king. Archiater appears to have meant, at times, the same thing.

EXARMA, Swelling.

EXAR'SIO. A burning heat.

EXARTEMA, Amuletum.

EXARTERITIS, Exarterit'is, from ex, 'out of,' and arteria, 'an artery.' Inflammation of the outer coat of an artery.

EXARTHREMA, Luxation, Sprain.

EXARTHROMA, Luxation.

EXARTHROSIS, Luxatio, Sprain—e. Pareti-ca, see Pareticus.

EXARTICULATIO, Amputation, joint; Luxatio.

EXARYSIS, Exhaustion.

EXASPERATIO, Exacerbation.

EXCÆCARTA AGALLOCHA, Agallochum.

EXCALEFACTIO, Échauffement.

EXCARNATIO, Excarna'tio, from ex, and caro, carnis, 'flesh.' A mode of making anatomical preparations, which consists in separating injected vessels from the parts in which they are situate. This is done by means of corrosion by an acid or by putrefaction.

EXCASTRATIO, Castration, Eunuch.

EXCATHISMA, Bath, half; Semicupium.

EXCAVATOR, Dental, see Dental.

EXCEREBRATIO, Ecephalosis.

EXCEREBRATUS, Delirious.

EXCERNENT, Secreting.

EXCIDENTIA, Eeptoma.

EXCIP'IENT, Excipiens, from excipere, (ex, and capere), 'to receive.' (F.) Intermède. A substance, which, in a medicinal prescription, gives form and consistence to it, and serves as a vehicle or medium for the exhibition of the other ingredients.

EXCIPULA, Cup.

EXCISIO, Entaille.

EXCIS'ION, Excisio, from excidere, excisum, (ex, and cadere), 'to cut off.' Ec'tomè. A surgical operation, by which parts of a small size are removed with a cutting instrument.

EXCITABIL'ITY Excitabilitas. Irritability. From excitare, (ex, and citare, citatum), 'to excite.' The faculty, possessed by living beings, of being sensible to the action of excitants. The doctrine of excitability forms an important part of the Brunonian system.

EXCITANT, Stimulant.

EXCITA'TION, Excitatio, Excite'ment; same etymon. The act of exciting; the state of an organ or organs excited. Excitement is, sometimes, used synonymously with augmented arterial action. The effect of the exciting powers acting on the excitability, according to Brown, constitutes excitement. Cullen used the term to express the restoration of the energy and action of the brain, which had been interrupted by sleep or some debilitating cause,—a state opposite to that of collapse. Not unfrequently, it is employed in the sense of excessive action,—Super-excitatio, (F.) Sur-excitation.

EXCITED DISEASES, Feigned diseases.

EXCITO-MOTION, see Excito-motory.

EXCI'TO-MO'TORY, (F.) Excito-moteur. An epithet applied by Dr. Marshall Hall to a division of the nervous system—comprising the gray matter of the spinal marrow, with the afferent and efferent nerves connected with it;—all of which are concerned in reflex actions; or those by which impressions are transmitted to a centre, and reflected so as to produce muscular contraction without sensation or volition. They constitute the reflex system of nerves. See Nerves.

The term *excito-motio*n has also been employed to signify motion, no matter how excited, by the reflex nerves or by volition.—C. J. B. Williams.

EXCORIATIO, Eedora.

EXCORIA'TION, Excoriatio, Excoriatu'ra, Am'yehè, from ex, and corium, 'skin.' (F.) Écorchure. A slight wound, which removes only the skin.

EXCORIATURA, Excoriation.

EXCREA'TION, Excreatio, Exscreatio, Sored'us, Rasca'tio, from ex, and screare, 'to spit.' Act of spitting. (F.) Crachement. See Exspuitio.

EX'CREMENT, Excrementum, Retrimentum, Excretum, Excretio, Perit'oma, Diachore'ma, Aph'odos, Aphoden'ma, Apocho'reon, Apo'crisis, Ar'das, Ar'dalos, from excernere, exeretum, (ex, and cernere), 'to separate,' 'cleanse.' Everything, which is evacuated from the body of an animal by the natural emunctories, as superfluous; such as the fæcal matters, the urine, perspiration, nasal mucus, &c. Generally, however, the term is restricted to the fæcal evacuations;—Purgamenta, Hedra, Sedes, Fæces, Stercus, Cacœ, Spat'ilè, (especially when liquid,) Dejec'tio alvi'na O'nera alvi, Sordes ventris, Hypocho're'ma, Cœ'lia, Hypocho're'sis, Merda, Mer'dus, Catarrhex'is, Copros, Scor.

EXCREMENT, HUMAN, Stercus humanum.

EXCREMENTIT'IAL, Excrementit'ius, Excrementit'ius, (F.) Excrémenteux, Excrémentiel.

That which is similar to excrement, and forms part of it. Excrementital humours or parts are those destined to be evacuated as incapable of administering to the nutrition of the body.

EXCREMENTO-RECREMENTIT'IAL, Excremento-recrementit'ius. Animal fluids, intended to be partly absorbed and partly rejected.

EXCRES'CENTE, Excrescentia, Echphy'ma, Phymato'sis, Hypersarco'sis, Sarcophy'ia, Caro excres'cens, from excrescere, (ex, and crecere), 'to grow outwards.' (Sc.) Svalme. (F.) Excroissance. A tumour, which forms at the surface of organs, and especially on the skin, mucous membranes, or ulcerated surfaces. Excrescences differ in size, shape, cause, &c., and each requires its own treatment. Warts, condylomata, polypi, hemorrhoids, belong to this head.

EXCRESCENTIA, Exacerbation, Protuberance, Tumour—e. Carnosa, Sarcoma—e. Fungosa, Fungosity—e. Gingiva, Epulis—e. Vesicæ urinarie carnosæ, Cysthypersarcosis.

EXCRETA, see Excretion.

EXCRÉTEUR, Excretory.

EXCRETIO, Excretion, Excrement—e. Alvina, Defecation—e. Fæcum alvinarum, Defecation—e. Urinæ involuntaria, Enuresis.

EXCRET'ION, Excretio, Ec'crisis, Evacuatio, Ejec'tio, Expul'sio, Egestio, Diachore'sis, from excernere, exeretum, (ex, and cernere), 'to separate.' The separation or throwing off of those matters, Excre'ta, Eges'ta, Jon'ta, Apion'ta, from the body of an animal, which are supposed to be useless, as the urine, perspiration, and fæces.

EXCRÉTOIRE, Excretory.

EXCRETORY, Excretorius, (F.) Excréteur ou Excrétoire; same etymon. An Excretory vessel or duct, Ductus excretorius, is one which transmits the fluid secreted by a gland either externally or into the reservoirs into which it has to be deposited. The existence of an excretory duct was regarded as a distinctive character of the glands properly so called.

EXCRETORY ORGAN means any one charged with the office of excreting; thus, the skin is said to be an excretory organ, because through it the perspiration takes place.

EXCRETUM, Excrement.

EXCROISSANCE, Excrescence.

EXCU'TIA VENTRIC'ULLI, Stomach Brush. An instrument, composed of iron or brass wire, at one of the extremities of which is a pencil of bristles. Some ancient authors proposed this to extract foreign bodies from the œsophagus, as well as to cleanse the stomach of viscid and tenacious matters adhering to it.

EXECHEBRONCHUS, Bronchocele.

EXECHEGLUTI, Exischioi.

EXEDENS, see Herpes exedens.

EXELCOSIS, see Ulceration.

EXELCYS'MOS, from ἐξ, 'from,' and ἐκκυω, 'I draw.' Extraction. Also the act of breaking into ulcers.

EXELCYSMUS, Extraction.

EXENCÉPHALE, from ἐξ, 'out of,' and εγκεφαλον, 'the encephalon.' A genus of monsters, in which the encephalon is situate in a great measure out of the cranium, the upper portion of which is almost wholly wanting. Isid. G. St. Hilaire.

EXENTERATION, Exenterismus.

EXENTERIS'MUS, Exenter'isis, Exentera'tio, Exentera'tion, Eviscera'tion, Deviscera'tion, Unbow'elling, Embow'elling or Imbow'elling, Viscera'tion, from ἐξ, 'out of,' and εντερον, 'an intestine.' The operation of taking out the bowels.

EXERAMA, from ἐξερᾶω, 'I throw out.' Any thing cast out. Vomiting; or the matter vomited.—Hippocrates.

EXERCISE, Exercitatio, Exercitium, Ascensio, Gymnasion, from exercere, exercitum, 'to work.' Every motion of the body arising from the contraction of muscles subjected to the will. Also, the action of any organ whatever. Exercise may be active or passive. The passive are referred to, under the head of Gestation. The chief active exercises are:—walking, running, dancing, hunting, fencing, playing at ball, cricket, racket, quoits, swimming, declamation, and singing. Exercise is an important prophylactic, particularly for those disposed to be plethoric. It improves the digestion; augments the secretions; and, when used in moderation, gives strength to the body; but when carried to excess, produces debility and disease.

EXERRHOSIS, from $\epsilon\lambda$, 'out of,' and $\rho\omega$, 'I flow.' The discharge which takes place by insensible perspiration.

EXFŒTATION, see Pregnancy.

EXFOLIATIF, Exfoliative.

EXFOLIATION, Exfoliatio, Desquamatio, Eclepsis, Ecleipsis, from ex, and folium, 'a leaf.' By this is meant the separation of the dead portions of a bone, tendon, aponeurosis, or cartilage, under the form of lamellæ or small scales. Exfoliation is accomplished by the instinctive action of the parts, and its object is to detach the dead portion from those subjacent, which are still alive. For this purpose the latter throw out fleshy granulations, and a more or less abundant suppuration occurs, which tends to separate the exfoliated part,—now become an extraneous body. The ancients distinguished exfoliation into sensibile and insensibile, according as the dead portions of bone were detached in fragments of greater or less size, or in very thin pieces, and in an almost insensible manner. When the dead part embraces all or almost all the substance of a bone, it takes the name Sequestrum.

EXFO'LIATIVE, Exfoliativus, Desquamativus, (F.) Exfoliatif. That which takes away by leaves or scales. The term has been applied to certain medicines, which were regarded as proper to hasten exfoliation, such as alcohol, oil of turpentine, tincture of myrrh, &c.

EXFO'LIATIVE TREPAN, Eclepsitrep'anum. An ancient raspatory, or instrument for scraping exfoliating portions of bone.

EXHALATION, Exhalation.

EXHA'LANT, Exhalant, Exhalans, from exhalare, exhalatum, (ex, and halare, 'to breathe,') 'to exhale,' 'throw out.'

EXHALANT VESSELS, Vasa exhalantia, are very minute, and rise from the arterial capillary system. They are situate in every tissue of the body, and on the surface of the mucous and serous membranes and skin; on which each pours its particular fluid. Bichat distinguished three sets. 1. The external, terminating on the mucous and external dermoid system, where they pour the matter of perspiration. 2. The internal, comprising those of the areolar and medullary tissues, and of synovial surfaces; and, 3. The nutritive exhalants, which vary in each organ where they are found, and preside over the phenomena of composition and increase of every part of the body. The exhalants are the antagonists of the absorbents. They are imaginary vessels, inasmuch as they cannot be detected.

EXHALATIO, Evaporation.

EXHALATION, Exhalatio; same etymon. Anathym'asis, Apopneusis, (F.) Exhalation. A function, by virtue of which certain fluids, obtained from the blood, are spread, in the form of dew, in the areolæ of the different textures, or at the surface of membranes; either for the sake of being thrown out of the body, or to serve certain purposes. The sweat is a liquid, excrementitious exhalation; the serous fluid of the pleura, a liquid excrementitious exhalation.

Exhalation is, also, applied to that which exhales from any body whatever, organic or inorganic, dead or living.

EXHALATION, PULMONARY, see Perspiration.

EXHAUSTION, Exhaustio, Vires exhaustæ, from exaurire, exhaustum, (ex, and aurire,) 'to draw out.' (F.) Épuisement. Loss of strength, occasioned by excessive evacuations, great fatigue or privation of food, or by disease.

EXHIL'ARANT, Exhil'arans, from ex, and hilaro, 'I make merry.' An agent that exhilarates or enlivens.

EXHUMATION, Exhumatio, Effusio, from ex, and humus, 'the ground.' The disinterment of a corpse. The circumstances which render this necessary are:—1. Judicial investigations relative to the body of the person inhumed. 2. The removal of a body from one cemetery to another; and, 3. The evacuation of cemeteries or sepulchral vaults. The operation is attended with much unpleasant smell and annoyance, and requires the use of disinfecting agents, of which the most powerful is chlorinated lime. See Disinfection. The putrid effluvia from animal substances are not, however, found to excite endemic disease.

EXIDIA AURICULA JUDÆ, Peziza auricula.

EXINANIT'ION, Exinanit'io, from ex, 'out of,' and inanis, 'empty.' Extreme exhaustion; complete evacuation.

EXISCH'UM. Same etymon as the next. Prominence of the hips.

EXIS'CHIUS, Exischus, from $\epsilon\lambda$, 'out of,' and $\alpha\chi\iota\omega$, 'the ischium.' A luxation of the os femoris. Those with large nates, and prominent hips, were formerly called Exischioi and Exechgluti.

EXITURA, from exire, exitum, (ex, and eo,) 'to go out.' According to some, any abscess which discharges. Paracelsus calls thus every kind of putrid excrement.

EXITUS. Same etymon. The outer termination or exit of a canal. The termination of a disease.

EXOARTERITIS, see Arteritis.

EXOCARDIAC, see Endocardiac.

EXOCARDIAL, see Endocardiac.

EXOCARDITIS, Pericarditis.

EX'OCHAS, Ex'ochæ, from $\epsilon\lambda\epsilon\chi\omega$, ($\epsilon\lambda$, and $\epsilon\chi\omega$,) 'I project.' A soft tumour—as a hemorrhoid—outside of the anus. An outward pile.

EXOCHÆ, Eminence, Exochas.

EXOCHORION, see Chorion.

EXOCOLITIS, see Colitis.

EXOCULA'TIO, from ex, 'out of,' and oculus, 'an eye.' Want of eyes. Want of vision. Blindness.

EXOCYS'TÈ, Exocystis, from $\epsilon\lambda$, 'out of,' and $\kappa\upsilon\sigma\tau\iota\varsigma$, 'the bladder.' A prolapsus of the bladder into the urethra. Also called Prolapsus vesicæ, Ædoptosis vesicæ, (F.) Reversement de la vessie.

EXOCYS'TÈ NOELIA'NA. Protrusion of the inner membrane of the bladder. So called from M. Noel, who first accurately described it.

EXOCYS'TÈ SOLINGENIA'NA. Protrusion of the neck of the bladder. Called after M. Solingen, who first accurately described it.

EXŒDESIDIS, Swelling.

EXODIC, Efferent.

EXOGENOUS, from $\epsilon\lambda$, 'out of,' and $\gamma\epsilon\gamma\alpha\omega$, 'I engender.' A term first applied to plants—hence called Ex'ogens—in which the wood increases by annual additions to the outside.

In animal anatomy, processes which shoot out from any part are termed exogenous. An exoge- nous aneurism is one caused by division, from without, of the arterial walls.

EXOGENS, see Exogenous.

EXOGOGE, Extraction.

EXOGONIUM PURGA, Convolvulus jalapa.

EXOGONYAN'CON, from εξω, 'outwards,' γωνν, 'the knee,' and αγκων, 'an elbow.' Bowing of the knees outwards.

EXOINE, Exoène, from ex, 'out of,' and idoneus, 'fit,' or rather from exonerare, 'to exonerate' [?]. In France, a certificate of excuse, exemption, or dispensation, given to those summoned to appear before a court of justice, and who are unable to do so.

EXOLCE, Extraction.

EXOLUTION, Syncope.

EXOMETRA, Prolapsus uteri.

EXOMIOSIS, Assimilation.

EXOMPHALOCELE, Exomphalus.

EXOM'PHALUS, Exumbilical'tio, Exomphalocel'le, Om'phalocel'le, Hernia umbilical'lis, Omphalex'ochè, Omphaloproptosis, Prolapsus umbilic'ci, (F.) Hernie ombilicale, H. du nombril, Umbilical hernia, from εξ, 'out of,' and ομφαλος, 'the navel.' Hernia occurring at the navel. This affection happens more frequently in infants, and takes place by the umbilical ring. In adults, it occurs more commonly in females than in males; and, when it does so, the sac passes in the vicinity of the umbilicus. The organs, found in this kind of hernia, are particularly, — the epiploon, the jejunum, the arch of the colon, and sometimes the stomach. The tumour is, in general, round, and presents all the characters of hernia. It is, commonly, really reducible, and not subject to strangulation. It must be reduced, and retained by an elastic bandage, made in the form of a girdle, and furnished with a pad at its middle part. When strangulated, the stricture may be divided upwards and towards the left side.

EXONCO'MA, Exonco'sis, from εξ, and ογκος, 'a tumour.' A large, prominent tumour. Used, by Galen, for protuberance of the vertebræ after luxation.

EXONCOSIS, Exoncoma — e. Lingue, Glosseus.

EXONEIROGMUS, Pollution, nocturnal.

EXONEURISIS, Pollution, nocturnal.

EXONEURISM, Magnetism, animal.

EXOPHTHAL'MIA, Ptoxis seu Prolapsus seu Procidencia Oculi seu Bulbi Oculi, Exorbitismus, Ophthalmocel'le, Ophthalmoproptosis, Oculi tonus prominencia, from εξ, 'out of,' and οφθαλμος, 'eye.' (F.) Procidencia de l'œil. A protrusion of the eye from its orbit, occasioned by an abscess or tumour in the areolar texture of the orbit; by exostosis of the parietes of the orbit, &c. In exophthalmia, the eye is pressed forwards; the eyelids are raised and separated, so that they can no longer cover the eye and defend it from the action of extraneous bodies; it becomes inflamed, and the sight is disturbed or destroyed. The treatment of course depends upon the cause.

EXOPHTHALMIA FUNGOSA, Sarcosis bulbi — e. Sarcomatica, Sarcosis bulbi.

EXOPHTHALMUS, same etymon. One whose eyes are very prominent. The opposite to Cœlophthalmus.

EXORBITISMUS, Exophtalmia.

EXORMIA, Papula — e. Lichen, Lichen — e. Prurigo, Prurigo — e. Strophulus, Strophulus.

EXORTUS UNGUIUM, see Nail.

EXOSIS, Luxation.

EXO-SKELETON, see Skeleton.

EXOSMA, from εξ, 'out of,' and ωθεω, 'to move.' A luxated or dislocated limb or organ.

EXOSMIC, Exosmotic.

EXOSMOSE', Exosmosis, Transudation, from εξ, 'out of,' and ωσμος, 'impulse.' The opposite to Endosmose. The act by which substances transude from within to without an animal or other membrane.

EXOSMOT'IC, Exosmot'icus, Exos'mic, Exos'micus; same etymon. Belonging to Exosmose: — as an exosmotic current.

EXOSSATIO, Exostosis.

EXOSTEMMA CARIBÆA, Cinchona caribæa cortex.

EXOSTOMA, Exostosis.

EXOSTOSE, Exostosis — e. des Dents, Exostosis dentium — e. Sous-ungéale, see Subungual.

EXOSTO'SIS, Hyperostosis, Emphy'ma exostosis, Exosto'ma, Épосто'ma, Épосто'sis, Osteo'ma, Osto'ma, Osteoph'ytia, Exossa'tio, Ossis Eminen'tia, (F.) Exostose, Osteophyte; from εξ, 'out of,' and οσσειν, 'a bone.' An osseous tumour, which forms at the surface of bones, or in their cavities. Various kinds have been enumerated. Ivory Exostosis; (F.) E. eburnée; — that which has the appearance and consistence of ivory. Laminar Exostosis; (F.) E. Laminee; — that which is formed of laminae in superposition, or of distinct filaments. The Spongy Exostosis is that whose structure is analogous to the spongy tissue of bones. Exostoses are sometimes distinguished into the true, which seem to be a projection of the osseous substance, and which have the same organization and hardness as that substance; and the false or osteo-sarcoma. Exostosis may depend on syphilis, scrofula, rickets, gout, &c. In such cases, it is important to get rid of the primary disease.

Those exostoses, which occur within the bones, have, by some, been called Enostoses.

EXOSTOSIS, Spina ventosa.

EXOSTOSIS DENTIUM, (F.) Exostose des Dents. Exostosis of the teeth.

EXOSTOSIS STREATOMATODES, Osteosteotoma — e. Subungual, see Subungual.

EXOTERIC, see Esoteric.

EXOT'IC, Exo'ticus, from εξω, 'without.' That which comes from abroad. Plants or drugs which are procured from abroad are so called. It is opposed to indigenous.

EXOTICADEN'IA, from exotic, and ἀδω, 'I dislike.' Aversion for exotic drugs.

EXOTICHÆMATOSIS, Transfusion.

EXOTICOMAN'IA. The opposite to exoticadenia. Fondness for exotic remedies.

EXOTICOSYMPHYSIS, from εξωτικός, 'foreign,' and συνφύσις, 'a growing together.' A union or growing together of foreign bodies, as of a foreign body with the human.

EXPANSIO, Expansion — e. Musculosa, Platysma myoides.

EXPAN'SION, Expan'sio, from expandere, expansum, (ex, and pandere, 'to open,') 'to spread out.' A prolongation or spreading out, presented by certain organs. Thus, we say an aponeurotic expansion, &c.

EXPATRIATIO, Ejaculation (of Sperm.)

EXPEC'TANT, Exspec'tans, from expectare, expectatum, (ex, and spectare, 'to look,') 'to wait.' That which waits: — as Expectant Medicine, — La Médecine expectante. See Expectation.

EXPECTA'TION, Exspectatio; same etymon. The word expectation has been applied, in medicine, to that method, which consists in observing the progress of diseases, and removing deranging influences, without prescribing active medicines, unless such shall be imperiously required. It consists, in fact, in leaving the disease almost wholly to the efforts of nature, and has been termed the art of curing diseases by expectation or waiting — Arts sanan'di cum expectatio'ne.

EXPEC'TORANT, Expec'torative, Expec'torans, Anacathar'ticus, Sputato'rius, Antibe'chicus,

Pty's magogue, from ex, 'out of,' and pectus, pectoris, 'the breast.' A medicine capable of facilitating or provoking expectoration. There is probably no such thing as a direct expectorant. They all act through the system, or by impressions made on parts at a distance, which, through the medium of general, continuous, or contiguous sympathy, excite the secretory vessels of the air-passages into action. The following are the chief reputed expectorants:—Ammoniacum; Asafœtida; Galbanum; Ipecacuanha; Myroxylin; Myrrha; Inhalations of Iodine, Stramonium, Tar, Burning Wool, Tobacco, &c.; Scilla; Senega, and Tolutanum.

EXPECTORATIO, Expectoration — e. Sanguinis, Hæmoptysis — e. Solida, Cynanche trachealis.

EXPECTORATIO, Expectoratio, Echell'ysis, Bex hū'mida, Anap'tysis, Prop'tysis, Stethocathar'sis, Anacathar'sis, Anabex'is, Raising. Same etymon. The act of expelling from the chest matters or secretions there collected or existing. It is, likewise, used for the expectorated matter.

EXPECTORATION DE SANG, Hæmoptysis.

EXPECTORATION, PRUNE-JUICE, see Prune-juice.

EXPECTORATIVE, Expectorant.

EXPELLENS, Expulsive.

EXPERIENCE, Experientia, Peira, Empe'ra, from εξ, and πειρα, 'a trial.' A knowledge of things acquired by observation. In medicine, this knowledge can be obtained both by the practitioner's own experience, and by that obtained from tradition and from books. To profit by experience requires a mind capable of appreciating the proper relations between cause and effect; and hence it happens, that false experience, Experientia fallax, is extremely common; and that a man had better, in many instances, trust to that which he has learned from others, than to his own fallacious observation.

The union of accurate observation by the physician with that handed down by medical writers constitutes perfect experience, so far as it is attainable in any individual case.

EXPÉRIENCE, Experiment — e. de Mariotte, Mariotte, experiment of.

EXPERIMENT, Experimentum; same etymon. (F.) Expérience. A trial, made on the bodies of men or animals, for the purpose of detecting the effect of a remedy, or of becoming better acquainted with their structure, functions, or peculiarities. In a more general sense, it means any trial instituted with the intent of becoming better acquainted with any thing. By experiments on living animals, we have obtained much valuable information in the various departments of medicine; but particularly in physiology and toxicology.

EXPERIMENT OF MARIOTTE, see Mariotte.

EXPERIMENT OF WEPFER, Experimentum Wepferianum. An experiment attributed to Wepfer, which consisted in injecting air into the blood-vessels of animals, with the view of observing its effects on the economy.

EXPERTS NUPTIARUM, Virgin.

EXPERT (F.), Exper'tus, from ex, and peritus, 'skilled.' Skilful or of good experience. A physician, charged with the duty of making a report, (F.) Expertise, upon any case of legal medicine.

EXPERTISE, see Expert.

EXPIRATION, Expiratio, Exspiratio, Ec'pnoë, Ec'pneumato'sis, Ec'pneu'sis, Apopen'sis, Apop'noë, Apop'ne'a, from expirare, (ex, and spirare, spiratum), 'to breathe out.' The act of expelling from the chest, the air received during respiration.

EXPIRATORY, Expiratio'ni inser'viens. Same etymon. Relating or appertaining to expiration. The expiratory muscles are all those which contribute to diminish the cavity of the chest, for the purpose of expelling the air contained in the lungs, or of producing expiration. These muscles are, chiefly, the intercostals, triangularis sterni, quadratus lumborum, serratus posticus inferior, the oblique and recti muscles of the abdomen, and the sacro-lumbalis.

EXPLORATIO, Exploration — e. Abdominis, Abdominoscopia.

EXPLORATIO, Exploratio, Recognit'io, from explorare, exploratum, 'to search into.' The act of observing and attentively examining or investigating every thing connected with a case of disease. The word is chiefly used in this sense by the French practitioners.

EXPLORATOR, CHEST. An instrument, proposed by Dr. B. Babington for exploring the chest in cases of empyema. It consists of a needle, contained in the smallest sized canula. This is passed between the ribs into the chest. The needle is then withdrawn, and the escape of fluid indicates the nature of the case.

EXPLORATORIUM, Sound, Specillam.

EXPRES'SION, Expres'sio, Ec'pies'mos, Ec'hlyp'sis, from ex, 'out of,' and premere, pressum, 'to press.' The act of compressing a substance, for the purpose of separating from it the fluids which it contains. Also, the manner in which impressions made upon us are depicted; especially in the traits of the countenance.

EXPRESSION OF SWEAT, (F.) Sueur d'expression, is a term given to the passive perspiration observable in very debilitated individuals.

EXPUITION, Exspuition.

EXPULSIO, Exeretion — e. Fæcum, Defecation — e. Fœtus, Parturition.

EXPULSIF, Expulsive.

EXPULSION, SPONTANEOUS, Evolutin, spontaneus.

EXPULSIVE, Expellens Expulso'rius, (F.) Expulsif, from expellere, expulsum, (ex, and pellere), 'to drive away.'

An expulsive bandage, (F.) Bandage expulsif, is one constructed with the view of compressing a part, from which we are desirous of expelling pus, serum, &c. Certain medicines were formerly called expulsives, which were believed to have the power of driving the humours towards the skin:—as diaphoretics, and sudorifics.

EXPULTRIX, see Vis expultrix.

EXSANGUE, Exanguis.

EXSANGUINE, Exanguinis.

EXSANGUINITY, Anæmia.

EXSANGUIS, Exanguis. Exsanguis is used by Ausonius for one exhausted by venery; — as sanguis meant sperm as well as blood. See Sperm.

ENSARCOMA, Sarcoma.

ENSCREATIO, Excretion.

EXSECTIO VIRILIIUM, Castration.

EXSECTUS, Castratus, Eunuch.

EXSICCATIO, Drying.

EXSICCATIVA, Desiccativa.

EXSOLUTIO, Eclysis.

EXSPIRATIO, Expiration.

EXSPUIT'ION, Exspuit'io, Sput'io, Sputa'tio, Anachremp'sis, Apochremp'sis, Chremp'sis, Pty'sis, Anacine'ma, Anacine'sis, (F.) Expuition, Sputation, from ex, 'out of,' and sputo, 'I spit.' Rejection of the matters accumulated in the pharynx and larynx; spitting.

EXTASIS, Ecstasis.

EXTIRPATIO, Extirpation.

EXSTROPH'IA, Ec'strophia, Ec'strophë, from εξ, 'out of,' and στροφη, 'turning.' Extrover'sio, Extrover'sion. Eversion or turning out of a part —as of the eyelids. A term used by M. Chaussier for certain displacements of organs, and especially of the urinary bladder.

EXSTROPHIA or EXSTROPHY OF THE BLADDER, (F.) Renversement de la Vessie, is a faulty conformation, in which the organ opens above the pubes; so that in the hypogastric region there is a red, mucous surface, formed by the inner coat of the bladder; on which two prominences are distinguishable, corresponding to the openings of the ureters.

EXSUCCATIO, Echymoma.

EXSUC'TIO, Suc'tio, Emczye'sis, from ex, and sugere, suctum, 'to suck.' The action of sucking.

EXSUDATIO, Ehidrosis.

EXSUFFLATIO, Ephyphesis.

EXTA, see Entrails.

EXTASE, Ecstasis.

EXTEMPORANEOUS, Extemporaneus, Extempora'tis, (F.) Extemporane, from ex, and tempus, temporis, 'out of time.' Those prescriptions are called 'extemporaneous,' or 'magistral,' which are made on the spot, and composed according to the prescription of the physician.

EXTENSEUR COMMUN DES DOIGTS, Extensor digitorum communis — e. Commun des orteils, Extensor communis digitorum pedis — e. Court du pouce, Extensor pollicis brevis — e. Long du pouce, Extensor longus pollicis — e. Petit des orteils, Extensor brevis digitorum pedis — e. Propre du petit doigt, Extensor proprius minimi digiti — e. Propre de l'Index, Extensor proprius indicis.

EXTENSIBILITY, Extensibil'itas. A property, possessed by certain bodies, of being capable of extension or elongation.

EXTENSIO, Extension, Tetanus.

EXTENSION, Extens'io, Tasis, Ec'tasis, Cat'asis, Anat'asis, from extendere, (ex, and tendere, tensum), 'to stretch out.' An operation in surgery, in which either with the hands alone, or by straps, a fractured or luxated limb is pulled strongly, to restore it to its natural position. It is the opposite of Counter-extension.

EXTENSOR. Same etymon. (F.) Extenseur. A muscle, whose office is to extend certain parts.

EXTENSOR BREVIS DIGITORUM PEDIS, Ped'icus, (F.) Calcaneo-phalangien commun, of DUMAS; Muscle p'edieux ou petit extenseur des orteils, Calcaneo-sus-phalangien commun — (Ch.), Carré du pied; Short Extensor of the Toes. A muscle, situate on the dorsal region of the foot. It arises from the external surface of the calcaneum, and at the anterior edge of a ligament, which unites that bone to the astragalus. Anteriorly, each of its divisions terminates by a small tendon, which is fixed successively, at the superior part of the posterior extremity of the first phalanx of the great toe, and to the second and last phalanges of the next three toes. Its use is to extend the first four toes, and to direct them a little outwards.

EXTENSOR CARPI RADIALIS BREVIOR, see Radialis — e. Carpi radialis longior, see Radialis — e. Carpi ulnaris, see Cubital muscles.

EXTENSOR COMMUNIS DIGITORUM PEDIS, E. Longus Digitorum Pedis, E. Digitorum longus, Cnemodactyle'us, (F.) Péronéo-tibi-sus-phalangien commun, Péronéo-sus-phalangien commun, Extenseur commun des Orteils. This muscle, also, is situate at the anterior part of the leg. It is long, thin, flattened, simple, and fleshy above, and divided into four tendons below. It arises from the outer tuberosity of the tibia and the anterior surface of the fibula, and is inserted into the superior part of the posterior extremity of the second and third phalanges of the last four toes. It extends the three phalanges of these toes.

EXTENSOR DIGITORUM COMMUNIS, E. digito- rum communis manûs cum extenso'rê pro'prio auricula'ris, Digito'rum Tensor; (F.) Épicondylo-sus-phalangien commun — (Ch.) — Extenseur commun des Doigts, Commun Extensor of the Fingers. A long, flattened muscle; simple above, and divided into four portions inferiorly. It is situate at the posterior part of the forearm; arises from the external tuberosity of the humerus; from the aponeurosis of the forearm, and from the aponeurotic septa situate between it and the neighbouring muscles, and is inserted at the posterior surface of the second and third phalanges of the last four fingers. This muscle extends the phalanges of the last four fingers upon each other, and upon the metacarpal bone. It can, also, extend the hand on the forearm.

EXTENSOR POL'LICIS BREVIS, E. minor pol'licis manûs seu primi interno'dii seu pol'licis primus seu secun'di interno'dii (DOUGLAS), seu secun'di interno'dii ossis pol'licis; (F.) Cubito-sus-phalangien du pouce, — (Ch.), Court extenseur du pouce. Seated at the posterior and inferior part of the forearm. It is thin, long, and broader at its middle than at the extremities. It arises from the posterior surface of the ulna and the interosseous ligament, and is inserted behind the superior extremity of the first phalanx of the thumb. It extends the thumb, and aids in supination.

EXTENSOR POL'LICIS LONGUS; E. major pol'licis manûs seu secun'di interno'dii seu pol'licis secun'dus seu ter'tii interno'dii (DOUGLAS), seu interno'dii ossis pol'licis, (F.) Cubito-sus-phalangien du pouce, — (Ch.), Muscle long extenseur du pouce. This muscle is long, flat, and fusiform; and is seated at the posterior part of the forearm. It arises from the posterior surface of the ulna and the interosseous ligament, and is inserted at the posterior part of the superior extremity of the first phalanx of the thumb. It extends the last phalanx of the thumb upon the first.

EXTENSOR PROPRIUS INDICIS, E. proprius primi dig'iti manûs, E. Ind'icis, Indic'ator seu secun'di interno'dii ind'icis pro'prius, (F.) Cubito-sus-phalangien de l'Index, — (Ch.), Extenseur propre de l'Index. This muscle is long and thin; broader in the middle than at the extremities; and is situate at the posterior part of the forearm. It arises from the posterior surface of the ulna, and is inserted at the posterior part of the upper extremity of the second and third phalanges of the index-finger. It extends the three phalanges of the index-finger; and has, besides, the same uses as the other extremities of the fingers.

EXTENSOR PROPRIUS MINIMI DIG'ITI, (F.) Épicondylo-sus-phalangien du petit doigt, — (Ch.), Extenseur propre du petit doigt. Situate on the inside of the Extensor communis digito'rum. It arises from the external condyle of the os humeri and the aponeurotic septa seated between it, the extensor communis digitorum, and the extensor carpi ulnaris; and is inserted into the last two phalanges of the little finger. Its use is to extend the little finger, and even the hand upon the forearm.

EXTENSOR PROPRIUS POL'LICIS PEDIS, E. proprius Hall'ucis seu Longus (DOUGLAS), seu pol'licis longus, Péronéo-sus-phalangien du pouce, Péronéo-sus-phalangien du pouce, — (Ch.) This muscle is situate at the anterior part of the leg. It is fleshy, broad, flat above; small and tendinous below. It arises from the anterior part of the middle third of the fibula, and is inserted into the posterior part of the superior extremity of the last phalanx of the great toe. It extends the last phalanx of the great toe upon the first, and the first upon the first metacarpal bone.

EXTENSOR TARSII MAGNUS, E. Tarsi suralis. A name given, by some anatomists, to the gastrocnemius and soleus combined.

EXTENSOR TARSII MINOR, Plantar muscle.

EXTENUATIO, Emaciation.

EXTERGENTIA, Detergents.

EXTERNAL DISEASES, Extrin'sic Diseases, Morbi extrin'seci, Surgical diseases, (F.) Maladies externes. Those diseases which occupy the surface of the body, and form the object of surgical pathology, requiring, generally, external means, or surgical operations.

EXTERNAT. The post or office of an externe.

EXTERNUS, see House-surgeon.

EXTERNUS AURIS, Laxator tympani — e. Mallei, Laxator tympani.

EXTESICULATUS, Castratus, Eunuch.

EXTINCTIO, Death — e. Hydrargyri, Extinction of Mercury — e. Mercurii, Extinction of Mercury.

EXTINCTIO VOCIS, (F.) Extinction de voix. The French use this term for cases in which the voice is not wholly suppressed, but produces only feeble sounds: — Incomplete aphonia.

EXTINCTION OF MERCURY, Extinctio Mercurii seu Hydrargyri. Trituration of mercury with lard or other substance, until the metallic globules disappear. The mercury is then so divided, that it forms a black powder, generally considered to be a protoxide of mercury, but, perhaps, erroneously.

EXTIRPATIO, Extirpation — e. Linguae, Glossectomia — e. Testiculorum, Castratio.

EXTIRPATIO, Extirpatio, Extirpatio, Ablatio, Aphaeresis, from extirpare, (ex, and stirps, 'a root,') 'to root out.' The complete removal or destruction of any part, either by cutting instruments or the action of caustics. Thus, we speak of the extirpation of cancer, polypus, encysted tumour, &c.

EXTOMIUS, Eunuch.

EXTOZOA, Ectozoa.

EXTOZOAIRES, Ectozoa.

EXTOZOARIA, Ectozoa.

EXTRA-PELVIO-PUBI-TROCHANTÉRIEN, Obturator externus.

EXTRACTA, see Extractum — e. Fluida, see Extractum.

EXTRACTIF, Extractive.

EXTRACT'ION, Extractio, Exaeresis, Exogogē, Exoleē, Exelcys'mus, Enchylo'sis, from extrahere, extractum, (ex, and trahere, 'to draw out,') The act of removing an extraneous substance from any part of the body. Thus, a splinter is said to be extracted. It is also applied to the removal of certain parts. The catarrh is said to be extracted; a tooth is extracted, when carious, &c.

EXTRACTIVE, (F.) Extractif. Same etymon. A peculiar, immediate principle, which has been admitted in extracts. Thus, bitter extractive is the immediate principle of bitter vegetables, &c.

EXTRACTS, see Extractum — e. Fluid, see Extractum.

EXTRACTUM, Extract, Ecchylo'ma, (F.) Extrait, Apostolé. Same etymon. An extract is prepared by evaporating vegetable solutions, till a tenacious mass is obtained. When prepared from an infusion or decoction, it is called a watery; from ether, an ethereal; and from alcohol, an alcoholic or a spirituous extract. Both kinds contain all the principles of the vegetable that are soluble in the menstrua with which they are prepared; but the volatile parts are dissipated, and some of the fixed parts are decomposed; the proper extractive is oxygenized, and the virtues of the vegetable substance consequently altered or destroyed. Extracts are hard, soft, or fluid: the consistence of the soft being such as to retain the pilular form without the addition of a powder. A patent was taken out, many years ago, by a Mr. Barry, of London, for preparing them in vacuo; and, as the temperature is much lower than in the ordinary method, the virtues of the plant are less altered, and the extracts are generally green. Extracts are also prepared by diaplacement or percolation. They have, likewise, received different names, according to their predominant principle. The gummy or mucous, or mucilaginous, are those which are mainly composed of gum or mucilage. Gum tragacanth may be considered a pure gummy extract. Gelatinous extracts are those composed especially of gelatin; resinous extracts, those of a resinous character; extracto-resinous, those composed of extractive or colouring matter and resin; gum-resinous, those containing gum and resin; and sapona'ceous or sapona'ceous saline, those containing a notable quantity of saline substances and a resinous matter, so combined with mucus and other soluble substances, that they cannot be separated. Under the name Fluid Extracts—Extracta Fluida—a class of preparations has been introduced into the United States Pharmacopœia (1851), the distinctive character of which is, the concentration of the active ingredients of medicinal substances into a small bulk, in the liquid form. Extractum sarsaparillæ fluidum is one of these.

EXTRACTUM ABSINTHII CACUMINUM, Extract of Wormwood. (A decoction defecated and evaporated.) The flavour is dissipated along with the essential oil. It is a bitter tonic. Dose, gr. x to ℥j, in pill.

EXTRACTUM ACONITI, Extract of Aconite, Succus spissatus aconiti napelli, (from the inspissated juice without defecation.) It is esteemed to be narcotic and diuretic; and has been given in the cases referred to under Aconitum. Dose, gr. j, gradually increasing it.

EXTRACTUM ACONITI ALCOHOLICUM, Alcoholic Extract of Aconite. (Aconit. in pulv. crass. ℥j; Alcohol. dilut. Oiv. Moisten the aconite with half a pint of diluted alcohol: let it stand for 24 hours: transfer it to a displacement apparatus, and gradually add the remainder of the diluted alcohol. When the last portion of this has penetrated the aconite, pour in from time to time water sufficient to keep the powder covered. Stop the filtration when the liquid which passes begins to produce a precipitate, as it falls, in that which has already passed. Distil off the alcohol, and evaporate to a proper consistence.—Ph. U. S.) Dose, half a grain or a grain.

EXTRACTUM AL'OEËS, Extract of Aloes, E. aloës aquosum seu purificatum, Purified extract of aloes. (The gummy part extracted by boiling water, defecated and inspissated.) Dose, gr. v to gr. xv.

EXTRACTUM ALOES AQUOSUM, E. aloës—E. Aloës purificatum, E. aloës.

EXTRACTUM ANTHEMIDIS, E. anthemidis nobilis seu chamæmeli seu florum chamæmeli, Extract of Chamomile. The volatile oil is dissipated in this preparation. It is a pure, grateful bitter, and is tonic and stomachic. Dose, gr. x to gr. xx, in pills.

EXTRACTUM ASPARAGI, see Asparagus.

EXTRACTUM BELLADONNÆ, Succus spissatus atropæ belladonnæ, Extract of Belladonna (an expressed juice inspissated). Properties same as those of the plant. Dose, gr. ¼, gradually increased. It dilates the pupil when applied to the eye.

EXTRACTUM BELLADONNÆ ALCOHOLICUM, Alcoholic extract of Belladonna. (Prepared like the extractum aconiti alcoholicum.—Ph. U. S.) Dose, half a grain or a grain.

EXTRACTUM CANNABIS, see Bangue.

EXTRACTUM CARNIS, Extract of Flesh. An extract formed by evaporating beef tea in a water-bath. It can be kept for sale. An ounce of it may represent thirty-two ounces of meat.

EXTRACTUM CASCARILLÆ RESINOSUM, Resinous extract of cascarrilla. (Cort. cascarrilla, in pulv. crass. ℥j; Sp. vini rect. ℥iv. Digest for four days; then decant and strain; boil the residuum in ten pints of water to two; filter and evaporate the decoction, and distil the tincture in a retort, till both are thickened; then mix and evaporate to a pillular consistence.) Dose, gr. x to gr. xx, in pills.

EXTRACTUM CATECHU, Catechu—e. Catharticum, E. Colocynthis compositum.

EXTRACTUM CATHOLICUM, (F.) Extrait Catholique. This epithet is given to pills composed of aloes, black hellebore, and colocynth, resin of jalap, and scammony. See, also, Extractum colocynthis compositum.

EXTRACTUM CHAMÆMELI, E. Anthemidis—e. Cicutæ, E. Conii.

EXTRACTUM CINCHONÆ, E. Corticis Peruvia'ni seu Cinchonæ Mollæ, Extract of Cinchona or of Bark. (A decoction evaporated.) The active principles are similar to those of the bark in substance; but it is not so effectual, owing to the chymical change induced in the drug during the boiling. When reduced, by drying, to a state fit for being powdered, it is called the Hard Extract of Bark, Extractum Corticis Peruvia'ni durum, E. Cinchonæ durum. Dose, gr. x to ℥ss.

EXTRACTUM CINCHONÆ FLAVÆ, of the Pharmacopœia of the United States (1842), is directed to be prepared as follows: Yellow Bark, in coarse powder, ℥j; Alcohol, Oiv; Water, a sufficient quantity. Macerate the Peruvian bark with the alcohol for four days; then filter by a displacement apparatus, and when the liquid ceases to pass, pour gradually on the bark water sufficient to keep its surface covered. When the filtered tincture measures four pints, set it aside, and proceed with the filtration until six pints of infusion are obtained. Distil off the alcohol from the tincture and evaporate the infusion till the liquids are respectively brought to the consistence of thin honey; then mix and evaporate to form an extract.—Ph. U. S.

EXTRACTUM CINCHONÆ PAL'IDÆ (Ph. L. & E.) May be prepared in the same manner.

EXTRACTUM CINCHONÆ RESINOSUM, E. Cinchonæ lancifoliæ seu Cinchonæ Rubræ resinosum, Resinous Extract of Bark, E. Cinchonæ Resinæ. The aqueo-spirituous extract contains both the extractive and resin of the bark. Dose, gr. x to xxx.

EXTRACTUM CINCHONÆ RUBRÆ (Ph. U. S.), may be prepared in the same manner as Extractum cinchonæ flavæ.

EXTRACTUM COL'CHICI, Extract of Colchicum, (Ph. L.,) is prepared in the same manner as Extractum Aconiti. Dose, one or two grains.

EXTRACTUM COL'CHICI ACET'ICUM, Acet'ous or Acetic Extract of Colchicum. (Colchic. rad. in pulv. crass. ℥j, Acid. acet. f℥iv, Aqua q. s. To the acid add a pint of water, and mix this with the root. Put the mixture in a percolator, and pour on water until the liquid that passes has little or no taste. Evaporate to a proper consistence. Ph. U. S.) Dose, gr. j to gr. iij.

EXTRACTUM COLOCYN'THIDIS, Extract of Colocynth. (Ph. L. & E.) A cathartic, in the dose of from gr. v to ℥ss.

EXTRACTUM COLOCYN'THIDIS COMPOSITUM, E. Catharticum seu Catholicum seu Quercetani, Compound Extract of Colocynth. (Colocynth. pulp. concis. ℥vj, Aloes pulv. ℥xij, Scammony pulv. ℥iv, Cardamom pulv. ℥j, Saponis ℥iij, Alcohol. dilut. cong. Macerate the pulp in the spirit at a gentle heat for four days; strain; add the aloes and scammony; then distil off the spirit and mix in the cardamom seeds. Ph. U. S.) It is an active cathartic, and is used in obstinate visceral obstructions, &c. Dose, gr. vj to ℥ss.

EXTRACTUM CONII, E. Cicutæ, Succus cicutæ

spissatus, S. spissatus conii maculati, Extract of Hemlock. (Expressed juice inspissated without defecation.) Employed in the same cases as the conium. Dose, gr. iij to ℥j.

EXTRACTUM CONII ALCOHOLICUM, Alcoholic Extract of Hemlock. (Prepared like the Extractum aconiti alcoholicum.—Ph. U. S.) Dose, two or three grains.

EXTRACTUM CONVULVULI JALAPÆ, E. jalapæ —e. Corticis Peruviani, E. Cinchonæ.

EXTRACTUM CUBEBÆ FLUIDUM, Fluid Extract of Cubebs. (Cubebs exhausted by ether through percolation, and the solution evaporated. Ph. U. S.) Dose, from 5 to 30 minims.

EXTRACTUM DIGITALIS, Extract of Foxglove. Prepared like Extractum conii. Dose, from half a grain to two grains.

EXTRACTUM DULCAMARÆ, Extract of Bittersweet. (Prepared by displacement from bitter-sweet in coarse powder.—Ph. U. S.)

EXTRACTUM ELATERII, Elaterium, Extract of Elaterium. (The fecula of the expressed juice.) It is violently cathartic, hydragogue, and sometimes emetic. Dose, gr. ss every hour till it operates.

EXTRACTUM ERGOTÆ, Ergotin.

EXTRACTUM GENISTÆ CACUMINUM, Extract of Broom Tops. Diuretic and stomachic. Dose, ℥ss to ʒj.

EXTRACTUM GENTIANÆ, E. Gentianæ luteæ seu Radicis Gentianæ, Extract of Gentian. (The evaporated decoction.) Prepared also by displacement.—Ph. U. S.) Properties like those of Gentian. Dose, gr. x to ʒss.

EXTRACTUM GLYCYRRHIZÆ, Succus Glycyrrhizæ inspissatus seu Liquiritiæ, Spanish Juice, Italian Juice, Extract of Licorice. (The evaporated decoction.) It is demulcent, taken ad libitum.

Refined Licorice, which is sold in the form of cylinders, is made by gently evaporating a solution of the pure extract of licorice with half its weight of gum Arabic, rolling the mass and cutting it into lengths, and then polishing, by rolling them together in a box.

EXTRACTUM GRAMINIS, Extract of Grass. An extract prepared from Triticum repens. It is considered by the Germans to be a mild tonic; and is greatly used, especially in convalescence from fever. It is probably devoid of all injurious properties, and as probably totally inefficacious.

EXTRACTUM HÆMATOXYLI, E. Hamatoxyli Campechiani seu Scobis Hamatoxyli, Extract of Logwood. (The evaporated decoction.) It is astringent. Dose, gr. x to ʒj.

EXTRACTUM HELLEBORI, E. Hellebori nigri, Extract of Black Hellebore. (The evaporated decoction.) In large doses, this is cathartic; in smaller, diuretic, resolvent, [?] and emmenagogue. [?] Dose, as a cathartic, gr. x to ℥j; as an emmenagogue, gr. iij to gr. x.

EXTRACTUM HELLEBORI, of the Pharmacopœia of the United States (1842), is prepared from Black Hellebore, in coarse powder, like the Extractum aconiti alcoholicum.

EXTRACTUM HU'MULI, E. Lu'puli, Extract of hops. (The evaporated decoction.) It is tonic, anodyne, [?] diuretic. [?] Dose, gr. v to ʒj.

EXTRACTUM HYOSCYAMI, Succus spissatus Hyoscyami, Extract of Henbane. (The expressed juice, inspissated without defecation.) Its virtues are narcotic. Dose, gr. v to ℥ss.

EXTRACTUM HYOSCYAMI ALCOHOLICUM, Alcoholic Extract of Henbane. (Prepared from leaves of Hyoscyamus, in coarse powder, like the Extractum aconiti alcoholicum.—Ph. U. S.) Dose, one or two grains.

EXTRACTUM JALAPÆ, E. Convolvuli Jalapæ seu Jalapii seu Jalapi, Extract of Jalap. (A spirituous tincture distilled; and an aqueous decoction evaporated; the residua being mixed together: kept both soft and hard.) It is cathartic and hydragogue. Dose, gr. x to ℥j.

EXTRACTUM JALAPÆ OF THE Ph. U. S. is prepared like Extractum cinchonæ, Ph. U. S.

EXTRACTUM JALAPÆ RESINOSUM, Resina Jalapæ, Resinous Extract of Jalap. This is cathartic.

EXTRACTUM JUGLANDIS, Extract of Butternut. (Prepared by displacement from butternut, in coarse powder.—Ph. U. S.)

EXTRACTUM KRAMERIÆ, Extract of Rhatany. (Prepared by displacement from rhatany, in coarse powder.—Ph. U. S.)

EXTRACTUM LACTUÆ, Succus spissatus Lactuæ sativæ, Extract of Lettuce. (Leaves of fresh lettuce ℔j; beat them in a stone mortar, sprinkling them with water; then express the juice and evaporate, without allowing it to subside until it acquires a proper degree of consistence.) It is said to be narcotic and diaphoretic. Dose, gr. iij to gr. x.

An extract is, sometimes, made from the juice of the wild lettuce, Lactuca viro'sa, which is regarded as diuretic.

EXTRACTUM MARTIS ACETICUM, Ferri Acetas—e. Nucis Vomicae, see Strychnos nux vomica.

EXTRACTUM NUCIS VOMICÆ, Extract of Nux Vomica (Nucis Vomicae ℔j; Alcohol, q. s. Express the nux vomica to steam until it is softened, slice, dry and grind to powder. Put it into a percolator, and pour alcohol upon it gradually, until the liquor passes without bitterness. Filter, distil off the alcohol, and evaporate. Ph. U. S.) Dose, from half a grain to two grains.

EXTRACTUM OPII, E. Opii aquosum seu Thebaicum seu Opii gummosum, Extract of Opium, Laudanum opiatum seu simplex, Opium colatum seu depuratum. (A watery solution defecated and evaporated.) Dose, gr. ss to gr. v,—about half that of opium.

EXTRACTUM PANCHYMAGO'GUM. A drastic medicine, composed of colocyath, bruised with its seeds; senna bruised; black hellebore root, Agaric, Scammony, in powder, Extract of Aloe, and Powder of Diarrhodon.

EXTRACTUM PAPAVERIS, E. Papaveris somniferi seu Papaveris albi, Extract of white poppy. (The decoction evaporated.) It possesses nearly the same virtues as opium, but is much weaker. Dose, gr. ij to ℥j.

EXTRACTUM PAPERÆ, Extract of Pareira Brava. Prepared like Extractum Hæmatoxyli. Dose, ten grains to half a drachm.

EXTRACTUM PIPERIS FLUIDUM, Fluid Extract of Black Pepper. (Black pepper exhausted by ether through percolation, the solution evaporated, and the piperin in crystals separated by expression. Ph. U. S.) Dose, one or two minims.

EXTRACTUM PODOPHYLLI, Extract of May-apple. (Prepared from podophyllum, in coarse powder, in the same manner as the Extract of cinchona.—Ph. U. S.) Dose, gr. v to gr. xv, as a cathartic.

EXTRACTUM PURGANS, see Hedera helix—e. Quercetani, E. Coloecynthidis compositum.

EXTRACTUM QUASSIÆ, Extract of Quassia. (Prepared by displacement from Quassia rasped.—Ph. U. S.) Dose, as a tonic, five grains.

EXTRACTUM CORTICIS QUERCÛS, Extract of oak bark. (The decoction evaporated.) It is astringent and tonic.

EXTRACTUM QUINÆ, Quinæ sulphus impuræ. This is made by evaporating the liquor poured off the crystals of sulphate of quinia to the consistence of a pilular mass. Twenty-four grains will generally arrest an intermittent.

EXTRACTUM RHEI, Extract of Rhubarb. (A solution in diluted alcohol evaporated.) Uses like those of the powdered root. Dose, gr. x. to ℥ss.

EXTRACTUM RHEI FLUIDUM, Fluid Extract of Rhubarb. (Rhej in pulv. crass. ℥viii, Sacchar. ℥v, Tinct. Zingib. f℥ss, Ol. fenicul., Ol. anis. āā ℥iv; Alcohol. dilut. q. s.) Digest the rhubarb, mixed with an equal bulk of coarse sand, with ℥xij of the diluted alcohol for 24 hours. Put the mass into the percolator, and pour on diluted alcohol until the liquid that passes has little odour or taste of rhubarb; evaporate to f℥v; dissolve it in the sugar, and mix the tincture of ginger and oils. Ph. U. S.) Dose, f℥j.

EXTRACTUM RUDII, Extract of Rudiis. (F.) Extrait de Rudiis. Pills made of colocynth, agaric, scammony, roots of black hellebore and jalap, socotrine aloes, cinnamon, mace, cloves, and alcohol.

EXTRACTUM RUTÆ GRAVEOLENTIS, E. Rutæ seu foliorum Rutæ, Extract of Rue. (A decoction evaporated.) Tonic, stomachic. The volatile oil being dissipated in the boiling, this is not a good preparation. Dose, gr. x to ℥j.

EXTRACTUM FOLIORUM SABIÑÆ, Extract of Savine. (A decoction evaporated.) Tonic. The same remarks may be made on this preparation as on the last. Dose, gr. x to ℥ss.

EXTRACTUM SANGUINIS BOVINI, see Blood.

EXTRACTUM SARSAPARILLÆ, Extract of Sarsaparilla. (A strained decoction evaporated.) Virtues the same as those of the powdered root. Dose, gr. x to ℥j. Extractum Sarsaparillæ of the United States Pharmacopœia is prepared from Sarsaparilla, in coarse powder, like the Extractum aconiti alcoholicum.

EXTRACTUM SARSAPARILLÆ FLUIDUM, E. Sarsæ Liq'uidum, E. Sarsæ Fluidum, Fluid Extract of Sarsaparilla. (Sarsaparill. concis. et contus. ℥xvj, Glycyrrhiz. contus., Sassafr. rad. contus., āā ℥ij, Mezerei concis. ℥vj, Sacchar. ℥xij, Alcohol. dilut. Oviij.) Macerate, with the exception of the sugar, for 14 days; express and filter: evaporate to f℥xij; and add the sugar. Ph. U. S.) Dose, a fluidrachm.

EXTRACTUM SATURNI, GOULARD'S, Liquor plumbi subacetatis—e. Scobis hæmatoxyli, E. hæmatoxyli.

EXTRACTUM SENNÆ FLUIDUM, Fluid Extract of Senna. (Sennæ in pulv. crass. ℥ijss; Sacchar. ℥xx; Ol. Fenicul. f℥j; Sp. Ether. compos. ℥ij; Alcohol. dilut. Oiv.) Mix the senna and diluted alcohol; let the mixture stand for 24 hours; put it into a percolator, and gradually pour on water mixed with one-third its bulk of alcohol, until a gallon and a half of liquid shall have passed; evaporate to f℥xx; add the sugar, and, when it is dissolved, the compound spirit of ether holding the oil in solution. Dose, f℥ss.

EXTRACTUM SPIGÆLIÆ ET SENNÆ FLUIDUM, Fluid Extract of Spigelia and Senna. Spigel. in pulv. crass. ℥ij; Sennæ in pulv. crass. ℥vj; Sacchar. Biss; Potass. carbon. ℥vj; Ol. Carui, Ol. Anisi, āā f℥ss; Alcohol. dilut. q. s. Pour on the spigelia and senna Oij of diluted alcohol; let it stand for 48 hours; place it in a percolator, and pour on gradually diluted alcohol until half a gallon has passed: evaporate to a pint; add the carbonate of potassa; and afterwards the sugar, previously triturated with the oils, and dissolve. Ph. U. S.)

EXTRACTUM STRAMONII, E. Stramo'nii foliorum, (Ph. U. S.), Extract of Stramonium or of Stramonium leaves. (The expressed juice inspissated.) The Extractum Stramonii Sem'inis, Extract of Stramonium Seed, is made from the powdered seed by means of diluted alcohol, and with the aid of the percolator:—the solution being evaporated. Ph. U. S.) Used as a narcotic in asthma and other spasmodic affections. Dose, gr. ij to gr. x.

EXTRACTUM STYRACIS, see Syrax.

EXTRACTUM TARAX'ACI, E. Herbæ et Radicis Tarax'aci, Extract of Dandelion. (The strained juice evaporated.) It has been considered deobstruent, laxative, and diuretic. Dose, gr. x to ℥j.

EXTRACTUM THEBAICUM, E. Opii.

EXTRACTUM UVÆ URSI, Extract of Uva Ursi. (The Decoction evaporated.) Dose, gr. v to gr. xxx.

EXTRACTUM VALERIANÆ, Extract of Valerian. (An expressed decoction evaporated.) The virtues of the valerian being dependent upon its essential oil, this is an objectionable preparation. Dose, gr. x to ℥j.

A fluid extract of Valerian, Extractum Valerianæ flu'idum, has been introduced into the last edition of the Pharmacopœia U. S. (1851). It is prepared by exhausting the valerian by ether and alcohol, through the percolator, and evaporating. Dose, f℥j or f℥ij.

EXTRA'NEOUS BODY, Foreign body, from extra, 'without.' Corpus extraneum, C. ecter'num, C. alie'num, (F.) Corps étranger. Any solid, liquid, or gaseous substance, inanimate or animate, proceeding from without, or formed in the body; and which constitutes no part of the body, but occupies, in the substance of the textures, or some of the cavities, a place foreign to it.

EXTRAVASATION, Extravasa'tio, Extrava'sion, from extra, 'out of,' and vasa, 'vessels.' Escape of a fluid—extravasatum—from the vessel containing it, and infiltration or effusion of the fluid into the surrounding textures.

EXTRAVASATUM, see Extravasatio.

EXTRAVASION, Extravasation.

EXTREMITY, Extrem'itas, (F.) Extrémité; from extremus, 'the outermost;' the end or termination of a thing. The limbs, acrote'ria, have been so called,—as the upper and lower extremities. See Membrum. It has been, also, used to express the last moments of life; as when we say, a patient is in 'extremity,' (F.) le malade est à l'extrémité, à toute extrémité.

EXTRIN'SIC, Extrin'secus. 'From without.' That which comes from without. This term has been used for muscles, which surround certain organs and attach them to the neighbouring parts; in order to distinguish them from other muscles, which enter into the intimate composition of those organs, and which have been named intrinsic. Thus, there are extrinsic and intrinsic muscles of the tongue, ear, &c.

EXTROVERSIO, Exstrophia.

EXTUBERANTIA, Protuberance.

EXTUBERATIO, Protuberance.

EXTUMEFACTIO, Swelling.

EXTUS'IO, from ex, and tussis, 'a cough.' 'I cough with expectoration.'

EXU'BER, from ex, 'out of,' 'devoid of,' and ubera, 'breasts;' Apogalactos. 'A child which has been weaned.'

EXUDATION CORPUSCLES, see Corpuscles, exudation.

EXULCERATIO, Ecthlamma, Ulceration—e.

EXUMBILICATIO, Exomphalos.

EXUSTIO, Cauterization.

EXUTORIUM, Fonticulus.

EXUTORY, Fonticulus.

EXUVIÆ, see Exuviation.

EXUVIATION, Exuvia'tio, from exuere, 'to put off.' The shedding or casting off of parts, as the deciduous teeth, the skins of serpents, &c., which are hence called Exuvie.

EYE, Sax. eaꝝ, Teuton. Auge, Oculus, Ops, Onna, Ophthalmos, Illos, Op'tilos (Doric,) Visorium Org'anum, (Sc.) Ee, plural Een, (F.) Œil. The eye is the immediate organ of vision. It is seated in the orbit, while its dependencies, called by Haller Tutam'ina Oc'uli, occupy the circumference of the cavity, and are composed of the eyebrows, the eyelids, cilia, glands of Meibomius, &c. The Ball, Globe, or Bulb of the Eye, Bulbus Oc'uli, is covered anteriorly by the tunica conjunctiva; is moved by six muscles, four straight, two oblique, and is constituted of membranes, as the sclerotic, cornea, choroid, tunica Jacobi, retina, iris, hyaloid, and, in the fœtus, the membrana pupillaris; and of fluids, called Humours, or Media,—the aqueous, crystalline, and vitreous. The eyeball is invested with a membranous tunic, which separates it from the other structures of the orbit, and forms a smooth, hollow surface, by which its motions are facilitated. This investment has been called cellular capsule of the eye, ocular capsule, tunica vaginalis oc'uli, vag'inal coat, and submuscular fascia of the eye. The vessels of the eye proceed from the ophthalmic artery. The nerves, except the optic, are chiefly furnished from the ophthalmic ganglion. The following are the dimensions, &c., of the organ, on the authority of Petit, Young, Gordon, and Brewster:

Length of the antero-posterior diameter of the eye.....	0.91
Vertical chord of the cornea.....	0.45
Versed sine of the cornea.....	0.11
Horizontal chord of the cornea.....	0.47
Size of pupil seen through the cornea, 0.27 to	0.13
Size of pupil diminished by magnifying power of cornea to, from.....	0.25 to 0.12
Radius of the anterior surface of the crystalline.....	0.30
Radius of posterior surface.....	0.22
Principal focal distance of lens.....	1.73
Distance of the centre of the optic nerve from the foramen centrale of Sömmerring...	0.11
Distance of the iris from the cornea.....	0.10

Distance of the iris from the anterior surface of the crystalline.....	0.02
Field of vision above a horizontal line, 50° } 120°
Field of vision below a horizontal line, 70° }
Field of vision in a horizontal plane.....	150°
Diameter of the crystalline in a woman above fifty years of age.....	0.378
Diameter of the cornea.....	0.400
Thickness of the crystalline.....	0.172
Thickness of the cornea.....	0.042

FACE, Facies, Vultus, Voltus, Proso'pon, (F.)

Face. The face is the anterior part of the head. It is formed of 13 bones, viz., the two superior maxillary, the two malar, the two ossa nasi, the two ossa unguis, the vomer, the two ossa spongiosa inferiora, the two palate bones, and the inferior maxillary, without including the frontal portion of the os frontis, and the 32 teeth, which may be considered to form part of it. Its numerous muscles are chiefly destined for the organs of sight, hearing, taste, and smell. Its arteries proceed from the external carotid: its veins end in the jugular, and its nerves draw their origin immediately from the brain.

The face experiences alterations in disease, which it is important to attend to. It is yellow in jaundice, pale and puffy in dropsy; and its expression is very different, according to the seat of irritation, so that, in infants, by an attention to medical physiognomy, we can often detect the seat of disease.

Hippocrates has well depicted the change which it experiences in one exhausted by long sickness, by great evacuations, excessive hunger, watchfulness, &c., threatening dissolution. Hence this state has been called Facies Hippocrat'ica, Facies Cadaver'ica, F. Tortu'alis. In this, the nose is pinched; the eyes are sunk; the temples hollow; the ears cold, and retracted; the skin of the forehead tense, and dry; the complexion livid; the lips pendent, relaxed, and cold, &c.

The term Face (F.) is likewise given to one of the aspects of an organ; thus, we say, the superior face of the stomach.

FACE AGUE, Neuralgia, facial.

FACE INJECTÉE, see Vultueux—f. Vultueuse, see Vultueux.

FACET', (F.) Facette. Diminutive of Face. A small face. A small, circumscribed portion of the surface of a bone, as the articular facette of a bone.

FACHINGEN, MINERAL WATERS OF. These springs are at no great distance from those of Geilenau, and two miles north of Wisbaden. They contain free carbonic acid: carbonate, sulphate, and phosphate of soda; chloride of sodium, carbonate of lime, magnesia, and iron.

FACIAL, Facialis, from facies, 'the face.' Belonging to, or connected with, the face.

FACIAL ANGLE, see Angle, facial.

FACIAL ARTERY, La'bial artery, An'gular or external max'illary artery, A. palato-labial—(Ch.), is a branch of the external carotid, which rises beneath the digastric, and is distributed to almost every part of the face. It furnishes the inferior palatal, submental, superior labial, inferior labial, and dorsalis nasi.

FACIAL LINE, see Angle, facial.

FACIAL NERVE, Ramus du'rior sept'imæ conjugationis, Sympathet'icus minor, Par sept'imum seu facia'le, Commun'icans fac'iei nervus, Portio dura of the 7th pair, Respiratory nerve of the face. This nerve arises from the inferior and lateral part of the tuber annulare, in the groove which separates it from the medulla oblongata, external to the corpora olivaria, and by the side of the auditory nerve. It issues from the cranium by the meatus auditorius internus; enters the aqueduct of Fallopius; receives a branch of the Vidian nerve; forms a gangliform swelling—Intumescent'ia gangliform'is;—sends off filaments to the internal muscles of the malleus and stapes; furnishes, according to many anatomists, that called Chorda Tympani; makes its exit at the foramen stylo-mastoideum, and divides into two branches—the temporo-facial, and cervico-facial. On the face it is termed Pes anseri'nus, Plexus nervorum anseri'nus. See Portio Wrisbergii.

FACIAL VEIN, Pal'ato-labial—(Ch.), arises between the skin and frontalis muscle, and bears the name Vena Fronta'lis, (F.) Veine frontale ou V. Préparate. It then descends, vertically, towards the greater angle of the eye, where it is called Angula'ris; and afterwards descends, obliquely, on the face, to open into the internal jugular, after having received branches, which correspond with those of the facial artery. It is only in the latter part of its course that it is called Facial Vein. Chaussier calls the external carotid artery, Facial Artery.

FA'CIENT, faciens, 'making,' from facio, 'I make.' A suffix, as in Calefacient, Rubefacient, &c., 'warm making,' 'red making.'

FACIES, Face—f. Cadaverica, see Face—f. Concava pedis, Sole—f. Hippocratica, see Face—f. Inferior pedis, Sole—f. Tortualis, see Face.

FACTICE, Factitious.

FACTIT'IOUS, Factit'ius, (F.) Factice, from facere, factum, 'to make.' Artificial. That which is made by art, in opposition to what is natural, or found already existing in nature. Thus, we say, factitious mineral waters, for artificial mineral waters.

FACULTAS, Faculty—f. Auctrix, Plastic force—f. Formatrix, Plastic force—f. Nutrix, Plastic force—f. Vegetativa, Plastic force—f. Zotica, Vis vitalis.

FACULTATES NATURALES, see Function.

FAC'ULTY, Facultas, Dy'namis, Power, Virtue, (F.) Faculté, from facilis, (itself from facere, 'to make,') 'what can be made or done.' The power of executing any function or act. The collection of the intellectual faculties constitutes the understanding. We say, also, vital faculties for vital properties, &c. Faculty likewise means the whole body of the medical profession, and, also, a body of medical or other professors.

FÆCAL, Stercoraceus—f. Retention, Constipation.

FÆCES, Plural of Fæx; Feces, Chersæ, 'the dregs of any thing.' Feculence, (F.) Fèces. The alvine evacuations are so called; (F.) Garderobes; the excrements, Impurita'tes alvinæ, Fæcal matter. See Excrement.

FÆCES INDURATÆ, Scybala.

FÆCOSITAS, Feculence.

FÆCULA, Fecula.

FÆCULENTIA, Feculence.

FÆCUNDATIO, Fecundatio.

FÆCUNDITAS, Fecundity.

FÆX, Feculence.

FAGARA OCTAN'DRA, Xanthox'ylum octan'dra, Elaph'rium tomento'sum, Amy'ris tomento'sum, from fagus, 'the beech,' which it resembles. Ord. Rutaceæ. The systematic name of the plant, which affords Tacamaha'ca, a resinous substance, that exudes from the tree Tacamahaca, which has a fragrant, delightful smell, was formerly in high estimation, as an ingredient in warm, stimulating plasters, and was given internally, like the balsams generally. The East India Tacamahac, Bal'samum Vir'idæ seu Cal'aba seu Mariæ, Oleum Mariæ, (F.) Baume de Calaba, Baume vert, B. Mariæ, is yielded by Calophyllum inophyllum seu Balsama'ria Inophyllum.

The name Tacamahac is also given to a resin furnished by Populus balsamif'era seu tacamahaca, (F.) Peuplier baumier ou de la Caroline, which grows in the northern parts of America and Siberia.

FAGARA PIPERITA, (F.) Fagarier poivré; a native of Japan, possesses the qualities of pepper, and is used as such by the Japanese. It is, also, employed as a rubefacient cataplasm.

FAGARAS'TRUM CAPENSE. Nat. Ord. Xanthoxyleæ. A South African plant, the fruit of which is known to the Colonists as wild Cardamom; and, on account of its aromatic qualities, is prescribed in flatulency and paralysis.

FAGARIER POIVRÉ, Fagara octandra.

FAGOPYRUM, Polygonum fagopyrum.

FAGUS, F. sylvatica.

FAGUS CASTA'NEA. The systematic name of the Chestnut Tree; Castanea, C. vulg'aris seu vesca, Lo'pima, Mata, Glans Jovis THEOPHRASTI, Ju'piter's or Sardinian Acorn; the Common Chestnut, (F.) Châtaignier commun, of the Oak Family. Ord. Cupuliferæ. Ser. Syst. Monœcia Polyandria. The Chestnut, Castanea nux, (F.) Châtaigne, is farinaceous and nutritious, but not easy of digestion.

FAGUS CASTANEA PU'MILA. The Chin'capin or Chinquapin, Castanea Pumila, (F.) Châtaignier nain. The nut of this American tree is eaten like the chestnut. The bark, Castanea (Ph. U. S.), has been used in intermittents.

FAGUS PURPUREA, F. sylvatica.

FAGUS SYLVAT'ICA. The systematic name of the Beech, Fagus, F. sylves'tris seu purp'ura, Oxya, Balan'da, Valan'ida; the Beech Tree, (F.) Hêtre. The Beech-nut or Beech-mast, (F.) Faine, affords an oil, by expression, which is of a palatable character, and is eaten in some places instead of butter. It has been supposed to be a good vermifuge, but it is no better than any mild oil.

FAGUS SYLVESTRIS, F. sylvatica.

FAIBLESSE, Debility.

FAIM, Hunger — f. Canine, Boulimia — f. de Loup, Fames lupina.

FAINE, see Fagus sylvatica.

FAINT, see Syncope.

FAINTING, Syncope.

FAINTING-FIT, Syncope.

FAINTISHNESS, see Syncope.

FAINTNESS, Languor, Syncope.

FAIRBURN, MINERAL WATERS OF. The mineral waters at this place, which is in the county of Ross, in Scotland, are sulphureous, and frequented.

FAIRNTICKLED, see Ephelides.

FAISANDÉES (VIANDES), see Hyposaprus.

FAISCEAU, Fasciculus — f. Intermédiaire de Wrisberg, Portio Wrisbergii — f. Petit, Fasciculus.

FAIX, Fœtus.

FALCADINA, see Scherlievo.

FALCES, see Falx.

FAL'CIFORM, Falciformis, Drepanoïdes, from falx, falcis, 'a scythe,' and forma, 'shape.' Having the shape of a scythe. This term has been applied to different parts. See Falx, and Sinus.

FALCIFORM EXPANSION OF THE FASCIA LATA, is the scythe-shaped reflection of the fascia lata, which forms, outwards and upwards, the opening for the vena saphæna, and is attached to the crural arch by its superior extremity, forming the anterior paries of the canal of the same name.

FALLACIA, Hallucination.

FALLACIA OPTICA. An optic illusion.

FALLAND-EVYL, Epilepsy.

FALLING-DOWN, Epilepsy.

FALLING SICKNESS, Epilepsy.

FALLOPIAN TUBE, see Tube, Fallopian.

FALLPOISON, Amianthum muscætoxicum.

FALLTRANCK, Faltranck (G.), literally, a drink against falls. A vulnerary. It is a mixture of several aromatic and slightly astringent plants, which grow chiefly in the Swiss Alps, and hence the name—Vulnéraire Suisse—given to such dried plants cut into fragments. They are called, also, Espèces Vulnéraires, and Thé Suisse. Within the present century, in England, a kind of vulnerary beer was often prescribed, in country practice, in all cases of inward bruises. It bore the name Cerevis'ia nigra, or black beer, and was formed by infusing certain reputed vulnerary herbs in beer or ale.

The infusion of the Falltranck is aromatic, and slightly agreeable, but of no use in the cases for which it has been particularly recommended.

FALMOUTH, CLIMATE OF. The climate of Falmouth, in Cornwall, England, resembles that of Penzance: and, like it, is in many respects, a favourable retreat for the phthisical during the winter months.

FALSA VIA, False passage.

FALSE, Falsus, Nothus, Pseudo, Spu'rious, Bastard, (F.) Faux, Fausse. This epithet has been frequently added to peripneumony, pleurisy, &c., to designate a disease similar to these, but less severe. Most commonly, a severe catarrh or pleurodynia has received the name. See Peripneumonia notha.

FALSE PASSAGE, Falsa Via, (F.) Fausse Route. An accidental passage, made in surgical operations, and particularly in introducing the catheter. The catheter is sometimes passed through into the rectum.

FALSE WATERS, Hydrallan'te, False Delivery. Water, which sometimes collects between the amnion and chorion, and is commonly discharged before the birth of the child.

We say, also, False Ribs, False Rhubarb, &c.

FALSETTO VOICE, see Voice.

FALSIFICATION, Adultera'tio, from falsus, 'false,' and facere, 'to make.' A fraudulent imitation or alteration of an aliment or medicine by different admixtures. Manga'nium, Manganisa'tio. It is synonymous with adulteration and sophistication.

TABLE OF COMMON FALSIFICATIONS OF SOME OF THE MOST USEFUL DRUGS, &c.

MEDICINES.	ADULTERATIONS.	MODE OF DETECTION.
ACACLE GUMMI.	Gum Senegal	G. S. is clammy and tenacious. The A. G. is perfectly soluble in water, and its solution limpid.
ACETUM DESTILLATUM.	Sulphuric Acid	Acetate of barytes causes a white precipitate.
	Nitric Acid	By evaporating it, the residuum deflagrates, when thrown on burning charcoal.
	Copper	Supersaturate with ammonia—a blue colour is produced.
ACIDUM MURIATICUM.	Lead	Sulphuretted hydrogen causes a dark precipitate.
	Sulphuric Acid	Deposites by evaporation the salts it may contain; precipitates with solution of hydrochlorate of baryta if it contains sulphuric acid.
— NITRICUM.	Muriatic and Sulphuric Acids .	The presence of chlorine is indicated by a precipitate with nitrate of silver: that of sulphuric acid by the same result with hydrochlorate of baryta.
— SULPHURICUM.	Muriatic and Nitric Acids .	The presence of muriatic and nitric acid is indicated by the smell, when the acid tested is strongly heated.
— CITRICUM.	Tartaric and Oxalic Acids .	Their presence is indicated by forming a granular sediment in a concentrated solution of a neutral salt of potassa.

MEDICINES.	ADULTERATIONS.	MODE OF DETECTION.
ÆTHER RECTIFICATUS.	Too dilute. Sulphuric Acid Alcohol	The S. G. detects this. By acetate of baryta. Precipitate white. With phosphorus a milky instead of limpid solution is formed.
AQUA AMMONIÆ. AMMONIÆ CARRO- NAS.	Carbonic Acid	A precipitation occurs on adding a solution of muriate of lime. It should be capable of complete volatilization by heat.
AMMONIACUM.....		The Gutta Ammoniaci are white, clear, and dry. The lump Ammoniacum, lapis Ammoniaci , is often adulterated with common resin.
AMMONII SULPHURE- TUM. Lead. Arsenic Manganese and Iron. Copper	It ought to be entirely volatilized by a red heat. Imparts a foliated texture, and is not vaporizable. A smell of garlic is emitted when thrown on live coals, &c. Are not vaporizable. The solution assumes a blue colour, when super-saturated with ammonia. It may be suspected when the salt deliquesces.
ARGENTI NITRAS.	Nitrate of Potassa.	The adulteration with nitrate of potassa is easily recognized by the fracture of a stick of it, which is radiated when pure, and granular if adulterated; or by precipitating a solution of the salts with a sufficient quantity of muriatic acid, and evaporating the clear liquor: the nitrate of potassa or other salts will remain.
ABSENICUM ALBUM.	Chalk, Sulphate of Lime, Sulphate of Baryta.	Not volatilizable by heat.
BALSAMUM PERUVI- ANUM.	A mixture of Resin and some Volatile Oil, with Benzoin.	Not easily detected.
CAPSICUM. Cayenne Pepper.	Chloride of Sodium Red Lead	This disposes it to deliquesce. Digest in acetic acid, and add a solution of sulphuret of ammonia—a dark-coloured precipitate will be produced.
CASTOREUM. Castor.	A mixture of dried blood, gum ammoniac, and a little real castor, stuffed into the scrotum of a goat. Earth or Peasmeal	Smell and taste will generally detect the fraud. May be suspected when the cake is brittle and colour grayish.
CERA FLAVA. Yellow Wax.	Resin Tallow	Put it in cold alcohol, which will dissolve the resin, without acting on the wax. Is known by the greater softness and unctuousity, and its smell when melted. Turmeric is generally added in this case to obviate the paleness.
CERA ALBA. White Wax.	White Lead Tallow	Melt the wax, the oxide will subside. The cake has not its ordinary translucency.
CINCHONA. Bark.	This is variously adulterated, but generally with the Carthagena and other inferior barks.	Can only be detected by practice, and examining into the quantity of quinia or cinchonia it contains.
COCCUS. Cochineal.	Pieces of dough formed in moulds, and coloured with cochineal.	Throw it into water, the adulteration will appear.
COLOMBA.	The true is distinguishable from the false Colomba by adding to an infusion of the root, a few drops of solution of sulph. iron, which gives to the infusion of the false Colomba a greenish black colour; but produces no change in the other.
COPAIBA. Balsam of Copaiva.	Oil	If it does not retain its spherical form when dropped into water, its adulteration may be inferred. Mix one part of strong liquid ammonia of 22°. with three parts of copaiba. If pure, the mixture will, in a few minutes, become transparent; if not, it will remain opaque.
CROCUS. Saffron.	Fibres of smoked Beef.. Petals of the Calendula officinalis, and Carthamus Tinctorius.	Affords an unpleasant odour when thrown on live coals. Infuse the specimen in hot water, and the difference will be perceptible.

MEDICINES.	ADULTERATIONS.	MODE OF DETECTION.
CUBEBA. Cubebs.	Turkey Yellow Berries, or the dried fruit of the Rhamnus Catharticus.	Detected by attentive examination.
CUSPARLE CORTEX. Angustura Bark.	False Angustura sometimes sold for it.	The epidermis of the true Cusparia is characterized by being covered with a matter resembling the rust of iron.
GUAIACI RESINA. Resin of Guaiacum.	Common Resin Manchineel Gun	Detected by the turpentine smell emitted when thrown upon hot coals. Add to the tincture a few drops of spirit of nitre, and dilute with water; the guaiacum is precipitated—the adulteration floats in the white strie.
HYDRARGYRI CHLORIDUM MITE. Calomel.	Corrosive Sublimate, and Subnitrate of Bismuth.	A precipitation will be produced by the carbonate of potass, from a solution made by boiling the suspected sample with a small portion of muriate of ammonia in distilled water; or, the presence of deuto-chloride of mercury is indicated, by warming gently a small quantity of calomel in alcohol, filtering and adding to the clear liquor some lime-water, by which a reddish yellow precipitate is afforded. When calomel is rubbed with a fixed alkali, it ought to become intensely black, and not exhibit any orange hue.
HYDRARGYRI OXIDUM RUBRUM. Red Precipitate.	Red Lead	Digest in acetic acid: add sulphuret of ammonia, which will produce a dark coloured precipitate. It should be totally volatilized by heat.
HYDRARGYRI SULPHURETUM RUBRUM	Red Lead	Digest in acetic acid, and add sulphuret of ammonia—a black precipitate will be produced.
HYDRARGYRI SULPHURETUM NIGRUM.	Ivory Black	Throw a suspected portion on hot coals—the residuum will detect the fraud.
IODINE.	Plumbago, Charcoal, and Oxide of Manganese.	The tests of its purity are—that it is perfectly soluble in ether. Heated on a piece of glass or porcelain, it sublimes without residuum.
JALAPÆ RADIX. Jalap Root.	Bryony Root, spurious or false Jalap Root, and Liquorice Root.	Bryony root is of a paler colour, and less compact texture, and does not easily burn at the flame of a candle. Liquorice is detected by the taste.
MAGNESIA.	Lime Sulphuret of Lime	Detected by the solution in dilute sulphuric acid affording a precipitate with oxalate of ammonia. Gives off when moistened, the smell of sulphuretted hydrogen.
MAGNESIÆ SUBCARBONAS. Carbonate of Magnesia.	Chalk Gypsum	Detected by adding dilute sulphuric acid to the suspected substance, when, if chalk be present, there will be a white insoluble precipitate. Boil in distilled water, and test the solution by a barytic and oxalic reagent.
MANNA.	A factitious article, consisting of honey or sugar, mixed with scammony, is sometimes sold for it.	The colour, weight, transparency and taste detect it.
MORPHIA ET EJUS SALES. Morphia and its Salts.	Morphia and its salts, when placed in contact with nitric acid, are coloured red; with persalts of iron, blue. They are perfectly soluble in warm alcohol, and acidulated warm water. When morphia is mixed with narcotina, the adulteration is ascertained by mixing them with sulphuric ether, which dissolves the narcotina, without sensibly affecting the morphia.
MOSCHUS. Musk.	Dried Blood Asphaltum Fine particles of Lead	The bag must not appear to have been opened. This may be suspected, if it emits a fetid smoke when inflamed. Discovered by its melting and running, before it inflames. Rub with water. The metallic particles will subside.
OLEA DESTILLATA. Essential Oils.	Fixed Oils Alcohol	Touch writing paper with it, and hold it before the fire: fixed oil leaves a stain of grease. Add water. A milkiness and increase of temperature occurs.
OLEUM RICINI. Castor Oil.	Olive or Almond or Poppy Oil.	Alcohol S. G. .820 will mix with any proportion of castor oil, whilst it dissolves very little of the others.

MEDICINES.	ADULTERATIONS.	MODE OF DETECTION.
OPIMUM.	Extract of Liquorice, Bullets and Stones sometimes in it; Extract of Poppy, of Chelidonium majus; G. Arabic, G. Tragacanth, Linseed Oil, Cow's Dung.	The best opium is covered with leaves and the reddish capsules of a species of Rumex . The inferior kinds have capsules adherent. It is bad when soft and friable, when intensely black or mixed with many impurities, and when sweet. The quantity of morphia affords the best test.
POTASSII IODIDUM. Iodide of Potassium.	Chlorides of Potassium and Sodium, Nitrate of Potassa.	The adulteration is ascertained by precipitating a solution of the salt with nitrate of silver, and treating the precipitate with ammonia, which dissolves the chloride of silver, without acting upon the iodide of this metal.
QUINÆ SULPHAS. Sulphate of Quinia.	Mannite.....	Leaves no residue when submitted to calcination: is perfectly soluble in warm alcohol, and in water slightly acidulated with sulphuric acid.
STRYCHNÆ ET EJUS SALES. Strychnia and its Salts.	Brucea.....	They are free from brucia when no colour is produced by contact with nitric acid.
ZINCI OXYDUM. Flowers of Zinc.	Chalk..... White Lead.....	Sulphuric acid excites an effervescence. Sulphuric acid forms an insoluble sulphate of lead.

FALTRANCK, Falltranck.

FALX. Anatomists have given this name to several membranous reflections having the shape of a falx or scythe.

FALX CEREBEL'LI, Falx minor, Septum Cerebel'li seu parvum occipita'le, Proces'sus falcifor'mis Cerebel'li, (F.) Faux du cervelet, Septum median du cervelet, (Ch.), is a triangular process of the dura mater opposite the internal occipital protuberance. Its base is attached to the middle of the tentorium, and its top or apex bifurcates, to proceed to the sides of the foramen magnum. Its convex surface is towards the cranium, and its concave in the fissure or groove, which separates the two lobes of the cerebellum.

FALX CER'EERI, F. major, Vertical superior longitudinal proc'ess, Mediastinum cerebri, Septum Cerebri, (F.) Faux du cerveau, Repli longitudinal de la meninge, (Ch.), Proces'sus falcifor'mis dura matris. The greatest process of the dura mater. It extends from the fore to the hind part of the skull, on the median line; is broad behind and narrow before, and is lodged in the groove which separates the hemispheres from each other—the interlobular fissure. At its superior part is situated the longitudinal sinus (superior), and at its lower, corresponding to the edge of the scythe, the inferior longitudinal sinus. Its anterior extremity is attached to the crista galli; its posterior is continuous with the tentorium cerebelli, and contains the straight sinus.

FALX MAJOR, Falx cerebri—f. Minor, Falx cerebelli.

FALX OF THE PERITONE'UM, GREAT, F. peritone'i max'ima, (F.) Grande faux du péritoine, Faux de la Veine Ombilicale, Falx of the umbilical vein, is a reflection of the peritoneum, which ascends from the umbilicus to the anterior and inferior surface of the liver.

FALCES OF THE PERITONE'UM, LESSER, Falces Peritone'i min'ime, (F.) Petites faux du péritoine, are the lateral ligaments of the liver and the reflections which the peritoneum forms, raised up by the umbilical arteries.

FALX OF THE UMBILICAL VEIN, Falx, great, of the Peritoneum.

FAME, Lancet.

FAMEL'ICA FEBRIS, from fames, 'hunger.' Fever accompanied with insatiable hunger.—Sylvius.

FAMELICUS, Hungry.

FAMES, Hunger—f. Bovina, Boulimia—f. Canina, Boulimia.

FAMES LUP'INA, Lycorea'is, (F.) Faim de Loup. Authors have described, under this name, a kind of boulimia, or depravation of the digestive function, in which the patient eats voraciously, and passes his food, almost immediately afterwards, per anum.

FAMEX, Contusio.

FAMIGERATIS'SIMUM EMLAS'TRUM, from fama, 'fame,' and gero, 'I wear.' A plaster, extolled in ague, and made of aromatic irritating substances. It was applied to the wrist.

FAMILIARICA SELLA, Close stool.

FAMILY DISEASES, see Hereditary.

FAMIS, Contusio.

FAMIX, Contusio.

FANCULUM, Anethum.

FANCY MARK, Nævus.

FANFECKLES, Ephelides.

FANG, Radix.

FANON (F.) from (G.) Fahne, 'a banner,' 'ensign,' 'standard.' Fer'ula, Lec'tulus stramin'eus, Thor'ulus stramin'eus. A splint of a particular shape, employed in fractures of the thigh and leg to keep the bones in contact.

The Fanons were divided into true and false.

The true consists of a cylinder of straw, strongly surrounded with a cord or riband, in the centre of which a stick is usually placed to ensure its solidity. The false consists of a thick piece of linen, made flat like a compress, and folded at the extremities. It was placed between the fractured limb and the true fanon. The Drop-fanon is a large piece of common cloth placed between the fractured limb, in which the fanon or lateral splints are rolled.

FANTICKLES, Ephelides.

FANTOM, Phantom, Phanto'ma, from φαντασμα, 'a spectre.' (F.) Phantôme, Fantôme. This word has two acceptations. It means the spectres and images which the imagination presents to the sick, when asleep or awake; and, also, the figure called, also, Man'ikin, Man'ikin, and Man'akin, (F.) Mannequin, on which surgeons practice the application of bandages, or the accoucheur the manual part of midwifery.—Phanto'ma obstetric'ium.

Fantom or Phantom Tumour is one that forms, in the abdomen for example, simulating organic disease, and occasionally exceedingly deceptive.

FARADISA'TION, Far'adism; from Faraday, the celebrated physicist. A term proposed by Duchenne, of Boulogne, for electricity by induction.

FARCIMEN, see Equinia.

FARCIMINALIS MEMBRANA SEU TUNICA, Allantois.

FARCIŒ, see Equinia.

FARCINOMA, Equinia.

FARCTURA, Fart'ura; from farciare, farctum, 'to stuff.' The operation of introducing medicinal substances into the cavities of animals or of fruits, which have been previously emptied.

FARCTUS, Emphraxis.

FARCY GLANDERS, see Equinia.

FARDA, Paint.

FARDEAU, Mole.

FARFARA, Tussilago—f. Bechium, Tussilago.

FARIGOULE, Thymus.

FARINA, Al'phiton, Crimmon, Al'eton, Aleu'ron, Ale'ma, from far, 'corn,' or grain of any kind, of which it is made. Meal or flour. The powder, obtained by grinding the seeds of the gramineous, leguminous, and cucurbitaceous plants in particular. It is highly nutritious and much used, dietetically as well as medicinally. In the pharmacopœias of London, Edinburgh, and Dublin, Fari'na means wheat flour—Farina Tritici.

Leath's Alimen'tary Fari'na, or Homœopath'ic Farina'ceous Food, is said to consist principally of wheat flour, slightly baked, and sweetened with sugar, together with potato flour and a very small quantity of Indian corn meal and tapioca.

FARINA AMYGDALARUM, see Amygdala.

FARINA, COMPOUNDED, BASTER'S, is said to consist of wheat flour, sweetened with sugar.

FARINA, NUTRITIOUS, MAIDMAN'S, is said to consist of potato flour, artificially coloured of a pink or rosy hue, the colouring matter being probably rose pink.

FARINA TRITICI, wheaten flour; F. Seed'is, Rye flour or meal; F. Hor'dei, Barley meal; F. Avena'cea, Oat meal, &c. See Amylum.

FARINÆ RESOLVENTES, (F.) Farines Résolutives. This name was formerly given to a mixture of the farina of four different plants; the lupine, Lupinus albus, the Ervum Ervilia, the Vicia faba, and the Barley, Hordeum distichum. They were recommended to form cataplasms.

FARINA'CEOUS, Farina'ceus, Farino'sus, (F.) Farinacé, Farineux, Mealy. Having the appearance or nature of farina. A term given to all articles of food which contain farina. The term Farinacea includes all those substances, called cerealia, legumina, &c., which contain farina, and are employed as nutriment.

Hard's farinaceous food is fine wheat flour, which has been subjected to some heating process. Braden's farinaceous food is said to be wheat flour, baked.

In Pathology, the epithet farinaceous, (F.) farineux, is applied to certain eruptions, in which the epidermis exfoliates in small particles similar to farina.

FARINACEOUS FOOD, BRADEN'S, see Farinaceous—f. Food, Hard's, see Farinaceous—f. Food, homœopathic, see Farinaceous.

FARINACEOUS FOOD, PLUMBE'S, is said to consist principally of bean or pea flour, most probably the former, with a little Tacca arrowroot, some potato flour, and a very little Maranta arrowroot.

FARINACEOUS FOOD, PRINCE ARTHUR'S, for infants and invalids of all ages, is said to consist entirely of wheat flour, slightly baked.

FARINARIUM, Alica.

FARINES RÉSOLUTIVES, Farinæ resolutives.

FARINEUX, Farinaceous.

FARINOSUS, Farinaceous.

FARMERY, Hospital.

FARNTICKLES, Ephelides.

FARRIER, Hippiaater.

FARSIGHTEDNESS, Presbytia.

FART, Sax. Fart, from Teut. fahren, 'to go.'

—fart, 'a voyage.' (G.) Furz, Edellus, Edobus, Bdeleg'mia, Bdeleg'mus, Bombus, Trulla, Porda, Physa, Physè, Flatus, Crep'itus, C. ventris, (F.) Pet. A sonorous or other discharge of wind from behind. A low word, but of respectable parentage.

FARTURA, Fartura.

FARTUS, Emphraxis.

FAS'CLA, from fascis, 'a bundle.' Ligatio, Ligatu'ra, Alligatu'ra, Anades'mus, Vin'cula, Spar'ganon, Epides'mos, Vinctu'ra. A bandage, fillet, roller, ligature. The aponeurotic expansions of muscles, which bind parts together, are, likewise, termed Fasciæ. See Tænia.

FASCIA APONEUROTICA FEMORIS, Fascia lata aponeurosis—f. Capitalis, Bonnet d'Hippocrate, Capelina—f. Capitis, Diadema—f. Cooperi, F. Transversalis.

FASCIA, CRIE'RIFORM, F. Cribrifor'mis. The sieve-like portion of the fascia lata; so called from its being pierced by numerous openings for the passage of lymphatic vessels.

FASCIA DENTA'TA, F. D. Tari'ni, Corps goudronné of Vieq d'Azyr. A band of gray matter seen beneath the tænia hippocampi on raising it up, which runs along the inner border of the cornu ammonis. It is, as it were, crenated by transverse furrows.

FASCIA DIGITALIS, Gantelet—f. Diopthalmica, Binoculus—f. Dividens, Dividing bandage—f. Heliodori, T bandage.

FASCIA ILI'ACA, Il'iæc aponeuro'sis. An aponeurosis which proceeds from the tendon of the psoas minor, or which arises from the anterior surface of the psoas magnus, when the former muscle does not exist. It is attached, externally, to the inner edge of the crest of the ilium, below, and anteriorly—on one side, to the crural arch, sending an expansion to the fascia transversalis; and on the other, continuous with the deep-seated lamina of the fascia lata, which forms the posterior paries of the crural canal. Within and behind, the fascia iliaca is attached to the brim of the pelvis, and is continuous with the aponeurosis, which M. Jules Cloquet has called Pelvican. The iliac aponeurosis covers the iliac and psoas muscles, which it separates from the peritoneum.

FASCIA INFUNDIB'ULIFORMIS, a funnel-shaped offset from the fascia transversalis, which is prolonged as a sheath upon the vas deferens and spermatic vessels as they pass out of the abdomen.

FASCIA INGUINALIS, Spica.

FASCIA LATA. A name given by anatomists to an aponeurosis, and to a muscle.

FASCIA LATA APONEUROSIS, F. aponeuro'tica fem'oris, Vagi'na fem'oris, Crural or Fem'oral Aponeurosis, is the most extensive in the body, and envelopes all the muscles of the thigh. Above, it is attached to the outer edge of the ilia; before, it arises from the crural arch by two distinct laminae, separated by the femoral vessels, and becoming confounded a little below the part where the great vena saphæna opens into the crural vein. Of these two laminae, the one is more anterior and thicker than the other, and may be considered as a prolongation of the aponeurosis of the external oblique. It is intimately united to Poupart's ligament. The other, which is thinner, is behind, and deeper seated, and, after its union with the former, proceeds to be inserted into the pubis. Inferiorly, the fascia lata becomes confounded with the tendon of the triceps, and is attached to the external tuberosity of the tibia. The use of the fascia lata, like that of other aponeuroses, is to strengthen the action of the muscles, &c.

FASCIA LATA MUSCLE, Tensor vaginæ femoris, Fascia'lis, Membrano'sus, Musculus aponeurosis seu fascia'la' seu femoris membrano'sus, (F.) Ilio-aponevrosi-fémoral, Ilio-aponevrosi-fémoral—(Ch.), Tenseur de l'aponevrose fémorale. A muscle, situate at the upper and outer part of the thigh. It arises, above, from the outer part of the anterior and superior spine of the ilium; and is inserted, below, between the two laminae of the fascia lata, which it stretches and raises when it contracts.

FASCIA, OBTURATOR, see Pelvic aponeuroses—f. Pelvic, Internal, see Pelvic aponeuroses—f. Pelvic, Lateral, see Pelvic aponeuroses—f. Pelvic, Superior, see Pelvic aponeuroses.

FASCIA PRO'PRIA. A layer of areolar tissue derived from the sheath of the femoral vessels,—or according to some from the cribriform fascia. It is one of the coverings of femoral hernia, and is generally pretty dense about the neck of the hernia; but thin or even wanting on its fundus.

FASCIA REPENS, Spica—f. Scapularis, Scapulari—f. Sculteti, Bandage of separate strips—f. Semicircularis, Tænia semicircularis—f. Spiralis, Ascia—f. Stellata, Stella—f. Submuscular, see Vaginal, (of the eye.)

FASCIA, SUBPERITONE'AL, Subperitone'al aponeurosis. A thin tendinous layer on the outer surface of the peritoneum.

FASCIA SUPERFICIAL'IS, Superficial aponeurosis of the abdomen and thigh, (F.) Aponevrose superficielle de l'abdomen et de la cuisse. A very thin aponeurosis, which covers the muscles and aponeuroses of the abdomen; passes before the crural arch, to which it adheres with some degree of force; sends a membranous sheath, which surrounds the spermatic cord; and is continuous with the dartos, which it assists in forming. The fascia superficialis presents, beneath the crural arch, very distinct fibres, whose direction is parallel to the fold of the thigh. It is applied over the fascia lata aponeurosis, and is attached, internally, to the ascending ramus of the ischium, near the root of the corpus cavernosum. Before the descent of the testicle from the abdomen, the fascia superficialis is very manifestly continuous with the Gubernaculum testis.

FASCIA TFORMIS, T. bandage—f. Tortilis, Tourniquet.

FASCIA TRANSVERSA' LIS, F. Cooperi. An aponeurosis, which separates the transversalis muscle from the peritoneum in the inguinal region. It arises above the posterior edge of the crural arch, where it seems to be continuous with the aponeurosis of the greater oblique muscle. Above, it is lost in the areolar tissue at the internal surface of the transversalis abdominis. Within, it is continuous with the outer edge of the tendon of the rectus muscle and Gimbernat's ligament; below, it is continuous with the aponeurosis of the greater oblique, and receives an expansion from the Fascia Iliaca. Towards its middle and a little above the crural arch, the fascia transversalis has the wide orifice of a canal, which is occupied, in the female, by the round ligament of the uterus; and, in man, furnishes an expansion, that serves as a sheath to the spermatic vessels.

FASCIAE, Swathing clothes—f. Coli, see Colon—f. Ligamentose Coli, see Colon.

FASCIALIS, Fascia lata muscle, Sartorius—f. Longus, Sartorius—f. Sutorius, Sartorius.

FASCIARUM APPLICATIO, Deligation.

FASCIATIO, Deligation, see Bandage—f. Cucullata, Couvrechef.

FASCICULI CORTICALES, Ferrein, pyramids of—f. Graciles, see Corpora restiformia.

FASCIC'ULI INNOMINA'TI. Two large bundles of fibres in the interior of the medulla oblongata, behind the corpora olivaria, and more or less apparent between those bodies and the corpora restiformia. They ascend, and become apparent in the fourth ventricle, under the name Fasciculi seu Processus teretes.

FASCICULI, MEDIAN POSTERIOR, OF THE MEDULLA OBLONGATA, Funiculi graciles—f. Musculorum, see Muscular fibre—f. Pyramidales, Ferrein, Pyramids of—f. Teretes, Processus teretes, see Fasciculi innominati—f. Teretes cordis, Columnæ carnea.

FASCIC'ULUS, Phacellus, Phacelus, Fascicle, diminutive of fascis, 'a bundle'; Desmodion, 'a small bundle.' In Anatomy, it is employed in this sense; as "a fasciculus of fibres." (F.) Fascicule, Faisceau ou Petit Faisceau, Troussseau. In Pharmacy, it means manipulus, Cheiroplethes, χειροπληθής, 'a handful.' Musa Erassavolus says,—as much as can be held in two fingers.

FASCICULUS CUNEATUS, Reinforcement, fasciculus of—f. of Reinforcement, Reinforcement, F. of.

FASCIC'ULUS UNCINAT'US. A white bundle, seen on the lateral aspect of the cerebral hemispheres, passing across the bottom of the fissure of Sylvius, and connecting the anterior with the middle and posterior lobes. The fibres of this fasciculus expand at each extremity, and the superficial portions of them curve or hook sharply between the contiguous parts of the anterior and middle lobes, whence the epithet 'uncinatus.'

FASCINOSUS, Membrosus.

FASCINUM, Penis.

FASCIOLA, Bandelette—f. Cinerea, Tuberculum cinereum—f. Hepatica, Distoma hepaticum—f. Humana, Distoma hepaticum—f. Lanceolata, Distoma hepaticum.

FASELUS, Phaseolus vulgaris.

FASÉOLE, Phaseolus.

FASTID'IUM, abridged from fatis tadium.

Fastidiousness, Squeamishness, or the condition of a stomach that is really affected with nausea.

FASTIDIUM CIBI, Asitia, Disgust—f. Potûs, Loathing of drink.

FASTIGIUM, Aeme.

FASTING, from Sax. rætan, Limo'sis expers protracta, Anorex'ia mirabilis, Iud'ia, Jejunium. Loss or want of appetite, without any other apparent affection of the stomach; so that the system can sustain almost total abstinence for a long time without faintness. Some wonderful cases of this kind are on record. See Abstinence.

FAT, Pingue'do, Pim'elè, Piar, Pie'ron, Lipos, Stear, Adeps, Sevum, Sebum, Corpus adiposum, Azum'gia, Fat, (F.) Graisse: from (G.)

Fett, (Sax.) Fat. A soft, white, animal substance; inodorous; insipid; oily; inflammable, easy to melt; spoiling in the air, and becoming rancid by union with oxygen: almost insoluble in alcohol; insoluble in water; soluble in fixed oils. Fat is formed of the immediate principles, stearin, margarin, and olein or elain, all of which are regarded as salts composed of stearic, margaric and oleic acids, and a common base, to which, from its sweetish taste, the name Glycerin Glyceri'na, Glyceri'num, (F.) Glycérine has been given. To these are, almost always, joined an odorous and a colouring principle. GLYCERIN, Glyceri'na, has been introduced into the last edition of the Pharmacopœia of the U. S. (1851), in which it is directed to be prepared as follows:—Lead plaster, recently prepared and yet fluid; boiling water, of each a gallon; mix: stir briskly for 15 minutes; allow it to cool and pour off the liquid. Evaporate until it has the s. g. 1.15, and pass slowly through it a current of sulpho-hydric acid until a black precipitate is no longer thrown down. Filter and boil until the sulpho-hydric acid is driven off, and evaporate the liquid until it ceases to lose weight. Glycerin is a colourless or straw-coloured syrupy fluid; s. g. 1.25. It is soluble in water and in alcohol, but not in ether. It is used in the form of lotion, composed of half an ounce to ten fluidounces of water, in cutaneous diseases, as psoriasis, pityriasis, lepra and ichthyosis. It forms a kind of varnish, and might be useful in cases of burns.

Fat is found in a number of animal tissues, and is very abundant in the neighborhood of the kidneys and in the epiploon. It is generally fluid in the cetacea; soft, and of a strong smell in the carnivora; solid, and inodorous in the ruminating animal; white, and abundant in young animals; and yellowish in old. It generally forms about a twentieth part of the weight of the human body. The fat, considered physiologically, has, for its function, to protect the organs; maintain their temperature; and to serve for nutrition in case of need; as is observed in torpid animals.

FAT, Corpulent—f. Cells, Fatty vesicles.

FAT, MACKAW, see Cocos butyracea.

FATIGATIO, Copos.

FATIGUE, Copos.

FATTY, Adiposus, Adipatus, Pimelicus, Pimelo-des, Liparodes, Liparus, Sax. ræt; past participle of pean, to feed, Adiposus, Pinguid, Pinguidinus. Relating to fat. Resembling or containing fat. The cellular membrane has been called fatty or adipous; from an opinion that, in its areolæ, the fat is deposited. The areolar membrane, however, merely lodges, between its lamellæ and filaments, the vesicles in which the fat is contained.

FATTY LIGAMENT, Adipous ligament. This name has been given to a reflection of the synovial membrane of the knee joint, which passes from the ligamentum patellæ towards the cavity that separates the condyles of the femur.

FATTY MEMBRANE, Adipous membrane, Adipous tissue. The subcutaneous areolar tissue, or that containing the fatty or adipous vesicles.

FATTY VESICLES, Sacculi adiposi, Adipous vesicles, Fat cells. This name is given to small bursæ or membranous vesicles which enclose the fat, and are found situate in the areolæ of the areolar tissue. These vesicles vary much in size. Generally, they are round and globular; and, in certain subjects, receive vessels which are very apparent. They form so many small sacs without apertures, in the interior of which are filaments arranged like septa. In fatty subjects, the adipous vesicles are very perceptible, being attached to the areolar tissue and neighbouring parts by a vascular pedicle. Raspail affirms that there is the most striking analogy between the nature of the adipose granules and that of the amylaceous grains.

FATTY VESSELS, Adipous vessels. The vessels connected with the fat. Some anatomists have called Adipous canals, (F.) Conduits adipeux, the vessels to which they attribute the secretion of fat.

FATTY DEGENERATION OF THE LIVER, Adiposis hepatica—f. Liver, Adiposis hepatica.

FATUISME, Fatuitas.

FATUITAS, Moro'sis, Stultitia, Stupor mentis, Amentia; (F.) Fatuisme, Fatuité, from fatuus, 'foolish.' Mental imbecility. Idiotism. Dementia. One affected with fatuity is said to be fat'uons, (Sc.) Daupit.

FATUITAS ALPICOLARUM, Cretinism—f. Convallinus, Cretinism.

FATUOUS, see Fatuity.

FAUCES, Isthmus, Pharynx, Throat.

FAUCETE VOICE, see Voice.

FAUNORUM LUDIB'RIA. The sports of the Fauni. Some authors have called thus the incubus; others, epilepsy.

FAUQUIER SPRINGS, see Virginia, Mineral Waters of.

FAUSSE, False—f. Conception, Conception, false.

FAUSSE COUCHE (F.), Vanum parturium. Some authors have used this term for the expulsion of different bodies constituting false conceptions; such as moles, hydatids, clots of blood, &c. Most accoucheurs use the term synonymously with abortion.

FAUSSE GROSSESSE, Pregnancy, false—f. Membrane, Membrane, false—f. Pleurésie, Pleurisy, false—f. Pneumonic, Peripneumonia notha.

FAUSSE POSITION (F.), False position. The French use this term, in vulgar language, to indicate any attitude in which torpor, tingling, and loss of power over the motion of a part, are produced by too strong contraction or painful compression.

FAUSSE RHABARBE, Thalictron—f. Route, False passage—f. Variole, Varicella.

FAUSTI'NI PASTIL'LI, Faustinus's Lozenges. These were once celebrated. They were composed of burnt paper, quicklime, oxide of arsenic, sandarach, lentils, &c.

FAUX, False—f. du Cerveau, Falx cerebri—f. du Cerelet, Falx cerebelli—f. Germe, Conception, false—f. Grande du péritoine, Falx, great, of the peritoneum—f. Petite du péritoine, Falx, lesser, of the peritoneum—f. de la Veine ombilicale, Falx, great, of the peritoneum.

FAVEUX, Favosus.

FAVIFORMIS, Favosus.

FAV'OUS. Similar to a honeycomb. Faviformis, Favous, from favus, cerion, 'a honeycomb.' (F.) Faveux. An epithet given to a species of porrigo. Cerion, Kerion, Favus; means also a state of ulceration, resembling a honeycomb.

FA'VULUS; diminutive of favus, 'a honeycomb.' Favuli is used by Dr. Morton, of Philadelphia, for the honeycomb-like depressions in the lining membrane of the stomach—the stomach-cells of Messrs. Todd and Bowman.

FAVUS, Porrigo, Porrigo favosa, see Favosus—f. Confertus, Porrigo scutulata—f. Dispersus, Porrigo lupinosa—f. Disséminé, Porrigo lupinosa—f. en Groupes, Porrigo scutulata.

FAXWAX, see Nucha.

FEABERRY, Ribes ura crispa.

FEATHERFEW, Matricaria.

FEBRIC'ITANS, Feb'riens, Empyros, (F.) Fébricitant. One attacked with fever; from febricitare, 'to have a fever.'

FEBRICITATIO, Feverishness.

FEBRICOSUS, Feverish.

FEBRIC'ULA, Fe'veret, (F.) Fébricule. Diminutive of febris, 'fever.' A term employed to express a slight degree of fever. Ephemera.

FEBRICULOSITY, Feverishness.

FEBRIENS, Febricitans, Feverish.

FEBRIFACIENT, see Feverish.

FEBRIF'EROUS, Feb'rifer, from febris, 'fever,' and fero, 'I carry.' Fever-bearing, as a febriferous locality.

FEBRIFIC, see Feverish.

FEB'RIFUGE, Lexipyre'ticus, Lexipyre'tus, Pyre'ticus, Alexipyre'ticus, Antifebri'lis, Antipyre'tic, Febri'ngus, from febris, 'a fever,' and fugare, 'to drive away.' A medicine which possesses the property of abating or driving away fever.

FEBRIFUGUM LIGNUM, Quassia.

FE'BRILE, Febri'lis, Pyre'ticus. Relating to fever, as febrile movement, febrile pulse, &c.

FEBRIS, Fever—f. Acastica, Synocha—f.

FEB'RUA, from februo, 'I purge.' In ancient mythology, a goddess who presided over menstruation.

FECAL, Stercoraceous.

FÆCES, Fæces.

FÆCONDATION, Fecundation.

FÆCONDITÉ, Fecundity.

FÆCULA, Fæcula, diminutive of fæx, fæcis, 'lee.' An immediate principle of vegetables, composed of hydrogen, oxygen, and carbon. It exists in several plants, and has different names, according to that which furnishes it. (F.) Fæcule, Amydolé. When extracted from wheat or barley, it is called starch, Am'ylum. When from Cycas cirina'lis, Sago;—from Orchis mo'rio, Salep. We say, also, Fecula of the Potato, Bryony, Arum, Manioc, &c.

FÆCULA, GREEN. This name is given to a green, solid matter, of variable character, which is believed to be resinous, and which renders turbid several kinds of juices, extracted from vegetables. It is also called Chlorophyll.

FÆCULA AMYLACEA, Amylum—f. Marantæ, Arrow-root—f. Tapioka, see Jatropha manihot.

FÆCULE, Fecula.

FÆCULENCE, Fæculentia, Fæcos'itas, Fæx, plural Fæces, Lemma, Lee, Depos'it, Dregs. In Pharmacy, feculent, albuminous, or other substances, which are deposited from turbid fluids.

FÆCULENT, Fæculentus, Hypot'rygus, Trygo'des. 'Foul, dreggy, excrementitious;' as a feculent fluid, feculent evacuations, &c.

FÆCUND, Fecundus, Fæcun'dus, (F.) Fæcond. Same etymon as the next. Fruitful, prolific.

FÆCUNDA'TION, Fæcunda'tio, Impregna'tio, Imprægna'tio, Ingravida'tio, Pregna'tio, Gravida'tio, Pregna'tus, Fructifica'tio, Cye'sis, Eneye'sis, Encymo'sia, Procrea'tion, (F.) Fæcondation. The act by which, in organized beings, the material furnished by the generative organs of the female, unites with that prepared by those of the male, so that a new being results.

FÆCUN'DITY, Euto'cia, Fæcun'ditas, Productiv'itas, (F.) Fæcondité. The faculty of reproduction, possessed by organized bodies.

It has been estimated that, throughout a country, taking one marriage with another, not more than 4 children are the result; and in towns only 35 children to 10 marriages.

FEE, Psychorages, Sostrum.

FEEET, BURNING OF THE. A singular cachectic disease, described by Mr. Malcolmson as occurring in India, the prominent symptom of which was a sense of burning in the feet.

FÊGARITE, Cancer aquaticus, Stomatitis, pseudo-membranous.

FEIGNED DISEASES, Morbi dissimula'ti seu simula'ti seu cela'ti seu infita'ti seu pseudalei, Sim'ulated or Pretend'ed diseases, (F.) Maladies dissimulées ou simulées ou feintes ou supposées. The tricks employed, by impostors, to induce a belief that they are attacked with diseases when they are not. These are generally assumed by beggars to obtain alms; by criminals to escape punishment; and by soldiers to be exempt from duty.

The following table exhibits the chief feigned diseases, with the means of detection:

A TABLE OF FEIGNED, PRETENDED, SIMULATED, OR EXCITED DISEASES OR DISQUALIFICATIONS.

DISEASES, &c.	HOW FEIGNED.	HOW DETECTED.
1. ABORTION.	By staining the clothes and body with borrowed blood.	By constant and minute attention.
2. ABSTINENCE.
3. AMAUROTIC BLINDNESS.	By applying the extract of belladonna or datura stramonium to the eye.	Amaurosis is characterized by dilated pupil. Where these substances have been applied, the effects will go off in ten days or a fortnight.
4. APOPLEXY.	By falling down as if deprived of sensation and consciousness.	By powerful stimulants; an electric shock; application of hot water, sternutatories, actual cautery, &c.
5. CACHEXIA, ANÆMIA, AND DEBILITY.	Using substances to make the face appear pale and livid. Indulging freely in wine, and privation of sleep prior to examination.	By examining if the pulse be strong, and the skin hot, and whether there be loss of appetite or of strength, or swelling of the limbs.
6. EXCRETION OF CALCULI.	Putting sand, pebbles, &c., into the urine.	By the aid of chymistry. We are acquainted with the chymical composition of urinary calculi.
7. CANCEROUS ULCER.	By gluing on a portion of a spleen with the smooth side to the skin, leaving on the outside the appearance of an ulcerated surface.	By noticing whether there be signs of cachexia, and by attentive examination of the part.
8. CATALEPSY.	By seeming to be suddenly motionless, the joints remaining flexible, and external objects making no impression.	By powerful stimulants, as recommended under apoplexy. Letting fall a drop of boiling water on the back. Proposing to use the actual cautery, and seeing whether the pulse rises.
9. CHOREA.	By assuming the convulsive motions of a part which characterize chorea.	By examining the patient whilst he may imagine himself unobserved, and seeing whether the convulsive motions go on. By anaesthetics. (?)
10. CONTRACTION OF JOINTS IN GENERAL	Mode of discrimination sometimes so obscure as to deceive the most practised and attentive.

DISEASES, &c.	HOW FEIGNED.	HOW DETECTED.
11. CONTRACTION OF THE FINGERS.	Introduce a cord between the fingers and the palm of the hand, and gradually apply weights so as to expand the fingers. Confine him so that he cannot obtain his food without using his clenched hand.
12. CONVULSIONS.	When feigned, they do not present the rigidity of muscles or the rapidity of action which characterize the real. The mode of detection must be the same as in epilepsy.
13. OPAKE CORNEA.	Produced by the application of a strong acid, by acrid powders, as quicklime, &c.	The existence of the opacity can be detected by attentive observation.
14. CUTANEOUS DISEASES.	Some articles of diet will bring on urticaria or nettle-rash , in particular individuals, as shell-fish, bitter almonds, &c. By acrids, acids, or any irritants applied to the surface. An ointment of tartarized antimony causes a painful pustular eruption. See Porrigio , in this list.	By careful examination on the part of practitioner and nurse.
15. DEAF-DUMENESS.	The really deaf and dumb acquire an expression of countenance and gestures which it is difficult to assume.
16. DEAFNESS.	It may be assumed or excited by putting a pea in the ear, or by inserting irritants, so as to induce inflammation and temporary loss of function.	Make a noise when not expected, and see if the countenance varies or pulse rises. Put to sleep by opium, and then fire a pistol close to the ear, when he may be thrown off his guard. Examine the ear to see if any trick has been played there.
17. DEATH.	Some persons possess the power of suspending or moderating the action of the heart.	If suspected, the plan recommended under apoplexy will be found most efficacious.
18. DEBILITY, see CACHEXIA.	Examine the part and its articulation, naked, and compare it with the opposite.
19. DEFORMITY.	Can only be positively detected by examination per vaginam . Soon after delivery, the vagina will be relaxed and the lochial discharge be flowing in greater abundance, the shorter the time that may have elapsed since delivery.
20. DELIVERY.	After enlargement produced artificially, a subsidence of the tumefaction; the parts being moistened by borrowed blood, and the child of another substituted as the female's own.	When diarrhoea is feigned by the lower classes, inspect the linen; if clean, the bowels are probably not much out of order. Let every individual have a close stool of his own; and inspect the evacuations, taking care that one suffering under the disease does not lend his evacuations to another.
21. DIARRHŒA.	Said to have been caused by a mixture of vinegar and burnt cork. (?) May be occasioned by the use of any of the purgative roots, &c.	Can be detected by attentive examination. There will be a want of that leucoplegmatic habit which accompanies and characterizes dropsy.
22. DROPSY.	May be feigned, like pregnancy, by wearing pads. The anasarca condition of the lower limbs has been caused by applying a ligature round them. By inflating the cellular membrane of the abdomen.	Same rules as under diarrhoea.
23. DYSENTERY.	May be feigned, like diarrhoea, by adding a little blood to the evacuations, or by introducing a soap or some more irritating suppository.

DISEASES, &c.	HOW FEIGNED.	HOW DETECTED.
24. EPILEPSY.	The foaming of the mouth has been produced by keeping a piece of soap in it.	Sensation in epilepsy is totally abolished. If any remain, disease probably feigned. Incontractility of pupil, which occurs in epilepsy, cannot be feigned. Same means to be used as in feigned apoplexy.
25. FEVER.	By various stimulants, as wine, brandy, pepper; swallowing a small quantity of tobacco, or introducing it into the anus. Flour or chalk used to whiten the tongue. Redness of skin, caused by friction with a hard brush.	This deceit is generally developed by a day or two's examination. Where flour or chalk has been used to whiten the tongue, the line of demarcation between the whitened part and the clean, healthy margin of the tongue, is too well marked to escape observation.
26. FISTULA IN ANO.	By making an incision near the verge of the anus, and introducing into it an acrid tent, such as the root of white hellebore, &c.	By careful examination.
27. FRACTURES.	There is generally nothing but the man's own testimony. He complains of pain in the part; if fracture of the skull be feigned, he states, perhaps, that he becomes deranged on tasting liquor.	By attentive examination.
28. HÆMATEMESIS.	By drinking the blood of some animal, or using some coloured liquid, and then throwing it up.	By cutting off the supply of the fluid and careful examination.
29. HÆMOPTYSIS.	By secreting bullock's blood for the purpose of colouring the saliva; making small incisions in the mouth; using bole armeniac or paint of vermilion.	Blood from the lungs is frothy and light-coloured. Mouth and fauces must be carefully inspected, and the individual be observed.
30. HEMORRHOIDS.	By introducing bladders of rats or of small fish partly into the rectum. The linen has also been stained with borrowed blood.	The means are obvious.
31. HEART, DISEASES OF, see PALPITATION.
32. HEPATITIS.	Unless the person be a well-educated impostor, acute inflammation of the liver will be detected by the absence of marks of strong inflammatory action. Chronic liver disease is, frequently, not characterized by well-marked symptoms, and hence, when assumed, is difficult of detection.
33. HERNIA.	In the same manner as hydrocele; — by inflation.	The detection is easy.
34. HYDROCELE.	By puncturing the skin of the scrotum, and inflating the cellular membrane.	Do.
35. HYDROCEPHALUS.	By opening the integuments of the head, near the vertex, e. g. and blowing in air.	Do.
36. HYSTERIA.	Does not easily resist the application of strong sternutatories to the nostrils. Attentive examination necessary.
37. INSANITY.	The expression of countenance cannot easily be feigned. Nor can the affection be kept up so long as in real mental alienation. The individual cannot do so long without food, sleep, &c.
38. JAUNDICE.	By colouring the skin with an infusion of turmeric or tincture of rhubarb. Clay-coloured stools produced by taking daily a small quantity of muriatic acid. High-coloured urine by rhubarb taken internally.	The eyes cannot be coloured, although smoke has been used for this purpose. The skin must be washed to remove the colouring matter if any exist, and the supply of acid and rhubarb be prevented.

DISEASES, &c.	HOW FEIGNED.	HOW DETECTED.
39. LAMENESS.	By keeping the limb in a contracted state, and resisting any efforts to move it.	By two persons taking hold of the individual and moving rapidly along with him; and when they are tired, having relays. The impostor will generally give in.
40. MENSTRUATION.	By staining the clothes and body with borrowed blood.	By cutting off the supply.
41. MYOPIA. Short-Sightedness.	Present an open book, and apply the leaves close to the nose. If it cannot be read distinctly, when thus placed, or when glasses proper for short-sightedness are used, the disease is feigned.
42. OPHTHALMIA.	Excited by a variety of acrid and corrosive substances applied to the eye; as lime, &c. A portion of black muslin, spread over the cornea. The eyelashes are sometimes extracted, and caustic applied to excite disease in the palpebræ.	When ophthalmia is thus excited, its progress is ordinarily very rapid, arriving at its height within a few hours.
43. OZENA.	By impregnating a piece of sponge with some offensive juices or oils, mixed with decayed cheese, and putting the imbued sponge into the nostrils.
44. PALPITATION.	White hellebore, given in the dose of 10 or 12 grains, and repeated, will occasion general indisposition, and undue action of the heart.	Cut off the supply.
45. PAINS.	The detection is here often difficult. The non-existence of pain cannot be proved, and great pain may be present without any appearance externally.
46. SHAKING PALSY.	The imposition is more frequently detected by inconsistencies and contradictions in the patient's history of the case, than in any other manner.
47. PARALYSIS.	May be suspected, if the person be in an ordinary state of vigour. Try violent remedies and means, recommended under Chorea.
48. PHTHISIS PULMONALIS.	Individuals with long necks and contracted shoulders have simulated phthisis, by covering the chest with blisters, cicatrices of issues, &c., and by taking drugs which cause paleness.	Violent remedies are here required. Cold affusion, actual cautery, electric shocks, &c.
49. POLYPUS NASI.	By introducing the testicle of a young cock, or the kidney of a rabbit, into the nostril, and retaining it there by means of a sponge fastened to it.	By attentive examination of the symptoms.
50. PORRIGO. Scalped Head.	By applying nitric acid to the head, after protecting the face with fatty substances; but the chronic state is imitated by the use of depilatories of different kinds applied sometimes in patches, so as to resemble the Porrigo decalvans .
51. PREGNANCY.	By wearing pads, and assuming the longing after particular articles of diet, &c.	By the absence of the areola; the presence of a pad; and, if necessary, by examination per vaginam .
52. PROLAPSUS ANI.	By a portion of the intestine of the ox, in which a sponge filled with a mixture of blood and milk is placed.
53. PROLAPSUS UTERI.	By a similar fraud.

DISEASES, &c.	HOW FEIGNED.	HOW DETECTED.
54. PULSE, WEAKNESS OR DEFECT OF.	By ligatures applied to the corresponding arm.	By examining whether the arteries of the two arms beat alike; and if a ligature be placed on the arm.
55. CHRONIC RHEUMATISM. See Pain.		By examining the general habit, and observing whether the ulcerations be glandular, and the discharge of a scrofulous character.
56. SCROFULA.	By exciting ulcers below the angles of the jaw.	By examining the general habit; whether debilitated, cachectic, and possessing the usual general signs of scorbutus.
57. SCURVY.	By covering the teeth with wax, and then applying acid, corrosive substances to the gums.	Simulators of this defect generally state, that it is connate, or ascribe it to a fit of apoplexy or severe fever. Where the organs of speech were perfect, and the moral evidence of the previous existence of the infirmity was not satisfactory, the French authorities used to confine the soldiers, and not supply them with food, until they called for it without stammering.
56. STAMMERING.	By passing a bougie.
59. STRICTURE OF THE URETHRA.	Examine the limbs uncovered.
60. SWELLING OF THE LEGS.	By ligatures round the thighs.	By using sternutatories. By the absence of some of the symptoms of syncope. Examine the naked arms. Wash the face.
61. SYNCOPE.	Ligatures are sometimes used to prevent the pulse being felt. By applying lotions to the face to make it pale.	Persons have possessed the power of swallowing air, so as to distend the stomach, and simulate tympany.
62. TYMPANY.	By introducing a tent, imbued with blistering plaster into the ear, and repeating the application, until the tube becomes ulcerated, and a discharge of puriform matter is established. The fetid smell is imitated, by dropping into the ear a mixture of empyreumatic oil, asafetida, and old cheese. Also, by introducing a little honey into the meatus.	By careful examination.
63. ULCER OF THE EAR.	By corrosives, or irritants. Sometimes by abrasion, by rubbing sand on the shin-bone. At others, they are pretended, by gluing on a piece of spleen or the skin of a frog.	Artificial ulcers have, usually, a more distinct margin, and are more readily healed than others; the latter being generally indicative of an impaired constitution.
64. ULCERS OF THE LEGS, &c.	The fruit of the Indian Fig (Cactus opuntia) colours the urine as red as blood. Cantharides will cause it. Blood may also be procured and mixed with the urine.	By making the patient pass his urine in the presence of the physician, and examining the vessel before and after. By cutting off the supply of any substance, which could cause the appearance.
65. BLOODY URINE.	Difficult, at times, of detection. Give the person a full dose of opium, and introduce the catheter when he is asleep. If there be urine, the incontinence is feigned.
66. INCONTINENCE OF URINE.	By examining the limb.
67. VARICOSE VEINS.	By a ligature, placed tightly round the limb. They may be excited in this manner, or aggravated if already existing.

FEL, Bile—f. Anguillæ, see Bile—f. Bovinum, Bile of the Ox—f. Bovis, see Bile—f. Naturæ, Aloes—f. Tauri, see Bile—f. Terræ, Ludus Helmentii—f. Ursi, see Bile—f. Vitri, see Vitrum.

FELDSCHBEREN, Bathers.

FELINEUS, Biliouus.

FELLEUS, Biliary, Biliouus.

FELLIDUCUS, Cholagogue.

FELLIS OBSTRUCTIO, Icterus—f. Superfusio, Icterus—f. Suffusio, Icterus.

FELON, Paronychia.

FELTING, from Anglo-Saxon felt, cloth or stuff made without weaving. Tangling. A term applied to the hair when inextricably interlaced, as occurs occasionally in women from inattention.

FÉLURE DE GLASER, Fissure, glenoid.

FELWORT, Gentiana lutea.

FEMALE, Fœmina, F'mina, Gynê, (F.) Femelle, (Femme, 'woman.'). In animals, the one that engenders and bears the young. It is, also, used adjectively;—as, the Female Sex, &c.

FEMALE PARTS, Vulva.

FEMELLE, Female.

FEMEN, Thigh (inner part), Vulva.

FEMINA, Female.

FEMINES'GENCE, Fœminescencia, from fœmina, 'a female.' The possession or assumption of certain male characteristics by the female.—Mehliiss.

FEMME EN COUCHE, Puerpera.

FEM'ORAL, Femoralis, from femur, femoris, 'the thigh-bone.' Belonging or relating to the thigh; as Femoral artery, Femoral hernia, &c. See Crural.

FEMORALIS, Triceps cruris.

FÉMORO-CALCANIEN PETIT, Plantar muscle—f. Popliteal, great, Sciatic nerve, great—f. Popliti-tibial, Popliteus muscle.

FEM'ORO-TIB'IAL, Femoro-tibia'lis. Belonging to the femur and tibia. The Femoro-tibial articulation is the knee-joint.

FEMUR, Merus, Me'rium. The thigh (q. v.) Also, the thigh bone, Os fem'oris, (F.) L'os de la Cuisse. The strongest and longest of all the bones of the body, extending from the pelvis to the tibia, and forming the solid part of the thigh. The femur is cylindrical, slightly curved anteriorly, unsymmetrical and oblique downwards and inwards. The body of the bone is prismatic, and has, behind, a prominent ridge, the linea aspera.

PROCESSES.	{ Upper or Pelvic Extremity. {	Head supported on a column or neck.
		Great trochanter.
PROCESSES.	{ Inferior or Tibial Extremity. {	Lesser trochanter.
		External condyle.
		Internal condyle.
		External tuberosity.
		Internal tuberosity.

The femur ossifies from five points:—one on each process of the pelvic extremity; one in the body of the bone; and two on the condyles. It is articulated with the pelvis, tibia, and patella. See Thigh.

FÉMUR COL DU, Collum femoris—f. Moventium septimus, Iliacus internus—f. Moventium sextus, Psoas magnus—f. Summum, Vulva.

FENES'TRA. A window, (akin to fenwa, 'I show,' and to Sanscrit fānu.) (F.) Fenêtre. Anatomists have given this name to two apertures, situate in the inner paries of the cavity of the tympanum. The one of these is the Fenest'ra ova'lis seu vestibula'ris, Fora'men ova'le. It is oval-shaped; situate at the base of the stapes, and corresponds with the cavity of the vestibule. The other is the Fenest'ra rotun'da seu cochlea'ris seu triquetra, Fora'men rotun'dum. It is closed by a fine, transparent membrane, called Membra'na Tympani secun'daria, Tympanum minus seu secun'darium, Membra'na fenestra' rotun'da, and corresponds to the inner scala of the cochlea.

FENESTRA OCULI, Pupil.

FENESTRAL, Fenestra'tus, from fenestra, 'a window.' (F.) Fenêtré et Fenestré. Bandages, compresses, or plasters with small perforations or openings, are so called. The openings prevent the detention of the discharge.

FENESTRATUS, Fenestral.

FENESTRÉ, Fenestral.

FENÉTRE, Fenestra.

FENÊTRÉ, Fenestral.

FENNEL, Anethum—f. Dogs', Anthemis cotula—f. Flower, Nigella—f. Hog's, Peucedanum—f. Sweet, Anethum—f. Water, Phellandrium aquaticum.

FERALIS PEDICULUS, see Pediculus.

FERINE, Fer'inus; 'savage, brutal;' from fera, 'a wild beast.' Therio'ides. A term, applied to any malignant or noxious disease. In France it is used only when joined to Toux; Toux ferine, a dry, obstinate, and painful cough.

FÉRMENT, Fermentum, (quasi fervimentum, from ferveo, 'I burn, I ferment,') Zyma, Zymo'ma, Leven, (F.) Lévain. The Iatrochymists applied this name to imaginary substances, Fermenta mor'bi, to which they attributed the power of producing disease, by exciting a fermentation in the humours.

FERMENT'ATION, Fermenta'tio, Zymo'sis, Æstiva'tio, Causis, Brasmos. Same etymon. An intestinal movement, occurring spontaneously in a liquid; whence result certain substances, that did not previously exist in it.

The chemical physicians attributed all diseases to an imaginary fermentation of the humours.

FERMENTATION, PUTREFACTIVE, Putrefaction.

FÉRMENTUM CEREBISLÆ, Yest—f. Morbi, Ferment—f. Ventriculi, Gastric juice.

FERNAMBUCO WOOD, Cæsalpinia echinata.

FERNFRECKLED, Ephelides.

FERNITICKLES, Ephelides.

FERONIA ELEPHANTUM, (from the goddess Feronia.) A tree of India, Order Aurantiaceæ, which yields a gum closely resembling Gum Arabic. Dr. Pereira thinks it not improbable, that a part of the East India gum taken to England may be the produce of this tree. The leaves are aromatic, of an odour resembling anise, and are used as a carminative.

FERRAMENTUM, Side'ron, Instrumen'tum fer'reum, from ferrum, 'iron.' Any surgical instrument made of iron. By the vulgar, in France, the word ferremens means the instruments used in difficult labours.

FERRARIA, Scrophularia aquatica.

FERRATUS, Chalybeate.

FERREIN, CANAL OF, Ductus Ferrei'ni. A triangular channel, which Ferrein supposed to result from the approximation of the free edges of the eyelids applied to the globe of the eye; and which he considered adapted for directing the tears towards the puneta lacrymalia, during sleep. The canal is, probably, imaginary.

The same name is likewise given to the cortical canals,—the first portions of the uriniferous ducts, whilst still in the cortical substance of the kidney.

FERREIN, PYRAMIDS OF, Pyram'ides Ferrei'ni. Each of the papillæ of the kidney, according to Ferrein, consists of, at least, 700 subordinate cones or pyramids. To these last the names 'pyramids of Ferrein, Pyram'ides renales Ferrei'ni, Fasciculi pyramida'les, Fasciculi cortical'es, Lobuli renem, have been given.

FERRI ACETAS, Extractum martis acet'icum, Acet'icum martia'le, Ac'etate of Iron, Iron Liquor, (F.) Acétate de fer. A preparation of the Dublin Pharmacopœia, made by digesting 1 part of carbonate of iron in 6 parts of acetic acid for three days, and filtering. Dose, as a tonic and astringent, ℥v to ℥xx, in water.

FERRI ÆRUGO, F. Subcarbonas—f. et Ammonia' murias, Ferrum ammoniatum—f. Ammoniochloridum, Ferrum ammoniatum.

FERRI ET ALUMINE SULPHAS, Sulphate of Iron and Alumina, is made by treating bicarbonated solution of soft iron and carbonated solution of pure washed alumina, with sulphuric acid. It has been recommended as a valuable astringent. Dose, from five to ten grains.

FERRI AMMONIO-CITRAS, Ammonia' ferro-citras, Ferrum ammoni'aco-ci'tricum, Ammonio-citrate of iron, Citrate of ammonia and iron. Prepared by adding ammonia to citrate of iron, so as to neutralize the excess of acid. Dose, gr. v. to gr. viij. A POTASSIO-CITRATE and a SODIO-CITRATE OF IRON have also been introduced; and a CITRATE OF THE MAGNETIC OXIDE OF IRON prepared by combining the magnetic oxide with citric acid.

FERRI AMMONIO-TARTRAS, Ammonio-tartrate of Iron. This salt is best made by dissolving to saturation freshly precipitated hydrated oxide of iron in a solution of bitartrate of ammonia, and evaporating to dryness. It is very soluble. The dose is five grains or more in pill or solution.

FERRI ARSENIAS, Arseniate of Iron—f. Borussia, Prussian blue—f. Bromidum, see Bromine—f. Carbonas, F. subcarbonas—f. Carbonas Saccharatum, see F. Protocarbonas—f. Carbonas eum Saccharo, see Ferri Protocarbonas—f. Carbonatum, Graphites—f. Carburetum, Graphites.

FERRI CHLORIDUM, F. Sesquichlor'idum, (F.) Trichlorure ou Perchlorure de fer, Chloride, Sesquichloride, Perchloride or Muriate of Iron, is obtained by dissolving sesqui-chloride of iron in chlorohydric acid. It is generally prescribed in the form of Tinctura Ferri Chloridi. A concentrated solution of the perchloride has been used as an injection for the radical cure of aneurism.

FERRI CITRAS, Ferrum ci'tricum, Citrate of Iron. Two citrates of iron are prepared—the Sesquicitrate or Citrate of the Sesquioxide; and the Citrate of the Protozide. The former is official in the Ph. U. S. They resemble, in their medical properties, the tartrate and the lactate of the metal. Dose, five grains or more.

FERRI CYANURETUM, Prussian blue—f. Deuto-carbonas fuscus, F. subcarbonas—f. Deutoxydum nigrum, Æthiops martial—f. Ferrocyanas, Prussian blue—f. Ferrocyanuretum, Prussian blue.

FERRI FILUM. The pharmacopœial name of iron wire.

FERRI HYDRIDAS, F. Iodidum—f. Hydrocyanas, Prussian blue—f. Hypercarburetum, Graphites.

FERRI IO'DIDUM, F. Iodure'tum, Ferrum ioda'tum, Iodide, or Ioduret of Iron, (F.) Iodure de fer; in solution, Hydri'odate of Iron, Ferri hydri'odas, Ferrum hydrioda'tum, (F.) Hydriodate de fer, (Iodin. ℥ij, Ferri rament. ℥j, Aq. destillat. Oiss.) Mix the iodine with a pint of the distilled water, in a porcelain or glass vessel, and gradually add the iron filings, stirring constantly. Heat the mixture gently until the liquid acquires a light greenish colour; then filter; and, after the liquid has passed, pour upon the filter half a pint of the distilled water, boiling hot. When this has passed, evaporate the filtered liquor, at a temperature not exceeding 212°, in an iron vessel, to dryness; keep the dry iodide in a closely stopped bottle. (Ph. U. S.) Dose, gr. iij to gr. x or more.

FERRI IOURETUM, F. Iodidum.

FERRI LACTAS, Ferrum lac'ticum, Lactate of Iron, L. of Protozide of Iron, (F.) Lactate de Fer. Prepared by digesting in a sand-bath, at a low temperature, diluted lactic acid with iron filings. It is employed in the same cases as the precipitated subcarbonate of iron, and especially in chlorosis. Twelve grains of the lactate may be given in the 24 hours, in the form of lozenges.

FERRI LIMATU'RA PURIFICATA, Purified Iron Filings:—purified by means of the magnet, for internal use. The filings are, also, called Ferri Scobs, F. Ramenta et Filia, Martis Limatu'ra, Speculum In'dicum, Ferri in pul'verem resolutio, (F.) Limaille de Fer. They are considered to possess the general properties of iron:—the iron becoming oxidized.

FERRI ET MAGNE'SIÆ CITRAS, Citrate of iron and magnesi'a, is prepared by dissolving hydrated oxide of iron in a solution of citric acid, saturated with carbonate of magnesia, and evaporating to dryness. It is soluble in water, and does not constipate. Dose, from four grains to fifteen, in solution.

FERRI NITRAS, see Liquor Ferri nitratis—f. Nitratis Liquor, see Liquor Ferri nitratis—f. Oxidum Fuscum, F. subcarbonas—f. Oxidum hydratum, Ferrum oxydatum hydratum—f. Oxidum Magneticum, Oxydum Ferri nigrum—f. Oxidum Nigrum, Oxydum Ferri nigrum—f. Oxidum rubrum, Coleothar, Ferri subcarbonas—f. Oxidum hydratum, Ferrum oxydum hydratum—f. Percyanidum, Prussian blue—f. Peroxydum hydratum, Ferrum oxydatum hydratum—f. Persesquinitrates, see Liquor Ferri nitratis.

FERRI PHOSPHAS, Phosphate of Iron, (Ferri Sulphat. ℥v, Sodæ Phosphat. ℥vi, Aquæ, cong. Dissolve the sulphate of iron and phosphate of soda, severally, in four pints of the water; then mix the solutions, and set the mixture by, that the powder may subside; lastly, having poured off the supernatant liquor, wash the phosphate of iron with water, and dry it with a gentle heat.—Ph. U. S.) Dose, 5 to 10 grains as a chalybeate. Rarely used.

FERRI PILA, F. limatura—f. et Potassæ tartaras, Ferrum tartarizatum—f. Potassio-citras, see Ferri ammonio-citras—f. Potassio-tartaras, Ferrum tartarizatum.

FERRI PROTOCAR' BONAS, Protocar'bonate of Iron, (F.) Carbonate de Fer. The protocarbonate of iron, thrown down from a solution of the sulphate of iron by the carbonate of soda, readily attracts oxygen and becomes converted into the sesquioxide. To prevent this, it may be associated with honey and sugar, and the mixture be reduced by evaporation to a pilular consistence. The mass constitutes the Ferru'ginous Pills, Pilules ferrugineuses, of Vallet, Vallet's Pills. See Pilule Ferri Carbonatis. The Edinburgh Pharmacopœia contains the Ferri Car'bonas Saccharatum, Ferri Car'bonas cum Sac'charo, Sac'charine Car'bonate of Iron, prepared in this manner. It is the Ferrum Carbonicum Saccharatum of Klauer.

The protocarbonate is given in the same diseases as the lactate of iron; ten or fifteen grains in the course of the twenty-four hours.

FERRI PROTOSULPHAS VIRIDIS, F. Sulphas—f. Prussias, Prussian blue.

FERRI PULVIS, Fer réduit, F. réduit par l'hydrogène, Ferrum metallicum, Powder of iron, Reduced Iron, Quevenne's Iron, prepared by passing a stream of hydrogen gas over the sesquioxide of iron, contained in an iron or porcelain tube heated to low redness. It is very liable to become oxidated, and must be kept in a dry, well-stopped bottle. It has been prescribed in anæmic, and especially in chlorotic cases. The ordinary dose is three to six grains, or more, three times a day, in pill made with sugar and gum. A formula for its preparation is given in the last edition of the Pharmacopœia of the United States (1851).

FERRI ET QUINIE CITRAS, Ferrum et Chininum citricum, Citrate of Iron and Quinia, formed by the union of four parts of citrate of iron and one part of citrate of quinia, has been prescribed in cases where a combination of these tonics is indicated.

FERRI RAMENTA, F. limatura—f. Rubigo, F. Subcarbonas—f. Scobs, F. limatura—f. Sesquichloridum, Ferri chloridum—f. Sesquioxidum, F. subcarbonas præcipitatus.

FERRI SESQUINITRATIS, LIQUOR, see Tinctura Ferri muriatis—f. Sodio-tartaras, see Ferri et ammonio-citras.

FERRI SUBCAR' BONAS, F. Car'bonas, F. Rubi'go, Ferrum præcipitatum, Chalybis Rubi'go præparata. (The last two terms, as well as Ferru'go, are applied to the subcarbonate or rust, Feru'go Ferri, Cacaferri, formed by the action of moist air on metallic iron.) A protoxide of iron, oxidized by the decomposition of water; the carbonic acid being attracted from the air. Dose, gr. v to ʒss and more.

Ferri Subcarbonas may be precipitated from sulphate of iron by carbonate of soda. The following is the formula of the Pharmacopœia of the United States:—Ferri sulph. ʒviiij; sodæ carb. ʒix; aquæ bullient. cong. Dissolve the sulphate of iron and carbonate of soda severally in four pints of the water, then mix the solutions, and, having stirred the mixture, set it by that the powder may subside; having poured off the liquor, wash the subcarbonate with hot water, wrap it in bibulous paper, and dry with a gentle heat. It is, also, called Ferri sesquoxidum, Oxidum ferri fuscum, O. ferri rubrum, Deutocar'bonus Ferri fuscus, Crocus martis apereiens, Sesquioxide or peroxide of iron, (F.) Peroxide de fer, Safran de Mars apéritif.

FERRI SULPHAS, Sul Martis, Vitriolum Martis seu Ferri, Ferrum Vitriolatum, Sulphas seu Protosulphas Ferri viridis, Calcad'num, Cal'catar, Cal'cotar, Chalcant'hum, Calcite'a, Atramentum sutorium, Vitriol, Vitriolum viride, An'ima Hep'atis, Sulphate of Iron, Green Vitriol, Copperas, (F.) Sulfate de fer. The Pharmacopœia of the United States directs it to be made by the action of sulphuric acid ʒxviiij, on iron wire, cut in pieces, ʒxij—water, a gallon—evaporating, crystallizing, and drying the crystals on bibulous paper. This salt is inodorous, and of a strong styptic taste. The crystals are light green, transparent, rhomboidal; and soluble in two parts of water. It is tonic and anthelmintic. Dose, gr. j. to vj and more.

FERRI SULPHAS CALCINATUM, Colcothar.

FERRI SULPHAS EXSICCATUM, Ferri Sulphas siccatum, of the Pharmacopœias, is Sulphate of Iron exposed to a moderate heat, until it is capable of being reduced to powder. In this form it can be made into pills. Three grains may be esteemed equivalent to five of the crystallized salt.

FERRI SULPHURETUM, Sulphuret of Iron, Iron pyrites, (F.) Sulfure de fer; may be made by heating one part of sublimed sulphur, over three parts of iron filings in a crucible until the mass begins to glow. It is employed as a ready means for obtaining hydrosulphuric acid gas by the addition of sulphuric or chlorohydric acid.

FERRI TANNAS, Ferrum tannicum, Tannate of Iron, (F.) Tannate de fer. This salt is usually obtained by adding a solution of a salt of sesquioxide of iron, as the persulphate, to a decoction of nut-galls. It is possessed of tonic and astringent properties, and has been extolled, especially in chlorosis.

FERRI TARTARUM, Ferrum tartarizatum—f. Tritoxydum, Colcothar.

FERRI VALERIA'NAS, Ferrum Valerianicum, Valerianate of Iron, (F.) Valérianate de fer. Formed by the action of valerianic acid on oxide of iron. It is a dark brick-red powder, insoluble in water, and has been given in hysteria complicating chlorosis. Dose, from two to four grains. The Dublin Pharmacopœia of 1850 has a formula for this salt.

FERRICUS HYDRAS, Ferrum oxydum hydratum.

FERRO-MAN'GANIC, Ferro-manganicus. Composed of iron and manganese—as a “ferromanganic preparation.”

FERRUGINEOUS, Chalybeate.

FERRUGINEOUS, Chalybeate.

FERRUGO, Ferri subcarbonas, Ferrum oxydatum hydratum.

FERRUM, Mars, Side'ros, Metal'lum hæmato-poëticum, Iron, (F.) Fer. A metal of a bluish-gray colour; fibrous texture; brilliant and fine-grained fracture. Specific gravity 7.600 to 7.800; hard, ductile, malleable, and magnetic. The medicinal virtues of iron are tonic; producing fetid eructations, when it takes effect, owing to its meeting with acid in the stomach, which oxidizes it, and causes the evolution of hydrogen gas. When given in the metallic state, the filings are chiefly used; but the oxides and salts are most commonly employed.

FERRUM OXYD'ATUM HYDRAT'UM, Ferri Ori-dum Hydrat'um (Ph. U. S.) seu Peroxy'dum Hydrat'um, Ferru'go, Hydras Ferri'cus, Hydro-acide of Iron, Hydrat'ed peroxide of Iron, Hydrated Tritoxide of Iron. It may be prepared by taking a solution of sulphate of iron, increasing its dose of oxygen by heating it with nitric acid, and precipitating the oxide by adding pure ammonia in excess, washing the precipitate, and keeping it moist.

The following is the formula adopted by the Pharmacopœia of the United States: Ferri Sulph.
 ζ iv; acid. sulphuric. f ζ iiiss; acid. nitric. f ζ vi, vel q. s., Liq. ammoniac. q. s., aq.æ Oij. Dissolve the sulphate of iron in the water, and having added the sulphuric acid boil the solution; then add the nitric acid in small portions, boiling the liquid for a minute or two after each addition, until the acid ceases to produce a dark colour.
Filter the liquid, allow it to cool, and add the liquor ammonia in excess, stirring the mixture briskly; wash the precipitate with water, until the washings cease to yield a precipitate with chloride of barium, and keep it close in bottles with water sufficient to cover it.

It has been brought forward as an antidote to arsenic; and many cases of its efficacy have been published.

From 10 to 20 parts of the hydrated oxide would seem to be more than sufficient to convert 1 part of arsenious acid into the basic salt of iron.

moist, mix it with the bitartrate of potassa and half a gallon of the distilled water. Keep the mixture at the temperature of 140° for 30 hours, frequently stirring; filter the solution, and evaporate by means of a water bath, at the same temperature, to dryness.—(Ph. U. S.) It is one of the mildest of the salts of iron, and not unpalatable. Dose, gr. x. to ζ ss.

The Tinctura Martis Aperiti'va, *Tincture of FEVER, Febris, from feritas, 'wildness,' or from feror, 'heat,' or from februo, 'I purify.'

Pyri, Pyr'etos, πυρετος, (F.) Fièvre. One of the most frequent and dangerous affections to which the body is liable. A person has an attack of fever, when he is affected with rigors, followed by increased heat of skin, quick pulse, languor, and lassitude. Rigors, increased heat, and frequency of pulse have each been assumed as the essential character of fever. It is not characterized, however, by any one, but depends upon the coexistence of many symptoms. Fevers have been usually divided into idiopathic or essential, and intc symptomatic. The idiopathic arise without any obvious local cause. The symptomatic are dependent upon local irritation. Idiopathic fevers may be divided into three classes: 1. Those attended with distinct paroxysms:—intermittents.
2. Remittent and continued fevers: and, 3. Fevers complicated with eruptions, or the exanthematous. These divisions admit of great variety, owing to climate, season, soil, age, &c. All ages and climates are liable to fever; and its exciting causes are very numerous. These causes may be common; as irritations in the intestines; external injuries, stimulants, &c.; or they may be specific; as miasmata, contagion, &c. The greatest diversity has prevailed regarding the theory of fever. Its primary seat has been placed in the brain, mucous membrane of the stomach and intestines, skin, nerves, blood-vessels, liver, vena cava, pancreas, &c. It would seem, however, that although, in fever, the whole of the functions are morbidly impressed, the arguments in favour of the impression being first made on the nervous system and the system of nutrition are the strongest. The exciting cause of fever, whatever it may be, produces an irregular action in the system of nutrition, which is soon conveyed to the rest of the system, owing to the extensive sympathy which exists between every part of the body; and it is probable, that all those local inflammations and congestions are the consequence, rather than the cause, of this disordered condition of the system. The general character of fever is clearly shown by examination of the blood. When fever is devoid of inflammatory complication, the quantity of fibrin is in no case augmented. It frequently remains in the healthy proportion, and at times diminishes to an extent not met with in any other acute disease. The alteration of the blood in fevers, which consists generally in a diminution of the fibrinous element, is the reverse of what occurs in inflammation.

Many phenomena of fever are influenced by that periodicity, which we notice in the execution of several of the functions of the body. The types of intermittents are strong evidences of such an influence.

In the treatment of fever, it is important to bear in mind, 1. Its tendency, particularly in the case of the exanthemata, to run a definite course, and terminate in restoration to health. 2. The disposition to local determination or hyperæmiæ:—the most frequent cause of the fatal termination of fever; a circumstance requiring the vigilant attention of the physician. 3. That the symptoms must be attentively studied, in order to deduce, as far as possible from them, the indications of cure. Lastly, attention must be paid to the prevalent epidemic. There are particular seasons in which fevers are very malignant; and others in which they are as mild; circumstances which necessarily have an effect upon the treatment.

FEVER AND AGUE, Intermittent Fever—f. Acclimating, F. strangers.

FEVER, ADE'NO-MENINGE'AL, Febris ade'no-meningea seu mesenterica (BAGLIVI.) seu mucosa, Morbus mucosus, Gastro-duodenopyra, Mucosus or Pituitous or Catar'hal Fever, Phlegmopyra, Phlegmopyra, Phlegmatopyra, Gastro-Bronchitis. Fever, accompanied with considerable mucous secretion; especially from the digestive tube.

FEVER, ADE'NO-NERVOUS, Plague.

FEVER, ADYNAM'IC, Febris adynamica, Asthenicopyra, Asthenicopyretus, Asthenopyra, Asthenopyretus. Fever attended with great prostration of the vital powers—as Typhoid and Typhus fever.

FEVER, AF'RICAN, Febris Africa'na. The malignant bilious remittent fever, which prevails on the western coast of Africa, FEVER, ALGID, see Algidus.

FEVER, ANOM'ALOUS, Febris Anom'ala seu errat'ica seu irregula'ris seu vaga. A fever, whose progress and type are irregular.

FEVER, APHON'IC, Febris apho'nica. A variety of intermittent, in which the voice is lost during the paroxysm.

FEVER, APOPLEC'TIC, Febris apoplec'tica seu comato'des seu lethar'gica seu soporo'sa, Coma- tose Fever. An intermittent or continued fever, attended with apoplectic symptoms.

FEVER, ARTICULAR ERUPTIVE, Dengue—f. Articular rheumatic, Dengue.

FEVER, ARTIFIC'IAL, Febris artificia'lis seu artè promo'ta. Fever produced designedly by the internal or external use of stimulants.

FEVER, ASTHEN'IC, Febris asthen'ica. Fever accompanied with debility. It may include every variety of fever under certain circumstances, but is generally appropriated to typhus.

FEVER, ASTHMAT'IC, Febris asthmat'ica. A pernicious intermittent, accompanied with symptoms of asthma.

FEVER, ATAXO-ADYNAM'IC, Febris atax'o-ady-nam'ica. Fever characterized by symptoms of ataxia and adynamia.

FEVER, BARCELONA, Fever, yellow—f. Bastard, Illegitimate fever.

FEVER, BIL'IOUS, Febris bilio'sa seu polychol'ica seu aso'des seu choleric'a seu gastro'ica seu hepat'ica seu cholepyret'ica, Cholepyra, Cholepyretus, Hepatogastrocholo'sis, Enteropyra bilio'sa, Cholozemia febrilis, Syn'ochus bilio'sa. The common remittent fever of summer and autumn; generally supposed to be owing to, or connected with, derangement of the biliary system.

FEVER, BILIOUS REMITTING, YELLOW, Fever, yellow—f. Bladdery, Pemphigus.

FEVER BLISTER. A term, vaguely applied to vesicular or pustular eruptions, which appear particularly about the mouth, during or after febrile disturbance.

FEVER, BOA' VISTA. A malignant bilious remittent fever, greatly resembling yellow fever, which was very fatal at Fernando Po, and in ships in its waters, in the year 1845.

FEVER, BONA. A malignant paludal fever, which prevailed amongst the troops of the garrison at Bona in Algeria, from 1832 to 1835.

FEVER, CARDIAL'GIC, Febris Cardial'gica. A variety of pernicious intermittent, accompanied with violent cardialgia during the paroxysm.

FEVER, CARDIT'IC. Intermittent fever, accompanied with pain at the heart.

FEVER, CATARRHAL, F. adeno-meningeal.

FEVER, CEPHAL'GIC, Febris cephal'gica. A pernicious intermittent, accompanied with intense pain of the head. Also, intermittent cephalalgia.

FEVER, CEPHAL'IC, Febris cephal'ica. A febrile affection of children—intermediate between the acute form of active cerebral congestion and the chronic form—which is attended by fever, pain in the head, disorder, or more generally constipation of the bowels, and a train of phenomena often supposed to be premonitory of an attack of hydrocephalus.—Mauthner.

FEVER, CER'E'BRAL, Brain fever. Fever, generally of an ataxic character, in which the brain is considerably affected.

FEVER, CHAGRES, Panama' Fever. A severe form of endemic fever, common on the isthmus of Panama.

FEVER, CHILDBED, Fever, puerperal, Puerperal Fever—f. Childbed, Low, see Peritonitis.

FEVER, CHOL'ERIC, Febris choleric'a. A variety of pernicious intermittent, accompanied with symptoms of cholera morbus.

FEVER, CHOLERIC, OF INFANTS, Cholera infantum.

FEVER, CHRONIC, Febris chron'ica. Some authors apply this name to protracted fevers; others to hectic fever.

FEVER, COLLIQUATIVE, Febris tabida seu colliquativa. Fever, characterized by rapid emaciation, copious evacuations, and rapid prostration of strength.

FEVER, COMATOSE, F. apoplectic.

FEVER, CONGESTIVE, Febris congestiva. Fever accompanied by obscure symptoms; or by great oppression and depression; in which it is difficult—and often impossible—to induce reaction. Congestive fevers occurs in various parts of this country, especially in the fall; and they are very common in India. The term congestive fever is often used in some parts of the south of the United States very indefinitely—to include winter typhus, and typhoid fevers, typhoid pneumonia, as well as intermittents and autumnal remittents.—Dickson.

FEVER, CONTINENT, see Continent and Continued fever—f. Continual, see Continued fever—f. Continued, common, Synochus.

FEVER, CONVULSIVE, Febris convulsiva. A pernicious intermittent or remittent, accompanied by convulsions.

FEVER, COUNTRY. Fever occasioned by exposure to the miasms of a highly malarious soil. A term much used in the Southern States.

FEVER, DELIRIOUS, Febris eum deliriva, (F.) Fièvre délirante. A pernicious intermittent, characterized by delirium in the paroxysms.

FEVER, DEPURATORY, Febris depuratoria. A fever, to which was attributed the property of purifying the blood; or which indicated, that such a supposed depuration had occurred.

FEVER, DIAPHORETIC, Febris diaphoretica, Febris sudatoria. A pernicious intermittent, with excessive sweating during the fit.

FEVER, DIARY, Ephemera.

FEVER, DIGESTIVE. The chilliness, followed by increased heat and quickness of pulse, which frequently accompanies digestion.

FEVER, DOUBLE, (F.) Fièvre double ou doublée. An intermittent, which has two paroxysms in a given time, instead of one.

FEVER, DOUBLE-QUARTAN. A fever, whose paroxysms occur two days in succession, and fail the third day; the first paroxysm resembling the 4th, and the second the 5th.

FEVER, DOUBLE-QUOTIDIAN. An intermittent, whose paroxysms return twice every day at corresponding hours.

FEVER, DOUBLE-TERTIAN. An intermittent, whose paroxysms return every day; the first corresponding with the 3d, the second with the 4th, and so on.

FEVER, DUODECIMANE, Febris duodecimana. A supposititious intermittent, whose paroxysms recur on the 12th day, or every 11 days.

FEVER, DYNAMIC, Synocha—f. Endemial, Remittent F.—f. Endemic, Remittent F.—f. Endemical, Remittent F.—f. Enteric, see Typhus—f. Ephemeral, Ephemera.

FEVER, EPILEPTIC, Febris epileptica. A variety of pernicious intermittent, accompanied with attacks of epilepsy.

FEVER, EROTIC, Febris erotica, (F.) Fièvre d'amour. A chronic fever, occasioned by unpropitious love.

FEVER, ERRATIC, see Erratic—f. Eruptive, Exanthematica—f. Eruptive, articular, Dengue—f. Exacerbating, Remittent Fever.

FEVER, FAINTING, OF PERSIA. A singular and fatal epidemic, presenting some points of analogy with cholera, which prevailed at Teheran in the autumn of 1842.

FEVER, FIVE DAY, see Relapse.

FEVER, GANGRENOUS, Febris gangranodes. Fever, accompanied by gangrene of various parts, and especially of the limbs and genitals. Sénac describes an intermittent of this kind.

FEVER, GASTRALGIC. An intermittent accompanied with acute burning lacerating pain at the stomach.

FEVER, GASTRIC, Febris gastrica seu gastrica biliosa, Gastrop'gra, Gastropyr'etus, Gastrocholo'sis, Hepatogastrocholo'sis, Stomach'ic fever, Syn'ochus Biliosa. A name given by some to bilious fever, which has appeared to them to be dependent on an affection of the stomach. Also, called Menin'go-gastric fever, Febris menin'go-gastrica, Menin'go-gastritis, Gastro-menin'gitis, Harvest fever, (F.) Fièvre de la Moisson, F. Méningo-gastrique.

FEVER, GASTRO-ADYNAMIC, Febris gastroadynamica. A fever, in which the symptoms of bilious fever are joined with those of adynamic fever.

FEVER, GASTRO-ANGIOTENIC. A fever, in which the symptoms of bilious are united with those of inflammatory fever.

FEVER, GASTRO-ATAXIC. A fever, in which the symptoms of bilious fever are united with those of ataxic fever.

FEVER, GIBRALTAR, Fever, yellow—f. Harvest, F. Gastric—f. Hæmagastic, F. yellow.

FEVER, HÆMOPTOIC, Febris hæmoptica. A variety of masked intermittent, in which periodical hæmoptysis is the chief symptom.

FEVER, HAY, Catarrhus æstivus, Summer Catarrh, Hay Asthma, Rose Catarrh, Summer Bronchitis. A catarrh to which certain persons are subject in summer, and which has been ascribed in England to the effluvium of hay, but this is not the probable cause. It is a catarrh with sneezing, headach, weeping, snuffling and cough, with, at times, fever and general discomfort. It is not uncommon in this country. It disappears spontaneously,—to recur on subsequent years about the same period.

FEVER, HEBDOMADAL. A supposititious fever, whose paroxysms return weekly, and on the same day.

FEVER, HECTIC, see Consumption, and Hectic Fever.

FEVER, HEPATIC or HEPATALGIC. A pernicious intermittent, with violent pain in the right hypochondrium.

FEVER, HILL. A modification of remittent, occurring in the hilly districts of India.

FEVER, HOSPITAL, Typhus gravior.

FEVER, HUMORAL, Febris humoralis. Fever in which an alteration or deterioration of the humours is suspected.

FEVER, HUNGARY, Febris Hungarica seu Pannonica, Lues Pannonica, Morbus Ungaricus, Cephalon'osus, Vermis cer'ebri, (F.) Fièvre Hongroise ou de Hongrie. An epidemic typhus, common amongst the soldiers in barracks, in Hungary.

FEVER, HYDROPHOBIC, Febris hydrophobica. Pernicious intermittent, with dread of liquids.

FEVER, HYSTERIC, Febris hysterica. Hysteria, accompanied by fever. Hysteria, occurring with each paroxysm of an intermittent.

FEVER, ICTERIC, Febris icterica. Fever, accompanied with jaundice. Some intermittents exhibit this complication at each paroxysm.

FEVER, ICTERIC, REMITTING, see Relapse.

FEVER, INFANTILE REMITTEMENT, Febris infantum remittens, F. vermino'sa, (of many), F. mucosa vermino'sa, F. lenta, Spurious worm fever, Remitting fever of children, Hæctica infantilis. A fever occurring in childhood, which often assumes many of the characters of hydrocephalus. It appears generally to be dependent upon a morbid condition of the stomach and bowels.

FEVER, INFLAMMATORY, Synocha.

FEVER, INSIDIOUS. Fever, which, at first, seems devoid of danger, but subsequently becomes of a more or less malignant character.

FEVER, INTERMITTENT, see Intermittent fever—f. Jail, Typhus gravior—f. Jungle, see Jungle fever.

FEVER, LAKE. Fever produced by exposure to the malaria in the neighbourhood of the northern lakes of this country.

FEVER, LENTICULAR, Miliary fever—f. Irritative, Irritation, morbid.

FEVER, LO'CHIAL, Febris lochia'lis. That acceleration of the circulation which sometimes occurs during the discharge of the lochia.

FEVER, LUNG, Catarrh, Pneumonia.

FEVER, MALIGNANT, Febris malign'a. Fever which makes its approaches insidiously, and subsequently becomes formidable. Any fever which exhibits a very dangerous aspect. Typhus gravior.

FEVER, MALIGNANT PESTILENTIAL, Fever, yellow—f. Marsh, Elodes (febris.)

FEVER, MASKED, Febris larv'ata, (F.) Fièvre larvée, Dead or Dumb Ague. An anomalous intermittent, the paroxysms of which have not the regular stages, or are masked.

FEVER, MENINGO-GASTRIC, Fever gastric.

FEVER, MESENTERIC, Febris mesenter'ica. A name given, by Baglivi, to a species of fever which appears to have belonged either to the mucous or bilious.

FEVER, MILK, Febris lact'ea, (F.) Fièvre de lait ou laitéuse ou lactée; Galactopy'ra, Galactopy'etus. The fever which precedes or accompanies the secretion of milk in women recently delivered. It comes on generally about the third day after delivery, and is characterized by quick pulse; increased heat; redness of face; diminution or temporary suspension of the lochial discharge; tumefaction and tension of the breasts. It commonly terminates in twenty-four hours, and often with profuse perspiration. It requires the use of antiphlogistics, with dry diet.

FEVER, MIXED, Synochus—f. Mucous, F. adeno-meningeal.

FEVER, NEPHRITIC, Febris nephrit'ica. Intermittent fever, accompanied with nephritic pain during the paroxysm.

FEVER, NERVOUS, Febris nerv'osa seu neuro'des seu lenta nerv'osa, Neuropy'ra, Neuroopy'etus. A variety of Typhus; the Typhus mitior of Cullen. By many, however, it is esteemed a distinct disease. See Typhoid fever.

FEVER, NERVOUS, WITH EXANTHEMATOUS ERUPTION, Typhus.

FEVER, NEURALGIC, Dengue.

FEVER, NIGER. A malignant fever, of the bilious remittent kind, which proved fatal to many in the expeditions sent out by the British government to explore the Niger, in the years 1841-42, and previously.

FEVER, NON'ANE, Febris non'ana. A supposititious fever, whose paroxysms recur every ninth day, or every eight days.

FEVER, OCT'ANE, Febris octa'na. An intermittent, whose paroxysms recur every eighth day.

FEVER, PALUDAL, Intermittent—f. Panama, Fever, Chagres—f. Paroxysmal, Remittent fever—f. Periodic, Intermittent.

FEVER, PERIODICAL, Febris period'ica. An intermittent or remittent fever.

FEVER, PERNICIOUS, Febris pernicio'sa. Intermittent fever, when attended with great danger, and which destroys the majority of those affected by it in the first four or five paroxysms; sometimes in the very first.

FEVER, PESTILENTIAL, Febris pestilential'is. The Plague. Also a severe case of typhus. The yellow fever and sweating sickness have, likewise, been thus designated.

FEVER, PESTILENTIAL, OF CATTLE, Muir—f. Pituitous, F. adeno-meningeal.

FEVER, PLEURITIC. An intermittent or remittent, accompanied with inflammation of the pleura.

FEVER, PNEUMONIC, Febris pneumon'ica. An intermittent, accompanied with inflammation of the lungs. Also, pneumonia.

FEVER POISON, see Poison—f. Pseudo, Irritative, morbid.

FEVER, PUERPERAL, Febris puerpera'lis, Child-bed fever, (F.) Fièvre puerpérale. This name has been given to several acute diseases, supervening on delivery. It means, generally, a malignant variety of peritonitis, which runs its course very rapidly, and passes into a typhoid condition, unless met, at the very onset, by the most active depleting measures. By the generality of practitioners, it is esteemed to be eminently contagious; some, however, deny that it is so. See Peritonitis, and Puerperal fever.

FEVER, PUERPERAL ADYNAMIC OR MALIGNANT, see Peritonitis—f. Puking, Milk sickness.

FEVER, PU'RULENT, Febris purulen'ta. Fever, which accompanies suppuration.

FEVER, PUTRID, Typhus gravior.

FEVER, QUINTAN, Febris quinta'na. A fever, whose paroxysms return every fifth day. It is seen rarely, or never.

FEVER, QUOTIDIAN, see Quotidian—f. Red Tongue, see Typhus.

FEVER, REGULAR, Febris regula'ris seu exquisi'ta. An intermittent whose paroxysms follow a determinate type. It is opposed to atypic. Sometimes opposed to anomalous.

FEVER, RELAPSING, see Relapse.

FEVER, REMITTENT, see Remittent Fever—f. Remittent, Bilious, see Relapse—f. Remittent, infantile, see Fever, infantile remittent—f. Remittent of children, F. infantile remittent—f. Remittent icteric, see Relapse—f. Rheumatic, Rheumatism, acute—f. Root, Triosteum perfoliatum.

FEVER, SCORBU'IC, Febris scorbu'tica. The febrile movement, which sometimes accompanies scorbutus or scurvy.

FEVER, SEASONING, F., strangers'.

FEVER, SEC'ONDARY. A febrile condition which recurs in certain affections after having ceased; such as the secondary fever, which comes on at the time of the maturation of the variolous pustules, or as the eruption of scarlatina, &c., disappears.

FEVER, SEPTAN, Febris septa'na. An intermittent, whose paroxysms recur every six days, and consequently on the seventh.

FEVER, SEVEN DAY, see Relapse.

FEVER, SEXTAN, Febris sexta'na. A fever, which recurs every five days, and consequently on the sixth.

FEVER, SHIP, see Typhus.

FEVER, SIMPLE, Febris Simplex. Simple fever is that which has no predominant character—bilious, inflammatory, or nervous; and which is unaccompanied by any local determination, hyperæmia, or complication. It may be continued, remittent, or intermittent.

FEVER, SIMPLE CONTINUED. This is the most favourable form of continued fever, and has a tendency to wear itself out, provided only the lædèntia be avoided. The prognosis is consequently favourable, and the treatment simple consisting in perfect repose of body and mind, abstinence, and relieving the thirst by cold drinks.

FEVER, SINGUL'TOUS, Febris singulto'sa seu lygmo'des seu lyngo'des. Fever, accompanied with singultus or hiccough.

FEVER, SOLAR, Dengue—f. Spotted, Typhus gravior.

FEVER, STERCORAL, Febris stercora'lis. Fever, produced by an accumulation of fæces in the intestines.

FEVER, STOMACHIC, Gastric Fever.

FEVER, STRANGERS', Acclimating or Seasoning fever. Yellow, or remittent fever, which is endemic in certain places, and to which strangers are especially liable.

FEVER, SUBCONTINUAL, Remittent Fever.

FEVER, SUBIN'TRANT, Febris subin'trans. An intermittent, in which one paroxysm is scarcely finished before the other begins.

FEVER, SUN, Dengue—f. Sweating, Sudor Anglicus.

FEVER, SYN'COPAL, Febris syncopalis seu minuta, (F.) Fèvre syncopale. A variety of pernicious intermittent, in which there is, in every paroxysm, one or more faintings.

FEVER, SYNOCHOID, Synochus.

FEVER, SYPHILITIC, Febris syphilitica. Fever, accompanying syphilis, or supposed to be owing to a syphilitic taint.

FEVER, TER'TIAN, Febris tertiana. A fever, whose paroxysm returns on the third day, and consequently every two days.

FEVER, THIRD DAY, Tertian.

FEVER, TRAG'IC, Febris Trag'ica. A low fever, in which the patient declaims like an actor during the delirium.

FEVER, TRAUMAT'IC, Febris traumatica. The fever, which supervenes on wounds or great surgical operations.

FEVER, TREMBLING, Intermittent fever—f. Typhoid, see Typhus—f. Typhoid, of India, Cholera—f. Typhous, Typhus—f. Varicellar, see Varioloid—f. Varioloid, see Varioloid.

FEVER, VER'MINOUS, Febris verminosa, Helminthopyra, Worm fever. Fever, produced by the presence of worms in the digestive tube, or accompanied by their expulsion.

FEVER, VERNAL, Febris vernalis. An intermittent or other fever occurring in the spring. Vernal intermittents were formerly considered salubrious.

“An ague in the spring
Is physic for a king.”

FEVER, VESICULAR, Pemphigus.

FEVER, WAL'CHEREN, Gall-sickness. The remittents and intermittents to which the British troops were exposed, who were attached to the expedition to Walcheren, in 1809.

FEVER, WATER BRAIN, Hydrocephalus internus—f. Winter, see Tongue, black—f. Worm, Verminous F.—f. Worm, spurious, Fever, infantile remittent.

A very acute and dangerous febrile affection; so called, because complicated, in its second stage, with a jaundiced appearance, accompanied by vomiting of black matter. Sauvages, Cullen, and others regard it as a variety of typhus; and Pinel, as a species of gastro-adyamic, or bilious putrid fever. It occurs, endemically, only within the tropics; but it has been met with epidemically in the temperate regions. Broussais regards the disease as gastro-enteritis, exasperated by atmospheric heat; so that it runs through its stages with much greater rapidity than the gastro-enteritis of our climates. The yellow colour of the skin, according to him, is owing to the inflammation of the small intestine,—and especially of the duodenum, — augmenting the secretion of the liver, and at the same time preventing its discharge into the duodenum. The pathology of this affection, as well as its origin, is still unsettled. The treatment must generally be of the most active nature at the onset; consisting in bleeding largely, and exhibiting mercury, so as to excite a new action, if possible;—the other symptoms being combated according to general principles. It must vary, however, according to the epidemic.

FIBRÆ ARCIFORMES, see Arciform.

FIBRE, Fibra, Is, Cledon, Filum. An organic filament, of a solid consistence, and more or less extensible, which enters into the composition of every animal and vegetable texture. The simple or elementary fibre of the ancients, from a particular assemblage and arrangement of which every texture of the body was conceived to be constituted, seems entirely ideal. The moderns usually admit, with Haller and Blumenbach, three elementary fibres or tissues. 1. The cellular or laminated, formed chiefly of thin plates, of a whitish colour and extensible, which seems to consist of concrete gelatin. 2. The nervous, pulpy, or medullary, formed of a soft substance, contained in a cellular sheath, and consisting of albumen united to a fatty matter. 3. The muscular, composed of round filaments, of a grayish or reddish colour, and formed of fibrin. Chaussier has added to these the albugineous fibre, but it seems to differ from the cellular fibre only in greater condensation of the molecules. See Fibrous.

A very small or ultimate fibre is called a Fibril, Fibrilla.

F'IBRILLAR, Fibrilla'ris. Relating or appertaining to fibrils.

FIBRILLAT'ION, Fibrillatio. The formation of fibrils.

F'IBRIN or Fib'rin, Fibrine, Fibri'na, Fibri'ne, Fibra sanguinis, Materia fibrosa, Lympha plastica, Matière fibreuse du sang. An immediate animal principle—solid, white, and inodorous; insipid; heavier than water; without action on the vegetable blues; elastic, when moist; hard and brittle when dry. It enters into the composition of the ehyle and the blood, and forms the chief part of the muscles of red-blooded animals. Muscular fibrin, Syntouin, Musculin, has been shown, however, to be different from that of the blood. In certain diseased actions, Fibrin or Coagulable lymph, gluten, is separated from the blood, and is found in considerable quantity on the surfaces of membranes, and in the cavities of the body. See Liquor Sanguinis.

Fibrin is likewise a proximate principle of vegetables, and differs but little in chemical composition from animal fibrin; nor does it differ much from albumen and casein.

Fibrin is very nutritious.

FIBRINAT'ION, Fibrinatio. The act of adding fibrin to the blood. The opposite to defibrination.

FIB'RINOUS, Fibrinosus, (F.) Fibrineux. That which is composed of fibrin, or has the appearance of fibrin.

FIBRO. In composition, appertaining or relating to fibrous tissue.

FIBRO-AREOLAR, Fibro-cellular.

FIBRO-BRONCHITIS. Fibrous or rheumatic inflammation of the bronchial tubes.

FIBRO-CAR'TILAGE, Fibro-cartilago. An organic tissue, partaking of the nature of the fibrous tissue, and of that of cartilage. It is dense, resisting, elastic, firm, supple, and flexible. Fibro-cartilages are distinguished into.—1. Membraniform, or those which serve as moulds to certain parts, as the alæ nasi and eyelids. 2. Vaginiform, or those which form sheaths for the sliding of tendons. 3. Interarticular, those which are met with in the movable articulations. 4. Uniting, (F.) Fibro-cartilages d'union, which form a junction between two bones, as the symphysis pubis. Fibro-cartilages are sometimes formed adventitiously, as the result of a morbid process in different organs.

FIBRO-CARTILAGES, TARSAL, see Tarsus.

FIBRO-CARTILAGINES INTERVERTEBRALES, Intervertebral cartilages.

FIBRO-CELL'ULAR, Fibro-cellularis, Fibro-areolaris, Fibro-areola'ris. That which partakes of the fibrous and of the cellular tissue, as the fascia transversalis.

FIBRO-CELLULAR TUMOUR, Tumour, fibro-cellular.

FIBROMA, Tumour, fibrous.

FIBRO-MUCOUS, Fibro-mucosus, (F.) Fibromuqueux. Possessing the nature of fibrous and of mucous membranes. A term applied to fibrous membranes, which are intimately united with other membranes of a mucous nature, as the pituitary membrane, the membrane of the urethra, &c.

FIBRO-PLASTIC, Fibro-plasticus, (F.) Fibroplastique, from fibra, 'fibre,' and πλασσω, 'I form.' An epithet for a morbid formation, constituted of the elements of areolar tissue transformed, in part, into fibre.—Lebert.

FIBRO-PLASTIC TUMOUR, Sarcoma.

FIBRO-SEROUS, Fibro-serosus, (F.) Fibro-séreux. Possessing the nature of fibrous and serous membranes. Membranes, composed of a fibrous, and a serous sheet, intimately united:—as the Dura Mater, Pericardium, Tunica albuginea testis, &c.

FIBROID, Fibrous, Tumour, fibrous.

F'IBROUS, Fibrosus, Fibroid, (F.) Fibreux. Composed of fibres. Certain membranes, as the dura mater, periosteum, ligamentous capsules of the joints, &c., are fibrous. The fibrous system of Bichat includes the system of organs formed by the albugineous fibre of Chaussier. It comprises, particularly, the periosteum and perichondrium; the articular capsules and ligaments; the tendons; the dura mater, pericardium, tunica serotica, tunica albuginea testis, outer membrane of the spleen, &c. Under simple fibrous tissues, Tela fibrosa, certain writers have classed the white and yellow fibrous tissues, and areolar tissue. Both the yellow and the white may be detected in the areolar tissue. The white is said to exist alone in ligaments, tendons, fibrous membranes, aponeuroses, &c. The yellow, (F.) Tissu jaune, exists separately in the middle coat of the arteries, the chordæ vocales, ligamentum nuchæ of quadrupeds, &c. It differs from the white in possessing a high degree of elasticity, owing to the presence of a distinct principle, called by MM. Robin and Verdeil, élasticine.

FIBROUS GROWTH, Tumour, fibrous—f. Matter of the Brain, see Cerebrum—f. Membranes, see Membranes, fibrous.

FIB'ULA, (for Figibula [?] from figo, 'to fix,') Crusis radialis, Canna minor, Os per'onæ, Peroneum, Foc'ile minus, Sura, Arun'do minor, Fist'ula Crusis, Tibia minima, Os tib'ia minus, Spellbone, 'a clasp.' The splinter bone of the leg. (F.) Péroné. The long, small bone, situate at the outer part of the leg. The superior or tibial extremity of the fibula is rounded and forms the caput or head. It is articulated with the tibia. Its inferior or tarsal extremity is broader than the superior. It is articulated with the tibia and astragalus, and forms the malleolus externus or outer ankle by means of its coronoid process. The body of the bone has three faces, having more or less prominent edges. It is separated from the tibia by the interosseous space, and is developed by three points of ossification; one at the body, and one at each extremity. It prevents the foot from turning outwards.

FIBULAD, see Fibular aspect.

FIBULAR, Peroneal.

FIBULAR ASPECT. An aspect towards the side on which the fibula is situated.—Barclay, Fib'ulad is used by the same writer adverbially, to signify 'towards the fibular aspect.'

FIBULATIO, Infibulatio.

FIC, Ficus.

FICAIRE, Ranunculus ficaria.

FICARIA, Scrophularia aquatica—f. Communis, Ranunculus ficaria—f. Ranunculoides, Ranunculus ficaria—f. Verna, Ranunculus ficaria.

FICATIO, Ficus.

FICITION, Physician.

FICOSA EMINENTIA, Ficus.

FICUS, Sycē, Sy'cea, Sycum, Syco'sia, Syco'ma, Fica'tio, Ficosus Tumor, Fico'sa eminentia, Maris'ca, (F.) Fie. A fleshy excrescence, often soft and reddish, sometimes hard and scirrhous, hanging by a peduncle, or formed like a fig; occurring on the eyelids, chin, tongue, anus, or organs of generation. The figs seated on the last-mentioned parts are generally of a syphilitic character.

FICUS, F. Carica.

FICUS CARICA, F. vulgaris seu communis. The systematic name of the fig tree; (F.) Figuier. Ord. Urticaceæ. Carica, Ficus, Sycê, aven, (F.) Figue: the fig—is a pleasant fruit when ripe; as well as when dried in the state in which it is found in the shops—Ficus, (Ph. U. S.) It is used, at times, in place of a cataplasm; especially in gum-boils.

FICUS COMMUNIS, F. Carica—f. Indiæ grana, Coccus cacti—f. Indica, Musa paradisiaca, see Caoutchouc, Carica papaya, and Lacca—f. Religiosa, see Lacca.

FIDERIS, MINERAL WATERS OF. These waters, in the Canton of the Grisons, are strong, acidulous, and alkaline, and possess all the virtues of the class.

FIDGETS. Of doubtful etymology. Dysphor'ia simplex, D. nervosa, Erethi'smus simplex, Titubatio, Creepers, (Sc.) Feyk, (F.) Frétillement. General restlessness and troublesome uneasiness of the nerves and muscles, with increased sensibility, and inability of fixing the attention, accompanied with a perpetual desire of changing the position. See Agacement des Nerfs.

FIDICINALES, Lumbricales manus.

FIE, Psychorages.

FIEL, Bile—f. de Bœuf, Bile of the ox—f. de Terre, Fumaria.

FIGURATIO, Imagination.

FIGURE, Countenance.

FIGURÉ, (F.) An epithet for a compressive bandage, applied over the head after bleeding from the frontal vein. It has also been called bandage royal.

FIGWORT, Serophularia nodosa—f. Water, greater, Serophularia aquatica.

FILACEOUS, Filamentous.

FILA NERVEA, Nerve-fibres—f. Spermatica, Spermatozoa.

FILAIRE DE MÉDINE, Dracunculus.

FILAMENT, Filum, Filamentum, from filum, 'a thread.' This word is used synonymously with fibril; thus, we say, a nervous or cellular filament or fibril. Also, the glairy, thread-like substance which forms in the urine in some diseases, and which depends on a particular secretion from the mucous membrane of the urinary passages.

FILAMENTOUS, Filamento'sus. Filaceous; threadlike; filiform. Same etymon. Containing threadlike substances, as the tunica filamentosa or decidua:—Filamentous urine; urine containing threadlike substances.

FILAMENTUM, Frænum.

FILARIA GUINEENSIS, Dracunculus—f. Hominis bronchialis, see Worms—f. Medicinis, Dracunculus—f. Oculi, see Worms.

FILETUM, Frænum linguae.

FILICULA, Polypodium filix mas—f. Duleis, Polypodium vulgare.

FILIFORM, Filiformis, from filum, 'a thread,' and forma, 'form.' Having the shape of a thread; as the "filiform papillæ of the tongue;" a "filiform pulse." See Papillæ.

FILING, Limatio.

FILIPENDULA, Spiræa filipendula.

FILIUS ANTE PATREM, Tussilago.

FILIX FEMINEA, Pteris aquilina—f. Florida, Osmunda regalis—f. Mas, Polypodium filix mas—f. Non ramosa dentata, Polypodium filix mas—f. Nymphæa, Pteris aquilina—f. Pinnata, Polypodium filix mas—f. Veneris, Adiantum pedatum.

FILLE, Girl.

FILLET, Fascia, Laqueus—f. of the Corpus Callosum, Gyrus fornicatus.

FILLING. A term employed in dentistry for the operation of stuffing the cavity of a carious tooth with some indestructible substance, to prevent the access of extraneous matters—Odontoplerosis. See Plugging.

FILTRATION, Filtratio, Percolatio, E'this, Ethis'mus. Same etymon as the next. A pharmaceutical operation, which consists in passing a fluid through a filter or strainer, for the purpose of clarifying it. In ancient physiology, it meant the action by which the different humours of the body are separated from the mass of the blood.

FILTRUM. A filter. (F.) Filtre; — from feutre, 'felt or felled cloth,' which was used to form it. Any porous material; such as sand, some kinds of freestone, powdered charcoal, pounded glass, flannel, unsized paper, &c., through which a fluid is passed for the purpose of separating it from the matters suspended in it.

FILUM. Filament—f. Muscular, Muscular fibre—f. Tœniaforme, Tæniola.

FILUM TERMINALE. A slender ligament, prolonged from the nervous sheath, formed by the spinal pia mater, which descends through the centre of the cauda equina, and is attached to the dura mater, lining the canal of the coccyx.

FIMBRIA, Parasma. A band, a fringe; as the fimbria or fimbriated or fringed extremity of the Fallopiian tube.

FIMBRIÆ CARNOSE COLI, Appendiculæ pinguedinosæ—f. Tubarum Fallopii, see Tube, Fallopiian.

FIMBRIATED, see Fimbria.

FIMUS, Bor'borus, Onthus, Stercus. (F.) Fiente. Dung, excrement.

FIMUS seu STERCUS ANSERIS, Goose-dung, was applied as a poultice to the feet in malignant fever. See Chenocoprus.

FIMUS EQUINUS, Stercus equi non castrati. Stone horse-dung was once thought antipleuritic.

FIMUS VACCÆ, Cow-dung, was employed as a cataplasm, especially in gout.

FINCKLE, Anethum.

FINGER, Digitus—f. Middle, Medius digitus—f. Ring, Annular finger—f. Stall, Digitale.

FIR TREE, SILVER, EUROPEAN, Pinus picea.

FIR, YEW-LEAVED, Pinus abies.

FIRE DAMP, Hydrogen, carburetted—f. Perisian, Anthracion—f. St. Anthony's, Erysipelas.

FIRE WEED, Erechtites hieracifolia, Senecio.

FIRING, Cauterization.

FIRST INTENTION, see Intention.

FISHSKIN, Ichthyosis.

FISH-TONGUE. (F.) Langue de Carpe. An instrument—so called from its shape—used by some dentists for the removal of the dentés sapientiæ.

FISSICULATIO, from fissiculare, 'to cut off,' 'open,' 'make incisions.' An old word for an opening made with a scalpel.

FISSIPARITÉ, see Generation.

FISSIPAROUS, see Generation.

FISSURA, Fissure—f. Canalis Fallopii, see Aquæductus Fallopii—f. Capillorum, Distrix—f. Contractæ, Contra-fissura—f. Cerebri longitudinalis, Fissure, longitudinal, of the Brain—f. Interlobularis, Interlobular fissure—f. Magna vulvæ, see Rima—f. Palpebrarum, see Palpebra—f. Pilaris, Trichismus.

FISSURA LONGITUDINALIS, ANTE'RIOR ET POSTERIOR. Two vertical fissures in the median line, in front of, and behind, the medulla oblongata, which divide it superficially into two symmetrical lateral columns.

FISSURA TRANSVERSA MAGNA CEREBRI, Fissure, transverse, of the Brain.

FISSURE, Fissu'ra, Schisma, Scissu'ra, Rhegē, Rhegma, Rhegmus, from findere, fissum, 'to cleave;' a long and narrow cleft or opening in a bone—Rhagē, ραγη, Ceasma, κιασμα. (F.) Fissure, Fente.

FISSURE has various acceptations: 1. A fracture, Catagna fissu'ra, in which the bone is cracked, not separated, as in fracture; 2. A narrow, long, and superficial solution of continuity, around the external openings of the mucous membranes. A sort of chap—(F.) Gerçure—observed on the hands, particularly on the callous hands, of workmen, in certain mechanical employments; 3. Small chapped ulcerations, sometimes noticed in young children, owing to the contact of the fæces and urine with the fine, delicate skin of the thighs, nates, and genital organs; 4. Clefts of a more or less deep nature, occurring on the genital organs in the vicinity of the anus, in those labouring under syphilis. These are usually called rhegades. See Monster.

FISSURE OF BICHAT, Fissure, transverse, of the Brain—f. Capillary, see Piliatio.

FISSURE, CENTRAL. The aggregate of the cavities or ventricles of the brain. Meckel considers them but one cavity, in the form of a cross.

FISSURE OF GLASER, Fissure, glenoid—f. of Glaserius, P. Glenoid.

FISSURE, GLENOID, Fissure of Glaser or Glase'rius, (F.) Fissure ou Scissure de Glaser, Fente glenoïdale ou Fêlure de Glaser, divides the glenoid cavity of the temporal bone into two parts, and gives passage to the chorda tympani. &c.

FISSURE OF THE HELIX. A small vertical fissure of the helix of the ear, a little above the tubercle for the attachment of the atrahens aurem muscle.

FISSURE, INFRAORBITAR, Suborbital fissure.

FISSURE; LONGITUDINAL, OF THE BRAIN, Fissu'ra cerebri longitudinalis. The space which separates the two hemispheres of the brain.

FISSURE, ORBITAR, see Orbital fissure—f. Orbital, inferior, Spheno-maxillary fissure—f. Orbital, superior, Sphenoidal fissure—f. Portal, see Liver.

FISSURE OF ROLAN'DO. A transverse fissure placed between two superior cerebral convolutions, which are met with above the fissure of Sylvius.

FISSURE, SEMILUNAR. A notch at the anterior edge of the cerebellum, where it receives fibres which connect it to the cerebellum and mesocephalon.

FISSURE OF SYLVIVS, Fissu'ra seu Fossa Magna Syl'vii. A deep, narrow sulcus, which ascends obliquely backwards from the temporal ala of the sphenoid bone, near to the middle of the parietal bone, and which parts the anterior and middle lobes of the cerebrum on each side.

FISSURE OF THE TRAGUS. A fissure on the anterior surface of the tragus of the ear.

FISSURE, TRANSVERSE, OF THE BRAIN, Great transverse fissure, Fissure of Bichat, Fissu'ra seu Rima transversa magna cerebri. A fissure, which passes beneath and behind the edge of the middle lobe of the brain, and extends beneath the hemisphere of one side to the same point of the opposite side.

FIST, Sax. fýrτ, πυγμα, Pygmæ, Pugnus, (F.) Poing. The clenched hand.

FISTULA, 'a pipe or reed,' Syrinx, Syrin'ga, Aulos—when of a small size, Aulis'cos. A solution of continuity, of greater or less depth and sinuosity; the opening of which is narrow, and the disease kept up by an altered texture of parts, so that it is not disposed to heal. A fistula is incomplete or blind, when it has but one opening; and complete when there are two, the one communicating with an internal cavity, the other externally. It is lined, in its whole course, by a membrane which seems analogous to mucous membranes. Incomplete fistulæ may be internal or external. The former are those which open internally; the latter those which open externally. External incomplete fistulæ are kept up by caries or necrosis of bones, by extraneous bodies in any of the living textures, or by purulent cavities, the walls of which have not become united. Internal incomplete fistulæ generally soon become complete, since the discharge that escapes from them into the cavities into which they open has a constant tendency to make its way outwardly, and soon occasions ulceration of the integuments. Fistulæ have received different names, according to the discharge which they afford, and the organs in which they are seated,—as lachrymal, biliary, salivary, synovial, urinary—Fistula urinæ, Uris. The great object of treatment, in fistulous sores, is to bring on an altered condition of the parietes of the canal, by astringent or stimulating injections, caustics, the knife, pressure, &c. Those which are dependent on diseased bone, cartilage, tendon, &c., do not heal until after the exfoliation of the diseased part. Fistulæ of excretory ducts are produced either by an injury of the duct itself or by the retention and accumulation of the fluids to which they have to give passage. Thus, Fistula lacrymalis, Dacryosyrinx, Emphragma lacrymalæ, Hydrops sacci lacrymalis, Dropsy of the lachrymal sac, commonly proceeds from the obliteration of the nasal ducts, or from atony of the lachrymal sac; which circumstances prevent the tears from passing into the nostrils.

FISTULA IN ANO, Archosyrinx, generally occurs from some mechanical pressure or impediment. The principal indication in the treatment of these fistulæ of the excretory canals being to put a stop to the constant discharge of the secretions, &c., through the preternatural channel, the fistulous passage is at times laid open, and a communication established with the natural excretory canal; at others, strong pressure is employed to procure its obliteration.

FISTULA BELLINIANA, Uriniferous tube—f. Cibilis, Œsophagus—f. Cruris, Fibula—f. Duræ matris, Sinus of the dura mater—f. Lacrymalis, see Fistula—f. Mammæ, Mastosyrinx—*f. FISTULES STERCORAIRES, see Stercoraceous.

FISTULOUS, Fistulosus, Syringicus, Syringoides, (F.) Fistuleux. Relating to, or resembling, a fistula; as 'a fistulous opening.'

FIT, Pes.

FIT-ROOT, Monotropa uniflora.

FITS, NINE DAY, Trismus nascentium.

FIVE FINGERS, Panax quinquefolium.

FIXATIO MONONŒA, Melancholy.

FIXED, Fixus, from figere, fixum, 'to fasten.'

A body not capable of being volatilized by fire is said to be fixed. Thus, we say fixed oils, in contradistinction to volatile oils.

FIXEN, MINERAL WATERS OF. This spring is four leagues from Waldsassen, in Bavaria. It contains carbonic acid, holding in solution carbonates of lime and magnesia, chlorides of lime and magnesia, carbonate of soda and silica. In Bavaria, it replaces the Seltzer water.

FIXI DENTES. The teeth of the second dentition.

FLABELLATION, Flabellatio, from flabellare, flabellatum, (from flabrum, 'a blast of wind,') 'to agitate the air.' An operation recommended by Ambrose Paré, which consists in keeping fractured limbs cool, as well as the dressings surrounding them, by the renewal of the air around them, either by the use of a fan, or the repeated change of position of the parts affected.

FLABELLUM ET VENTILABRUM CORDIS, Pulmo.

FLACCIDITY, Flacciditas, from flaccidus, 'flabby,' 'soft.' Softness of a part, so as to offer little resistance on pressure.

FLAG, BLUE, Iris versicolor—f. Blue, slender, Iris Virginia—f. Dwarf, Iris lacustris—f. Myrtle, Acorus calamus—f. Root, Acorus calamus.

FLANCS, Flanks.

FLANKS, Il'ia, Il'ea, La'gones, Lap'ara, Ce'neo'nes, (Prov.) Lists, (F.) Flancs, Les Iles. The regions of the body which extend, on the sides, from the inferior margin of the chest to the crista ili.

FLAP, (F.) Lambeau. A portion of the soft parts of the body separated from those beneath, but still attached by the base. Hence there may be 'flap wounds,' (F.) Plaies à lambeaux, and 'flap operations,' (F.) Opérations à lambeaux. When the flap is taken from one part, and applied to another, in plastic operations, the operation is said to be by migration of the flap, (F.) Migration du Lambeau. At times, the flap is made to slide over the part to which it has to adhere:—the operation is then said to be by the sliding of the flap, (F.) Glissement du Lambeau. The flap is also, at times, rolled, inverted, &c., (F.) Roulement on Inversion du Lambeau.

FLAP-DOCK, Digitalis.

FLAP OPERATION OF AMPUTATION, Amputation à lambeaux.

FLAT TOP, Vernonia noveboracensis.

FLATUARIUS, Alchymist.

FLATUEUX, Windy.

FLATULENCE, Flatulentia, Flatus, Flatuositas, Aërifluxus, Pneumatosis, Pneumatosis ventriculi et enterica, Bdes'ma, Hyperpneustia, Clydon, Physa, Polyphysia, Limo'sis Flatus, Ereux'is, Bombus, Flatuosity, Wind, Wind'iness, Ventos'ity, Vapour, (F.) Ventosité, Flatuosité, Vents; from flō, flatum, 'to blow.' Wind emitted from, or accumulated in, the digestive tube especially.

FLATULENT, Windy.

FLATULENTIA, Flatulence.

FLATUOSITÉ, Flatulence.

FLATUOSITY, Flatulence.

FLATUS, Crepitation, Flatulence—f. Furiosus, Ambulo-flatulentus—f. Spinæ, Spina ventosa.

FLAVEDO CORTICUM CITRI, see Citrus medica.

FLAVOUR, from (F.) flairer, 'to smell.' The quality of a sapid body, which is appreciated by the taste and smell combined, and more especially by the latter. Some physiologists consider that flavor is effected through the smell alone.

FLAVUS, Yellow.

FLAX, COMMON, Linum usitatissimum—f. Purging, Linum catharticum—f. Seed, see Linum usitatissimum—f. Seed tea, Infusum lini compo-

FLEAM, Flamma, Flam'mula, Schaste'rion, Fosso'rium, Phlebot'omum. A surgical instrument used for the operation of phlebotomy. (F.) Flamme, Flammette. It consists of a small metallic box, containing a spear-pointed cutting instrument, which, by means of a spring, can be forced into the vein. It is much used in Germany and some other European countries, and is not unfrequently employed in America; but is scarcely ever seen in France or Great Britain.

FLEAWORT, Plantago psyllium.

FLECK, Abrasion.

FLECTENS PAR LUMBORUM, Quadratus lumborum.

FLEGMEN, Flemen.

FLEMEN, Flegmen. A tumour about the ankles. Also, a chap on the feet and hands.

FLERECIN, Gout.

FLESH, Caro, Sarc, (F.) Chair. Every soft part of an animal is so named; but more particularly the muscles, which are called muscular flesh.

FLESH, PROUD, Fungosity.

FLESHY, Corpulent.

FLETUS, Lachrymatio.

FLEUR DE COUCOU, Primula veris—f. Sainte-Catherine, Nigella—f. de Sainte-Jacques, Thlaspi bursa—f. de Tous les mois, Calendula officinalis.

FLEXIBILITY, Flexibilit'as, from flectere, flexum, 'to bend.' Capability of being bent. A physical property of the tissues, which varies greatly according to the structure. The tendons exhibit this property in a marked manner.

FLEXIO, Campsis, Flexion.

FLEX'ION, Flex'io, Camp'ë. Same etymon. The state of being bent. The action of a flexor muscle.

FLEXOR. Same etymon. (F.) Fléchisseur. A muscle, whose office it is to bend certain parts.

FLEXOR BREVIS DIGITO'RUM PEDIS PERFORATUS, F. Sublimis seu brevis seu digito'rum brevis seu perforatus pedis, Perforatus seu flexor secun'di interno'dii digito'rum pedis, (F.) Calcaneo-sous-phalangien commun,—Calcaneo-sous-phalangien commun,—(Ch.), Muscle court fléchisseur commun des orteils. A muscle, placed at the middle of the sole of the foot. It is narrower and thicker behind than before, where it is divided into four portions. It arises from the posterior part of the inferior surface of the os calcis, and is inserted at the inferior surface of the second phalanx of the last four toes. It bends the second phalanges of the toes on the first, and the first on the metatarsal bones; in this manner augmenting the concavity of the vault of the foot.

FLEXOR BREVIS MINIMI DIGITI, F. Parvus minimi digiti.

FLEXOR BREVIS MIN'IMI DIG'ITI PEDIS, Parv'ithenar minor, (F.) Court fléchisseur du petit orteil, Tarso-sous-phalangien du petit orteil—(Ch.) A muscle, situate at the anterior and outer part of the sole of the foot. It arises from the posterior extremity of the fifth metatarsal bone, and is inserted into the posterior part of the first phalanx of the little toe, which it bends.

FLEXOR BREVIS POL'LICIS MANÛS, F. secun'di interno'dii, F. primi et secun'di ossis pollicis, Thenar, (F.) Court fléchisseur du pouce, Carpo-phalangien du pouce—(Ch.), Demi-interosseux du pouce. A muscle, situate at the outer part of the palm of the hand. It is divided into two portions by the tendon of the Flexor longus pollicis. It arises from the os magnum, the anterior annular ligament of the carpus and the third metacarpal bone; and is inserted into the superior part of the first phalanx of the thumb, and into the two ossa sesamoidea at the articulation of the first phalanx with the first metacarpal bone. Its use is to bend the first phalanx of the thumb on the first metacarpal bone, and the latter upon the trapezium.

FLEXOR BREVIS POL'LICIS PEDIS, F. brevis seu hal'lucis seu brevis pollicis, (F.) Tarso-phalangien du pouce, Court fléchisseur du gros orteil, Tarso-sous-phalangien du premier orteil—(Ch.) It is situate at the anterior and inner part of the sole of the foot; is thin and narrow behind, thick and divided into two portions before. It arises from the inferior part of the os calcis and the last two cuneiform bones, and is inserted at the inferior part of the base of the first phalanx of the great toe, and into the two sesamoid bones of the corresponding metatarso-phalangian articulation. It bends the first phalanx of the great toe on the first metacarpal bone.

FLEXOR CARPI RADIALIS, Palmaris magnus—f. Carpi ulnaris, see Cubitalis magnus—f. Hallucis, F. brevis pollicis pedis—f. Hallucis longus, F. longus pollicis pedis.

FLEXOR LONGUS DIGITO'RUM PEDIS PROFUNDUS PERFORANS; Perforans seu Flexor profundus, Perodactyl'us, Peronodactyl'us, Peronodactyl'us, Peronodactyl'us, Peronodactyl'us, Peronodactyl'us longus seu Perforans pedis, Perforans seu Flexor tertii interno'dii digito'rum pedis; (F.) Tibio-phalangien—(Ch.), Grand ou long fléchisseur commun des orteils. A muscle, situate at the posterior and deep-seated part of the leg. It is broader at its middle than at its extremities, the inferior of which is divided into four portions. It arises from the posterior surface of the tibia, and its tendons are attached to the posterior part of the lower surface of the three phalanges of the last four toes. It bends the three phalanges on each other, and the toes on the metatarsus, and extends the foot on the leg.

The Accessorius Flexoris Longi Digito'rum Pedis, Caro quadrata Syl'vii, C. accessoria, Massa car'nea Jacob'i Syl'vii, Planta'ris vera, (F.) Accessoire du long fléchisseur commun des orteils, Carrée (Chair), is a small muscle of the sole of the foot, which passes obliquely from the os calcis to the outer edge of the flexor longus, whose force it augments, and corrects its obliquity.

FLEXOR LONGUS POL'LICIS MANUS, F. longus pollicis, F. tertii interno'dii seu longis'simus pollicis; (F.) Radio-phalangien du pouce,—(Ch.) Situate at the anterior and profound part of the forearm. It arises from the upper three quarters of the anterior surface of the radius and interosseous ligament, and is inserted, by a tendon, into the anterior surface of the last phalanx of the thumb. It bends the second phalanx of the thumb on the first; the first on the corresponding metacarpal bone, and this upon the radius. It can, also, bend the hand on the forearm.

FLEXOR LONGUS POL'LCIS PEDIS, F. Hal'lu'cis seu Pollicis longus, (F.) Péronéo-phalangien du gros orteil, Long fléchisseur du gros orteil, Péronéosous-Phalangiétien du pouce, (Ch.) It is situated at the posterior and profound part of the leg. It arises from the posterior surface of the fibula and the interosseous ligament, and is inserted, by means of a long tendon, into the inferior part of the first phalanx of the great toe. It bends the third phalanx on the first, and this upon the corresponding metatarsal bone. It augments the concavity of the sole of the foot, and extends the foot on the leg.

FLEXOR PARVUS MIN'IMI DIG'ITI, F. brevis minimi digiti manûs, Abductor minimi digiti, Hypophenar Riola'nî seu minimi digiti, (F.) Corpophalangien du petit doigt, (Ch.), Court fléchisseur du petit doigt. It arises from the anterior annular ligament of the carpus and the process of the os unciniforme, and is inserted at the inner side of the superior extremity of the first phalanx of the little finger. It bends the first phalanx of the little finger.

FLEXOR PERFORANS, F. profundus perforans—f. Perforatus, F. sublimis perforatus—f. Primi internodii, Opponens pollicis—f. Primi internodii digitorum manûs, Lumbricalis manûs—f. Primi et secundi ossis pollicis, F. brevis pollicis manûs.

FLEXOR PROFUNDUS PER'FORANS, F. Profundus seu Perforans seu tertii internodii digitorum manûs, Perforans manûs; (F.) Cubito-phalangiétien commun—(Ch.), Fléchisseur profond des doigts. A thick, flat, long muscle, seated beneath the Flexor sublimis perforatus. Its upper extremity is simple, and arises from the anterior surface of the ulna and from the interosseous ligament. Its inferior extremity terminates by four tendons, which, after having passed through slits in the sublimis, are inserted into the anterior surface of the last phalanges of the four fingers. It bends the third phalanges on the second, and, in other respects has the same use as the flexor sublimis perforatus.

FLEXOR SECUNDI INTERNODII DIGITORUM PEDIS, F. brevis digitorum pedis—f. Tertii internodii, F. longus pollicis manûs—f. Tertii internodii digitorum manûs, F. profundus perforans—f. Tertii internodii digitorum pedis, F. longus digitorum pedis profundus perforans—f. Ossis metacarpi pollicis, Opponens pollicis—f. Perforatus pedis, F. brevis digitorum pedis—f. Sublimis, F. brevis digitorum pedis.

FLEXOR SUBLI'MIS PERFORATUS, F. Perforatus, (F.) Fléchisseur sublime ou superficiel des doigts, Épitraklo-phalangiéin commun, —(Ch.) It is a thick, flat, muscle, seated at the anterior part of the forearm. Its upper extremity, which is simple, arises from the internal condyle of the os humeri;—from the coronoid process of the ulna, and from the anterior edge of the radius. Its lower extremity divides into four tendons, which slide under the anterior annular ligament of the carpus, and are inserted into the second phalanges of the last four fingers, after having been slit to allow the tendons of the flexor profundus to pass through them. This muscle bends the second phalanges on the first; these on the carpal bones, and the hand on the forearm.

FLOC'ULUS; diminutive of floccus, 'a lock of wool'—Pneumogast'ric lob'ule, Lob'ulus pneumogast'ricus. A long and slender prominence, extending from the side of the vallecule around the corpus testiforme to the crus cerebelli, lying behind the filaments of the pneumogastric nerves.

FLOR DE MISTELA, see Mistura.

FLORENCE, CLIMATE OF. This agreeable Italian city is by no means a favourable residence for the phthisical invalid. Sir James Clark affirms, indeed, that he does not know any class of invalids for whom Florence offers a favourable residence. It is subject to sudden vicissitudes of temperature, and to cold, piercing winds during the winter and spring.

FLOUR, POTATO, see Solanum tuberosum.

FLOWER DE LUCE, Iris Germanica.

FLOWERS, Flores, (F.) Fleurs. The ancient chymists gave this name to different solid and volatile substances obtained by sublimation. The term is not yet entirely banished from chymical and medical language, as Flowers of Benjamin, Flowers of Sulphur, &c.

FLOWERS, Menses.

FLOWERS, FOUR CARMINATIVE, Quatuor flores carminati'vi, were chamomile, dill, fever-few, and melilot.

FLOWERS, FOUR COR'DIAL, Quatuor flores cordial'es, were formerly, borage, bugloss, roses, and violets.

FLUCTUATIO, Fluctuation—f. Aurium, Tinnitus aurium.

FLUCTUATION, Fluctuatio, from fluctuare, fluctuatum, (fluctus, 'a wave,') 'to undulate.' Undulatio, (F.) Ondulation. The undulation of a fluid collected in any natural or artificial cavity, which is felt by pressure or by percussion, properly practised—periph'eric fluctuation. In ascites, the fluctuation is felt by one of the hands being applied to one side of the abdomen whilst the other side is struck with the other hand. In abscesses, fluctuation is perceived by pressing on the tumour, with one or two fingers alternately, on opposite points.

FLUCTUATION, PERIPHERIC, see Fluctuation—f. Rhonchal, see Rhonchal—f. by Succussion, see Succussion.

FLUELLEN, Antirrhinum elatine.

FLUELLIN, Veronica.
 FLUEURS, Menses—f. Blanchés, Leucorrhœa.

FLUID, Flu'idus, from fluere, 'to flow.' The human body is chiefly composed of fluids. If one, weighing 120 pounds, be thoroughly dried in an oven, the remains will be found not to weigh more than 12 or 13 pounds; so that the proportion of fluids to liquids in the body is about 9 or 10 to 1.

TABLE OF FLUIDS OF THE HUMAN BODY.

1. Blood.
2. Lymph.
3. Exhaled or Perspiratory.
 - Transpiration of the mucous, serous, and synovial membranes; of the areolar membrane; of the adipous cells; of the medullary membrane; of the interior of the thyroid gland; of the thymus; suprarenal capsules; eye; ear; vertebral canal, &c.
4. Follicular.
 - Sebaceous humour of the skin; cerumen; gum of the eye; mucus of the mucous glands and follicles; that of the tonsils, of the glands of the cardia, the environs of the anus, the prostate, &c.
5. Glandular.
 - Tears; saliva; pancreatic fluid; bile; cutaneous transpiration; urine; fluid of the glands of Cowper; sperm; milk; of the testes and mammæ of the new-born child.

FLUKE, Distoma hepaticum—f. Liver, Distoma hepaticum.

FLUMEN DYSENTERICUM, Dysentery.

FLUMMERY, (Scotch) Sovens. A preparation of oatmeal, which forms a light article of food during convalescence. It may be made as follows:—Take of oatmeal or groats, a quart. Rub with two quarts of hot water, and let the mixture stand until it becomes sour; then add another quart of hot water, and strain through a hair sieve. Let it stand till a white sediment is deposited; decant, and wash the sediment with cold water. Boil this with fresh water till it forms a mucilage, stirring the whole time.

FLUOR, Flux—f. Albus Intestinorum, Cœliac flux—f. Albus malignus, Gonorrhœa impura—f. Muliebris, Leucorrhœa—f. Muliebris non Gallicus, Leucorrhœa—f. Sanguinis pulmonum, Hæmoptysis—f. Sanguinis vesicæ, Cystorrhœa.

FLUSH, Flushing, (F.) Rougeurs, Bouffée de Chaleur; from (G.) Fliessen, 'to flow.' The temporary redness and heat produced by accumulation of blood in the capillaries of the face; as the sudden 'flush' or 'blush of emotion:' the 'flush of hectic.'

FLUX, Fluxus, Proflu'vium, Fluor, from fluere, 'to flow.' A discharge. Rhysis. In nosology, it comprises a series of affections, the principal symptom of which is the discharge of a fluid, Generally it is employed for dysentery.

FLUX, BILIOUS, Fluxus bilio'sus. A discharge of bile, either by vomiting or by stool, or by both, as in cholera.

FLUX, BLOODY, Dysentery—f. de Bouche, Salivation—f. Bronchique, Bronchorrhœa—f. Dysentérique, Dysentery—f. Hemorrhoidal, see Hæmorrhoids—f. Hépatique, Hepatitis—*f. FENUGREEK, Trigonella fœnum.

FENUM CAMELORUM, Juncus odoratus—f. Græcum, Trigonella fœnum.

FETAB'ULUM. An encysted abscess.—Marcus Aurelius Severinus.

FŒTAL, Fœta'lis. Relating to the fœtus. A name given to the parts connected with the fœtus. Thus we say—the fœtal surface of the placenta, in contradistinction to the uterine or maternal surface.

FŒTAL CIRCULATION differs from that of the adult in several respects. Commencing with the placenta, where it probably undergoes some change analogous to what occurs in the lungs in extrauterine existence, the blood proceeds by the umbilical vein as far as the liver, where a part of it is poured into the vena porta; the other proceeds into the vena cava inferior; the latter, having received the suprahepatic veins, pours its blood into the right auricle. From the right auricle, a part of the blood is sent into the right ventricle; the rest passes directly through into the left auricle, by the foramen ovale. When the right ventricle contracts, the blood is sent into the pulmonary artery; but as the function of respiration is not going on, no more blood passes to the lungs than is necessary for their nutrition; the remainder goes directly through the ductus arteriosus into the aorta. The blood, received by the left auricle from the lungs, as well as that which passed through the foramen ovale, is transmitted into the left ventricle; by the contraction of which it is sent into the aorta, and by means of the umbilical arteries, which arise from the hypogastric, it is returned to the placenta.

FÆTAL HEAD. The diameters of this at the full period are as follows:—1. The Biparietal or transverse, extending from one parietal protuberance to the other, and measuring 3½ inches. 2. The Temporal, from one temple to another, 3 inches. 3. The Occipito-mental, from the occiput to the chin; the greatest of all, 5 inches. 4. The Occipito-frontal or antero-posterior, 4¼ or 4½ inches. 5. The Cervico-bregmatic, from the nape of the neck to the centre of the anterior fontanelle. 6. The Fronto-mental, from the forehead to the chin, about 3½ inches. 7. The Trachelo-bregmatic, from the front of the neck to the anterior fontanelle, 3½ inches. 8. The Vertical diameter, from the vertex to the base of the cranium.

FÆTAL NUTRITION, Cyotrophy.

FETATION, Pregnancy.

FETICIDE, Fœticid'ium, from fœtus, and cædere, 'to kill'; Aborticid'ium. Criminal abortion.

FETIDUS, Fetid.

FETOR, Dysodia.

FÆTOR ALARUM. The disagreeable rank odour exhaled from the axillæ.

FÆTOR ORIS, Breath, offensive.

FÆTUS, Fœtus, Cyc'ema, Onus ventris, Sar'eina. 'The young of any creature.' The unborn child. (F.) Fœtus, Faix. By κνῆμα, Cyc'ema, Hippocrates meant the fecundated, but still imperfect, germ. It corresponded with the term embryo, as now used; whilst εμβρυον, 'embryo,' signified the fœtus at a more advanced stage of the utero-gestation. The majority of anatomists apply to the germ the name embryo, which it retains until the third month of gestation, and with some until the period of quickening; whilst fœtus is applied to it in its latter stages. The terms are, however, often used indiscriminately. When the ovule has been fecundated in the ovarium, it proceeds slowly towards, and enters the uterus, with which it becomes ultimately connected by means of the placenta. When first seen, the fœtus has the form of a gelatinous flake, which some have compared to an ant, a grain of barley, a worm curved upon itself, &c. The fœtal increment is very rapid in the first, third, fourth, and sixth months of its formation, and at the end of nine months it has attained its full dimensions—Enfant à terme. Generally, there is but one fœtus in utero; sometimes, there are two; rarely three. The fœtus presents considerable difference in its shape, weight, length, situation in the womb, proportion of its various parts to each other, arrangement and texture of its organs, state of its functions at different periods of gestation, &c. All these differences are important in an obstetrical and medico-legal point of view. The following table exhibits the length and weight of the fœtus at different periods of gestation, on the authority of different observers. Their discordance is striking. It is proper to remark, that the Paris pound—Poid de Marc—of 16 ounces, contains 9216 Paris grains, whilst the avoirdupois contains only 8532,5 Paris grains, and that the Paris inch is 1.065977 English inch.

licules ou Vésicules de Graaf. Small spherical vesicles in the stroma of the ovary, which have at least two coats; the outer termed ovicapsule and tunic of the ovisac, tunica fibrosa and theca folliculi; the latter, ovisac and membrana propria; vésicule ovarielle of M. Pouchet. See Membrana granulosa. They exist in the fetus. The ovum—ovule of some—is contained in, and formed by, them.

Kölliker terms the follicles themselves, O'visacs, Ovisac'ci. The interior of the follicles contains a clear, light yellowish fluid—liquor folliculi—of the density of the serum of the blood, in which are, almost always, isolated granules, nuclei and cells, which appear to be detached portions of the membrana granulosa.

FOLLICULI OVARII, Folliculi Graafiani—f. Rotundi et Oblongi cervicis uteri, Nabothi glandulæ—f. Sanguinis, Globules of the blood—f. Sebacei, Sebaceous glands—f. Sebacei coronæ glandis, see Sebaceous glands.

FOLLICULITIS, Follicular inflammation.

FOLLICULOSE GLAND, Crypta.

FOLLICULUS, Vulva.

FOLLICULUS AERIS, Air-chamber. A space at the larger end of the bird's egg, formed by a separation of the two layers of the shell membrane, which is inservient to the respiration of the young being.

FOLLICULUS DENTIS, Dental Follicle—f. Fellis, Gall-bladder—f. Genitalis, Scrotum—f. Mucosus, see Crypta—f. Pili, see Hair.

FOMENT, Fove're, (F.) Étuver, Bassiner. To apply a fomentation to a part.

FOMENTATION, Fomentatio, Fotus, Py'ria, Thermas'ma, Chlias'ma, Æone'sis, Perfu'sio, Asper'sio, Fomentum, (quasi fomentum), from fovere, 'to bathe.' (F.) Hydrolé, Hydrolitif. A sort of partial bathing, by the application of cloths which have been previously dipped in hot water, or in some mediated decoction. They act, chiefly, by virtue of their warmth and moisture, except in the case of narcotic fomentations, where some additional effect is obtained.

A dry fomentation, Fomentum siccum, Lectulus medicinalis, is a warm, dry application to a part;—as a hot brick, wrapped in flannel;—a bag, half filled with chamomile flowers made hot, &c.

FOMENTATION HERBS, Herbæ pro fotu. The herbs, ordinarily sold under this title by the English apothecary, are—southernwood, tops of sea wormwood, chamomile flowers, each two parts; bay leaves, one part. ζ ijss of these to Ovj of water.

FOMENTUM, Fomentation—f. Siccum, see Fomentation.

FOMES MORBI, F. mali. The focus or seat of any disease. (F.) Foyer.

FOMES VENTRICULI, Hypochondriasis, Spleen.

FOMITES, plural of fomes, fomitis, 'fuel, any thing which retains heat.' Enaus'ma, Zop'yron. A term applied to substances which are supposed to retain contagious effluvia; as woollen goods, feathers, cotton, &c.

FONSANGE, MINERAL WATERS OF. Fonsange is situated near Nismes in France. The water is sulphuretted.

FONTAINE DE LA TÊTE, see Fontanella.

FONTA'NA, CANAL OF. A canal of a triangular shape, at the inner side of the ciliary circle; partly formed by the groove at the inner edges of the cornea and sclerotica.

FONTANEL'LA. A fontanel'—diminutive of fons, fontis, 'a fountain.' (F.) Fontanelle. Fons, F. pulsatilis seu pulsans, Vertex pall-pitans, Bregma, Fonticulus, Lacu'na, Mould. The opening of the head. A name, given to a space occupied by a cartilaginous membrane, in the fetus and new-born child, and situate at the union of the angles of the bones of the cranium. There are six fontanels. 1. The great or sincipital or anterior, fonticulus quadrangula'ris, Fontaine de la Tête, situate at the junction of the sagittal and coronal sutures. 2. The small or bregmatic or posterior, situate at the part where the posterior and superior angles of the parietal bones unite with the upper part of the os occipitis. 3. The two sphenoidal, in the temporal fossæ; and, 4. The two mastoid, or of Casserius, Fonticuli mastoïdes seu Casse'rii, at the union of the parietal, occipital, and temporal bones.

FORTE, Colligation.

FONTICULE À POIS, see Fonticulus.

FONTICULUS, Fontanel'la, Exuto'rium, Ex-utory, Issue, (F.) Fonticule, Cautére, Exutoire. Diminutive of fons, fontis, 'a fountain.' A small ulcer produced by art, either by the aid of caustics or of cutting instruments; the discharge from which is kept up with a view to fulfil certain therapeutic indications. The Pea issue, (F.) Fonticule à pois, is kept up by means of a pea placed in it. This pea, (F.) Pois à cautère, is sometimes formed of wax; at others, the young, blasted fruit of the orange is employed. The common dried garden pea answers the purpose. The seton is also an issue.

FORAMINA CRIBROSA, see Cribratus.

FORAMINA THEBÆ'SII. Openings resembling vascular orifices, found below the orifice of the vena cava superior in the right auricle, which are supposed to be the openings of veins.

FORATIO, Trepanning.

FORCE, from fortis, 'strong.' Vis, Potentia, Energi'a, Dy'namis, Cratos. Any power which produces an action. Those powers which are inherent in organization are called vital forces. We say, also, organic force, and muscular force, to designate that of the organs in general, or of the muscles in particular. To the latter the word Dynamis, ðvapiv, corresponds; and the absence of this force is termed ady'namia. The vital forces have to be carefully studied by the pathologist. The doctrine of diseases is greatly dependent on their augmentation or diminution; freedom or oppression, &c.

FORCE-REAL, MINERAL WATERS OF.

The name of a mountain, situate four leagues from Perpignan in France. The water is chalybeate.

FORCEPS, quasi, ferriceps, from ferrum, 'iron,' and capio, 'I take.' Pincers, Labis, Volsellæ. An instrument, for removing bodies which it would be inconvenient or impracticable to seize with the fingers. (F.) Pince, Pincette. There are various kinds of forceps, 1. The ordinary kind, contained in every dressing-case, for removing lint, &c. from wounds or ulcers. (F.) Pince à pansement ou à ancaux. 2. Dissecting or Lig'ature or Arterial Forceps, (F.) Pince à dissection, P. à ligature, to lay hold of delicate parts. 3. Polypus Forceps, Tooth Forceps, Forceps of Museux for laying hold of the tonsils or other parts to be removed. 4. The Bullet Forceps, Strombul'cus, (F.) Tireballe. 5. The Lithotomy Forceps, Lithol'abon, Lithog'ogum, Tenac'ula, Volsell'a, which resembles the Craniotomy Forceps, (F.) Tenettes. 6. The Cataract Forceps, (F.) Pince à Cataracte, resembling the dissecting forceps, but much finer. 7. The Pince à gaine, the branches of which can be brought together, and retained by a movable sheath.

Forceps is also an instrument used by obstetrical practitioners to embrace the head, and bring it through the pelvis. It consists of two branches, blades or levers; one of which, in the case of the short forceps, is passed over the ear of the child, and the other opposite the former, so that the blades may lock. When the head is securely included between the blades, the operation of extraction can be commenced. See Parturition.

FORCEPS, see Corpus callosum—f. Anterior, see Corpus callosum—f. Arterial, see Forceps—f. Bullet, see Forceps—f. Craniotomy, see Forceps—f. Deceptoria, see Forceps—f. Lithotomy, see Forceps—f. of Muscux, see Forceps—f. Polypus, see Forceps—f. Tooth, see Forceps.

FORD'S BALSAM OF HOREHOUND, see Balsam of horehound.

FOREARM, Antibrachium, Pygmæ, Pars inferior brachii, Cubitus, (F.) Avant-bras. The part of the upper extremity, comprised between the arm and the hand. It is composed of two bones—radius and ulna—and 20 muscles.

FOREFRONT, Front.

FOREHEAD, Front.

FORE-MILK, Colostrum.

FOREIGN BODY, Extraneous body.

FORENSIC ANATOMY, see Anatomy—f.

Medicine, Medicine, legal.

FORES, Genital organs.

FORESKIN, Prepuce.

FORETOP, Front.

FORFEX, Ciseaux, Scissors—f. Dentaria, Dentagra.

FORFIC'ULA AURICULA'RIA, Earwig. An insect of the Order Orthoptera, which occasionally enters the meatus auditorius externus, and excites intense pain. It may be destroyed by tobacco-smoke, or by oil poured into the meatus.

FORGES, MINERAL WATERS OF. Forges is situate four leagues from Gournay, in the department of Seine Inférieure, France. There are three springs, which are acidulous chalybeates. These are called Royal, Reimette, and Cardinal, in honor of Louis XIII., Queen Anne of Austria, and Cardinal Richelieu, who used them.

FORMATIVE, Plastic.

FORMICA, Myrmex. The ant or pismire. (F.) Fourmi. It contains an acid juice and gross oil, which were formerly extolled as aphrodisiacs. The chrysalides of the animal are said to be diuretic and carminative; and have been used in dropsy. 2. Also the name of a black wart, verru'ca formica'ria, with a broad base and cleft surface; so called because the pain attending it resembles the biting of an ant, μυρμικία, myrmecia.—Forestus. 3. A varicose tumour on the anus and glans penis. 4. Miliary herpes.

FORMICA AMBULATORIA, Herpes circinatus—f. Corrosiva, Herpes exedens.

FORMICANT, Formicans, Myrmecizon, from formica, 'an ant.' (F.) Fourmillant. An epithet given to the pulse, Pulsus formicans, when extremely small, scarcely perceptible, unequal, and communicating a sensation like that of the motion of an ant through a thin texture.

FORMICATION, Formicatio, Myrmeciasmus, Myrmeciasis, Myrmeciasmus, Myrmeciasis, Stupor formicans. Same etymon. (F.) Fourmillement. A pain, compared with that which would be caused by a number of ants creeping on a part.

FORMIX, Herpes esthiomenus.

FORMULA, Prescription—f. Extemporanea, see Magistral—f. Magistralis, see Magistral—f. Medica, Prescription—f. Officialis, see Magistral.

FORMULARY, Formulaarium, Narthe'cia, Narthe'cium, Narthe'x. From formularius, (diminutive of forma, 'form'). One skilled in preparing writs or forms of process.—Quintilian. A collection of medical formulæ or receipts.

FORMULE, Prescription.

FORMYL, PERCHLORIDE OF. Chloroform.

FORMYLE, IODURE DE, Iodoform.

FORNIX, 'an arch or vault.' F. cerebri seu trilat'erus seu tricuspidalis, Psalis, Psalidium, Cam'era, Testudo cerebri, Arcus medullaris, (F.) Trigone cérébral—(Ch.) Voûte à trois piliers, Triangle Médullaire. A medullary body in the brain, below the corpus callosum and above the middle ventricle, on the median line. This body, which is curved upon itself, terminates anteriorly by a prolongation, which constitutes its anterior pillar, Crus seu Colum'na fornicis, (F.) Pilier antérieur, and posteriorly by two similar prolongations, called posterior pillars or crura. See Achiculum, and Vault.

FORNIX CEREBRI, Fornix.

FORNPECKLES, Ephelides.

FORPEX, Scissors.

FORRET, Front.

FORSTERA'NIA DIFFORMIS, Echites difformis seu puberula; indigenous; Ord. Apocynaceæ; is said to be used as a wash with milk to remove freckles. The juice destroys warts.

FORTIFIANT, Corroborant, Tonic.

FORTRAITURE, Hysteralgia.

FORTYKNOT, Achyranthes repens.

FOSSA, Fovea, from fodio, fossus, 'I dig.' Scamna. A cavity of greater or less depth, the entrance to which is always larger than the base. The fossæ of bones have been called simple, when they belong to one bone only, as the parietal fossæ; and compound, (F.) Fosses composées, when several concur in their formation, as the orbital fossæ, temporal fossæ, &c.

FOSSA, AMYG'DALOID, Amygdaloid excavation. The space between the anterior and posterior pillars of the fauces, which is occupied by the tonsils.

FOSSA AMYN'TÆ. A kind of bandage, used in fractures of the nose; so called, by Galen, from Amyntas of Rhodes, its inventor. It consisted of a long band, applied round the head, the turns of which crossed at the root of the nose.

FOSSA CANINA, Canine fossa.

FOSSA CEREBEL'LI, (F.) Fosse cérébelleuse. The inferior occipital fossa, which lodges the corresponding portion of the cerebellum.

FOSSA CORONA'LIS, Coronal or frontal fossa. A depression on the orbital plate of the frontal or coronal bone, which supports the anterior lobe of the brain.

FOSSA CORONOID'EA, Coronoid fossa. A cavity before the inferior extremity of the humerus, in which the coronoid process of the ulna is engaged during the flexion of the forearm.

FOSSA COTYLOIDEA, see Cotyloid.

FOSSA, DIGAS'TRIG, Fossa digastrica. A deep groove on the mastoid portion of the temporal bone, which gives origin to the digastric muscle.

FOSSA ETHMOIDA'LIS, Ethmoid fossa. A shallow gutter on the upper surface of the cribriform plate of the ethmoid bone, in which is lodged the expanded portion of the olfactory nerves.

FOSSA GENU, Poples.

FOSSA GUTTURA'LIS, Guttural fossa. The depression which forms the guttural region of the base of the cranium, between the foramen magnum and posterior nares.

FOSSA HYALOIDEA, see Hyaloid (Fossa)—f. Iliac, see Iliac fossæ—f. Infra-orbital, Canine fossa—f. Infra-spinous, see Infra-spinata fossa.

FOSSA INNOMINA'TA. The space between the helix and antihelix of the ear.

FOSSA, ISCHIO-RECTAL, Perineal fossa—f. Jugularis, Jugular fossa—f. Lacrymalis, Lacrymal fossa—f. Lenticularis, see Hyaloid membrane—f. Magna Muliebris, Valva—f. Magna Sylvii, Fissura Sylvii.

FOSSA, MENTAL, Fossa mentalis. A small depression on each side of the symphysis on the anterior surface of the body of the maxilla inferior, for the attachment of muscles.

FOSSA NAVICULARIS, Navicular fossa.

FOSSA OCCIPITA'LIS, Occipital fossa. The occipital fossæ are four in number: the superior or cerebral, and the inferior or cerebellous. They are separated by a groove, which lodges the lateral sinus.

FOSSA OVALIS, see Ovalis fossa—f. Palatina, Palate—f. Patellaris, see Hyaloid membrane—f. Perinæi, Perineal fossa—f. Pituitaria, Sella Turcica.

FOSSA POPLITE'A, Popliteal fossa. The hollow of the ham;—the popliteal region.

FOSSA PORTAL, see Liver—f. Scaphoides, Navicularis fossa.

FOSSA SIGMOIDEA, Sulcus sinus lateralis. A broad deep groove on the inner surface of the mastoid portion of the temporal bone, which supports part of the lateral sinus.

FOSSA, SUBORBITAR, Canine fossa.

FOSSA, SUBPYRAMIDAL, F. subpyramidalis. A deep fossa under the pyramid and behind the fenestra rotunda in the middle ear, remarkable for its constancy, and pierced by several foramina at the bottom.

FOSSA SUPRA-SPHENOIDALIS, Pituitaria fossa—f. of Sylvius, Fissure of S.—f. Temporalis, Temporal fossa—f. Transversa, see Liver—f. Umbilicalis, see Liver.

FOSSÆ CEREBRA'LES, Cerebral fossæ. Fossæ or excavations at the base of the cranium. They are nine in number: three occupy the median line, and three are placed at each side. They are distinguished into anterior, middle, and posterior.

FOSSÆ DIGITALES, see Impression.

FOSSÆ BASILAIRE, Basiliary fossa—f. Sous-épineuse, Infra-spinata fossa—f. Sus-épineuse, Fossa supra-spinata.

FOSSÆ CONDYLOIDIENNES, Condyloidea foramina—f. Nasales, Ouvertures postérieures des, Nares, posterior.

FOSSETTE (F). Diminutive of fossa. Scrobiculus, Both'rium. Several depressions are so called. A dimpled chin, Fossette du menton, consists in a slight depression, which certain persons have on the chin. 2. A dimple of the cheek, (F.)

Fossette des joues, a depression which occurs on the cheeks of certain persons when they laugh. Scrobiculus cordis, Anticar'dion, Præcor'dium, (F.) Fossette du cœur. The depression observed on a level with the xiphoid cartilage at the anterior and inferior part of the chest. It is, also, called pit of the stomach, (F.) Crcux de l'estomac. FOSETTE, Fos'sula, A'nulus, Bothrium, is also a small ulcer of the transparent cornea, the centre of which is deep.

FOSETTE ANGULAIRE DU QUATRIÈME VENTRICULE, Calamus scriptorius—f. du Cœur, Scrobiculus cordis.

FOSSORIUM, Fleam.

FOUL DISEASE, Syphilis.

FOULURE, Sprain.

FOUNDLING HOSPITAL, Brephrothopœum.

FOURCHE, (F.) fouché, 'cleft;' from furca, 'a fork.' Apostema Phalan'gum. A French provincial term for small abscesses which form on the fingers and hands of working people. Also, an instrument, invented by M. J. L. Petit, for compressing the ranine artery in cases of hemorrhage from that vessel.

FOURCHETTE', diminutive of fouche, Furcil'la, a little fork, Fur'cula. A surgical instrument used for raising and supporting the tongue, during the operation of dividing the frænum.

Fourchette, in anatomy, is, 1. The posterior commissure of the labia majora, called also, Frænum, Fræ'nulum pudendi, Fur'cula Labio'rum; 2. The cartilago ensiformis: so called from its being sometimes cleft like a fork. Also, the semilunar notch at the superior or clavicular extremity of the sternum.

FOURMI, Formica.

FOURMILLANT, Formicant

FOURMILLEMENT, Formication.

FOUSEL OIL, see Oil, fusel.

FOVEA,—diminutive, Fove'ola,—from fodio, 'I dig.' (?) Bothros. A slight depression. Fos'sula. The pudendum muliebre; see Vulva. The fossa navicularis. A vapour-bath for the lower extremities.

FOVEA AXILLARIS, Axilla—f. Elliptica, see Crista Vestibuli—f. Hemisphærica, see Crista Vestibuli—f. Lacrymalis, Lachrymal fossa—f. Oculi, Orbit—f. Ovalis, Ovalis fossa—f. Semielliptica, see Crista Vestibuli—f. Sulciformis, see Crista Vestibuli.

FRACTIONNEMENT, Segmentation.

FRACTURA, Fracture—f. Dentis, Odontoclasia.

FRACTURE, Fractura, from frangere, fractum, 'to break,' 'bruise.' Catag'ma, C. Fractura, Catag'is, Clasis, Olasma, Agmê, Agma, Diar'rhagê. A solution of continuity in a bone, Osteo'clasis. A simple fracture is when the bone only is divided. A compound fracture is a division of the bone with a wound of the integuments communicating with the bone,—the bone, indeed, generally protruding. In a com'minuted fracture, Alphite'don, αλφίτηδον, Carye'don Catag'ma, καρυήδον καταγμα, the bone is broken into several pieces; and in a complicated fracture there is, in addition to the injury done to the bone, a lesion of some considerable vessel, nervous trunk, &c. Fractures are also termed transverse, oblique, &c., according to their direction. The treatment of fractures consists, in general, in reducing the fragments when displaced; maintaining them when reduced; preventing the symptoms which may be likely to arise; and combating them when they occur. The reduction of fractures must be effected by extension, counter-extension, and coaptation. The parts are kept in apposition by position, rest, and an appropriate apparatus. The position must vary according to the kind of fracture. Commonly, the fractured limb is placed on a horizontal or slightly inclined plane, in a state of extension; or rather in a middle state between extension and flexion, according to the case.

FRACTURE, CAMERATED, Camerosis—f. en Rave, Raphanedon.

FRACTURE OF THE RADIUS, BARTON'S, Barton's fracture. A term applied to a fracture of the lower extremity of the radius, which commences at the articular surface, and extends upwards for an inch or more, to terminate on the dorsal aspect. Owing to the extensor muscles drawing up the separated portion of the bone, and with it the carpus, a deformity results, which has been confounded with simple dislocation. In consequence of the fracture having been well described by Dr. John Rhea Barton, of Philadelphia, it is often called after him.

FRACTURES PAR RÉSONNANCE, see Contrafrassura.

FRÆNA MORGAGNII, F. of the Valve of Bauhin.

FRÆNA OF THE VALVE OF BAUHIN, (F.) Freins de la valve de Bauhin. A name given by Morgagni to the projecting lines formed by the junction of the extremities of the two lips of the ileo-cæcal valve. They are also called Fræna and Retinac'ula Morgagni'i.

FRÆNULUM, see Frænum, Bride—f. Clitoridis, Frænum clitoridis—f. Epiglottidis, Glossopiglottic ligament—f. Labiorum, Fourchette—f. Novum, Tænia semicircularis—f. Pudendi, Fourchette.

FRÆNULUM VELI MEDULLÆRIS ANTERIORIS. A narrow slip, given off by the commissure of the encephalic testes, which strengthens the junction of the testes with the valve of Vieussens.

FRÆNUM, Fræ'num, (F.) Frein, 'a bridle.' Fræ'nulum, File'tum, Filament'um. 'A small bridle.' A bridle. Names given to several membranous folds, which bridle and retain certain organs.

FRÆNUM CLITORIDIS, Fræ'nulum Clitor'idis, (F.) Frein du Clitoris. A slight duplicature formed by the union of the internal portions of the upper extremity of the nymphæ.

FRÆNUM EPIGLOTTIDIS, Glossopiglottic ligament—f. Glandis, F. Penis.

FRÆNUM LABIORUM, (F.) Frein des lèvres. There are two of these; one for the upper, the other for the lower lip. They unite these parts to the maxillary bone, and are formed by the mucous membrane of the mouth. Also, the Fourchette.

FRÆNUM LINGUÆ, Fræ'nulum seu Vin'culum Lingua, Glossodes'mus, File'tum, (F.) Filet ou Frein de la langue, is a triangular reflection, formed by the mucous membrane of the mouth, and situate between the inferior paries of that cavity and the inferior surface of the tongue.

When the frænum extends as far as the extremity of the tongue, it cramps its movements, interferes with sucking, &c. This inconvenience is remedied by carefully snipping it with a pair of scissors. The French call this l'opération du filet.

FRÆNUM PENIS, F. seu Frænum seu Vinculum Præputii, F. Glanidis, Cynodesmion, Cynodesmus, Vinculum Caninum, (F.) Filet ou Frein de la verge, is a membranous reflection which fixes the prepuce to the lower part of the glans. When too short, it prevents the prepuce from sliding over the glans.

FRÆNUM PRÆPUTII, F. Penis.

FRAGARIA, from frago, 'I smell sweetly.' The Strawberry, Frage'ria vesca seu vulgaris seu semperflorens, Chamaebatos, (F.) Fraisier. Ord. Rosacæ. The fruit is agreeable and wholesome, and the roots have been used as tonic and slightly diuretic. The fruit is the Fragrum, κουραρον, of the ancients; (F.) Fraise.

FRAGARIA ANSERINA, Potentilla anserina—f. Pentaphyllum, Potentilla reptans—f. Tormentilla officinalis, Tormentilla.

FRAGARIA VIRGINIANA, Wild Strawberry. An indigenous plant, which has astringent leaves.

FRAGILE VITREUM, Fragilitas ossium.

FRAGILITAS, Ruptibilitas, from frango, 'I break.' Fragility, Brittleness. The state of being easily broken or torn.

FRAGILITAS OSSIUM, Osteospathyrosis, Parostia frag'ilis, Brittleness of the bones, Friability of the bones, Frag'ile vitreum. Pathologists have given this name to the extreme facility with which bones break in certain diseases of the osseous texture. It is owing to a deficiency of the animal matter.

FRAGMENT, Fragmen'tum, Fragmen, Ramen'tum, from frangere, fractum, 'to break.' The French use this term for the two portions of a fractured bone; thus, they speak of the superior and the inferior fragment.

FRAGMENTS, PRECIOUS. A name formerly given, in Pharmacy, to the garnet, hyacinth, emerald, sapphire and topaz. The Arabs falsely attributed to them cordial and alexiterial properties.

FRAGON, Ruscus.

FRAGUM, see Fragaria.

FRAISE, see Fragaria.

FRAISIER, Fragaria.

FRAMBESIA, Frambe'sia, Lepa fungifera, from framboise, (F.) 'A raspberry.' Syph'ilis Indica, Anthr'acia ru'bula, Thymio'sis, Th. seu Lues Indica, Vari'ola Amboinen'sis, Lepa fungifera, Scroph'ula Molluce'na. The Yaws, Epian, Pian. A disease of the Antilles and of Africa, characterized by tumours, of a contagious character, which resemble strawberries, raspberries, or champignons; ulcerate, and are accompanied by emaciation. The Pian, for so the Indians call it, differs somewhat in America and Africa.

Pian of America, Frambe'sia Americana, Anthr'acia Ru'bula Americana, occurs under similar circumstances with the next, and seems to be transmitted by copulation. The tumours have a similar form, and are greater in proportion to their paucity. In some cases they are mixed with ulcers.

Pian of Guin'ea, Frambe'sia Guineen'sis, Anthr'acia Ru'bula Guineen'sis, is common amongst the negroes, especially in childhood and youth. It begins by small spots, which appear on different parts, and especially on the organs of generation and around the anus; these spots disappear, and are transformed into an eschar, to which an excrescence succeeds, that grows slowly, and has the shape above described.

The treatment is nearly the same in the two varieties. The tumours will yield to mercurial friction, when small. When large, they must be destroyed by caustic. In both cases, mercury must be given to prevent a recurrence.

An endemic disease resembling yaws was observed in the Feejee Islands by the medical officers of the United States' Exploring Expedition. It is called by the natives Dthoke.

FRAMBESIA ILLYRICA, Scherlievo—f. Scotica, Sibbens.

FRAMBOISE, Rubus idæus.

FRANCOLIN, Attagen.

FRANGES SYNOVIALES, Synovial glands.

FRANGIPANE. An article of food, prepared by evaporating to dryness, in a water-bath, milk mixed with almonds and sugar.

FRANGULA ALNUS, Rhamnus frangula.

FRANKINCENSE, COMMON, see Pinus abies—f. African Daniellia thurifera—f. Tree, Daniellia thurifera—f. True, Juniperus lycia.

FRANZENSBAD, FRANZBAD, or FRANZENSBRUNN, MINERAL WATERS OF. A celebrated water at Eger, in Bohemia, which contains sulphate of soda, carbonate of iron, and carbonic acid gas. The springs are called Franzensbrunnen.

FRAPPER, Percuss.

FRASERA, Calumba, American—f. Carolinensis, see Calumba—f. Officinalis, see Calumba—f. Verticillata, Calumba American—f. Walteri, see Calumba.

FRATER UTERINUS, see Uterinus frater.

FRATERNITAS, Adelphixia.

FRATRATIO, Adelphixia.

FRAXINELLA DICTAMNUS, Dictamnus albus—f. White, Dictamnus albus.

FRAXINUS AMERICANA, White Ash; and FRAXINUS QUADRANGULATA, Blue Ash, indigenous; Ord. Oleacæ; have bitter and astringent barks, and have been used as antiperiodics.

FRAXINUS APETALA, F. excelsior—f. Aurea, F. excelsior—f. Crispa, F. excelsior—f. Excelsa, F. excelsior.

FRAXINUS EXCELSIOR. The systematic name of the Ash tree, Fraxinus Ornus seu Fraxinus sylvestris, F. ap'etala seu au'rea seu crispa seu excel'sa seu pen'dula seu verruco'sa, Bume'lia seu Macedon'ica Fraxinus, Bume'lia, (F.) Frêne. The fresh bark has a moderately strong, bitterish taste. It has been said to possess resolvent and diuretic qualities, and has been given in intermittents, and in gout and rheumatism, and as an antidote to serpent bites. The seeds, called Birds' tongue, Lingua avis, Ornithoglos'sa, have been exhibited as diuretics, in the dose of a drachm. Its sap has been extolled against deafness.

FRAXINUS FLORIFERA, F. ornus—f. Macedonica, F. excelsior.

FRAXINUS ORNUS, F. mel'ia seu paniculata seu florifera, Ornus manifestera seu rotundifolia. The systematic name of the tree whence manna flows. This substance is also called Manna Calabri'na, Ros Calabri'nus, Aërom'eli, Drosom'eli, Drysom'eli, Mel aë'rium, Succus orni concre'tus. In Sicily, not only the Fraxinus Ornus, but also the F. rotundifolia and F. excelsior are regularly cultivated for the purpose of procuring manna, which is their condensed juice. In the Ph. U. S. it is assigned to Ornus Europæa. Manna is inodorous, sweetish, with a very slight degree of bitterness; in friable flakes, of a whitish or pale yellow colour; opaque, and soluble in water and alcohol. It is laxative, and is used as a purgative for children, who take it readily on account of its sweetness. More generally it is employed as an adjunct to other purgatives. Dose, ʒss to ʒij. Its immediate principle is called Mannite or Mannin. This has been recommended by Magendie as a substitute for manna. Dose, ʒij. for children.

FREINS DE LA VALVULE DE BAUHIN, Fræna of the valve of Bauhin.

FREINWALDE, MINERAL WATERS OF. These springs are in Brandenburg, twelve leagues from Berlin. They contain chloride of sodium, sulphate of magnesia, chloride of magnesium, sulphate of lime, carbonates of lime and magnesia, iron, &c., and are used in asthenic diseases.

FRÉMISSEMENT, Shuddering.

FRÉMISSEMENT CATAIRE (F.). 'Cat's purr.' Purring Tremor. Laënnec has given this name to the agitation which is sensible to the hand, when applied on the præcordial region, and which he considers a sign of ossification or other contraction of the auriculo-ventricular openings. The name was chosen by him from the analogy of the sound to the purring of a cat.

FREMITUS, Bruissement, Frémissement, Shuddering.

The PECTORAL or VOCAL FREMITUS, Pectoral Vibration, Tactile vibration, is an obscure diffused resonance of the voice, which is felt when the hand is applied to the chest.

A FRICTION FREMITUS is perceptible to the hands in many cases of pleurisy, when the surfaces of the pleura have become roughened from deposition; as well as in rare cases of pericarditis.

FRET, Chafing, Herpes.

FRÉTILLEMENT, Fidgets.

FRETTING, Tormina.

FRICTATIO, Friction.

FRICTATORIUM, Liniment.

FRICTÈ, Fricum, Friconium. A medicine which the ancients employed under the form of friction. They distinguish the Fricè siccum and F. mollè.—Gaubius.

FRICTONIUM, Frice.

FRICTA, Colophonina.

FRICTIO, Friction—f. Humida, see Friction—f. Sicca, see Friction.

FRICT'ION, Fric'tio, Fricat'io, Anat'ribè, Anat'rip'sis, Trypsis, Chirap'sia, from fricare, frictum, 'to rub.' The action of rubbing a part of the surface of the body more or less forcibly, with the hands, a brush, flannel, &c., constituting Xerotrib'tia, Xerotrip'sis, Fric'tio sicca or dry friction; or with ointments, liniments, tinctures, &c., constituting moist friction, Fric'tio hu'mida. It is a useful means for exciting the action of the skin.

FRICTIO FREMITUS, see Fremitus—f. Sound, Bruit de frotement.

FRICTRIX, Tribas,

FRICTUM, Liniment.

FRICUM, Frice.

FRIGEFACIENTIA, Refrigerants.

FRIGID, Frig'idus, (F.) Froid; from frigeo, 'to be cold.' Cold. Not easily moved to sexual desire; Imbell'is ad ven'erem. Impotent.

FRIGIDARIUM, Bath, cold.

FRIGID'ITY, Frig'id'itas. Same etymon. A sensation of cold. Also, impotence, and sterility. Frigidity of the stomach is a state of debility of that organ, imputed to excessive venery,—the Anover'ia exhausto'rum of Sauvages.

FRIGIDUS, Frigid.

FRIGORIFIC, from frigus, 'cold,' and fi'o, 'I become.' That which has the power of producing cold. The best FRIGORIFIC MIXTURES are the following. Their effects are owing to the rapid absorption of heat when solids pass into the liquid state.

FRIGORIFIC MIXTURES WITH SNOW.

FRIGUS, Cold—f. Tenue, see Rigor.

FRINGE TREE, Chionanthus Virginica.

FRISSON, Rigor.

FRISSEMENT, Horripilation.

FROGGLEAF, Braselia Hydropeltis.

FROG TONGUE, Ranula.

FROGS' SPAWN, Sperma ranarum.

FROID, Cold, Frigid—f. Glacial, Ice cold.

FROISSEMENT (F.), 'Rubbing, bruising.'

FROSSEMENT PULMONAIRE, Bruit de froissement pulmonaire, Pulmonary crumpling sound. A name given by M. Fournet to a respiratory sound, which communicates to the ear the sensation of the rubbing (froissement) of a texture compressed against a hard body. It is by no means well defined.

FRÔLEMENT, (F.) 'Grazing or touching lightly.'

FRÔLEMENT PÉRICARDIQUE, Bruit de frôlement péricardique. Rustling noise of the pericardium. A sound resembling that produced by the crumpling of a piece of parchment or of thick silken stuff, accompanying the systole and diastole of the heart. It indicates roughness of the pericardium induced by disease.

FROMAGE, Cheese.

FROMENT, Triticum.

FRONCEMENT, Corrugation.

FRONCLE, Furunculus.

FRONDE, Funda.

FRONT, Frons, Metopon, Forehead, Fore-front, Fore-top, Brow, (Sc.) Forret. That part of the visage, which extends from one temple to the other, and is comprised in a vertical direction, between the roots of the hair and the superciliary ridges.

FRONTAL, Frontalis. From frons, frontis, 'the front.' Relating or belonging to the front. This name has been given to several parts. Winslow, Sömmering, and others, call the anterior part of the occipito-frontals—the frontal muscle or frontalis, Musculo'sa Frontis Cutem movens substantia Par (Vesalius).

FRONTAL ARTERY, Arteria supra-orbitalis, is given off by the ophthalmic, which is itself a branch of the internal carotid. It makes its exit from the skull at the upper part of the base of the orbit, and ascends the forehead between the bone and the orbicularis palpebrarum; dividing into three or four branches, which are distributed to the neighbouring muscles.

FRONTAL BONE, Os frontis seu corona'le seu inverecundum seu puppis seu syncip'itis seu prora seu ratio'nis, Metopon. A double bone in the fetus, single in the adult, situate at the base of the cranium, and at the superior part of the face. It forms the vault of the orbit; lodges the ethmoid bone in a notch at its middle part; and is articulated, besides, with the sphenoid, parietal, and nasal bones, the ossa unguis, superior maxillary, and malar bones.

FRONTAL FURROW extends upwards from the frontal spine, and becomes gradually larger in its course, to lodge the upper part of the superior longitudinal sinus, and to give attachment to the falx cerebri.

FRONTAL NERVE, Palpebro-frontal—(Ch.), is the greatest of the three branches of the ophthalmic nerve,—the first division of the 5th pair.

It proceeds along the superior paries of the orbit, and divides into two branches:—the one, internal, which makes its exit from the orbital fossa, passing beneath the pulley of the oblique muscle:—the other, external, issuing from the same cavity by the foramen orbitarium superius.

FRONTAL PROTUBERANCE, F. tuberos'ity, Tuber fronta'le, Suggru'dium supercilio'rum. The protuberance of the frontal bone above the superciliary arch.

FRONTAL SINUSES, Fronta'les Sinus, Metopan'tra, Prosoopan'tra, Sinus Supercilia'res seu pituita'rii frontis, Caverna' frontis, are two deep cavities in the substance of the frontal bone, separated from each other by a median septum, and opening, below, into the anterior cells of the ethmoid bone.

FRONTAL SPINE, Crista inter'na, is situate in the middle of the under part of the bone, and is formed by the coalescence of the inner tables for the attachment of the falx cerebri.

Surgeons have given the name FRONTA'LIS to a bandage or topical application to the forehead. Such have, also, been called τρομετωπια and αναπολληματα.

FRONTAL TUBEROSITY, Frontal protuberance.

FRONTA'LE, from frons, 'the forehead.' A medicine applied to the forehead.

FRONTALIS ET OCCIPITALIS, Occipito-frontalis.

FRONTALIS VERUS, Corrugator supercillii.

FRONTODYMIA, see Cephalodymia.

FRONTO-ETHMOID FORAMEN, Cæcum foramen—f. Nasal, Pyramidalis nasi—f. Sourcilier, Corrugator supercillii.

FROSTBITE, Congelation.

FROSTPLANT, Helianthemum Canadense.

FROSTWEED, Erigeron Philadelphicum, Helianthemum Canadense.

FROSTWORT, Helianthemum Canadense.

FROTH'Y, from Gr. αφρος, 'froth.' [?] Spumo'sus, (F.) Spumeux, Écumeux, Mousseux. An epithet given to the fæces or sputa, when mixed with air.

FROTTEMENT, see Bruit de frottement.

FROTTEMENT GLOBULAIRE. A name given by M. Simonnet, to the pulse in aortic regurgitation, when it is jerking; and, in well marked cases, appears as if the blood consisted of several little masses, which passed in succession under the finger applied to the artery.

FRUCTIFICATIO, Fecundation.

FRUCTUS HORÆI, Fruit, (summer)—f. Im-maturus, Abortion.

FRUGIV'OROUS, Frugiv'orus, from fruges, 'fruits,' and voro, 'I eat.' One that eats fruits.

FRUIT, Fructus, from fruor, fructus, 'to enjoy.' Carpos. In botany, the seed with its enclosing pericarp. In a medical sense it may be defined to be:—that part of a plant which is taken as food. The effects of fruits on the body, in a medical as well as a dietetical point of view, are various. They may be distinguished into classes: for, whilst the Cerealia, for example, afford fruits, which are highly nutritious; the Summer Fruits (Fructus Horæi), which include strawberries, cherries, currents, mulberries, raspberries, figs, grapes, &c., are refrigerant and grateful, but afford little nourishment.

FRUIT-SUGAR, Glucose.

FRUMENT, Fru'menty, Fur'menty, from frumentum, 'wheat' or 'grain,' quasi frugimentum; from fruges, 'fruit.' Pottage made of wheat. Food made of wheat boiled in milk.

FRUMENT'UM. Same etymon. Sitos. Any kind of grain from which bread was made;—especially wheat.

FRUMENTUM, Triticum—f. Corniculatum, Ergot

—f. Cornutum, Ergot—f. Luxurians, Ergot—f. Temulentum, Ergot—f. Turgidum, Ergot.

FRUSTRATOIRE, (F.) Any liquor, taken a short time after eating, for the purpose of assisting digestion when difficult. Sugared water, sau sucrée, or water with the addition of a little brandy, or some aromatic substance, is commonly used for this purpose.

FRUTEX BACCIFER BRAZILIENSIS, Caghiwuyo—f. Indicus spinosus, Cara schulli.

FUCUS, F. vesiculosus, Paint.

FUCUS AMYLA'CEUS, Jaffna, Ed'ible or Ceylon Moss, Plocid'ria candida, Gracil'ria seu Sphaerococ'cus seu Gigarti'na seu Fucus lichenoid'es, Marine Moss. This moss belongs to the natural order Algae. It was introduced some years ago into England, from India. It is white, filiform and fibrous, and has the usual odour of sea-weeds. Its medical properties are similar to those of Irish moss.

FUCUS, BLADDER, F. vesiculosus.

FUCUS CRISPUS, F. Irlandicus, Lichen Car'raegen, Chondrus (Ph. U. S.), Ch. crispus seu polymor'phus, Sphaerococ'cus crispus, Ulva crispata, Irish Pearl, Car'rageen or Cor'rigeen moss, (F.) Mousse d'Irlande ou perlée. This Fucus is found on the coasts of England, Ireland, Western France, Spain, and Portugal, and as far as the tropics. It is also a native of the United States. In Ireland, it is used by the poor as an article of diet. As met with in America, it is of a light yellow colour, and resembles plates of horn, crisped and translucent. An agreeable jelly is obtained from it by boiling it in water or milk, which forms a good article of diet in consumptive cases. Its properties are indeed exactly like those of the Iceland Moss.

FUCUS HELMINTHOCORTON, Corallina Corsicana—f. Inflatus, F. vesiculosus—f. Irlandicus, Fucus crispus—f. Lichenoid'es, F. amylicus—f. Saccharine, Rhodomela palmata.

FUCUS VESICULOSUS, Fucus, F. inflatus, Hav'idrys vesiculo'sa, Quercus Mari'na, Bladder Fucus, Sea Oak, Sea Wrack, Yellow Bladder Wrack, (F.) Varec vésiculeux, Chêne marin. It has been said to be a useful assistant to sea-water, in the cure of disorders of the glands. When the wrack, in fruit, is dried, cleaned, exposed to a red-heat in a crucible with a perforated lid, and is reduced to powder, it forms the Æthiops vegetabilis—the Pulvis Quercus Mari'næ of the Dublin Pharmacopœia—which is used, like the burnt sponge, in bronchocele and other serofulous swellings. Its efficacy depends on the iodine it contains. Dose, gr. x to ℥ij, mixed in molasses or honey. See Soda.

FUGA DÆMONUM, Hypericum perforatum.

FUGA'CIOUS, Fugax, fugacis, (F.) Fugace, from fugere, 'to fly.' An epithet given to certain symptoms, which appear and disappear almost immediately afterwards; as a fugacious redness,—a fugacious swelling, Tumor fugax, &c.

FUGAX, Fugacious.

FUGE, from fugo, 'I expel,' 'an expeller.' A common suffix. Hence, Febrifuge, Vermifuge, &c.

FUGILĒ, Fugil'la. This term has several acceptations. It means, 1. The cerumen of the ear. 2. The nebulous suspension in, or deposition from, the urine. 3. An abscess near the ear.—Ruland and Johnson. 4. Abscess in general.

FUGILLA, Fugile.

FULGUR, Astrape.

FULIG'INOUS, Fuliginosus, Lignyo'des, (F.) Fuliginous, from fuligo, fuliginis, 'soot.' Having the colour of soot. An epithet given to certain parts, as the lips, teeth, or tongue, when they assume a brownish colour, or rather are covered with a coat of that colour. Fuliginosity.

FULIG'GO, genitive fulig'ginis, Lignys, Soot, (F.) Suie, &c., Woodsoot, Fuligo Ligni, consists of volatile alkaline salt, empyreumatic oil, fixed alkali, &c. A tincture, Tinctura Fulig'ginis, prepared from it, has been recommended as a powerful antispasmodic in hysterical cases. (Fulig. lign. ℥ij; potass. subcarb. lbss; ammon. muriat. ℥j; aqua Juviat. Oij. Digest for three days.) This tincture bears the name Soot drops and Pit drops. An ointment of soot has been used in various cutaneous diseases.

FULIGO ALBA PHILOSOPHORUM, Ammonia murias.

FULIGO'KALI, from fuligo, 'soot,' and kali, 'potassa.' This is an analogous preparation to anthrakokali; soot being used in the place of coal. It is employed in the same diseases. What might be regarded as a weak solution of fuligo-kali has been used for many years in Philadelphia, under the names medical lye, soot tea, alkaline solution, dyspeptic lye, and Physick's lye tea. It is made by mixing a quart of hickory ashes; half a pint of soot; and a gallon of boiling water; allowing the mixture to stand for twenty-four hours, and decanting.

FULLER'S EARTH, Cimolia purpurescens.

FULMEN, Astrape.

FULMIGOTON, see Collodion.

FULNESS, Repletio, Plenitudo, Pletho'ra, Repletio. The state of being filled. Also, a feeling of weight or distension in the stomach or other part of the system.

FUMARIA, Fumaria officinalis seu media, Fumus terræ, Capnos, Herba melancholif'uga, Sola'men Scabiosorum, Fumitory, Common Fumitory, Fumiter'ra, (F.) Fumeterre, Fiel de terre, Pisse-sang. Ord. Fumariacæ. The leaves are extremely succulent, and have a bitter, somewhat saline, taste. The infusion of the dried leaves and the expressed juice of the fresh plant have been extolled for their property of clearing the skin of many disorders of the leprous kind.

FUMARIA BULBOSA, F. cava seu major, Borchhausen'ia seu Capno'des cava, Aristolochi'na fabacea seu cava seu vulgaris rotunda, Coryd'alis bulbo'sa seu cava seu tubero'sa, Capno'chis. The root of this plant was formerly given as an emmenagogue and anthelmintic. (F.) Fumeterre bulbuse.

FUMARIA CAVA, F. bulbosa—f. Major, F. bulbosa—f. Media, Fumaria—f. Officinalis, Fumaria.

FUMETERRE, Fumaria.

FUMIGATION, Fumigation—f. Antiloinica Gaubii, see Disinfection—f. Guytoniensis, see Disinfection—f. Smythiana, see Disinfection.

FUMIGA'TION, Fumigatio, from fumus, 'smoke.' Suffit'us, Suffit'io, Suffumina'tio, Suffumig'ium, Suffiment'um, Apocarnis'mus, Thymia'ma, Epithymia'ma, Hypothymia'mo, Hypothymia'sis, Thymia'sis, Capnis'mos, Hypocapnis'mos, Hypat'mus, Hypatmis'mus, Anathymia'sis. An operation, the object of which is to fill a circumscribed space with gas or vapour, with the intention either of purifying the air, or perfuming it, or of charging it with a substance proper for acting upon a part of the surface of the human body. See Sulphurous acid. Hence, fumigations have been distinguished into aqueous, aromatic, sulphureous, mercurial, disinfecting, Guytonian, &c. Benzoin generally constitutes the chief ingredient in the Fumigating Pastilles, to which any variety of odoriferous substances may be added. The following are formulæ.

R. Benzoin. ℥j; casca'rilla. ℥ss; myrrh. ℥j; ol. myrist. ol. caryoph. āā gtt. x; potassæ nitrat. ℥ss; carb. lign. ℥vj; mucl. trag. q. s.—or Acaciæ, p. ij; Aq. cinnam. p. xij. Reduce the solid ingredients to powder, and mix the whole into a plastic mass, which must be formed into cones, flattened at the base, and dried, first in the air, and afterwards in a stove.

FUMIGATION, CHLORINE, see Disinfection — f. Nitrous, see Disinfection — f. Oxy muriatic, see Disinfection.

FUMITERRA, Fumaria.

FUMITORY, Fumaria.

FUMUS ALBUS, Hydrargyrum—f. Citrinus, Sulphur—f. Terræ, Fumaria.

FUNAMBULA'TIO, from funis, 'a cord,' and ambulare, 'to walk.' An exercise with the ancients, in scaling ropes.

FUNCTIO, Functio, Actio, (F.) Function; from fungo, functus, 'I act,' 'perform.' The action of an organ or system of organs. Any act, necessary for accomplishing a vital phenomenon. A function is a special office in the animal economy, which has, as its instrument, an organ or apparatus of organs. Thus respiration is a function. Its object is the conversion of venous into arterial blood, and its instrument is the lungs. The ancient physiologists divided the functions into vital, animal, and natural. They called vital functions those which are essential to life, as innervation, circulation, respiration; animal functions, those which belong to the encephalon; viz.: the functions of the intellect, the affections of the mind, and the voluntary motions; and natural functions, Facultates seu Actiões naturales, those relating to assimilation, such as the actions of the abdominal viscera, of the absorbent and exhalant vessels, &c. Bichat divided the functions into those which relate to the preservation of the individual, and those that relate to the preservation of the species. The former he subdivided into animal and organic. The animal functions or functions of relation are those of the intellect, sensation, locomotion, and voice. The organic functions include digestion, absorption, respiration, circulation, secretion, nutrition, and calorification. The functions, whose object is the preservation of the species—the organic, nutritive, or vegetative functions—are all those that relate to generation;—such as conception, gestation, accouchement, &c. Each of these admits of numerous subdivisions in a complete course of Physiology;—for so the doctrine of the functions is called.

FUNCTIONAL, Functionalis, (F.) Functionnel. Relating or belonging to the function of an organ, or to the functions in general.

Functional or vital phenomena are those produced by some modification in the action of an organ or organs, in contradistinction to those of a material or physical character;—thus we distinguish the functional phenomena of phthisis from those indicated by physical diagnosis—the physical phenomena.

FUNCTIONAL DISEASES, see Organic Diseases.

FUNDA, 'a sling.' Sphenodonæ, (F.) Fronde. A bandage, composed of a fillet or long compress, cleft at its extremities to within about two inches of its middle. It is used in diseases of the nose and chin, and especially in cases of fracture of the lower jaw. In such case it has, also, been called Mentonnière, because placed beneath the chin; from (F.) Menton, 'the chin.'

FUNDAMENT, Anus—f. Falling down of the, Proctocœle.

FUNDAMENTAL, from fundare, 'to found; to lay the bottom of any thing.' (F.) Fondamental. Some anatomists have called the sacrum Os Fundamentale, because it seems to serve as a base to the vertebral column. The sphenoid bone has likewise been so denominated, from its being situate at the base of the cranium.

FUNDUS, 'the bottom.' (F.) Fond. The base of any organ which ends in a neck, or has an external aperture; as the Fundus vesicæ, F. uteri, &c. Also, the Vulva.

FUNDES VAGINÆ, Laquear vaginæ.

FUNES CORDIS, Columnæ carneæ—f. Semicirculares, Semicircular canals.

FUNGIFORM PAPPILLÆ, see Papillæ of the Tongue.

FUN'GOID, Fungoides, Mycoïdes, Fungiformis, Fun'giform, (F.) Fongoïde, Fongiforme, from fungus, 'a mushroom,' and aidos, 'resemblance.' That which has the shape of, or grows in some measure like a mushroom, as the fungoid or fungiform papillæ of the tongue.

FUNGOID DISEASE, Encephaloid.

FUNGOSITY, Fungositas, Caro luxurians seu fungosa, Escarcoïma, Hypersarcoïma, Hypersarcoïsis, Proud Flesh, (F.) Fongosité. The quality of that which is fungous:—fungous excrecence, Exerescencia fungosa. The fungosities which arise in wounds or ulcers are easily repressed by gentle compression, dry lint, the sulphas cupri, or other gentle caustics. At times, the more powerful are necessary, and sometimes excision is required.

FUNGOUS, Fungosus, (F.) Fongueux. Having the characters of fungosity or fungus—as a fungous wound.

FUNGUS, Myces, (σφογγος), (F.) Fongus, Champignon. The mushroom order of plants; class Cryptogamia, in the Linnean system. In Pathology, the word is commonly used synonymously with fungosity, mycoïsis. M. Breschet has proposed to restrict the term fungosity to vegetations which arise on denuded surfaces, and to apply the term fungus to the tumours which form in the substance of the textures, without any external ulceration. Fici and warts, for example, would be fungi of the skin.

FUNGUS ALBUS SALIGNEUS, Dædalea suaveolens—f. Articuli, Spina ventosa—f. Bleeding, Hæmatodes fungus—f. Cancerosus hæmatodes, Hæmatodes F.—f. Cancerosus medullaris, see Encephaloid—f. Cerebralis, see Encephaloid—f. Cerebri, Encephalocœle—f. Chirurgorum, Lycoperdon—f. Cynoshati, Bedeguar—f. Faginosus, Morehella esculenta—f. Hæmatodes, Hæmatodes fungus—f. Igniarius, Boletus igniarius—f. Laricis, Boletus laricis—f. of Malta, Cynomorium coccineum—f. Medullaris, see Encephaloid—f. Melanodes, Cancer, melanotic—f. Melitensis, Cynomorium coccineum—f. Petræus marinus, Umbilicus marinus—f. Quercinus, Boletus igniarius—f. Rosarum, Bedeguar—f. Salicis, Dædalea suaveolens—f. Sambucinus, Peziza auricula.

FUNIC BELLOWS' SOUND, see Bellows' Sound, funic.

FUNICULI GRAC'ILES, (diminutive of funis, 'a cord,') Posterior Med'ian Columnæ or Fasciculi of the medulla oblongata. Along the posterior border of each corpus restiforme, and separated from it by a groove, is a narrow white cord, separated from its fellow by the fissura longitudinalis posterior. The pair of cords are the funiculi graciles. Each funiculus forms an enlargement—processus clavatus—at its upper end, and is then lost in the corpus restiforme.

FUNICULI SILIQUÆ. Longitudinal fibres seen in the groove which separates the corpus olivare from the corpus pyramidale and corpus restiforme. They enclose the base of the corpus olivare,—those which lie on its inner side forming the funiculus internus; and those on its outer side the funiculus externus.

FUNICULUS, Cord—f. Externus, see Funiculi siliquæ—f. Internus, see Funiculi siliquæ—f. Spermaticus, Spermatie cord—f. Tympani, Chorda tympani.

FUNICULUS UMBILICALIS, Funis umbilicalis. Intestinulum, Vinculum umbilicale, Umbilical cord, Navel string, diminutive of Fanis, 'a cord.' (F.) Cordon ombilicale. A cord-like substance, which extends from the placenta to the umbilicus of the fœtus. It is composed of the chorion, amnion, an albuminous secretion called the Jelly of the Cord, cellular substance, an umbilical vein, and two umbilical arteries. The former conveys the blood from the placenta to the fœtus—the latter return it. All these parts are surrounded by a sheath—Investitura seu Vagina funiculi umbilicalis. Its usual length is from 16 to 22 inches.

FUNICULUS VARICOSUS, Cirsocele.

FUNIS, Cord, Laqueus—f. Argentæus, Medulla spinalis—f. Hippocratis, Actillis tendo—f. Umbilicalis, Funiculus umbilicalis.

FUNK, Boletus igniarius.

FUNNEL, see Infundibulum.

FUR, Enduit.

FURCELLA, Furcula; diminutive of furca, 'a fork.' The upper part of the sternum, the clavicle. The Fourchette.

FURCELLA INFERIOR, Xiphoid cartilage.

FURCHIMUHL, MINERAL WATERS OF. These Bavarian springs contain carbonic acid, sulphuretted hydrogen, carbonates of lime and soda; chlorides of lime and magnesium, oxides of iron and magnesium, &c.

FURCIFFERA, Penis.

FURCILLA, Fourchette.

FURCULA, Furcella, Clavicle, Fourchette.

FUREUR UTÉRINE, Nymphomania.

FURFUR, (from far, 'bran,') Bran, Pit'yrion, Ach'yrion, Apobras'ma, Lemna, Cantabru'no, (F.) Son. The decoction is sometimes employed as an emollient.

FURFURA, Scarf.

FURFURA'CEOUS, from furfur, 'bran.' Scurfy, Cavica'ceous, Pithyri'nus, Pityroïdes, Pityroïdes, (F.) Furfura'cæ. Resembling bran. A name given to eruptions, in which the epidermis is detached in small scales resembling bran. Also, a bran-like sediment observed at times in the urine;—Urina furfura'cæa, Sedimentum Uri'næ pityroïdes.

FURFURAMIDE, see Furfurine.

FURFURATIO, Desquamation, Porrigo, Pityriasis.

FUR'FURINE, Furfuri'na, from furfur, 'bran.' By the action of dilute sulphuric acid on corn meal or bran an oil is obtained—furfurol or furfurole. By the action of ammonia on this, furfuramide or furfurolamide results; and by the action of dilute potassa on this the alkaloid furfurine is obtained. This was found by Professor Simpson, of Edinburgh, to possess tonic, if not antiperiodic, properties.

FURFURISCA, Pityriasis.

FURFUROL, see Furfurine.

FURFUOLAMIDE, see Furfurine.

FURIA INFERNALIS. A kind of vermiform insect, scarcely two lines long, common in Sweden, which flies about and stings both man and animals, exciting the most excruciating torture.

FURIBUNDUS, Maniodes.

FURIOSUS, Maniodes.

FURIOUS, Maniodes.

FURMAGE, Cheese.

FURMENTY, Fru ment.

FURNAS, MINERAL WATERS OF. A thermal chalybeate water in St. Michael's, Azores, which contains carbonic acid, and carbonate of iron.

FURONCLE, Furunculus.

FURONCLE GUÉPIER. A malignant boil, Wasp's nest boil, which generally attacks the nape and region of the neck, and rarely others than old people. Hence it has been called Old People's boil.

FURONCULEUX, Furuncular.

FUROR, Mania—f. Brevis, Rage—f. Mania, Mania—f. Uterinus, Nymphomania.

FURRED, see Enduit.

FURROW, MENTO-LABIAL, see Mento-labial furrow.

FURUNCULAR, Furun'culous, Furunculo'sus, (F.) Furunculeux. Relating or appertaining to furunculus,—as 'a furuncular epidemic.'

FURUNCULI ATONICI, Ecthyma—f. Ventriculus, see Furunculus.

FURUNCULOID, Furunculoï'des. A hybrid term, from furunculus, and aios, 'resemblance.' Resembling furunculus,—as 'a furunculoïd epidemic.'

FURUNCULUS, from furere, 'to be mad,' Chi'adus, Oh'oli, Doth'ien, Dothion, Furun'culus suppurato'rius, F. Verus, F. benignus, Phyma furun'culus, Abscessus nucleatus, a furuncle, a boil, a bile, (Sc.) Bruick, Brak, (Prov.) Pinsweal, (F.) Furoncle, Froncle, Clou. A small phlegmon, which appears under the form of a conical, hard, circumscribed tumour, having its seat in the dermoid texture. At the end of an uncertain period, it becomes pointed, white or yellow, and gives exit to pus mixed with blood. When it breaks, a small, grayish, fibrous mass sometimes appears, which consists of dead areolar tissue. This is called the Core, Setfast, Ventriculus seu Nucleus Furun'culi, (F.) Bourbillon. The abscess does not heal until after its separation. The indications of treatment are,—to discuss by the application of leeches and warm fomentations,—or, if this cannot be done, to encourage suppuration by warm, emollient cataplasms. When suppuration is entirely established, the part may be opened or suffered to break, according to circumstances.

The term blind boil is given to an indolent, imperfectly suppurating, phlegmonous tumour, of the kind described above, which is often seated in a sebaceous follicle, as in Aene indurata.

FURUNCULUS GANGRÆNOSUS, Anthrax—f. Malig-nus, Anthrax.

FUSARIA VERMICULARIS, Ascaris vermicularis—f. Visceralis et renalis, Strongylus gigas.

FUSÉE PURULENTE (F.). The long and sinuous route which pus takes, in certain cases, in making its way to the surface. These Fusées almost always form beneath the skin between the muscles; or along aponeuroses, bones, tendons, &c.

FUSEL OIL, see Oil, fusel.

FUSIBLE, see Fusion.

FUSIBILITY, see Fusion.

FUSION, Fu'sio, Melting, Liquefaction; from funderè, fusum, 'to melt.' In chymistry, the transition of a solid body into a liquid by the aid of heat. Substances capable of such transition are said to be fusible; or to be possessed of fusibility.

FUSTIC TREE, Cladastrix tinctoria.

FUTUTRIX, Tribas.

G.

⁷THE Greek G, Γ, with the ancient Greek physicians, signified an ounce.—Rhod. ad Scribonium.

GAB, Mouth.

GABALLA, Cabal.

GABELLA, Mesophryon.

GABIR'EA, γαβίρα. A fatty kind of myrrh, mentioned by Dioscorides.

GAITLING, Infans.

GALA, γαλα, genitive γαλακτος, milk; hence: GALACTACRA'SIA, from γαλα, and ακρασια, 'imperfect mixture.' A morbid mixture or constitution of the milk.

GALACTACRATIA, Galactia.

GALACTE'MIA, from γαλα, and 'αιμα, 'blood.' A condition of the blood in which it contains milk.

GALACTAGOGA, Galactopoetica.

GALACTAPOSTEMA, Mastodynia apostematosa.

GALACTIA, Galactirrhœa, Galactorrhœa, from γαλα. Lactis redundan'tia, Polygalactia, Galactozem'ia. A redundant flow of milk, either in a female who is suckling, or in one who is not. It may occur without being provoked by suckling. When to a great extent, it sometimes causes wasting; Tabes lac'tea, T. nutri'eum. Dr. Good uses Galactia, in his Nosology, for 'morbid flow or deficiency of milk,' Galactuerati'a.

GALACTICUS, Lactic.

GALACTIDRO'SIS, from γαλα, and 'ιδρωσις, 'sweating.' Sweating of milk.

GALACTIFER, Galactophorus.

GALACTINE, Casein.

GALACTINUS, Lactic.

GALACTIRRHŒA, Galactia.

GALACTIS, Galaxias.

GALACTIS'CHESIS, Galactos'chesis, Lactis reten'tio, from γαλα, and σχειν, 'to restrain.' Retention or suppression of milk.

GALACTITES, Galaxias.

GALACTOCATARACTA, Cataract, milky.

GALACTOCE'LE, Galacton'cus, Lactocel'e, from γαλα, and κηλη, 'a tumour.' Tumor lac'teus. Distension of one or more of the galactophorous sinuses by milk. Lactiferous engorgement. The French use the term Poül for such engorgement; a relic of an idea, as old as Aristotle, that a hair swallowed may have obstructed one of the milk tubes, which must be got rid of by sucking.

The name has, also, been given by Vidal de Cassis to a tumour produced by an effusion of a white liquid into the tunica vaginalis, which he considered to be true milk.

GALACTODEN'DRON U'TILĒ, from γαλα, and δένδρον, 'a tree.' Palo de Vaeca, Arbol de Leche, Cow tree of South America. Family, Urticaceæ. When an incision is made into the trunk, a fluid similar to milk flows out, which is agreeable and nutritious.

GALACTO'DES, from γαλα, and εἶδος, 'resemblance.' In Hippocrates, the term signifies milk-warm, and likewise a milky colour, as of the urine—uri'na galactoides.

GALACTODIÆ'TA, Diæ'ta lac'tea, from γαλα, and διαίτα, 'diet.' A milk diet.

GALACTODIARRHŒA, Cœliac Flux.

GALACTOGANGLION, Milk knot.

GALACTOHE'MIA, Galacthæ'mia, Galæ'mia, from γαλα, and 'αιμα, 'blood.' Lactis sanguinolenti Excretio. The secretion of bloody or bloodlike milk.

GALACTOMASTOPARECTOMA, Mastodynia apostematosa.

GALACTOM'ETER, Lactom'eter, from γαλα, and μετρον, 'measure.' An instrument for appreciating the quantity of cream in milk. It is a kind of graduated separatory or éprovette—the degrees on the scale indicating the thickness of the layer of cream that forms on the surface of the milk.

GALACTONCUS, Galactocœle.

GALACTOPH'AGOUS, Galactoph'agus, Lactiv'orus, sometimes used substantively; from γαλα, and φαγω, 'I eat.' That which feeds on milk. A name given to certain people, with whom milk appears to constitute the chief nourishment.

GALACTOPHORA, Galactopoetica.

GALACTOPHORITIS. Inflammation of the galactophorous ducts. It has been inaccurately used for ulceration of the top of the nipple towards their orifices.

GALACTOPHOROUS, Lactiferous—g. Ducts, Lactiferous ducts—g. Receptacle, see Lactiferous vessels—g. Sac, see Lactiferous vessels—g. Sinuses, see Lactiferous vessels.

GALACTOPH'ORUS. Some accoucheurs have given this name to an instrument intended to facilitate sucking, when the faulty conformation of the nipple prevents the child from laying hold of it.

GALACTOPH'YGUS, from γαλα, and φεγγειν, 'to shun.' That which arrests or disperses the secretion of milk. Hence Galactoph'ygga Medicamen'ta.

GALACTOPLA'NIA, Metas'tasis seu Aber-ratio seu Via extraördinariæ lactis, Galactorrhœa erro'nea, from γαλα, and πλανη, 'wandering.' Extravasation of milk into the areolar membrane. Secretion of milk elsewhere than from the breasts.

GALACTOPLERO'SIS, from γαλα, and πληρωσις, 'repletion.' Redundance of milk.

GALACTOPOEIA, Galactopoetica.

GALACTOPOESIS, Galactosis.

GALACTOPOE'TICA, Galactoph'ora, Galactago'ga, Galactosœ'ca, from γαλα, and ποιω, 'I make.' Substances to which has been attributed the property of favouring the secretion of milk and augmenting its quantity.

GALACTOPOESIS, Galactosis.

GALACTOPO'SIA, from γαλα, and ποσις,

'drink.' The drinking of milk. Treatment of a disease by means of milk.

GALACTOP'OTES, Galactop'otus, Lactip'otor. Same etymon. A drinker of milk. One subjected to a milk diet.

GALACTOPYRA, Fever, milk.
GALACTOPYRETUS, Fever, milk.
GALACTORRHEA, Galactia—g. Erronea, Galactoplania—g. Saccharata, Saccharorrhœa lactea.

GALACTOSACCHARUM, Saccharum lactis.
GALACTOSCHESIS, Galactischesis.
GALACTO'SIS, Galactopoi'e'sis, Galactopoe'sis, Secretio lactis; from γαλα. The secretion or formation of milk.

GALACTOT'ROPHE, Galactotroph'ia, from γαλα, and τροφή, 'nourishment.' Nourishment by means of milk.

GALACTOZE'MIA, from γαλα, and ζημια, 'loss.' Loss of milk. Also, Galactia.

GALACTY'CHOS, from γαλα, and εχειν, 'to have.' Suckling. Giving milk.

GALACTURIA, Chyluria.
GALÆMIA, Galactohæmia.

GALANGA, Maranta galanga.
GALANGAL, Maranta galanga.

GALANGALE, Cyperus longus.
GALARHÆUS LATHYRIS, Euphorbia lathyris—g. Palustris, Euphorbia palustris.

GALARIPS, Allamanda.
GALAX APHYL'LA, G. rotundifolia, Erythrorrhiza rotundifolia; Carpenter's leaf, Beetleweed; indigenous; Order Ericaceæ. The root is astringent, and the leaves, in domestic practice, are applied to cuts and wounds.

GALAXIA, Thoracic duct.
GALAXIAS, Galacti'tes, Galact'is; from γαλα. A milk stone. A stone supposed to be capable of promoting the secretion of milk.

GALBANUM, see Bubon galbanum—g. Long-leaved, Bubon galbanum.

GAL'BULUS, from galbus, 'yellow.' A kind of congenital jaundice, in which the yellow colour continues through life. It is rather a defect in colour than a disease.—Vogel.

GALE, Myrica gale—g. Odorant, Myrica gale—g. Scotch, Myrica gale—g. Sweet, Myrica gale.

GALE, Psora—g. Canine, Psoriasis—g. Épideémique, Eczema—g. Miliaire, Psoriasis—g. Sèche, Lichen, Psoriasis.

GA'LEA. A helmet, from γαλα, 'a cat;' of the skin of which it was formerly made. [?] A name given to the amnios, and also to the bandage of Galen. In Pathology, it indicates a headache affecting the whole head. See, also, Caul.

GALEA APONEURO'TICA CAP'ITIS, Ga'lea tendin'ea Santorini, Ga'lea cap'itis, Membrana epicran'ia. The tendinous expansion which unites the frontal and occipital portions of the occipito-frontalis muscle.

GALEAMAUROSIS, Amaurotic cat's eye.
GALEAN'CON, Galian'con, from γαλα, 'a cat,' 'a weasel,' and αγκων, 'an elbow.' Mustel'la'neus. One who has two short arms.

GALEAN'THROPY, Galeanthrop'ia, from γαλα, 'a cat,' and ανθρωπος, 'a man.' A variety of melancholy in which the patient believes himself changed into a cat. An affection similar to lycanthropy and cynanthropy.

GALE'GA, G. officina'lis seu vulgaris seu Persica, Ruta capraria, Goat's Rue, (F.) Rue de chèvre, Faux Indigo. Ord. Leguminosæ. It is slightly aromatic, and was once used as a sudorific and alexiterial in malignant fevers, &c.

GALEGA APOLLINEA, Tephrosia apollinea—g. Persica, Galega—g. Purpurea, Tephrosia apollinea—g. Toxicaria, Tephrosia toxicaria.

GALEGA VIRGINIA'NA, Tephrosia virginiana, Turkey Pea, Hoary Pea, Devil's shoestrings, Vir- ginia Goat's rue or cat-gut, is used in some parts of the United States as an anthelmintic. The decoction of the root is given.

GALEGA VULGARIS, Galega.
GALENE, Graphites.

GALENEA, Graphites.
GALEN'IC, Galen'ical, Galen'icus, Galen'nius, (F.) Galénique, from Galenus. That which relates to the doctrine of Galen or to Galenism. Used, substantively, for drugs that are not chymical.

GALENIC MEDICINE, Galenism.
GA'LENISM, Galen'ic medicine. The doctrine of Galen.

GA'LENIST, Galenis'ta, Galenis'tes. A follower of the doctrine of Galen.

GALENIUS, Galenic.
GALEODOLON, Galeopsis.

GALEOPDOLON, Galeopsis.
GALEOPSIDE, Galeopsis grandiflora.

GALEOPSIS, Lamium album.
GALEOP'SIS, Galiop'sis, Galeob'dolon, Galeop'dolon, La'mium rubrum, Urti'ca iners magna frētidis'sima, Stachys foëtida, Hedge nettle, (F.) Ortie morte des bois. Ord. Labiate. From γαλα, 'a weasel,' and οψις, 'appearance;' the corolla having been supposed to resemble the head of the weasel. This plant was formerly reckoned a vulnerary and anodyne.

GALEOPSIS ANGUSTIFOLIA, G. grandiflora—g. Dubia, G. grandiflora.

GALEOP'SIS GRANDIFLO'RA, G. Ochroleuca seu la'danum seu angustifolia seu dubia seu prostrata seu villo'sa, Tetrabit longiflorum, G. Seg'getum, Herba Sideritidis, (F.) Galeopside, Chanvre bâtard. This plant is regarded in Germany as a bitter resolvent. It is the basis, also, of a celebrated nostrum, the Blankenheimer Tea, called likewise Lieber's pectoral and phthisical herbs (Lieber'sche Brust oder Auszehrungs-Krauter), which has enjoyed great repute in pectoral complaints. The tops of the plant are given in decoction (℞j, boiled in a pint of water for a quarter of an hour). This quantity to be taken in a day.

GALEOPSIS LADANUM, G. grandiflora—g. Ochroleuca, G. grandiflora—g. Prostrata, G. grandiflora—g. Segetum, G. grandiflora.

GALEOP'SIS VERSIC'OLOR, is possessed of the same virtues.

GALEOPSIS VILLOSA, G. grandiflora.
GALEROPIA, Oxyopia.

GALEUX, Psoric.
GA'LIA. An ancient composition, in which galls were an ingredient; the Galia pura. There was also a Galia aromat'ica, moscha'ta seu musca'ta, which consisted of a mixture of several perfumes, such as musk.

GALIANCON, Galeancon.

Syst. Tetrandria Monogynia*. (F.) Ga'illet cecrochant, G. crochant, Grateron. The expressed juice has been given as an aperient diuretic in incipient dropsies; also in cancer; and the decoction in Lepra and Psoriasis.

GALIIUM APARANOIDES, G. aparine.
GA'LIIUM APRELI'UM, Rough bed-straw, Rough ladies' bed-straw; indigenous; has the diuretic properties of most of its genus.

GALUUM BRACHYCARPON, G. aparine—G. Caucasicum, G. verum.

GALUUM CIRCÆZANS, Wild Liquorice, Master of the Woods. An indigenous plant, which flowers from June to August. It is demulcent and diuretic, and is a popular domestic remedy.

GALUUM INFESTE, G. aparine—G. Luteum, G. verum.

GALUUM MOLLUGO, Galium album seu Tyrolen'se, Alys'sum Plin'ii, Greater ladies' bed-straw, (F.) Cailllait blanc. The herb and flowers have been used medicinally in epilepsy.

GALUUM ODORATUM, Asperula odorata—G. Scaberrimum, G. aparine.

GALUUM TINCTORUM, an American species, closely allied in properties to G. verum.

GALUUM TYROLENSE, G. mollugo—G. Tuberculatum, G. verum.

GALUUM VERUM, Galium, G. luteum seu Caucasicum seu tuberculatum, Ladies' bed-straw, Cheese-remet, Bed-straw, Cleaverwort, Goose-grass, Savoyan, Clabber-grass, Milksucet, Poor Robin, Gravel-grass, (F.) Gaillet jaune ou vrai, Vrai Cailllait. The tops were used in the cure of epilepsy. The leaves and flowers possess the property of curdling milk.

GALL, Bile, see Chafing, and Eczema impetiginodes, Quercus infectoria, and Vitrum—G. of the Earth, Prenanthes, P. alba—G. Nut, see Quercus infectoria—G. of the Ox, see Bile—G. of the Skin, Chafing—G. Turkey, see Quercus infectoria.

GALL-BLADDER, Vesicula fellea, Cholecyst, Cholecystitis, Folliculus felleus, Cystis fellea seu choledochus, Vesicula fellea seu biliaria, Vesicula bilis, Folliculus felleus, (F.) Vésicule du fiel ou biliaire, Réservoir de la bile. A membranous, pyriform reservoir, lodged in a superficial depression at the inferior surface of the right lobe of the liver. It receives, by the hepatic and cystic ducts, a portion of the bile secreted by the liver, when the stomach is empty, which becomes in it more acrid, bitter, and thick. It receives an artery, called the cystic. Its veins empty into the vena porta. Its nerves come from the hepatic plexus, and its lymphatic vessels join those of the liver.

GALLÆ QUERCÛS, see Quercus infectoria—G. Tinctoriæ, see Quercus infectoria—G. Turcica, see Quercus infectoria.

GALLATURA, Molecule.

GALLE DE CHÈNE, see Quercus infectoria.

GALLI GALLINACEI CAPUT, Gallinaginis caput.

GALLINAG'INIS CAPUT, Galli gallina'cei Caput, Caput gallina'ceum, Colliculus semina'lis, Caruncula semina'lis, Veru montanum, Crista urethra'lis seu ure'thræ, Crête uréthrale.—(Ch.) from gallinago, gallinaginis, 'a woodcock.' An oblong, rounded projection, formed by the mucous membrane in the spongy portion of the urethra, at the sides of which the ejaculatory ducts open.

GAL'LIPOT, (Prov.) Glumpot. Perhaps from gala, 'finery.' [?] A pot painted and glazed, or merely glazed, and commonly used to hold medicines.

GALLITRICHUM, Salvia sclarea.

GALLIUM, Galium.

GALLS, see Quercus infectoria—G. Bussorah, see Quercus infectoria—G. Mecca, see Quercus infectoria.

GALVANISATION, Galvanization.

GALVANISM, Galvanismus, Electric'itas animalis seu Galvan'ica seu metall'ica, Irritamentum metallo'rum seu metall'icum, Vol'taism, Vol'ta'ic or Chemical or Contact Electricity. Called after Galvani. A series of phenomena, consisting in sensible movements, executed by animal parts, which are endowed with irritability, when placed in connexion with two metallic plates of different nature, between which a communication is established by direct contact or by means of a metallic wire. Galvanism has been employed medicinally in the same cases as electricity, and especially in neuralgic affections. It is often applied in the form of plates,—"Mansford's plates." In asthma, for example, a small blister, the size of a dollar, may be placed on the neck over the course of the phrenic and pneumogastric nerves, and another on the side, in the region of the diaphragm. One metal is placed mediately or immediately over the vesicated surface on the neck, and another over that in the side. They are then connected by means of a wire. The new nervous impression, in this way induced, is often signally beneficial.

GALVANIZATION, Galvanisa'tio, (F.) Galvanisation. The act of affecting with galvanism.

GALVANIZATION, LO'CALIZED, (F.) Galvanisation localisée. A mode of employing galvanism, proposed by Duchenne, of Boulogne, by which, he conceives, the electric influence may be arrested, at will, in the skin; or, without any incision or puncture, the skin may be traversed, and the electric influence be limited to the organs which it covers—to the nerves, muscles, and even the bones.

GANGLIAR, Ganglionic.

GANGLIATED, Ganglionic.

GANG'LIFORM, Gang'lioform, Gangli'formis. Having the shape of a ganglion. From ganglion, and forma, 'form.'

GANGLIITIS, Ganglionitis.

GANGLI'OLUM, Diminutive of ganglion. A small ganglion.

GANGLIO'MA. A tumour of the glands or of the lymphatic ganglions, and especially epithelioma of them.—Nysten.

GANG'LION, Gang'lion. In anatomy, a name generally given to a knot-like enlargement in the course of a nerve. It is applied, however, to organs differing considerably from each other in life or partial death of an organ. Authors have generally distinguished mortification into two stages; naming the first incipient or gangrene. It is attended with a sudden diminution of feeling in the part affected; livid discoloration; detachment of the cuticle, under which a turbid fluid is effused; with crepitation, owing to the disengagement of air into the areolar texture. When the part has become quite black, and incapable of all feeling, circulation, and life, it constitutes the second stage, or mortification, and is called sphac'elus. Gangrene, however, is frequently used synonymously with mortification,—local asphyxia being the term employed for that condition, in which the parts are in a state of suspended animation, and, consequently, susceptible of resuscitation. When the part is filled with fluid entering into putrefaction, the affection is called humid gangrene, (F.) Gangrène humide: on the other hand, when it is dry and shrivelled, it constitutes dry gangrene; (F.) Gangrène sèche. To this class belong the gangræ'na sen'tis, G. Pot'tii, Presbyosphae'elus, or spontaneous gangrene of old people, which rarely admits of cure. Whatever may be the kind of gangrene, it may be caused by violent inflammation, contusion, a burn, congelation, the ligature of a large arterial trunk, or by some inappreciable internal cause.

The treatment, both of external and internal gangrene, varies according to the causes which produce it. Gangrene from excessive inflammation is obviated by antiphlogistics; and that from intense cold by cautiously restoring the circulation by cold frictions, &c. When the gangrene has become developed, the separation of the eschars must be encouraged by emollient applications, if there be considerable reaction; or by tonics and stimulants, if the reaction be insufficient.

GANGRENOUS, Gangræ'nicus, Gangræno'sus, Gangræno'des, (F.) Gangrèneux. Affected with or relating to gangrene.

GANGRENOUS EROSION OF THE CHEEK, Cancer aquaticus.

GANJAH, Gunjah.

GANTELET (F.), Chiroth'e'ca, Fas'cia digi'talis, Gauntlet; from (F.) gant, 'a glove.' A sort of bandage which envelops the hand and fingers like a glove. It is made with a long roller, about an inch broad; and is applied so that the fingers are covered to their tips, when it is called Gantelet entier ou complet. The Demi-gantelet includes only the hand and base of the fingers. Both bandages are used in fractures and luxations of the fingers, burns of the hand, &c. See Chirotheca.

GANTS DES DAMES, Condom—g. de Notre Dame, Digitalis.

GAPING, Yawning.

GARANÇE, Rubia.

GARCIN'IA CAMBO'GIA, G. seu Cambogia gutta, Mangosta'na Cambogia. Ord. Guttiferæ. A tree of Ceylon, Family, Guttifera, which affords a concrete juice similar to Gamboge.

GARCINIA GUTTA, G. Cambogia.

GARCIN'IA MANGOSTA'NA, Mangosta'na Garcin'ia, from Garcin, who accurately described it. The systematic name of the Mangostan', Mangoustan', Mangostine' or Mangosteen' tree, Man- gosta'na. It grows in great abundance in Java and the Molucca islands. The fruit, which is about the size of an orange, is delicious, and is eaten in almost every disorder. The dried bark is used medicinally in dysentery and tenesmus; and a strong decoction has been much esteemed in ulcerated sore throat.

GARCIN'IA PURPU'REA. From this species a concrete oil of Mangosteen is obtained, which is called, in India, Kokum butter, Kokum being the Indian name of Mangosteen. The oil is extracted from the fruit by boiling. It is used in India in cases of chaps.

GARETUM, Poples.

GARGALISMUS, Gargalus.

GAR'GALUS, Gar'gale, Gargalis'mus, Titilla'tio, Irrita'tio, Pruri'tus. Titillation, irritation, itching. Also, masturbation; and, rarely, animal magnetism.

GARGAREON, Uvula.

GARGARISATIO, Gargarism.

GAR'GARISM, Gargaris'mus, Gargaris'ma, Anagargalie'ton, Gargaris'mum, Collu'tio, Diacly's'ma, Anagargaris'ton, Anagargaris'mus, Anaconchylis'mus, Anaconchylis'mus, Titillamen'tum, from γαργαρίζω, 'I wash the mouth,' 'I gargle.' A gargle. Any liquid medicine, intended to be retained in the mouth, for a certain time, and to be thrown in contact with the uvula, velum pendulum, tonsils, &c. For this purpose, the liquid is agitated by the air issuing from the larynx, the head being thrown back. Gargles are employed in cynanche tonsillar and other diseases of the fauces, and are made of stimulants, sedatives, astringents, refrigerants, &c., according to circumstances.

The process is termed gargling, gargarisa'tio. The term collu'torium or collutorium oris is generally restricted to a wash for the mouth.

GARGET, Phytolacca decandra.

GARRETUM, Poples.

GARROPHYLLUS, Eugenia caryophyllata.

GARROT (F.), garrot, from garrotter, 'to tie fast.' A compressing bandage, tightened by twisting a small cylinder of wood, by which the arteries of a limb are compressed, for the purpose of suspending the flow of blood in cases of hemorrhage, aneurism, amputation, &c.

GARROTILLO, Cynanche maligna.

GARRULITAS, Loquacity.

GARU'LEUM BIPINNA'TUM. A South African plant, Ord. Compositæ; known under the name Shakeroot, from its reputed effects as an antidote to the bites of venomous serpents. The root is a great favourite with the Boers in chest diseases—as asthma—and in affections in which a free secretion from the mucous membrane of the bronchia is indicated. It has diaphoretic properties, and acts as a diuretic in gout and dropsy. It is given in decoction or tincture. Dr. Pappe thinks the root ought to have a place in the Materia Medica.

GARUM, γαρῶν, Licium, Liquamen. The ancient Romans gave this name to a kind of pickle made by collecting the liquor which flowed from salted and half-putrefied fish. It was used as a condiment. — The Geoponics, Humelberg on Apicius, Martial, &c.

GASPING, Anhelatio.

GASTEIN, MINERAL WATERS OF. Gastein or Gasteiner Wildbad is in the Noric Alps, Austria. The waters are thermal. Temp. 106° to 118° Fah. They contain sulphate of soda, chloride of sodium, chloride of potassium, carbonate of soda, carbonate of lime, magnesia, manganese, iron, &c.

GASTER, γαστήρ. The abdomen. At times, but rarely, the uterus. Also, the stomach, in particular; Hence:

GASTERALGIA, Gastralgia.

GASTERANAX, from γαστήρ, 'the abdomen,' and ἀναξ, 'a king.' A name given by Dolæus to a hypothetical vital principle, corresponding to the Archæus of Van Helmont, the seat of which he placed in the lower belly. See Bithnimalca.

GASTERANGEMPHRAXIS, Gasterangiemphraxis.

GASTERANGIEMPHRAX'IS, Gasterangiemphrax'is, Gasteremphrax'is. Obstruction of the pylorus; from γαστήρ, 'stomach,' ἀγχω, 'I strangle,' and ἐμφρασσω, 'I obstruct.' — Vogel. Also, and properly, obstruction or congestion of the vessels of the stomach.

GASTÉRIASE, Pepsin.

GASTERASTHENIA, Imbecillitas seu Atonia seu Laxitas ventriculi; from γαστήρ, 'stomach,' and ἀσθενεια, 'debility.' Debility of the stomach.

GASTERATAxia, Embarras gastrique.

GASTERCHEMA, Gastereche'ma, Son'itus stomachicus; from γαστήρ, 'the stomach,' and ηχημα, 'sound.' Sound heard on auscultating or percussing the region of the stomach, and referred to that organ.

GASTEREMPHRAXIS, Gasterangiemphraxis.

GASTERHYSTEROTOMY, Cæsarean section. GASTRE'MIA, from γαστήρ, 'the stomach,' and αιμα, 'blood.' Hyperæmia of the stomach.

GASTRALGIA, Cardialgia.

GASTRANEURYSMA, Gastrectasis.

GASTRATROPH'IA, from γαστήρ, 'the stomach,' and τροφια, 'wasting.' Atrophy of the stomach.

GASTRECHEMA, Gasterechema.

GASTREC'TASIS, Gastrecta'sia, Gastraneurys'ma, Dilata'tio ventriculi: from γαστήρ, 'the stomach,' and εκτασις, 'dilatation.' Dilatation of the stomach.

GASTRELCOBROSIS, Gastrobro'sis ulcerosa.

GASTRELCO'SIS, Ulcerat'io seu Exulcera'tio seu Ul'cera ventriculi; from γαστήρ, 'the stomach,' and ἐλκωσις, 'ulceration.' Ulceration of the stomach. When accompanied with hectic, it constitutes Gastrophth'isis, Gastroph'thoë.

GASTRELYTROTOMIA, see Cæsarean Section.

GASTRENCEPHALO'MA, Gastromyelo'ma, Gostromyelo'sis, Gastroëncephalo'sis; from γαστήρ, 'the stomach,' and εγκεφαλος, 'the brain.' Encephaloid of the stomach.

GASTRENCHYTA, Stomach pump.

GASTRENTERIC, Gastroentericus.

GASTRENTERITIC, Gastroenteritic.

GASTRENTEROMALA'CIA, Gastrenteromala'cis, from γαστήρ, 'stomach,' εντερον 'intestine,' and μαλαξια, 'softening.' Softening of the stomach and intestines.

GASTREPATICUS, Gastrohepatic.

GASTREPATITIS, Inflamma'tio ventriculi et hep'at'is; from γαστήρ, 'stomach,' and ἥπαρ, 'liver.' Inflammation of the stomach and liver.

GASTREPILOICUS, Gastroëpiloic.

GASTRERETHIS'IA; from γαστήρ, 'stomach,' and ερεθίζω, 'I irritate.' Irritation of the stomach.

GASTRIC, Gast'ricus; from γαστήρ, 'the stomach.' Belonging or relating to the stomach.

GASTRIC ARTERIES are three in number, Arteria gastro-epiplo'ica dextra, Arteria gastro-epiplo'ica sinis'tra, and A. coronaria ventriculi.

GASTRIC JUICE, Succus gast'ricus, Men'strum seu Fermentum Ventriculi, (F.) Suc Gastrigue, Gastric Acid. A fluid, secreted from the mucoous membrane of the stomach. As met with, it is a mixture of the fluids secreted by that organ with those of the supra-diaphragmatic portion of the alimentary canal. Owing to such admixture, the most contrary properties have been assigned to it. That such a fluid is secreted, which concurs powerfully in digestion, is evident from many considerations, and has been positively proved by the author and numerous others. It was found by him to contain, in man chlorohydric and acetic acids. The gastric fluid in cases of sudden death sometimes corrodes and perforates the stomach; giving rise to interesting questions in medical jurisprudence.

GASTRIC NERVES. The two cords by which the pneumogastric nerves terminate, and which descend on the two surfaces of the stomach; as well as the filaments of the great sympathetic, which accompany the gastric vessels.

GASTRIC PLEXUS, Plexus coronarius ventriculi. A nervous net-work, formed by the solar plexus. It accompanies the Arteria coronaria ventriculi, and passes along the lesser curvature of the stomach, to which it gives branches.

GASTRIC VEINS follow the same distribution as the arteries, and open into the Vena porta abdominalis.

GASTRICISM, Gast'ricismus, from γαστήρ, 'the stomach.' A name by which is designated the medical theory, that refers all, or almost all, diseases to an accumulation of saburræ in the digestive passages.

GASTRICITÉ, Embarras gastrique.

GASTRILOQUE, Engastrimyth.

GASTRILOQUIST, Engastrimyth.

GASTRILOQUUS, Engastrimyth.

GASTRIMARGUS, Glutton.

GASTRINUM, Potash.

GASTRISMUS, Gluttony, see Saburra.

GASTRIT'IC, Gast'riticus; same etymon as the rest. Relating to gastritis.

GASTRIT'IS, from γαστήρ, 'the stomach,' and itis, denoting inflammation. Ventriculi inflammatio, Cauma seu Empres'ma seu Cardial'gia inflammato'ria, Febris stomach'ica inflammato'ria, Inflammat'io gastritis, I. ventriculi seu stom'achi, Phlegmonë ventriculi, Inflammation of the stomach, (F.) Inflammation de l'Estomac, Gastric, Catarrhe gastrique. A disease, characterized by pyrexia; great anxiety; heat and pain in the epigastrium, increased by taking any thing into the stomach; vomiting and hiccup. Gastritis may either be seated in the peritoneal or mucous coat. It is most frequently in the latter — Eso-gastritis, Endogastritis, Gastromycoderitis, Gastritis mucosa — being excited directly by acrid ingesta. It requires the most active treatment; —bleeding, blistering, fomentations, diluents, &c. Some degree of inflammation of the mucous coat of the stomach was considered by the followers of Broussais to be present in almost all fevers; and the various forms of dyspepsia have been supposed by some to be nothing more than chronic endogastritis.

GASTRITIS ARTHRITICA, Cœliagra.

GASTRO, from γαστρον, 'stomach.' In composition, relating or appertaining to the stomach, or belly.

GASTRO-ARTHRITIS, Gout — g. Ataxia, Dyspepsia — g. Atonia, Dyspepsia — g. Bronchitis, Fever, adenomingeal — g. Entérite intense, Synocha — g. Entérite, with nervous affection of the brain, see Typhus — g. Enteritis, follicular, Dothineritis; see Typhus.

GASTROBROSIS, Perforatio ventriculi, Gastrorrhœsis, (F.) Perforation de l'Estomac; from gastro, and βρωσις, 'the act of gnawing.' Corrosion and perforation of the stomach.

GASTROBROSIS ULCEROSA, Gastrelcobrosis. Destruction and perforation of the coats of the stomach by ulceration.

GASTROCELE, from gastro, and κληη, 'a tumour.' Hernia of the stomach, Hernia ventriculi, (F.) Hernie de l'Estomac. Hernia formed by the stomach through the upper part of the linea alba: a disease, the existence of which has been doubted by many. See Epigastrocele.

GASTRO-CEPHALITIS; from gastro, κεφαλη, 'head,' and itis, denoting inflammation. Inflammation of the stomach and head, — a not uncommon concomitant of certain malignant fevers.

GASTROCHOLOSIS, Fever, gastric.

GASTROCNEME, Sura.

GASTROCNEMIA, Sura.

GASTROCNEMIUM, from gastro, and κνημη, 'the leg.' The name of the two fleshy masses which occupy the posterior and superficial part of the leg, Genelli; (F.) Gastrocnemius, Jumeaux de la jambe, Bifémoro-calcæniens — (Ch.) the two constituting the Gastrocnemius externus, of English anatomists. These muscles are distinguished into internal and external, which are distinct above, but united at their inferior extremity. They are long, flat, and thick; and arise — the former from the posterior part of the outer condyle of the femur; the latter, from the posterior part of the inner condyle of the same bone. The aponeurosis, which unites these muscles below, joins with that of the solaris, and forms with it, a large tendon, which, under the name Tendo Achillis, is inserted at the posterior part of the calcaneum. These muscles extend the foot on the leg, and the leg on the foot. They can, also, bend the leg and the thigh reciprocally on each other. For the Gastrocnemius internus, see Soleus.

GASTROCNEMIUM, Sura.

GASTROCELIACUS, Cœliac.

GASTROCELICUS, Cœliac.

GASTROCOLIC, see Epiploon, gastrocolic.

GASTROCOLICA, Cardialgia.

GASTROCOLITIS, from gastro, and κωλον, 'colon.' Inflammation of the stomach and colon.

GASTROCOLPOTOMIA, see Cæsarean section.

GASTRODIDYMUS, Gastrodymus, Didymus Symphyogastrius, Psodymus; from gastro and διδυμος, 'a twin.' A monstrosity in which twins are united by the abdomen.

GASTRODUODENAL, Gastroduodenalis; from gastro, and duodenum. Relating to the stomach and duodenum.

GASTRO-DUODENITIS, (F.) Gastro-duodénite. Inflammation of the stomach and bowels, an affection, which figured largely in the system of Broussais. See Gastro-enteritis.

GASTRODUODENOPYRA, Fever, adenomingeal.

GASTRODYNE, Cardialgia.

GASTRODYNIA, Cardialgia — g. Flatulenta, Colica flatulenta.

GASTRO-ELYTROTOMIA, see Cæsarean section.

GASTRO-ENTERALGIA, from gastro, εντερον, 'intestine,' and αλγος, 'pain.' Pain in the stomach and intestines.

GASTROENTERIC, Gastroentericus, Gastroenteric, Gastroentericus, Gastro-intestinal, from gastro, and εντερον, 'intestine.' Relating to the stomach and intestine.

GASTROËNTERITE, Gastroenteritis.

GASTROËNTERITIC, Gastroenteriticus, Gastroenteritic, Gastroenteriticus; same etymon as the next. Relating to gastroenteritis.

GASTROËNTERITIS, Inflammatio ventriculi et Intestini, (F.) Gastro-entérite, Gastro-enteric disease, from gastro, εντερον, 'an intestine,' and itis, a suffix denoting inflammation. Inflammation of the stomach and small intestine. According to Broussais, the essential fevers of authors are gastro-enteritis, simple, or complicated.

GASTROËPIPLOIC, Gastro-epiploicus, Gastroepiploicus, from gastro and επιπloon, 'the epiploon.' That which relates to the stomach and epiploon.

GASTROËPIPLOIC ARTERIES, Gastric inferior arteries, are two in number, and distinguished into right and left. The right, also called Gastro-hepatic, Gastrica inferior dextra, Gastro-epiploica dextra, is furnished by the hepatic artery. It descends behind the pylorus, and passes from right to left, along the great curvature of the stomach. It gives branches to the pancreas, duodenum, stomach, omentum majus, and terminates by anastomosing with the Gastro-epiploica sinistra, Gastrica sinistra seu inferior sinistra. This — the left — arises from the splenic artery. It is of considerable magnitude, and passes from left to right, along the great curvature of the stomach, distributing its branches more particularly to the stomach and omentum majus. It terminates by joining the right gastro-epiploic.

GASTROËPIPLOIC GLANDS are the lymphatic ganglions or glands, situate towards the great curvature of the stomach, between the two anterior laminae of the omentum majus.

GASTROËPIPLOIC VEINS are distinguished, like the arteries, into right and left. They empty themselves; — the former, into the superior mesenteric: the latter, into the splenic vein.

GASTROËMORRHAGIA, Hæmatemesis.

GASTROËHEPATIC, Gastro-hepaticus, Hepato-gastricus, Gastrepaticus; from gastro, and ηπαρ, ηπατος, 'the liver.' Relating to the stomach and liver. This name has been given to several organs. See Epiploon, gastrohepatic, &c.

GASTRO-HEPATITIS, Simultaneous inflammation of the stomach and liver.

GASTROHYSTEROTOMY, Cæsarean section.

GASTRO-INTESTINAL, Gastro-enteric.

GASTROLIENALIS, Gastrosplenicus.

GASTROLITHIASIS, from gastro, and λιθιας, 'formation of stone.' The formation of concretions, gastrolithi, in the stomach.

GASTROMALACIA, Gastromalacia.

GASTROMALAXIA, Gastro-malacia, Gastromalaco-sis, Malacogaster, Malacis ventriculi, Dissolutio ventriculi, Emollitio ventriculi, Pseudophlogosis ventriculi resolutiva et colli- quali'va, Metamorphosis ventriculi gelatiniformis, Erosio et perforatio spontanea ventriculi, Resolutio et diabro'sis ventriculi, (F.) Ramollissement de l'Estomac, from gastro, and μαλαξίς,

'softening.' Softening of the stomach, induced at times by the gastric secretions after death,— Resolutio ventriculi autopeptica.

GASTROMANTIS, Engastrimyth.

GASTROM'ELES, from gastro, and μελος, 'a limb.' A monster with one or more supernumerary limbs on the abdomen.

GASTROME'NIA, from gastro, and μην, 'a month.' Vicarious menstruation from the stomach.

GASTRO-MENINGITIS, Fever, gastric.

GASTROMETROTOMIA, Cæsarean section.

GASTROMYCODERITIS, see Stomach.

GASTROMYCODERITIS, see Gastritis.

GASTROMYELOMA, Gastroencephaloma.

GASTRONOSUS, Gastropathy.

GASTROPARALYSIS, Gastrople'gia, Paralysis ventriculi; from gastro, and παράλυσις,
'paralysis.' Paralysis of the stomach.

GASTROP'ATHY, Gastropathi'a, Gastron'- osus, Gastron'sus, from gastro, and παθος, 'disease.' Disease of the stomach.

GASTROPERIODYN'IA; Sool (India.) A violent periodical neuralgic pain at the pit of the stomach, not uncommon in Hindoostan.

GASTROPHREN'IC, Gastro-phren'icus, from gastro, and φρενες, 'the diaphragm.' Belonging to the stomach and diaphragm.

GASTROPHRENIC LIGAMENT is a reflection of the peritoneum, which descends from the inferior surface of the diaphragm to the cardia.

GASTROPTHISIS, Gastrectosis.

GASTROPTHOE, Gastrectosis.

GASTROPLEGIA, Gastroparalysis.

GASTROPYRA, Fever, gastric.

GASTROPYRETUS, Fever, gastric.

GASTROR'APHY, Gastro'rha'phia, Gastror'- rhaphe, Sutu'ra abdominalis, from gastro, and ραφή, 'a suture.' The suture used for uniting wounds penetrating the abdomen, when they are too extensive or too unequal to be kept in contact by position, adhesive plaster, or appropriate bandages. The interrupted and quilled sutures are those chiefly employed.

GASTRORRHAGIA, Hæmatemesis.

GASTRORRHEXIS, Gastrobrosis.

GASTRORRHŒ'A, from gastro, and ρρω, 'I flow.' Blennorrhœ'a seu Fluxus ventriculi, (F.)
Flux muqueux de l'estomac, Catarrhe stomacal.
A morbid condition of the stomach, which consists in the secretion of an excessive quantity of mucus from the lining membrane. Also, Cœliac flux.

GASTROSCIR'RHUS, *Induratio ventriculi
scirrhosa*, Scirrhus seu carcinoma ventriculi.
Scirrhous induration or cancer of the stomach.

GASTROSCOPIA, Abdominoscopia.

GASTRO'SES. A generic name for diseases which are seated in the stomach.—Alibert.

GASTROSPLE'NIC, Gastrosple'nicus, Gastroliena'lis, from gastro, and σπλην, 'the spleen.'
Relating to stomach and spleen.

GASTROSTENOSIS, Stricture of the stomach.

GASTROSTENOSIS CARDI'ACA ET PYLOR'ICA; from gastro, and στενος, 'narrow.' Narrowness of the cardiac and pyloric orifices of the stomach from cancer of that organ.

GASTROT'OMY, from gastro, and τομή, 'inci-sion.' Several different operations have been so called. 1. The Cæsarean Section. 2. An inci-sion made into the abdomen for the purpose of removing some internal strangulation or volvu-lus, or to reduce hernia, Laparot'omy: and, 3.
The opening made in the stomach, to remove a foreign body which has passed into it through the œsophagus.

GASTRYPERNEU'RIA, from gastro, 'super,'
'above,' and νευρον, 'a nerve.' Morbidly increased activity of the nerves of the stomach.

GÂTEAU FÉBRILE, Ague cake.

GÂTEUX (F.), from gâter, 'to spoil.' A name given in the insane hospitals, and in the hospitals for incurables and the aged, in France, to persons who are incapable of attending to themselves, and have lost all sense of cleanliness.

GATHERING, Abscess, Suppuration.

GATTILIER, Vitex.

GAUDIA FŒDA, Masturbation.

GAULTHE'RIA, Gaulthe'ria seu Gualthe'ria procumbens, Gautie'ra repens, Mountain Tea, Partridge Berry, Berried Tea, Grouseberry, Deer-berry, Spice berry, Tea berry, Red berry, Winter-green, Red berry Tea, Ground berry, Ground ivy, Ground holly, Hill berry, Box berry, Chequer berry, (F.) Gaulthérie, Palommier, Thé du Canada, called after Dr. Gauthier, of Quebec. Ord.
Ericaceæ. An American plant, which is one of the principal articles of the materia medica of some Indian tribes. The infusion of the leaves is stimulant and anodyne, and is said to have been used, with advantage, in asthma. The oil —Oleum Gaultheriæ, Ph. U. S.,—is used, chiefly on account of its pleasant flavour, to cover the taste of other medicines.

GAUNTLET, Gantelet.

GAUQUAVA, Smilax China.

GAUTIERA REPENS, Gaultheria.

GAY FEATHER, Liatrix spicata.

GA'YAC, Guaiaicum.

GAYLUSSAC'IA RESINO'SA, Vaccin'ium re-sinosum, Black Huckleberry. Order, Ericaceæ, (called after the chemist, Gay-Lussac.) An indigenous plant, whose fruit is sweet and agreeable.
The leaves and root, as well as those of GAYLUSSACIA DUMO'SA, Dwarf huckleberry, and of G. FRONDO'SA, Blue tangle, indigenous, are used in decoction as astringents in diarrhœa, sore throat, &c.

GAZ, Gas, Air. Van Helmont first designated by this name,—the etymology of which is unknown,—the carbonic acid developed in the vinous fermentation. Afterwards, the term was appropriated to every permanently elastic fluid; that is, which preserves its æriform state at all temperatures; and ultimately it was extended to all æriform bodies;—which were divided into permanent and non-permanent gases. The latter are generally termed vapours:—they return to the liquid state, when a portion of their caloric is abstracted. The permanent gases, or gazes properly so called, are numerous, and may be divided into three sections with regard to their effects on the animal economy.

1. Irrespirable gazes.	}	Carbonic acid, ammoniacal gaz, chlorohydric acid gaz, deutoxide of azote, nitrous acid gaz, and chlorine.
2. Negatively dele- terious gazes.		Hydrogen, azote.
3. Positively dele- terious gazes.	}	Oxygen, protoxide of azote, carbonetted hydrogen, car- bonic oxide, sulphuretted hydrogen, and arseniuret- ted hydrogen.

It is proper to remark that the term respirable has been very differently employed by different writers. Sometimes it has meant the power of supporting life when applied to the blood in the lungs. At others, all gazes have been deemed irrespirable, which are incapable of being introduced into the lungs by voluntary efforts,—without any relation to their power of maintaining vitality; and this is perhaps the best sense. The gazes were, at one time, employed in medicine, under great expectations,—especially by the enthusiastic Beddoes; but they are now scarcely ever had recourse to. They differ, considerably, in their effects on the animal economy. Some, as oxygen, are exciting; others, as azote, depressing; whilst others, again, as the Protoxide of azote or laughing gas, produce the most singular effects.

GAZ DES BALLONS, Hydrogen.

GAZ, PULMONARY, Gaz of the lungs. A name given to the expired air; which contains—besides common air, an increase of carbonic acid, water, and some animal matter.

GAZ SANGUINIS, Gaz animalis sanguinis, Halitus seu Aura seu Vapor sanguinis, Spiritus roriferus, Hæmatismus. The halitus, or vapour, given off by freshly-drawn blood.

GAZEL, Ribes nigrum.

GAZELLE, Antilopus.

GÉANT, Giant.

GÉANTISME, see Giant.

GEBÄRPULVER, Ergot.

GEDEOLA. The convex part of the liver.—Du Cange.

GEILNAU, MINERAL WATERS OF. Geilnau is a village in the grand duchy of Nassau, at no great distance from Frankfort. The waters contain carbonic acid, carbonate, sulphate, and phosphate of soda, chloride of sodium, carbonate of lime, magnesia, and iron.

GEISMAR, MINERAL WATERS OF. The mineral waters of Geismar, in Bavaria, are acidulous chalybeates.

GEISUM, γεῖον, Geison. The part of the frontal bone over the eyes.

GELAPPIUM, Convolvulus jalapa.

GELASINI DENTES, Incisive teeth.

GELASMUS, Canine laha.

GELATIG'ENOUS. A hybrid term, from gelatin, and γεῖω or γεῖνω, 'to engender.' That which forms gelatinous structure. Dr. Carpenter restricts the term to substances yielding gelatin. The propriety of this may well be questioned.

GÉLATIN, Gelatine, Gelatina, Gabreda, (F.) Gélatine, from (F.) Gélee, 'gelly or jelly.' From (L.) Gelu, 'ice.' An immediate animal principle. It is semitransparent, insipid, inodorous, insoluble in cold water, very soluble in hot, which it thickens, and transforms into jelly on cooling. Gelatin is a nutritious substance; and, when dissolved in a considerable quantity of water, forms an emollient fluid, much used in therapeutics, but not the most easy of digestion. Two forms of gelatin are admitted—the one glutin or gelatin proper: the other chondrin.

GELATIN OF WHARTON, Gelatina Whartoniana, Jelly of the Cord. A soft, dense, fluid, gelatinous substance, which envelops the umbilical cord, and is conceived, by some, to be inservient to the nutrition of the fœtus.

GELATINA AQUATICA, Brasenia hydropholis.

GÉLATINE DES CARTILAGES, Chondrin.

GELATINIFORM MATTER OF THE INTTESTINE, Albuminose.

GELATINOUS, Gelatinosus, (F.) Gélatineux. Relating, or appertaining to, or having the character or appearance of gelatin or jelly. Viscid.

GELATINOUS NERVE-FIBRE, see Nerve fibres.

GELATIO, Congelation.

GELDING, Castration.

GELÉE, Gelly—g. c ntre le Goître, Balsam, 'aduretted.

GELLY, Jelly, Jus gela'tum seu coagula'tum, Gelu, (F.) Gélee. Same etymon. A substance of a soft consistence, tremulous, and transparent, which is obtained, by an appropriate treatment, from animal and vegetable matters: hence the distinction into animal and vegetable jelly. The former is merely a concentrated solution of gelatin, left to cool.

Vegetable Jelly is found in the juice of the currant, mulberry, and of almost all acid fruits, when ripe. It is of itself colourless, but almost always retains a little colouring matter of the fruit which has furnished it. It has an agreeable taste; is scarcely soluble in cold water, but boiling water dissolves it readily: the jelly is, however, almost all deposited on cooling. If this aqueous solution be boiled for a long time, it becomes analogous to mucilage, and loses the property of being jellied on cooling.

GELSEMIUM NITIDUM, G. Sempervirens, Bigno'nia sempervirens, Yellow Jes'samine. The flowers, root, &c., of this shrub of the Southern States, Sex. Syst. Pentandria Digynia, Nat. Ord. Apocynææ, are narcotic, and the effluvia from the former are said sometimes to induce stupor.

GELU, Gelly.

GELUS, Risus.

GEMELLI, Gastrocnemii, Ischio-trochanterianus, Testicles.

GEMEL'LUS, Gem'inus, 'a twin,' Did'yimus, (F.) Jumeau, Jumelle, Besson, Bessonne. One of two children, twins, born at the same accouchement, or gestation. Also, relating to twins, as 'a twin conception.'

GEMELLUS MUSCULUS. Cowper applies this name to the long portion of the triceps brachialis united to the inner portion.

GEMINI, Ischio-trochanterianus, Testicles.

GEMINUM CENTRUM SEMICIRCULARE, Tænia semicircularis.

GEMINUS, Gemellus.

GEMIPOMA, Mamma.

GÉMISSEMENT, see Moaning.

GEMMA, Granulation—g. Oculi, Crystalline.

GEMMATION, see Generation.

GEMMATION, GENERATION BY, see Generation.

GEMMIPARITÉ, see Generation.

GEMMIPAROUS, see Generation.

GEMUR'SA, a corn; also a name given by the ancients to a disease seated between the toes;—the nature of which is unknown to us.

GEN, Gen'esis, 'generation,' from γεῖνω, 'I make.' Hence Hydrogen, Osteogeny, &c.

GENA. The Cheek, Genys, Pare'ia, Gamp'hè, Gamp'hè'le, Gnathos, Gnathmus, Mala, (Sc.) Wonge, (F.) Joue. The cheeks form the lateral parts of the mouth. Externally, they have no precise limits: they are continuous, above, with the lower eyelid; below, they descend as far as the base of the jaw; before, they terminate at the alæ nasi, and at the commissures of the lips; and behind, at the ear. Their thickness varies, according to the degree of fatness of the individual. They are formed of three layers;—one dermoid, another muscular, and the third mucous.

GENCIVES, Gingivæ.

GENEANTHROPY, Anthropogenia.

GENE'AS, Lau'go prima, Probar'ium. The downy hairs, which first cover the cheek. Also, a bandage which passes under the chin.

GENEION, Beard, Mentum.

GENERAL ANATOMY, see Anatomy—g. Practitioner, Surgeon-apothecary.

GÉNÉRALE, Influenza.

GENERATIO, Generation—g. Æquivoca, see Generation—g. Calculi, Lithia—g. Homogenea, see Generation—g. Primigena, see Generation—g. Primitiva, see Generation—g. Originaria, see Generation—g. Spontanea, see Generation.

GENERATION, Genera'tio, Gen'esis, Genne'sis, Gonê, Gonus, Procrea'tio, Procreatio, Breeding, from (L.) geno, genere, genitum, γενω, or γενωω, 'to engender.' Under this name physiologists comprehend the aggregate of functions, which concur, in organized beings, towards the production of their kind. The act of generation means the union of the sexes. See Coition. The writers of antiquity believed, that all organized bodies are produced either by what is termed univocal or regular generation, Homogen'esis, genera'tio homogen'ea, propaga'tio, which applies to the upper classes of animals and vegetables, or by spontaneous generation, Autogon'ia, heterogen'esis, generatio heterogen'ea seu œquivoca seu primit'iva seu primig'ena seu originaria seu sponta'nea, spontéparité (Dugès), which they considered applicable to the very lowest classes only, as the mushroom, the worm, the frog, &c. There are still many distinguished naturalists who consider that beings, low in the scale of animality, are produced in the latter way. Spontaneous generation and equivocal generation have been regarded by many to be synonymous. Others, however, mean by spontaneous generation, the production of a new being from the mere combination of inorganic elements; whilst by equivocal generation they understand the evolution of a new being from organized beings dissimilar to themselves, through some irregularity in their functions, or through the incipient decay or degeneration of their tissues. As to the mode in which regular generation is accomplished, there have been many views. According to the doctrine of Hippocrates, and of the ancient philosophers, the ovaries of the female furnish a prolific fluid, similar to that of the male; and the fœtus results from the mixture of the two seeds in copulation. Steno and others conceived, that the ovaries contain ova, which are not developed until vivified by the male sperm. Bonnet and Spallanzani believed in the pre-existence of germs, created since the origin of the world, but encased in each other, and becoming developed in succession; whence it would follow that the ovary of the first female must have contained the germs of all subsequent generations: and that the number of these germs must go on always diminishing, until ultimately extinct. This was the system of the evolution of germs. According to Læcunhoeck, the ovaries do not contain eggs, but vesicles destined to receive animalcules; which, in his view, live in the sperm. Thousands of these animalcules are thrown into the uterus during copulation, and the most expeditious and vigorous reaches the ovary, after having scattered and destroyed its competitors. Buffon—admitting the hypothesis of the two seeds—supposed that they were formed of molecules proceeding from every part of the body of each parent; and that, by a kind of elective affinity, those which were furnished by the head, the trunk, or the extremities of the male parent, could only unite with those proceeding from the same parts of the female. Before him, Maupertuis, admitting, with many of the ancient philosophers, the system of Epigenesis, and adopting, as regarded the composition of the sperm, a theory analogous to that of Buffon, had supposed that the molecules, capable of being organized, were attracted towards a centre; that the nose attracts the two eyes; the body, the arms; the arms, the hands, &c., nearly as the particles of a salt, dissolved in a liquid, arrange themselves in regular crystals around the same nucleus. These and various other systems have been successively proposed and abandoned, and the mystery of generation remains impenetrable.

The simplest kind of reproduction does not require sexual organs. The animal separates into several fragments, which form so many new individuals. This is Fissiparous generation, Fissiparism, G. from fission, (F.) Fissiparité, Scissiparité, Scission, Cloisonnement, Reproduction ou Multiplication mérismatique. Gemmiparous generation, (F.) Gemmiparité, Génération par Gemmation, Sureculatio ou Bourgeoisement, consists in the formation of buds, sporules or germs on some part of the body, which at a particular period drop off and form as many new individuals. These kinds of reproduction require but one parent—Monog'eny. In Oviparous generation, (F.) Oviparité, the egg is hatched out of the body. In ovoviviparous generation, the new being is hatched in the excretory passages. In viviparous generation, the new individual is born under its appropriate form; and in marsupial or marsupiate generation, the young being, born at a very early stage of development, is received and nourished in a marsupium or pouch. In alternate generation, (F.) Génération alternante, the young not only do not resemble the parent at birth, but remain dissimilar during their whole life, so that their relationship is not apparent until a succeeding generation. Thus, the cercaria undergoes a change into the distoma. See Metagenesis. All these kinds of reproduction require the union of sexes—Dig'eny.

All the acts comprising the function of generation in man may be referred to five great heads. 1. Copulation. 2. Conception or fecundation. 3. Gestation or Pregnancy. 4. Delivery or Accouchement; and, 5. Lactation.

GEN'EROUS, Genero'sus. From genus, generis, 'a race;' generosus, 'of a noble race, noble.' A name given to wines which contain a great quantity of alcohol.

GENESIAL, Genital.

GENESIOLOG'Y, Genesiolog'ia, from γενεσις, 'generation,' and λογος, 'a discourse.' The doctrine of generation.

GENÉSIQUE, LE, Appetite, veneral.

GENESIS, Generation.

GENÉT, Spartium scoparium—g. à Balai, Spartium scoparium—g. des Teinturiers, Genista tinctoria.

GENETHLIACUS, from γενεθλιος, 'natal,' 'pertaining to nativity.' A name given by the ancients to certain astrologers, who, from the state of the heavens at the time of the birth of an individual, predicted his future character and the events of his life.

GENETICA, from γενεσις, 'generation.' Diseases of the sexual functions; the 5th class in Good's Nosology. Also, agents that act on the sexual organs.—Pereira.

GENETICUS, Genital.

GENEVA, Gin, see Spirit.

GENÉVRIER, Juniperus communis—g. Oxycedre, Juniperus oxycedrus.

GENGIVITE, Ulitis.

GENI, Genian.

GENIAN, Genia'nus, Ge'nial, from γενειον, 'the chin.' The Genian apoph'ysis or Processus, (F.) Apophyse génieune ou géné, is situate at the posterior part of the symphysis menti, and is formed of four small tubercles.

GENICULATUM, see Corpora geniculata.

GÉNIE, Genius. The French sometimes apply this term to diseases nearly synonymously with nature; as Génie inflammatoire, G. bilieux, G. adynamique. Some use in the same sense as type; Génie intermittent. The unwonted predominance of any mental faculty is also so called.

GÉNIEN, Genian.

GENIÈVRE, Gin, Juniperus communis (the berry.)

GENIO, from γενειον, 'chin.' In composition, means relating or appertaining to the chin.

GENIOGLOSSUS, Genio-hyoglossus, from γενειον, 'the chin,' and γλωσσα, 'the tongue.' Mesoglossus, Mesoglossus, Nonus lingua musculi. The name of a flat, triangular muscle, which extends from the genian apophysis to the inferior surface of the os hyoides and tongue, which last it carries forward.

GENIOHYODES, Geniohyoideus.

GENIOHYOGLOSSUS, Genioglossus.

GENIOHYODES, Geniohyoideus.

GENIOHYOIDEUS, Geniohyodes, Geniohyoides, Mento-bicorneus, from γενειον, 'the chin,' and οειδης, 'the os hyoides.' A muscle which arises from the genian apophysis, and is inserted at the anterior part of the body of the os hyoides. Its use is to raise the os hyoides, and carry it forwards. It may, also, contribute to depress the lower jaw in contracting towards the os hyoides.

GENIO-PHARYNGEUS, from γενειον, 'the chin,' and φαρυξ, 'the pharynx.' A name given, by some anatomists, to a bundle of fibres which passes from the lower jaw to the sides of the pharynx, and forms part of the constrictor pharyngis superior.

GENIOPLASTY, Genioplasticé, from γενειον, 'the chin,' and πλασσω, 'I form.' The operation for restoring the chin. At times used instead of Genioplasty, for the operation for restoring the cheek.

GENIPA OBLONGIFOLIA, Huito. A plant of Peru, with the juice of which the Indians paint their legs, to protect them against the stings of insects.

GENIPI ALBUM. Achillea moschata, Artemisia rupestris — g. Blane, Artemisia rupestris — g. Verum, Achillea atrata.

GENISTA, Spartium scoparium — g. Canariensis, see Rhodium lignum — g. Hirsuta, Spartium scoparium — g. Scoparia, Spartium scoparium.

GENISTA SPINOSA IN'DICA, Bahel Schulli. Ord. Leguminosæ. An oriental tree, a decoction of the roots of which is diuretic. The leaves boiled in vinegar have the same effect. — Ray.

GENISTA TINCTORIA, Genistodés tinctoria, Spartium tinctorium, Dyers' broom or weed, Green weed, Wood waxen, Woodwee, (F.) Genêt des Teinturiers. A shrub cultivated in this country and in Europe. The flowering tops and seed have been used in medicine. It has the same properties as Spartium scoparium.

GENISTOIDES TINCTORIA, Genista tinctoria.

GENITAL, Genitalis, Geneticus, Generatio'ni inseruiens, Genesial, Genneticus. Same etymon as Generation. That which belongs or relates to generation.

GENITAL ORGANS, Sexual Organs, Puden'da, Naturalia, Naturæ, Ædæa, Me'zea, Me'sa, Morion; Genital, Noble, Natural or Private parts; Privities, Privy parts, Privy Members, the Parts, Pars, Pars corporis seu obscæ'na, Fores, Partes genital'es seu generatio'ni inseruien'tes seu obscæ' na, Me'dea, Veren'da, Podes, Inguen, Genita'lia, Gennet'ica, Gymna, Membra puden'da, Organa generatio'ni inseruien'tia, O. sexualia seu genitalia, (F.) Organes géni'taux, Parties génitales ou honteuses ou génitoires ou nobles ou sezuelles ou naturelles, Les Parties, Génitoires. The parts that are inservient to the reproduction of the species. These are very different in the male and female. In man, they are numerous; some secreting the sperm, as the testicles and their appendages; others retaining it, as the vesiculæ seminales; and another for carrying it into the organs of the female, — the penis. In the female, the parts of generation form an apparatus, perhaps more complicated than that of the male. Some are inservient to copulation, as the vulva, vagina, &c., others to conception and the preservation of the product for a determinate time, as the uterus and its appendages; whilst others concur in the alimentation of the infant after birth, as the mammæ.

GENITALE, Sperm — g. Caput, Glands.

GENITALIA, Genital organs — g. Viri, Pudibilia.

GENITO-CRURAL NERVE, Nervus genitocruralis, Subpub'ial or Inter'nal inguinal nerve. A branch of the second lumbar nerve, which passes through the psoas muscle, and, approaching the femoral arch, divides into two branches, — an internal, scrotal, or genital, nervus spermaticus seu pudendus exter'nus, and an external or femoral cutaneous branch, lumbo-inguinalis.

GENITO-URINARY, see Uro-genital.

GÉNITOIRES, Genital Organs.

GENITURA. That which is fecundated or engendered in the maternal womb. This word has been used synonymously with embryo, fœtus, and infant. Also, the sperm; and the penis. See GOË.

GENIUM, Mentum.

GENNESIS, Generation.

GENNETICA, Genital Organs.

GENNETICOCNES'MUS, from γεννητικος, 'genital,' and κνησμος, 'itching.' Itching of the genital organs.

GENNETICON'OSI, Genneticosnu'si from γεννητικος, 'genital,' and νοσος, 'disease.' Diseases of the genitals.

GENNETICUS, Genital.

GEN'OA, CLIMATE OF. The climate of this Italian city and its vicinity has been often selected as favourable for the pthysical valetudinarian during the winter; but it is now admitted to be decidedly improper for pulmonary affections, being subject to frequent and rapid changes of temperature, and to dry cold winds from the north, alternately with warm moist winds from the south-east. — Sir James Clark.

GENONU'SI, Morbi sexus, from γενος, 'sex,' and νοσος, 'disease.' Sexual diseases.

GENOPLASTIC, Meloplastic.

GENOS, Sex.

GENOU, Genu.

GÉNOUILLÉS, (Corps), Corpora geniculata.

GENOUILLET, Convallaria polygonatum.

GENRE, Genus.

GENSANG, Panax quinquefolium.

GENTIA, Gentianina.

GENTIAN, (from Genius, King of Illyria, who used some species medicinally), Gentiana lutea, Triosteum — g. Blue, Gentiana catesbæi — g. Catesbian, Gentiana catesbæi — g. Horse, Triosteum — g. White, Laserpitium latifolium — g. Southern, Gentiana catesbæi — g. White, Triosteum — g. Yellow, Gentiana lutea, see Calumba.

GENTIANA, G. lutea — g. Alba, Laserpitium latifolium — g. Amarylloides, G. quinquefolia — g. Cachenlaguen, Chironia Chilensis — g. Centaurium, Chironia centaurium.

GENTIANA CATESBÆI; G. Catesbia'na, Blue Gentian, Ph. U. S., Catesbian or Southern Gentian, Bluebells, Bitterroot. Ord. Gentianacæ. It is a pure and simple bitter, and the root may be used wherever that of the Gentiana lutea is proper.

GENTIANA CHIRAYTA, G. Chirayi'ta, Henrice'a Pharmacœ'cha, Sceer'tia, Agatho'tes chirayi'ta, Ophelia chirai'ta, Chire'ta, Chirayi'ta, Chiræ'ta. A native of India, which has been much employed in that country, in dyspepsia, and as an antiperiodic in intermittents. It is preferred by some to sarsaparilla, where the latter is considered to be indicated,—as after large quantities of mercury have been taken, or where profuse salivation has been induced. It has also been advised in atonic leucorrhœa. It yields its virtues to alcohol and water.

GENTIANA CRINITA, see G. quinqueflora—G. Gerardi, Chironia centaureum.

GENTIANA LUTEA. The systematic name of the official gentian; Gentia'na, G. major seu vet'erum seu rubra, Siver'tia lutea, Aste'rias lutea, Yellow Gentian, Felwort. Ord. Gentianeæ. (F.) Gentiane jaune. This is a plant common in the mountains of Europe. The root is almost inodorous, extremely bitter, and yields its virtues to ether, alcohol, and water. It is tonic and stomachic; and in large doses, aperient. Dose, gr. x to ℥ij. It is most frequently, however, used in infusion or tincture.

GENTIANA MAJOR, G. lutea—G. Ochroleuca, see G. saponaria—G. Peruviana, Chironia Chilensis.

GENTIANA QUINQUEFLO'RA, G. amaryllôides, Five-flowered Gentian; and GENTIANA CRINITA, Fringed Gentian, indigenous, are possessed of like virtues.

GENTIANA RUBRA, G. lutea.

GENTIANA SAPONARIA, Soaproot Gentian, and G. ochroleuca, Sampson's Snakeroot; indigenous, have the properties of Gentiana lutea; and are said also to be diaphoretic.

GENTIANA VETERUM, G. lutea.

GENTIANE JAUNE, Gentiana lutea.

GENTIANINA, Gentianine, Gentianin, Gentia'nia, Gent'ia. A supposed neutral substance, obtained from gentian, and, by some, presumed to be its active principle. It is not so.

GENTILITIUS, Hereditary.

GENU, Gony, yov, (F.) Genou. The articulation of the leg with the thigh;—the Femoro-tibial or knee-joint, the knee. It is the most complicated in the body, and is formed by the inferior extremity of the femur, the superior extremity of the tibia, and the rotula. The articular surfaces of the bones are covered by layers of cartilage—more or less thick—and by the synovial membrane of the articulation. The soft parts of this joint are,—the ligamentum patellæ, two lateral ligaments, distinguished by the names internal and external; a posterior ligament, Ligamentum posticum Winslow'ii; two crucial ligaments,—the one anterior, and the other posterior; two interarticular fibro-cartilages; some albugineous fibres, which form an imperfect capsule, &c. The knee receives its arteries from the femoral and popliteal. They bear the name articular. Its veins have the same distribution as the arteries, and discharge their blood into the saphena and crural. Its nerves are furnished by the sciatic, popliteal, and crural. The joint is protected by the tendons and muscles which surround it.

The French use the term Articulation en genou for a joint, in which the head of a bone is received into a bony cavity of another, where it rolls and moves in all directions.

GENU CORPORIS CALLOSI, see Corpus callosum—G. Varum, Entogonyancon.

GENUGRA, Gonagra.

GENUINUS, Legitimatus.

GENUS, (F.) Genre. A collection or group of species, analogous to each other, and which can be united by common characters. When a species cannot be referred to a known genus, it constitutes a distinct one.

GENUS CURATIONIS, Ratio medendi.

GENY, Genys.

GENYANTRAL'GIA, from γενυς, 'the maxilla,' αντρον, 'the antrum,' and αλγος, 'pain.' Pain in the antrum of Highmore.

GENYANTRI'TIS, from γενυς, 'the maxilla,' αντρον, 'the antrum,' and itis, denoting inflammation. Inflammation of the antrum of Highmore.

GENYANTRUM, Antrum of Highmore.

GENYOCYNANCHE, Cynanche parotidæa.

GENYOPLASTY, see Genioplasty.

GENYS, γενυς, Genu, γεvu, 'the jaw;' also the chin. See Genæa.

GEOFFRÆA INERMIS, Geoffræ'a, G. racemosa seu Piso'nis seu Jamaicæ'n'sis, Vouacap'oua America'na, Geoffroy'a, Cabbag'ium, Andi'ra inermis seu racemosa, Cabbage Tree, Cabbage Bark Tree, Worm-bark Tree. Ord. Leguminosæ. Sez. Syst. Diadelphia Decandria. The odour of the bark is very unpleasant. It is anthelmintic and cathartic. Dose of the powder, ℥j to ℥ij.

GEOFFRÆA JAMAICENSIS, G. inermis—G. Pisonis, G. inermis—G. Racemosa, G. inermis.

GEOFFRÆA SURINAMENSIS, Andi'ra Surinamensis, has similar properties.

Hutteneschmidt has separated their active principles, to which he has given the names Jamaicine and Surinamine. They are all alkaline.

GEOFFRÆA VERMIFUGA, Andira ibai, Arriba, Skoleno'ra Fernambucen'sis; a South American plant, has a fruit, the almond of which, called angéline, has a reputation at Rio Janeiro as a vermifuge. Dose, a grain to fifteen; or it may be given in infusion.

GEOFFROYA, Geoffræa inermis—G. Jamaicensis, G. inermis.

GEOGRAPHY, MEDICAL, Geographia Medica, Nosogeography, Nosogeographia. The description of the surface of the globe as regards the influence of situation on the health, vital functions, and diseases of its inhabitants, vegetable and animal; but principally on those of man.

GEOPH'AGISM, Geophag'ia, Gæophag'ia, from γη, 'earth,' and φαγω, 'I eat.' The act or practice of eating earth. See Chthonophagia.

GEORGIA, MINERAL WATERS OF. The water of Indian Springs, in Butts County, is sulphureous. The Warm Springs, in Meriwether County, have a temperature of 90° Fahr. Madison's Springs, in Madison County, are a chalybeate; and so are Rowland's Springs, in Cass County. All these are frequented by invalids.

GERÆOLOG'IA, Geratolog'ia, from γηρας, γηρατος, 'old age,' and λογος, 'a discourse.' The doctrine, or a description, of old age.

GERAFLOURIS, Dianthus caryophyllus.

GERANIS, from γερανος, 'a crane,' which it resembled. A bandage, used by the ancients in cases of fractured clavicle. Some authors attribute it to Hippocrates; others, to Perigenes.

GERANIUM, same etymon, because its pistil is long, like the bill of the crane. Ord. Geraniacæ. The Crane's Bill.

GERANIUM CAROLINIANUM, see G. Robertianum—G. Fœtidum, G. Robertianum—G. Maculatum, see Geranium, and G. Moschatum.

GERANIUM MOSCHATUM, Erod'ium Moschatum, (F.) Bec de grue musqué. A European plant, esteemed to be excitant and diaphoretic.

GERANIUM NOVEBORACENSE, G. Maculatum—G. Purpureum, G. Robertianum.

GERANIUM ROBERTIA'NUM, G. foetidum seu purpureum, Sinking Crane's Bill, Herb Robert, (F.) Herbe à Robert, Bec de Grue Robertin. This plant was, at one time, used as an antispasmodic and slight stimulant, as well as for an external application in various painful sores and inflammations.

GERANIUM CAROLINIA'NUM, has similar properties.

Most of the species of geranium have been used as astringents. In some of the northwestern parts of the United States, the root of Geranium maculatum—Geranium, (Ph. U. S.)—G. Noveboracense, Spotted Crane's Bill, Crowfoot, Alum root, Tormentil, Stork bill—is called Racine à Bequet, after a person of that name. It is highly extolled by the Western Indians as an antisyphilitic.

GERAS, Senectus.

GERÇURE, Fissure.

GERM, Germen, Blastē, Blaste'ma, (F.) Germe. The rudiment of a new being, not yet developed, or which is still adherent to the mother.

GERM FORCE, Plastic force.

GERMANDER, COMMON, Teucrium chamædrys—g. Creeping, Teucrium chamædrys—g. Marum, Teucrium marum—g. Small, Teucrium chamædrys—g. Water, Teucrium scordium.

GERMANDRÉE AQUATIQUE, Teucrium scordium—g. Maritime, Teucrium marum—g. Officinale, Teucrium chamædrys—g. Scorodone, Teucrium scordium.

GERME FAUX, Conception, false.

GERMEN, Germ, Sperm—g. Dentale, Dental Pulp—g. Falsum, Mole—g. Spurium, Conception, false.

GERMINAL, Ger'minative, Germin'alis, Germinat'ivus, (F.) Germinatif; from germen, a germ. Relating or belonging to germ; as "germinal cell."

GERMINAL CELL, see Cytoblast—g. Membrane and Vesicle, see Molecule—g. Nucleus, see Molecule—g. Spot, see Molecule—g. Vesicle, see Molecule.

GERMS, DISSEMINATION OF, Panspermia—g. Pre-existence of, see Preformation.

GEROBOS'CIA, Gerontobos'cia, from γρηας, 'old age,' and βασκη, 'food.' Nourishment or maintenance proper for the aged.

GEROCOMEUM, Gerocodium.

GEROCOMIA, Gerocomi'cē, Gerontocomi'cē, from γερον, γεροντος, 'an aged person,' and κομειν, 'to take care of.' The part of medicine whose object is the preservation of the health of the aged:—the hygiene of old people.

GEROCOMICE, Gerocomia.

GEROCOMIUM, Gerocome'um, Presbyodochi'um, Gerontocomi'um, Gerotrophe'um. Same etymon. An hospital for the aged.

GEROFLE, see Eugenia caryophyllata.

GEROFLÉE JAUNE, Cheiranthus cheiri.

GERONTATROPHIA, Marasmus senilis.

GERONTOBOS'CIA, Geroboscia.

GERONTOCOMICE, Gerocomia.

GERONTOCOMIUM, Gerocodium.

GERONTOPIA, from γερον, γεροντος, 'an old person,' and οπλ, 'the eye.' Weakness of sight of the aged.

GERONTOTOXON, Gerotoxon.

GERONTOXON, Gerotoxon.

GEROTOX'ON, Gerontotox'on, Gerontotox'on, Leuco'ma Gerontotox'on, Mac'ula cor'neæ arcu'ata, Arcus senilis; from γερον, γεροντος, 'an old person,' and ροξον, 'a bow.' A bow-shaped opacity at the under margin of the cornea, common to old people.

GEROTROPHIA, Gerocodium.

GEROTROPHIA, Geroboscia.

GERSA, Plumbi subcarbonas—g. Serpentariae, see Arum maculatum.

GESIER, Ventriculus callosus.

GESTA, 'things done,' from gerere, gestum, 'to do,' 'carry.' Acta. A Latin term, introduced by Hallé into medical language, to designate, among the objects which belong to hygiene, the functions which consist in the voluntary movements of muscles and organs. In the class Gesta are found sleep, the waking state, movements or locomotion, and rest.

GESTA'TION, Gesta'tio, Phora, from gestare, gestatum, 'to carry.' The time during which a female who has conceived carries the embryo in her uterus. See Pregnancy. Gestation, likewise, signifies the bearing or carrying of an individual; a kind of exercise easier than that in which he moves by virtue of his own powers. Thus, we speak of gestation on horseback, in a carriage, &c.

GESTATION, PROTRACT'ED. Pregnancy protracted beyond the usual period. See Pregnancy.

GESTICULA'TION, Gesticula'tio, same etymon. The act of making many gestures; a symptom in disease, which indicates great cephalic erethism. It is met-with in numerous affections.

GETHYL'LIS SPIRA'LIS. A South African plant, Nat. Ord. Amaryllidæe, the orange-coloured fruit of which has a peculiar fragrance. An infusion in spirit or tincture is used in flatulence and colic.

GEUM, G. rivale—g. Caryophyllatum, G. urbanum—g. Nutans, G. rivale—g. Palustre, G. rivale.

GEUM RIVALE, G. palus'trē seu nutans, Caryophyllata aquat'ica seu nutans, Benedicta sylvestris, Water or Purple avenis, Choc'olate root. (F.) Benôte aquatique ou des Ruisseaux. Ord. Rosaceæ. Scr. Syst. Icosandria Polygynia. The root of this plant—Geum (Ph. U. S.)—is astringent. It has been much extolled in the cure of intermittents, diarrhoea, hemorrhage, &c.

GEUM URBA'NUM, G. caryophyllatum, Caryophyllata, C. vulg'aris seu urba'na, Caryophyllus vulg'aris, Snamun'da, Lagophthalmus, Caryophylla, Janamun'da, Herba benedicta, Common avens, Herb Bennet, Yellow avens, Star of the North, Blessed herb. (F.) Benôte. The root of this plant has a smell not unlike that of cloves. Taste bitterish, austere: virtues yielded to water and alcohol. It has been used in intermittents, dysentery, chronic diarrhoea, debility, &c. Dose, ℥ss to ʒj of the powder.

GEUM VERNUM, Western early avens, has the same properties as GEUM VIRGINIA'NUM, White avens, Avens, Evau root, Choc'olate root, Bennet, Throat root, Cure-all, (F.) Benôte de Virginie, is common from Maine to Carolina and Kentucky, flowering in June and July. It has the same medical properties as Geum rivale.

GEUMA, Taste.

GEUSION'OSI, from γευσις, 'taste,' and νοσος, 'disease.' Geusionu'si. Diseases of the organ or sense of taste.

GEUSIS, Taste. Rarely the root of the tongue—Radix linguaæ.

GEUTHMOS, Taste.

GEZIB, see Pastinaca opoponax.

GEZIT, Cagot.

GEZITAIN, Cagot.

GHERKIN, see Cucumis sativus.

GHITA JEMOCO, Cambogia.

GIALAPPA, Convolvulus Jalapi.

GIANT, Gigas, (F.) Géant. One much above the ordinary stature; of excessive growth—Macrosomia, Macrosomat'ia, Magnitudo gigante'a, (F.) Géantisme.

GIBBA, Hump.
 GIBBER, Hump.
 GIBBEROSITAS, Gibbositas.
 GIBBOSITAS, Gibberositas, Cyphosis, Rachio-cyphosis, from (F.) Gibbeus, (L.) Gibbus, gibbous, 'something arched or vaulted; prominent.' Gibbosity, Gibbousness, Curvature of the spine, Hyplo'ma. A phenomenon which occurs in different diseases, particularly in rickets and caries of the vertebrae. See Hump.

GIBBOSITAS CARIOSA, Vertebral disease.
 GIBBOUSNESS, Gibbositas.
 GIBBUS, Hump—g. Pottii, Vertebral disease.
 GIBLETS. According to Minshew, from Gobbet, 'a mouthful' [?]; but, according to Junius, from (F.) Gibier, 'game.' The word seems to be the old (F.) Gibelez, Gibelet, &c., i. e. Gibier, (L.) Cibarium, 'food,' (F.) Abattis. It means, generally, the parts which are cut off from a goose before it is roasted. Also, the extremities of fowls, such as the head, wings, feet; to which are sometimes added the liver, gizzard, &c. Soup, made from these, is moderately nutritious.

GIDDINESS, Vertigo.
 GIDDY, Vertiginous.
 GIGANTEUS, Gigantic.
 GIGANTESQUE, Gigantic.
 GIGANTIC, Giganteus, Gigantoides, (F.) Gigantesque. Relating to one much above the ordinary stature.

GIGANTODES, Gigantic.
 GIGARTINA HELMINTHOCHORTON, Co-rallina Corsicana—g. Lichenoides, Fucus amy-laceus.

GIGARUS SERPENTARIA, Arum draconicum.

GIGAS, Giant.
 GILARUM, Thymus serpyllum.
 GILEAD, BALM OF, see Amyris opobalsamum.
 GILET DE FORCE, Waistcoat, strait.
 GILL, Glechoma hederacea.
 GILL-GO-BY-GROUND, Glechoma hederacea.
 GILLA THEOPHRASTI, Zinci sulphas—g.

Vitrioli, Zinci sulphas.

GILLE'NIA STIPULA'CEA, Small-flowered Indian Physic has the same properties as GILLE'NIA TRIFOLIA'TA, Spiræa trifoliata, Common Gilleania, Indian Physic, Western Dropwort, Indian Hippo, Ip'ecac, Bowman's root, Meadow sweet, Beaumont root, (F.) Gillénie. Ord. Rosacæe. Ser. Syst. Icosandria Pentagynia. The root of this shrub, and of G. stipulacea—Gillénia, (Ph. U. S.)—which grows plentifully in the United States, is a safe and efficacious emetic, in the dose of about 30 grains. It resembles ipecaacuanha in its properties.

GILLÉNIE, Gillenia trifoliata.
 GILLIFLOWER, Dianthus caryophyllus.
 GILLON, Viscum album.

GIMBERNAT'S LIGAMENT. A fibrous, triangular expansion, which is detached from the posterior and inner part of the crural arch, and is inserted into the crest of the pubis. This ligament forms the inner part of the superior aperture of the crural canal. It is one of the most frequent causes of strangulation in crural hernia.

GIN, Hollands, Geni'va, (F.) Genièvre. This spirit, which is distilled from corn and juniper berries, or from some substitute for them, is largely used in Great Britain, and is extremely detrimental, to the lower classes particularly. It possesses the properties of other spirituous liquors, but is diuretic, and, in popular medicine, is more used than other varieties, in cases of colic or intestinal pain of any kind. Schiedam Schnapps is understood to be Hollands of good quality. See Spirit.

GIN DRISKER'S LIVER, Liver, nutmeg—g. Liver, Liver, nutmeg.

GINGEMBRE, Amomum zingiber.

GINGER, Amomum zingiber.

GINGER BEER POWDER, see Amomum zingiber.
 GINGER, GARDEN, Capsicum—g. Indian, Asarum Canadense—g. Jamaica, concentrated essence of, see Amomum zingiber—g. Preserved, see Amomum zingiber—g. Wild, Asarum Canadense.

GINGIBRA'CHIUM, from gingivæ, 'the gums,' and brachium, 'the arm.' A name given to the scurvy, because the gums and arms are chiefly affected by it. It has also been called Gingipe'dium, because the lower limbs are in many cases the seat of scorbutic spots. See Porphyra nautica.

GINGIPEDIUM, see Gingibrachium, Porphyra nautica.

GINGIVÆ, from gignere, 'to beget,' because the teeth are, as it were, begotten in them. [?] The gums, ουλα, U'la, Carnic'ula, (F.) Gencives. The portion of the mucous membrane of the mouth which covers the maxillary bones to the level of the alveolar arches. The gums are formed of a red tissue, more or less solid, and of a fibro-mucous nature, which adheres strongly to the necks of the teeth, and transmits, between the roots and their alveoli, a very thin expansion,—the alveolo-dental periosteum. The gums fix the teeth and contribute greatly to their solidity. In the aged, after the loss of the teeth, they become fibrous and very solid, and are inservient to mastication.

GINGIVALIS, Uleticus, U'licus; from gingivæ, 'the gums.' Relating to the gums.

GING'LYMOID, Ginglymoï'deus, Ginglymoï'des, from γινγλυμος, 'a ginglymus or hinge,' and ειδος, 'resemblance.' Resembling a ginglymus or hinge. An epithet applied to joints which resemble a hinge, as a ginglymoid joint.

GIN'GLYMUS, Cardinamentum, Cardo, 'a hinge.' (F.) Charnière, Articulation en charnière. A species of diarthrodial articulation, which only admits of motion in two directions, like a hinge,—as the knee-joint or elbow-joint.

GINSENG, Panax quinquefolium—g. Asiatic, Panax Schinseng—g. Blue, Caulophyllum thalictroïdes—g. Yellow, Caulophyllum thalictroïdes—g. Horse, Triosteum—g. White, Triosteum.

GIRAFFE, Dengue.
 GIRARD-ROUSSIN, Asarum.

GIRDLE, Cingulum.

GIRL. This seems, formerly, to have been an appellation common to both sexes. Many etymologists deduce the word from the Su. Goth. Karl, 'a man.' It means a young female, (L.) Fil'ia, from φιλειν, 'to love.' (F.) Fille.

GIROFLE, see Eugenia caryophyllata.

GIROFLÉE JAUNE, Cheiranthus cheiri.

GIROLE, Sium sisarum.

GIRON, Arum maculatum.

GIRSLÉ, Cartilage.

GISN, Anhelatio.

GISSA, Cynanche parotidæa.

GIZZARD, Ventriculus callosus.

GIZZEN, see Parturition.

GLABELLA, Mesophryon.

GLABELLAD, see Glabellar.

GLABEL'LAR, from glabella, 'the space between the eyebrows.' An epithet for an aspect towards the glabella.—Barelay. Glabellad is used adverbially by the same writer to signify 'towards the glabellar aspect.'

GLABRITIES, Calvities.

GLACE, Ice.

GLACIALE, Mesembryanthemum crystallinum.

GLACIALIS HUMOR, Crystalline.

GLACIES, Ice.

GLADI'OLUS, diminutive of gladius, 'a sword,' from the sword-like shape of its leaf. Machæriion—g. Cæruleus, Iris Germanica.

GLADIOLUS COMMUNIS, G. vulgaris, Victoria rotundifolia, dasuifemina, Cornflag, (F.) Glaxeyl. Ord. Iridiæ. The root of this plant has been considered aphrodisiac. Applied in cataplasms, it has been extolled against scrofulous tumours.

GLADIOLUS LUTEUS, Iris pseudacorus—G. Vulgaris, G. communis.

GLADIUS, Penis.

GLAMA, Lippitudo, Chassie.

GLAND, Glandula, Gran'dula, (diminutive of glans, 'an acorn, a kernel?') Aden. The ancient anatomists gave this name to a number of organs of a texture generally soft, and a shape more or less globular, but differing greatly in their nature and functions. They applied it, for instance, 1. To those organs which separate from the blood, any fluid whatever. When such organs were composed of several lobules, united by common vessels, they received the name conglomerate glands, as the parotid, pancreas, &c. 2. To the reddish and spongy, knot-like bodies, which are met with in the course of the lymphatics. These they called conglobate glands;—see Ganglion, (lymphatic); and 3dly and lastly, to various other organs, whose intimate texture and functions are still unknown, as the Pineal gland, Pituitary gland, Glands of Pacchioni, Thyroid gland, Thymus gland, Supra-renal glands, &c. Chaussier restricts the word gland to those softish, granular, lobated organs, composed of vessels, and a particular texture, of which there are in the human body, the lachrymal, salivary, and mammary, the testicles, the liver, pancreas, and kidneys. These permanent glands, or glands with permanent ducts, are all destined to draw from the blood the molecules necessary for the formation of new fluids, and to convey these fluids externally, by means of one or more excretory ducts. Several glands, besides their excretory ducts, have especial reservoirs, in which the fluids, secreted by them, collect, remain for a greater or less space of time, and undergo slight modifications before being evacuated;—such are, the gall-bladder for the liver, the urinary bladder for the kidneys, &c. Each gland has an organization peculiar to it, but we know not the intimate nature of the glandular texture.—Malpighi believed that the vessels terminate in small, solid masses, to which he gave the name—glandular grains or acini. In these, he considered, the excretory ducts originate. Ruyseh thought that the glands are entirely vascular, and that the excretory ducts are immediately continuous with the vasa afferentia, &c. The best view, perhaps, is, that the exhaling or secreting vessel is distributed on the animal membrane, which forms the blind extremity of the excretory duct, and that the secretion is effected through it by means of cells.

The term glande (F.) is sometimes appropriated to the tumour formed by inflammation or engorgement of a lymphatic ganglion.

GLANDULAIRE, Glandular.

GLAND'ULAR, Glandularis, Glandulosus, (F.) Glandulaire, Glanduleux. Having the appearance, form, or texture of Glands; as a glandular body, a glandular texture, &c.

GLANDULAR SUBSTANCE OF THE KIDNEY, see Kidney.

GLANDULE OF MALPIGHI, see Corpora Malpighiana.

GLANDULEUX, Glandular.

GLANDULO'SO-CARNEUS. Ruysch gives this epithet to fleshy excrescences which he found in the bladder.

GLANDULOSUS, Glandular.

GLANS, genitive glandis, ('an acorn.') Bal'anus, Cyt'taros, Cuspid, Caput, C. Penis, Genita'lē caput, (F.) Gland. The extremity of the penis and of the clitoris. The glans penis is of a conical, slightly flattened shape. It is continuous with the urethra, which opens at its apex; and is circumscribed by a projecting edge, called the Coro'na glandis, behind which is a depression. Collum seu Sulcus retroglandula'ris. It is covered by a thin mucous membrane, is furnished, at its base, with sebaceous follicles, called glandula' odorif'era Tyso'ni, the secretion from which is termed Smegma prepu'tii; and can, almost always, be covered by the reflection of the skin, called the prepuce. Lastly, it is formed of a spongy texture, susceptible of being thrown into erection.

GLANS, Bronchocele, Pessary, Suppository.

GLANS CLITOR'IDIS is smaller. It is imperforate, and likewise covered with a sort of prepuce formed by the mucous membrane of the vulva.

GLAUCEDO, Glaucoma.

GLAU'CO'MA, from γλαυκος, 'sea-green.' Glauc'ois, Glauce'do, Cataracta glauca, Ōc'ulus cæ'sius, Cæ'sius, Phthar'na glauca'uma, Parop'sis glauco'sis, Apoglauc'ois. Amongst the older pathologists, this word was used synonymously with cataract. It is now ordinarily applied to opacity of the vitreous humour or of the tunica hyaloidea, which manifests itself by a grayish, or greenish spot, apparent through the pupil. The diagnosis is generally difficult; and the disease is almost always incurable.

GLAUCOMA WOULHOUSI, Cataract.

This plant—Ord. Labiatæ—has a strong smell, and a bitterish, somewhat aromatic, taste. It has been considered expectorant and tonic.

GLECHOMA HIRSUTA, G. hederacea.

GLECHON, Mentha pulegium.

GLECHONITIS. Wine, impregnated with the Glechon, γλαχων, mentha pulegium or pennyroyal.

GLEEING, Strabismus.

GLEET, see Gonorrhœa.

GLEME, Chassie, Lippitudo.

GENÈ, γληνη. The pupil. The anterior part of the eye. The eyeball. The eye. According to some, the crystalline lens. Also, a glenoid cavity.

GLENOID, Glene.

GLE'NOID, Glenoid'al, Glenoïda'lis, Glenoï'des, Gleno'des, Glenoï'deus, from γληνη, and ειδός, 'resemblance.' (F.) Glenoïde, Glenoïdale, Glenoïdien. Any shallow, articular cavity, γληνη, glenè, which receives the head of a bone; such as, 1. The glenoid cavity or fossa of the scapula, Fossa glenoïdea, Omocol'yē, Acetab'ulum hu'meri, Cav'itas hu'meri glenoïdes, Eutypo'sis, is situate at the anterior angle of the scapula; and is articulated with the head of the humerus. 2. The glenoid cavity or fossa of the temporal bone. It is seated between the two roots of the zygomatic process, and receives the condyle of the lower jaw.

GLENOID LIG'AMENT, (F.) Ligament Glenoïdien, is a fibro-cartilaginous ring or bouvrelet, which seems formed by the expansion of the tendon of the long head of the biceps brachialis, and surrounds the glenoid cavity of the scapula, the depth of which it increases.

GLÈNOÏDALE, Glenoid.

GLEYED, see Strabismus.

GLIADINE, Hæmatin.

GLISCHRAS'MA, Glis'chrotas, from γλισχραιω, (γλα, 'glue,') 'I become glutinous.' Lentor, visciditas.—Hippocrates.

GLISCHROCH'OLUS, from γλισχρος, 'viscid,' and χολη, 'bile.' An epithet for excrement which is glutinous and bilious.

GLISCHROTES, Glischrasma.

GLISOMARGO, Creta.

GLISSEMENT DU LAMBEAU, see Flap.

GLOBULARIA ALYPUM, Globular'ria, Montpel'lier Turbith, (F.) Globulaire purgative, Turbith blanc. Ord. Globulariæ. The leaves of this plant are bitter, and have been used in intermittents and in constipation. See Alypon.

GLOB'ULE, Glob'ulus, Sphæ'rion, Sphæ'rula. A small globe.

GLOBULES OF THE BLOOD, Blood globules, Blood-corpuscles, Blood-disks, Blood-vesicles, Glob'uli seu Vesic'ulæ seu Sphæ'rulæ seu Follic'uli seu Corpus'cula seu Cell'ulæ seu Partic'ulæ seu Gran'ula sanguinis, (F.) Globules du sang, Disques sanguins, are small, circular bodies, which are particularly observable when the transparent parts of cold-blooded animals are examined by the aid of the microscope; and are met with in the blood of all animals. They are circular in the mammalia, and elliptical in birds and cold-blooded animals; are flat in all animals, and generally composed of a central nucleus enclosed in a membranous sac. Chemically, they consist of hæmatin and globulin—hæmato-globulin. The chemical composition of the nucleus, where it exists,—it does not in man,—has been by some regarded as fibrin; by others, as fat; and by others, again, as a species of horn, to which the name nuclein has been given.

Besides these, the blood contains white globules, (F.) Globules blancs, Leucocytes, which are probably lymph and chyle corpuscles in process of development into red corpuscles.

Dried blood globules of the ox have been given internally in cases of anæmia.

GLOBULE D'ARANTIUS, see Sigmoid valves—g. du Sang, Globule of the blood.

GLOBULIN, Glob'uline, Blood cat'skin. The colourless substance that remains after the abstraction of the colouring matter of the blood-corpuscle. It is a peculiar albuminous principle. The globulin of Berzelius consists of the envelopes of the blood globules, and of the part of their contents that remains after the extraction of the hæmatin. Lecanu regards it as identical with albumen; and, according to Mulder, it belongs to the combinations of protein. Robin and Verdeil consider it to be albuminose.

The term globulin is likewise given by M. Donné to small granulations appertaining to the chyle, which are observable in the blood with the microscope. They are small, white, roundish, isolated or irregularly-agglomerated grains; of about the 1-300 of a millimètre in diameter, and are regarded by M. Donné as the first elements of the blood globules. They are the white granulated corpuscles of Mandl.

GLOBULISM, Homœopathy.

GLOBULUS ARANTII, see Sigmoid valves—g. Nasi, see Nasus—g. Sanguineus, Punctum saliens—g. Stapedius Ossis, Os orbiculare.

GLOBUS HYSTERICUS, Angone—g. Major, see Epididymis—g. Minor, see Epididymis—g. Martialis, Ferrum tartarizatum.

GLOBUS UTERI'US. A term applied by accoucheurs to the round tumour, formed by the uterus in the lower part of the abdomen immediately after delivery.

GLOMERATE, Conglomerate.

GLOMERULE, Glomer'ulus; from glomus, 'a clow of thread.' A ball or clow, formed by an agglomeration of vessels; as Glomerule of Malpighi; see Corpora Malpighiana.

GLOMERULI RENALES, Corpora Malpighiana.

GLOSSA, Glotta, 'the tongue.' The power of speech. Speech. Hence:

GLOSSAGRA, Glossalgia.

GLOSSAL'GIA, Gloss'agra, Glottal'gia, Glott'agra, from γλωσσα, 'the tongue,' and αλγος, 'pain.' Pain in the tongue.

GLOSSANIS'CHUM, Glossanoch'eus, Glossan' ochum, from γλωσσα, 'tongue,' and ανεχειν, 'to hold up.' An instrument for holding up the tongue.

GLOSSANOCHEUS, Glossanischum.

GLOSSANOCHEMUM, Glossanischum.

GLOSS'ANTHRAX, Pestis gloss'anthrax, (F.) Boussole, from γλωσσα, 'the tongue,' and ανθραξ, 'a carbuncle.' Carbuncle of the Tongue. A disease more common in cattle than in man.

GLOSSEPIGLOT'TIC, Glossepiglot'ticus. Relating to the tongue and epiglottis, as Liyamen'tum glossepiglot'ticum.

GLOSSIANUS, Lingual muscle.

GLOSSITIS, from γλωσσα, 'the tongue,' and itis, a suffix denoting inflammation. Glosson'eus inflammato'rius, Angi'na lingua'ria seu lingua'lis, Inflamma'tio Lingua'e, Inflammation of the tongue, (F.) Inflammation de la Langue. When confined to the mucous membrane, it is of slight importance. That which affects the whole of the tongue is a serious disease, and requires the vigorous use of antiphlogistics. It is rare.

GLOSSO, from γλωσσα, 'the tongue.' In composition, relating or appertaining to the tongue.

GLOSSOC'ACE, from glosso, and κακος, 'evil.' Ulceration of the tongue, with symptoms of adynamic fever.

GLOSSOCARCINO'MA, Glossoscir'rhus, Carcino'ma Lingua'e, from glosso, and καρκινωμα, 'cancer.' Cancer of the tongue.

GLOSSOCAT'OUCHUS, Glossocat'ochē, Cataglossum, from γλωσσα, 'the tongue,' and κατεχω, 'I arrest.' Lingua'e Deten'tor, (F.) Abaisseur de la langue. An instrument, the invention of which is attributed to Paulus of Ægina, and which was employed to depress the tongue, in order to examine diseases of the fauces. It was composed of two branches; one of which had, at its extremity, a plate for depressing the tongue; whilst the other, shaped like a horse-shoe, was applied under the chin. The finger, or the handle of a spoon, or a spatula, is generally used in similar cases. See Cataglossum.

GLOSSOC'E, from glosso, and κηλη, 'hernia,' 'tumour.' Hernia of the Tongue, Paragloss'e, Protrip'sus lingua'e, Glossomegis'tus, Glossopto'sis. Projection of the tongue from the mouth. It depends, generally, on an inflammatory swelling of the organ. At times, however, a chronic glossocoele, or sort of œdematous engorgement, is met with; which proceeds to a great length, and deforms the dental arches, the lips, &c. Inflammatory glossocoele must be combated by antiphlogistics. In the œdematous kind, such as is sometimes caused by excessive salivation, the infiltrated fluid may be pressed back by the hand of the practitioner, to get the tongue behind the teeth; and it may be kept there by a piece of gauze tied over the mouth. The chronic, elongated kind sometimes requires amputation of a portion of the organ.

GLOSSOCOMA, Glossospasmus.

GLOSSOC'OMON, Glossoc'omum, Glossocomi'on, from glosso, and κομω, 'to guard.' The ancients gave this name to a small case for holding the tongues of their wind-instruments. By extension, it was applied to the box or cradle in which fractured limbs were kept. We find, in the ancient writers, a Glossocomon of Hippocrates, of Nymphodorus, Galen, &c.

GLOSSODESMUS, Frænum lingua'e.

GLOSSO-EPIGLOT'TIC, Glosso-epiglot'ticus. That which belongs to the tongue and epiglottis. Some anatomists have so denominated certain fleshy fibres, which pass from the base of the tongue towards the epiglottis. These muscles are more evident in some of the mammalia than in man; and their use seems to be,—to raise the epiglottis, and to remove it farther from the glottis. Santorini, who described them after Eustachius, calls them Retractorēs Epiglottidis.

GLOSSO-EPIGLOTTIC LIGAMENT, Frænum seu Frænum epiglottidis, Ligamentum membranaceum, Velamentum linguæ. Three folds of mucous membrane, which connect the anterior surface of the epiglottis with the root of the tongue.

GLOSSOGRAPHY, Glossographia, from glossos, and γραφη, 'a description.' An anatomical description of the tongue.

GLOSSO-HYAL. A name given, by Geoffroy Saint-Hilaire, to the posterior cornua of the os hyoides.

GLOSSOL'OGY, Glossolog'ia, from glossos, and λογος, 'a treatise,' 'a discourse.' A treatise on the tongue. Nomenclature.

GLOSSOLYSIS, Glossople'gia, Paral'ysis linguæ, P. Nervi hypoglossi, from glossos, and λυσις, 'solution.' Paralysis of the tongue.

GLOSSOMANTIA, Prognosis ex linguâ, from glossos, and μαντεια, 'divination.' Prognosis from the state of the tongue.

GLOSSOMEGISTUS, Glossocoelæ, Paraglossa.

GLOSSON'CUS, from glossos, and ογκος, 'tumour.' Econco'sis linguæ. Swelling of the tongue.

GLOSSONCUS INFLAMMATORIUS, Glossitis.

GLOSSO-PALATINUS, Glossostaphylinus—g. Pharyngeal, Glossopharyngeus, Pharyngoglossal—g. p. Nerve, Pharyngo-glossal nerve.

GLOSSO-PHARYNGE'US, Glossopharynge'al, from glossos, and φάρυγξ, 'the pharynx.' Belonging to the tongue and pharynx. Some anatomists thus designate certain fleshy bundles, which arise from the lateral parts of the base of the tongue, and are inserted into the parietes of the pharynx. They form part of the constrictor pharyngis superior.

GLOSSOPLEGIA, Glossolysis.

GLOSSOPTOSIS, Glossocoelæ.

GLOSSOSCIRR'HUS, Glossocarcinoma.

GLOSSOSCOP'IA, from glossos, and σκοπεω, 'I view.' Inspection of the tongue as an index of disease.

GLOSSOSPAS'MUS, Glossoco'ma, Spasmus linguæ, from glossos, and σπασμος, 'spasm.' Cramp or spasm of the tongue.

GLOSSOSPAT'HA, Spat'ula pro orë, from glossos, and σπαθη, 'spatula.' A spatula for pressing down the tongue to enable the fauces to be examined.

GLOSSO-STAPHYLINUS, from glossos, and σταφυλη, 'the uvula.' Glossopalatinus, Palatoglossus, Constrictor Isthmi Fau'cium. A small, thin, narrow, and long muscle, which arises from the base of the tongue, and is inserted at the inferior and lateral part of the velum palati, in the anterior pillar of which it is situate. Its use is to contract the isthmus faucium, by depressing the velum palati, and raising the base of the tongue.

GLOSSOSTERE'SIS, Lingua extirpa'tio, from glossos, and στερησις, 'privation.' Extirpation of the tongue.

GLOSSOSTROPH'IA, from glossos, and στροφω, 'I turn.' Doubling of the point of the tongue upwards and backwards,—said to have been a mode of suicide. [?]

GLOSSOT'OMY, Glossotom'ia, from glossos, and τεμνειν, 'to cut.' Dissection of the tongue. Amputation of the tongue.

GLOSSYPERTROPH'IA, from glossos, and ὑπερ, 'over,' and τροφειν, 'to nourish.' Hyper-trophy or supernutrition of the tongue.

GLOTTA, Glossa, Tongue.

GLOTTAGRA, Glossalgia.

GLOTTALGIA, Glossalgia.

GLOTTIS, γλωττις, ('the month-piece of a flute,') Lig'ula. A small oblong aperture, in the larynx, comprised between the chordæ vocales. It is narrow, anteriorly; wider, posteriorly; and is capable of being modified by muscular contraction, as may be required by the voice. It is by the chordæ vocales, that voice is produced. The glottis is nearly an inch long in the adult male: less in the female and child.

Glottis is, by some, used synonymously with ventricle of the larynx: with others, it includes the whole of the larynx.

GLORNIS, LIPS OF THE, Thyreo-arytenoid ligaments—g. Spasm of the, Asthma thymicum.

GLOWWORM, Cieindela.

GLUANT, Glutinous.

GLUCOGENA, Glycogeny.

GLUCOGENESIS, Glycogeny.

GLUCOSE, from γλυκος, 'sweet.' Grape, Fruit, Starch, and Honey sugar. A variety of sugar, that occurs naturally in many vegetable juices, and in honey. Compared with cane sugar, it is much less soluble in water, and less disposed to crystallize; and, when injected into the blood-vessels, does not pass off to the like extent by the kidneys. Diabetic, Urinary, and Hepatic sugar appear to have the same chemical composition.

GLUCOSURIA, Diabetes mellitus.

GLUE BONE, Osteocolla.

GLUE FISH, Ichthyocolla.

GLUMPOT, Gallipot.

GLUTÆUS MAGNUS, G. major—g. Major, G. maximus.

GLUTÆUS MAX'IMUS, G. major seu magnus, Maximus et extimus gloutius, (F.) Muscle grand fessier, Ilio-sacro-fémoral; Sacro-fémoral, (Ch.), from γλυκος, 'the buttock,' 'the breech.' This muscle is situate at the posterior part of the pelvis, and at the upper and posterior part of the thigh. It is large, thick, and quadrilateral; and is attached, above, to the posterior part of the crista ili, to the part of the ilium comprised between the crista and the upper curved line, to the posterior surface of the sacrum, coccyx, and great sacro-sciatic ligament; and below, it terminates by a broad aponeurosis, which is inserted into the rugged surface that descends from the trochanter major to the linea aspera of the femur. This muscle extends the thigh on the pelvis, and rotates the thigh outwards. It is greatly concerned in station and progression.

GLUTÆUS ME'DIUS, Gloutius Secun'dus et Mé'dius, (F.) Ilio-trochanterien; Grand Ilio-trochanterien, (Ch.) Moyen Fessier. This muscle is situate in part beneath the preceding; it is broad, very thick, radiated, and triangular; attached, above, to the crista ili, and to the part of the outer surface of that bone comprised between the three anterior fourths of its crista, its upper curved line, and its lower; and below, it ends by a tendon, inserted at the upper edge of the great trochanter. It is an abductor of the thigh; but can turn the thigh outwards or inwards, according as its posterior or inferior fibres are thrown separately into contraction.

GLUTÆUS MIN'IMUS, G. minor, Tertius et Intimus Gloutius, (F.) Petit Fessier;—Ilio-ischii-trochanterien, Petit Ilio-trochanterien (Ch.)

This muscle, which is situate beneath the preceding, is flat, triangular, and with radiated fibres. It is attached, above, to the external surface of the os ilii, from the inferior curved line to the acetabulum; and, below, is inserted into the anterior part of the great trochanter. It has the same uses as the preceding.

GLUTEUS MINOR, G. miuimus.

GLUTEAL, Gloutius, Glutæ'us. Same etymon. (F.) Fessier. That which belongs or relates to the nates. This name has been given to many parts which compose the nates.

GLUTEAL APONEURO'SIS. The upper and back part of the femoral fascia. In it is a remarkable opening, called the gluteal arch, for the passage of the gluteal vessels and nerves.

GLUTEAL ARCH, see Gluteal aponeurosis.

GLUTEAL ARTERY, Posterior Iliac Artery, (F.) Artère fessière, is one of the largest branches of the hypogastric. It makes its exit from the pelvis at the upper part of the superior sciatic foramen; gains the posterior part of the pelvis, and divides into two branches:—the one superficial, the other deep-seated. The last subdivides into three secondary branches, whose ramifications are distributed particularly to the Glutæi, Longissimus Dorsi, Særo-lumbalis, &c., and anastomose with the sciatic and internal circumflex arteries.

GLUTEAL NERVE, (F.) Nerf Fessier, is a large branch, furnished by the 5th pair of lumbar nerves. It is chiefly distributed to the glutæi muscles.

GLUTEAL VEIN, (F.) Veine fessière, follows the same march as the artery of the same name.

GLUTEN, Glutinium, Lentor, 'glue, paste.' Veg'etabile Gluten, Veg'etabile Ca'sein. An immediate principle of vegetables. It is soft, of a grayish white, viscid consistence, and very elastic. Exposed to the air, it becomes hard, brown, and fragile; and, in moist air, putrefies. Water and alcohol do not dissolve it. It is soluble in vegetable, and in weak mineral, acids, at a high temperature. The farine, in which it is found, are those preferred for the preparation of bread; on account of the property it has of making the paste rise. It is a compound of protein, and hence has been ranged amongst the "proteinaceous alimentary principles" by Dr. Pereira. By washing wheaten dough with a stream of water, the gum, sugar, starch and vegetable albumen are removed: the ductile, tenacious, elastic, gray mass left is the gluten, common gluten, Beccaria's gluten. Pure gluten is the soluble portion on boiling common gluten in alcohol. Granulated gluten, Gluten granule, is a paste made by adding wheat gluten to ordinary wheat. It is said to form an agreeable and nutritious aliment.

GLUTIA, Nates, Quadrigemina corpora.

GLUTIN, see Gelatin.

GLUTINANS, Agglutinant.

GLUTINATIF, Agglutinant.

GLUTINATIO, Agglutination.

GLUTINEUX, Glutinous.

GLUTINOUS, Glutino'sus, Collo'des, from gluten, 'paste, glue.' (F.) Glutineux, Gluant. An epithet given to substances taken from the animal or vegetable kingdom, and endowed with unusual viscosity. The decoctions of marsh-mallows, and figs, and the jelly of hartshorn, are said to be glutinous.

GLUTINUM, Gluten.

GLUTI'TIS, from γλουτοι, 'the nates,' and itis, denoting inflammation. Inflammation of the nates.

GLUTOI, Nates.

GLUTOPYO'SIS, from γλουτοι, 'the nates,' and πυσις, 'suppuration.' Suppuration of the nates.

GLUTTON, same etymon as the next. Gastrimar'gus, Gnathon, Hel'uo, Mando, Gulo'sus, Lureo, Bellygod, (F.) Glouton, Gourmand, Goulou. An excessive eater.

GLUTTONY, from glutio, 'I swallow,' gluttus, 'the gullet.' Limo'sis Heluo'num, Gastris'mus, (F.) Gourmandise. Excessive appetite, owing often to habitual indulgence.

GLUTTUPATENS, Stomach.

GLUTTUS, Œsophagus.

GLUTUS, Trochanter major.

GLYCANSIS, Edulcoration.

GLYCAS'MA, from γλυκς, 'sweet.' A sweet wine, prepared from must.—Linden.

GLYCERATON, Glycerrhiza.

GLYCERIN, see Fat—g. Butyrate of, see Butter.

GLYCIPICROS, Solanum dulcamara.

GLYCISIDE, Pæonia.

GLYCOGEN'ENY, Glycogen'ia, Glycogen'esis, Glycogen'ia, Glycogen'esis, (F.) Glycogénie, from γλυκς, 'sweet,' and γενεαις, 'generation.' Generation or formation of sugar,—as in the liver.

GLYCOSE, Glucose.

GLYCYRRH'YTON, Glycerrhiza.

GLYCYRRHI'ZA, from γλυκς, 'sweet,' and ριζα, 'a root.' G. Glabra seu Lævis, Liquoriti'ia Seyth'ica, Glycerat'on, Glycyrrh'yt'on, Adip'sos, Alcaeus, Al'imos, Liq'uorice, Lic'orice, (F.) Réglisse, Bois doux. Ord. Leguminosæ. Ser. Syst. Diadelphia Decandria. The root of this southern European plant is inodorous; has a sweet taste; is mucilaginous; and leaves, when unpeeled, a degree of bitterness in the mouth. It is used as a demulcent, and chiefly in catarrh. The extract, made from it and sold in the shops, is known under the name Spanish Liquorice or Liquorice Juice, (F.) Jus de Réglisse.

Pectoral Balsam of Liquorice—a quack preparation—is said by Dr. Paris to consist chiefly of Paregoric Elixir, strongly impregnated with Oil of Aniseed.

GLYCYRRHŒ'A, from γλυκς, 'sweet,' and ρρω, 'I flow.' A discharge of saccharine fluid from the system.

GLYCYRRHEA URINOSA, Diabetes mellitus.

GLYSTER HERBS, Herbæ pro Emu'tæ. The herbs ordinarily sold by the English apothecary under this title, are:—mallow leaves, one part; chamomile flowers, one part. (Ziss to Oj of water).

GNAMPSIS, Curvature.

GNAPHALIUM DIOICUM, Antennaria dioica—g. Plantaginifolium seu Plantagineum, Antennaria plantaginifolia.

GNAPHALIUM MARGARITACEUM, Antennaria Margarit'acea, Cudweed, Peorly Life everlasting, from γναφαλον, 'a lock of wool,' owing to the floccose down of the leaves. An indigenous plant, growing in woods and fields, and flowering in August. Its virtues are not defined, and the same may be said of GNAPHALIUM POLYCEPH'ALUM; Sweet-scented Life everlasting, Catfoot. They appear to be mild astringents.

GNATHALGIA, Neuralgia maxillaris.

GNATHANCYLO'SIS, from γναθος, 'the jaw,' and αγκυλωσις, 'stiffness of joint.' Ancylosis of the lower jaw.

GNATHANTROPOLYPUS, from gnathantrum, 'the antrum of Highmore,' and polypus. Polypus of the antrum of Highmore.

GNATHI'TIS, Inflammat'io genæ, from γναθος,

'the cheek, the jaw.' Inflammation of the cheek or upper jaw.

GNATHMUS, Gnathus.

GNATHOCEPH'ALUS, from γναθος, 'the jaw,' and κεφαλη, 'head.' A monster which has no head visible externally, but exhibits voluminous jaws.—G. St. Hilaire.

GNATHOCYNANCHE, Cynanche parotidæa.

GNATHON, Glutton.

GNATHONEURALGIA, Neuralgia maxillaris.

GNATHOPLASTY, Gnathoplastiæ, from γναθος, 'cheek,' and πλαστικός, 'formative.' The formation of an artificial cheek.

GNATHOPLE'GIA, Gnathoparaly'sis, from γναθος, and πληγη, 'a stroke.' Paralysis of the cheek. Gnathoparaly'sis is employed by Fuchs to signify paralysis of the lesser portion of the trifacial nerve, which supplies the muscles of mastication.

GNATHORRHAG'IA, from γναθος, and ρηννημι, 'to burst forth.' Hemorrhage from the internal surface of the cheeks.

GNATHOSPASMUS, Trismus.

GNATHUS, Gnathus, from κνωω, 'I scrape, rub.' The cheek, the jaw. Also, the part of the jaws in which the teeth are fixed.—Hippocrates, Foësius. See Bucca, Gena, and Maxillary Bone.

GNESIOS, Legitimate.

GNOME, Intellect.

GNOSIS, γνωσις, 'knowledge.' A common suffix, as in Diagnō'sis, Prognō'sis, &c.

GOACONAX, see Toluifera balsamum.

GOADBY'S SOLUTION, see Solution, Goadby's.

GOATS' BEARD, COMMON, Tragopogon.

GOATS' MILK, see Milk, goats'—g. Milk, artificial, see Milk, goats'—g. Thorn, Astragalus verus.

GOB, Month.

GOBELET ÉMÉTIQUE, Goblet, emetic.

GOBLET, EMET'IC, Poculum emet'icum, Calix vomito'ria, (F.) Gobelet émélique. A vessel, made by pouring melted antimony into a mould. By putting wine into this and allowing it to stand some time, it acquires the property of producing vomiting. This kind of emetic has been long rejected, as the practitioner could never be certain of the dose he exhibited.

GODESBERG, MINERAL WATERS OF. These waters, at Godesberg, a German mile from Bonn, are an efficacious, acidulous chalybeate, formerly known by the name, Draitsch Water. They contain chloride of sodium, carbonate of soda, carbonate of lime, carbonate of magnesia, and carbonate of iron.

GODFREY'S COR'DIAL. A celebrated nostrum, for which Dr. Paris has given the following formula. Infuse \mathfrak{z} ix of sassafras and of the seeds of carraway, coriander, and anise, each \mathfrak{z} j, in six pints of water. Simmer the mixture until reduced to \mathfrak{lb} v; then add \mathfrak{lb} vj of treacle, and boil the whole for a few minutes. When cold, add \mathfrak{z} ij of tincture of opium. The following form is recommended by a committee of the Philadelphia college of Pharmacy. Tinct. Opii, Oiss; Syrupi Nigri, Oxxvj; Alcoholis, Oij; Aqua, Oxxvj; Carbonatis Potassæ, \mathfrak{z} ijss; Olei Sassafras, \mathfrak{f} ℥iv, M. It is anodyne.

GODRÓNÉ, (CANAL.) Canalis Petiti'anus seu Peti'ti, Couronne ciliaire, Canal de PETIT ou goudronné, Canal or Bul'ular Canal of PETIT. Petit gave this name (from F.) godron, 'a plait or fold') to the semicircular canal, formed by the tunica hyaloidea around the edge of the crystalline; because it appears, as it were, plaited or festooned.

GOGGLE-EYED, (Prov.) Grozet-eyed. Having prominent, staring and rolling eyes.

GOITRE, Bronchocele—g. Leaf, see Laminaria.

GOITRE STICKS. In South America the stems of a seaweed are so called, because they are chewed by the inhabitants where goitre prevails.—Royle.

GOIT'ROUS, (F.) Goîtreux. Relating or appertaining to goitre. One affected by goitre or Bronchocele,—Goitred.

GOLD, Aurum, Chrysol, Sol, Rez metallo'rum, (F.) Or. (Sax.) \mathfrak{z} old. A solid, yellow, very brilliant, hard, very ductile, malleable, tenacious, and heavy metal; found in nature. either in its native state, or combined with a little silver, copper, or iron. S. g. 19'25.

Muriate or Chloride of Gold, Auri Chlor'idum seu Terchlo'ridum seu Muri'as seu Chlorure'tum, Aurum Muriat'icum seu Chlorat'um seu Oxydula'tum muriat'icum seu Sali'tum, (F.) Chlorure on Muriate on Hydro-chlorate d'or has been admitted into the Pharmacopœia of the United States, and into that of Paris, &c. The formulæ, however, differ. That of the United States is a muriate with two bases; and is prepared, according to the form of Dr. Chrestien, by dissolving the gold in a mixture of nitric and muriatic acids, and adding chloride of sodium to the residuum after evaporation; then redissolving and evaporating slowly to dryness. The Parisian formula for the Muriate d'or, Muri'as seu Chlorure'tum Auri, consists in simply dissolving the gold in the acids, and evaporating to dryness. It has been recommended as an antisypilitic in old, rebellious, venereal affections, exostoses, and in venereal, serofulous or cancerous glandular enlargements. Dose, gr. 1–8th to gr. ss, rubbed on the tongue or gums. Internally, one-sixteenth of a grain, in pills.

Various other preparations, as the Cyanide or Tercyanide, (Auri Cyan'idum seu Cyanure'tum seu Tercyan'idum, (F.) Cyanure d'or); the metallic gold in a state of division (Aurum metal'icum, Pulvis Auri, (F.) Or divisé ou métallique), obtained by amalgamating gold with mercury and driving the latter off by heat; and in the form of filings (Aurum limat'um); the Chloride of Gold and Sodium, (Aurum muriat'icum natronat'um seu muriat'icum seu chlorat'um natronat'um, Chlore'tum Aur'icum Chlore'to nat'rii, Muri'as Au'rico-nat'ricum, Chlorure'tum auri et natrii, Soldii au'ro-terchlo'ridum, Hydrochlorate or muriate of Gold and Soda, (F.) Chlorure d'or et de Soude); the Nitromuriate of Gold, (Aurum Nitrico-muriat'icum, Auri nitronat'rias, (F.) Nitromuriate d'or); the Oxide of Gold, (Auri Ox'idum, Aurum Oxida'tum, Auri terox'idum, Perox'ide of gold, Auric acid, (F.) Oxide d'or); and the Iodide of Gold, (Auri Iod'idum seu Iodure'tum, (F.) Iodure d'or), have been employed in the like affections, and with similar results.

GOLD-BEATER'S SKIN. The intestina recta of the ox, which have been beaten quite smooth, for the manufacture of gold leaf. Used as a defensive dressing for slight cuts, &c.

GOLD, CHLORIDE OF, see Gold—g. Cyanide of, see Gold—g. Hydrochlorate of, see Gold—g. Iodide of, see Gold—g. Muriate of, see Gold—g. Nitro-muriate of, see Gold—g. Oxide of, see Gold—g. Peroxide of, see Gold—g. Tercyanide of, see Gold—g. and Sodium Chloride of oxide of, see Gold—g. and Soda, hydrochlorate of, see Gold—g. and Soda, muriate of, see Gold.

GOLD LEAF, Gold Foil, Aurum folia'tum, Aurum in libel'is. Used to gild pills and to plug carious teeth. The gold leaf or foil, used by the dentist for filling teeth, is much thicker than ordinary gold leaf.

GOLD THREAD, Coptis.

GOLDEN BUG, Coccinella septempunctata — g. Knop, Coccinella septempunctata — g. Rod, Solidago virgaurea — g. Rod, fragrant, Solidago odora — g. Rod, rigid, Solidago rigida — g. Rod, sweetscented, Solidago odora — g. Seal, see Calumba, Hydrastis Canadensis.

GOLDENS, Chrysanthemum leucanthemum.

GOLDING, Calendula officinalis.

GOLDSHRUB, Palicourea speciosa.

GOLDWASSER, see Spirit.

GOLFE, Sinus — g. de la Veine jugulaire, see Jugular veins.

GOLUNCHA, Menispermum cordifolium.

GOMBO, Hibiscus esculentus.

GOMME, Gumma, Gummi — g. Adragant, Tragacanth — g. Ammoniaque, Ammoniac gum — g. Arabique, Acaciae gummi — g. Astringente de Gambie, see Butea frondosa — g. Caragne, Caranna — g. Carane, Caranna — g. Élastique, Caoutchouc — g. de Gaïne, Guaiacum — g. de Génévrier, Sandarac — g. Gettania, Gutta Percha — g. Gutte, Cambogia — g. de Kino, Kino — g. Laque, Lacca — g. de Lievre, see Hedera helix — g. du Pays, Gummi nostras — g. Sérophique, Sagapenum.

GOMPHIASIS, Gomphiasismus, from γομφος, 'a nail.' A disease of the teeth, and particularly of the molars; looseness of the teeth in their sockets. Agomphia'sis. Pain in the teeth. Odontalgia.

GOMPHIASMUS, Gomphiasis.

GOMPHIOL, Molar teeth.

GOMPHOCARPUS CRISPUS. A South African plant, the root of which, formerly known to the Dutch apothecaries as Radix Asclepi'adis crispæ, is extremely bitter and acid; and, on account of its diuretic virtues, a decoction or infusion of it has been advised in various kinds of dropsy. A tincture of it is said to be valuable in colic.

GOMPHOMA, Gomphosis.

GOMPHO'SIS, Cardinamen'tum, Clav'd'tio, Gompho'ma, Coagmenta'tio, Inclava'tio, Incunea'tio, from γομφος, 'a nail.' Engompho'sis. An immovable articulation, in which one bone is received into another, like a nail or peg into its hole. Gomphosis is only met with in the articulations of the teeth with the alveoli. It is, also, called Articulation par implantation.

GOMPHUS, Clavus.

GOMUTO PALM, see Toddy.

GOMUTOS GOMUTO, see Toddy.

GONACRASIA, Spermatorrhœa.

GONACRATIA, Spermatorrhœa.

GON'AGRA, Gon'yagra, from γονν, 'the knee,' and αγρα, 'a prey.' "That which attacks the knees." Gout or rheumatism in the knees. Gongorrhœa'ma. Paracelsus calls it Gen'yagra.

GONAL'GIA, from γονν, 'the knee,' and αλγος, 'pain.' Pain in the knee. Gonyal'gia. This is almost always produced by gout. It may, however, depend on some other disease, either of the knee or of another part—particularly of the hip-joint.

GONARTHRI'TIS, from γονν, 'the knee,' αρθρον, 'joint,' and itis, denoting inflammation. Inflammation of the knee-joint.

GONARTHROCECE, Gonocœce.

GONAURA, see Sperm.

GONDOLE OCULAIRE, Scaphium oculare.

GONDRET'S AMMONIACAL CAUSTIC, Pommade de Gondret — g. Counter-irritant, Pommade de Gondret.

GONE, Gonos, Genit'ra. The semen; (hence, gonorrhœa) — the uterus, offspring. — Hippocrates. See Epilegna, and Generation.

GONECYSTIDES, Vesiculae seminales.

GONECYSTITIS, Inflamma'tio vesicula'rum seminalium, from γονν, 'sperm,' κυστις, 'bladder,' and itis, denoting inflammation. Inflammation of the vesiculae seminales.

GONEPEUS, Spermatopeus.

GONEPOETICUS, Spermatopeus.

GONFLEMENT, Swelling.

GONGRONA, Bronchoœce.

GONGROPHTHISIS, Phthisis pulmonalis.

GONGYLIDIUM, Pilula.

GONGYLION, Pilula.

GONGYLIS, Pilula.

GONIOCATH'ETER, from γωνια, 'an angle,' and καθετηρ, 'a catheter.' An angular or crooked catheter.

GONIOME'TE, from γωνια, 'an angle,' and μηλη, 'a probe.' An angular or crooked probe or sound.

GONIOM'ETER, Goniom'etrum, from γωνια, 'an angle,' and μετρον, 'a measure.' An instrument for measuring angles.

A 'FACIAL GONIOMETER' has been invented by Mr. Turpenny, of Philadelphia, which is well adapted for measuring the facial angle.

GONOBOLIA, Ejaculation, spermatic.

GONOC'ACÈ, Gonarthroc'acè, from γονν, 'the knee,' and κακος, 'evil.' Tumor genu albus. White swelling of the knee. Hydrarthrus.

GONOCELE, Spermatocele.

GONO'IDES, from γονν, 'sperm,' and ειδος, 'appearance.' Genit'ra sim'itis. Similar to sperm. Sperm'atoid, Spermato'ides, Spermato'des. A term appropriated to any substance which resembles sperm.

GONOL'OBUS MACROPHYLL'US, (γωνια, 'an angle,' and λοβος, 'a pod?'); indigenous. Nat. Ord. Asclepiadaceæ. The root is cathartic. It is said to furnish a juice with which the Indians poison their arrows. [?]

GONOPOETICUS, Spermatopeus.

GONORRHÉE BÁTARDE, Gonorrhœa spuria.

GONORRHO-BLEPHARRHŒA, Ophthalmia, gonorrhœal.

GONORRHO-PROSTATITIS, see Prostatitis.

GONORRHŒA. Erroneously called from γονν, 'sperm,' and ρœω, 'I flow,' because the older writers believed it to be a flux of semen. Blennorrhag'ia, Blennorrhœa, B. urethralis, Blennorrhœa, Phallorrhœa, Medorrhœa, M. virilis, Catar'rhus gonorrhœa seu ure'thræ, Urethrit'is, Inflamma'tio ure'thræ, Urethral'gia, Prostivium mucosum ure'thræ, Catarrhus ure'thræ, (F.) Écoulement, Urétrite, Urétrite. An inflammatory discharge of mucus from the membrane of the urethra in both sexes; and from that of the prepuce in man, and the vagina in woman. It may be excited spontaneously, or by irritants applied directly to the membrane; but is usually produced by impure connexion. Two great varieties have been generally reckoned.—1. GONORRHŒA PURA SEU BENIGNA. That which does not follow an impure connexion; (F.) Échauffement, Blennorrhag'ia benigna, Caulorrhœa benigna, Catar'rhus Ure'thræ, Gonorrhœa catarrhalis seu non contagiosa: — and, 2. GONORRHŒA IMPURA, maligna, contagiosa, symphilit'ica, et virulenta: Fluor albus malignus, Fluor venereus, Blennorrhœa luœdes, Baptorrhœa, Myxio'sis, Lues gonorrhœica, Scroph'ulæ gonorrhœicæ, Tubercula gonorrhœica, Clap, (Old E.) Chawdpps, (F.) Chaudepisse; that which is the result of impure commerce. The French, also, distinguish the Chaudepisse sèche, or that unaccompanied with discharge; and the Chaudepisse chordée, Gonorrhœa cordata, or that accompanied with chordee, and which, of course, occurs only in the male. It is the kind that most frequently engages the attention of the practitioner, and is characterized by mucous discharge from the urethra or vagina, intermixed with specific matter, and accompanied with burning pain on micturition. It is decidedly infectious. It is, however, a distinct disease from syphilis, and never produces it. Its duration is various, but the inflammatory symptoms usually subside in four or five weeks; leaving generally behind more or less of the gonorrhœa mucosa or gleet. Gonorrhœa of every kind, attended with any inflammatory symptoms, is best treated by the antiphlogistic regimen; avoiding every kind of irritation, and keeping the body cool by small doses of salts, and the urine diluted by the mildest fluids. After the inflammatory symptoms have subsided, cubeb, or the balsam of copaiba, exhibited in the dose of a teaspoonful, three times a day, will be found effectual: indeed, during the existence of the inflammatory symptoms, it often affords decided relief. Injections are rarely required.

Sometimes, gonorrhœa affects the glans; when it is called Gonorrhœa Spuria seu Balani, Balanoblenorrhœa, Balanorrhœa, Balani, Balanitis, Blennorrhœa spuria seu notha, (F.) Blennorrhœie du gland, Gonorrhœe bâtarde, Fausse Blennorrhœie. It requires only cleanliness and cooling lotions. This is the simple form of balanitis. It may, however, be of the impure kind—Balanorrhœa, (F.) Balanite contagieuse.

Some other varieties of gonorrhœa have been enumerated, but they are of little moment.

In consequence of repeated attacks of gonorrhœa, or of the debility induced by a single attack, it not unfrequently happens, as already remarked, that a constant, small discharge occurs, or remains behind, after all danger of infection is removed. The great difference between it and gonorrhœa is, that it is uninfected. The discharge consists of globular particles, contained in a slimy mucus, and is generally devoid of that yellow colour which characterizes the discharge of gonorrhœa virulenta. It is unattended with pain, scalding, &c. To this state the names Gleet, Gonorrhœa mucosa, Blennorrhœa chronica, Blennorrhœa, &c., have been given. It is commonly a disease of some duration, and demands the use of the copaiba, astringent injection; and, if obstinate, the introduction of the bougie.

GONOSTROMA, Proliferous disc.

GONozEMIA, Spermatorrhœa.

GONY, yovv, Genu, 'the knee'; hence:

GONYAGRA, Gonagra.

GONYALGIA, Gonalgia.

GONYANCON, Gonycamp'sis, from yovv, 'the knee,' and αγκων, 'a curvature.' A curvature or bending of the knee. A bent knee.

GONYCAMPISIS, Gonyaneon.

GONYCROTUS, from yovv, 'the knee,' and κροτω, 'I strike.' One who is knock-kneed, or iu-kneed. See Entogonyaneon.

GONYONCUS, from yovv, 'the knee,' and ογκος, 'a tumour.' A swelling of the knee.

GONYORRHEUMA, Gonagra.

GOOD KING HENRY, Chenopodium bonus Henricus.

GOODYE'RA PUBES'CENS, Tussu'ca reticulata, Satyr'ium, Neott'ia, Rattlesnake leaf, Rattlesnake Plantain, Networt, Netleaf, Scrofula weed, Cancer weed. Ord. Orchidaceæ. An indigenous plant, used empirically in scrofula—the fresh leaves being applied to the sores. It is employed by the Indians.

GOSEBERRY, Ribes uva crispa.

GOOSEFOOT, Chenopodium anthelminticum—g. Angular-leaved, Chenopodium bonus Henricus—g. Mercury, Chenopodium bonus Henricus—g. Stinking, Chenopodium vulvaria.

GORGET, Gorget—g. Lithotome, Gorget, lithotomy—g. à Repoussoir, see Gorget.

GORGET, from (F.) gorge, 'the throat.' Canalis canaliculatus, Ductor canaliculatus, (F.) Gorget. An instrument representing a long gutter, in the shape of a throat, which is especially employed in the operations of lithotomy and fistula in ano.

GORGET, CUTTING, see Gorget, and Lithotomy.

GORGET, LITHOTOMY, (F.) Gorget Lithotome, Cutting Gorget, is the one used in the operation for the stone, for the purpose of dividing the prostate and the neck of the bladder, so as to enable the surgeon to introduce the forceps and extract the stone. At the end of this gorget is a crest or beak, which fits the groove of the staff, and admits of the gorget being passed along it into the bladder. Besides cutting, there are also blunt gorgets, intended to be introduced into the wound—their concavity serving as a guide for the forceps into the bladder.

The chief modifications in the gorget have been made by Andouillet, Bell, Blicke, Bromfield, Cline, Desault, Foubert, Hawkins, Larrey, Lefèvre, Michælis, Thomas, &c.

GORGET FOR FISTULA IN ANO consists of a semi-cylindrical wooden staff, four inches long, without including the handle, and furnished with a wide groove. This is introduced into the rectum, to prevent the point of the bistoury from injuring the intestine, when the internal orifice of the fistula is deeply situated, and it is desirable to perform the operation by incision. This instrument, invented by Marchetti, has been modified by Percy, Runge, &c.

Desault invented an instrument for conducting the wire by the anus, in the operation for fistula by ligature. He called it Gorget à repoussoir.

GORGONEI FONTES, Fountains described by Libavius as containing water which possessed a petrifying property; probably, water holding in solution supercarbonate of lime.

GORGOSSET, Pyrosis.

GOSIER, Pharynx, Throat.

GOSSUM, Bronchocele.

GOSSYPIMUM, Gossyp'ium Herba'ceum, Gossyp'ion Xylon, Xylum, Bombax, Cotton, (F.) Cotton Family, Malvaceæ. Sex. Syst. Monadelphia Polyandria. The seeds of the Cotton Tree, Gossyp'ium arbor'cum, have been administered in coughs, on account of the mucilage they contain, and a decoction of a pint of the seeds to a quart of water has been given, in the Southern States, in intermittents. A decoction of the root has been prescribed as an emmenagogue and parturifacient. The cotton wool is used in medicine for making innoxas, &c., and is applied in the treatment of recent burns and scalds.

Gat, (F.) Goutte, Agrie*.—Piorry. The gout was formerly regarded as a catarrh, and received its name from (F.) goutte, (L.) gutta, 'a drop,' because it was believed to be produced by a liquid, which distilled, goutte à goutte, 'drop by drop,' on the diseased part. This name, which seems to have been first used about the year 1270, has been admitted into the different languages of Europe. Gout is an inflammation of the fibrous and ligamentous parts of the joints. It almost always attacks, first, the great toe; whence it passes to the other smaller joints, after having produced, or been attended with, various sympathetic phenomena, particularly in the digestive organs: after this, it may attack the greater articulations. It is an affection which is extremely fugitive, and variable in its recurrence. It may be acquired or hereditary. In the former case, it rarely appears before the age of thirty-five; in the latter, it is frequently observed earlier. It is often difficult to distinguish it from rheumatism. A combination is, indeed, supposed to exist sometimes; hence called Rheumatic gout. During the paroxysm or fit, a burning, lancinating pain is experienced in the affected joint, attended with tumefaction, tension, and redness. One or more joints may be attacked, either at the same time or in succession; and, in either case, the attack terminates by resolution in a few days. This is the Arthritis acuta seu inflammatoria seu regularis, Regular gout, Arthro'sia pod'agra regularis, Arth'ragra legitima seu vera seu genu'na seu norma'lis, (F.) Goutte régulière chaude. At other times, pains in the joints exist, of more or less acute character; the swelling being without redness. These pains persist, augment, and diminish irregularly, without exhibiting intermission, and, consequently, without having distinct paroxysms. The disease is then called aton'ic, asthen'ic, imperfect or irregular gout, Chronic G., Arthritis aton'ica seu asthen'ica, Arthro'sia Podagra larvata, Dysarthrit'is. It is, also, commonly called in France Goutte froide, Goutte blanche. It may appear primarily, or succeed attacks of regular gout.

Gout does not always confine itself to the joints. It may attack the internal organs: when it is called Arthritis aber'rans seu errat'ica seu planet'ica, Arth'ragra anom'ala, Pod'agra aber'rans, Vare'ni, Wandering, misplaced, or anomalous gout, (F.) Goutte vague.

Ret'rograde gout, Arthritis retro'rada, Podagra retro'rada, Arthro'sia Podagra complicata, Recedent or misplac'ed gout, (F.) Goutte remontée, G. malplacée, G. rentrée, is when it leaves the joints suddenly and attacks some internal organ, as the stomach, intestines, lungs, brain, &c.

Gout is also called, according to the part it may affect, Podagra, Gonagra, Chiragra, &c. It may be acute or chronic, and may give rise to concretions, which are chiefly composed of urate of soda. See Calculus, (arthritic). It may, also, give occasion to nodosities, when it is called Arthritis nodosa, (F.) Goutte nouée.

The treatment is of the antiphlogistic kind, and the local disorder should be but little interfered with. Colchicum seems to have great power over the disease. It forms the basis of the Eau médicinale d'Husson, a celebrated French gout-remedy. The bowels must be kept regular by rhubarb and magnesia; and a recurrence of the disease be prevented by abstemious habits.

GOUT, DIAPHRAGMATIC, Angina pectoris.

GOUT PAPER, so called, Charta antiarthrit'ica, Charta antirheumat'ica, is made by spreading a very thin layer of a mixture of an ethereal or spirituous extract of the bark of mezereon root, with wax, spermaceti, and oil, over the surface of paper.

GOUTTEUX, Arthritic, Podagric.

GOUTTIÈRE (F.), Collic'ia. A gutter in a bone, like that used for carrying off rain. Some of these cavities are intended to facilitate the sliding of tendons, such as the Gouttière Bicipitale or Bicipital groove. Others, as the Gouttière sagittale or Sagittal groove, lodge blood-vessels and especially veins. Others, again, are merely intended for the support of certain organs; as the Gouttière basilare or Bas'illary fossa, which supports the medulla oblongata.

GRACE-WIFE, Midwife.

GRACILARIA LICHENOÏDES, Fucus amygdalaceus.

GRAC'ILIS, Macer, Macilentus. Slender, lean. Also, the slender Rectus interior femoris seu Grac'ilis interior, (F.) Sous-pubio-crétitibial, Sous-pubio-prétibial (Ch.), Droit on grêle interne de la cuisse. This muscle is situate at the inside of the thigh. It is thin and very long; and arises from the descending ramus of the pubis, to be inserted at the inner and inferior part of the tuberosity of the tibia. It bends the leg and causes adduction of the thigh. See Grêle.

GRACILIS ANTERIOR, Rectus femoris.

GRADUATE, Graduatus, from gradus, 'a step,' 'a degree.' In medicine, one who has attained a degree,—usually, the degree of doctor.

GRÆA, γραια. The pellicle which forms on milk. The folds of skin round the umbilicus. An old woman.

GRAIN, Granum; the 60th part of a Troy, and the 72d part of a Poids de marc drachm.

GRAIN OIL, Oil, fusel —g. Oily, Sesamum orientale.

GRAMEN ÆGYPTIACUM, G. Crucis cypreoidis —g. Caninum, Triticum repens.

GRAMEN CRUCIS CYPREIÖ'DIS, Gramen Ægyptiacum, Ægyptian Cock's foot grass. Ord. Gramineæ. The roots and plants possess the virtues of the Triticum repens, and have been recommended in the earlier stages of dropsy. They were, formerly, considered to possess many other properties.

GRAMEN DIOSCORIDIS, Triticum repens —g. Major, Sarsaparilla Germanica —g. Orientale, Juncus odoratus —g. Repens, Triticum repens —g. Rubrum, Sarsaparilla Germanica.

GRAMIA, CHASSIE, Lippitudo.

GRAMINIVOROUS, Graminis'orus, from gramen, 'grass,' and voro, 'I eat.' Feeding or subsisting on grass.

GRAMMARIUM, Scruple.

GRAMME, γραμμα. An ancient weight, equivalent to the 24th part of an ounce, or to 24 grains, or a scruple, avoirdupois. At the present day, the gramme is equal in weight to a cubed centimetre of water; or to 18 grains, poids de marc—15.434 grains, Troy.

GRAMME, Iris, Line.

GRAMMITIS AUREA, Asplenium ceterach —g. Ceterach, Asplenium ceterach.

GRANATI RADICIS CORTEX, see Punica granatum.

GRAND DORSAL, Latissimus dorsi.

GRANDEB'ALÆ, The hair which grows in the arm-pits.

GRANDGORE, Syphillis.

GRANDINOSUM OS, Cuboid.

GRANDO, Chalaza.

GRANDULA, Gland.

GRANIVOROUS, Graniv'orus, from granum, 'a grain,' and voro, 'I eat.' Feeding or subsisting on grain or seeds.

GRANTRISTUM, Anthrax.

GRANULA SANGUINIS, Globules of the blood—g. Seminis, see Sperm.

GRAN'ULAR, Gran'ulous, Granulo'sus, (F.) Granulé, Granuleux, from granulum, 'a small grain.' Composed of or containing granules or small particles,—as 'granular eyelid,' 'membrana granulosa,' &c., &c.

GRANULAR DEGENERATION OR DISORGANIZATION OF THE KIDNEY, Kidney, Bright's disease of the —g. Conjunctiva, Trachoma—g. Eyelid, Trachoma —g. Layer, Membrana granulosa —g. Liver, Cirrhosis—g. Tin, see Tin.

GRANULATED LIVER, Cirrhosis.

GRANULA'TION, Granula'tio, from granum, 'a grain.' Gemma, (F.) Bourgeon, B. charnu. Granulations are the reddish, conical, flesh-like shoots, which form at the surface of suppurating wounds and ulcers. They are the product of inflammatory excitement, and may be produced in indolent ulcers, by exciting the parts by proper stimulants. They form the basis of the cicatrix.

GRANULATION is, likewise, a name given by the modern French physicians to an organic lesion, consisting in the formation of small, round, firm, shining, semi-transparent tumours, of the size and shape of millet-seed, or of a pea; which are met with in the lungs particularly, and in considerable quantity; often without materially interfering with their functions.

In pharmacy, granulation is a process by which a metal is reduced to fine grains, by melting it, and causing it, whilst liquid, to pass through a kind of sieve into a vessel of water,—as in the making of shot:—or by shaking or rubbing the melted metal in an appropriate box or vessel,—as in the formation of granular tin or granulated zinc.

GRANULATIONS CÉRÉBRALES, Glandulæ Paechioni.

GRANULA'TIONS MIL'IARY, or Miliary tubercles, are the small, transparent grains, of variable size, from that of a millet-seed to that of a grain of hemp, which are presumed to be the primitive state of tubercles.

GRAN'ULE, Gran'ulum; diminutive of granum, 'a grain.' A small grain; a small compact particle; a cytoblast.

GRAN'ULES SEM'INAL, Gran'ula sem'inis. Minute, rounded, granulated bodies, observable in the semen, which are, in all cases, much less numerous than the spermatozooids. See Sperm.

GRANULEUX, Granular.

GRANULOUS, Granular.

GRANVILLE'S LOTION, see Lotion, Granville's counter-irritant.

GRAPE, see Vitis vinifera —g. Sea-side, see Kino.

GRAPE-CURE, (F.) Cure du raisin, (G.) Traubenkur, Weintrau. A mode of medication in Germany, which consists in the use of the grape for both meat and drink; nothing more at the farthest being allowed than a piece of dry bread. This diet is continued for weeks. Its effects are altogether revellent, and resemble in many respects those of hydropathy.

GRAPES, DRIED, Uvæ passæ.

GRAPHIDOIDES, Styloid.

GRAPHIOIDES, Styloid.

GRAPHIOIDES, Styloid.

GRAPHIS'CUS, Graphis'cus Di'oclis. An instrument invented by Diocles for extracting darts [?]. Said, in many of the Dictionaries, but erroneously, to be described by Celsus. He speaks only of the Cyathis'cus Di'oclis, Διακλισιον κυαθικον. See Cyathiscus.

GRAPHITES, Plumba'go, Supercarbure'tum seu Carbure'tum Ferri, Ferri Carbonat'um seu Supercarbure'tum, Carbo mineralis, Gulene'a, Gale'nè, Plumbum nigrum, Cerussa nigra, Graphite, Carburet of iron, Black lead, Wad, (F.)

Crayon noir, Plombagine, Charbon minéral, Carbone de fer, from γράφω, 'I write.' This substance has been esteemed slightly astringent and desiccative. It has been advised by Weinhold in the cure of herpes.

GRAPHOÏDES, Styloid.

GRAPHOSPASMUS, Cramp, writers'.

GRAS DES CADAUVRES, Adipocire — g. de Jambe, Sura — g. des Cimetières, Adipocire — g. de Jambe, Sura.

GRAS FONDURE (F.), Diarrhœa adiposa, literally, molten grease. A species of diarrhœa, referred to by old writers; accompanied with great emaciation, and in which the evacuations contain fat-like matter. According to Sauvages, the Gras-fondure differs from colliquative diarrhœa in not being attended with hectic fever.

GRASS, Asparagus — g. Bear's, Yucca filamentosa — g. Bermuda, Cynodon dactylon — g. Bitter, Aletris farinosa — g. Blue-eyed, Sisyrrinchium Bermudianum — g. Brome, Bromus ciliatus — *g. GRASS TREE, Xanthorrhœa.

GRASS, VIPERS', Scorzonera — g. Yellow-eyed, Xyris bulbosa.

GRASSET (F.). The anterior region of the thigh, bounded below by the patella.

GRASSEYEMENT (F.), Sonus blæsus, Rotacismus, from (F.) gras, 'thick.' 'Speaking thick.' According to Sauvages, a vicious pronunciation of the letter r. They who speak thick, like the inhabitants of Newcastle, in England, or of Havre, in France, have difficulty in pronouncing the r, and they frequently substitute for it the letter l; but this does not properly constitute Grasseyement. It consists in this: that, in words in which the letter r is joined to another consonant, a sort of burring or guttural rolling is heard, nearly like that produced by gargling. See Rotacism.

GRASUS, Cinabra.

GRATELLE, Psoriasis.

GRATIA DEI, Gratiola officinalis.

GRATIOLA CENTAURIOIDES, g. officinalis.

GRATIO'LA OFFICINA'LIS, Digitalis minima, Gratia Dei, Gratiola Centaurioïdes, Hedge hysop, Herb of Grace, from gratia, 'grace or favour,' owing to its presumed excellent medical virtues. It is a native of the south of Europe (F.) Gratiolle, Séné des prés, Petite digitale, Herbe au pauvre homme. The plant is inodorous; taste strong, bitter, nauseous. It is possessed of anthelmintic, purgative, emetic, and diuretic properties. Dose, ten grains.

GRATIOLE, Gratiola officinalis.

GRATTERON, Galium aparine.

GRATTOIR, Raspatorium.

GRAVATIF, Heavy.

GRAVE, Serious — g. Plant, Datura sanguinea.

GRAVEDO, Catarrh, Coryza — g. Neonatorum, Snuffles.

GRAVEL, Lith'ia renal'is arenosa, Lith'iasis nephrit'ica seu renal'is, (F.) Gravelle. A disease occasioned by small concretions, similar to sand or gravel, Gla'rea, (F.) Gravier, which form in the kidneys, pass along the ureters to the bladder, and are expelled with the urine. These concretions, which are commonly composed of uric acid and an animal matter, are deposited at the bottom of the vessel, immediately after the excretion of the urine; and, by their hardness and resistance under the finger, differ considerably from the ordinary sediment of that liquid. A vegetable diet and alkaline drinks are the best prophylactics. See Calculi, urinary. A fit of the Gravel, Nephral'gia calculosa seu arenosa, Col'ica nephrit'ica, is the excruciating suffering induced by the passage of gravel from the kidney to the bladder. It can only be relieved by anæsthetics, opiates, the warm bath, &c.

When the deposit is in fine particles, it is termed Sand, Are'na, Are'nula, Psam'ma, Psammus.

GRAVEL GRASS, Galium verum.

GRAVEL, PILEOUS or HAIRY, (F.) Gravelle pileuse. A species of gravel containing hairs, phosphate of lime, ammoniaco-magnesian phosphate, and a little uric acid. — Magendie.

GRAVEL PLANT, Epigæa repens — g. Root, Eupatorium purpureum.

GRAVELLEUX, Calculous.

GRAVELLE, Chalazal — g. Pileuse, Gravel, pileous.

GRAVEOLENS, Fetid.

GRAVID, Pregnant.

GRAVIDIN; from gravidus, 'pregnant,' gravis, 'heavy.' A sediment in the urine of pregnant women, which by its decomposition gives rise to the pellicle kysteine. It differs from albumen, casein and gelatin. — Stark.

GRAVIDITAS, Fecundation, Pregnancy — g. Abdominalis, Pregnancy, abdominal — g. Extra-uterina, see Pregnancy — g. Extra-uterina in Ovario, Pregnancy, ovarian — g. Extra-uterina Secundaria, Metacyesis — g. Interstitialis, Pregnancy, interstitial — g. Molaris, Mole — g. Ovarii, Pregnancy, ovarian — g. Spuria, Pregnancy, false — g. Tubaria, Pregnancy, tubal, Salpingo-cyesis — g. Uteri substantiâ, Pregnancy, interstitial — g. Uterina, Pregnancy.

GRAVIER, Gravel.

GRAVIMETER, Areometer.

GRAVIS, Heavy.

GRAVITY, SPECIFIC, Gravitas specific'a, (F.) Pesanteur spécifique. The relation between the weight of a body and its bulk: thus, supposing four bodies to be of the same size, but to weigh, one four, another three, another two, and the fourth one; the specific gravity of the first will be four times greater than that of the last. The specific gravities of different bodies are, therefore, as the weights, bulk for bulk. For solids, and liquids, water is taken as the unit; atmospheric air for the gases. Thus, water is 1.000; mercury, at the common temperature, 13.58. Whence, we conclude mercury is between thirteen and fourteen times heavier than water.

GRAYHAIRD, see Poliosis.

GRAY MATTER OF THE BRAIN, Cortex cerebri, see Neurine.

GREASE, from (F.) Graisse, 'fat.' A specific inflammation, affecting the skin of the heels of the horse, which is especially interesting from the circumstance, that the matter, if inserted under the cuticle of an unprotected individual, may give rise to an affection — grease-pox, vari'olæ equinæ — which preserves the person from small-pox. [?]

GREASE, BARROW'S, Adeps suillus — g. Goose, Adeps anserinus — g. Molten, Gras-fondure.

GREASE POX, see Grease.

GREENHEART, see Bebeeru.

GREENHOW'S TINCTURE FOR THE TEETH, Spiritus armoracæ compositus.

GREEN SICKNESS, Chlorosis.

GREENWEED, Genista tinctora.

GRÊLE (F.), Grac'itis, 'long and thin.' This epithet is given by the French to various parts, as the Apophyse Grêle du Marteau, the slender apophysis or process of the malleus. A long process situate at the anterior part of the neck of the malleus, which passes out by the fissure of Glaserius. It is also called the Apophysis of Rau, although it was already known to Fabricius ab Aquapendente and to Cæcilius Follius.

GRÊLE, Chalaza—g. Interne de la Cuisse, Gracilis.

GRÊMIL OFFICINAL, Lithospermum officinale.

GREMIUM, Vulva.

GRIBE, CUTTING ON THE, see Lithotomy.

GRIPES, Tormina, Colic.

GRIPES, WATERY. A popular name for a dangerous disease of infancy, common in England, which does not differ essentially from the cholera infantum of this country.

GRIPHOSIS, Onychogryphosis.

GRIPPE (F.), from gripper, 'to gripe,' 'catch hold of.' A vulgar name for several catarrhal diseases, which have reigned epidemically; as the influenza.

GRIPPÉ, Pinched.

GRISOU, see Hydrogen, carburetted.

GRISTLE, Cartilage.

GRITS, Groats.

GRIT GRUEL, Water gruel. This is made as follows:—Take three ounces of grits; wash them well in cold water, and, having poured off the fluid, put them into four pints of fresh water, and boil slowly until the water is reduced one-half; then strain through a sieve. It is a good demulcent, and is employed also as a vehicle for clysters.

GROAN, see Suspirium.

GROATS, German Grütze; Grutum, Avena exortica; (F.) Gruan, Oatmeal, (Yorkshire.) Oats, hulled, but unground, (Lancashire.) Hulled oats, half ground. Oats that have the hulls taken off; Grits, (Prov.) Cullins. When crushed, they are termed Emden groats. In America, fine hominy is called Grits, and wheat prepared in the same way is likewise so designated. It is also called wheaten hominy.

GROATS, CRACOW, Semolina.

GROCERS' ITCH, see Eczema Impetiginodes, Psoriasis.

GROG-BLOSSOMS, Gutta rosea.

GROG-ROSES, Gutta rosea.

GROMWELL, Lithospermum officinale.

GROOVE, Furrow, Sulcus, (F.) Rainure. Ice-landic, grafa, Sax. Зґаґан, 'to dig.' A channel or gutter in a bone or surgical instrument. See Couliisse.

GROOVE, PRIMITIVE, Primitive streak or trace, Nota primitiva. A bright streak in the long axis of the pellucid part of the area germinativa, after it presents a central pellucid and a peripheral opaque part, and passes from the round to the pear shape.

GROOVED. Same etymon. Sulcatus, Striatus, Canaliculatus, (F.) Cannelé ou Canelé ou Canaliculé; Canaliculated. Having a small channel or gutter.

GROWTH, from Dutch grôyen, 'to grow,' Incrementum, Crescentia, Anaplo'sis, Anapty'osis, (F.) Croissance, Cruë. The development of the body; particularly in the direction of its height. Also, any adventitious tissue; thus, we speak of a morbid growth or formation. See Development.

GROZET-EYED, Goggle-eyed.

GRUAU, Groats.

GRUB, Larve, see Ectozoa.

GRUBS, Acne punctata.

GRUEL, GRIT, see Grits—g. Water, see Avena, and Grits.

GRUFF, from Teutonic ge, and ruh, 'rough.' In pharmacy, the coarse residue, which will not pass through the sieve in pulverization.

GRUMEAU, Coagulum.

GRUMOUS, Grumo'sus, (F.) Grumelé, Grumelux, from grumus, 'a clot.' Clotted.

GRUMUS, Coagulum.

GRUTUM. 'Groats.' Grutum Milvium, Milvium. A hard white tubercle of the skin, resembling, in size and appearance, a millet-seed. It is confined to the face. See, also, Groats.

GRYPHIUS PES. The Griffon's foot, (F.)

Pied de Griffon, An instrument of which Ambrose Paré speaks, which was used for extracting moles from the uterus.

GRYPHOSIS, Onychogryphosis.

GRYPHOSIS, from γρυπῶς, 'I incurvate.' Incurvatio. Curvature or crookedness in general. Crookedness or incurvation of the nails. See Onychogryphosis.

GRYPOTES, see Grypus.

GRYPUS. One who has a crooked or aquiline nose. The condition is termed Grypotes.

GUAICO, Huaico. The name of a plant, Eupatorium Guaco, described by Humboldt and Bonpland under the name Mikania Guaco, Ord. Compositæ, which grows in the valleys of Madalena, Rio-Cauca, &c., in South America. The negroes use the juice against the bites of poisonous reptiles;—both in the way of prevention and cure. It has been, of late, brought forward as a remedy in cholera.

GUAIAAC, see Guaiacum.

GUAIACI LIGNUM, see Guaiacum—g. Resina, see Guaiacum.

GUAIAICINE, see Guaiacum.

GUAIAACUM, G. Officinale seu Americinum, Lignum vitæ seu sanctum seu benedictum seu Indicum, Polus sanctus, Hugioxylum, (F.) Gayac, Gaiac. Ord. Zygophyllæ. The resin—Guaiaici Resina, Guaiaicæ, (F.) Résine ou Gomme de Gaiac—and the wood—Guaici lignum—are both used in medicine. Their odour is slightly fragrant; taste warm and bitter, of the resin more so than of the wood. The resin is concrete, brittle; colour, externally, greenish; internally grayish. Water dissolves about one-tenth; alcohol 95 parts. It is soluble, also, in liquor potassæ 15 parts, liquor ammoniæ 38 parts. The powder is whitish, but changes green in the air. The base of the guaiacum is a peculiar resin, called Guaiaicine.

Guaiacum is stimulant and diaphoretic; and in large doses, purgative. It is administered in chronic rheumatism, gout, cutaneous diseases, and the sequelæ of syphilis. Dose of resin, gr. v to xx:—to purge, gr. xx to xl.

Guaiaicum sanctum, and G. angustifolium have the same virtues as G. officinale.

GUALTHERIA, Gaultheria.

GUANO,—according to Tschudi, properly Huano,—is formed of the excrements of different kinds of marine birds—mews, divers, sheerbreaks, &c., but especially of the Sula variegata. It is found in enormous layers in the South American islands of the Pacific, and is used as manure.

GUARANA, Paullinia.

GUARANHEM, Monesia.

GUARANIN, see Coffea Arabica.

GUARAPO. A fermented liquor made, in Peru, of sugar-cane pulp and water. It is a very favourite beverage of the negroes.—Tschudi.

GUARD (for a bed), Alde.

GUAVA APPLE, Psidium pomiferum.

GUAYAVA, Psidium pomiferum.

GUAZA, see Bangué.

GUBERNACULUM DENTIS, (gubernaculum, 'a rudder.') A cord, which passes from the follicle of the permanent tooth along a small long canal behind the alveolus of the milk tooth, and becomes continuous with the gum. The gubernaculum has been supposed to direct the permanent tooth outwards. The canal has been termed Iter dentis.

GUBERNACULUM TESTIS, Gubernaculum testis, Hunteri, G. Hunteri, Hunteri Ligamentum suspensorium Testis, (F.) Gouvernail du testicule. A triangular, fibro-cellular cord; which, in the foetus, arises from the ramus of the ischium and the skin of the scrotum, and proceeds to the posterior part of the testicle, before this organ issues from the abdomen. It has been supposed to be a continuation of the fascia superficialis with muscular fibres from the internal oblique muscle, which pass upwards to the testis when in the abdomen; and by their contraction draw the testis down, and ultimately form the cremaster muscle.

GUËPE, Wasp.

GUÉRISON, Cure.

GUÉRISSABLE, Curable.

GUI, Viscum album—g. de Chêne, Viscum album.

GUIDER, Tendon.

GUILANDINA MORIN'GA, Hyperanthe'ra moringa. A plant, Ord. Leguminosæ, which affords the Ben nut, and the ligum nephriticum. It is also called Morin'ga Oleifera seu Zeylan'ica seu Nux ben. Under the name Guilandina moringa, Linnæus is said to have confounded Moringa pterigosperma and M. aptera. Hyperanthe'ra moringa is a synonyme of the former species. The nut Ben, Ben nux, Glans unguentaria, Balanus Myrepsica, Sandalum cæruleum, Oily Acorn or Ben nut, is a West India nut which furnishes an oil, Oleum Balanivum, Oil of Ben, that does not become rancid by age, and is hence used by perfumers. It is purgative.

The wood of the Guilandina is called Lignum Nephriticum, and has been used in decoction, in affections of the urinary organs.

GUILLOTINE, TONSIL, Amygdalotome.

GULTY CUPS, Ranunculus acris.

GULMAUYE, Althæa—g. Veloutée, Hibiscus abelmoschus.

GUMMA, (F.) Gomme. An elastic tumour formed in the periosteum occupying particularly the cranium and sternum, and produced by the syphilitic virus, when it has been long in the constitution. It is so called, because, when opened, it contains a matter like gum.

GUMMI, Commi, κομμι, (F.) Gomme. An immediate principle of vegetables. It is a solid, uncrystallizable, inodorous substance, of a mawkish taste, unchangeable in the air, insoluble in alcohol, but soluble in water, with which it forms a mucilage. It is obtained from various species of minosæ and prunus; and consequently there are many varieties of gum. They are used in medicines as demulcents, emollients, and relaxants, particularly in catarrh, intestinal irritations, &c.; and in Pharmacy, they are employed in the formation of emulsions, pills, &c.

GUMMI NOSTRAS, (F.) Gomme du Pays; Indig'neous Gum. These generic names are given to several species of gum, which flow spontaneously from certain indigenous fruit trees, — such as the almond, cherry, peach, apricot, &c. The indigenous gums have nearly the same properties as gum Arabic; but they are inferior to it.

GUMMI ORENBURGENSE, see Pinus larix—g. Pannacis, see Pastinaca opoponax—g. ad Podagram, Cambogia.

GUMMI-RESINA, Gum-resin. A milky juice, obtained by making incisions into the branches, stalks and roots of certain vegetables. Gum-resins are compounds of resin, gum, often with essential oil, and different other vegetable matters. They are solid, opaque, brittle, of a strong odour, acrid taste, variable colour, and are heavier than water. Water dissolves a part of them, and alcohol another; hence proof spirit is the proper menstruum. The generality of the gum-resins are powerful stimulants to the whole or to parts of the economy. The chief are asafetida, gum ammoniac, euphorbium, galbanum, camboge, myrrh, olibanum, opoponax, scammony, aloes, &c.

GUN-COTTON, see Collodion—g. c. Ethereal solution of, Collodion.

GUNJAH, see Bangue.

GUNNERA PERPEN'SA. A South African plant, Nat. Ord. Urticacæ; the decoction of which is taken as a domestic remedy by the farmers, as a tonic in dyspepsia. A tincture has been used in gravel. An infusion of the leaves is demulcent, and is employed in pulmonary affections. The leaves are applied fresh, to cure wounds and ulcers.

GURGES, Pharynx.

GURGITELLO, MINERAL WATERS OF. A thermal spring in the isle of Ischia. Temp. at its source, 176° Fah. It contains carbonic acid, carbonates of lime, magnesia, iron and soda, sulphates of lime and soda, chloride of sodium and silica.

GURGLING. 'Gushing with noise,' as water from a bottle. (F.) Gargouillement, same etymon as gargle. The rhonchus or râle heard on auscultation when there is a cavity in the lungs containing pus. It is the 'cavernous rattle or rhonchus,' Râle caverneux. The size of the bubbles heard varies, and hence the rhonchus has been called cavernous and cavernulous, (F.) Râle cavernuleux. If the cavern be large, this râle will nearly resemble the gurgling of a bottle (gloglou d'une bouteille); if, on the contrary, the cavern be small, it will not differ from the râle muqueux.

GURGULIO, Penis, Uvula.

GUSTATIF, (Nerv.) see Lingual Nerve.

GUSTATION, Degustation, Taste.

GUSTATORY NERVE, see Lingual Nerve.

GUSTUS, Taste—g. Depravatus, Paræsthesia.

GUT, Gout, Intestine—g. Blind, Cæcum.

GUTS, SLIPPERINESS OF THE, Lientery.

GUTTA, Apoplexy, Cambogia, Gout.

GUTTA. A Drop, Stalagma, Aluon'sel, Stilla (F.) Goutte. A quantity of liquid, generally valued, in pharmacy, at the weight of a grain. The weight, however, varies according to different circumstances, as the degree of tenacity of the fluid, and the extent of moist surface to which the suspended drop is attached before it falls; and it was found by Mr. Alsop to be influenced by the size of the bottle, and the angle of inclination at which it was held during the operation of dropping. The following are some of his results as to the number of drops required to measure a fluidrachm, when dropped from a large and a small bottle.

	From a large bottle.	From a small bottle.
(f5j) Diluted sulphuric acid	24 drops	84 drops
Scheele's hydrocyanic acid	35	70
Distilled water	31	54
Solution of ammonia	40	48
Tincture of opium	84	135
Rectified spirits	100	130
Tincture of chloride of iron	100	150

GUTTA GAMANDRÆ, Cambogia—g. Gamba, Cambogia—g. Opaca, Cataract.

GUTTA PERCHA, Gutta tuban, Gomme getta'nia. The concrete juice of a tree—Isonandra gutta—which is indigenous in Singapore and its vicinity, and belongs to the Natural Order Sapotacæ. Plunged in boiling water it softens, when it may be moulded like caoutchouc to any form, which it retains on cooling. Splints and other instruments have been made of it.

A solution of gutta percha in chloroform—Traumat'icine—has been used with advantage, topically, in various cutaneous affections, scrofulous and indolent ulcers, and as an ectrotic in small-pox.

GUTTA ROSACEA SYPHILITICA, Crown of Venus.

GUTTA RO'SEA, G. Rosa'cea, Jon'thus corymbifer, Crusta serpiginosa seu pruriginosa, Aenë rosa'cea, Rose'ola acno'sa, Thylaci'itis, Bacchia, Butiga, Car'buncled Face, Rosy Drop or Whelk, Copper-nose, Bottle-nose, Grog-blossoms, Grog-roses, Brandy-face, (F.) Comperose, Goutte Rose, Bourgeois, Dartre pustuleuse couperose. An eruption of small, suppurating tubercles, with shining redness, and an irregular granular appearance of the skin of the part of the face which is affected. The redness commonly appears first at the end of the nose, and then spreads on both sides. It is often produced by hard drinking. Its cure must be attempted by regular regimen, and cooling means internally: weak spirituous or saturnine lotions externally. The affection is usually very obstinate.

GUTTA SERENA, Amaurosis—g. Tuban, Gutta percha.

GUTTÆ ABBATIS ROUSSEAU, Laudanum abbatis Rousseau—g. Ammoniaci, see Ammoniac gam—g. Acidæ tonicæ, Elixir Acidum Halleri—g. Nervinæ, Alcohol sulfurico-æthereus ferri.

GUTTÆ NIGRÆ, Acetum opii, Common Black Drop. (Opii ζ vij, aceti destillat. Bij. Infuse.)

The celebrated Black Drop, Lan'caster or Quaker's Black Drop may be made as follows. Take half a pound of opium sliced; three pints of good reejuice, (juice of the wild crab,) one and a half ounce of nutmegs, and half an ounce of saffron. Boil to a proper thickness, and add a quarter of a pound of sugar, and two spoonfuls of yeast. Set the whole in a warm place, near the fire, for six or eight weeks; then place it in the open air until it becomes a syrup. Lastly, decant, filter, and bottle it up, adding a little sugar to each bottle. One drop is equal to three of laudanum; and it is nearly devoid of all the unpleasant exciting effects of the latter. An analogous formula is contained in the Pharmacopœia of the United States under the name Acetum opii, Vinegar of Opium.

GUTTALIS CARTILAGO, Arytenoid Cartilage.

GUTTERIA, Bronchocele.

GUTTUR. The throat; the larynx; the trachea.

GUTTUR GLOBOSUM, Bronchocele—g. Tumidum, Bronchocele.

GUTTURAL, Gutturalis, from guttur, 'the throat.' Relating or belonging to the throat.

The Superior Thyroideal Artery is sometimes called Guttural Artery.

A Guttural Cough is one occasioned by irritation of the larynx or trachea.

A Guttural Sound is one produced, as it were, in the throat.

GUTTURIS OS, Hyoides os.

GUTTURNIA, Arytenoid cartilages.

GYMNA, Genital Organs.

GYMNASION, Exercise.

GYMNASIUM, from γυμνος, 'naked.' Palæstra. An establishment among the ancients, intended for bodily exercises, as wrestling, running, &c.; a term now used, in Germany more especially, for an academy or higher school.

GYMNAST, Gymnas'tes, Gymnas'ta; same etymon. The manager of a gymnasium. One, whose profession it is to prevent or cure diseases by gymnastics.

GYMNASTICS, Gymnas'tica, Medic'na gymnast'ica seu enect'ica, Somasce'tics, (F.) Gymnastique, Somasce'tique. Same etymon. That part of hygienic medicine which treats of bodily exercises. It is called Medical Gymnastics. The ancients had also Athlet'ic Gymnastics, and Military Gymnastics. Herodicus, of Selivra, first proposed gymnastics for the cure of disease.

GYMNASTIQUE, Gymnastics.

GYMNEURA LACTIFERUM, Ceylon cow-tree, Kiriaghuma. A tree, of the Family Apocynaceæ, the juice of which is used by the Cingalese as milk.

GYMNOCLADUS CANADENSIS, Coffee Tree, Kentucky Coffee-bean Tree, Mahogany, Nickar Tree, Bonduë. Order, Leguminosæ; from γυμνος, 'naked,' and κλαδος, 'a branch.' An indigenous tree, which grows from Ohio to Louisiana. The leaves are cathartic, and said to contain cytisin. The seeds are a good substitute for coffee.

GYMNOGRAMME CETERACH, Asplenium ceterach.

GYMNOPTERIS CETERACH, Asplenium ceterach.

GYMNOSIS, Denudation.

GYNÆCANER, from γυνή, γυναικος, 'a woman,' and ανηρ, 'a man.' Vir effemina'tus. An effeminate man.

GYNÆCANTHE, Tamus communis.

GYNÆCATOP'TRON, from γυνή, γυναικος, 'a woman,' and κατοπτρον, 'a speculum.' A speculum for investigating the female organs of generation.

GYNÆCEA, Gynæceia.

GYNÆCEIA, Gynæci'a, Gynæce'a, from γυνή, γυναικος, 'a woman.' The catamenia;—the lochia. The diseases of women in general.—Hippocrates, Galen, Foësius.

GYNÆCEUM, Antimonium, Vulva.

GYNÆCE'US, from γυνή, γυναικος, 'a woman.' Belonging to women. Female. Feminine.

GYNÆCIA, Gynæceia, Menses.

GYNÆCOLOG'IA, Gynecol'ogy, from γυνή, γυναικος, 'a woman,' and λογος, 'a description.' The doctrine of the nature, diseases, &c. of women.

GYNÆCOMANIA, from γυνή, γυναικος, 'woman,' and μανια, 'mania,' 'rage.' That species of insanity, which arises from love for women. Some have used the word synonymously with nymphomania.

GYNÆCOMAZIA, see Gynæcomastus.

GYNÆCOMAS'TUS, Gynæcomas'tus, from γυνή, γυναικος, 'woman,' and μαστος, 'a breast.' A man whose breasts are as large as those of a woman.—Galen, Ingrassias. The condition is called Gynæcomaz'ia.

A considerable enlargement of the breasts of a female was formerly called Gynæcomas'ton.

GYNÆCOMYS'TAX, from γυνή, γυναικος, 'woman,' and μυσαξ, 'the beard.' The hair on the pubes of women.—Rolfink.

GYNÆCOPH'NUS, from γυνή, γυναικος, 'woman,' and φωνή, 'voice.' A man who has an effeminate voice.

GYNANDRIA, Hermaphrodeity.

GYNANDROP'SIS PENTAPHYL'IA, Cleo'nē pentaphyl'ia. Ord. Capparidaceæ; an indigenous plant, is possessed of diaphoretic properties. The juice alone, or mixed with oil, has been used in earache.

GYNANDRUS, Gynanthropus.

GYNANTHRO'PUS, Gynan'drus. An hermaphrodite who belongs more to the male than to the female sex.

GYNATRES'IA, from γυνή, 'a woman,' and απηρος, 'imperforate.' Closure or imperforation of the external parts of generation of the female.

GYNE, Female, Woman.

GYNECOLOGY, Gynæcologia.

GYNIDA, Hermaphrodite.

GYNOARIUM, Ovarium.

GYNOCARDIA ODORATA, Chaulmoogra.

GYNOPLAST'IC, Gynoplas'ticus, from γυνή, 'a woman,' and πλασσω, 'I form.' The gynoplastic operation is employed for opening or dilating the closed or contracted genital openings of the female.

GYPSY-WEED, Lycopus sinuatus, and L. Virginicus.

GYRI CEREBRI, Convolutions (cerebral).—g. Cochleæ, Scalæ of the Cochlea—g. Intestinales, see Anse.

GYROMIA VIRGINICA, Medeola Virginica.

GYROPHLE, see Eugenia caryophyllata.

GYROPHORA, see Tripe de Roche.

GYRUS, Convolution—g. Intestinalis, Anse intestinale.

GYRUS FORNICAT'US, 'Arched convolution.' Fillet of the corpus callosum. A large convolution of the brain, which lies horizontally on the corpus callosum, and may be traced forwards and backwards to the base of the brain, terminating by each extremity at the fissure of Sylvius. The surface of the hemisphere, where it comes in contact with the corpus callosum, is bounded by it.

GYTLING, Infans.

HÆMATANGIOSIS, Hæmadonosus.

HÆMATAPORIA, Hæmaporia.

HÆMATAPORRHOSIS, Cholera.

HÆMATAPOSTEMA, from hæma, and ασσ-τημα, 'an abscess.' An abscess which contains blood.

HÆMATAULICA, Vascular system.

HÆMATEC'LYSIS, Hæmotex'ia, Hæmotex'is, Hæmatol'ysis, Hæmatosep'sis, San'guinis dissolu'tio; from hæma, and εκλυσις, 'loosening.' Dissolution of the blood.

HÆMATELÆUM, see Blood.

HÆMATEMESIS, from hæma, and εμεω, 'I vomit.' Hæmorrhag'ia Hæmatem'esis, Vomit'us cruent'us, Vomit'us seu Vomit'io San'guinis, Gastro-rhag'ia, Gastro-hæmorrhag'ia, Hæmorrhag'ia ventric'uli, Hæmorrhœa ventric'uli, Hæmatonag'gê, Vomiting of Blood, (F.) Hématémèse, Vomissement de sang. Hæmatemesis is generally preceded by a feeling of oppression, weight, and dull or pungent pain in the epigastric and in the hypochondriac regions; by anxiety, and, occasionally, by syncope. Blood is then passed by vomiting, and sometimes, also, by stool,—the blood being generally of a grumous aspect. Hæmatemesis may be active or passive, acute or chronic. The blood effused proceeds from rupture of vessel, or from a sanguineous exhalation at the surface of the mucous membrane of the stomach. It is often observed in females whose menstrual secretion is irregularly performed. It is not of much danger, except when connected with disease of some of the solid viscera of the abdomen. On dissection of those who have died from protracted hæmatemesis,—for the acute kind is comparatively devoid of danger,—the mucous membrane of the stomach is found red and inflamed, or black, and the vessels considerably dilated. Complete abstinence from food; rest; the horizontal posture; bleeding, if the hemorrhage be active; cold, acidulous drinks, &c., constitute the usual treatment.

HÆMATENCEPHALUM, Apoplexy.

HÆMATEPAGOGE, Congestion.

HÆMATERA, Hepatirrhœa.

HÆMATERUS, Sanguine.

HÆMATERYTHRUM, Hæmatin.

HÆMATEXOSTOSIS, Osteosarcoma.

HÆMATHIDROSIS, Sudor cruentus.

HÆMATHORAX, Hæmatothorax.

HÆMATIC, Sanguine — h. Crystals, Hæmatoidin.

HÆMATIASIS, Hæmatonosus.

HÆMATICA, from hæma. Diseases of the sanguineous function: — the third class in the nosology of Good. Also, medicines that act on the blood.—Pereira.

HÆMATICA DOCTRINA, Hæmatology.

HÆMATICUS, Sanguine.

HÆMATIDROSIS, Sudor cruentus.

HÆMATIN, Hæmat'ina, Hem'atine, Hæ'mat'osin, Hem'at'osine, Hæmater'ythr'um, Hæmer'ythr'um, Zoôhem'atin, Hæmachro'in, Hæmatoero'ine, Gl'adine, Phæ'nodine, Phæ'nicine, Hæmatochro'ite, Cru'orin, Rubrin, Glob'ulin of some; Rouge du Sang; from hæma. The red colouring matter of the blood. It resides in distinct particles or globules, and, in the opinion of some observers, in the envelope of the globules. It appears to be of a peculiar character, and one that has not yet been determined by the chemist. That the colour of the blood is not owing to the peroxide of iron which it contains is shown by the fact mentioned by Scherer, that he removed the iron by acids, and yet a deep red tincture was formed when alcohol was added to the residuum.

HÆMATIN'IC, Hæmatin'icus: from hæmatin, 'the red colouring matter of the blood.' An agent that augments the number of red corpuscles of the blood.—Pereira.

HÆMATINIC CRYSTALS, Hæmatoidin.

HÆMATINUS, Sanguine.

HÆMATIS'CHESIS, Hæmis'chesis, Hæmocyph'ia, from hæma, and ιχειν, 'to suppress.' The retention or suppression of a natural or artificial flow of blood.

HÆMATISMUS, Epistaxis, Hæmorrhagia.

HÆMATISTH'MUS, from hæma, and ισθμος, 'pharynx.' Hemorrhage into the pharynx.

HÆMATI'TES, Hæmatit'is, from αίμα, 'blood,' Resembling blood. Lapis Hæmatit'es. A beautiful ore of iron, called also, Bloodstone, O'chrea rubra, Oa'y'dum fer'ricum crystallizatum nativum, Ferrum Hæmatites. When finely levigated, and freed from the grosser parts, by frequent washings with water, it has been long recommended in hemorrhage, fluxes, uterine obstructions, &c., in doses of from one scruple to three or four. Also, a vessel that contains blood, αιματις φλεψ.

HÆMATMUS, Gaz sanguinis.

HÆMATOCATHAR'TICA, from hæma, and καθαρισις, 'purification or purgation.' Remedies for purifying the blood.

HÆMATOCE'LE, from αίμα, αιματος, 'blood,' and κηλη, 'tumour.' A tumour formed by blood. By some, this term has been applied to a tumour formed by blood, effused into the areolar texture of the scrotum. Others have used it for tumours arising from effusion of blood into the tunica vaginalis:—hæmatocele, according to them, differing from hydrocele, only in the character of the effusion. — Heister. Others, again, have applied it to effusions of blood into the interior of the tunica albuginea itself. — Richter. The first is the usual acceptation. It is most commonly caused by wounds or contusions; and requires the use of antiphlogistics, discutients, &c. Sometimes it is necessary to evacuate the effused blood.

HÆMATOCELE ARTERIOSA, Aneurism.

HÆMATOCEPH'ALUS, (F.) Hématocéphale. A monster in which an effusion of blood on the brain has given occasion to more or less singular deformities.

HÆMATO-CEREBRIFORM DISEASE, Encephaloid.

HÆMATOCHE'ZIA, from hæma, and χεζω, 'I go to stool.' Sedes cruent'e, Caturrhœ'is vera, Enterorrhag'ia simplex, Diarrhœa cruenta seu sanguinolenta, Hæ'mato-diarrhœ'is, Hæmorrhag'ia intestino'r'um, Ent'ero-hæmorrhag'ia, (F.) Hémorrhagie des intestins, Écoulement de sang par l'Intestin. Discharge of blood by stool. See Mæna.

HÆMATOCHROÏTE, Hæmatin.

HÆMATOCHYSIS, Hæmorrhagia.

HÆMATOCE'LIA, from hæma, and κοιλια, 'the cavity of the abdomen.' Effusion of blood into the abdomen.

HÆMATOCOL'PUS, from hæma, and κολπος, 'vagina.' Effusion of blood into the vagina. Accumulation of blood, owing to occlusion of the vagina.

HÆMATOCRYSTALLIN, Hæmatoidin.

HÆMATOCYANOPATHIA, Cyanopathy.

HÆMATOCYANOSIS, Cyanopathy.

HÆMATOCYSTE, Hæmatoma saccatum.

HÆMATOCYSTIS, from hæma, and κυστις, 'bladder.' Hemorrhage into the bladder.

HÆMATO'DES, Hæmatoid'es, Sanguin'eus, Hæ'matoid, Hem'atoid, from hæma, and ειδος, 'appearance.' That which contains blood, or has the character of blood.

HÆMATODES FUNGUS, Hæmatomyces, Fungus cancerosus hæmatodes, Melæ'na fungo'sa carcinoides, Angidiospon'gus, Angiomyc'ces, Hæmatospon'gus, Tumor fungo'sus sanguineus seu anon'alus, Carcino'ma Hæmatodes, Carcino'ma Spongio'sum, Spon'goid inflammation, Pulpy or Med'ullary Sarco'ma, Bleeding Fungus, Soft Cancer, (F.) Carcinôme sanglant, Hématoncîe fongôide. An extremely alarming carcinomatous affection, which was first described, with accuracy, by Mr. John Burns, of Glasgow. It consists in the development of cancerous tumours, in which the inflammation is accompanied with violent heat and pain, and with fungus and bleeding excrescences. Even when the diseased part is extirpated at a very early period, recovery rarely follows; other organs being generally implicated at the same time. Fungus hæmatodes was the term first applied to the disease by Mr. Hey of Leeds. Mr. J. Burns called it Spongioid inflammation, from the spongy, elastic feel, which peculiarly characterizes it, and continues even after ulceration has taken place. The disease has, most frequently, been met with in the eyeball, the upper and lower extremities, testicle and mamma; but it occurs in the uterus, ovary, liver, spleen, brain, lungs, thyroid gland, and in the hip and shoulder-joint.

Some French surgeons designate, by this name, those tumours which were formerly termed amormales, cavernæuses, variqueuses, called Erectiles by Dupuytren, Hématoncies, by Alibert, and Telangiectasîæ by Grâfe.

HÆMATODIARRHŒA, Hæmatochezia.

HÆMATODYNAMOMETER, Hæmadynamometer.

HÆMATOGASTER, from hæma, and γαστήρ, 'stomach.' Effusion of blood into the stomach.

HÆMATOGENETICA, Hæmatopœtica.

HÆMATOGLOBULIN, see Globules of the blood.

HÆMATOGRAPHIA, Hæmatog'raphy, from hæma, and γραφη, 'a description.' A description of the blood.

HÆMATOID, Hæmatodes.

HÆMATOID'IN, Hæmatocry'stallin, Hæmatin'ie, hæmatic, hæmin or blood crystals, (F.) Hématoïdine, Cristaux d'Hématine. A substance found in the midst, or in the vicinity, of effusions of blood, which is either in amorphous masses, or, more frequently, in minute rhomboidal crystals, or in fine needles. It is considered to be hæmatosin separated from the globules of the blood, and passed from the state of a non-crystallizable organic substance to one of a crystalline chemical compound.

HÆMATOL'OGY, Hæmatol'ogy, Hæmatolog'ia, Hæmat'ica doctri'na, (F.) Hématologie, from hæma, and λογος, 'a discourse.' That part of medicine which treats of the blood.

HÆMATOLOGY, PATHOLOG'ICAL, (F.) Hématologie pathologique. Observation of the blood to detect its varying characters in disease.

HÆMATOLYSES, (G.) Hæmatolysen, from hæma, and λυσις, 'solution.' An order of diseases in which there is diminished coagulability of the blood.—Fuchs.

HÆMATOLYSIS, Hæmateclysis.

HÆMATOLYTICUM, Spanæmic.

HÆMATO'MA, Thrombus, Tumor sanguineus. A bloody tumour, especially of the scalp of the new-born.

HÆMATO'MA SACCA'TUM. An encysted tumour containing blood—Hæmatocyst'itè.

HÆMATOMANTI'A, from hæma, and μαντια, 'divination.' Judgment of disease from the appearance of the blood.

HÆMATOMATRA, Metrorrhagia.

HÆMATOMETACHYSIS, Transfusio sanguinis.

HÆMATOMETRA, Metrorrhagia.

HÆMATOMMA, Hæmophthalmia.

HÆMATOPHALOCE'LE, Hæmatom'phalum, Hæmatom'phalus, from hæma, ομφαλος, 'the navel,' and κληη, 'a tumour.' Umbilical hernia, the sac of which encloses a bloody serum, or which has, at its surface, a number of varicose veins; constituting Varicom'phalus.

HÆMATOPHALUM, Hæmatomphalocœle.

HÆMATOMYCES, Hæmatodes fungus.

HÆMATOMYCES, (F.) Hématoncîe, from hæma, and ογκος, 'a tumour.' Alibert has given this name to Nævi mater'ni, Varicose tumours. He admits three varieties:—the H. fongôide, H. framboisèe, and H. tubéreuse.

HÆMATON'OSUS, Hæmat'asis, Hæmatopathi'a, Hæmopathi'a, from hæma, and νοσος, 'disease.' A disease of the blood. A hæmie or blood-disease.

HÆMATOPATHIA, Hæmatonosus.

HÆMATOPEDESIS, see Diapedesis.

HÆMATOPERICAR'DIUM, from hæma, and περικαρδιον, 'pericardium.' Effusion of blood into the pericardium.

HÆMATOPHLEUM, Hæmaphæin.

HÆMATOPHIL'IA, Hæmophil'ia, Hæmorrhophil'ia, Idiosyncrasi hæmorrhag'ica, from hæma, and φιλεω, 'I love.' A hemorrhagic diathesis.

HÆMATOPHLEBES'TASIS. Sudden suppression of a hemorrhage;—from σρασις 'αιματος φλεβων', 'suppression of the blood of the veins.'—Galen.

HÆMATOPHOB'IA, Hæmophob'ia, from hæma, and φοβος, 'dread.' Dread or horror at the sight of blood, producing syncope, &c.

HÆMATOPHTHALMIA, Hæmophthalmia.

HÆMATOPH'THORES, (G.) Hæmatoph'thoren; from hæma, and φθορα, 'corruption.' An order of diseases in the classification of Fuchs, in which the blood is materially altered in composition, as in typhus.

HÆMATOP'ISIS, (F.) Hématopisîe. M. Capuron, of Paris, has applied the term Hématopisîe utérine, from analogy with Hydropsis utérine, to a collection of blood which sometimes takes place in the uterus, when, owing to faulty conformation, the exit of the menstrual flux is prevented.

HÆMATOPLA'NIA, Hæmatoplanc'isîs, from hæma, and πλανη, 'wandering.' A vicarious hemorrhage.

HÆMATOPLANIA MENSTRUALIS, Menstruation, vicarious.

HÆMATOPLASMA, Liquor sanguinis.

HÆMATOPLETHORA, Plethora.

HÆMATOPEA, Hæmatopœtica.

HÆMATOPOESIS, Hæmatosis.

HÆMATOPOËT'ICA, Hæmatopœ'a, Hæmatogenet'ica, 'bloodmakers,' from hæma, and ποιω, 'I make.' Agents that favour hæmatosis. Iron was called by the ancients metal'um hæmatopœt'icum.

HÆMATOPOIESIS, Hæmatosis.

HÆMATOPORIA, Hæmaporia.

HÆMATOPS, Hæmophthalmia.

HÆMATOPSIA, Hæmophthalmia.

HÆMATOPTYSIA, Hæmoptysis.

HÆMATOPTYSIS, Hæmoptysis.

HÆMATORRHACHIS, Apoplexia myelitica.

HÆMATORRHAGIA, Hæmorrhagia.

HÆMATORRHŒA, Hæmorrhagia.

HÆMATORRHOSIS, Cholera.

HÆMATORRHYSIS, Hæmorrhagia.

HÆMATOSCHEOCE'LE, Hæmoscheocelē, Hæmatoscheum, from hæma, σχῆλον, 'serotum,' and κλήη, 'rupture.' Effusion of blood into the serotum.

HÆMATOSCHEUM, Hæmatoscheocelē.

HÆMATOSCOPIA, Hæmoscop'ia, (F.) Hæmorrhoscopie, from hæma, and σκοπεω, 'I view.' An examination of blood drawn.

HÆMATOSEPSIS, Hæmatoclysis.

HÆMATOSIN, Hæmatin.

HÆMATOSIS, Exæmato'sis, Enhæmato'sis, Hæmatopoe'is, Hæmatopoe'sis, Procreatio sanguinis, Decarbonization or Atmospherization of the blood, Sanguification; from hæma. The transformation of the venous blood and chyle into arterial blood by respiration. Called, also, Aëration, and Arterialization, of the blood. Formation of blood in general.

HÆMATOSPILIA, Purpura hæmorrhagica.

HÆMATOSPONGUS, Hæmatodes fungus.

HÆMATOSTATICA, from hæma, and στατική, 'statics.' Ischæ'mia, Hæmatostat'ica, Hæmatostat'ics, Hæmostat'ics, Hæmatostat'ics, Hæmostat'ics, Enæ'ma, (F.) Hématostatiques, Hématistiques, Hématistiques. The doctrine of the motion of the blood in living bodies. Also, remedies for stopping blood. Styptics.

HÆMATOS'TEON, from hæma, and οστεον, 'a bone.' Effusion of blood into the bones or joints.

HÆMATOSYMPHORESIS, Congestion.

HÆMATOSYNAGOGÉ, Congestion.

HÆMATOTELANGIOSIS, Telangiectasia.

HÆMATOTHORAX, Hæmatho'rax, Hæmatho'rax, Hæmato'thysis inter'na, Pleurorrhœ'u sanguin'ea, Pleurorrhag'ia, Pneumorrhag'ia inter'na, Hæmorrhag'ie Pleu'risis, Pleural hæmorrhage, from hæma, and θώραξ, 'the chest.' Extravasation of blood into the chest.

HÆMATOXYLON, H. Campechianum.

HÆMATOXYLON CAMPECHIA'NUM, from hæma, and ξύλον, 'wood.' Aca'cia Zeylon'ica, Logwood. The part of the tree used in medicine is the wood, Hæmatoxy'li Lignum, Lignum Campechen'se seu Campechia'num seu Campeca'num seu Indicum seu Sappan seu Brasilia'num rubrum seu cæru'leum, Hæmatoxy'lon (Ph. U. S.), (F.) Bois de Campêche. Family, Leguminosæ. Ser. Syst. Decandria Monogynia. Logwood is almost inodorous; of a sweetish, substringent taste; and deep red colour. Its virtues are extracted both by water and alcohol. It is astringent and tonic, and is used in the protracted stage of diarrhœa and dysentery.

HÆMATOZO'A, (F.) Hématozoaires, from hæma, and ζωον, 'animal.' Entozoa in the blood.

HÆMATURESIS, Hæmaturia.

HÆMATURIA, Hæmatur'e'sis, from hæma, and ουρω, 'I make urine.' Voiding of blood by urine. Hæmorrhag'ia hæmat'ria, H. ex viis urin'ariis, Hæmure'sis, Hæm'uria, Mictio Cruen'ta seu Sanguin'ea, Mictus Cruen'tus seu Sanguineus, Hæmorrhœ'a via'rum urin'ariorum, Sanguis in Uri'na, Bloody urine, (F.) Pissement de Sang, Hématurie. Hemorrhage from the mucous membrane of the urinary passages. Like other hemorrhages, it may be active or passive. It may proceed from the kidneys, Nephæmorrhag'ia, bladder, or urethra. The essential symptoms are:—blood, evacuated by the urethra; preceded by pain in the region of the bladder or kidneys, and accompanied by faintness. Whencesoever it proceeds, hæmaturia usually takes place by exhalation. Rupture of vessels is by no means common in the mucous membranes. Active hæmaturia requires general or local blood-letting; diluent and cooling drinks; absolute rest; and the horizontal posture. The chronic kind is more troublesome. It requires acidulated or aluminous drinks; chalybeates and tonics in general. When hæmaturia is excessive, cold injections may be thrown into the rectum or into the vagina of women, and topical applications be made to the perinæum.

HÆMATURIA CYSTICA, Cystorrhagia—h. Ejaculatoria, Spermatozystidorrhagia—h. Seminalis, Spermatozystidorrhagia—h. Stillitia, Urethrorrhagia.

HÆMATUS, from hæma, and ους, gen. ωτος, 'the ear.' Effusion of blood into the ear.

HÆMAXIS, Blood-letting.

HÆMENEPHALUS, Apoplexy.

HÆMENDOCAR'DIUM, (F.) Hémendocar'de, from hæma, and 'endocardium,' the lining membrane of the heart. Inflammation of the lining membrane of the heart.

HÆMERYTHRUM, Hæmatin.

HÆMIC, Hæ'micus, from hæma, 'blood.' Relating or appertaining to blood; as a "hæmic disease,"—a blood disease.

HÆMIDROSIS, see Diapedesis.

HÆMIN CRYSTALS, see Hæmatoïdin.

HÆMISCHESIS, Hæmatischesis.

HÆM'TIS, from αίμα, 'blood,' and itis, a suffix denoting inflammation. Inflammation of the blood. (F.) Hémite. The alteration of the blood that occurs in inflammatory diseases.—Piorry.

HÆMO-ARTHRITIS, Rheumatism (acute).

HÆMOCARDIORRHAG'IA, Hæmocar'dium, Apoplex'ia cordis, Apoplexy of the heart, (F.) Hæmorrhagie ou Apoplexie du Cœur, Hémocar'de, from hæma, καρδία, 'the heart,' and ρήγνυμι, 'I break forth.' Effusion of blood into the substance of the heart.

HÆMOCARDIUM, Hæmocardiorrhagia.

HÆMOCERCH'NOS. This term has received two acceptations, owing to the different senses in which κερχνος is employed; signifying, sometimes, hissing; at others, dry. Consequently, the Hellenists have translated the compound word, at times, by spitting of blood, with hissing in the throat; at others, by evacuation of dry matters.

HÆMOCRYPHIA, Hæmatischesis.

HÆMODES, Sanguine.

HÆMO'DIA, Hæmodias'mus, Hemo'dia, Hebetudo seu Stupor Dentitium, from αἰμώδης, (αἷμα, 'blood,' and οδός, 'tooth,') 'I have pain in the teeth.' Pain in the teeth, and more especially Agacement, or the setting on edge of those bodies by acid or acerb substances. It is also called Odon'tia Stup'ris, Odontall'gia hæmo'dia, Dolor dentitium à strido'rē, Cataplex'is, Odontamblyg'mus, Odonthyperæsth'e'sis, Tooth-edge.

HÆMODIASMUS, Hæmodia.

HÆMODROMOM'ETER, Hæmadromom'eter, from hæma, δρομος, 'course,' and μετρον, 'a measure.' An instrument for measuring the rate of the blood's movement. It consists of a glass tube, 52 inches long, containing water, bent into the form of a hair-pin, which is substituted for a segment of the bloodvessel, the velocity of the blood in which it is required to measure. The column of blood, which comes from the heart, pushes the column of water before it, and thus enables the velocity of the blood to be estimated.

HÆMOÏDES, Sanguine.

HÆMOMETRECTA'SIA, from hæma, μετρα,

'uterus,' and εκτασις, 'dilatation.' Dilatation of the womb from blood.

HÆMOPATHIA, Hæmatonosus.

HÆMOPERICARDIUM, Pericarditis exsudatoria, (F.) Hémopéricarde, from αἷμα, 'blood,' and pericardium. Effusion of blood into the pericardium.

HÆMOPERITONÆUM, from hæma, and περιτοναίον, 'peritoneum.' Effusion of blood into the peritoneum.

HÆMOPEX'ΛÆ, (G.) Hämopexien, from hæma, and πηξις, 'coagulation.' An order of diseases in which there is increased coagulability of the blood. — Hyperino'sis sanguinis. — Fuchs.

HÆMOPHEUM, Hæmapheia.

HÆMOPHILIA, Hæmatophilia.

HÆMOPHOBIA, Hæmatophobia.

HÆMOPHTHAL'MIA, Hæmatophthal'mia, Hæmatop'sia, from hæma, and οφθαλμος, 'eye.' Hæmalop'ria, Hæmalop'ris, Hæ'malops, Hypp'emia seu Apoplex'ia oculi. Effusion of blood into the eye. When the extravasation is external, it is called Hæmophthal'mia exter'na, Hyposphag'ma and Hæmalops externus; when internal, Hæmophthal'mia inter'na, Hydrophthal'mus cruent'us, Hypoph'ysis hæmato'des, Hæmatom'ma, and Hæ'malops inter'nus. A blood-shot eye.

HÆMOPLANIA MENSTRUALIS, Menstruation, vicarious.

HÆMOPLETHORA, Plethora.

HÆMOPROCTIA, Hæmorrhoids.

HÆMOPTOË, Hæmoptysis — h. Laryngea et Trachealis, Tracheorrhagia.

HÆMOPTOSIS, Hæmoptysis.

HÆMOP'TYSIS, from hæma, and πτωω, 'I spit.' Spitting of blood, Hæmorrhag'ia Hæmop'tysis, Hæmap'tysis, Hæmatop'tysis, Hæmatop'tysis, Emp'toë, Emp'otoë, Emp'to'ica pas'sio, Hæmop'tys'mus, Hæmopto'sis, Sputum sang'uinis seu cruent'um, San'guinis fluor pulmo'num, Emp'to'ica pas'sio, Hæmotis'mus, Hæmorrhœ'a pulmona'lis, Cruent'ia expu'tio, Hæmorrhag'ia pulmo'nis seu bron'chica, Pas'sio hæmopto'ica, Rejecd'tio sang'uinis è pulmo'nibus, Expectora'tio sang'uinis, Pneumorrhag'ia, Pneumorrhag'ia, Pneumorrhœ'a, Bronchorrhag'ia, Emp'tysis, Hæmoptoë, (F.) Hémoptysie, Crachement de sang, Expectora'tion de sang, Angiair'hémie, Angiair'hagie, Hémoptysie. — Pierry. Hemorrhage from the mucous membrane of the lungs; characterized by the expectoration of more or less florid and frothy blood. It is generally preceded by cough; dyspnœa; sense of heat in the chest, &c. It is important to discriminate between hæmoptysis, produced by some accidental cause acting irregularly or periodically on the lungs; and that which is, as it were, constitutional, and dependent on some organic affection of the lungs, or some faulty conformation of the chest. These two varieties differ as much in their prognosis and method of treatment as in their causes. Constitutional hæmoptysis is a serious disease, almost always announcing phthisis pulmonalis. The accidental variety is chiefly dangerous by frequent recurrence, or too great loss of blood.

The general causes of hæmoptysis are the same as those of other kinds of hemorrhage. It has, besides, particular causes; such as too great exercise of the lungs; loud speaking; playing on wind instruments, breathing acid vapours, &c. It usually occurs between puberty and the age of 35. A sudden and terrific kind of hæmoptysis is sometimes met with; consisting in a great afflux of blood to the lungs. This has been called Pulmonary Apoplexy, Apoplex'ia pulmona'lis seu pulmo'num, Pneumorrhag'ia, Infarc'tus hæmorrhag'icus pulmo'num, I. hæmopto'icus Laënnec'ii, (F.) Apoplexie pulmonaire, Hémoptysie foudroyante, Hémorrhagie interstitielle du Poupon. Infiltration of blood into the air-cells may occur without any hæmoptysis.

Physical signs. Percussion may not always aid us in hæmoptysis, but generally a circumscribed dulness will be perceived. The inspiratory murmur, on auscultation, is feeble or absent, locally; and is replaced by bronchial respiration and bronchophony. A fine liquid crepitus is detected around the affected part; and in the larger tubes, near the spine, a liquid bubbling rhonchus is usually heard. The value of these signs is determined by the nature of the expectoration. The treatment of hæmoptysis must be like that of internal hemorrhage in general.

HÆMOPTYSIS INTERNA, Hæmatothorax — h. Laryngea et Trachealis, Tracheorrhagia — h. Phthisis, Phthisis pulmonalis.

HÆMOPTYSMUS, Hæmoptysis.

HÆMORMESIS, Congestion, Hyperæmia.

HÆMORRHACHIS, Apoplexia myelica.

HÆMORRHAGE, Hæmorrhagia.

HÆMORRHAG'IA, from hæma, and ρρηγνυμι, 'I break forth.' San'guinis profu'vium copiosum, Sanguiflux'us, Hæmatoch'ysis, Aimorrhœ'a, Hæmorrhœ'a, Hæmorrhag'ia, Hæmatism'us, Hæmorrhœ'a, Hæmorrhœ'ysis, Hæmorrh'ysis, Proflu'vium seu Prorup'tio seu Eruptio sanguinis, Proflu'sio Sang'uinis, Hemorrhage, Hæmorrhage, Bleeding, Loss of blood, Rupturing, bursting, or breaking of a blood-vessel, (Prov.) Floating, (F.) Hémorrhagie ou Hémorrhagie, Perte de sang, Flux de sang. Any discharge of blood from vessels destined to contain it; with or without rupture of their coats. Hemorrhages may be spontaneous or traumatic: the first belong to the domain of medicine, the latter to that of surgery. They may, also, be internal or external; general — as in scurvy — or local. The hemorrhages by exhalation — those which chiefly interest the physician — have been classed, by Pinel, as follows: — 1. Hemorrhage of the Mucous Membranes; Epistaxis, Hæmoptysis, Hæmatemesis, Hæmorrhoids, Hæmaturia, Uterine Hemorrhage. 2. Hemorrhage of the Tissues; Cutaneous, Cellular, Serous, Synovial.

Hemorrhages have generally been distinguished into active and passive: in other words into those dependent upon augmentation of the organic actions, and those dependent upon debility. According to Broussais, no spontaneous hemorrhage is passive; all are active, — that is, produced by increased action and excess of irritation of the blood-vessels: they may occur with debility, but not from debility. He calls those only passive hemorrhages, which are owing to an external lesion of the vessels. Hemorrhages have been, by some, divided into constitutional, or those depending on original conformation: — accidental, or those produced by some adventitious cause; supplementary, or those which succeed others; symptomatic, critical, &c. A secondary hemorrhage is one that occurs some time after wounds or operations.

When hemorrhage takes place into any tissue, or is interstitial, it receives the name, with many, of apoplexy.

Active Hemorrhage, Hemorrhag'ia act'iva seu arterio'sa, Causa hæmorrhag'icum, Angiorrhag'ia, occurs chiefly in the young and plethoric. Good living; the use of fermented liquor — excessive exercise, or too sedentary a life, may perhaps be ranked as predisponent causes. It is commonly preceded by heaviness and pulsation in the part. — owing to the afflux of blood and consequent hyperæmia, — and by coldness of the extremities. The blood, evacuated, is generally of a florid red. In such active hemorrhages, the great indications of treatment will be, to diminish plethora where it exists, and to lessen the heart's action. Bleeding, purgatives, and cold, will be the chief agents.

Passive Hemorrhage, Hæmorrhag'ia pass'iva seu veno'sa, Profu'sio, P. hæmorrhag'ica, occurs in those of weak constitution; or who have been debilitated by protracted disease, poor diet, long watching, excessive evacuations, &c.

The direct causes may be:—previous active hemorrhage; scorbutus, or any thing capable of inducing atony or asthenic hyperæmia of the small vessels. These hemorrhages are not preceded by excitement or by any signs of local determination. They are usually accompanied by paleness of the countenance; feeble pulse; fainting, &c. The indications of treatment will be:—to restore the action of the small vessels and the general tone of the system: hence the utility of styptics and cold externally; and of tonics and astringents, creasote, mineral acids, &c., internally. Hemorrhage also occurs from mechanical hyperæmia, as when hæmoptysis is produced by tubercles in the lungs; hæmatemesis by disease of some of the solid viscera of the abdomen, &c.

In Traumatic Hemorrhages, or those which are the consequences of wounds of arterial or venous trunks, the blood is of a florid red colour, and issues by jets and pulses, if it proceed from an artery; whilst it is of a deeper red, issues slowly and by a continuous flow, if from a vein. If the capillary vessels be alone divided, the blood is merely effused at the surface of the wound. Of the means used for arresting these traumatic hemorrhages, some act mechanically as absorbents, ligature, and compression; others chemically, as fire, caustics, creasote, astringents, &c.

HÆMORRHOIDAL, Hæmorrhoid'al, Hæmorrhoid'al'is, Hæmorrhoid'ens. Relating to hemorrhoids; as hæmorrhoidal flux, hæmorrhoidal tumours, &c.

HÆMORRHOIDAL ARTERIES have been distinguished into superior, middle, and inferior. 1. The first is the termination of the inferior mesenteric artery, which assumes the name superior hæmorrhoidal, when it reaches the upper and posterior part of the rectum. 2. The middle hæmorrhoidal is furnished by the hypogastric or internal pudic. It ramifies on the inferior and anterior part of the rectum. 3. The inferior hæmor- rhoidal arteries are branches of the internal pudic, furnished to the inferior part of the rectum and to the muscles of the anus.

HÆMORRHOIDAL NERVES. These emanate from the sciatic and hypogastric plexuses; and cover the rectum with their numerous filaments.

HÆMORRHOIDAL VEINS follow the same distribution, and generally empty themselves into the lesser mesenteric. Some of them assist in the formation of the hypogastric vein.

HÆMORRHOIDAL VESSELS, Vasa sed'lia, are those vessels which are distributed to the rectum—the seat of hemorrhoids.

HÆMORRHOIDALES NODI, Hæmorrhoids.

HÆMORRHÔIDROSIS, from αιμορροϊς, 'hemorrhoids,' and ιδρωσις, 'sweating.' Sweating of hæmorrhoidal blood. [?]
—Bock.

HÆMORRHOIS, Aïmor'rhoï's. Asclepias'mus, from hæma, and rho, 'I flow.' Aïmor'rhoï's, Proct'ica Maris'ca, Maris'ca, Proct'al'gia Hæmorrhoid'al'is, Morbus Hæmorrhoidalis, Piles, Em'erods, (F.) Hêmorrhôides. The essential symptoms of this affection are:—Livid and painful tubercles or excrescences, (Hæmorrhoid'al Tumours), usually attended with a discharge of mucus or blood, (Hæmorrhoid'al flux, Proctorrhæ'a, Hæmoproct'ia, Hæmorrhæ'a vasorum hæmorrhoid'alium, (F.) Hêmaproct'ie.) The most common causes of piles are a sedentary life; accumulation of fæces in the rectum; violent efforts at stool; pregnancy, &c. The precursory symptoms are:—pains in the loins; stupor of the lower limbs; and uneasiness in the abdomen and rectum, with more or less gastric, cerebral, and indeed general disorder;—constituting the Diathesis Hæmorrhoid'al'is, Motus seu Turba Hæmorrhoid'al'is, and Molimen Hæmorrhoid'al'is, of most of the writers of Continental Europe. To these symptoms follow one or more round, smooth, renitent, painful, pulsating, and erectile tumours, around the margin of the anus, or within the anus; some pouring out blood occasionally. After having remained, for a time, tense and painful, they gradually shrink and disappear. The chief symptoms, occasioned by hæmorrhoidal tumours, when much inflamed, are:—constant pain, liable, however, to exacerbations, and to become augmented by the least pressure, or by the passage of the fæces, and obliging the patient to preserve the horizontal posture.

Hæmorrhoids have generally been distinguished into—Hæmorrhoides Fluen'tes seu Marisco'sæ, Proct'ica Maris'ca cruen'ta, Bleeding or Open Piles; and into H. non fluen'tes, Proct'ica Maris'ca cæca, Hæmorrhoid'es cæcæ seu furen'tes, Hæmorrhoid'al'es nodi, Shut or blind piles. They have, also, been divided into internal or occult, and external, according to their situation; and into accidental or constitutional.

Hæmorrhoidal Tumours are extremely troublesome, by their disposition to frequent recurrence; and they are apt to induce fistula; otherwise, they are devoid of danger. When anatomically examined, they are found not to consist in a varicose dilatation of the veins of the rectum; but to be formed of a very close, spongy, texture; similar to that which surrounds the orifice of the vagina; and to be erectile, like it. They are surrounded by a delicate membrane, and have no internal cavity. The treatment, in mild cases of hæmorrhoidal tumours, is simple. Rest; the horizontal posture; the use of mild laxatives, as sulphur, castor oil, and emollient glysters, will be sufficient. If they be much inflamed, leeches may be applied; and warm cataplasms or cold lotions, according to circumstances, be prescribed, with abstinence, and cooling drinks. Afterwards, an ointment, composed of powdered galls and opium, may afford relief. It is in the relaxed kind, that such ointment, and the internal use of Ward's Paste, can alone be expected to afford much benefit. If, after repeated attacks, the tumours remain hard and painful, and threaten fistula, they may be removed.

By Hæmorrhoidal Flux, Fluxus hæmorrhoidalis, Proctorrhag'ia, is meant the hæmorrhage which takes place from the rectum, owing to hæmorrhoids. It is a common affection. The quantity of blood discharged is various: at times, it is very trifling; at others, sufficient to induce great debility, and even death. It is announced and accompanied by the same symptoms as precede and attend hæmorrhoidal tumours. Like other hæmorrhages it may be active or passive; accidental or constitutional. The prognosis is rarely unfavourable. The affection may, almost always, be relieved by properly adapted means. These resemble such as are necessary in hæmorrhages in general. Perfect quietude,—mental and corporeal; light diet; cooling drinks; bleeding if the symptoms indicate it; astringents, (if the disease be protracted and passive,) such as the Tinctura Ferri Chloridi; aspersions of cold water on the anus: astringent injections; plugging and compression. Such will be the principal remedial agents. When the hæmorrhage has become habitual, or is vicarious, some caution may be required in checking it; and, if inconvenience arise from a sudden suppression, its return may be solicited by the semicupium, sitting over warm water, aloetic purgatives, glysters, irritating suppositories, &c.; or leeches may be applied to the anus.

To the internal bleeding pile, a soft, red, strawberry-like elevation of the mucous membrane, Dr. Houston, of Dublin, gives the name vascular tumour. For its removal he recommends the application of nitric acid, so as to produce sloughing of its surface.

Some authors have described a species of Leucorrhœa Analis or whitish discharge from the anus, which often attends ordinary hæmorrhoids. This they have called Proctia maris'ca mucosa, Hæmorrhœis alba, Hæmorrhag'ia mucosa, Leucorrhœis, &c. It requires no special mention.

The term Hæmorrhoid is applied at times to varicose veins developed elsewhere, as at the orifice of the uterus. See Metæmorrhoides.

HÆMORRHOIS AB EXANIÁ, Proctocœle—h. Proccedens, Proctocœle.

HÆMORRHOÏSCHESIS, from ἡμorrhοῖς, hæmorrhôis, 'I flow,' and ἰσχευω, 'I restrain.' Reten'tio fluxus hæmorrhoidalis. Suppression or retention of the hæmorrhoidal flux.

HÆMORRHOPHÆ'SIS, Absorp'tio sang'uinis, from ἡμα, and ρῶφω, 'I sip up.' Absorption of blood.

HÆMORRHOPHILIA, Hæmatophilia.

HÆMORRHOSCOPIA, Hæmatoscopia.

HÆMORRHYSIS, Hæmorrhagia.

HÆMOSCHEOCELE, Hæmatoscheocele.

HÆMOSCOPIA, Hæmatoscopia.

HÆMOSPASIA, see Hæmospasie.

HÆMOSPAS'TIC, (F.) Hémospasique, from hæma, and σπασω, 'I draw.' An agent which draws or attracts blood to a part; as a cupping-glass. The operation is termed Hæmospasia, (F.) Hémospasie. It is generally applied to a process by which the air is exhausted over a considerable surface, as over one or more of the extremities, by an appropriate pneumatic apparatus.

HÆMOSTA'SIA, Hæmostasis, Epid'csis, Sou'guinis stagnat'io, (F.) Hémostasie, from hæma, and στασις, 'stagnation.' Stagnation of blood. This name has, also, been given to any operation, the object of which is to arrest the flow of blood.

HÆMOSTATIC, PAGLIARI'S, Pagliari's Styptic, (F.) Eau de Pagliari. A styptic liquor, said to be of great power, discovered by M. Pagliari, a pharmacien at Rome. It is composed as follows:—Eight ounces of tincture of benzoin, one pound of alum, and ten pounds of water are boiled together for six hours in a glazed earthen vessel, the vaporized water being constantly replaced by hot water, so as not to interrupt the ebullition, and the resinous mass being kept stirred round. The fluid is then filtered, and kept in stoppered bottles. A drop of the fluid, poured into a glass containing human blood, produces an instantaneous magma.

HÆMOSTATICS, Hæmatostatica.

HÆMOTELANGIOSIS, Telangiectasia.

HÆMOTEXIA, Hæmateclysis.

HÆMOTEXIS, Hæmateclysis.

HÆMOTHORAX, Hæmatborax.

HÆMOTISMUS, Hæmoptysis.

HÆMOT'ROPHY, Hæmotroph'ia; from hæma, and τροφή, 'nourishment.' Excess of sanguineous nourishment.—Prout.

HÆMURIA, Hæmaturia.

HÆMURESIS, Hæmaturia.

HÆMYDOR, Serum of the blood.

HÆMYDRIA, Hydroæmia.

HÆREDITARIUS, Hereditary.

HÆSITATIO, Balbuties.

HÆVEA GUIANENSIS, see Cautchouc.

HAG, Abdomen.

HAGARD, Haggard.

HAGBERRY, Prunus padus.

HAGE'NIA ABYSSIN'ICA, Bray'era anthelmintica, Bank'sia Abyssin'ica. An Abyssinian tree; Order, Rosacæ; Sexual System, Icosandria Digynia, which the natives plant round their habitations, as an ornament. The infusion or decoction of its flowers, Flores cosso, is employed by them as an anthelmintic, especially in cases of tape-worm. It is called, there, Cusso or Covosso, Kosso, Kouosso, Kooso, Kwoso, Cotz, Cabotz, and Habbi.

HAGGARD, (F.) Hagard. The French use the term Air hagard, Ceil hagard, 'Haggard air,' 'Haggard eye,' for a physiognomy, in which there is at once an expression of madness and terror.

HAGIOSPERMUM, Artemisia santonica.

HAGIOXYLUM, Guaiaicum.

HAIHNNANNISM, Homœopathy.

HAIL, Chalaza.

HAIR, Sax. hærp, Crinis, Pilus, Thrix, Pile, (F.) Poil. A conical, corneous substance, the free portion or shaft, scapus, of which issues to a greater or less distance from the skin, to the tissue of which it adheres by a bulb, Bulbus pili, seated in a hair follicle—folliculus pili—made by an inversion of the integument, the epidermis of which forms a "root sheath," vagina pili. At the base of the hair follicle, there is a small papilla, well supplied with bloodvessels and nerves, Papilla pili; at times called, but improperly, Pulpa seu Blastema pili. The hair receives various names in different parts—as Beard, Cilia, Eye brows, Hair of the head, (Capilli), &c.

HAIR DYE, TWIGGS'S. A preparation much used to give colour to the hair. It may be formed of precipitated sulphur and acetate of lead, each ℥j; rose water, ℥iv; triturated together in a mortar. It should be applied twice a day, until the desired effect is produced.

HAIR, FALLING OFF OF THE, Alopecia.
 HAIR FOLLICLE, see Hair.
 HAIR, MATTED, Plica—h. Plaited, Plica—h. Trichomatose, Plica—h. Worm, Seta equina, see Ectozoa—h. Worm, muscular, Dracunculus.
 HAIRY, Pileous. Also, covered with hair.
 HAKE, see Oleum jecoris aselli.
 HAL, Salt.
 HALA'TION, Hala'tium; diminutive of 'als, 'salt.' A pungent remedy, with the ancients, which contained salts.
 HALCHEMIA. The alchemists so called the art of fusing salts: from 'als, 'salt,' and χεω, 'I pour out.'—Libavius.
 HALCYON, Aleyon.
 HALCYONUM ROTUNDUM, Pila marina.
 HALE, Ephelides.
 HALEINE, Breath—h. Courte, Dyspnoea.
 HALELÆON, Halelæum, from 'als, 'salt,' and ελαιον, 'oil.' Oleum Sali mixtum. A mixture of oil and salt, for removing swellings of the joints.—Galen.

HALÉTÉRATION, Alteration.
 HALF-CASTE, Half-Cast, see Caste. A term applied, in India, to the offspring of a Hindoo and a European. Since, extended to the offspring of mixed races. The subjoined list from Tschudi's Travels in Peru, 1838—1842, shows the parentage of the different varieties of half-casts, and also the proper designations of the latter, as observed in South America.

PARENTS.	CHILDREN.
White Father and Negro Mother,	Mulatto.
White Father and Indian Mother,	Meztizo.
Indian Father and Negro Mother,	Chino.
White Father and Mulatta Mother,	Quarteron.
White Father and Meztiza Mother	{ Creole, (only distinguished from the white by a pale brownish complexion.)
White Father and China Mother,	{ Chino-blanco.
White Father and Cuarterona Mother.....	{ Quintero.
White Father and Quintera Mother.....	{ White.
Negro Father and Mulatta Mother,	Zambo-negro.
Negro Father and Meztiza Mother,	Mulatto oscuro.
Negro Father and China Mother,	Zambo chino.
Negro Father and Zamba Mother,	{ Zambo-negro (perfectly black.)
Negro Father and Cuarterona or Quintera Mother.....	{ Mulatto (rather dark.)
Indian Father and Mulatta Mother.....	{ China-oseuro.
Indian Father and Meztiza Mother.....	{ Mestizo-claro (frequently very beautiful.)
Indian Father and China Mother,	{ Chino-cholo.
Indian Father and Zamba Mother.....	{ Zambo-claro.
Indian Father with China-chola Mother.....	{ Indian (with rather short frizzy hair.)
Indian Father and Cuarterona or Quintera Mother.....	{ Meztizo (rather brown.)
Mulatto Father and Zamba Mother.....	{ Zambo (a miserable race.)
Mulatto Father and Meztiza Mother.....	{ Chino (of rather clear complexion.)
Mulatto Father and China Mother,	{ Chino (rather dark.)

See Mulatto.

HALICA, Alica.
 HALICACALUM, Physalis.
 HALICES, Pandiculation.
 HALDRYS VESICULOSA, Fucus vesiculosus.
 HALINA'TRUM, Halini'trum, Haloni'trum; from 'als, 'salt,' and natrum or natron. A name given by the ancients to subcarbonate of soda, containing a little subcarbonate of ammonia, which is found, ready-formed, on the plaster of damp walls, in places inhabited by man or animals. Also, Potassæ nitras.

HALINITRUM, Halinatrum.
 HALINUS, Saline.
 HALITUOUS, Halitu'sus, from holitus, 'vapour.' (F.) Habituëur. The skin is said to be halitueuse, when covered with a gentle moisture. The vapour, exhaled in all the cavities of the body, so long as the blood is warm, is called Hal'itus. The odorous vapour, exhaled by the blood itself whilst warm, is called Hal'itus San'guinis.

HALITUS, Breath—h. Oris Fœtidus, Breath, offensive—h. Sanguinis, Gaz sanguinis. See Halituous.

HALL, MINERAL WATERS OF. The springs of Hall, in Upper Austria, contain iodine.
 HALLUCINATIO HYPOCHONDRIASIS, Hypochondriasis—h. Vertigo, Vertigo.

HALLUCINATION, Hallucina'tio, Hallucina'tio, Falla'cia, Illu'sio, I. sensûs, Socor'dia, Alu'sia, Allucina'tio, Parora'sis, Somnia'tio in statu vig'ili, Ido'lum, Waking dream, Phantasm, from allucinari or hallucinari, allucinatus, 'to be deceived.' A morbid error in one or more of the senses. Perception of objects, which do not in fact exert any impression on the external senses. Hallucination or delusion almost always, if not always, depends on disorder of the brain, but is not an index of insanity, unless the patient believes in the existence of the subject of the hallucination.

HALLUS, Pollex pedis.
 HALLUX, Pollex pedis.
 HALME, Muria.
 HALMYRIS, see Muria.
 HALMYRO'DES, Salsugino'sus, Salsu'ginous, from 'αλμυρις, ('αμρη, 'sea-water,' 'als, 'salt,') 'a salt liquor,' saltish. An epithet given to any affection, in which the heat feels pungent under the finger of the physician.—Hippocrates.
 HALMYRUS, Saline.
 HALO, Areola.

HALO SIGNATUS. The impression made by the ciliary processes on the anterior surface of the vitreous humour. So called from its consisting of a circle of indentations.—Sir C. Bell. Called by Haller, Striæ retinæ subjectæ ligament'io ciliar'i; by Winslow, Sulci ciliar'es.

HALODERÆ'UM, from 'als, 'salt,' and δεραιον, 'a collar,' (δερη, 'neck,') Colla'rium salinum. A collar of salt applied to the neck, as in cases of erup.

HALOGENE, Chlorine.
 HALOIDUM OXYGENATUM, Potassæ murias hyperoxygenatus.

HALONIITIS, Induration of the cellular tissue.

HALONITRUM, Halinatrum.
 HALOPE'GÆ, from 'als, 'alos, 'salt,' and πηγη, 'a spring.' Mineral waters whose chief ingredient is common salt—chloride of sodium.
 HALOS, Areola.

HALOTYLÆ, Cul'eita sali'na, from 'als, 'salt,' and τυλη, 'a bolster.' A bolster or pillow of salt, recommended in erup.

HALSBANE, Clavicle.
 HALS, 'als, 'salt,' hence Halogene, Haloid, &c.
 HALSE, Throat.

HALTE'RES. Pieces of lead held in the hands by the ancients to assist them in leaping.
 HALUCINATIO, Hallucination.

HALYCODES, Saline.

HALYSIS LATA, Bothriocephalus latus—h. Membranacea, Bothriocephalus latus—h. Solium, Tœnia solium.

HAM, Poples.
 HAMAMELIS VIRGINIANA, H. Virgin'ica seu macrophy'lla, Witch hazel, Winter witch hazel, Snapping hazelnut, Winter bloom. Ord. Hamamelaceæ. The bark of this tree, which is a native of the United States, is somewhat bitter and sensibly astringent; but it has not been much used. A cataplasm of the inner rind of the bark is said to have been found efficacious in painful inflammation of the eyes.

HAMARTHROSIS, Holarthrit'is, Catholarthrit'is, Arthrit'is universa'lis, from 'αμα, 'at once,' and ἀρθριτις, 'gout.' Gout in all the joints. Universal gout.

HAMCH, Coxofemoral articulation.

HAMMA, Nodus, 'a tie.' A knot, used for retaining bandages on any part. — Hippocrates. A truss.

HAMMERING, Balbuties.

HAMPSTEAD, MINERAL WATERS OF. These waters, situate in the neighbourhood of London, are a good chalybeate.

HAMSTRING, To, see Hamstrings.

HAMSTRINGS, (F.) Jarretiers. The strings or tendons of the ham.

The HAMSTRING MUSCLES are the biceps femoris, whose tendon forms the outer hamstring; and the semimembranosus, semitendinosus, gracilis and sartorius, whose tendons form the inner hamstring.

'To hamstring' means to cut the strings or tendons of the ham.

HAMULAR PROCESS, see Hamulus.

HAMULUS. Diminutive of hamus, 'a hook.' A hook or crook: Ancis'tron. Also, any hook-like process; as the hamulus or hamular process of the pterygoid process of the sphenoid bone, which projects from the termination of the internal pterygoid plate.

HAMULUS LAMINÆ SPIRALIS, see Lamina spiralis.

HAMUS, see Hamulus.

HANCHE, Haunch.

HANCLETH, Malleolus.

HAND, Manus.

HANDWOMAN, Midwife.

HANDS, DROPPED, Hand-drop, Wrist-drop.

A popular term for the paralysis of the hand, induced by the action of lead.

HANDWRIST, Carpus.

HANGERS, Crusta genu equinæ.

HANGNAIL, (old Eng.) Agnail, (Prov.) Ang-nail, Stepmother's blessing, Wirt-springs, Nail-spring, Nang-nail, (F.) Envie. A portion of epidermis, detached so as to tear the integument in the vicinity of the finger nails.

HANNEBANE, Hyoscyamus.

HAPANTISMUS. Badly formed from πας, or πας, 'all.' Oblitera'tio comple'ta. The matting or growing together of organic parts.

HAPHÉ, 'αφη, 'feeling, touch.' Hence:

HAPHON'OSI, Haphonou'si, from 'αφη, 'the touch.' Morbi tactus. Diseases of the sense of touch.

HAPLOACNE, Aene simplex.

HAPLOPATHIA, from 'απλος, 'simple,' and παθος, 'disease.' Morbus simplex. A simple or uncomplicated affection.

HAPLOTOMIA, Simplex sectio, Incisio simplex, Opera'tio simplex, from 'απλος, 'simple,' and τομη, 'incision.' A simple incision.

HAPSIS, Touch.

HAPTODYSPHOR'IA, Tactus dolorif'icus; from 'αφη, 'touch,' and δυσφορος, 'difficult to be borne.' Painful to the touch.

HAPTOGEN, Haptogenous.

HAPTOGÈNE, Haptogenous.

HAPTOG'ENOUS, Haptog'enus, Hap'togen, (F.) Haptogène, from 'απτω, 'I attach,' and γενναω, 'I engender.' Ascherson calls the pellicle, which forms around fatty matter when albumen is brought in contact with it, Haptogen membrane, (F.) Membrane haptogène.

HAPTOT'ICA, Haptot'icè, from 'αφη, 'touch.' The doctrine of the phenomena of touch.

HARD, (G.) hart, Durus, Scleros, (F.) Dur. That which offers much resistance. In anatomy, the hard parts are those which compose the osseous basis of the body; in other words, the skeleton. See Pulse, hard.

HARD'S FARINACEOUS FOOD, see Farinaceous.

HARDESTIA, Hibernicus lapis.

HARDHACK, Spiræa tomentosa.

HARE-LIP, Lagochi'lus, Lagos'toma, Lagon'tomum, Lagen'tomum, La'bium Lepori'num, Olopho'nia Labii Loba'ta, Lepori'num rostrum, (Sc.) Hareshaw, (Prov.) Hayscale, (F.) Bec de Lièvre. A fissure or perpendicular division of one or both lips. It has been so called, in consequence of the upper lip of the hare being thus divided. Hare-lip is generally congenital; at other times it is accidental, or produced by a wound, the edges of which have not been brought into contact, and have healed separately. It is simple, when there is but one division; double, when there are two; and complicated, when there is, at the same time, a division or cleft of the superior maxillary bone and of the palate — Cleft or fissured palate, Wolf's jaw, Palatum fissum, Rictus lupi'nus; or a projection of the teeth into the separation of the lip.

In the Hare-lip operation, there are two indications to be fulfilled. First, to pare, with the knife or scissors, the edges of the cleft, and, afterwards, to preserve them in contact: in order to cause adhesion. This last object is accomplished by means of pins, passed through the edges of the division; in other words, by the twisted suture. The projecting teeth must, of course, be previously removed. If there be separation of the palate, it will become less and less after the union of the lip, or the operation of staphyloraphy may be performed upon it.

HARE'S EAR, Bupleurum rotundifolium — h. Eye, Lagophthalmia.

HARESHAW, Harelip.

HARGNE, Hernia — h. Anévrysmale, Circumspinalis.

HARICOT, Phaseolus vulgaris — h. Grand de Perou, Jatropha curcas.

HARMALIA, Aliment.

HARMONY, Harmo'nia, Harmos, primarily from αμα, 'I adjust.' Anatomists have called Suture by Harmony, or simply Harmony, False or superficial suture, Sutu'ra os'sium spu'ria, Compa'ges os'sium per lin'eam simp'licem, an immovable articulation, in which the depressions and eminences, presented by the bony surfaces, are but slightly marked; so that it might be presumed that the junction of the bones took place by simple apposition of their surfaces. An instance of harmony occurs in the union of the superior maxillary bones with each other.

HARMUS, Articulation, Harmony.

HARNPAN, Cranium.

HARRODSBURG SPRINGS, see Kentucky, Mineral Waters of.

HAR'ROWGATE, MINERAL WATERS OF. The villages of High and Low Harrowgate are situate in the centre of the county of York, near Knaresborough, twenty miles from York, and fifteen from Leeds. Here are several valuable sulphurous and chalybeate springs. The sulphureous springs contain chloride of sodium, chloride of calcium, chloride of magnesium, bicarbonate of soda, sulphohydric acid, carbonic acid, carburetted hydrogen, and azote. The chalybeate springs contain protoxide of iron, chloride of sodium, sulphate of soda, chloride of calcium, chloride of magnesium, carbonic acid, azote, and oxygen. For the former, Harrowgate is celebrated and frequented.

HARROWGATE SALTS, ARTIFICIAL, are much employed, and not unfrequently by those who drink the genuine water, for the purpose of increasing its aperient power. They may be made as follows:—Sulph. Potass. cum Sulph. ℥vj; Potass. bitart. ℥j; Magnes. Sulph. in pulv. ℥vj. M. The usual dose is a teaspoonful, in a small tumblerful of tepid water, early in the morning.

HARROWGATE WATER, ARTIFICIAL, may be formed of common salt, ℥v; water, Oijj; impregnated with the gas from sulphuret of potass. and sulphuric acid, āā ℥iv. The following form has also been recommended. R. Sulphat. Potass. cum sulph. (Ph. Ed.) ℥j; Potass. bitart. ℥ss; Magnes. sulphat. ℥vj; Aquæ destillat. Oij. One-half to be taken for a dose.

HARTFELL, MINERAL WATERS OF. Hartfell Spa is about five miles from Moffat, in Scotland. The water is a chalybeate, and is much used.

HARTSHORN, Cervus, Cornu cervi, Liquor cornu cervi—h. Red, Spiritus lavandulæ compositus—h. and Oil, Linimentum ammoniæ carbonatis.

HARTS' TONGUE, Asplenium scolopendrium. HARTS' TRUFFLES, Elaphomyces granulatus. HARTWORT OF MARSEILLES, Seseli tortuosum.

HASCHE, Pain.

HASCHISCH, see Bangué.

HASCHISCHLNE, see Bangué.

HASTA, Penis—h. Nuptialis, Penis—h. Virilis, Penis.

HASTELLA, Splint.

HASTINGS, CLIMATE OF. This place has the reputation of being one of the mildest and most sheltered winter residences on the south coast of England. Owing to its low situation, and the height of the neighbouring cliffs, it is protected in a great degree from all northerly winds; and hence is found a favourable residence generally for invalids labouring under diseases of the chest.

HASTULA REGIS, Asphodelus ramosus.

HATFIELD'S TINCTURE, see Tinctura Guaiaci ammoniata.

HATTREL, Abscess.

HAUNCH, Coxa, Cozen'dix, of the Latins; αχχη, or ισχίον, of the Greeks; Ancha, Ischion, Oshphys, Hip, Cossa, (Prov.) Hubbon, Shoup, (F.) Haiche. The region of the trunk which is formed by the lateral parts of the pelvis and the hip-joint, including the soft parts. In women, on account of the greater width of the pelvis, the haunches are more marked and prominent than in men.

HAUSE, Collum, Throat.

HAUSTEL/LATE, Haustella'tus, from haurio, haustum, 'I drink up.' An epithet for the structure of mouth, which is adapted for drinking or pumping up liquids. Insects, which possess that kind of mouth, are so named. Ehrenberg refers the fancied spermatozoon to the haustellate entozoa.

HAUSTRA COLLI, see Colon.

HAUSTUS, Po'tio, Potiu'cula. A Draught. A liquid medicine, which can be taken at a draught.

HAUSTUS NIGER, see Infusum sennæ.

HAUT MAL, Epilepsy.

HAVAN'A or HAVAN'NAH, CLIMATE OF. The climate of Cuba is often selected for the pthysical invalid during the winter months, and so far as regards elevation and comparative equality of temperature, it is more favourable for those of weak lungs than that of the United States. The mean annual temperature is high (78°), but the difference between the mean temperature of the warmest and coldest months is twice as great as at Madeira.

HAVERSIAN CANALS, Canals, nutritive, of Bones.

HAW, Hungry.

HAW, BLACK, Viburnum prunifolium.

HAWKNUT, Bunium bulbocastanum.

HAWKWEED, VEINY, Hieracium venosum.

HAWSE, Throat.

HAWTHORN, WHITE, Mespilus oxyacantha.

HAY ASTHMA, Fever, Hay.

HAY, CAMEL'S, Juncus odoratus.

HAYRIFFF, Galium aparine.

HAYSCALE, Harelip.

HAZEL, BEAKED, Corylus rostrata.

HAZEL CROTTLES, Lichen pulmonarius—h. Nut, snapping, Hamamelis Virginiana—h. Nut tree, Corylus avellana.

HAZEL, WITCH, Hamamelis Virginiana, Serbus acuparia.

HAZELRAW, Lichen pulmonarius.

HEAD, Sax. heafod, heaf, heaved; the past participle of hearan, 'to heave up.' Caput, Cephalè, Cy'bè, Poll, (Prov.) Hede, Pov, Scop, (F.) Tête. The head forms the upper extremity of the body, and tops the skeleton. It consists of the cranium and face. The first, which comprises all the superior and posterior part, has the encephalon in its cavity: the latter forms only the anterior part, and serves as the receptacle for the greater part of the organs of the senses.

HEAD, WATER IN THE, Hydrocephalus.

HEAD-ACHE, Cephalæa, Cephalalgia—h. Ache, intermittent, Cephalalgia periodica—h. Ache, sick, Cephalæa spasmodica.

HEADSWOMAN, Midwife.

HEADY, same etymon as Head. (F.) Capiteux. That which inebriates readily. An epithet, applied to wines which possess this quality.

HEAL, Sanitas.

HEAL-ALL, Collinsonia Canadensis, Prunella vulgaris, Scrophularia nodosa.

HEALING, Curative—h. Art, Medicine.

HEALTH, Sanitas.

HEALTHY, Salutory.

HEARING, HARDNESS OF, Deafness—h. Perverse, Paracausis perversa.

HEART, Sax. heort, Germ. Herz, Cor, Cœur, Cer, Cav'dia, καρ, κηρ, καρδια, (F.) Cœur. An azygous muscle, of an irregularly pyramidal shape; situate obliquely and a little to the left side, in the chest;—resting on the diaphragm by one of its surfaces:—suspended by its base from the great vessels; free and movable in the rest of its extent, and surrounded by the pericardium. The right side of the body of the heart is thin and sharp, and is called Margo acutus: the left is thick and round, and termed Margo obtusus. It is hollow within, and contains four cavities; two of which, with thinner and less fleshy walls, receive the blood from the lungs and the rest of the body, and pour it into two others, with thick and very fleshy parietes, which send it to the lungs and to every part of the body. Of these cavities, the former are called auricles, the latter ventricles. The right auricle and right ventricle form the Pulmonic or right or anterior heart, Cor venosum seu pulmonale, (F.) Cœur du poumon, C. du sang noir, C. droit, C. antérieur: and the left auricle and ventricle, the systemic, corporeal, left, or aortic heart, Cor arteriosum seu aorticum, (F.) Cœur du corps, C. gauche, C. aortique ou C. rouge. In the adult, these are totally distinct from each other, being separated by a partition:—the septum cordis. Into the right auricle, the venæ cavæ,—superior and inferior,—and the coronary vein, open. The pulmonary artery arises from the right ventricle; the four pulmo-

The mean weight of the heart, in the adult, from the twenty-fifth to the sixtieth year, is, according to Bouillaud, from eight to nine ounces. The dimensions, according to Lobstein and Bouillaud, are as follows:—Length, from base to apex, five inches six lines; breadth, at the base, three inches; thickness of the walls of the left ventricle, seven lines; at a finger's breadth above the apex, four lines; thickness of the walls of the right ventricle, two and a quarter lines; at the apex, half a line; thickness of right auricle, one line; of the left auricle, half a line. The heart is covered, externally, by a very thin, membranous reflection from the pericardium. The muscular structure of which it is constituted is much thicker in the parietes of the ventricle than in those of the auricles. Its cavities are lined by a very delicate membrane, the endocardium, which is continuous with the inner membrane of the arteries, as regards the left cavities, and with that of the veins, as regards the right. Its arteries—the coronary—arise from the commencement of the aorta. Its nerves proceed, chiefly, from the pneumogastric and the cervical ganglions of the great sympathetic. The heart is the great agent in the circulation. By its contraction, the blood is sent over every part of the body. Its action does not seem to be directly owing to nervous influence received from the brain or spinal marrow, or from both. The circulation may, indeed, be kept up, for some time, if both brain and spinal marrow be destroyed.

When the ear is applied to the chest, a dull, lengthened sound is heard, which is synchronous with the arterial pulse. This is instantly succeeded by a sharp, quick sound, like that of the valve of a bellows or the lapping of a dog, and this is followed by a period of repose. The first sound appears to be mainly produced by the contraction of the ventricles; the second, by the reflux of the blood against the semilunar valves. These are what are called the Sounds of the Heart, (F.) Bruits du Cœur. Dr. C. J. B. Williams thinks that the word lub-dup conveys a notion of the two sounds. The Beating or Impulse of the heart, Heart-stroke, Pulsus seu Ictus cordis, (F.) Impulsion du Cœur, against the parietes of the chest, is mainly caused, perhaps, by the systole of the heart, which tends to project it forwards. It is doubted, however, by some, whether the impulse be produced by the dilatation or the contraction of the ventricles.

The following table exhibits the different actions of the heart, and their coincidence with its sounds and impulse. It presumes, that the period from the commencement of one pulsation to that of another is divided into eight parts; and if the case of a person, whose pulse beats sixty times in a minute, be taken, each of these parts will represent the eighth of a second.

EIGHTHS OF A SECOND.

Last part of the pause.....1...	Auricles contracting; ventricles distended.
First sound and impulse..4...	Ventricles contracting; auricles dilating.
Second sound.....2...	Ventricles dilating; auricles dilating.
Pause.....1...	Ventricles dilating; auricles distended.

The heart is subject to different organic diseases; the chief of which are aneurism, contraction of the Apertures, and rupture of its parietes.

HEART, AT'ROPHY OF THE, Atroph'ia seu Ari- du'ra seu Phthisis Cordis, Cardi-atroph'ia, Acardi-atroph'ia. A condition of the organ in which there is diminution in the thickness of the parietes of the whole organ.

HEART, BEATING OF THE, see Heart—h. Dilatation of the, see Aneurism—h. Displacement of the, Ectopia Cordis—h. Fatty, Steatosis cordis.

HEART, HY'PERTROPHY OF THE, Hypertroph'ia Cordis, Hypercor'dia, Hypersarco'sis Cordis, Hyperecardi-atroph'ia, Cardiaux'z, Aneurys'ma cordis acti'vum (Corvisart), Cor bovi'num seu taur'ium, Enor'mitas cordis, (F.) Hypertrophie du Cœur. Supernutrition of the muscular parietes of the heart, which are thicker than usual; the cavities being generally diminished. The physical signs which indicate it are the following. In cases of long standing, the præcordial region is generally prominent; the pulsations of the heart are visible over a greater extent than natural; and a marked vibration is communicated to the hand when placed on the cardiac region. The dull sound on percussion is more extensive than natural; and on auscultation there is a permanent increase of the force and extent of the heart's action; there is no increase, however, of frequency, and the rhythm is regular. The pulse is generally strong, full, and hard.

HEART, HYPERTROPHY WITH DILATATION OF THE, Active an'eurism, Eccentric hyp'trophy. In this affection, the pulsations can be seen and felt over a larger space, and the apex is more to the left and lower down than natural. The impulse is less steady, but at times more violent than that which accompanies simple hypertrophy. Percussion gives more distinct evidence of the enlargement, the sound being more extensively dull. On auscultation, the impulse is often violent, but irregular: in extreme cases, it produces the sensation of a large mass of flesh rolling or revolving beneath the ear. The pulse is strong, full, and vibratory. The shock of the heart's action is often transmitted to the whole person, and to the bed on which the patient is lying.

HEART, CONCENTRIC HYPERTROPHY OF THE, (F.) Hypertrophie concentrique, Hypertrophie centripète du Cœur, Retrait ventriculaire, Cardi-artie, is when the parietes augment at the expense of the cavities.

HEART, IMPULSE OF THE, see Heart—h. Neuralgia of the, Angina Pectoris—h. Rupture of the, Cardiorrhæxis—h. Sounds of the, see Heart—h. Stroke, see Heart.

HEART'S EASE, Polygonum persicaria, Viola tricolor.

HEARTS, LYMPH, Lymphatic hearts—h. Lymphatic, Lymphatic hearts.

HEARTAXES, Ardor ventriculi.

HEARTBURN, Ardor ventriculi, Cardialgia.

HEARTSCALD, Ardor ventriculi.

HEART-SCIRTS, Diaphragm.

HEARTWORT, Laserpitium album.

HEAT, past participle of Sax. hætan, 'to make warm.' Calor, Therma, ἄσση. (F.) Chaleur.

The material cause, which produces the sensation—or the particular sensation itself—produced by a body of an elevated temperature, on our organs, especially on the organs of touch. Modern chymists have given the name Caloric to the principle, whatever may be its nature, which is the cause of heat. When we touch a body of a temperature superior to our own, a portion of caloric passes from the body to the hand, and produces the sensation of heat. If, on the contrary, we touch a body of a temperature inferior to our own, we communicate a portion of our caloric to it, and experience the sensation of cold. Our own sensations are but imperfect indexes of temperature. Two men meeting at the middle of a mountain,—the one ascending, the other descending, — will experience different sensations. The one ascending, passes from a warmer to a colder atmosphere; — the one descending from a colder to a warmer.

The chief instrument for measuring heat, used in medicine, is the thermometer. Of this there are three kinds: — that of Fahrenheit, that of Réaumur, and that of Celsius or the Centigrade. The following Table exhibits the correspondence of these different thermometric scales.

To reduce Centigrade degrees to those of Fahrenheit, multiply by 9, divide by 5, and add 32: thus, 40° Cent. $\times 9 \div 5 + 32 = 104^\circ$ Fahr. To reduce Fahrenheit's degrees to those of Centigrade, subtract 32, multiply by 5, and divide by 9: thus,

104° Fahr. — $32 \times 5 \div 9 = 40^\circ$ Cent. To reduce Réaumur's degrees to those of Fahrenheit, multiply by 9, divide by 4, and add 32: thus, 32° Réaumur. $\times 9 \div 4 + 32 = 104^\circ$ Fahr. To reduce Fahrenheit's degrees to those of Réaumur, subtract

32, multiply by 4, and divide by 9: thus, 104° Fahr. — $32 \times 4 \div 9 = 32$ Réaumur. To reduce Réaumur's degrees to those of Centigrade, multiply by 5, and divide by 4: thus 32° Réaumur. $\times 5 \div 4 = 40^{\circ}$ Cent.; and, lastly, to reduce Centigrade degrees to those of Réaumur, multiply by 4, and divide by 5: thus, 40° Cent. $\times 4 \div 5 = 32^{\circ}$ Réaumur.

Thermometers.

The human body can bear a high degree of heat diffused in the atmosphere. There are cases on record, where air of 400° and upwards, of Fahrenheit's scale, has been breathed with impunity for a short time. It can likewise withstand very severe cold. In the expedition of Capt. Back to the Arctic regions, the thermometer was as low as -70° of Fabr., and Sir George Simpson affirms, that it has fallen in Siberia to -83° , or 115° below the freezing point. Dr. Kane, in the Arctic regions, in 1853-54, observed the range of eleven spirit thermometers, selected as standards, to vary from -60° to -75° . The mean annual temperature was $5^{\circ}.2$ —the lowest ever registered.

Excessive heat disposes the body to gastric and intestinal diseases, and particularly to inflammation and enlargement of the liver; hence, the frequency of such affections within the torrid zone. Heat is often used therapeutically: the actual cauter, at a white heat, disorganizes the parts to which it is applied: a lesser degree occasions violent inflammation. Heat higher than that of the human body is excitant; of a lower degree, sedative. Excessive cold acts as a powerful sedative—inducing sleep, the tendency to which, after long exposure, becomes irresistible. See Cold. Many of the topical applications— as cataplasms—act wholly by virtue of their warmth and moisture.

HEAT, Ardor venereus, Pruritus, (F.) Chaleurs, Chaleurs des Animaux, Rut, is the periodical sexual desire experienced by animals.—Estruation. It is supposed by some to be owing to the periodical maturation and discharge of ova.—Ovulation.

HEAT, ACRID, see Acrid—h. Animal, see Animal Heat.

HEAT APOPLEXY, see Coup-de-soleil.

HEAT, INTERNAL, (F.) Chaleur interne, is a sensation of heat felt by the patient, but not sensible to the touch. External heat, (F.) Chaleur extérieure, that which can be felt by others. Heat, Ardor, is called moist, (F.) hâletuse, when accompanied with moisture, like that felt after bathing; dry, (F.) sèche, when the skin has not its ordinary softness. It is called acrid and pungent, (F.) âcre et mordicante, when it conveys a disagreeable tingling to the fingers. The French employ the terms nerveous heat and erratic heat, Chaleur nerveuse and Chaleur erratique, for that which comes by flushes, alternating with chills, and which moves rapidly from one part to another. M. Double has used the term septic heat, (F.) Chaleur septique, for that which produces a pungent sensation on the hand, similar to that of the acrid heat, but milder and more uniform, and which is accompanied with feebleness and frequency of pulse, &c.

HEAT, PRICKLY, Lichen tropicus.

HEATH, COMMON, Erica vulgaris.

HEATHER, Erica vulgaris.

HEATHER-CLU, Malleolus.

HEAUTOPHONICS, see Autophonia.

HEAVINESS, Somnolency.

HEAVING, Vomiturition.

HEAVY, Gravis, (F.) Gravatif, from Sax.

heapan, 'to heave.' An epithet given to any pain which consists in a sensation of weight or heaviness, or is accompanied by such sensation.

HEBDOMADARIA, Octana.

HEBE, ἡβη, Juven'ta, Juven'tas, Juven'tus, Hora. In antiquity, the goddess of puberty.

The word has been employed to designate, 1. The first hair that grows on the pubes, 2. The pubic region, and 3. Puberty.

HEBETES, Adolescens.

HEBETOR, Adolescens.

HEBETUDO ANIMI, Imbecility—h. Dentium, Hæmodia—h. Visus, Amblyopia, Asthenopia, Caligo.

HEBRADENDRON CAMBOGIOIDES, see Cambogia.

HEBREWS, MED'ICINE OF THE. Medicine seems to have been at a very low ebb with the ancient Hebrews. Of anatomy they knew nothing. Their physiology was imperfect and filled with superstitions; and their therapeutics unsatisfactory. Hygiene appears to have been most attended to. Of the other departments of medicine we cannot judge of their knowledge.

HECATOMA PALUSTRIS, Ranunculus sceleratus.

HECATOMPHYLLUM, Rosa centifolia

HECH, Anhelatio.

HECKBERRY, Prunus padus.

HECKTEUS, ἔκτευς. A Greek measure, containing about 72 chopines or pints.

HECTIC FEVER, Febris hectica seu phthisica seu marasmodes seu tabida seu lenta seu amphimer'ina hectica seu amato'ria, Hectico'pyra, Hectico'pyr'etos, Hec'tica, Amphimer'ina hectica, Synteco'pyra, Synteco'py'ra, Marasmo'pyra, Leucopy'ria, Epan'etus hectica, Chloro'sis amato'ria, Ettick, (Sc.) Ethik, Etick, (F.) Fièvre Hectique ou Étique, from ἔξις, 'habit of body;' because in this disease every part of the body is emaciated; or, perhaps, from ἐκτενω, 'I consume,' 'I am exhausted.' The name of a slow, continued, or remittent fever, which generally accompanies the end of organic affections, and has been esteemed idiopathic, although it is probably always symptomatic. It is the fever of irritation and debility; and is characterized by progressive emaciation, frequent pulse, hot skin,—especially of the palms of the hands and soles of the feet,—and, towards the end, colligative sweats and diarrhoea. Being symptomatic, it can only be removed by getting rid of the original affection. This is generally difficult, and almost hopeless in the disease which it most commonly accompanies,—consumption.

HECTICA, Hectic Fever—h. Infantilis, Fever, infantile remittent.

HECTICOPYRA, Hectic fever.

HECTICOPYRETOS, Hectic fever.

HEC'TISIS, (F.) Étisie. Same etymon. The state of those who have hetic fever.

HEC'TOGRAMME, Hectogramma, from ἑκατόν, 'a hundred,' and γράμμα. A measure of 100 grammes, i. e., 3 ounces, 1 drachm, and 44 grains, Troy.

HECTOLITRE. A measure containing 100 litres or 26.42 wine pints.

HECUSIUS, Voluntary.

HEC'DE'OMA, Hedeoma pulegioides, Cumilla pulegioides, Melis'sa pulegioides, Pennyroyal, Tickweed, Stinking Balm, Squawmint. Sex. Syst. Diandria Monogynia; Nat. Ord. Labiatae. From ἡδύς, 'agreeable.' An indigenous plant, common in all parts of the United States, and which, where it is abundant, perfumes the air for a considerable distance. It is employed in the same cases as the mints and the English pennyroyal. In popular practice it is used as an emmenagogue.

The Oleum Hedeomae (Ph. U. S.) or Oil of Pennyroyal is used as a stimulating carminative, dropped on sugar. Dose, 2 to 6 drops.

HEDERA ARBOREA, H. Helix.

HE'DERA HELIX, Hedera arborea, Bacchica, Cissos, κισσός, Cittos, κίττος, Ed'era, Corymbetra, Corymbos, (Sc.) Bindweed, Ivy, (F.) Lierre, L. Commun ou grim pant. Ord. Araliaceae. The taste of ivy leaves is bitter, styptic, and nauseous. They are not used in medicine. According to Haller, they were recommended in Germany against the atrophy of children; and the common people of England sometimes apply them to running sores and to keep issues open. The berries were supposed, by the ancients, to have an emetic and purgative quality; and a watery extract was made from them, called by Quercetanus Extractum purgans. From the stalk of the tree a resinous juice exudes, in warm climates, called Gummi Hed'erae, Ivy Gum, (F.) Gomme de lierre, Résine de lierre. It is possessed of tonic and astringent properties, but is not used.

HE'DERA TERRESTRIS, Glechoma hederacea.

HE'DERULA, Glechoma hederacea.

HEDE, Head.

HEDEVERK, Cephalalgia.

HEDEWARK, Cephalalgia.

HEDISARUM ALHAGI, Agul.

HE'DRA, ἔδρα, ἔδρη, 'a vestige,' 'a seat.' A seat. A fracture of the bones of the cranium, in which the trace of the fracturing instrument is still perceptible. It was, also, used by the ancients, for the anus, the breech, excrement, a privy, a night-chair, and for the bottom of an abscess.

HE'DROCELE, Proctocele.

HE'DYCH'ROUM, from ἡδύς, 'agreeable,' and χρῶμα, 'colour.' A remedy of a pleasant colour. Applied to certain trochs, the chief constituent of which was theriac.

HE'DYPHO'NIA, from ἡδύς, 'sweet,' and φωνή, 'voice.' Sweetness of voice.

HE'DYPNEUS'TUS, Hedyp'nous, from ἡδύς, 'sweet,' and πνεύω, 'I breathe.' Breathing sweetly or softly. Smelling sweetly.

HE'DYPTNOIS TARAXACUM, Leontodon taraxacum.

HE'DYSARUM ALHAGI, Agul.

HE'DYSMA, Condiment.

HEEL, see Calcaneum—h. Clubfoot, see Kyllosis.

HEGH, Anhelatio.

HEIL, Sanitas.

HEL'CENTERITIS, Dothinenteritis.

HEL'CO'C'AC'Ē, Cachelco'ma, from ἑλκος,

'ulcer,' and κακή, 'badness.' A malignant ulcer.

HEL'CODES, Ulcerated, Ulcerous.

HEL'COL'OGY, Helcology, from ἑλκος, 'ulcer,' and λόγος, 'discourse.' The doctrine of, or a treatise on, ulcers.

HEL'COMA, Ulcer.

HEL'COMENTIA, Menelcosis.

HEL'COPIH'THAL'MIA, Ophthalmia ulcero'sa. Ophthalmia with ulceration.

HEL'COPLASTY, Hel'koplasty, El'koplasty, El'eoplasty; from ἑλκος, 'an ulcer,' and πλασσω, 'I form.' An operation which consists in grafting on an ulcer a piece of skin from the opposite limb, or from the limb of another person, when the destruction of skin is too great to permit the healing process.

HEL'COS, from ἑλκος, 'an ulcer.' Hence:

HEL'COSIS, Elcosis, Ulceration—h. Cerebri, Encephalopyosis—h. Laryngis, Phthisis laryngea—h. Pulmonalis, Phthisis pulmonalis—h. Renalis, Nephrelosis—h. Uteri, see Metrophthisis—h. Vesicæ, Cystophthisis.

HEL'COSTAPHYLO'MA, from ἑλκος, 'ulcer,' and σταφυλωμα, 'staphyloma.' Staphyloma ending in ulceration.

HEL'COXERO'SIS, from ἑλκος, 'ulcer,' and ξηρασις, 'dryness.' The drying of an ulcer.

HELCTICA, Epispastics.

HEL'CUS, Ulcer.

HEL'CYD'RION, Helcyd'rion, ἑλκυδριον, Ulcus oculum, a small ulcer, a superficial ulceration of the cornea.—Galen, Paulus, Foësius.

HEL'CYST'ER, ἑλκυστηρ, from ἑλκος, 'I draw.' An iron hook or crochet for extracting the fœtus. See Crochet.

HELENIUM, Inula helenium.

HELENIUM AUTUMNA'LE, False Sunflower, Sneezewort, Sneezeweed, Swamp Sunflower, Yellow star, Ox-eye. Ord. Compositæ. An indigenous herb, with large golden-yellow compound flowers, which appear in August. All its parts are bitter and somewhat acrid, and when snuffed up the nostrils in powder are powerful sternutatories.

HELIAN'THEMUM CANADEN'SĒ, Cistus Canadensis, Frostwort, Frostweed, Frost plant, Rock rose. Ord. Cistaceae. An herbaceous plant, Helianthemum (Ph. U. S.), having large yellow flowers, which grows in all parts of the United States, and flowers, in the Middle States, in June. It has an astringent, slightly aromatic, and bitterish taste. It has been prescribed in scrofula, but probably is nothing more than an aromatic tonic.

HELIAN'THEMUM CORYMBO'SUM, Rock rose, an indigenous plant, is used in the same cases.

HELIASIS, Astrabulismus, Insolation.

HE'LICH'RYSUM NUDIFOLIUM, Caffetea. A South African plant, Nat. Ord. Compositæ, which is demulcent, and, in the form of infusion, is recommended in catarrh, phthisis, and other pulmonary affections.

HE'LICH'RYSUM SERPYLLIFOLIUM, Hottentot's tea, and HE'LICH'RYSUM AURICULA'TUM have similar virtues.

HELICIA, Age.

HEL'ICINE, Helic'inus, Helicoides, Helico'des, from helix, helicis, 'the tendril of the vine.' Resembling in form the tendril of the vine.

HELICINE ARTERIES of the penis, as described by J. Müller, are short vessels given off from the larger branches, as well as from the finest twigs of the artery of the organ: most of those come off at a right angle, and project into the cavity of the spongy substance, either terminating abruptly or swelling out into a club-like process without again subdividing. Almost all these vessels are bent like a horn, so that the end describes half a circle or somewhat more. They have a great resemblance to the tendrils of the vine, whence their name. A minute examination of them, either with the lens or the microscope, shows that, although they at all times project into the venous cavities of the corpora cavernosa, they are not entirely naked, but are covered with a delicate membrane, which, under the microscope, appears granular.

HELICIS MAJOR. A muscle of the ear, which originates from the anterior, acute part of the helix, upon which it ascends and is inserted into the helix. It pulls the part into which it is inserted a little downwards and forwards.

HELICIS MINOR. This muscle originates from the under and fore part of the helix, and is inserted into the helix, near the fissure in the cartilage, opposite the concha. Its use is to contract the fissure.

HELICOIDES, Helicine.

HELICOTREMA, from ἑλιξ, 'helix, cochlea,' and τρομα, 'a foramen.' The hole by which the two seals of the cochlea communicate at the apex.

HELENCEPHALITIS, see Coup de Soleil.

HELIGMUS, Convulsion.

HELIKIA, Age.

HELIONOSIS, Insolation.

HELIOSCIADIUM NODIFLORUM, Sium nodiflorum.

HELIOSIS, Astrabulismus, Insolation.

HELIOTROPE, Heliotropium Europæum.

HELIOTROPIUM, Cichorium intybus.

HELIOTROPIMUM EUROPÆUM, H. erectum seu canescens seu supinum. Verrucaria. The Heliotrope, (F.) Tournesol, Herbe aux ver-rues. Ord. Boraginaceæ. This plant is considered to possess aperient properties; and to be capable of destroying cutaneous excrescences; hence one of its names.

HELIOTROPIMUM INDICUM, an East India plant, naturalized in some of the Western and Southern States, probably has similar virtues.

HELIX, ἑλιξ, Capreolus, from ελεειν, 'to envelop,' 'to roll.' The fold is thus called, which forms the outer circumference or ring of the external ear.

HELIX, Limax.

HELIX POMATIA, (F.) Limaçon, Colimaçon, Escargot. A large kind of snail, transported from the south of Europe to England by Sir Kenelm Digby, for his lady when in a decline. It was considered highly restorative.

HELLA, Incubus.

HELLEBORASTER, Helleborus foetidus—h. Fœtidus, Helleborus foetidus.

HELLEBORE, Dracontium foetidum—h. American, Veratrum viride—h. Black, Helleborus niger—h. Blanc, Veratrum album—h. Green, Helleborus viridis—h. Noir, Helleborus niger—h. Stinking, Helleborus foetidus—h. Swamp, Veratrum viride—h. White, Veratrum album.

HELLEBORIS'MUS, Elleboris'mus. The method of treating disease, amongst the ancients, by hellebore. This comprised not only the choice, preparation, and administration of the medicine, but, likewise, the knowledge and employment of preliminary precautions and remedies proper for aiding its action, and preventing the pernicious effects which it might occasion.

HELLEBORUS, H. niger—h. Albus, Veratrum album—h. Grandiflorus, H. niger—h. Trifolius, Coptis.

HELLEBORUS FŒTIDUS, Helleboraster, Elleboraster, Stinking Hellebore or Bear's foot, Setterwort, (F.) Hellebore ou Ellebore fétide, Pied de Griffon. Ord. Ranunculaceæ. The leaves of this plant are said to be anthelmintic. The smell of the fresh plant is extremely fetid, and the taste bitter and acrid. It usually acts as a cathartic.

HELLEBORUS NIGER, H. grandiflorus, Elleb'orus niger, Melampodi'um, Melanorrh'izum, Ec'tomon, Black Hellebore, Melampode, Christmas Rose, Clove-tongue, (F.) Hellebore noir. The root of this European plant—Helleborus, (Ph. U. S.)—has a disagreeable odour, and bitter, acrid taste. It is possessed of cathartic properties, and has been recommended as an emmenagogue. It has been given in mania, melancholia, dropsy, suppressed menses, &c. Dose, gr. x to ℥j, as a cathartic.

HELLEBORUS VIRIDIS, Green Hellebore. A European plant, naturalized on Long Island, has similar properties to the last.

HELLŒCEBRA, Sedum.

HELLENIA GRANDIFLORA, Costus.

HELMET-FLOWER, YELLOW, Aconitum Anthora.

HELMET POD, Jeffersonia Bartoni.

HELMINS, genitive, Helminthos, plur. Helminthes seu Elminthes, from ἑλμινς, 'a worm.' A worm; an entozoon;—hence:

HELMINTHAGOGUE, Anthelmintic.

HELMINTHI, Worms.

HELMINTHIA, Helminthiasis—h. Alvi, Worms.

HELMINTHIA ERRAT'ICA. Worms, introduced by accident and without finding a proper habitation in the stomach or intestines; producing spasmodic colic, with severe tormina, and occasionally vomiting or ejections of blood; the 12th genus of the order Enterica, class Cœliaca, of Good.

HELMINTHIA PODICIS, Worms.

HELMINTHIASIS, Helminthogen'esis. A generic name for the condition which gives occasion to the presence of intestinal worms. It is, also, called Helminthia, Verminaltio, Morbus verminosus, Status verminosus, Sabur'ra verminosæ, Scolecic'asis, Scolec'es'is, Entozoo'gen'esis, Parasitismus intestinal'is; Worm disease, Inverminu'tion. See Worms.

HELMINTHIC, Anthelmintic.

HELMINTHOCORTUM, Corallina Corsicana.

HELMINTHOCOLICA, Colica verminosa.

HELMINTHOCORTON, Corallina Corsicana.

HELMINTHOGENESIS, Helminthiasis.

HELMINTHOL'OGY, Helmintholog'ia, from helmin, helminthos, and λογος, 'a description.' A treatise on worms.

HELMINTHONCUS, Malis—h. Medinensis, Draunculus.

HELMINTHOPYRA, Helminthopyr'etos, Feb'ris verminos'a, from helmin, helminthos, and πυρ, 'a fever.' Fever occasioned by worms. See Fever, verminous.

HELMINTHOPYRETOS, Helminthopyra.

HELMINTHUS GORDII, Seta equina.

HELODES, Elodes.

HELONIAS DIOICA, Chamælerium luteum—h. Erythroperma, Amianthum muscætoxicum—h. Lutea, Chamælerium luteum—h. Officinalis, see Veratrina.

HELOPYRA, Elodes (febris).

HELOPYRETUS, Elodes (febris).

HELOS, Clavus, Marsh.

HELO'SIS, Helot'is: from ἑλω, 'I turn.' Eversion of the eyelids, and convulsions of the muscles of the eyes. Plica Polonica. Strabismus.

HELŒTIS, Helosis, Plica.

HELUS, Clavus, Helos.

HELVELLA ESCULENTA, Morchella esculenta.

HELXINE, Parietaria.

HEMACHROIN, Hæmatin.

HÉMADYNAMÈTRE, Hæmadynamometer.

HÉMADYNAMIQUE Hæmadynamics.

HÉMAPERITONIRRHAGIE, Hæmaperitonirrhag'ia; from αἷμα, 'blood,' peritonæum, and πηγνυμι, 'I break forth.' Hemorrhage into the peritoneum.

HÉMAPROCTIE, Hæmorrhoids.

HÉMASTATIQUES, Hæmatostatica.

HEMATIDROSE, Sudor cruentus.

HEMATIN, Hæmatin.

HÉMATO-ENCÉPHALIE, Apoplexy.

HEMATOID, Hæmatodes.

HÉMATOÏDINE, Hæmatoidin.

HÉMATOLOGIE, Hæmatology.

HEMATOLOGY, Hæmatology.

HÉMATOMYÉLIE, Hæmorrhagie de la Moëlle Épinière.

HÉMATIONCIE, Hæmatoneus, see Hæmatodes fungus—h. Fonguide, Hæmatodes fungus.

HÉMATOPISIE, Hæmatops.

HEMATORRHACHIS, Apoplexia myelitica.

HEMATOSIN, Hæmatin.

HEMATOSTATICS, Hæmatostatica.

HÉMATOSTATIQUES, Hæmatostatica.

HÉMATOZOAIRES, Hæmatozoa.

HÉMENDOCARDE, Hæmendocardium.

HEMERA, ἡμερα, 'a day.' Dies. Hence:

HEMERALOPIA, see Nyctalopia.

HEMERAL'PIA, from ἡμερα, 'the day,' and οπτομαι, 'I see.' Hæmeralops, Dyso'pia seu Cal'igo tenebra'rum, Parop'sis Noctif'uga, Visus diur'nis, Nyctalo'pia (of some), Nyctotyphlo'sis, Amblyo'pia crepuscula'ris, Cæcitas crepuscula'ris seu noctur'na, A'cies diur'na, Day-sight, Day-vision, Hen blindness, Night blindness, Nocturnal Amauro'sis, (F.) Vue diurne, Aveuglement de Nuit. A disease, in which the eyes enjoy the faculty of seeing, whilst the sun is above the horizon, but are incapable of seeing by the aid of artificial light. Its causes are not evident. The eye, when carefully examined, presents no alteration, either in its membranes or humours.

HEMERALOPS, Do'ra. One labouring under hemeralopia. Also, Hemeralopia.

HEMERATYPHLOSIS, Nyctalopia.

HEMERODROMA, Ephemera.

HEMEROPATHI'A; from ἡμερα, 'a day,' and παθος, 'an affection.' A disease, which continues only a day; or, which is only observed during the day.

HEMEROTYPHLOSIS, Nyctalopia

HEMI, ἡμι, 'half,' 'semi.' Hence:

HEMIACEPH'ALUS, (F.) Hémiacéphale, from hemi, a, privative, and κεφαλή, 'head.' A monster whose head is represented by a shapeless tumour, with some appendages or cutaneous folds anteriorly, the thoracic extremities existing.

HEMIAMAUROISIS, Hemiopia.

HEMIANDRUS, Eunuch.

HEMIANOR, Eunuch.

HEMIANTHROPIA, Mania.

HEMIANTHROPUS, Eunuch, Maniac.

HEMIAZYGA (Vena), see Azygos vein.

HEMICEPHALÆA, Hemicrania.

HEMICEPHALÆUM, Sinciput.

HEMICEPHALIUM, Sinciput.

HEMICEPHALUM, Sinciput.

HEMICEPH'ALUS, Hémiacéph'alus, Sémiacéph'alus, from hemi, 'half,' and κεφαλή, 'head.'

One who has half a head.

HEMICRANIA, Hémiacéphal'a, Migra'na, Grana, Hemip'gia, Hemip'e'gia, Heterocra'nia, Monop'gia, Monop'e'gia, Céphal'a Hemicra'nia, Hemipath'i'a, Neural'gia cerebr'al'is, Megrim, from hemi, 'half,' and κράνιον, 'cranium.' (F.) Migraine. Pain, confined to one half the head.

It is almost always of an intermittent character;—at times, continuing only as long as the sun is above the horizon; and hence sometimes called Sun-pain,—and is cured by cinchona, arsenic, and the remedies adapted for intermittents.

HEMICRANIA IDIOPATHICA, Neuralgia, facial.

HEMIDENIS MUS IN'DIGUS, Perip'loca In'dica, Ascle'pias Pseudosar'sa, Sarsaparill'a In'dica, Nanvari, Indi'an Sarsaparilla. Ord. Asclepiadaceæ. A Hindoostanee plant, the root of which, Hemidesm'us (Ph. D.), has a peculiar aromatic odour, and a bitterish taste. It is used in India as a substitute for sarsaparilla.

HEMIDIALYSIS, Hemiplegia.

HEMIDIAPHORE'SIS, Transpira'tio Unilat'era; from hemi, 'half,' and διαφορησις, 'perspiration.' Perspiration of one half the body.

HEMIEC'TON, Hémiec'teon, Semisæ'tum. A vessel capable of containing 36 chopines or pints, and in which fumigations were made in diseases of the uterus and vagina.—Hippocrates.

HEMIENCEPH'ALUS, (F.) Hémiencéphale, from hemi, 'one half,' and εγκεφαλος, 'encephalon.' A monster, which has no trace of the organs of the senses, and yet has a brain nearly natural. See Hemicephalus.

HEMIM'ELES, (F.) Hémim'èle, from hemi, 'one half,' and μελος, 'a limb.' A genus of monsters, in which the upper or lower extremities are very defective—mere stumps,—and the fingers and toes are entirely wanting or very imperfect.—I. G. St. Hilaire.

HEMIME'RION, from hemi, and μειρα, 'a part.' 'One half.'—Fœsius. Also, half a drachm.—Erotian.

HEM'INA. A Greek measure, answering to the Cotyle, κοτυλη, i. e. one half the sextarius, or about half a pint, English.

HEMIOBOL'TON, Hemiob'olon. Half the obolus. A weight of about five grains.—Gorræus.

HEMIO'LION. A weight of 12 drachms, or oz. 1½.—Galen. See Sescuncia.

HEMIO'PIA, Hemiop'sis, Hemiop'asis, Suf-fu'sio dimid'ians, Visus dimidia'tus, Marmor'ygê Hippoc'ratis, Hemiamau'ro'sis, Amauro'sis dimidia'ta, (F.) Hémiop'ie, from hemi, 'one half,' and οπτομαι, 'I see.' Depraved vision, in which the person sees only one half of an object.

HEMIOPIASIS, Hemiopia.

HEMIOPSIS, Hemiopia.

HEMIPA'GES, Dicor'yphus dihyppogast'rius, Oc'topus synapheocceph'alus, from hemi, 'half,' and πηγνυμι, 'I fasten.' A monstrosity, in which twins are united from the navel to the vertex.—I. G. Saint Hilaire.

HEMIPAGIA, Hemicrania.

HEMIPATHIA, Hemicrania.

HEMIPEGIA, Hemicrania.

HEMIPHON'IA, from ἡμι, 'half,' and φωνη, 'voice.' Great weakness of voice. The husky voice of those affected with cholera.

HEMIPL'E'GIA, Hémipl'ex'ia, Hemidia'l'ysis, Paral'ysis Hémiplegia, Sémipl'ex'ia, Sémi-side-ra'tio, from hemi, 'one half,' and πλησσω, or πληττω, 'I strike.' Paralysis of one side of the body. See Paralysis. One so palsied is said to be hémipl'eg'ic, semi-side'ra'tus.

HEMIPL'EGIA FACIALIS, Paralysis, Bell's.

HEMIPL'EXIA, Hemiplegia.

HEMIPROSOPLEGIA, Paralysis, Bell's.

HEMISPHERÆ CEREBRI, Hemispheres of the brain.

HEMISPHERE, Hémisphæ'ra, Hémisphæ'rium, from hemi, 'one half,' and σφαίρα, 'a sphere.' One half of a sphere or of a body having a spheroidal shape.

HEMISPHERES OF THE BRAIN, Hémisphæ'ræ cer'ebr'i, Hémispher'ical gan'glia, are the upper spheroidal portions of the brain, separated from each other by the falx cerebri.

HEMISPHERICAL GANGLIA, Hemispheres of the brain.

HÉMITE, Hæmitis.

HEMITRITE'A (FEBRIS), Febris semi-tertia'na seu sesquial'tera, (F.) Demi-tierce, Fievre demitierce, from hemi, 'half,' and τριατος, 'tertian.' A semi-tertian fever, so called because it seems to possess both the characters of the tertian and quotidian intermittent. — Galen, Spigelius.

HEMIUNCIA, Hemioncion.

HEMIUN'CIION, Hemiu'n'cia, Semun'cia, Semiu'n'cia. Half an ounce.

HEMLOCK, Pinus Canadensis, Conium maculatum — h. American, Cicuta maculata — h. Bastard, Chærophyllum sylvestre — h. Common, Conium maculatum.

HEMLOCK DROPWORT, Oenanthe.

HEMLOCK GROUND, Taxus Canadensis.

HENBANE, Hyoscyamus.

HENBIT, Lamium amplexicaule.

HEN-BLINDNESS, Hemeralopia.

HENNÉ, Lawsonia inermis.

HENRICEA PHARMACEARCHA, Gentiana chirayita.

HENRICUS RUBENS, Colcothar.

HEPAR, ἥπαρ, 'genitive,' ἥπατος, 'liver.' A name for substances resembling liver in appearance. The ancient name for the liver of sulphur, Hepar sulphuris; which is sometimes a compound of sulphur and potassium; at others, of sulphur and potassa. See Potassæ sulphuretum.

HEPAR ADIPOSUM, Adiposis hepatica — h. Adulterinum, Spleen.

HEPAR ANTIMONIA'TUM is a compound of a sulphuret of antimony and an alkali. See Oxydum stibii sulphuratum.

HEPAR MARTIA'LE. A compound of sulphuret of potass and an oxide of iron.

HEPAR SANGUINIS, see Blood — h. Sinistrum, Spleen.

HEPAR SUCCENTURIA'TUM. An additional liver or liver lobe; a case of malformation.

HEPAR SULPHURIS SALINUM, Potassæ sulphuretum — h. Sulphuris volatile, Ammonia sulphuretum — h. Uterinum, Placenta — h. Variegatum, Liver, nutmeg.

HEPATAL'GIA, Hepatodyn'ia, Neural'gia hepatis, Col'ica hepatica, from ἥπαρ, ἥπατος, 'liver,' and αλγος, 'pain.' Pain in the liver. Neuralgia of the liver, (F.) Neuralgie du Foie.

HEPATALGIA CALCULOSA, Colica hepatica — h. Petitiانا, Turgescens vesiculæ felleæ — h. Phlegmonoides, Hepatitis.

HEPATAPOSTE'MA, from ἥπαρ, ἥπατος, and ἀποστήμα, 'an abscess.' Abscess of the liver.

HEPATARIUS, Hepaticus.

HEPATATROPH'IA, Atroph'ia seu Aridu'ra hepatis, from ἥπαρ, ἥπατος, and atroph'ia, 'atrophy.' Atrophy of the liver: — a general concomitant of Cirrho'sis hepatis.

HEPATAUXÈ, Hypertroph'ia hepatis, (F.) Hyperhèpatotrophie, Hypertrophie du foie. Hypertrophy of the liver.

HEPATECHE'MA, Son'itus hepaticus, from ἥπαρ, ἥπατος, and ἤχημα, 'sound.' Sound rendered by the liver on percussion.

HEPATEMPHRAN'IS, from ἥπαρ, ἥπατος, and ἐμπράσσω, 'I obstruct.' Emphrax'is hepatis. Hepatic obstruction. — Plouquet.

HEPATENCEPHALO'MA, Hepatomyelo'ma, Fungus hepatis medullaris, from ἥπαρ, ἥπατος, and εγκεφαλος, 'encephalon.' Encephaloid of the liver.

HEPATE'RUS, Hepaticus, Jecora'rius. A variety of diarrhoea, Fluxus hepaticus. — Gorræus.

HEPATHÆMORRHAG'IA, Hæmorrhag'ia hepatica, Hepatorrhag'ia, Apoplex'ia hepatica, (F.) Hémorrhagie du foie, Hémohépatorrhagie, from ἥπαρ, ἥπατος, and αἱμορραγία, 'hemorrhage.' Hemorrhage from the liver.

HEPATIC, Hepaticus, Hepata'rius, Hepate'rus, Hepato'ides, Hepato'des, Jecora'rius, Jec'oral, (F.) Hépatique Jécoraire, from ἥπαρ, ἥπατος. Belonging or relating to or resembling liver.

HEPATIC ARTERY, Arte'ria Hepat'ica. One of the three branches given off by the cœliac. It passes towards the inferior surface of the liver; where it divides into two branches, a right and a left, which proceed towards the corresponding parts of that organ. The right branch gives off the cystic artery. Before dividing, the hepatic artery sends off two considerable branches, the A. pylorica and Gastro-epiploica dextra.

HEPATIC DUCT, Ductus hepaticus, (F.) Canal hépatique, is about three fingers' breadth in length, and of the size of a quill. It is formed by the union of the biliary ducts, and joins the cystic duct at a very acute angle, to form the ductus choledochus. Its function is to convey the bile from the liver towards the duodenum.

HEPATIC ISLETS, see Liver—h. Lobules, see Liver.

HEPATIC PLEXUS, Plexus hepaticus, consists of nervous filaments, sent by the cœliac plexus to the liver, which accompany the hepatic artery.

HEPATIC VEINS, Supra-hepatic Veins, Venæ cavæ hepaticæ, (F.) Veines sus-hépatiques, Intra-lobular veins, do not follow the course of the arteries of the same name. They arise in the substance of the liver; converge towards the posterior margin of that viscus, and open into the vena cava inferior. They convey away the blood carried to the liver by the hepatic artery and vena porta.

HEPAT'ICA. Medicines believed to be capable of affecting the liver.

HEPATICA, H. triloba—h. Americana, H. triloba—h. Fontana, Marchantia polymorpha—h. Nobilis, H. triloba—h. Stellata, Asperula odorata.

HEPATICA TRIL'OBATA, H. America'na, Anemone hepatica seu nobilis, Herba trinitatis, Hepatica, Hepaticus flos, Trifolium hepaticum seu an'reum, Liverwort, Liverweed, Trefoil, Noble Liverwort, Herb Trinity, (F.) Hépatique des jardins. The leaves of this plant—Hepatica (Ph. U. S.)—are a gentle astringent, but not possessed of much virtue.

HEPATICULA, Hepatitis, chronic.

HEPATICUS, Hepateros—h. Flos, Hepatica triloba.

HEPATIFICATIO, Hepatization.

HÉPATIQUE, Hepatic—h. Étoilée, Asperula odorata—h. des Fontaine, Marchantia polymorpha—h. des Jardins, Hepatica triloba.

HEPATIRRHŒA, Fluxus hepaticus, Dysenteria hepatica, Diarrhœa hepatica, Hepatorrhœa, Hepatocholorrhœa, Hepatodysent'ria, Hepatorrhag'ia, Hæmate'ra, Aimate'ra, (F.) Flux hépatique, from ἥπαρ, ἥπατος, and ρῶα, 'I flow.' A species of diarrhœa in which the excreted matters seem to come from the liver, or are much mixed with bile.

HEPATIS EMUNCTORIA. Inguen—h. Suspensorium, Ligament, suspensory, of the liver.

HEPATISATIO, Hepatization—h. Pulmonum. Hepatization of the Lungs.

HÉPATISATION, Hepatization—h. Grise, see Hepatization—h. Rouge, see Hepatization.

HEPATITES VENA, Cava vena.

HEPATITIS, Empres'na hepaticis, Caussa seu Inflammatio hepatis, I. Jecin'oris, Febriß hepatica inflammato'ria, Hepatal'gia phlegmonoides, Morbis jecin'oris, Hepatophlegmonë, Inflammation of the liver, (F.) Hépatite, inflammation du foie, Pièce, (Provincial); from ἥπαρ, ἥπατος, 'liver,' and itis, denoting inflammation.

It may be seated either in the peritoneal covering, Sero-hepatitis, Hepatitis velamento'sa seu extern'a, Peritonitis hepatica, Perihepatitis, or in the substance of the liver, Hepatitis parenchymato'sa, or in both, Puro-hepatitis, and may be acute or chronic. The peculiar symptoms are:—pain in the right hypochondrium, shooting to the back and right shoulder, and increased on pressure; difficulty of lying on the left side; sometimes jaundice with cough, and synocha. Its termination is generally by resolution:—in tropical climates it often runs on to suppuration, Jecin'oris vom'ica, Hepatitis apostemato'sa, the abscess breaking either externally, or forming a communication with the intestines or chest, or breaking into the cavity of the abdomen. The causes are those of inflammation in general. Heat predisposes to it; hence its greater frequency in hot climates. On dissection of those who have died of it, the liver has been found hard and enlarged; colour of a deep purple; or the membranes have been more or less vascular; or adhesions, or tubercles, or hydatids, or abscesses, or biliary calculi may be met with. The treatment must be bold. Bleeding, general and local, fomentations, blisters, purgatives, and the antiphlogistic regimen. In hot climates especially, a new action must be excited by mercury as early as possible.

HEPATITIS APOSTEMATOSA, see Hepatitis.

HEPATITIS, CHRONIC, Hepatitis chronica, Inflammatio hepatis lenta, Hepatitis occult'a, Hepatic'ula, Subinflammatio hepatis, (F.) Chronohépatite, Chronic liver disease, is not as common as is believed. It may be suspected from the existence of the symptoms above mentioned, when in a minor degree; enlargement, constant dull pain in the region of the liver; sallow countenance; high-coloured urine; clay-coloured fæces, &c. The great object of treatment is to excite a new action by mercury and counter-irritants, and to keep the liver free by cathartics.

HEPATITIS CYSTICA, Cholecystitis—h. Externa, see Hepatitis—h. Occulta, H. chronica—h. Velamentosa, see Hepatitis—h. Parenchymatosa, see Hepatitis.

HEPATIZATIO, Hepatisatio, Hepaticatio, from ἥπαρ, ἥπατος. Conversion into a liver-like substance. Applied to the lungs when gorged with effused matters, so that they are no longer pervious to the air—Hepatisatio pulmonum, Carnificatio pulmonum. In such state, they are said to be hepatized.

HEPATIZATION, RED, (F.) Hépatisation rouge, Endurcissement rouge, Ramollissement rouge, characterizes the first stage of consolidation of the lungs in pneumonia.

HEPATIZATION, GRAY, (F.) Hépatisation grise, Induration grise, Ramollissement gris, Infiltration purulente, characterizes the third stage, or stage of purulent infiltration.

HEPATIZON, Chloasma.

HEPATOCAË, from ἥπαρ, ἥπατος, and κακος, 'evil.' Gangrene of the liver.

HEPATOCE'LE, from ἥπαρ, ἥπατος, and κλῆη, 'a tumour,' Hernia hepatica; Hernia of the liver. (F.) Hernie du foie. The liver has never been found entirely out of the abdominal cavity. Increase of its bulk, or injuries of the parietes of the abdomen, have been the sole cause of the protrusions which have been occasionally met with, especially in infants, in whom the upper part of the linea alba is very weak, and indeed scarcely seems to exist. Sauvages has distinguished two species of hepatocœle:—the ventral (in the linea alba), and the umbilical or hepatomphalum.

HEPATOCHOLORRHŒA, Hepatirrhœa.

HEPATOCOLICUM. A ligament of the liver, described by Haller, as passing from the gall-bladder and contiguous sinus portarum, across the duodenum, to the colon. Another, termed Hepato-renal, descends from the root of the liver to the kidney. They are both peritoneal.

HEPATOCYSTIC, Hepatocysticus, Cystideopat'icus, from ἥπαρ, ἥπατος, and κυστίς, 'bladder.' Relating to the liver and gall-bladder.

HEPATOCYSTIC DUCT, Ductus hepatocysticus. The choledoch duct.

HEPATODYME, Hepatodymus, from ἥπαρ, ἥπατος, and δίδυμος, 'a twin.' A monster united at the liver, and double above.

HEPATODYNIA, Hepatalgia.

HEPATODYSENTERIA, Hepatirrhœa.

HEPATOASTRIC, Gastrohepatic.

HEPATOASTROCHOLOSIS, Fever, bilious, Fever, gastric.

HEPATOGRAPHY, Hepatographia; from ἥπαρ, ἥπατος, and γραφη, 'a description.' The part of anatomy which describes the liver.

HEPATOHEMIA, Hyperæmia hepatis, Hepatic Engorge'ment, (F.) Hyperémie du Foie, from ἥπαρ, ἥπατος, and αἷμα, 'blood.' Sanguineous congestion of the liver.

HEPATODES, Hepatic.

HEPATOIDES, Hepatic.

HEPATOLITHIASIS, from ἥπαρ, ἥπατος, and λίθαις, 'formation of stone.' The formation of concretions, Hepatolithi, in the liver.

HEPATOL'OGY, Hepatology, from ἥπαρ, ἥπατος, and λογος, 'a discourse,' 'treatise.' A treatise on the liver.

HEPATOMALACIA, Malaco'sis hepatis, (F.) Ramollissement du Foie. Softening of the liver.

HEPATOMPHALUS, from ἥπαρ, ἥπατος, 'liver,' and ομφαλος, 'navel.' Hernia of the liver at the umbilicus.

HEPATOMYELOMA, Hepatencephaloma.

HEPATON'CUS, from ἥπαρ, ἥπατος, and ογκος, 'a tumour.' Tumefaction of the liver.

HEPATOPAREC'TAMA, from ἥπαρ, ἥπατος, and παραεταμα, 'considerable extension.' Excessive enlargement of the liver.

HEPATOPATHIA, from ἥπαρ, ἥπατος, and παθος, 'suffering.' Liver-disease. Disease of the liver.

HÉPATOPATHIE CANCÉREUSE, Hepatoscirrhus—h. Tuberculeuse, Hépatostromosie.

HEPATOPHLEGMONE, Hepatitis.

HEPATOPHTHISIS, Phthisis hepatica, from ἥπαρ, ἥπατος, and φθίω, 'I consume.' Consumption from suppuration of the liver.

HEPATORRHAGIA, Hepatirrhœa, Hepathæmorrhagia.

HEPATORRHEX'IS, from ἥπαρ, ἥπατος, and ρηξις, 'rupture.' Rupture of the liver.

HEPATORRHOEA, Hepatirrhœa.

HÉPATOSARCOMIE, Hepatoscirrhus.

HEPATOSCIRRHUS, from ἥπαρ, ἥπατος, and σκίρρος, 'cancerous induration.' Scirrhus hepatis, Encephalosis or Carcinoma of the liver, (F.) Hépatosarcomie, Hépatopathie cancéreuse, Cancer du Foie. Scirrhus or Cancer of the liver.

HÉPATOSTRUMOSIE, Tuber'cula hepatis, (F.) Tubercules du Foie, Hépatopathie tuberculeuse; from ἥπαρ, ἥπατος, and struma, 'a tumour,' 'a serofulous tumour.' Tubercle of the liver.

HEPATOT'OMY, from ἥπαρ, ἥπατος, and τεμνω, 'I cut.' Dissection of the liver.

HEPIALOS, Epialos.

HEPS, see Rosa canina.

HEPSEMA, Decoction.

HEPSESIS, Decoction.

HEPTAL'LON GRAVEOLENS, Hogwort, Bears' fright. An indigenous plant, which has a fetid porcine smell; and is said to be used by the Indians as a diaphoretic, cathartic, &c.

HEPTAPHAR'MACUM, from επτα, 'seven,' and φαρμακον, 'a remedy.' A medicine composed of seven substances; cerusse, litharge, pitch, wax, colophony, frankincense, and bullock's fat. It was regarded as laxative, suppurating and healing.

HEPTAPHYLLUM, Tormentilla.

HEPTAPLEURON, Plantago major.

HERACLEUM, see H. lanatum—h. Branca, H. spondylium.

HERACLEUM SPONDYL'IUM, H. Branca, Branca ursina seu Germanica, Spondyl'ium, Sphondyl'ium, Cow Parsnep, All-heal, Cow-mumble, (Sc.) Buneward, (Prov.) Cushia, (F.) Berce, Brancursine bâtarde, Fausse Acanthe. Order, Umbelliferae. Sex. Syst. Pentandria Digynia. Dedicated to Ἡρακλῆς, 'Hercules.' The root of this plant has a strong, rank smell; and a pungent, almost caustic taste. It has been given as a tonic, stomachic and carminative; both in powder and in decoction. The Russians, Lithuanians, and Poles obtain from its seeds and leaves, by fermentation, a very intoxicating spirituous liquor, which they call Parst.

The root of Heracl'um lanatum, Masterwort, Cow parsnep,—Heracl'um (Ph. U. S.)—is in the secondary list of the Pharmacopœia of the United States.

HERACLEUS MORBUS, Epilepsy.

HERB, Herba, Bot'anè. Any ligneous plant, which loses its stalk during the winter.

HERB, BLESSED, Geum urbanum—h. Christopher, Actæa spicata.

HERB-DOCTOR, Botanical doctor or physic'ian. One who treats diseases altogether by herbs; as the—so called—"Thompsonians."

HERB OF GRACE, Gratiola officinalis—h. Mastich, common, Thymus mastichina—h. Mastich, Syrian, Teucrium marum—h. Peter, Primula veris—h. Robert, Geranium Robertianum—h. of Saint Cunegonde, Eupatorium cannabinum—h. Sophia, Sisymbrium sophia—h. Trinity, Hepatica triloba.

HERBÆ PRO ENEMATE, Glyster herbs—h. pro fotu, Fomentation herbs.

HERBALIST, Herborist.

HERBARIUM, from herba, a plant. (F.)

Herbier. A collection of plants. Generally applied to a collection of dried plants—Hortus siccus. In Pharmacy, a plant that is used entire.

HERBARIUS, Herborist.

HERBE, Herb—h. aux Abeilles, Spiræa ulmaria—h. au Cancer, Plumbago Europæa—h. au Centaure, Chironia centaurium—h. aux Chantres, Erysimum—h. aux Charpentiers, Achillea millefolium, Justitia pectoralis—h. aux Chats, Nepeta, Teucrium marum—h. au Coq, Tanacetum balsamita—h. au Cuillers, Cochlearia officinalis—h. aux Écrouelles, Scrophularia nodosa—h. aux Écus, Lysimachia nummularia—h. à Éternuer, Achillea ptarmica—h. à la Fièvre, Chironia centaurium—h. aux Femmes battues, Tamus communis—h. de Grace, Ruta—h. aux Gueux, Clematis vitalba—h. aux Hémorrhoides, Ranunculus ficaria—h. à l'Hirondelle, Chelidonium majus—h. à la Houette, Asclepias Syriaca—h. d'Ivrogne, Lolium temulentum—h. des Juifs, Solidago virgaurea—h. aux Ladres, Veronica—h. aux Mamelles, Lapsana—h. aux Mouches, Conyza squarrosa—h. aux Murailles, Parietaria—h. des Nonnes, Parietaria—h. aux Oies, Potentilla reptans—h. à Paris, Paris—h. à la Paralysie, Primula veris—h. au Pauvre homme, Gratiola officinalis—h. aux Perles, Lithospermum officinale—h. à Pisser, Pyrola umbellata—h. à la Poudre de Chypre, Hibiscus abelmoschus—h. aux Poux, Delphinium staphisagria—h. à la Puce, see Apocynum hypericifolium—h. aux Puces commune, Plantago psyllium—h. à Robert, Geranium Robertianum—h. à la Rosée, Drosera rotundifolia—h. de Sainte Barbe, Erysimum barbarea—h. Sainte Rose, Pæonia—h. aux Sorciers, Circaea luteana, Datura stramonium—h. aux Teigneux, Arctium lappa—h. à Tous les maux, Verbena officinalis—h. Turque, Herniaria glabra—h. aux Vers, Tanacetum vulgare—h. aux Verrues, Heliotropium Europæum.

HERBIER, Herbarium, Ingluvies.

HERBIV'OROUS, Herbiv'orus, from herba, 'grass,' and voro, 'I eat.' An epithet applied to animals which feed on herbs.

HERBORIST, Herba'rist. One who deals in useful plants. An Herb'alist or Herb'arist.

HERBORI'ZATION, Herba'rum inquisit'io. An excursion, made with the view of collecting plants. Such excursions are directed by the Apothecaries' Company of London, for the use of their apprentices, &c.

HERBS, FIVE CAP'ILLARY, Quinque herbae capilla'res, were, anciently, hart's tongue; black, white, and golden maiden-hair, and spleenwort.

HERBS, FIVE EMOL'IENT, Quinque herbae emollientes, were, anciently, beet, mallow, marsh-mallow, French mercury, and violet.

HERCULES ALLHEAL, Pastinaca opoponax. HERCULES MORBUS, Epilepsy.

HÉRÉDITAIRE, Hereditary.

HERED'ITARY, Hæredita'rius, Heredita'rius, Gentili'tius, Sym'phytus, Syn'genes, (F.) Héréditaire, from hæris, heredis, 'an heir.' An epithet given to diseases, communicated from progenitors. Such diseases may exist at birth; or they may supervene at a more or less advanced period of existence. Hereditary diseases, Morbi hereditarii, (F.) Maladies héréditaires, often prevail amongst several members of a family, or are family diseases or complaints.

HERMAPHRODE'ITY, Hermaphrodis'ia, Hermaphroditis'mus, Hermaphrodis'mus, Fab'rica androg'ynna, Androgyn'ia, Gynai'dria, Hermaph' rodism, Hermoph'roditism; from 'Ερμης 'Mercury,' and Αφροδιτη, 'Venus.' Appertaining to Mercury and Venus. Union of the two sexes in the same individual.

HERMAPHRODISIA, Hermaphrodeity.

HERMAPH'RODITE, Same etymon. Hermaphroditus, Gyn'nda, Androg'ynus, (Sc.) Searcht, (Prov.) Serat. One who possesses the attributes of male and female: who unites in himself the two sexes. A term, applied to an animal or plant which is, at the same time, both male and female. True hermaphrodites are only met with in the lower degrees of the animal scale, amongst the zoophytes, mollusca, or gasteropoda. The individuals of the human species, regarded as hermaphrodites, owe this appearance to a vicious conformation of the genital organs; a kind of monstrosity, which renders them unfit for generation, although an attentive examination may exhibit the true sex. Hermaphrodites have, likewise, been described, which, instead of uniting the attributes of both sexes, cannot be considered male or female. These have been called neutral hermaphrodites.

HERMAPHRODITISMUS, Hermaphrodeity.

HERMAPHRODITUS, Hermaphrodite.

HERMET'ICA DOCTRINA, Hermetica ars, (F.) Hermétique. The doctrine of Hermes, a celebrated Egyptian philosopher, who is considered the father of alchemy. That part of chymistry, whose object was the pretended transmutation of the metals.

HERMODACTYLUS, Dactyle'tus, An'ima articularum, from 'Ερμης, 'Mercury,' and δακτύλος, 'a finger;' or rather from Hermus, a river in Asia, upon whose banks it grows, and δακτύλος, 'a date;' or from 'Ερμης, 'Mercury,' and δακτύλος, 'a date;' (F.) Hermodyctyle, Hermodycte ou Hermodycte. The root of the Hermodyctyl was formerly used as a cathartic. By some, it is supposed to be identical with the Iris tuberosa. The best testimony seems to be in favour of its being a variety of the colchicum, — Colchicum illy'ricum. Under the name Hermodyctyle, roots or bulbs of an unknown plant, growing in the countries about the eastern extremity of the Mediterranean, are sold in the shops of Europe.

HERMODATE, Hermodyctylus.

HERMOPH'ILUS, from 'Ερμης, 'Mercury,' and φίλος, 'a lover.' One who is fond of mercury as a medicine.

HERN'IA, Ramez, Ruptu'ra, R. hernio'sa, Crepatu'ra, Ectop'ia hernio'sa, Celē, Rupture, Burst, (F.) Hargne, Descente, Effort, Greveure, Rompure. From ερος, 'a shoot' [?]. Any tumour, formed by the displacement of a viscus or a portion of a viscus, which has escaped from its natural cavity by some aperture, and projects externally. Herniæ have been divided into, — 1. Hernia of the Brain; Encephalocèle; 2. Hernia of the Thorax; Pneumocèle; 3. Hernia of the Abdomen.

Abdominal Herniæ are remarkable for their frequency, variety, and the danger attending them. They are produced by the protrusion of the viscera, contained in the abdomen, through the natural or accidental apertures in the parietes of that cavity. The organs, which form them most frequently, are the intestines and the epiploon. These herniæ have been divided, according to the apertures by which they escape, into:

1. Inguinal or Supra-Pu'bian Herniæ. These issue by the inguinal canal: they are called Bubonocèle, when small; and Serotal Hernia or Oscococèle, in man, when they descend into the scrotum: — Vulvar Hernia or Puden'dal or Lu'bial Hernia, Episocèle, in women, when they extend to the labia majora. 2. Crural or Fem'oral Hernia, Me'rocèle, when they issue by the crural canal. 3. Infra-Pu'bian Hernia, (F.) Hernie sous-pubienne, Oëdocele, Opeoce, Opodeocele, Her'nia foraminis ovalis, when the viscera escape through the opening, which gives passage to the infra-pubic vessels. 4. Ischial'ic Hernia; when it takes place through the sacro-sciatic notch. 5. Umbilical Hernia, Exom'phalos, Omphalocèle; when it occurs at the umbilicus or near it. 6. Epigas'tric Hernia; — occurring through the linea alba, above the umbilicus. 7. Hypogastric or Infra-umbilical Hernia, Cæliocèle, Hypogastrocèle, — when it occurs through the linea alba below the umbilicus. 8. Perinæ'al Hernia, Mesocolocèle, Her'nia perinæ'i, Perinæocèle, Perineocèle — when it takes place through the levator ani, and appears at the perineum. 9. Vag'inat' Hernia, Coleocèle seu Elytrocèle — through the parieties of the vagina. 10. Diaphragmat'ic Hernia, Diaphragmatocele; when it passes through the diaphragm.

Hernia are likewise distinguished, — according to the viscera forming them, — into Enterocèle, Epiplocele, Entero-epiplocele, Gastrocèle, Cystocèle, Hepatocele, Splenocèle, &c.

When a hernia can be restored to its natural cavity, by the aid of pressure, &c., properly applied, it is said to be reducible. It is, on the contrary, irreducible, when adhesion, bulk, &c., oppose its return. When the aperture, which has given passage to the hernia, occasions more or less constriction on the protruded portion, the hernia is said to be incarcerated or strangulated; and, if the constriction be not removed, constipation, hiccough, vomiting, and all the signs of violent inflammation, followed by gangrene, supervene, with alteration of the features, small pulse, cold extremities, and death.

The therapeutical indications are, — 1. As regards reducible hernia: — to replace the viscera in the abdomen by the taxis; and to retain them there by the use of a truss, which, if properly adapted, may effect a radical cure. 2. As regards irreducible hernia: — to support the tumour by an appropriate suspensory bandage. 3. As regards strangulated hernia: — to have recourse to the taxis; blood-letting; warm bath; tobacco glisters; ice to the tumour; and, if these should not succeed, to perform an operation, which consists in dividing the covering of the hernia, and cutting the aponeurotic ring, which causes the strangulation; — reducing the displaced viscera, unless their diseased condition should require them to be retained without; — dressing the wound appropriately: — restoring the course of the feces by means of gentle glisters — preventing or combating inflammation of the abdominal viscera; — conducting the wound to cicatrization, by appropriate means; and afterwards supporting the cicatrix by a bandage.

The word hernia was also used, of old, for the scrotum, and, not unfrequently, for the testicle.

HERNIA, ANEURISMAL, Cirsomphalus — h. Arteriarius, see Aneurism — h. of the Bladder, Cystocèle — h. Bronchialis, Bronchocele — h. Carnosa, Sarcocele — h. of the Cerebellum, Parancephalocèle — h. Cerebri, Encephalocèle.

HERNIA, CONGENITAL, Hernia congenita, is a protrusion of some of the contents of the abdomen into the Tunica vaginalis testis, owing to a want of adhesion between its sides, after the descent of the testicle.

HERNIA CORNEÆ, Ceratocele — h. Crural, Merocele — h. Epiploic, Epiplocele — h. Femoral, Merocele — h. Foraminis Ovalis, see Hernia — h. Gutturis, Bronchocele — h. Hepatica, Hepatocele.

HERNIA HUMORALIS, Empres'ma Orchi'tis, Dydym'itis, Orchi'tis, Orchid'itis, Inflammat'io test'ium, Inflammat'ion of the Testicle, Swelled Tes- ticle, Hernia Ven'eris, Orchiocele, Orchidocèle, Orchidon'eus, (F.) Inflammat'ion du testicule, Orchite. Swelling and inflammation of the testicle is a common symptom of gonorrhœa, (F.) Chaudépisse tombée dans les Bourses; but it may arise from external injuries, or from other causes. It is a disease which cannot be mistaken, and the treatment must obviously be strongly antiphlogistic, supporting the testicle during the treatment, and for some time afterwards: methodical compression has also been found useful. The disease is not generally of a serious character, going off as suddenly as it comes on. As it affects the epididymis more especially, when supervening on gonorrhœa or blennorrhœa, it is sometimes termed blenorrag'ic epididym'itis.

HERNIA INCARCERATA, Entero-peristole — h. Inguinalis, Bubonocèle — h. Intestinalis, Enterocele — h. Intestinalis omentalis, Entero-epiplocele — h. Iridis, Ptoſis Iridis — h. Ischiatica, Ischiocele — h. Lienalis, Splenocèle.

HERNIA LITT'RICA, H. e Diverticulo Intesti'ni. Hernia first described by Littre, in which the intestinal canal proper is not included in the hernial sac, the protruded portion of intestine consisting of a digital prolongation of the ileum, which Littre concluded was formed by the gradual extension of a knuckle of the bowel, that had been engaged in the inguinal canal.

HERNIA OF THE LIVER, Hepatocele — h. of the Lung, Pneumocèle.

HERNIA, MESOCOL'IC, Her'nia Mesocolica. Hernia, caused by the bowels gliding between the layers of the mesocolon. — Sir A. Cooper.

HERNIA, OMENTAL, Epiplocele — h. Parorchidoenterica, Parorchido-enterocèle — h. Perinæ'i, see Hernia — h. Pharyngis, Pharyngocele — h. Purénie, Diaphragmatic hernia — h. Pinguedinosæ Scroti, Liparocèle — h. of the Pleura, Pleurocele — h. Pleurica et pulmonalis, Pleurocele — h. Pudendal, Pudendal hernia — h. Sacci lacrymalis, Lachrymal hernia, Mucocele — h. Serotalis, Serotocele — h. Seminalis scroti, Spermatocele — h. of the Stomach, Gastrocele — h. Suprapubic, H. inguinal — h. of the Tongue, Glossocèle — h. Umbilicalis, Epiplophalon, Exomphalos — h. Umbilici Aquosa, Hydromphalon — h. Urachi, Uromphalus — h. Uteri, Hysterocele — h. Variocose, Cirsocele — h. Varicosa, Variocèle — h. Venarum, Varix — h. Veneris, Hernia humoralis — h. Ventosa, Physocèle — h. Ventral, see Ventral — h. Ventriculi, Gastrocele — h. Vesicæ Urinariæ, Cystocèle — h. Zirbalis, Epiplocele.

HERNIAIRE, Hernial, Herniaria glabra.

HERNIAL, Herniarius, (F.) Herniaire. Belonging to, or concerning hernia: — as Hernial Bandage, Hernial Sac, &c.

The (F.) Hernié, is applied to a part enveloped in a hernial sac. (F.) Hernieux, Cele'ta, Celo'tes, Ruptured, Burst, Bursten, means one affected with hernia; and Chirurgien herniaire, one who devotes himself to the treatment of hernia.

HERNIA'RIA GLABRA, H. vulg'aris seu hirsu'ta seu alpes'tris seu an'nua seu cin'e'rea seu frutic'osa, Millig'ra'na, Em'petrum, Rupturewort, from hernia, 'rupture.' (F.) Herniaire, Turquette, Herniole, Herbe Turque. Ord. Paronychieæ. This plant, which as its name imports, was formerly considered efficacious in the cure of hernia, seems destitute of all virtues.

HERNIARIUS, Hernial.

HERNIE CHARNUE, Sarcocele — h. de l'Épiploon, Epiplocele — h. de l'Estomac, Gastrocele — h. du Foie, Hepatocele — h. Inguinale, Bubonocèle — h. du Nombri, Exomphalos — h. Ombilicale, Exomphalos — h. du Poupon, Pneumocèle — h. de la Vessie, Cystocèle.

HERNIÉ, Hernial.

HERNIEMPHRAGMUS, Herniempfrax'is, from hernia, and εμφραγμος, 'obstruction.' The mechanical obstruction of a hernial canal for the radical cure of the hernia.

HERNIEUX, Hernial.

HERNIOLE, Herniaria glabra.

HERNIOTOMY, Celotomia.

HERO'IC, Hero'icus, Hero'us, Hero'us, from ἥρως, 'a hero.' An epithet applied to remedies or practice of a violent character.

HERPEDON, Herpes.

HERPEN, Herpes.

HERPES, Erpes, Herpe'don, Herpen, Serpens, from ἔρπω, 'I creep;' because it creeps and spreads about the skin; Echphly'sis Herpes, Cytis'ma Herpes, Tetter, Fret, (F.) Dartre, Olophlyctide. A vesicular disease, which, in most of its forms, passes through a regular course of increase, maturation, decline, and termination, in from 10 to 14 days. The vesicles arise in distinct, but irregular clusters, which commonly appear in quick succession, and near together, on an inflamed base; generally attended with heat, pain, and considerable constitutional disorder. The term, like all others which refer to cutaneous diseases, has not been accurately defined. The ancients had three varieties: the miliary, κνυχραιος; vesicular, φλυκταινωδης, and ero'ding, ερδιωμενος. Bateman has the following varieties: 1. HERPES PHLYCTENODES, Herpes militaris, Echphly'sis Herpes Militaris, Nirles, (F.) Dartre phlyctenode, in which the vesicles are millet-sized; pellucid; clusters commencing on an uncertain part of the body, and being progressively strewed over the rest of the surface; succeeded by fresh crops. 2. HERPES ZOSTER, Zoster, Zona ig'nea seu serpiginosa, Ignis Per'sicus, Cinzill'a, Cin'gulum, Sacer ignis, Echphly'sis Herpes zoster, Herpes peris'celis, Erysip'elas zoster seu phlyctænoy'des seu pustulosa, Zona, Cin'cinus, Perizo'ma, (F.) Ceinture, C. dartreuse, Feu Persique, Erysipèle pustuleux, Shingles, (Prov.) Cruels, in which the vesicles are pearl-sized; the clusters spreading round the body like a girdle; at times confluent, and occasionally preceded by constitutional irritation. 3. HERPES CIRCINATUS, Formi'ca ambulato'ria, An'nulus her'pens, Herpes Serpi'go, Serpi'go, Echphly'sis Herpes Circinatus, Ring-worm, Vesic'ular Ringworm, consisting of vesicles with a reddish base, uniting in rings; the area of the rings slightly discoloured, often followed by fresh crops. 4. HERPES LABIALIS, and 5. HERPES PRÆPUTIALIS, Aphthæ præputii, Ulcus'culu præputii, appearing, respectively, on the lips and prepuce. 6. HERPES IRIS, Iris, Rain-bow-worm, occurring in small circular patches, each of which is composed of concentric rings of different colours. To these may be added, HERPES EX'EDENS, H. esthion'enus seu deposcens seu ferus seu estion'enus seu ferox, Echphly'sis Herpes ex'edens, Darta exco'riati'va seu maligna, Lupus non exedens, Formi'ca corrosi'va, Formix, Pop'ula fera, Ulc'erative Ringworm, A'gria, (F.) Dartre rougeante, in which the vesicles are hard; clusters thronged; fluid dense, yellow or reddish, hot, acrid, corroding the subjacent skin, and spreading in serpentine trails.

All the varieties demand simply an antiphlogistic treatment, when attended with febrile irritation. The herpes circinatus, alone, requires the use of astringent applications which have the power of repressing the eruption.

HERPES DEPASCENS, H. exedens — h. Esthiomenus, H. exedens — h. Esthiomenus, H. exedens — h. Farinosus, Pityriasis — h. Ferox, H. exedens — h. Ferus, H. exedens — h. Furfuraceus, Pityriasis — h. Furfuraceus circinatus, Lepra, H. exedens — h. Miliaris, H. phlyctænoïdes — h. Periscelis, H. zoster — h. Serpigo, H. circinatus — h. Tonsurans, Porrigo decalvans.

HERPETIC, Herpet'icus, (F.) Herpétique, Dartreux. Possessing the nature of herpes.

HERPETOG'RAPHY, Herpetograph'ia, from ἔρπης, 'herpes,' and γραφη, 'a description.' A description of the different forms of herpes, as Herpetology, Herpetolog'ia, is a treatise on the same, and also on reptiles, from ἔρπειον, 'a reptile.'

HER'PETON, Herpet'ion, from ἔρπειν, 'to creep.' A creeping eruption or ulcer. — Hippocrates.

HERPYLOS, Thymus serpyllum.

HERRENSCHWAND'S SPECIFIC, see Specific of Herrenschwand.

HERRIN, Urine.

HERSKET, Ardor ventriculi.

HESPERIS ALLIARIA, Alliaria.

HETERADELPH'IA, Heterodidym'ia, Heterodym'ia, from ἕτερος, 'other,' and ἀδελφος, 'a brother.' A double monstrosity, in which the components of the double bodies are very unequal, and of which one portion may be regarded as the stem or trunk, to which another organized part, or even a whole body, less developed than itself, is affixed like a parasite.

HETERADEN'IC, Heteraden'icus, (F.) Hétéradénique, from ἕτερος, 'other,' and ἀδην, 'a gland.' An accidental tissue is so termed, which has a glandular structure, but occurs in parts devoid of glands.

HETEROCHRON'ICUS, Heteroch'ronus, from ἕτερος, and χρονος, 'time.' Relating to difference of time.

Pulsus heterochron'icus. A pulse of varying rhythm. An irregular or intermittent pulse.

HETEROCHYMEU'SIS, from ἕτερος, and χυμενσις, 'mixture.' A state of the blood in which it contains other matters than in health, as urea, bile, &c.

HETEROCLITE, see Homology, and Tissues.

HETEROCRANIA, Hemierania.

HETEROCRIN'IA, from ἕτερος, and κρινω, 'I separate.' Modification in the situation of secretions. — Andral.

HETERODIDY'MIA, Heteradelphia.

HETERODY'MIA, Heteradelphia.

HETEROGENESIS, see Generation. Also, any anomaly in organic formation.

HETEROLALIA, Heterophonia.

HETEROLOGOUS TISSUES, see Tissues.

HETEROMORPH'ISM, Heteromorph'ismus, from ἕτερος, and μορφη, 'shape.' A deviation from the natural shape of parts.

HETEROMORPHOUS, see Homology.

HETEROPA'GIA; from ἕτερος, and παγω, 'I unite together.' A double monstrosity, in which the accessory subject, which is very small and imperfect, but provided with a distinct head, and at least rudimental lower limbs, has its body implanted on the anterior surface of the body of the principal subject.

HETEROPATHIC, Allopathic.

HETEROPHON'IA, from ἕτερος, and φωνη, 'voice.' A cracked or broken voice. A change of the voice or speech — Heterola'ia.

HETEROPTHAL'MIA, from ἕτερος, and ὀφθαλμος, 'eye.' A difference in the two eyes, — as when one squints, or is of a different colour.

HETEROPLASM'US, from ἕτερος, and πλασμα, 'formation.' A morbid formation foreign to the economy, and which is composed of elements different from those that are found in it in the normal condition.

HETEROPLAS'TY, Heteroplas'ticē, Heteroplas'tia, from ἕτερος, and πλασσω, 'I form.' Irregular plastic or formative actions or operations, that do not admit of exact classification.

HETEROPROSO'PUS, from ἕτερος, and προ- πρωτον, 'countenance.' A monster having two faces.—Gurlt.

HET'EROPUS, from 'ερεπος, and πους, 'foot.' One who has one foot different from the other.

HETEROREXIA, Malacia.

HETERORRHYTH'MUS, from 'ερεπος, and ρυθμος, 'rhythm.' Having another rhythm. An epithet given to the pulse, when it is such, in any individual, as is usually felt at a different age.

HETEROSARCO'SES, from 'ερεπος, and σαρξ, 'flesh.' A class of diseases which consist in the formation of accidental tissues.—Gendrin.

HETEROTAX'IA, (F.) Hétérotaxie, from 'ερεπος, and ταξις, 'order.' A malformation, which consists in the general transposition of organs. A change in the relation of organs.

HETEROTOP'IA, (F.) Hétérotopie, from 'ερεπος, and τοπος, 'place.' A deviation from the natural position of parts.

HÉTRE, Fagus sylvatica.

HEUCHERA, see H. cortusa—h. Acerifolia, H. cortusa.

HEUCHERA CORTU'SA, H. America'na seu Acerifolia seu Viscida, Cortusa America'na, Alum Root, American Sanicle, Ground-maple, Cliff-weed, Split-rock. Ord. Saxifragaceæ. The root—Heuchera (Ph. U. S.)—is a powerful astringent, and is the basis of a cancer powder. The American Indians apply the powdered root to wounds, ulcers, and cancers. It is said to have been sold for colchicum.

HEUCHERA RICHARDSONII, which abounds on the rocks of Churchill River, is used medicinally by the Cree Indians, who chew its astringent root, and apply it as a vulnerary to wounds and sores.

HEUCHERA VISCIDA, H. cortusa.

HEUCK-BANE, Ischion.

HEUDELLOTIA AFRICANA, see Edellium.

HEUKS, Singultus.

HEVEA GUIANENSIS, see Caoutchouc.

HEXAGIUM, Sextula.

HEXAGONE ARTÉRIELLE, see Circulus Willisii.

HEXATHYRIDIVMVENARUM, see Worms.

HEXIS, 'εξις. Habit, habit of body, constitution. Hence, hectic, cachectic, &c.

HEYLE, Sanitas.

HIA TSAO TONG TCHONG, Sphæria Sinensis.

HIA'TUS, from hiare, hiatum, 'to gape,' 'to open.' A foramen or aperture. Mouth. The vulva. Also, yawning.

HIATUS CANALIS FALLOPII, see Aquæductus Fallopii.

HIATUS DIAPHRAG'MATIS AÖR'TICUS, Semicirculus exsculp'tus. The opening in the diaphragm for the passage of the abdominal aorta.

HIATUS FALLOPII, see Aquæductus Fallopii—h. Occipito pétreux, Laccerum posterius foramen—h. Sphéno-pétreux, Laccerum anterius foramen.

HIATUS OF WINSLOW, Fora'men Winslowii, Fora'men of Winslow. An opening—situate behind the lesser omentum, and behind the vessels and nerves of the liver—which forms a communication between the peritoneal cavity and that of the omenta.

HIBERNICUS LAPIS, Teg'ula seu Arde'sia Hibernica, Hard'sia, Irish Slate. A kind of slate or very hard stone, found in different parts of Ireland, in masses of a bluish-black colour, which stains the hands. It has been taken, powdered, in spruce-beer, against inward contusions.

HIBISCUS, Althæa.

HIBIS'CUS ABELMOS'CHUS, Abelmos'chus moscha'tus. Ord. Malvacææ. The name of the plant, whose seeds are called Grana Moschi or Muskseed. It is the Belmos'chus, Abelmos'chus, Gratum Moschi, Ket'mia Egyptiaca, Moschus Arabum, Ægyptia moscha'ta, Bamie moscha'ta, Al'cea, A. Indica seu Ægyptiaca Villo'sa, Abelmosch, Abelmosk, Muskmallow, (F.) Graine de Muse, Herbe à la poudre de Chypre, Ambrette, Guinauve veloutée. It is indigenous in Egypt and the Indies. The seeds are chiefly used as perfumes; and especially in the formation of Cyprus Powder.

HIBISCUS ESCULEN'TUS, Okra, Okro, Gombo. A plant, the green pods of which abound in mucilage, and are much used in the West Indies for soups.

HIBIS'CUS POPULE'US, Balimba'go. A small Moluca tree. The fruit is full of a juice similar to camboge. The root is emetic. It is used in chronic diarrhæa, colic, dyspepsia, &c.

HIBRIDA, Hybrid.

HICCUGH, Singultus.

HICCUP, Singultus.

HICK'ORY. The name of several American trees of the genus Carya; Order, Juglandacææ. The leaves are usually aromatic; and are reputed to be antispasmodic [?]. The bark of those species that have bitter nuts, as Carya amara and C. porci'na, is somewhat astringent. Some of them bear fruit that is much esteemed, as Carya olivæformis, Pecan' or Peccan' nut, and C. sulcata, Shellbark.

HIDDEN SEIZURES. An expression employed by Dr. Marshall Hall for obscure encephalic and spinal attacks, of an epileptoid character for example, which may be immediately owing to trachelismus.

HIDE-BOUND, Induration of the cellular tissue.

HIDRISCHESIS, Hidroschesis.

HIDROA, Desudatio, Échauboultures, Hydroa, Sudamina.

HIDRON'OSUS, Hidron'usis, from 'ιδρωσ, 'sweat,' and νοσος, 'a disease.' A disease accompanied by violent sweats. Sudor Anglicus.

HIDRONUSUS, Hidronosus.

HIDROPEDESIS, Ephidrosis.

HIDROPHOROS, Sudoriferous.

HIDROPOETICUM, Sudorific.

HIDROPYRA, Sudor Anglicus.

HIDROPYRETOS, Sudor Anglicus.

HIDORRRHŒA, Ephidrosis.

HIDROS, 'ιδρωσ, 'ιδρωσος, Sudor, 'sweat.' Hence—Hidropyra, Hidrosis, &c.

HIDROS'CHESIS, Hidris'chesis, Reten'tio sudoris, from hidros, and σχεσις, 'retention.' Suppression of perspiration.

HIDROSIS, Ephidrosis.

HIDROTERION, Aclicolum.

HIDROTERIUM, Sudorific.

HIDROTICUM, Sudorific.

HIDRO'TIUM, Diminutive of hidros. A gentle sweat or perspiration.

HIDROTOPEUM, Sudorific.

HIE'BLE, Sambucus ebulus.

HIERA DIACOLOCYNTHIDOS, from 'ιερος, 'holy.' Hiera of Colocynth. An electuary, composed of 10 parts of colocynth, as much agaric, germander, white horehound, stachas:—5 parts of opopanax, as much sagapenum, parsley, round birchwort root, and white pepper:—4 parts of spikenard, cinnamon, myrrh, and saffron; and 3 pounds, 3 ounces, and 5 drachms of honey.

HIERA OF COLOCYNTH, H. Diacolocynthidos—h. Logadii, Hiera piera.

HIERA PICRA, from 'ιερος, 'holy,' and πικρος, 'bitter.' Holy bitter, Pulvis aloëticus, formerly called Hiera logadii when made into an electuary with honey. It is now kept in the form of dry powder;—prepared by mixing socotrine aloes, one pound, with 3 ounces of canella alba. See Pulvis aloes cum canella.

HIERA SYRINX, Vertebral column, Epilepsy.

HIERACITES, ἱερακίτης, from ἱεραξ, ἱερακος, 'a hawk,' Lapis Accipitrum. The ancient name of a precious stone, believed to be capable of arresting the hemorrhoidal flux.—Pliny, Galen, Paulus.

HIERACIUM LACHENALII, H. murorum.

HIERACIUM MURO'RUM, H. Lachenalii, Pulmonaria Gallica, Auricula muris major, (F.) Épervière des murailles, Pulmonaire des Français. Ord. Compositæ. A European plant, which is a slight tonic.

HIERACIUM OLERACEUM, Sonchus oleraceus.

HIERACIUM PILOSEL'LA. The systematic name of the Auricula Muris, Pilosella, P. Alpi'na, Myosotis, Mouse-ear, (F.) Piloselle, Oreille de Souris. This plant contains a bitter, lactescent juice, which has a slight degree of astringency. The roots are more powerful than the leaves.

HIERACIUM VENO'SUM, Rattlesnakeweed, Veiny Hawkweed, Bloodwort, indigenous, has similar properties.

HIERANOSUS, Chorea, Convulsion, Epilepsy.

HIERAX, Accipiter.

HIEROBOTANE, Verbena officinalis.

HIEROGLYPH'ICA, from ἱερος, 'holy,' and γλυφω, 'I carve.' A name given to the signs employed in medicine; and, also, to the folds in the hands, feet, and forehead, which afford chiromancy its pretended oracles.

HIEROPYR, Erysipelas.

HIKRY PIKRY, Pulvis aloes et Canellæ.

HILL'S BALSAM OF HONEY, see Balsam of Honey, Hill's—h. Essence of Bardana, Tinctura guaiacæ.

HILLBERRY, Gaultheria.

HILL FEVER, see Fever, hill.

HILON (F.), Hilum, improperly Hilus, 'the black spot on the top of a bean.' A name given by some writers to a small blackish tumour, formed by the protrusion of the iris through an opening in the transparent cornea, so called from its comparison with the hile or black mark presented by the vicia faba at one of its extremities. In Botany, the Hile or Hilum is the cicatricula of a seed, which indicates the place by which it was attached in the cavity of the pericarp. It is the umbilicus of the seed. The fissure of the spleen, kidney, lung, ovary, &c., is, also, called Hilus. See Porta.

HILUS, Hilon.

HILUS LIENAL'IS, Incisura lienalis. The concave part of the spleen.

HILUS RENA'LIS, Incisura renalis, Hilus of the kidney. The concave part of the kidney.

HILWORT, Mentha pulegium.

HIMANTOMA, see Himas.

HIMANTOSIS, Himas.

HIMAS, ἵμας, ἱμαντος, 'a thong of leather.' The uvula; likewise, elongation, and extenuation of the uvula. It is also called Himantosis, Himantoma. See Staphylœdema.

HIMEROS, Libido.

HINDBERRIES, see Rubus idæus.

HINDHEEL, Tanaacetum.

HIP, Haunch, Hypochondriasis—h. Bone, Isechium—h. Disease, Coxarum morbus—h. Joint, Coxofemoral articulation—h. Tree, Rosa canina.

HIP'PACÉ, ἱππακή, from ἵππος, 'a horse,' Os veus Equinus. A cheese prepared from mare's milk.

HIPPANTHRO'PIA, from ἵππος, 'a horse,' and ἀνθρωπος, 'a man.' A variety of melancholy, in which the patient believes himself changed to a horse. The Greek word ἱππανθρωπος, means the fabulous Centaur.

HIPPASIA, Equitation.

HIPPEO, Hypochondriac.

HIPPIA, Equitation.

HIPPEUSIS, Equitation.

HIPPIA'TER, Hippiätros, Medicus equarius, from ἵππος, 'a horse,' and ἵατρος, 'a physician.' A farrier. A horse doctor. Used also for one who treats the diseases of other domestic animals; Veterinarius, Mulomedicus, Medicus Veterinarius, Zoëtros.

HIPPIATRI'A, Hippiatrica, Hippiatricè, Medicina equaria, (F.) Hippiatrique. A science, whose object is the knowledge of the diseases of the horse. It is sometimes made to include other domestic animals. See Veterinary art.

HIPPIATRIQUE, Hippiatria.

HIPPIATRUS, Hippiatr.

HIPPO, Ipecacuanha. A corruption, in Ireland, of Ipecacuanha; and hence applied, at times, in the United States, to the American plant, Euphorbia Corollata, which is, also, called Ipecacuanha.

HIPPO, INDIAN, Gillenia trifoliata.

HIPPOCAMPE GRANDE, Cornu ammonis.

HIPPOCAMPUS MAJOR, Cornu ammonis.

HIPPOCAM'PUS MINOR, Pes hippocampi minor, (ἵπποκαμπος, 'the sea horse.') Unguis, U. Avis seu Halleri, O'crea, Colliculus cavæe posterioris ventriculi rum lateralisium, Calcar avis, Un'iform Em'inece, (F.) Ergot, Éperon. A medullary tubercle or projection, observed in the posterior cornu of the lateral ventricle of the brain.

HIPPOCENTAUREA CENTAURIUM, Chironia centaarium.

HIPPOCRAS, Claret.

HIPPOCRATES. CAP OF, Bonnet d'Hippocrate—h. Sleeve, Chausse.

HIPPOCRAT'IC, Hippocrat'icus. Relating to Hippocrates, or concerning his doctrine,—as Hippocratic doctrine, Hippocratic face, &c.

HIPPOCRATISM, Hippocratism'us. The doctrine of Hippocrates, which consisted in observing and following nature, as indicated by her presumed efforts, and the crises set up by her.

HIPPOCRATIST. A partisan of the Hippocratic doctrine.

HIPPOGONYOLEPUS, Crusta genu equinæ.

HIPPOLAPATHUM, Rumex patientia.

HIPPOLITHUS, Bezoard of the horse.

HIPPOMANÈ MANCINEL'LA, (ἵππος, 'a horse,' and μανια, 'madness,' 'horse, or violent madness,') Manchineel, (F.) Mancenillier. Family, Euphorbiacæ. Sex. Syst. Monœcia Monadelphica. A poisonous tree of South America, with the milky juice of which the Indians poison their arrows. The fruit, also, is highly poisonous.

HIPPOMARATHRUM, Peucedanum silaus.

HIPPOPATHOL'OGY, Hippopatholog'ia, from ἵππος, 'a horse,' παθος, 'a disease,' and λογος, 'a discourse.' The science of the diseases of the horse. Pathology of the horse.

HIPPOPHAGOUS, Equivorous.

HIPPUPUS, see Kyllosis.

HIPPUS, Equus.

HIPPOSELINUM, Smyrniolum olusatrum.

HIPPOSTEOL'OGY, Hiposteolog'ia, from ἵππος, 'a horse,' οστεον, 'a bone,' and λογος, 'a discourse.' Osteology of the horse.

HIPPOT'OMY, Hippotom'ia, from ἵππος, 'a horse,' and τεμνειν, 'to cut.' Anatomy of the horse.

HIPPURIA, from ἵππος, 'a horse,' and ουρον, 'urine,' because the urine contains hippuric acid, which is found in the urine of the horse. A pathological condition, in which there is an excess of hippuric acid in the urine.

HIPPURIC ACID, see Acid, hippuric.

HIPPURIS VULGARIS, from ἵππος, 'a horse,' and oupa, 'a tail.' The systematic name of the Horse's Tail, Mare's Tail, Equisetum minus, Equisetum, (F.) Prêle, Presle, Asprêle, Queue de cheval. It is an astringent, and frequently used, as tea, by the vulgar, in diarrhoea and hæmorrhage. The same virtues are attributed to the Equisetum arvense, fluviale, limosum, &c.

HIPPUS, Equus, Nictatio, from ἵππος, 'a horse.' A disease of the eyes, in which, from birth, they perpetually twinkle, like those of a man on horseback. [?] Also, a tremulous condition of the iris, which occasions repeated alternations of contraction and dilatation of the pupil; Iridotromus, Iridodonesis, Iridoplasia, Tremor Iridis.

HIPS, Sax. heopa. The fruit of the dog-rose, Rosa canina: chiefly used as a confection. See Confectio Rosæ Caninæ.

HIRCIS/MUS, Hircus, Hirquus, from hircus, 'a goat.' Stinking like a goat:—applied especially to the odour of the secretions of the axilla.

HIRCUS, Canthus (greater), Hircismus, Tragus—h. Alarum, Cinabra.

HIRPLING, Claudication.

HIRQUITALITAS, from hircus, 'a goat,' Paraphonia puerum. Goat's voice. See Egophony.

HIRQUUS, Hircus, Canthus (greater), Hircismus, Tragus.

HIRSUTIES, Dasyma, Dasytes, Trichosis, Hirsuties, Hairiness. Growth of hairs on extraneous parts, or, superfluous growth on parts; as in cases of bearded women.—Good. When congenital, it is termed Hirsuties adnata.

HIRUDO, The Leech, Sanguisua, Bdella: from hairto, 'I draw out,' or from hæreo, 'I stick.' [?] In medicine, Hirudo medicinalis, Bdella Medicinalis or Medicinal Leech, (F.) Sanguis, is employed. In the United States, H. decora is used. The leech lives in fresh water, and feeds on the blood of animals, which it sucks, after having pierced the skin with its three sharp teeth. This habit has been taken advantage of, to produce local blood-letting. In applying the leech, the part must be wiped dry; and if there be difficulty in making it suck, a little milk or cream may be applied. When satiated, it will drop off, and by applying a little salt or vinegar to its head it will disgorge the blood. A good English leech will take about half an ounce of blood, including that which flows by fomenting the part subsequently. The American takes less.

HIRUDO ARTIFICIALIS, Antlia sanguisuga—h. Decora, see Hirudo—h. Medicinalis, Hirudo.

HIRUNDINARIA, Asclepias vincetoxicum, Lysimachia nummularia.

HIRUNDO, Chelidon, from hærendo, 'sticking;' because it sticks its nests against the houses [?]. The Swallow. The nests of the swallow were once employed as rubefacients, boiled in vinegar.

HISPANICUM VIRIDE, Cupri subacetatis.

HISPIDITAS, Dystochiasis, Phalangosis.

HISPIDULA, Antennaria dioicum.

HISSING RESPIRATION, see Râle sibilant.

HISTIOLOGICAL, Histological.

HISTIOLOGY, Histology.

HISTOCHEMIA, see Chymistry.

HISTOCHEMISTRY, see Chymistry.

HISTOCHEMISTRY, see Chymistry.

HISTODIALYSIS, from ἵστος, 'organic texture,' and διαλυσις, 'dissolution.' A morbid dissolution of the tissues.

HISTOGENETIC, Histogeneticus, 'Tissue making.' Same etymon as the next. Relating, or appertaining to histogeny or the formation and development of the organic textures.

HISTOGENETIC ELEMENTS OF NUTRITION, see Plastic Element.

HISTOGENY, Histogenia, Histogenesis,

Tissue formation, from ἵστος, 'the organic texture,' and γενεσις, 'generation.' The formation and development of the organic textures.

HISTOLOGIA, Histology.

HISTOLOGICAL, Histologicus, Histologicus, Histologicus. Same etymon as the next. Relating to histology. Applied, also, at times, to the natural transformations that occur in the tissues in the embryo, in contradistinction to morphological, which applies to the alterations in the form of the several parts of the embryo.

HISTOLOGY, Histologia, Histiology, Histologia, from ἵστος, 'the organic texture,' and λογος, 'a description. Anatomy (general). The term is, also, more particularly appropriated to the minute anatomy of the tissues. See Anatomy.

Pathological Histology, Microscopic pathological Anatomy, is the morbid anatomy of the tissues.

HISTOLYSIS, from ἵστος, 'the organic texture,' and λυσις, 'solution.' The decay and dissolution of the organic tissues, and of the blood. It includes the various forms of retrograde metamorphosis and degeneration.

HISTONOMY, Histonomia, from ἵστος, 'the organic texture,' and νομος, 'law.' The aggregate of laws, which preside over the formation and arrangement of the organic tissues.

HISTORY, MEDICAL, Historia Medicinæ. A narration of the chief circumstances, and the persons connected with them, in the progress of medicine.

HISTOS, ἵστος, 'a web or tissue,' 'the organic texture,' Textura seu Tela organica.

HISTOTOMY, Histotomia, from ἵστος, 'organic texture,' and τομή, 'incision.' Dissection of the tissues.

HIVE, Hives.

HIVE SYRUP, Syrupus scillæ compositus.

HIVES, Cynanche trachealis, Urticaria, Variella. In Scotland, according to Dr. Jameson, Hives or Hyses means any eruption of the skin, proceeding from an internal cause; and, in Lothian, it is used to denote both the red and the yellow gum. In the United States, it is vaguely employed: most frequently, perhaps, for Urticaria.

HIVES, BOLD, Cynanche trachealis, Urticaria—h. Eating, Rupia escharotica.

HOARSENESS, Raucedo.

HOAST, Tussis.

HOBBIL, Idiot.

HOB-NAIL LIVER, Cirrhosis of the liver, Liver, nutmeg.

HOC, Alcea rosea.

HOCK, Poples.

HOCKS, Alcea rosea.

HOD, Crick in the neck.

HOFF, Poples.

HOG-LICE, Onisci aselli.

HOGWORT, Hephtallon graveolens.

HOIST, Tussis.

HOLANENCEPHALIA, from ὅλος, 'entire,' and anencephalia, 'absence of brain.' Entire absence of brain,—the same as Anencephalia.—I. G. St. Hilaire.

HOLARTHRTIS, Hamarthritis.

HOLCE, ὄληκ. A drachm.—Galen.

HOLCIMOS, ὄλκιμος, from ὄληκ, 'a weight.'

A tumour of the liver.

HOLCUS SORGHUM, Panicum Italicum.

HOLENE, Ilex aquifolium.

HOLERA, Cholera.

HOLES, BURNT, Rupia escharotica.

HOLLANDS, Gin.

HOLLEN, Ilex aquifolium.

HOLLY, AMERICAN, Ilex opaca—h. Common, Ilex aquifolium—h. Dahoon, Ilex vomitoria

—h. Ground, Pyrola maculata, Pyrola umbellata
 —h. Sea, Eryngium maritimum.
 HOLLYHOCK, COMMON, Alcea rosea.
 HOLMES WEED, Scrophularia nodosa.
 HOLMICOS, Alveolus.
 HOLMOS, Mortar.
 HOLOCYRON, Teucrium chamæpitys.
 HOLOGANGLITIS, Cholera.
 HOLONARCO'SIS, from 'ολος, 'whole,' and ναρκωσις, 'stupor.' Narcosis of the whole body.
Torpescitio universalis.
 HOLOPHLYCTIDES, Phlyctæna.
 HOLOSTEUM ALSINE, Alsine media.
 HOLOSTEUS, Osteocolla.
 HOLOTETANUS, see Tetanus.
 HOLOTONIA, Holotonicus, Tetanus.
 HOLOTON'ICUS, 'ολος, 'the whole,' and τεινω,
 'I stretch.' Holoton'ia. A spasm of the whole body;—a variety of tetanus.—Savages.
 HOLYN, Ilex aquifolium.
 HOLYWELL, MINERAL WATERS OF.
 Holywell is a town in Wales, and takes its name from the famous well of St. Winifred. It is a simple cold water, remarkable for its purity.
 HOMAGRA, Omagra.
 HOMEOPATHY, Homœopathy.
 HOMERDA, Stercus humanum.
 HOME'RIA COLLI'NA, Cape Tulip. A poisonous South African plant, Nat. Ord. Iridææ, the bulb of which acts as a violent acro-narcotic, producing fatal results very speedily.
 HOMESICKNESS, Nostalgia.
 HOMICIDAL, Truculen'tus, Ferus, from homo, 'man,' and caedo, 'I kill.' Pertaining or relating to homicide or the killing of man.
 HOMICIDAL INSAN'ITY, Homici'dal Monoma'nia, (F.) Monomani'c homicide. Insanity, with an irresistible impulse to destroy life.
 HOMILLA, Coition.
 HOM'INY. A word of Indian derivation.
 Maize or Indian corn hulled and coarsely broken.
 It is prepared for food by being mixed with water and boiled.
 HOMINY, WHEATEN, see Groats.
 HOMIOSIS, Homoiosis.
 HOMME, Homo.
 HOMO, (F.) Homme, Man,—the chief and most perfect of the mammalia; in Greek, ανθρωπος, Anthro'pos, from ava, 'upwards,' and τροπω, 'I turn;' because man, alone, of all animals, possesses the natural power of standing erect. He is, also, the only animal whose incisor teeth, wedged in a projecting jaw, are absolutely vertical. Man is especially distinguished from other mammalia by the faculty, which he possesses, of classing his ideas; comparing them with each other; and connecting, representing, and transmitting them by signs and articulate sounds. He possesses, in the highest degree, all the attributes of intelligence,—memory, judgment, and imagination. He inhabits all countries,—the burning regions of the torrid zone, and the chilling atmosphere of the polar climes. In different situations, he presents, in his figure, colour, and stature, differences which have caused mankind to be divided by naturalists into races or varieties.
 The number of such races can only be approximated. Blumenbach admits five, the Caucasian, Ethiopian, Mongolian, Malay, and American.
 Every division must necessarily be arbitrary, and the individuals composing each variety are far from being alike.
 HOMO ALATUS, see Alatus.
 HOMO CAUDA'TUS, 'Tailed man.' A fabulous, tailed variety of the human species, 'incola orbis antaretici,' admitted by Linnæus, although he is uncertain whether to rank them with men or apes!
 HOMO FATUUS, Idiot.

HOMOËD'RUS, from δμων, 'together,' and 'εδρα, 'seat.' Having the same seat. Morbi ho- moëdri:—diseases that have the same seat.
 HOMŒOMORPHOUS, see Homology.
 HOMŒOPATH, Homœopathist.
 HOMŒOPATH'IC, Homœopath'icus, Homœ- op'athes. Relating to homœopathy.
 HOMŒOPATHIE, Homœopathy.
 HOMŒOPATHIST, Homœopath, Homœo- path'icus, Homœopathis'ta, Homœopathis'tes. One who believes in homœopathy.
 HOMŒOPATHY, Homœopathi'a, Arts homœo- path'ica, Homœop'athy, Hahn'emani'ism, Dyna- mop'athy, (F.) Homœopathie, Homœothérapeu- tique, Homœosympathie, Doctrine homœo-orga- nique, from 'ομοιος, 'like,' and παθος, 'affection.'
 A fanciful doctrine, which maintains, that disordered actions in the human body are to be cured by inducing other disordered actions of a like kind, and this to be accomplished by infinitesimally small doses, often of apparently inert agents; the decillionth part of a grain of charcoal, for example, is an authorized dose. It has also been called Glob'ulism.
 HOMŒOSIS, Homoiosis.
 HOMŒOSYMPATHIE, Homœopathy.
 HOMŒOTHERAPEUTIQUE, Homœo- pathy.
 HOMŒOZ'YGY, from 'ομοιος, 'like,' and ζυγωω,
 'I join together.' (F.) Soi-pour-soi. The law of association of organs, by which like parts adhere to like parts.—Serres.
 HOMOETHNIA, Sympathy.
 HOMOGENESIS, see Generation.
 HOMOIOPATHIA, Sympathy.
 HOMOIO'SIS, Homœo'sis, Homio'sis, from
 'ομοιωω, 'I resemble,' 'I assimilate.' An elaboration of the nutritious juice, by which it becomes proper for assimilation.
 HOMOLINON, see Apolinosis.
 HOMOLOGOUS, see Homology.
 HOM'OLOGUE, Homol'ogus, same etymon as homology. A term applied to the same organ in different animals under every variety of form and function.—Owen.
 HOMOL'OGY, from 'ομοιος, 'like,' and λογος,
 'a description.' The doctrine of similarity of structure. Thus, the two sides of the body are said to be 'homologous.' Homol'ogous, homo- morph'ous, or homœomorph'ous tissues are those that resemble others; in opposition to heterol'- ogous, heteroc'elite, or heteromorph'ous, which are new formations. Homology seems now to be accepted as the designation of the doctrine or study, the subject of which is the relations of the parts of animal bodies.—Owen.
 HOMOMORPHOUS, see Homology.
 HOMONOPAGIA, Cephalalgia.
 HOMOPH'AGUS, from 'ωμος, 'raw,' and φαγω,
 'I eat.' One who eats raw flesh.
 HOMOPLAS'TY, Homop'lasti'a, from 'ομοιος,
 'like,' and πλασσω, 'I form.' The formation of homologous tissues.
 HOMOPLATA, Scapula.
 HOMOTONOS, Æqua'tis, from 'ομος, 'equal,' and τωος, 'tone.' That which has the same tone.
 A continued fever, whose symptoms have an equal intensity during the whole course of the disease, has been so called. See Acnasticos, and Synocha.
 HONESTY, Lunaria rediviva.

HOOK, Sax. hoce, hooc, Dutch, hoeek, Uncus, Unc'ius, Anc'yra, (F.) Érigne, Airigne ou Érine. An instrument, consisting of a steel wire, flattened at the middle, and having the extremities crooked and pointed. Some hooks are furnished with a handle at one extremity—the other having one or two hooks;—constituting the single or double hook. The hook is used by anatomists and surgeons to lay hold of, and raise up, certain parts, the dissection of which is delicate, or which would slip from the fingers.

The Tenaculum is a variety of the hook.

HOOK, BLUNT, Ich'thya, Ich'thyè. Onyx, Unguis ferr'eus. An instrument which is passed over the flexures of the joints to assist in bringing down the fœtus in parturition.

HOOP TREE, Melia azedarach.

HOOPER'S PILLS, Pilulæ Aloes et Myrrhæ.

HOOPING-COUGH, Pertussis — h. Roche's Embrocation for, see Roche.

HÔPITAL, Hospital — h. des Fous, Morotrophium.

HOPLOCHRIS'MA, from ὅπλον, 'a weapon,' and χρῖσμα, 'salve.' Unguentum arma'torium, Arm'atory Unguent. A salve which was supposed to cure wounds by sympathy,—the instrument with which the wound was inflicted being anointed with it.

HOPLOMOCH'LION, ὀπλομοχλίων, from ὅπλον, 'a weapon,' and μοχλός, 'a lever.' The name of an iron machine or apparatus, which embraced the whole body like armour. A figure of it is given by Fabricius ab Aquapendente.

HOP, Humulus lupulus — h. Pillow, see Humulus lupulus — h. Plant, Humulus lupulus.

HOPS, see Humulus lupulus.

HOQUET, Singultus.

HORA, Hebe.

HORÆA, Menses.

HORÆOTES, Maturity.

HORDEI MALTUM, Malt.

HORDEOLUM, diminutive of Hordeum, 'barley.' Orde'olum, Pos'thia, Sclerophthal'mia, Cri-thè, Cri-thid'ion, Crythè, Stye, Styan, Stine, (F.) Orgelet, Orgeolet. A small, inflammatory tumour, of the nature of a boil, which exhibits itself near the free edge of the eyelids, particularly near the inner angle of the eye.

HOR'DEUM, Or'deum, Cri-thè. The seeds of Hordeum vulgare or Scotch Barley, Ord. Gramineæ, are ranked amongst the Cerealia. (F.) Orge. They afford a mucilaginous decoction, which is employed as a diluent and antiphlogistic. The seeds of the Hordeum distichon seu æstivum, Zeo'c'ron distichum, and H. hexastichon possess similar properties. Barley is freed from its shells in mills, forming the Hor'deum mundatum seu decortica'tum seu excortica'tum, Hor'deum of the Pharmacopœias; and, at times, is rubbed into small, round grains, somewhat like pearls, when it is called Hordeum perlatum, Pearl Barley, (F.) Orge perlé, and forms the Hordeum denudatum seu perlatum, the Hordei sem'ina tu'nica nudata, of the Pharmacopœias, — Hordeum (Ph. U. S.)

HORNSEED, Ergot.

HORNY, Corneous.

HORNY EXCRESCENCES, Lepido'sis, Ichthyi'a-sis cornig'era, Cor'nea cuta'nea, (F.) Cornes de la Peau. Certain excrescences, which occasionally form on some part of the skin, and resemble, in shape, the horns of an animal.

HORNY SUBSTANCE, see Tooth.

HORRENTIA, Horrification.

HOR'RIDA CUTIS, Goose-skin, Cutis anse-r'ina, Dermatospasmus, Spasmus peripher'icus. A state of the skin produced by cold or fear, and accompanying the rigor of an intermittent.

HORRIPILA'TION, Horripila'tio, Horror, Horren'tia, Phricè, Phricas'mus, Phric'asis, Phri'cia, from horvere, 'to bristle up,' and pilus, 'hair.' (F.) Horrification, Frissonnement. General chilliness, preceding fever, and accompanied with bristling of the hairs over the body.

HORROR, Horrification — h. Ciborum, Disgust for food.

HORSE BALM, Collinsonia Canadensis — h. Cane, Ambrosia trifida — h. Chestnut, Æsculus hippocastanum — h. Crust, Crusta genu equinæ.

HOSPITAL, primarily from hospes, hospitis, 'a guest.' Infirm'ary, (Old Eng.) Farm'ery, Spit'al, Nosocomi'um, Adynatocomi'um, Adynatodochi'um, Xenodochi'um, Xenodoche'um, Infirm'arium, Infirmato'rium, Nosodochi'um, Valetudina'rium, (F.) Hôpital. An establishment for the reception of the sick, in which they are maintained and treated medically. Hospitals were first instituted about the end of the 4th century; a period at which the word νοσοκομειον was employed, for the first time, by St. Jerome. They may be general, receiving all cases; or special, admitting only the subjects of certain diseases.

HOSPITAL GANGRENE, Phagedæ'na gangræno'sa, Putrid or Malignant Ulcer, Gangræ'na Nosocomi'um seu Nosocomia'lis seu Contagio'sa, Sphac'elus nosocomia'lis, Hos'pital Sore, Putre'do, (F.) Pourriture ou Gangrène d'hôpital. Gangrene, occurring in wounds or ulcers, in hospitals, the air of which has been vitiated by the accumulation of patients, or some other circumstance. Hospital gangrene — many different varieties of which are met with, and always accompanied or preceded by fever—commonly commences with suppression of the suppuration of the wound, which becomes covered with a grayish and tenacious sanies. The gangrene then manifests itself. It extends from the centre of the ulcerated surface towards the edges; these become swollen, painful, and everted; and the patient dies with all the signs of typhus. The treatment must be varied according to circumstances. Sometimes, it requires the use of stimulating, acid, caustic, and antiseptic applications; with, occasionally, the actual cautery, aided by the exhibition of tonics, internally:—at others, the antiphlogistic regimen and emollient applications may be necessary.

HUM, VENOUS, Bruit de diable.

HUMBLE, Rectus inferior oculi.

HUMECTANTIA. From humectare, 'to moisten.' A name formerly given to drinks, which appeared to possess the property of augmenting the fluidity of the blood.

HUMERAL, Humera'lis. That which belongs to, or is connected with, the arm or humerus.

HUMERAL ARTERY, Arteria humera'lis, see Brachial artery.

HUMÉRO-CUBITAL. Brachialis anterior—h. Sus-métacarpien, see Radialis—h. Sus-radial, Supinator radii longus.

HUMERUS, Scapula, Omos, Armus, (F.) Épaule, Shoulder, (Prov.) Spaud. The most elevated part of the arm. The bones, which concur in forming it, are—the scapula, head of the humerus, and the clavicle, united together by strong ligaments, and covered by numerous muscles.

HUMERUS, Os hu'neri seu brachii seu adjutorium seu brachia'le, Brachium, Lacertus, Shoulderbone, (Prov.) Spaut-bone, Spaw-bone, Shullbane, is the cylindrical, irregular bone of the arm; the upper extremity of which has a hemispherical head connected with the scapula; and two tuberosities or tubercles, a greater and a lesser, for the attachment of muscles, between which is the Bicipital groove or Fossa. At the inferior extremity may be remarked—the inner condyle, the outer condyle; the small head, which is articulated with the radius; the trochlea articulated with the ulna, &c. The humerus is developed by seven points of ossification:—one for the body; one for the head; one for the greater tuberosity; one for the trochlea; one for the epitrochlea; one for the epicondyle; and another for the lesser head.

HUMORAL, Humoralis, from humere, 'to moisten.' Proceeding from, or connected with, the humours.

HUMORES INQULINI, Recremential Secretions.

HUMORIQUE, see Bruit humorique.

HUMORISM, Humoral Pathology, Pathologia humeralis. A medical theory, founded exclusively on the parts which the humours were considered to play in the production of disease. Although traces of this system may be found in the most remote antiquity, the creation, or, at all events, the arrangement of it may be attributed to Galen, who enveloped it in metaphysical subtleties relating to the union between the elements and the four cardinal humours.

HUMORISTS. The Galenic and other physicians, who attributed all diseases to the depraved state of the humours, or to vicious juices collected in the body.

HUMOUR, Humor, Hygro-sia, Hygre-don, Hygrum. Every fluid substance of an organized body;—as the blood, chyle, lymph, &c. The Humours, χυμοι, Chymi, Humores, differ considerably as to number and quality in the different species of organized beings; and even in the same species, according to the state of health or disease. The ancients reduced them to four; which they called cardinal humours:—the blood, phlegm, yellow bile, and atrabillis or black bile. A modern classification of the humours is given under Fluid.

HUMP. Perhaps from umbo, 'the boss of a buckler.' Hunch, Gibber, Gibbus, Gibba, Tuber, (F.) Bosse. A prominence, formed by a deviation of the bones of the trunk. Commonly, it is formed by the spine or sternum, and is seated at the posterior or anterior part of the trunk. It may, also, be produced by deviation of the ribs or pelvis. The spine may be curved in three principal directions. 1. Backwards, the most common case; this the ancients called κυφωσις, Cyphosis, Gibbositas. 2. Forwards, λορδωσις, Lordosis, Recurvatio; and 3. Laterally, σκολιωσις, Scoliosis, Obstipatio. Most curvatures occur at a very early age, and are caused by scrofula, rickets, &c.; and, not infrequently, they are accompanied by caries of the vertebræ. See Vertebral disease. One who is affected with a hump, or is hump-backed, Humpty, Huckshouldered, Shrump-shouldered, (Sc.) Hulgiebacked, Trudgebacked, (Prov.) Croopbacked, is called, by the French, bossu.

HUMPBACHED, see Hump.

HUMPTY, see Hump.

HUMULUS, Humulus lupulus.

HUMULUS LUPULUS, Lu'pulus, L. scandens seu communis seu salictarius, Humulus, (from humus, 'the ground on which it creeps,') Convolverulus perennis, the Hop-plant. Nat. Ord. Urticaceæ. (F.) Houblon, Vigne du nord. Its cones or strobiles, Humuli strobili (Ph. L.), Humulus (Ph. U. S.), have a fragrant odour; and a bitter, aromatic taste, depending on a peculiar principle, named Lu'pulin, extractive and essential oil, which may be extracted, equally, by water and spirit, from the dried strobiles. The hop is employed as a tonic and hypnotic, and enters into the composition of ale and beer.

The Hop pillow, Pulv'nar Humuli, has long been used for producing sleep.

HUNCH, Hump.

HUNGARICA FEBRIS, Fever, Hungary.

HUNGER, Anglo-Saxon, hungræ, Fames, Limos, Peinē, Peina, Esurries, Jejunium, Jejunitas, Esurit'io, Esuri'go, (F.) Faim. The necessity for taking food. Hunger is an internal sensation, which some authors have attributed to the friction between the sides of the stomach in its empty state; others, to the compression of the nerves, when the organ is contracted; others, to the action of the gastric juice, &c. It is dictated by the wants of the system:—farther we know not. See Appetite.

HUNGER-CURE, Limotherapeia.

HUNGRY, Famel'icus, Li'micus, Limo'des; (Prov.) Hac, (vulg.) Peckish; same etymon. Affected with hunger.

HURA BRASILIENSIS, Assacou, Assacū, Ussacū. A Brazilian tree, of the Nat. Ord. Euphorbiaceæ, which, in form of the extract of the bark, is esteemed a specific in leprosy. It is, also, given in elephantiasis, and as an anthelmintic.

HURDIES, Nates.

HURTLEBERRY, Vaccinium myrtillus.

HYA-HYA, Tabernæmontana utilis.

HYACINTH, WILD, Scilla esculenta.

HYACINTHUS MUSCARI, Bulbus vomitorius.

HYÆNAN'CHÈ GLOBO'SA. An arborescent shrub of South Africa, Nat. Ord. Euphorbiaceæ, the fruit of which, pounded, is used to destroy hyænas and other beasts of prey, and seems to contain strychnia.

HYALEUS, Hyaline.

HY'ALINE, Hyalinus, Hyal'us, Vit'reus, Vit'reous, (F.) Vitreux, vitré. Glassy. Resembling glass.

HYALINE SUBSTANCE, Cytoblastema.

HYALITIS, Inflammat'io tunicæ hyaloïd'eæ, Hyaloiditis, Vit'reo-capsulitis, from hyaloid, and itis, denoting inflammation. Inflammation of the hyaloid membrane of the eye.

HY'ALOID, Hyalodes, Hyaloi'des, from 'υαλος, 'glass,' and υωος, 'resemblance.' Vitriform; resembling glass.

HYALOID CANAL, see Hyaloid membrane.

HYALOID FOSSA, Fossa Hyaloïd'eæ, is a cup-like excavation in the vitreous humour, in which the crystalline is imbedded.

HY'ALOID MEMBRANE, Tu'nica Hyaloïd'eæ seu Vit'rea, Membra'na Arachnoïd'eæ, is the extremely delicate membrane, which forms the exterior covering of the vitreous humour, and transmits within it prolongations, which divide it into cells. Fallopius discovered this membrane, and gave it the name Hyaloid. On a level with the entrance of the optic nerve into the eye, the hyaloid membrane has been described as forming, by reflection, a cylindrical canal, which pierces the vitreous humour from behind to before, as far as the posterior part of the crystalline. See Canal, hyaloid. At its anterior part is a depression—

Fossa patella'ris seu lenticula'ris for the reception of the crystalline lens.

HYALOIDITIS, Hyalitis.

HYALONIXIS, see Cataract.

HYALONYXIS, see Cataract.

HYALOS, Vitrum.

HYANCHE, Cynanche tonsillarum.

HYBOMA, Gibbositas.

HYBRID, H'brida, Hy'brida, (F.) Hybride, from the Greek 'υβρις, 'υβριδος, 'mongrel or murel.' (F.) Métis, Mulet. A being born of two different species,—as the mule. The term is applied to plants as well as to animals. The result is termed Hybridity. Hybrid is often, also, used to designate words which are formed from two different languages—as uter-ititis, for inflammation of the uterus, in place of metritis.

HYBRIDITY, see Hybrid.

HYDARTHROSIS, Hydrarthrus.

HYDARTHROS, Hydrarthrus.

HYDAS, Hydor.

HYDATID, Hy'datis, Bulla, Aqu'ula, Hydro'ena, Hydrocyst'is, Hygrocyst'is, Tænia hydatig'ena, Echinococcus hum'anus, from 'υδωρ, 'υδατος, 'water.' This name was long given to every encysted tumour which contained an aqueous and transparent fluid. Many pathologists subsequently applied it to vesicles, softer than the tissue of membranes, more or less transparent, which are developed within organs, but without adhering to their tissues. It is by no means clear that these formations are really entozoa. They have been found in various parts of the body; sometimes in the uterus, occasioning signs nearly similar to those of pregnancy, but being sooner or later expelled. The expulsion is generally attended with more or less hemorrhage. See Acephalocystis.

Hydat'is, Aqu'ula, Phlyctæ'nula, Verru'ca Palpebra'rum, Mil'ium, also, meant a small, transparent tumour of the eyelids.—Galen, C. Hoffmann.

HYDATIDES CERVICIS UTERI, Nabothi glandulæ.

HYDATIDOCE'LE, Hydatoc'e'lê, from 'υδατις, 'hydatid,' and κληη, 'a tumour.' Oscheocele containing hydatids; the Oscheoc'e'lê hydatido'su, Hydatidoscheoc'e'lê of Sauvages.

HYDATIDOÏDES, Hydatoid.

HYDATIDO'MA, from 'υδατις, 'hydatid.' A tumour caused by hydatids.

HYDATIDOSCHEOCELE, Hydatidocele.

HYDATIFORM, Hydatiform'is. A hybrid word from hydatid and forma, 'form.' Resembling an hydatid.

HYDATINUS, Hydatoid.

HYDATIS FINNA, Cysticercus cellulosæ.

HYDATIS'MUS, from 'υδωρ, 'υδατος, 'water.' The noise caused by the fluctuation of pus contained in an abscess.—Aurelian, Foësius.

HYDATOCELE, Hydatidocele, Hydrocele.

HYDATOCH'OLOS, from 'υδωρ, 'υδατος, 'water,' and χολη, 'bile.' Aquo'so-bil'iosus. An epithet given to evacuated matters when mixed with water and bile.—Hippocrates, Foësius.

HYDATODES, Aqueous.

HYDATOID, Hydatoi'des, A'queous, Aquo'ens, Hydat'o'des, Hydat'inus, Hydatido'des, Hydatoidoi'des, from 'υδωρ, 'υδατος, 'water,' and ειδος, 'resemblance.' Watery. Resembling water. This name has been given to the membrane of the aqueous humour; and, also, to the aqueous humour itself. Vinum hydat'o'des; wine and water.

HYDATONCUS, Anasarca, Œdema.

HYDATOPO'SIA, from 'υδωρ, 'υδατος, 'water,' and ποσις, 'drinking.' Water-drinking;—hence HYDATOPOTES. A water-drinker.

HYDATOTHERAPEIA, Hydrosudotherapeia.

HYDERICUS, Hydropic.

HYDERODES, Hydropic.

HYDERONCUS, Anasarca, Œdema.

HYDEROS, Anasarca, Hydrops.

HYDOR, hy'datos, 'υδωρ, 'υδατος, and Hydas, hy'datos, 'υδας, 'υδατος, 'water.' Hence:

HYDRACHNIS, see Variella.

HYDRADEN, Conglobate gland.

HYDRADENITIS, Inflamma'tio glandula'rum lymphatica'rum, from Hydraden, 'a lymphatic gland,' and itis, denoting inflammation. Inflammation of a lymphatic gland.

HYDRÆ'DUS, from 'υδωρ, 'water,' and αἰδοια, 'genital organs.' Œdema of the female organs.

HYDRÆMIA, Hydroæmia.

HYDRAGOGA, Hydragogues.

HYDRAGOGIA, Hydragogues.

HYDRAGOGICA, Hydragogues.

HY'DRAGOGUES, Hydrago'gia, Hydrago'gia, Hydrago'gia, Hydro'ica, Aquidu'ca, from 'υδωρ, 'water,' and αγω, 'I expel.' Medicines believed to be capable of expelling serum effused into any part of the body. These are generally cathartics or diuretics.

HYDRAGOGUM BOYLEI, Argenti nitras.

HYDRALLANTE, False Waters.

HYDRAL'LAS, from 'υδωρ, 'water,' and αλλας, 'a sausage,'—see Allantois. A morbid increase in the quantity of the fluid of the allantois.

HYDRALMÆ, Waters, mineral (saline).

HYDRAM'NIOS, from 'υδωρ, 'water,' and 'amnios.' An excessive quantity of the liquor amnii.

HYDRAN'GEA ARBORES'CENS, H. vulgo'ris, Sevenbark, Wild Hydran'gea, Bissum. Ord. Hydrangeæ. An indigenous plant, which flowers in July. The leaves are said to be tonic, sialagogue, cathartic, diuretic, and antilithic. [?]

HYDRANGEITIS, Angioloecitis.

HYDRANGIA, Lymphatic vessels.

HYDRANGIOGRAPHIA, Angiohydrography.

HYDRANGIOTOMIA, Angiohydrotomy.

HYDRARGYRANATRIP'SIS, Hydrargyren'trip'sis, from 'υδραργυρος, 'quicksilver,' and ανατριβις, 'rubbing in.' The rubbing in of a preparation of quicksilver:—Hydrargyrotrip'sis.

HYDRARGYRENTRIPSIS, Hydrargyrana-tripsis.

HYDRARGYRI ACETAS, Hydrargyrus acetatus—h. Bichloridum, H. oxymurias—h. Bicyanidum, H. cyanuretum—h. Binioididum, H. iodi-dium rubrum—h. Binoxidum, H. oxydum rubrum—h. Bisulphuretum, H. sulphuretum rubrum—h. Borussias, H. cyanuretum—h. Bromidum, see Bromine—h. Calx alba, Hydrargyrum præcipitatum—h. Chloridum, H. submurias—h. Chloridum corrosivum, H. Oxymurias—h. Chloridum mite, H. submurias.

HYDRARGYRI CYANURE'TUM, H. Cyan'idum seu Borus'sias seu Bicyan'idum, Hydrar'gyrum Cyanogenat'um seu Hydrocyan'icum seu Borus'sicum seu Zool'icum, Prussias Hydrar'gyri, Cyan'uret or Prussiate of Mercury, (F.) Cyanure de Mer-cure. (Ferri Ferro-cyanuret. ζ iv; Hydrarg. oxid. rubr. ζ ij, vel q. s.; Aqua destillat. Oijj. Put the ferro-cyanuret and three ounces of the oxide of mercury, previously powdered and thoroughly mixed together, into a glass vessel, and pour on two pints of the distilled water. Boil the mixture, stirring constantly; and if, at the end of half an hour, the blue colour remains, add small portions of the oxide of mercury, continuing the ebullition until the mixture becomes of a yellowish colour; then filter through paper. Wash the residue in a pint of the distilled water, and filter. Mix the solution and evaporate till a pellicle appears, and set the liquor aside, that crystals may form. To purify the crystals, subject it to resolution, evaporation, and crystallization.—Ph. U. S.) This preparation has been strongly recommended as a powerful antisyphilitic, and is admitted into the Parisian codex. Twelve to twenty-four grains may be dissolved in a quart of distilled water, and three or four spoonfuls of the solution be taken daily in a glass of any appropriate liquid.

HYDRARGYRI DEUTO-IODIDUM, H. Iodidum rubrum—h. Deuto-ioduretum, see Iodine—h. Deutonitras, see H. nitras—h. Dipernitras, see H. nitras—h. Hyperoxodes, Hydrargyri nitricooxydum.

HYDRARGYRI IOD'IDUM, H. Protoiod'idum seu Proto-iodure'tum seu Subiod'idum, Hydrar'gyrum Ioda'tum flavum seu Iodidula'tum, Iod'idum seu Iodure'tum hydrargyro'sum, Protoiodure'tum mercur'ri, Iodide ou Proti'odide of Mercury, (F.) Protoïdure ou Protiödure de Mercure, (Hydrarg. 3j, Iodin, ʒv, Alcohol q. s. Rub the mercury and iodine together, adding sufficient alcohol to form a soft paste, and continue the trituration till the globules disappear. Dry the iodide in the dark, with a gentle heat, and keep it in a well-stopped bottle, the light excluded.—Ph. U. S.) Dose, one grain, gradually raised to three or four.

HYDRARGYRI IODIDUM CHLORIDI, Mercury, iodide of chloride of.

HYDRARGYRI IODIDUM RUBRUM, H. Biniod'idum seu Deuto-iod'idum seu Deuto-iodure'tum seu Perioid'idum, Hydrarg'rum Ioda'tum rubrum seu Biioda'tum seu Perioida'tum, Iode'tum seu Iod'idum Hydrargyr'icum, Deuto-iodure'tum mercur'ri, Red Iodide, Bin'iodide, Deuti'odide and Peri'odide of Mercury, (F.) Deutiödure ou Biödure ou Periödure de Mercure. (Hydrarg. corros. chlorid. ʒj, Potassii Iodid. ʒx. Aquæ destillat. Oj. Dissolve the chloride in a pint and a half, and the iodide of potassium in half a pint of distilled water, and mix the solutions. Collect the precipitate on a filter, and, having washed it with distilled water, dry it with a moderate heat, and keep it in a well-stopped bottle.—Ph. U. S.) Dose, one-sixteenth to one-fourth of a grain.

HYDRARGYRI MURIAS BASI OXYDI IMPERFECTI, H. oxymurias—h. Murias corrosivum, H. oxymurias—h. Murias dulcis sublimatus, H. submurias—h. Oxygenatus, H. Oxymurias—h. Murias spirituosus liquidus, Liquor hydrargyri oxymuriatis—h. Murias suboxygenatus præcipitatione paratus. Hydrargyrum præcipitatum.

HYDRARGYRI NITRAS, Nitras Hydrar'gyri in crystall'os concre'tus, Hydrargyrum nit'ricum, Mercurius nitro'sus fri'gore para'tus, Nitras hydrargyro'sus, Az'otas hydrargyro'sus, Nitrate of Mercury, (F.) Azotate de mercure, Protozotate de mercure, Nitrate mercur'uz. It is employed in syphilis; and, externally, in fungous, obstinate ulcers.

It is used in the formation of the Soluble Mercury of Hahnemann.

An acid nitrate of mercury, Hydrar'gyri deuto-nitras seu dipernitras seu supernitras, Mercur'ius nitro'sus cal'idè para'tus, Nitras hydrargyr'icus, Az'otas hydrargyr'icus liq'uidus, Liquor Hydrar'gyri supernitra'tis, Hydrargyri pernitra'tis Liquor, (Ph. D.) Solution of supernitrate of mercury, Solution of supernitrate of deutozide of mercury, (F.) Deutozotate acide liquide de mercure, Nitrate acide de mercure, made by dissolving four parts of mercury in eight of nitric acid, and evaporating the solution to nine parts, has been used as a caustic in malignant ulcerations and cancerous affections.

Ward's White Drops,—a once celebrated antiscorbutic nostrum,—were prepared by dissolving mercury in nitric acid, and adding a solution of carbonate of ammonia; or, frequently, they consisted of a solution of sublimate with carbonate of ammonia.

HYDRARGYRI NIT'RICO-OX'YDUM, Hydrar'gyri oxydum rubrum (Ph. U. S.), Hydrargyrus nitro'us ruber, Mercur'ius corros'ivus ruber seu præcipita'tus corros'ivus seu præcipita'tus ruber seu coralli'nus, Area'num coralli'num, Pul'vis prin'cipis, Præcipita'tus ruber, Ox'ydum hydrargyr'icum comple'tum seu hydrargyr'icum, Panac'ea mercur'ri rubra, Pulvis Joa'n'nis de Vigo, Oxo'des hydrargyri rubrum, Hyperoxo'des hydrargyri, Ox'ydum hydrar'gyri nit'ricum seu hydrargyri rubrum per ac'idum nit'ricum, Nitric oxide of mercury, Red precipitate, (F.) Oxide nitrique de mercure, Précipité rouge ou per se, Mercure corallin, Nitrate de mercure rouge. (Hydrarg. ʒxxxvj; Acid. nitric. fʒxviiij; Aquæ Oij. Dissolve the mercury with a gentle heat, in the acid and water previously mixed, and evaporate to dryness. Rub into powder, and heat in a very shallow vessel till red vapours cease to rise.—Ph. U. S.) It is a stimulant and escharotic, and used as such in foul ulcers, being sprinkled on the part in fine powder, or united with lard into an ointment.

HYDRARGYRI OXODES RUBRUM, Hydrargyri nitricooxydum—h. Oxydi murias ammoniacalis, Hydrargyrum præcipitatum—h. Oxydulum nigrum, H. Oxydum cinereum.

HYDRARGYRI OXYDUM CINE'REUM, Ethiops per se, Mercur'ius niger Mosca'ti seu præcipita'tus niger, Oxydum hydrar'gyri nigrum seu hydrargyro'sum seu hydrargyr'icum præcipita'tus, Oxy'dulum hydrar'gyri nigrum, Pulvis mercurialis cine'reus, Mercurius cine'reus, Turpe'tulum nigrum, Gray or Black oxide of Mercury, (F.) Oxide de mercure cendrè, Oxide gris ou noir de mercure, Protozide de mercure. This oxide is made in various ways. It may be formed by boiling submuriate of mercury in lime water. The dose of this Pulvis Hydrargyri cinereus is from two to ten grains. There are four other preparations of it in estimation, viz.—Plenk's solution, made by rubbing mercury with mucilage. 2. By rubbing equal parts of sugar and mercury together. 3. A compound of honey or liquorice and purified mercury. 4. The blue pill, and ointment. All these possess the usual properties of mercury—

The Hydrargyri Oxidum Nigrum of the Ph. U. S. is made as follows:—Hydrarg. Chlorid. mit., Potassa, ʒiij, Aquæ Oj. Dissolve the potassa in the water, allow the dregs to subside, and pour off the clear solution. To this add the chloride, and stir constantly till the black oxide is formed. Pour off the supernatant liquor, wash the black oxide with distilled water, and dry with a gentle heat. Dose, one or two grains.

The Mercurius solubilis of Hahnemann is formed from a black oxide of mercury. It is the Mercurius solubilis Hahnemanni, Oxydum hydrargyri nigri median'te ammo'niâ ex protonitra'te hydrar'gyri præcipita'tum, Az'otas hydrargyro'so-ammo'niæus, (F.) Azotate de mercure et d'ammoniaque, Oxide gris ou noir de Mercure, Précipité noir, Turbith noir, which has been esteemed, in Germany and France, as an antisyphilitic. Dose gr. 1-5th to gr. i. It is used in the same cases as the Hydrargyri oxydum cinereum.

HYDRARGYRI OXYDUM NIGRUM, H. oxydum cinereum—h. Oxydum nigrum mediante ammoniâ et protonitrate hydrargyri præcipitatum, see H. oxydum cinereum—h. Oxydum nitricum, Hydrargyri nitricooxydum.

HYDRARGYRI OXYDUM RUBRUM, H. Binor'ydum, Mercurius calcina'tus, Hydrar'gyrus calcina'tus, (F.) Oxide de Mercure rouge, Red oxide of mercury. (Made by precipitation from a solution of bichloride of mercury by solution of potassa.) See Hydrargyri nitricooxydum.

It is stimulant and escharotic; and, in large doses, emetic. Owing to the violence of its operation, it is seldom given internally.

HYDRARGYRI OXYDUM RUBRUM PER ACIDUM NITRICUM, Hydrargyri nitrico-oxydum—h. Oxydum saccharatum, Hydrargyrum saccharatum—h. Oxydum sulphuricum, Hydrargyrum vitriolatum.

HYDRARGYRI OXYMURIAS, H. Chloridum Corrosivum (Ph. U. S.), seu Bichloridum seu Permuriatis, Hydrargyrum muriatum, Muriatis hydrargyri corrosivus seu oxygenatus seu hydrargyri basi oxydi imperfecti seu hydrargyri corrosivum, Sublimatus corrosivus, Sublimatum corrosivum, Mercurias corrosivus seu corrosivus sublimatus, Supermuriatis hydrargyri, (F.) Deutochlorure ou Bichloride de mercure, Muriate oxygéné de mercure, Sublimé corrosif; Bichloride or Oxymuriate or Corrosive muriate of mercury, Corrosive sublimate. (Hydrarg. ℥ij, Acid. Sulphur. ℥iij, Sodii Chlorid. ℥iiss. Boil the mercury with the sulphuric acid until the sulphate of mercury is left dry. Rub this, when cold, with the chloride of sodium, in an earthenware mortar; then sublime with a gradually increasing heat.—Ph. U. S.) It is used as an antisyphilitic eutrophic in venereal complaints, old cutaneous affections, &c. Gr. iij to ℥j of water is a good gargle in venereal sore-throats, or an injection in gonorrhœa. Externally, it is applied in cases of tetter, and to destroy fungus, or stimulate old ulcers. Dose, gr. 1-16 to gr. 1-8, in pill, once in twenty-four hours. White of egg is the best antidote to it, when taken in an overdose.

The YELLOW WASH, Aqua phagedœnica, Lo'tio Hydrargyri flava, Phagedœnic Wash, is made by adding corrosive sublimate to lime-water, usually in the proportion of fifteen grains to half a pint. It is a common application to syphilitic sores.

HYDRARGYRI PERIODIDUM, H. Iodidum rubrum—h. Permuriatis, Hydrargyri oxymuriatis—h. Proto-iodidum, H. Iodidum—h. Proto-ioduretum, H. Iodidum—h. Proto-tartras, H. tartras—h. Prussias, H. cyanuretum—h. Saccharum vermifugum, Hydrargyrum saccharatum—h. Subchloridum, H. Submuriatis—h. Subiodidum, H. Iodidum.

HYDRARGYRI SUBMURIAS, H. Chloridum seu Subchloridum seu Chloridum mitè (Ph. U. S.), Calomelas, Calomelanos Torqueti, Calomeli, Hydrargyrum muriatum mitè, Draco mitigatus, Submuriatis hydrargyri mitis, Submuriatis Hydrargyri sublimatum, Mercurius dulcis seu dulcis sublimatus;—when precipitated, M. dulcis precipitatus, M. sublimatus dulcis, M. Zoeticus Hartmanni,—Panacea Mercurialis (when nine times sublimed), Muriatis hydrargyri dulcis sublimatus, Aquila, Manna Metallorum, Panchymagogum mineralè, P. Quercetanus, mild Chloride, protochloride, submuriate, subchloride, or mild Muriate of Mercury, Calomel, (F.) Mercuré doux, Protochlorure de mercure. Mild chloride of mercury is thus directed to be prepared in the Pharmacopœia of the United States:—Mercury, ℥iij; Sulphuric Acid, ℥iij; Chloride of Sodium, ℥iiss; Distilled water, a sufficient quantity. Boil two pounds of the mercury with the sulphuric acid, until the sulphate of mercury is left dry. Rub this, when cold, with the remainder of the mercury, in an earthenware mortar, until they are thoroughly mixed. Then add the chloride of sodium, and rub it with the other ingredients till all the globules disappear: afterwards sublime. Reduce the sublimed matter to a very fine powder, and wash it frequently with boiling distilled water, till the washings afford no precipitate upon the addition of liquid ammonia; then dry it. Properties. Antisyphilitic and sialagogue: in large doses, purgative. Dose: one or two grains given at night gradually excite ptyalism. Gr. v to xx, purge. Children bear large doses than adults.

The BLACK WASH, Lo'tio Hydrargyri nigra, is formed of calomel, ℥ij; Lime-water, ℥j. Used for syphilitic sores.

HYDRARGYRI SUBMURIAS AMMONIATUM, Hydrargyrum præcipitatum—h. Subsulphas flavus, Hydrargyrum vitriolatum—h. Subsulphas peroxidati, Hydrargyrum vitriolatum—h. Sulphas, Hydrargyrum vitriolatum, Hydrargyri sulphas flavus.

(Hydrarg., Sulphur, āā ℥j. Rub together till the globules disappear, Ph. U. S.) Used chiefly in scrofulous and cutaneous affections. Dose, gr. x to ℥ss.

HYDRARGYRI SULPHURETUM RUBRUM, H. Bisulphuretum, Hydrargyrum sulphuratum ruber, Minium purum seu Græcorum, Magnes epilepsias, Ammon, Purpurisum, Mercurius Cinnabarinus, Cinnabaris, Cinabaris, Cinabarium, Bisulphuret or Red Sulphuret of Mercury, Cinnabar, Cinoper, Vermilion, (F.) Sulfure de Mercure rouge, Cinabre, Cinnabre. (Hydrarg. ℥xl; Sulphur, ℥viiij. Mix the mercury with the sulphur melted over the fire; and as soon as the mass begins to swell remove the vessel from the fire, and cover it with considerable force to prevent combustion. Rub the mass into powder and sublime. (Ph. U. S.)

It is an antisyphilitic, but is chiefly used in fumigation against venereal ulcers of the nose, mouth, and throat;—℥ss being thrown on a red-hot iron. This preparation is the basis of a nostrum, called Boerhaave's Red Pill.

HYDRARGYRI SUPERMURIAS, H. oxymuriatis—h. Supernitras, see Hydrargyri nitras.

HYDRARGYRI TARTRAS, H. Proto-tartras, Tartrate of Mercury. Antisyphilitic. Dose, one or two grains twice a day.

HYDRARGYRI ET ARSENICI IODIDUM, Arsenic and Mercury, iodide of.

HYDRARGYRI ET QUINLE PROTO-CHLORIDUM, Protochloride of Mercury and Quinia. A combination of mild chloride of mercury and quinia, administered in obstinate cutaneous diseases.

HYDRARGYRIA, Eczema mercuriale.

HYDRARGYRIASIS, Hydrargyrosis, from ὑδραργυρος, 'mercury.' A disease induced by the use of mercury; Morbus Mercurialis, (F.) Maladie Mercurielle. Poisoning by mercury. Eczema mercuriale. Also, the phenomena produced by mercury on the organism, Mercurialism, Mercurialism'sus.

A fluid, brilliant metal; of a slightly bluish white colour; fluid above—39° of Fahr. and under 656°. S. g., when liquid, 13.568 (Cavendish); easily oxydized. Metallic quicksilver does not act on the body, even when taken into the stomach. When oxydized, and combined with acids, it acts powerfully. It has been exhibited in cases of constriction of the bowels and in intussusception, from a notion that it must certainly pass through the bowels by its gravity. The water, in which mercury has been boiled, has been recommended as a vermifuge; but it probably enjoys no such property, as chemical tests do not exhibit the presence of the metal. When the crude metal is distilled in an iron retort, it forms the Hydrargyrum purificatum.

HYDRARGYRUM AMMONIATO-MURIATICUM, H. præcipitatum—h. Ammoniatum, H. præcipitatum—h. Biiodatum, Hydrargyri iodidum rubrum—h. Biiodatum cum kalio iodato, Potassii hydrargyroiodidum—h. Borussicum, Hydrargyri cyanuretum—h. Cyanogenatum, Hydrargyri cyanuretum.

HYDRARGYRUM CUM CRETĀ (Ph. U. S.), Hydrargyrum cum cretâ, Mercurius alkalissatus, Mercury with chalk, Æthiops alcalissatus, Gray powder, (F.) Mercure avec la craie. (Hydrarg. ʒij; Cretâ præparat. ʒv. Rub them together till the globules disappear. Ph. U. S.) A protoxide of mercury, formed by trituration with carbonate of lime. It is somewhat uncertain; and consequently not much employed as a mercurial. It possesses the properties of the black oxide of mercury, and may be advantageously exhibited in cases of diarrhoea in children, dependent upon acidity and vitiated secretions. Dose, gr. v to ʒss, twice a day, in any viscid substance.

HYDRARGYRUM CUM MAGNEŒIĀ of the Dublin Pharmacopœia resembles it in properties.

HYDRARGYRUM HYDROCYANICUM, Hydrargyri cyanuretum—h. Iodatum, Hydrargyri iodidum—h. Iodatum cum chlorido Mercurii, Mercurii, iodide of chloride of—h. Iodatum flavum, Hydrargyri iodidum—h. Iodatum rubrum, Hydrargyri iodidum rubrum—h. Iodidulatum, Hydrargyri iodidum—h. Muriaticum Mite, Hydrargyri submurias—h. Nitricum, Hydrargyri nitras—h. Periodatum, Hydrargyri iodidum rubrum.

HYDRARGYRUM PRÆCIPITĀTUM, H. ammoniatum (Ph. U. S.), H. ammoniato-muriaticum, Hydrargyri ammonio-chloridum, Mercurius cosmeticus, Mercurius oxidii hydrargyri ammoniacalis, M. hydrargyri sub-oxygenatus præcipitatio-næparatus, Submurias ammoniaco-hydrargyricus, S. Hydrargyri ammoniatum seu Præcipitatum, Calc hydrargyri alba, Præcipitatum album, Ammonio-chloride of Mercury, White precipitate of Mercury, White precipitate, Calcintum majus Poterii, (F.) Sousmuriate de mercure précipité ou Précipité blanc. (Hydrarg. chlorid. corros. ʒvj; aque distillat. cong., Liqueur ammonia, fʒviij. Dissolve the chloride in the water, with the aid of heat, and to the solution, when cold, add the solution of ammonia, frequently stirring. Wash the precipitate till it is tasteless, and dry it.—Ph. U. S.)

A peroxide, combined with muriatic acid and ammonia, forming a triple salt. It is used in powder, to destroy vermin; and, united with lard, for the same purpose, as well as in scabies and some other cutaneous affections.

HYDRARGYRUM SACCHARĀTUM, Æthiops saccharatus, Mercurius saccharatus, Oxidum hydrargyri saccharatum, Saccharum hydrargyri vermicifugum. A mild mercurial formula in several of the Pharmacopœias of continental Europe; formed by trituration one part of mercury with two of white sugar. It is used in the venereal affections of children.

HYDRARGYRUM ZOOTICUM, Hydrargyri cyanuretum.

HYDRARGYRUS, Hydrargyrum.

HYDRARGYRUS ACETĀTUS, Sperma mercurii, Terra foliata mercurii, Mercurius acetatus, Hydrargyri Acetas, Acetas seu Proto-acetas Hydrargyri, Ad'etate of mercury. This was the basis of Keyser's pills, and was once much celebrated in the cure of the venereal disease. The dose is from three to five grains, but it is not much used.

The formula for Keyser's anti-venereal pills was as follows:—Hydrarg. Acet. ʒiv; Mannæ, ʒxxx; Amyl. ʒij; Nuc. G. Trag. q. s. To be made into pills of gr. vj each. Dose, two pills.

HYDRARGYRUS CALCINATUS, Hydrargyri oxydum rubrum—h. cum Cretâ, Hydrargyrum cum cretâ—h. Muriatus, Hydrargyri oxymurias—h. NitratuŒ ruber, Hydrargyri nitrico-oxydum.

HYDRARGYRUS PHOSPHORĀTUS, Phosphuret'ed mercury. This preparation has been recommended in cases of inveterate venereal ulcers, but is now scarcely used.

HYDRARGYRUS SULPHURETUS RUBER, Hydrargyri sulphuretum rubrum—h. cum Sulphure, Hydrargyri sulphuretum nigrum—h. e Sulphure, Hydrargyri sulphuretum nigrum.

HYDRARGYRUS VITRIOLĀTUS, Turpethum min'erale, Mercurius emel'icus flavus seu causticus flavus seu luteus, Hydrargyri sulphas seu sulphas flavus (Ph. U. S.), Subsulphus Hydrargyri flavus, Oxidum hydrargyri sulphuricum, Subsulphus hydrargyri peroxidati, Calc mercurii vitriol'ate, Turbith mineral, (F.) Sous-sulfate de mercure ou turbith mineral. (Hydrarg. ʒiv; Acid. Sulph. ʒvj. Mix in a glass vessel, and boil in a sand-bath till a dry, white mass remains. Rub this into powder, and throw it into boiling water. Pour off the liquor, and wash the yellow precipitated powder repeatedly with hot water; then dry it—Ph. U. S.) Two grains of this mercurial act on the stomach violently. It is sometimes recommended as an emetine in amaurosis.

HYDRARTHROŒ, Hydrarthrus.

HYDRARTHROS, Hydrarthrus.

HYDRARTHROSIS, Hydrarthrus.

HYDRARTHROSIS, Hydrarthrus, H. synovialis, Hydrops articulo'rum, Hydrarthron, Hydrarthros, Melic'ria, Spina vento'sa of Rhazes and Avicenna, Arthri'tis Hydrarthros, Hydrarthrosis, Hydrarthros'is, Emmyx'ium articulo're, Tumor albus, White swelling; from υδωρ, 'water,' and αρθρον, 'a joint.' (F.) Tumeur blanche, T. lymphatique des articulations. The French surgeons apply the term Hydrarthrus to dropsy of the articulations. White swelling is an extremely formidable disease. It may attack any one of the joints; but is most commonly met with in the knee, the haunch, the foot, the elbow, and generally occurs in scrofulous children. It consists, at times, in tumefaction, and softening of the soft parts and ligaments, which surround the joints; at others, in swelling and caries of the articular extremities of bones; or both these states may exist at the same time. The treatment consists in the employment of counter-irritants; the use of iodine internally and externally, &c. Also, Synovia.

HYDRAS'PIS EXPAN'SA, Great freshwater Tortoise. On the sandy banks of rivers in Peru this animal buries its eggs, from which the Indians extract oil. Its flesh supplies well-flavoured food.—Tschudi.

HYDRASTIS, H. Canadensis.

HYDRAS'TIS CANADEN'SIS, Hydrastis, (perhaps from υδωρ, 'water,' and εραω, 'I am active,') Warnera Canaden'sis, Hydrophyllum verum, Canad'ian Hydrastis, Yellow Root, Orange Root, Yellow Puccoon, Ground Raspberry, Yellow Paint, Golden Seal, Indian Paint, Eyebalm. Nat. Ord. Ranunculacæe. It is used in Kentucky as a 'mouth water,' and as an outward application in wounds and local inflammations.

HYDRĀTION, Hydratio, from υδωρ, 'water.' Impregnation or moistening with water: as Hydrat'ed means impregnated or moistened with water.

HYDRELÆ'ON, Hydrolæum, from υδωρ,

'water,' and ελαιον, 'oil.' A mixture of water and oil.

HYDRELYTRON, see Hydrocele.

HYDREMA, Œdema.

HYDRENCEPHALITIS, Hydrocephalus internus.

HYDRENCEPHALIUM, Hydrocephalus internus.

HYDRENCEPHALOCÉ'LE, Hydrocephalocelē, from ὑδωρ, 'water,' εγκεφαλος, 'the encephalon,' and κρηλη, 'rupture, protrusion.' A monstrosity in which there is a fissure of the cranium, the integument of the head being present, and forming a hernial sac in which the brain lies outside the skull—the sac containing a large quantity of serous fluid. Also, Hydrocephalus chronicus.

HYDRENCEPHALON, see Hydrocephalus chronicus.

HYDRENCEPH'ALOID, from ὑδωρ, 'water,' εγκεφαλος, 'the brain,' and αιδος, 'resemblance.' Resembling hydrocephalus. Hydrenceph'aloïd disease, Spurious hydrocephalus, Pseudo-encephalitis. Disorders of the bowels, and exhaustion in children, are at times attended with hydrocephaloid symptoms.

HYDRENCEPHALUS, Hydrocephalus internus.

HYDRENTEROCÉ'LE, from ὑδωρ, 'water,' εντερον, 'intestine,' and κρηλη, 'a tumour.' Intestinal hernia, the sac of which encloses fluid.

HYDRENTEROMPHALOCÉ'LE, Hydrenteromphalocelē, from ὑδωρ, 'water,' εντερον, 'intestine,' ομφαλος, 'umbilicus,' and κρηλη, 'rupture.' Umbilical hernia with intestine and water in the sac.

HYDRENTEROMPHALUS, Hydrenteromphalocelē.

HYDREPIGASTRIUM, see Ascites.

HYDREPIPOCE'LE, from ὑδωρ, 'water,' επιπλοον, 'omentum,' and κρηλη, 'rupture.' Omental hernia, with water in the sac.

HYDREPIPLOM'PHALUS, Hydrepiplomphalocelē, from ὑδωρ, 'water,' επιπλοον, 'omentum,' and ομφαλος, 'umbilicus.' Umbilical hernia, with omentum and water in the sac.

HYDRETRUM, Ascites.

HYDRIASIS, Hydrosudotherapia.

HYDRIATER, see Hydropathic.

HYDRIATRIA, Hydrosudotherapia.

HYDRIATRICA ARS, Hydrosudotherapia.

HYDRIATRICUS, see Hydropathic.

HYDRIATRUS, see Hydropathic.

HYDRIODAS KALICUS, see Potassæ hydriodas.

HYDRIODIC ACID, see Acid, hydriodic.

HYDRO'A, Hidro'a, Aqu'ula, Boa, Planta noctis, from ὑδωρ, 'water.' An affection, which consists in an accumulation of water or serous fluid under the epidermis. Some have used hydro'a synonymously with endamina; others with pempigus. In the first case, it has generally, however, been written hidro'a, from ιδρωσ, 'sweat,' and in the latter hydro'a. See Hydatid.

HYDROÆ'MIA, Hydræ'mia, Hæmhydría; from ὑδωρ, 'water,' and αιμα, 'blood.' Anæmia. The state of the blood in which the watery constituents are in excess.

HYDROÆROPLEURIE, Hydropneumothorax.

HYDROÆ'RION, Hydroërh'oron, Hydroëphor'ia, Hyd'ou'rium, Hydroëv'arium, Hydrops ovarii, Ascites ovarii, A. sacca'tus, (F.) Hydropisie de l'ovaire, from ὑδωρ, 'water,' and ωαριον, 'ovarium.' Dropsy of the ovary.

HYDROATA, Sudamina.

HYDROBLEPH'ARON, Hydrops Pal'pebræ,

Blepharæde'ma aquosum, Œde'ma palpebrarum. An œdema or watery swelling of the eyelids; from ὑδωρ, 'water,' and βλεφαρον, 'eyelid.'

HYDROCACHEXIA, Leucoplegmatia.

HYDROCARDIA, Hydropericardium, see Pericardium.

HYDROCATARRHOPHE'SIS, Hydrocatarrhoph'ia, from ὑδωρ, 'water,' and καταρροφειν, 'to sip up.' Absorption of water from without.

HYDROCE'LE, Hydrops Scroti seu testiculo'rum, Hydroscœce'le, Hydatocele, Hydrops'cheum, Hydror'chis, Hydrosc'hœnie, (Alibert,) from ὑδωρ, 'water,' and κρηλη, 'a tumour.' A term generally applied to a collection of serous fluid in the areolar texture of the serotum or in some of the coverings, either of the testicle or spermatic cord. To the first of these varieties the names — External Hydrocele, H. œdematodes, (F.) H. par infiltration have been given; and to the second, those of Hydroce'le inter'na, H. tunica vaginalis testis, Hydrél'ytron, (F.) H. par épanchement. When the collection occurs in the envelope of the testicle, it is called H. of the tunica vaginalis; and the epithet congenital is added, when the interior of the membrane, in which it is situate, still communicates freely with the cavity of the abdomen. When it exists in the spermatic chord, it is called encysted, or diffused Hydrocele of the spermatic cord, as the case may be. The tumour of the distended serotum is oblong; greater below than above; indolent and semi-transparent. When it becomes inconveniently large, the fluid may be evacuated by puncturing with a trocar, but, as it collects again, this operation can only be considered palliative. The radical cure consists, usually, in injecting, through the canula of the trocar, which has been left in, after puncturing, some irritating liquid, as wine. This is kept in the tunica vaginalis for a few minutes, and then withdrawn. The coat inflames; adhesion takes place, and the cavity is obliterated.

HYDROCELE OF THE NECK. A tumour, filled with a watery fluid, occupying some portion of the neck.

HYDROCELE PERITONÆI, Ascites — h. Spinalis, Hydrocrachis.

HYDROCENO'SIS, from ὑδωρ, 'water,' and κενωσις, 'evacuation.' The evacuation of water morbidly accumulated in the body.

HYDROCEPHALE, Hydrocephalus.

HYDROCÉPHALE AIGUË, Hydrocephalus internus.

HYDROCEPHALITIS, Hydrocephalus internus.

HYDROCEPHALIUM, Hydrocephalus.

HYDROCEPHALOCÉLE, Hydrencephalocelē.

HYDROCÉPHALOËCTASIE, Hydrocephalus chronicus.

HYDROCEPH'ALUS, Hydroceph'alum, Hydrocra'nia, Hydrocra'nium, Hydroceph'alium, Hydroceph'alē, Hydrops Cap'itis seu Cer'ebri, from ὑδωρ, 'water,' and κεφαλη, 'the head.' Water in the head, Dropsy of the head, Dropsy of the brain. A collection of water within the head. It may be internal or external.

HYDROCEPHALUS ACUTUS, H. internus — h. Acutus senum, Apoplexy, serous — h. Adnatus, see H. chronicus — h. Congenitus, see H. chronicus — h. Externus, H. chronicus — h. Meningens, H. internus.

HYDROCEPHALUS CHRON'ICUS, Hydrencephalocelē, Hydrops Cap'itis seu arachnoïdeæ, Hydrocephalus externus, (F.) Hydrocéphale, Hydrocéphaloëctasie of some, may exist at birth. Hydrenceph'alon, Hydrocephalus congen'itus seu adna'tus commonly commences at an early period of existence, and the accumulation of fluid gradually produces distension of the brain, and of the skull, with separation of the sutures. It commonly proves fatal before puberty.

HYDROCEPHALUS EXTERNUS, (Ede'ma cap'itis, Cephaloede'ma of some, is a mere infiltration into the subcutaneous cellular tissue of the cranium.

HYDROCEPHALUS INTERNUS, Hydroceph'alus acutus seu mening'eus, Hydrops cer'ebri, Encephalalgia hydrop'ica, Encephal'itis exsudato'ria, Encephal'itis seu Mening'itis Infant'um seu hydrocephal'ica, Morbus cerebra'lis Whyt'tii, Enteroccephalop'ya Infant'um, Hydrophlogosis Ventriculo'rum cer'ebri, Encephaloch'ysis, Phrenic'ula hydrocephal'ica, Hydroceph'alus, Hydrocephal'itis, Hydrocephal'ium, Hydrocephal'itis, Hydromening'itis, Febris seu Apoplex'ia hydrocephal'ica, Curus hydroceph'alus, Water Brain Fever, Whyt's Disease, (F.) Hydrocéphale aiguë, Fièvre cérébrale des Enfants, is generally seated, according to modern observers, in the meninges and surface of the encephalon, and is a tuber'cular mening'itis, Mening'itis tuberculo'sa, Encephalostromo'sis, Gran'ular or Scrophulous mening'itis, (F.) Méningite tuberculeuse ou granuleuse, Pâdenéphalite.—Piorry. It is observed particularly in childhood. Its march is extremely acute and often very rapid; admitting, generally, however, of division into three stages. The symptoms of the first stage are those of general febrile irritation, with head-ache, intolerance of light and sound, delirium, &c. Those of the second, which generally denote that the inflammation has ended in effusion, are, great slowness of pulse, crying out as if in distress, moaning, dilated pupil, squinting, &c.; and lastly, in the third stage—profound stupor, paralysis, convulsions, involuntary evacuations, quick pulse, and frequently death. The disease is of uncertain duration; sometimes, destroying in two or three days; at others, extending to two or three weeks. The prognosis is unfavourable. The treatment must be active during the stage of excitement,—precisely that which is necessary in phrenitis. In the second stage, the indication is;—to promote the absorption of the effused fluid. This must be done by counter-irritants, and mercury, chiefly. On dissection, water is generally found in the ventricles, or at the base of the brain; or there are evidences of previous vascular excitement, as effusions of coagulable lymph, &c.

HYDROCEPHALUS SPURIUS, Hydrocephaloid, (disease.)

HYDROCHAMAIMELUM, Infusum anthemidis.

HYDROCHEZIA, Diarrhoea serosa.

HYDROCHLORATE D'OR, see Gold.

HYDROCHLORINAS NATRICUS, Soda, muriate of.

HYDROCHOLECYSTIS, Turgescencia vesiculae fellæ.

HYDROCH'YSES, (G.) Hydrochysen, from 'υδωρ, 'water,' and χυσις, 'effusion.' A family of diseases, according to the classification of Fuchs, in which there is a sudden effusion of serous fluid, as in serous apoplexy, hydrocephalus, &c.

HYDROCIRSOCE'LE, Hydrocirsoce'le, Hydroce'le, from 'υδωρ, 'water,' κίρσος, 'varix,' and κηλη, 'tumour.' A tumour, formed by the varicose distension of the veins of the spermatic cord, and by the accumulation of serous fluid in the areolar texture of the scrotum.

HYDROCÆLIA, Ascites.

HYDROCONIUM, Bath, shower.

HYDROCOTYLE ASIATICA, Codagum, Pes-equi'nus, Asiat'ic Pen'nywort. Order, Umbelliferae. A plant of India, Cape of Good Hope, and Jamaica, where it is supposed to be possessed of astringent and diuretic properties. The leaves are applied to bruised parts to prevent inflammation. The Hydrocotyle has recently been extolled, in India, as a remedy for lepra.

HYDROCOTYLE CENTE'LA. A South African plant, the roots and stalks of which are astringent; and used in diarrhoea and dysentery.

HYDROCOTYLE UMBELLATUM, Acaricoba.

HYDROCRANIA, Hydrocephalus.

HYDROCRANIUM, Hydrocephalus.

HYDROCRITHE, Decoctum Hordei.

HYDROCYAN'IC ACID, Ac'idum Hydrocyan'icum; from 'υδωρ, 'water,' and κωανος, 'blue.' Prussic Acid, Ac'idum Prus'sicum seu Borus'sicum seu Zoö'ticum seu Zoö'tin'icum, Cyanohy'dric or Cyanhy'dric Acid, (F.) Acide Hydrocyanique ou Prussique. This acid exists in a great variety of native combinations in the vegetable kingdom, and imparts to them certain properties, which have been long known and esteemed; as in the bitter almond, cherry laurel, leaves of the peach tree, kernels of fruit, pips of apples, &c. When concentrated, it is liquid, colourless, of a strong smell and taste, at first cool, afterwards burning. Its s. g. at 7° Centigrade, is 0.7058. It is very volatile, and enters into ebullition at 80° Fahr. It speedily undergoes decomposition, sometimes in less than an hour, and consists of a peculiar gaseous and highly inflammable compound of carbon and azote, to which the name Cyanogen has been assigned; and of hydrogen, which acts as the acidifying principle: hence its name Hydrocyanic acid. In the Pharmacopœia of the United States, (1851.) two formulæ for the preparation of the Ac'idum hydrocyan'icum dilu'tum—Ac'idum hydrocyan'icum, Ph. U. S. of 1842—are given; the one from the Ferro-cyanuret of Potassium; the other from the Cyanuret of Silver. According to Magendie, the acid, prepared after Scheel's method—the one in common use—is of irregular medicinal power: he, therefore, recommends Gay Lussac's acid, diluted with 6 times its volume, or 8.5 times its weight of distilled water, for medicinal purposes, and this he calls Medic'inal Prussic Acid. Dr. Ure has proposed, that the specific gravity should indicate that which is proper for medicinal exhibition; and, after comparative experiments of the gravity of the acids, obtained by different processes, he states, that the acid, usually prescribed, is of s. g. 0.996 or 0.997. Great caution is, however, necessary. One drop of pure prussic acid may instantly destroy, and the animal show hardly any traces of irritability, a few moments after death. It has been advised in laryngeal phthisis, in pulmonary phthisis, pulmonary inflammation and irritation, dyspepsia, uterine affections, hectic cough, cancer, chronic rheumatism, and mania, and as a local remedy in impetiginous affections; but, although possessed of powerful sedative properties, it is so unmanageable and the preparation so uncertain, that it is not much used. The Dose of Scheel's Acid, or of the Medicinal Prussic Acid, is from a quarter of a drop to two drops.

HYDROCYS'TIS, from 'υδωρ, 'water,' and κυστις, 'a bladder.' A cyst containing a watery or serous fluid. An hydatid. Also, saccated ascites.

HYDRODERMA, Anasarca.

HYDRODES, Aqueous.

HYDRODIARRHŒA, Diarrhoea, serous.

HYDREDEMA, Oedema.

HYDRO-ENCÉPHALORRHÉE, Apoplexy, serous.

HYDRO-ENTERO-EPIPLOCE'LE, Hydroepiplo-enteroce'le; from 'υδωρ, 'water,' επιτερον, 'intestine,' and επιπλον, 'omentum.' Enteroepiplocele, the sac of which contains a serous fluid.

HYDRO-ENTERO-EPILOMPHALUM, from ὕδωρ, 'water,' εντερον, 'an intestine,' επιπλοον, 'the caul,' and ομφαλος, 'the navel.' Umbilical hernia, the sac of which contains intestine, epiploon, and serum.

HYDRO-ENTEROMPHALUM, Hydrenteromphalum; from ὕδωρ, 'water,' εντερον, 'an intestine,' and ομφαλος, 'the umbilicus.' Hernia umbilicalis, the sac of which contains intestine and serum.

HYDRO-EPIPLOCELE, from ὕδωρ, 'water,' επιπλοον, 'omentum,' and κηλη, 'a tumour.' Hernia, formed by omentum, the sac of which contains serum.

HYDRO-EPIPLO-ENTEROCELE, Hydro-entero-epiplocele.

HYDRO-EPILOMPHALUM, from ὕδωρ, 'water,' επιπλοον, 'the omentum,' and ομφαλος, 'the umbilicus.' Umbilical hernia, the sac of which contains epiploon and serum.

HYDROGALA, from ὕδωρ, 'water,' and γαλα, 'milk.' A mixture of water and milk.

HYDROGASTER, Ascites.

HYDROGEN, Hydrogenium, Inflam'mable air, Phlogiston, Principium hydrogeneticum seu hydroicum, Mephitis inflammabilis, (F.) Hydrogène, Air inflammable, Gaz des ballons, from ὕδωρ, 'water,' and γεννω, 'I produce.' This gas, when breathed, proves fatal from containing no oxygen. When diluted with two-thirds of atmospheric air, it occasions some diminution of muscular power and sensibility, and a reduction of the force of the circulation. It has been respired in catarrh, hæmoptysis, and phthisis.

HYDROGEN, CARBURET'ED, Inflam'mable air, Fire damp, of miners, (F.) Hydrogène carboné ou proto-carboné, Grisou—obtained by passing the vapour of water over charcoal, at the temperature of ignition, in an iron tube—has been found possessed of similar properties, when diluted, and has been used in like cases.

HYDROGEN, PROTOXIDE OF, Water.

HYDROGEN, SULPHURET'ED, Hydrosulph'uric, Sulphhyd'ric, Sulphohydric or Hydrothion'ic acid, Hydroth'ion, Gaz hepaticum seu hydrogenium sulphuratum, Mephitis hepatica, (F.) Hydrogène sulfuré, Acide hydrosulfurique, Air puant ou hépatique, may be disengaged from any of the sulphurets by the addition of a strong acid. It is a violent poison, but has been recommended to be inhaled, diluted, to allay the increased irritability which occasionally exists after diseases of the lungs. See Hydro-sulphuretted Water.

HYDROGENATION, see Hydrogénèses.

HYDROGÈNE, Hydrogen—h. Carboné ou protocarboné, Hydrogen, carburetted—h. Sulfuré, Hydrogen, sulphuretted.

HYDROGÉNÈSES. Baumes gives this name to diseases which he fancifully considers to depend upon disturbed hydrogenation. In it he includes intermittent and remittent fevers.

HYDROGENO-SULPHURETUM AMMONIACÆ LIQUIDUM, Ammonie sulphuretum.

HYDROGLOSSA, Ranula.

HYDROGRAPHY, see Hydrology.

HYDROHÉMIE, Anæmia, Hydroæmia.

HYDROHYMENITIS, Orrhohymenitis, from ὕδωρ, 'water,' ὑμην, 'a membrane,' and itis, denoting inflammation. Inflammation of a serous membrane.

HYDROHYSTERA, Hydrometra.

HYDROLÆUM, Hydrelæon.

HYDROLAPATHUM, Rumex hydrolapathum.

HYDROLATA, Aquæ destillatæ.

HYDROLATS, Aquæ destillatæ, Water, distilled.

HYDROLÉ, Decoction, Fomentation, Lotion, Mucilage, Potion, Tisane. See Hydrolica.

HYDROLICA, (F.) Hydroliques, from ὕδωρ, 'water.' Watery solutions of the active principles of medicinal agents. Those prepared by solution or admixture are termed, by some of the modern French pharmaciens, Hydrolés; those by distillation, Hydrolats.

HYDROLIQUES, Hydrolica.

HYDROLITE, Decoction, Mucilage, Potion.

HYDROLOGY, Hydrolog'ia, from ὕδωρ, 'water,' and λογος, 'a discourse.' A treatise on water. By the term Medical Hydrology is meant that part of physics, whose object is the study of water, considered as it respects medicine; and, consequently, embracing that of mineral waters. Medical Hydrography comprises the study of the influence exerted by the sea or by navigation on the health of man.

HYDROLOTIF, Fomentation, Lotion.

HYDROMANIA, from ὕδωρ, 'water,' and mania, 'mania.' A name given by Strambi to pellagra, in which the patient has a strong propensity to drown himself.

HYDRO-MEDIASTINUM, Hydros mediastini. Effusion of serous fluid into the mediastinum.

HYDROMEL, Hydrom'eli, from ὕδωρ, 'water,' and μελι, 'honey.' Aqua mulsa, Melitis, Mulsum, Melic'ratum, Mellie'ratum, Braggart, Medo. A liquid medicine, prepared with an ounce and a half of honey and a pint of tepid water. It is used as a demulcent and laxative, and is generally known under the names Simple hydromel, Vinous hydromel, Mead, Hydrom'eli vinosum, Ænomel, is a drink made by fermenting honey and water, and is much used in some countries. As a common drink, mead is often made of honey and some alcoholic liquor well beaten together. See Mahogany.

HYDROMELLÉ. A preparation formed like the syrups, using hydromel in place of sugar.—Béral.

HYDROMENINGITIS, Aquo-membranitis, Hydrocephalus internus.

HYDROMETER, Areometer.

HYDROMETRA, Hydrom'etria, Hydrolyst'era, Hydrometrectasia, Hysterites, Hystercædema, Hydros uteri, from ὕδωρ, 'water,' and μετρα, 'the womb.' Dropsy of the womb. A disease characterized by circumscribed protuberance in the hypogastrium,—with obscure fluctuation, progressively enlarging, without ischury or pregnancy. If it ever occur, it must be a rare disease.

HYDROMETRECTASIA, Hydrometra.

HYDROMPHALUM, Hydros umbilicalis, Exomphalus aquosus, Her'nia umbilic'ei aquosa, from ὕδωρ, 'water,' and ομφαλος, 'the navel.' A tumour, formed by the accumulation of serum in the sac of umbilical hernia: or simply by distension of the navel in cases of ascites.

HYDROMYRINGA, Hydromyri'nx, Hydros tym'pani, from ὕδωρ, 'water,' and myringa or myriax, 'the membrana tympani.' Dropsy of the drum of the ear; giving rise to difficulty of hearing.—Dysece'a hydroptica.

HYDROMYRINX, Hydromyringa.

HYDRONCUS, Anasarca, Œdema.

HYDRONEPHROSIS, (F.) Hydrone'phrose, Hydrone'rale distension, from ὕδωρ, 'water,' and νεφρος, 'kidney.' An accumulation in the kidney, owing to the obstruction of the tubes of the papillæ.—Rayer.

HYDRONOSUS, Hydros.

HYDRONUSUS, Hydros.

HYDROOARION, Hydrooarion.

HYDROOPHORON, Hydrooarion.

HYDROOVARION, Hydrooarion.

HYDROPATHIC, Hydropath'icus, Hydriat'ricus, from ὕδωρ, 'water,' and παθος, 'disease.'

Relating to hydrophathy or the water-cure,—as a hydrophathic physician, Hydriūter, Hydriūtrus.

HYDROPATHY, Hydrosudotherapia.

HYDROPEDE'SIS, from ὑδωρ, 'water,' and πέδωω, 'I break out.' Ephidro'sis. Excessive sweating.

HYDROPEGE, Water, spring.

HYDROPELTIS PURPUREA, Brasenia hydro-peltis.

HYDROPERICARDIA, Hydropericardium.

HYDROPERICARDITIS, Hydropericardium.

HYDROPERICARDIUM, Hydropericard'ia, Hydropericard'itis, from ὑδωρ, 'water,' and pericardium; Hydrops Pericard'ii, Hydrocar'dia, Dropsy of the pericard'ium, (F.) Hydrophisie du Péricarde. This is not a common disease. Palpitations; irregular or intermitting pulse; excessive dyspnoea, amounting often to orthopnoea, and dulness over a large space on percussion, will cause the pericardium to be suspected. The treatment is that of dropsies in general. It is, usually, however, of the active kind.

HYDROPERIONE, from ὑδωρ, 'water,' περι, 'around,' and ων, 'an egg, or ovum.' The sero-albuminous substance, secreted by the lining of the uterus prior to the arrival of the impregnated ovum in that cavity.—Breschet.

HYDROPERITONEUM, Ascites.

HYDROPERITONIE, Ascites.

HYDROPHAL'LUS, from ὑδωρ, 'water,' and φάλλος, 'the male organ.' Œdema of the male organ.

HYDROPHOB'IA, Paraphob'ia, Paraphob'ia, Phobodip'son, Pheugydron, Pheugophob'ia, Cynolys'sa, Cynolys'sum, Morbus hydrophob'icus seu hydroph'obus, Lycan'chē, Lycan'chis, Aërophob'ia, Phren'itis latrans, Lytta, Lyssa, L. can'ina, Pantophob'ia, Rabies can'ina, Erethis'mus hydrophobia, Clonus hydrophobia, Hydrophobia, Aqua metus, Canine madness, Water fright, (F.) Rage; from ὑδωρ, 'water,' and φοβος, 'dread.'

The term Rabies is more appropriate for the aggregate of symptoms resulting from the bite of rabid animals. Hydrophobia literally signifies a 'dread of water,' and, consequently, ought to be applied to one of the symptoms of rabies, rather than to the disease itself. It is a symptom which appears occasionally in other nervous affections. Rabies is susceptible of spontaneous development in the dog, wolf, cat, and fox, which can thence transmit it to other quadrupeds or to man; but it has not been proved that it can supervene,—without their having been previously bitten,—in animals of other species; or that the latter can, when bitten, communicate it to others. Many facts induce the belief, that the saliva and bronchial mucus are the sole vehicles of the rabid virus; the effects of which upon the economy sometimes appear almost immediately after the bite, and are, at others, apparently dormant for a considerable period. The chief symptoms are— a sense of dryness and constriction of the throat; excessive thirst; difficult deglutition; aversion for, and horror at, the sight of liquids as well as of brilliant objects; red, animated countenance; great nervous irritability; frothy saliva; grinding of the teeth, &c. Death most commonly happens before the fifth day. Hydrophobia has hitherto resisted all therapeutical means. Those which allay irritation are obviously most called for. In the way of prevention, the bitten part should always be excised, where practicable; and cauterized.

In some cases, symptoms like those which follow the bite of a rabid animal are said to have come on spontaneously. This affection has been termed nervous or spontaneous hydrophobia.

HYDROPHOBŪS, Lyssoeductus.

HYDROPHTHAL'MIA, from ὑδωρ, 'water,' and ὀφθαλμος, 'the eye.' Hydrophthal'mus, Dropsy of the eye, Hydrops Oc'uli, Bupthal'mus, Zoöphthal'mus, Oc'ulus Bovin'us seu Bubulus seu Elephan'tinus, Ophthalmopto'sis, Parop'sis Staphylo'ma simplex, (F.) Hydrophthal'mie, Hydrophisie de l'œil. This affection is caused, at times, by an increase in the quantity of the aqueous, at others, of the vitreous, humour. In the former case, the iris is concave anteriorly, and pushed backwards;—in the latter, it is convex, and pushed forwards. Most commonly, the disease seems to depend on both humours at the same time. Hydrophthal'mia sometimes affects both eyes; at others, only one. Children are more exposed to it than adults or old persons. The treatment must vary according to the cause; its longer or shorter duration; greater or less extent, &c. Hence, according to circumstances, hydragogue medicines, purgatives, general and local blood-letting, blisters, setons, moxa, cupping-glasses, fomentations, collyria, and fumigations of different kinds, have been employed. When all means fail, and the disease continues to make progress, the fluid may be evacuated, by a puncture made with a cataract needle at the lower part of the transparent cornea.

HYDROPHTHAL'MIA, CONICAL, Staphyloma of the cornea.

HYDROPHTHAL'MION. Same etymon. An œdematous swelling of the conjunctiva in hydroptic persons.

HYDROPHTHAL'MUS, Hydrophthal'mia—h. Cruentus, Hæmophthal'mia.

HYDROPHYLLUM VERUM, Hydrastis Canadensis.

HYDROPHYSOCE'LE, Hydropneumatoce'le, from ὑδωρ, 'water,' φύσα, 'wind,' and κληη, 'a tumour.' Hernia, which contains a serous fluid and gas.

HYDROPHYSOME'TRA, from ὑδωρ, 'water,' φύσσω, 'I inflate,' and μητρα, 'the womb.' A morbid condition of the womb, in which both fluid and air are contained in it.

HYDROPI'IC, Hydrop'icus, Hy'phydros, Hyder'icus, Hyder'ides, Drops'ical, (Sc.) Edroppit, (F.) Hydrop'ique. One labouring under dropsy. Drops'ied. Relating to dropsy. Also, an anti-hydroptic, and a hydragogue.

HYDROPNEUMOSAR'CA, from ὑδωρ, 'water,' πνευμα, 'wind, air,' and σαρξ, 'flesh.' An ab-cess, containing water, air, and matters similar to flesh.—M. A. Severinus.

HYDROPNEUMOTHORAX, Hydroæropleurie, from ὑδωρ, 'water,' πνευμων, 'the lung,' and θοραξ, 'the chest.' Pneumothorax with effusion of blood into the chest. See Pneumothorax.

HYDROPOΪDES, from ὑδωρ, 'water,' and ποιω, 'I make.' An epithet for watery excretions, such as sometimes take place in hydrocys.

HYDROΠOTA, Hydropotes, Pota'tor Aqua, from ὑδωρ, 'water,' and ποτης, 'a drinker.' A water drinker. One who drinks only water, or drinks it in an extraordinary quantity.

HYDROPS, from ὑδωρ, 'water,' Phlegma'tia, Hy'deros, Affectus hydero'des, Hydrop'isis, Hydrops'ia, Hydropis'mus, Hydrop'sia, Hydror'rho'e'a, Hydror'rho'e, Hydror'rho'is, Polyhy'dria, Hydr'osus, Hydronu'sus, Dropsy, Hy'dropsy, (Old Eng.) Dropyk, (F.) Hydropsie. A preternatural collection of a serous fluid in any cavity of the body, or in the areolar texture. When the areolar texture of the whole body is more or less filled with fluid, the disease is called Anasar'ca or Leucophlegma'tia;—and when this variety is local or partial, it is called Œde'ma. The chief dropsies, designated from their seat, are:—Anasar'ca, Hydrocephalus, Hydrorachitis, Hydrothorax, Hydropericardium, Ascites, Hydrometra, Hydrocele, &c.

Encyst'ed Dropsy, Hydrops sacca'tus, incaer'ra'tus seu cyst'icus, is that variety in which the fluid is enclosed in a sac or cyst; so that it has no communication with the surrounding parts. Dropsy of the Ovarium, Hydrops seu Ascit'es Ova'rii, Ascit'es sacca'tus, is an instance of this variety.

Dropsy may be active or passive. The former consists in an increased action of the exhalants, so that those vessels pour out much more fluid than is absorbed: the latter arises from a state of atony of the absorbent vessels, which allows of an accumulation of fluid. It may also be mechanical, or produced by obstructions to the circulation, as in cases of diseased liver. Active dropsy, occurring accidentally in a sound individual, generally ends favourably. That which supervenes on other diseases, or is symptomatic of some internal affection, is rarely curable.

The treatment consists in the use of all those remedies which act on the various secretions; so that, the demand being increased, the supply will have to be increased accordingly; and in this manner some of the collected fluid may be taken up by the absorbents. To this end bleeding, if the dropsy be very active; purgatives, diuretics, sudorifics, sialogogues, &c., are the remedies chiefly depended upon.

HYDROPYRETOS, from ὑδωρ, 'water,' and πυρετος, 'fever;' Febris sudato'ria. Fever with sweating. Hydopyretos would be more proper; from ἰδρωσ, 'sweat.' See Sudor Anglicus.

HYDRORACHIS, from ὑδωρ, 'water,' and ραχis, 'the spine.' Hydrorrha'chis, Hydrorachit'is, Hydrorrha'chia, Myeloch'ysis, Hydrora Cavitatis Columnæ Vertebralis seu Spinæ vertebralis seu medullæ spinalis seu spinæ, Hydrocele'le spinalis, Hydrorachit'is spinosa. An effusion of serum, often owing to inflammation of the spinal membranes—myelit'is exsudati'va—and forming a soft, frequently transparent, tumour, constituted of the membranes of the spinal marrow, which are distended and projecting backwards from the vertebral canal, the posterior paries of which, when the affection is congenital, is wanting to a certain extent—Spina bif'ida, Atelorrhach'ia, Hydrorachis dehis'cens seu congen'ita, Schistorrha'chis, Spin'ola. The disease is often accompanied with paralysis of the lower extremities. It is congenital, and situate in the lumbar or sacral regions. It is almost always fatal:—the tumour rupturing, and death occurring instantaneously. On dissection, a simple separation or complete absence of the spinous processes of the vertebræ is perceived, with, at times, destruction or absence of spinal marrow. The treatment is the same as in hydrocephalus chronicus; and, as in it, advantage seems occasionally to have been derived by puncturing with a fine needle.

HYDRORTHOPNE'IA, from ὑδωρ, 'water,' and ορθοπνοια, 'difficulty of breathing, except in the erect posture.' Orthopnea, owing to a collection of water in the chest.

HYDROSACCHARUM, Aqua saccharata, (F.) Eau sucrée. Sugared water.

HYDROSALPINX, Hydrops tubarum Fallopii; from ὑδωρ, 'water,' and σαλπυξ, 'a tube.' Dropsy of the Fallopian tube.

HYDROSAR'CA, from ὑδωρ, 'water,' and σαρξ, 'flesh.' A tumour containing a fluid, as well as portions of flesh. Also, Anasarca.

HYDROSARCOCE'LE, from ὑδωρ, 'water,' σαρξ, 'flesh,' and κηλη, 'a tumour.' Sarcohydrocele. A tumour, formed by a sarcocele, complicated with dropsy of the tunica vaginalis.

HYDROSCHEOCE/LE, Oscheoce/lē aquo'sa, from 'ὕδωρ, 'water,' σσχέον, 'the scrotum,' and κηλη, 'rupture.' A collection of water in the scrotum. Hydrocele.

HYDROSUDOPATHY, Hydrosudotherapeia.

HYDROSUDOTHERAPEIA, Hydrop'athy, Hydropathi'a, Hydrosudop'athy, Hydri'asis, Ars hydriat'rica, Hydriat'rica, Hydatotherapei'a, Hydrotherapei'a, Water cure, (G.) Wasserkur, from 'ὕδωρ, 'water,' σῖδος, 'I sweat,' and θεραπεύω, 'I remedy.' A badly compounded word, formed to express the mode of treating diseases systematically by cold water, sweating, &c.

HYDROSULPHURETTED WATER, Aqua hydrosulphurata simplex, A. hepatica, (F.) Eau hydrosulphurée simple. (Sulphuret of iron 1000 parts, sulphuric acid 2000 parts, distilled water 4000 parts; add the water to the acid, and put the sulphuret of iron into a retort, to which a Wolff's apparatus of five or six vessels is adapted; the last containing about an ounce of potassa, dissolved in a quart of water. Pour the diluted acid gradually on the sulphuret, and, ultimately, throw away the water in the last vessel. Ph. P.) It is stimulant, diaphoretic, and deobstruent [?], and is used in rheumatism, diseases of the skin, &c.

It has been, also, called Ac'idum Hydrothion'icum liq'u'idum.

HYDROSULPHURETUM AMMONIACALE AQUOSUM, Ammoniae sulphuretum—h. Ammoniacum, Ammoniae sulphuretum.

HYDROTHERAPEIA, Hydrosudotherapeia.

HYDROTHORAX, from 'ὕδωρ, 'water,' and θώραξ, 'the chest.' Hydrops Thorac'is seu pect'oris seu pulmo'nis seu pleuræ, Stethoch'ysis, Pleurorrhæ'a lymphatica seu serosa, Dyspnœ'a et Orthopnœ'a hydrothorac'ica, (F.) Hydropisie de Poitrine ou des Plèvres, Dropsy of the Chest. Idiopathic hydrothorax, termed, by Laënnec, Hydropisie des plèvres, Dropsy of the Pleuræ,—by Piorry, Hydropleurie,—is a rare disease, and difficult of diagnosis. It generally exists only on one side, which, if the fluid effused be considerable, projects more than the other. Dyspnoea, and fluctuation perceptible to the ear, are characteristic symptoms. When the chest is examined with the stethoscope, respiration is found to be wanting every where, except at the root of the lung. The sound is also dull on percussion.

Effusion into the chest, as a result of inflammation of some thoracic viscus, is as common as the other is rare. It is usually a fatal symptom. It has been called symptomatic hydrothorax.

In hydrothorax, the course of treatment proper in dropsies in general must be adopted. Diuretics seem, here, to be especially useful; probably on account of the great activity of pulmonary absorption. Paracentesis can rarely be serviceable.

HYDROTHORAX CHYLOSUS, Chylothorax—h. Purulentus, Empyema.

HYDROTICA, Hydragogues.

HYDROTIS, from 'ὕδωρ, 'water,' and οὖς, gen. ωτος, 'the ear.' Dropsy of the ear. Properly, an accumulation of mucous or muco-purulent matter in the middle ear.

HYLOPH'AGOUS, from υλη, 'wood,' and φαγω, 'I eat.' One that feeds upon the young shoots of trees, roots, &c. Hylophagous tribes yet exist in some parts of Africa.

HYMEN, υμνη, which signifies 'marriage,' 'nuptial song,' 'membrane or pellicle.' Clastrum seu Flos seu Sigillum seu Custodia seu Columina seu Zona virginitalis, Flos virginialis, Virginalia, Circulus membranosus, Bucton, Interseptum virginale, Cento virginialis, Argumentum Integritatis, Munimentum seu Zona Castitatis, Panniculus hymenæus seu virginalis, Eugion, Valvula seu Membrana lunata vaginae, Virginal membrane. The semilunar, parabolic, or circular fold, situate at the outer orifice of the vagina in virgins, especially during youth, and prior to menstruation. This membrane is ordinarily ruptured by the first venereal act, and is effaced by accouchement; some irregular flaps remaining, to which the name Carunculae Myrtiformes has been given by reason of their resemblance to the leaves of the myrtle. Many circumstances of an innocent character may occasion a rupture or destruction of this membrane. It is often, indeed, found absent in children soon after birth; whilst it may remain entire after copulation. Hence the presence of the hymen does not absolutely prove virginity; nor does its absence prove incontinence; although its presence would be primâ facie evidence of continence.

HYMEN'IOUS, Hymenodes, from υμνη, 'hymen,' &c. Relating to the hymen. Also, membranous.

HYMENITIS, from υμνη, 'a membrane,' and itis, denoting inflammation. Membranous inflammation. Inflammation of an internal membrane.

HYMENIUM, Membrana, diminutive of υμνη, 'a membrane.' A fine, delicate membrane.

HYMENODES, Hymenicus.

HYMENOGANGLIITIS, Cholera.

HYMENOG'ENY, Hymenogen'ia, (F.) Hyménogénie, from υμνη, 'a membrane,' and γεννω, 'I engender.' The production of membranes by the effect of simple contact of two liquids, as albumen and fat, when the former gives a coating to the globules of the latter.—Ascherson.

HYMENOG'RAPHY, Hymenogra'phia, from υμνη, 'a membrane,' and γραφω, 'I describe.' That part of anatomy whose object is the description of the different membranes.

HYMENOL'OGY, Hymenolog'ia, from υμνη, 'a membrane,' and λογος, 'a description.' A treatise on the membranes.

HYMENOPHTHALMIA, Ophthalmia membranarum.

HYMENOR'RHAPHY, Hymenorrha'phia, from υμνη, 'the hymen,' and ραφη, 'a suture.' A form of elytrorrhaphy, in which the operation is performed in the natural situation of the hymen.

HYMENOT'OMY, Hymenotom'ia, from υμνη, 'a membrane,' and τεμνω, 'I cut,' 'I dissect.' The part of anatomy which treats of the dissection of the membranes. The term has also been applied to the incision of the hymen, practised in certain cases of imperforation of the vagina, in order to give exit to the blood retained and accumulated in the cavity of the uterus.

HYO-EPIGLOT'TICUS, Hyodepiglot'ticus. Belonging to the os hyoïdes and epiglottis. Some anatomists have given the name Hyo-epiglottic ligament to a bundle of condensed areolar tissue, which passes from the posterior part of the body of the hyoid bone to the base of the epiglottic fibro-cartilage.

HYO-GLOSSO-BASI-PHARYNGIEN, Constrictor pharyngis.

HYOGLOS'SUS, Hyo'deo-glossus, Hyo-chondroglossus, Hypsiglossus, Cerato-glossus of Douglass and Cowper: Basio-Cerato-Chondro-glossus. A large, thin, quadrilateral muscle, situate at the anterior and superior part of the neck. Its insertions at three different points of the os hyoïdes permit it to be divided into three portions:—the first, (Cerato-glossus of Albinus) is attached to the great cornu of the os hyoïdes: the second, (Basio-glossus of Albinus,) arises from the superior part of the body of the same bone; and the third, (Chondro-glossus of Albinus,) arises from the lesser cornu and the cartilage, situate between the body and the greater cornu. The fibres of these three bundles are inserted into the lateral and inferior parts of the tongue. This muscle depresses the base of the tongue, or raises the os hyoïdes, when the tongue is fixed.

HYOÏDES OS, Os Bicornè seu hypseloïdes seu Lambdoi'des seu Gut'turis seu Gutturale seu Lingua seu Linguale, Upsiloïdes, Ypsiloïdes. The Hyoïd Bone; from the Greek υ, and ειδος, 'shape.' Hyoïdeus, Hyo'des. The hyoid bone is a very movable, osseous arch; of a parabolic shape; convex before, and suspended horizontally in the substance of the soft parts of the neck, between the base of the tongue and the larynx. This bone, separated entirely from the rest of the skeleton, is composed of five distinct portions, susceptible of motion on each other. The first, and most central, is the body of the hyoid, Ossiculum med'ium Hyoïdis, which affords attachment to several muscles; the two others are lateral, and bear the name of branches or greater cornua. The last two are smaller, situate above the other, and are known under the name lesser cornua and styloid cornua, the Ossa pisiformia lingualia of Sömmering, Ossa seu Grana seu Ossic'ula seu Cor'pora seu Corpus'cula tritic'ea. The os hyoides is ossified from five points.

HYOÏDES PRIMUS, Sterneo-hyoïdeus.

HYOÏDEUS, Hyoïdes.

HYOÏDIS QUARTUS MUSCULUS, Omohyoïdeus.

HYOSCY'AMUS, from 'υς, 'a swine,' and κναιος, 'a bean.' Faba suil'ia, Bengi, Jusqui'amus, Hyoscyamus niger seu agres'tis, Apoli'na'ris, Alter'cum, Ag'onē, Altercan'genon, Henbane, Poison Tobacco, Stinking nightshade, (F.) Jusqui'aume, Fève a Cochon, Hammebane, Potelée, Porcelet. Ord. Solanaceæ. The leaves, Hyoscy'ami Fo'lia (Ph. U. S.), and seeds, Hyoscy'ami Semen (Ph. U. S.), are the parts used in medicine. Their odour is narcotic and peculiar; taste insipid and mucilaginous. The virtues are yielded to proof spirit. Hyoscyamus is narcotic, anodyne, antispasmodic, and slightly stimulant. It is used as a substitute for opium, where the latter disagrees; and is applied, externally, as a cataplasm in cancer and glandular swellings. Dose, gr. iij to x of the powder. An alkaloid was obtained from it by Brandes, Hyoscyamine, Jusqui'amine.

HYOSCYAMUS AGRESTIS, Hyoscyamus.

HYOSCYAMUS ALBUS, White Henbane, possesses similar virtues.

HYOSCYAMUS LUTEUS, Nicotiana rustica — h. Niger, Hyoscyamus — h. Peruvianus, Nicotiana tabacum.

HYOSCYAMUS SCOPO'LIA, Scopoli'na atropoi'des. The herb and root of this plant, which grows in Illyria, Hungary, Croatia, Gallizia, and Bavaria, are used in the same cases as belladonna. Dose of the powder, half a grain.

HYPACTICUS, Cathartic.

HYPÆ'MIA, from 'υπο, 'beneath,' and 'αιμα, 'blood'; Hypoa'mia, Hypoha'mia, Oligo'a'mia, Oligoha'mia, Ana'mia. Deficiency of blood. — Andral. Also, extravasation of blood.

HYPEREMIA OCULI, Hæmophthalmia.

HYPAGOGÆ, Dejection.

HYPAGOGUS, Laxative.

HYPALÆIM'MA, Hypalim'ma, Hypalæip'tum, Hypalip'tum, from 'υπαλειψω, 'I anoint.' An ointment or liniment to be rubbed or spread on a part.

HYPALÆIPTRIS, Hypaleiptrum.

HYPALÆIP'TRON, Hypalæip'trum, Hypalæip'tris, Hypalip'trum, Speci'llum, Spatha. A sort of spatula for spreading ointments. — Hippocrates.

HYPALÆIPTRUM, Hypaleiptron.

HYPALÆIPTUM, Hypalcimma.

HYPALIMMA, Hypalcimma.

HYPALIPTRUM, Hypaleiptron.

HYPAMAURO'SIS, from 'υπο, 'under,' and αμαυροσις; Amauro'sis imperfecta. Imperfect amaurosis; Meramauro'sis.

HYPANCO'NIUM, from 'υπο, 'beneath,' and αγκων, 'the elbow.' A pillow for supporting the elbow in surgical cases.

HYPAPOPLEX'IA, from 'υπο, 'under,' and αποπληξια. An incomplete attack of apoplexy.

HYPATMISMUS, Fumigation.

HYPATMUS, Fumigation.

HYPACU'CHE'NIUM, from 'υπο, 'under,' and αυχην, 'the neck.' A pillow or cushion for the neck.

HYPECCHORESIS, Dejection.

HYPECCHORETICUS, Laxative.

HYPELATUS, Cathartic, Laxative.

HYPENANTIOSMA, Allopathy.

HYPENANTIOSIS, Allopathy.

HYPE'NĒ, 'υπηνη. The beard which grows under the chin, according to some. Also, the upper lip. — Vesalius. See Mystax.

HYPENETES, Adolescens.

HYPER, 'υπερ, 'above,' 'in excess.' Hence: HYPERACU'SIS, Oryco'i'a, Hyperac'oë, Phthongodysp'horia, from hyper, and akou, 'audition.' Excessive sensibility of the organ of hearing.

HYPERADENO'SIS, Hyperadeno'ma, Hyper-troph'ia glandula'rum, from hyper, and αδην, 'a gland.' Hypertrophy of a gland.

HYPERÆ'MIA, Hyperhæ'mia, Hæmorme'sis, (F.) Hyperémie, Angiohémie, from hyper, and 'αιμα, 'blood.' Præternatural accumulation of blood in the capillary vessels, more especially local plethora — pletho'ra partia'lis; congestion. — Andral. Various forms of hyperæmia are admitted by pathologists, — for example, the active or sthenic; as in the phlegmasiæ, — the asthenic or passive, from weakness of vessels; the cadaveric, or that which forms immediately before or after death; and the hypostatic, which occurs in depending parts.

HYPEREMIA ABDOMINIS, Coeliæmia — h. Activa, Inflammation — h. Capitis, Cephalæmia — h. of the Brain, Stethæmia — h. Cerebri, Cephalæmia — h. Pectoris, Stethæmia — h. Pulmonum, Stethæmia — h. of the Lungs, Stethæmia — h. Hepatic, Hepatohæmia.

HYPERÆ'MIC, Hyperæ'micus, Hyperæ'mial, Conges'ted, Bloodshot. Affected with hyperæmia.

HYPERÆSTHESIA, Hyperæsthesis — h. Lingue, Hyperæsthesia — h. Olfactoria, Hyperosphresia — h. Plexus cardiaci, Angina pectoris.

HYPERÆSTHES'IS, Hyperæsthæ'sia, Oxy-æsthæ'sia, (F.) Hypæsthésie, from hyper, and αίσθησις, 'the faculty of feeling.' Excessive sensibility, impressibility, or passibility.

HYPERÆSTHET'ICA, same etymon. Agents that are conceived to augment general sensibility — as strychnia, brucia, &c. Pereira.

HYPERANARRHOPHÆ'SIS, from hyper, and αναρροφησις, 'absorption.' Excessive absorption.

HYPERANTHERA MORINGA, Guilandina moringa.

HYPERANTHRAXIS, see Cholera.

HYPERAPH'IA, Oxyaph'hē, Oxyaph'hia, from hyper, and 'αψη, 'touch.' Excessive acuteness of touch.

HYPERAPHRODIS'IA, from hyper, and Αφροδιστη, 'Venus.' Excessive venereal desire.

HYPERASTHEN'IA, from hyper, and ασθενεια. 'weakness.' Excessive debility.

HYPERAUXE'SIS, from hyper, and αυξησις, 'augmentation.' Hyperepid'osis. Excessive increase or enlargement of a part, as Hyperauxe'sis I'ridis, an excessive enlargement of the iris, so as to stop up the pupil.

HYPERBOL'IC (attitude), from hyper, and βαλλω, 'I throw.' 'Excessive.' Galen, by this term, designates certain extraordinary attitudes, in which the limbs and vertebral column are in a state of complete extension or flexion.

HYPERBO'REAN, from hyper, and βορρας, 'the north wind.' A race of men found at the extreme north of the two continents, in the vicinity of the polar circle. It includes the Thibetans, Ostiaks, Kamtschadales, Laplanders, Samoiedes, Esquimaux, &c.

HYPERBU'LLA, from hyper, and βουλη, 'will.' Ungovernable will or volition.

HYPERCARDIA, Heart, hypertrophy of the.

HYPERCARDIOTROPHIA, Heart, hypertrophy of the.

HYPERCATAPINO'SIS, from hyper, and καταπινειν, 'to sip up.' Excessive activity of absorption.

HYPERCATHAR'SIS, Hyperine'sis, Hyperinos, Superpurga'tio, Ejffrenita'tio, from hyper, and καθαρσις, 'purgation.' Superpurgation.

HYPERCENO'SIS, from hyper, and κνωσις,

'evacuation.' Excessive evacuation, as of blood, bile, &c.

HYPERCERASIS, Staphyloma of the cornea.
HYPERCERATOSIS, Staphyloma of the cornea.

HYPERCHOLIA, Polycholia.

HYPERCHROMA, from hyper, and χρῶμα, 'colour.' A red fleshy excrescence at the inner angle of the eye, near the caruncula lacrymalis, which sometimes grows very large, so as to separate the eyelids and interfere with their movements.

HYPERCHROMATOPS'IA, Hyperchromatop'sy, from hyper, χρῶμα, χρωματος, 'colour,' and οψις, 'vision.' A defect of vision, owing to which ideas of colour are attached to objects, which convey no such coloured impressions to a healthy eye. It is the antithesis to achromatopsia.

HYPERCINE'SIA, Hypercin'esia, from hyper, and κινῆσις (κινῶ, 'I move,') 'motion. Excessive motion.' Under the term hypercin'esis, Romberg includes the spasmodic neuroses.

HYPERCINESIA NERVOSA, see Irritable — h. Uterina, Hysteria.

HYPERCINESIS GASTRICA, Hypochondriasis.

HYPERCONJUNCTIVITE, see Ophthalmia.

HYPERCORYPHO'SIS, from hyper, and κρυφή, 'the vertex;' the extreme point of anything. The lobes of the liver and lungs. — Hippocrates.

HYPERCRIN'IA, Hyperdiac'risis, Chymoze'mia, from hyper, and κρίνω, 'I separate.' A morbid increase in the quantity of the secretions.

HYPER'CRISIS, same etymon. Superecere'tio, Superevacua'tio. An excessive crisis, or evacuation; a flux. — A very violent, critical effort, or too copious critical evacuations. — Galen.

HYPERCYEMA, Superfoetation.

HYPERCYESIS, Superfoetation.

HYPERDERMATO'SIS, Hyperdermato'ma, Hyperdermo'sis, Hyperdermo'ma, from hyper, and δέρμα, 'skin.' Hypertrophy of the skin.

HYPERDIACRISIS, Hypercrinia.

HYPERDIURESIS, Diabetes.

HYPERDYNAMIA, Hypersthenia.

HYPERDYNAM'IC, Hyperdynam'icus, from hyper, and δύναμις, 'strength.' Appertaining to or having the characters of hyperdynamia, or excessive strength — of the vital powers more especially.

HYPERECHEMA, see Exaggerated.

HYPERECHESIS, see Exaggerated.

HYPEREM'ESIS, Hyperemes'ia, Vom'itus profu'sus; from hyper, and εμεῶ, 'I vomit.' Excessive vomiting.

HYPERÉMIE, Hyperæmia — h. du Cerveau, Cephalohæmia — h. Cérébrale, Cephalohæmia — h. du Foie, Hepatohæmia — h. de la Moëlle épinière, Hypermyelohæmia — h. des Poumons, Steuthæmia.

HYPERENCÉPHALOTROPHIE; from hyper, εγκεφαλον, 'the encephalon,' and τροφή, 'nourishment.' Hypertrophy of the encephalon. — Plorry.

HYPERENCEPH'ALUS, (F.) Hyperencéphale, from hyper, and κεφαλή, 'the head.' A monster whose excessive brain is situate in the skull.

HYPERENDOSMOSE, Inflammation.

HYPERENERG'IA, from hyper, and ενεργεια, 'activity.' Excessive activity, as of the nervous system.

HYPEREPHIDROSIS, Ephidrosis.

HYPEREPIDROSIS, Hyperaexesis.

HYPERERETHIS'IA, from hyper, and ερεθίζω, 'I excite.' Excessive irritability.

HYPERES'IA, υπερεια, 'a ministry.' This word is sometimes applied to the organs; — when it means function.

HYPERESTHÉSIE, Hyperæsthesis.

HYPERETRIA, Midwife.

HYPERFIBRINATION, Hyperinosis.

HYPERGEN'ESIS, from hyper, and γενεσις, 'generation,' (F.) Hypergénésie. The excess of formative power, which gives occasion to monstrosities by excess of parts. See Monster.

HYPERGEUS'TIA, Hypergeu'sis, Hyperæthes'ia lingua, Oxygeu'sia, from hyper, and γεωγῆσις, 'taste.' Excessive sensibility of the organ of taste.

HYPERHÆMATOSIS, Inflammation.

HYPERHÆMIA, Hyperæmia.

HYPERHÉPATOTROPHIE, Hepatauxe.

HYPERHIDROSIS, Ephidrosis.

HYPERHO'RA, from hyper, and ώρα, 'time.' Premature development of the body, or of some part.

HYPERI'CUM BACCIF'ERUM, Arbuscula gummi'fera Brazilien'sis, Caa-opia. Ord. Hypericaceæ. A Brazilian tree, whose bark emits a juice, when wounded, which resembles gamboge. Hypericum is considered by Linnæus to be derived from υπερ, 'over,' and εικων, 'an image or spectre;' from its having been fancied to possess the power of driving away evil spirits.

HYPERICUM OFFICINALE, H. perforatum — h. Officinatum, H. perforatum.

HYPERICUM PERFORAT'UM, Hypericum, H. officina'le seu officina'rum seu vulga'rè seu Virgin'i-cum, Fuga Dæ'monum, Androsæ'mum, Co'rion, Perforated or Common St. John's Wort, (F.) Mil-lepertuis ordinaire. It is aromatic and astringent, and enters into a number of aromatic preparations; and, amongst others, into the Fall-tranck. It was, at one time, much used in dysentery, hemorrhages, &c. The juice is acid. The Oil of St. John's Wort, Red oil, Linimentum seu Oleum hyperi'ci, Balsamum hyperici sim'plex, is made by infusing $\frac{3}{4}$ iv. of the flowers in a quart of olive oil. It is applied to recent bruises.

HYPERICUM SARO'THRA, Orange grass, Pine-wood, indigenous, is applied in domestic practice, boiled, to contusions and sprains.

HYPERICUM VIRGINICUM, H. perforatum — h. Vulgare, H. perforatum.

HYPERIDROSIS, Ephidrosis.

HYPERINESIS, Hypercatharsis.

HYPERINOS, Hypercatharsis.

HYPERINOS'IS, Iuo'sis, Hyperplas'ma, from hyper, and ις, ivos, 'fibre.' The condition of the blood in which it contains an increase in the proportion of fibrin, Hyper-fibrina'tion, Super-fibrina'tion, a decrease of the corpuscles in proportion to the excess of fibrin, and an increase of the fat, — as in inflammation. In proportion to the increase of the fibrin and fat, and the decrease of the corpuscles, the whole solid residue will be diminished. Also, morbidly-increased muscular activity. — Siebenhaar.

HYPERLYMPH'IA, (F.) Hyperlymphie; from hyper and lymphæ. Excessive formation or accumulation of lymph.

HYPERMÉTROHÉMIE, Metrohæmia.

HYPERMNE'SIA, from hyper, and μνασαι, 'I recollect.' Excessive memory.

HYPERMYELOHÆMIA, (F.) Hyperémie de la Moëlle Épinière, Congestion sanguine rachidienne, from hyper, μυελος, 'marrow,' and αιμα, 'blood.' Hyperæmia of the spinal marrow.

HYPERNÉPHROTROPHIE, from hyper, νεφρος, 'kidney,' and τροφή, 'nourishment.' Hypertrophy of the kidney.

HYPERNEUR'IA, from hyper, and νευρον, 'a nerve.' Excessive nervous activity.

HYPERNEURO'MA, same etymon. Morbid development of the neurine or nervous masses.

HYPERO-PHARYNGEUS, Palato-pharyngeus.

HYPERO'A, from hyper, and ων, 'a high place.' The palatine arch,—the base of the cranium; the palate.

HYPEROITIS, Inflammati'o palati, Angi'na Palati'na, (F.) Inflammati'o du Palais; from hyperoia, 'the palate,' and itis, a suffix denoting inflammation. Inflammation of the velum palati.

HYPEROÏCHAS'MA, from ὑπερωα, 'the palate,' and χασμα, 'an opening;' Lycost'oma, Palatum fissum. Fissure of the palate.

HYPEROPSIA, Oxyopia.

HYPEROS, Pilon.

HYPEROSMIA, Hyperosphresia.

HYPEROSPHERE'SIA, Hyperos'mia, Hyperæsthe'sia olfacto'ria, Olfac'tus acut'us, from hyper, and σφρησις, 'smell.' Excessive acuteness of smell.

HYPEROSTOSIS, Exostosis.

HYPERPATHI'A, from hyper, and παθος, 'suffering.' Excessive sensibility in disease.

HYPERPHLEBO'SIS, from hyper, and φλεβ, 'a vein.' Too great development of the venous system; predominant venosity.

HYPERPHLEGMASIA, Hyperphlogosis.

HYPERPHLOGO'SIS, Epiphlogo'sis, Hyperphlegma'sia, Inflammati'o peracut'a; from hyper, and φλογωσις, 'inflammation.' A high degree of inflammation.

HYPERPHRÉ'NIE, Mania.

HYPERPIMELE, see Polysarcia.

HYPERPLASMA, Hyperinosis.

HYPERPLEXIE, Ecstasis.

HYPERPNEUSTIA, Flatulence.

HYPERPRESBYTIA, Presbytia.

HYPERSARCHIDIOS, Physconia.

HYPERSARCO'MA, Hyperсарco'sis, Hyperсарx'is, from hyper, and σαρξ, 'flesh.' A soft fungous excrescence, especially such as appears upon ulcerated parts.—A fungosity.

HYPERSARCOSIS, Excrescence, Fungosity, —h. Cordis, Heart, hypertrophy of the.

HYPERSARXIS, Hypersarcoma.

HYPERSPADIAS, Epispadias.

HYPERSPASMIA, Convulsion.

HYPERSPLÉNOTROPHIE, Splenoncus.

HYPERSPONGIA, Spina ventosa.

HYPERSTHENI'A, Hyperdyna'mia, Hyperzoödyna'mia, Status inflammato'rius verus; from hyper, and σθενος, 'strength.' Super-excitement. A morbid condition, characterized by over-excitement of all the vital phenomena.

HYPERSTHENIC, Stimulant.

HYPERSTHENICUS, Active, Stimulant.

HYPERTON'IA, hyper, and τονος, 'tone.' Excess of tone in parts. It is opposed to atony.

HYPERTRICHOSIS; from hyper, and τριξ, τριχος, 'hair.' Excessive production of hair.

HYPERTROPHÉ'MIA, from hyper, τροφη, 'nourishment,' and αιμα, 'blood.' A state in which the plastic powers of the blood are increased.

HYPERTROPHIA, Hypertrophy—h. Cerebri, Phrenauxe—h. Cordis, Heart, hypertrophy of the—h. Glandularum, Hyperadenosis—h. Hepatis, Hepatauxe—h. Intestinorum, Enterhypertrophia—h. Lienis, Splenoncus—h. Splenis, Splenoncus—h. Uteri, Metrauxe—h. Unguium, Onychauxe—h. Vesicæ urinariæ, Cystauxe.

HYPERTROPHIÆ, see Hypertrophy.

HYPERTROPHIE DU CŒUR, Heart, hypertrophy of the—h. Centripète du Cœur, Heart, hypertrophy of the—h. Concentrique du Cœur, Heart, hypertrophy of the—h. du Foie, Hepatauxe—h. de la Rate, Splenoncus—h. du Corps Thyroïde, Bronchocele.

HYPERTROPHIED, see Hypertrophy.

HYPERTROPHIEN, see Hypertrophy.

HYPERTROPHOUS, see Hypertrophy.

HYPERTROPHY, Hypertroph'ia, from hyper, and τροφη, 'nourishment.' The state of a part in which the nutrition is performed with greater activity; and which, on that account, at length acquires unusual bulk. The part thus affected is said to be hyper'trophied or hyper'trophous. Hypertrophia is used by Neligan, as Hypertrophien is by Simon, for an order of cutaneous diseases, characterized by hypertrophy of the derma, or epidermis, or both, or of the hair follicles.

HYPERURESIS, Enuresis—h. *Aquosa, Diabete*s.

HYPERURORRHÉE, Diabetes—h. Saccharine, Diabete (mellitus.)

HYPERZOODYNAMIA, Hypersthenia.

HYPERXODOS, ὑπεξόδος, from ὑπο, 'beneath,' and εξόδος, 'passing out.' An alvine discharge or flux.—Hippocrates.

HYPEZOCUS, Diaphragm, Pleura. See Plypozoma.

HYPHA, Texture.

HYPHÆMA, Eechymoma.

HYPHÆMATO'SIS, Hypohæmato'sis, from ὑπο, 'under,' and αιματωσις, 'sanguification.' Morbidly diminished hæmatisis.—Sanguifica'tio debil'ior.

HYPHÆMOS, Suberuentus.

HYPHE, Texture.

HYPHYDROS, Hydropic.

HYPINO'SIS, Hypoplas'ma, from ὑπο, 'under,' and ινος, 'fibre.' The condition of the blood in which the quantity of fibrin is frequently less than in health, or if it amounts to the usual quantity, its proportion to the blood corpuscles is less than in health: the quantity of corpuscles is either absolutely increased or their proportion to the fibrin is larger than in healthy blood; the quantity of solid constituents is also frequently larger than in health. Such is the condition of the blood in fevers, hemorrhages, and polyæmia.—Simon.

HYPNÆSTHESIS, Somnolenéy.

HYPNAGO'GIC, Hypnago'gicus, from ὑπνος, 'sleep,' and αγωγος, 'a leader.' Leading to sleep.

Hypnagogic hallucinations are those visions which occur when we are half asleep.

HYPNIA'TER, (F.) Hypniatrc, from ὑπνος, 'sleep,' and ιατρος, 'a physician.' A name given to deluded or designing persons who have affirmed that they were able, during their 'magnetic sleep,' to diagnose disease and its appropriate treatment.

HYPNIC, Hypnicus, from ὑπνος, 'sleep.' An agent that affects sleep.—Percira.

HYPNOBADES, Somnambulist.

HYPNOBADISIS, Somnambulism.

HYPNOBATASIS, Somnambulism.

HYPNOBATES, Somnambulist.

HYPNOBATESIS, Somnambulism.

HYPNOBATIA, Somnambulism.

HYPNO'DES, ὑπνώδης, from ὑπο, 'under,' and ὑπνος, 'sleep.' One in a state of slumber or somnolency.

HYPNODIA, Somnolency.

HYPNOLOG'ICA, Hypnolog'icæ. The part of hygiene which treats of sleep.

HYPNOL'OGY, Hypnolog'ia, from ὑπνος, and λογος, 'a discourse.' Same etymon. A treatise on sleep. The doctrine of sleep.

HYPNONERGIA, Somnambulism.

HYPNOPHOBIA, from 'υπνος, 'sleep,' and φοβος, 'dread.' Dread of sleep. Incubus.

HYPNOPEUS, Somniferous.

HYPNOS, Sleep.

HYPNOSIS, from 'υπνος, 'sleep.' The super-vention or production of sleep.

HYPNOSIS BIOMAGNETICA, Sleep, magnetic.

HYPNOTIC, Somniferous.

HYPNOTISM, see Magnetism, animal.

HYPNOTIZED, see Mesmerized.

HYPO, 'υπο, 'sub,' 'under,' in composition.

HYPO, Hypochondriasis.

HYPOEMA, Eechymoma.

HYPOEMIA, Eechymoma, Hypæmia.

HYPOBLEPHAROMA, from 'υπο, 'under,' and βλεφαρον, 'eyelid.' Tumefaction under one or both eyelids. Also, an artificial eye, placed under the eyelids.

HYPOCAPNISMA, Suffimentum.

HYPOCAPNISMUS, Fumigation.

HYPOCARODES, Subsopora'tus, from 'υπο, 'under,' and καρος, 'a heavy sleep.' One who is in a state approaching carus.—Hippocrates.

HYPOCATHAR'SIS, from 'υπο, 'under,' and καθαρασις, 'purgation.' Too feeble purgation. A word opposed to hypercatharsis.

HYPOCATHARTICUS, Laxative.

HYPOCAUSTUM, from 'υπο, 'under,' and καυω, 'I burn.' A name given to a stove, or any such contrivance, to sweat in. Also, a furnace in any subterraneous place, used for heating baths:—'υποκαυστον, Balnea'rium, Vapora'rium.

HYPOCEPHALEUM, from 'υπο, 'under,' and κεφαλη, 'head.' A pillow for the head.

HYPOCERCHA'LEON, from 'υπο, and κερχαλωσις, 'hoarse.' Roughness of the fauces affecting the voice.—Hippocrates.

HYPOCHLORETUM SULPHUROSUM, Sulphur, chloride of.

HYPOCHLOROM'ELAS, sub-pallidæ ni'gri-cans, from 'υπο, χλωρος, 'green,' and μελας, 'black.' A term applied to one whose skin is pale, with a blackish hue.—Hippocrates, Galen.

HYPOCHOILION, Abdomen.

HYPOCHONDRE, Hypochond'rium, Subcartilagin'eum, Re'gio Hypochondri'aca, Hypochondriac Region, from 'υπο, 'under,' and χονδρος, 'a cartilage.' Each lateral and superior region of the abdomen is so called, because it is bounded by the cartilaginous margin of the false ribs, which forms the base of the chest. There is a right and a left hypochondrium.

HYPOCHONDRIAC, Hypochondri'acus, Hypochondri'acal, Va'pourish, Va'pourish, (F.) Hypochondriacæ. Same etymon. Belonging to hypochondriasis. One labouring under hypochondriasis—hipped.

HYPOCHONDRIACISMUS, Hypochondriasis.

HYPOCHONDRIALGIA, Hypochondriasis.

HYPOCHONDRIALQUE, Hypochondriac.

HYPOCHONDRIASIS. Same etymon. Alu'sia seu Hallucina'tio hypochondriasis, Morbus hypochondri'acus seu Resicato'rius seu Ructuo'sus, Malum hypochondri'acum, Hypochondriacis'mus, Hypochondricis'mus, Dyspep'sia hypochondriasis, Pas'sio seu Affectio hypochondri'aca, Anathym'iasis, Hypercine'sis gastrica, Splenes, Melanchol'ia nervea seu flatuo'sa seu hypochondri'aca, Suffocatio hypochondri'aca, Morbus flatuo'sus seu erudito'rum, Fomes ventric'uli, Hypochondrism, Hypo, Hip, Spleen, Vapours English, Malady, Low Spirits, (F.) Hypochondrie, Maladie imaginaire ou Anglaise, Affection vaporeuse. Vapeurs. This disease is probably so called, from the circumstance of some hypochondriacs having felt an uneasy sensation in the hypochondriac regions. The disease seems really to be, as Pinel has classed it, a species of neurosis, and of mental alienation, which is observed in persons who in other respects are of sound judgment, but who reason erroneously on whatever concerns their own health. Hypochondriasis is characterized by disordered digestion, without fever or local lesion; flatulence; borborygmi; extreme increase of sensibility; palpitations; illusions of the senses; a succession of morbid feelings, which appear to simulate the greater part of diseases; panics; exaggerated uneasiness of various kinds; chiefly in what regards the health, &c. Indigestion has usually been considered the cause of hypochondriasis. They are, unquestionably, much connected with each other: but there is every reason to believe, that the seat of the affection is really, though functionally, in the brain. The disease almost always appears at the adult age, most commonly in irritable individuals; and in those exhausted, or rather in the habit of being exhausted by mental labour, overwhelmed with domestic or public affairs, &c.

The treatment is almost entirely moral. The condition of the digestive function must, however, be accurately attended to.

HYPOCHONDRIACISMUS, Hypochondriasis.

HYPOCHONDRIUM, Hypochondriasis.

HYPODERMAT'OMY, Hypodermatom'ia, from 'υπο, 'under,' δερμα, 'the skin,' and τομη, 'incision.' The section of subcutaneous parts, as of tendons and muscles.

HYPODERMIC, Hypoder'micus, (F.) Hypodermique, from 'υπο, 'under,' and δερμα, 'skin.' That which is under the skin,—as 'hypodermic medication,' (F.) Médication hypodermique; that which consists in the application of remedies—as morphia—under the skin.

HYPODERMIS, Clitoris, Epideris.

HYPODERMIS, Epideris.

HYPODESMATA, Bandage.

HYPODYNAMIC, Adynamic.

HYPODYN'IA, from 'υπο, 'under,' and δυνα, 'pain.' Dolor mitis seu lenis. A slight pain.

HYPOGALA, Hypopyon.

HYPOGASTRAL'GIA, from 'υπογαστριον, 'the hypogastrum,' and αλγος, 'pain.' Pain in the hypogastrum.

HYPOGAS'TRIC, Hypogas'tricus. Relating or belonging to the hypogastrum.

HYPOGASTRIC ARTERY, A. Ili'aca inter'na, A. Ili'aca poste'rior, A. pelvienne—(Ch.), is the more internal of the two branches into which the primary iliac divides. It descends into the cavity of the pelvis, and gives off a considerable number of branches, which arise, at times, separately; at others, by common trunks. These branches are, 1. The posterior, i. e. the ilio-lumbar arteries, lateral, sacral, and gluteal. 2. The anterior, i. e. the umbilical, vesical, and obturator. 3. The internal,—the middle hemorrhoidal arteries, uterine, and vaginal in women. 4. The inferior, i. e. the ischiatric arteries, and internal pudic.

HYPOGASTRIC GANGLION. A large nervous ganglion, described by Dr. Robt. Lee as seated on each side of the cervix uteri, immediately behind the ureter; which receives the greater number of the nerves of the hypogastric and sacral plexuses, and distributes branches to the uterus, vagina, bladder, and rectum.

HYPOGASTRIC OPERATION OF LITHOTOMY, (F.) Taille hypogastrique. The high operation, or that practised above the pubes.

HYPOGASTRIC PLEXUS, Plexus sous-mésentérique of Winslow, is situate at the lateral and posterior parts of the rectum and the bas fond of the bladder. It is formed by the sacral nerves and the inferior mesenteric plexus, and gives off numerous filaments, which accompany the arteries that pass to the rectum and genital organs.

HYPOGASTRIC VEIN furnishes nearly the same branches.

HYPOGASTRION, Abdomen, Hypogastrium.

HYPOGASTRUM, Hypogastrium, from 'υπο, 'under,' and γαστήρ, 'the stomach or belly;' Etron, ητρον, Venter imus, V. parvus, Aquaticulus, Siemen, Rumen; and the lower part of the abdomen. The Hypogastric region, Re'gio hypogastrica seu hypogastria, which extends as high as three fingers' breadth beneath the umbilicus, is divided into three secondary regions—one middle or pubic, and two lateral or inguinal.

HYPOGASTROCE'LE, from 'υπο, 'under,' γαστήρ, 'the stomach or belly,' and κήλη, 'a tumour.' Hernia in the hypogastric region, occurring through the separated fibres of the lower part of the linea alba. See Hernia, hypogastric.

HYPOGASTRODIDY'MUS, Did'yimus Symphyo'hypogastrius, Ischiopa'ges, from 'υπο, 'under,' γαστήρ, 'the belly,' and δίδυμος, 'a twin.' A monstrosity in which twins are united by the hypogastrium.—Gurlt.

HYPOGASTRORIXIS, Eventration.

HYPOGLOSSA, Hypoglottides.

HYPOGLOSSAL NERVE, Hypoglossus.

HYPOGLOSSIA, Hypoglottides.

HYPOGLOSSIADENI'TIS, from 'υπο, 'under,' γλωσσα, 'tongue,' αδην, 'a gland,' and ιτις, denoting inflammation. Inflammatio glandularum sublingualium. Inflammation of the sublingual gland.

HYPOGLOSSIDIA, Hypoglottides.

HYPOGLOSSIS, Hypoglossium, Hypoglottis, Hypoglot'tia, from 'υπο, 'under,' and γλωσσα, 'tongue.' The under surface of the tongue; anything under the tongue; and hence, Ranula.

HYPOGLOSSIUM, Hypoglossis, Ranula.

HYPOGLOSSUM, Ruscus hypoglossum, Ranula.

HYPOGLOS'SUS, from 'υπο, 'under,' and γλωσσα, 'the tongue.' That which is under the tongue.

HYPOGLOSSUS, Lingua'lis Me'dius, Hypoglossal or Lingual or Gustatory Nerve, (F.) Nerf Hypoglosse on Grand Hypoglosse, Hypoglossien (Ch.), is the ninth pair of nerves, Par nonum, Nervus hypoglossus seu loquens, of many anatomists. It arises by ten or twelve very fine filaments from the grooves, which separate the corpora pyramidalia from the C. olivaria; issues from the cranium by the foramen condyloideum anterius; and divides, near the angle of the jaw, into two branches; the one, the cervical'is descendens or descendens noni. It forms, with the cervical plexus, a large anastomotic arch, and furnishes branches to several of the muscles of the neck. The other, the lingual branch, is the continuation of the principal trunk, and gives its numerous filaments to the muscles of the tongue and pharynx. The ninth pair communicates motion to the muscles to which it is distributed.

HYPOGLOTTIA, Hypoglossis, Hypoglottides.
HYPOGLOTTIDES, (PILULE,) Hypoglossia, Hypoglot'tia, Hypoglossa, Hypoglot'ta, Hypoglossid'ia, Pil'ule sublingua'les. Pills placed under the tongue to dissolve there.

HYPOGLOTTIS, Hypoglossis, Ranula.

HYPOGLU'TIS, from 'υπο, 'under,' and γλαυρος, 'the nates.' The lower and projecting part of the nates.—Gorreaus.

HYPOGNATHADEN, Submaxillary gland.

HYPOGNATHADENI'TIS, Hypoglossadeni'tis, from hypognathaden, the submaxillary gland, and itis, denoting inflammation. Inflammation of the submaxillary gland.

HYPOHE'MA, from 'υπο, 'under,' and αιμα, 'blood.' Effusion of blood into the chambers of the eye. It is generally absorbed in time.

HYPOHEMATOSIS, Hyphæmatosis.

HYPOHEMIA, Hypæmia.

HYPOLEPSTOMANIA, Melaneboly.

HYPO'MIA, from 'υπο, 'under,' and ωμος, 'the shoulder.' That which lies under the shoulder, as the axilla.

HYPOMO'RIA, from 'υπο, 'under,' and μορια, 'folly.' Slight imbecility of mind, or slight delirium.

HYPONARTHÉCIE, Hyponarthécia, from 'υπο, 'under,' and αρθής, 'a splint.' A term used by M. Mayor for his mode of treating fractures by position only,—the limb resting upon a properly cushioned board or splint.

HYPONEU'RIA, from 'υπο, 'under,' and νευρον, 'a nerve.' Morbidly diminished nervous energy.

HYPON'OMOS, Ulcus sntbus depas'cens, from 'υπο, 'under,' and ωμο, 'I feed.' A deep fistula or ulcer.

HYPON'YCHON, from 'υπο, 'under,' and ονχ, 'the nail.' Echymoma Hyponychon. Effusion of blood under a nail.

HYPOPATHI'A, Subaffectio, from 'υπο, 'under,' and παθος, 'disease.' A disease of a slight character.

HYPOPATUS, Dejectio.

HYPOPE'DIUM, from 'υπο, 'under,' and πους, 'the foot.' A cataplasm for the sole of the foot.

HYPOPH'ASIS, from 'υπο, 'under,' and φαινω, 'I appear.' The state of the eyes in which the white only is seen through the opening of the eyelids.—Hippocrates.

HYPOPHLEGMASIA, Subinflammatio.

HYPOPH'ORA, from 'υπο, 'under,' and φερω, 'I carry;' Ulcus sinuosum seu fistulosum. A fistulous ulcer.—Galen. A dejection.

HYPOPTHALMIA, Hypopyon.

HYPOPTHAL'MION, from 'υπο, 'under,' and οφθαλμος, 'the eye.' That part under the eye where œdema generally commences in chronic diseases and in cachexia.—Hippocrates.

HYPOPHYSIS, Cataract, Epigone—h. Cerebri, Pituitary gland.

HYPOPITYS LANUGINO'SA, from 'υπο, 'under,' and πυρς, 'a pine tree,' from the place of its growth. American Pine-sap, False Beech-drops, Birds' Nest. Indigenous; flowering from June to August. Order, Ericaceæ. Used as a nervine in the form of the powdered root.

HYPO'PIUM, from 'υπο, 'under,' and ωιλ,

'eye.' The part of the face under the eye:—a black eye.

HYPOPIUM OS, Malæ os.

HYOPLASMA, Hypnosis.

HYOPLASTÆMA, from ὑπο, 'under,' πλαστικός, 'formative,' and αἷμα, 'blood.' Diminished plasticity of the blood.

HYOPLEURIUS, Pleura.

HYOPO'DIA, Supplanta'lin, Supped'nea, from ὑπο, 'under,' and πους, 'the foot.' Remedies, as sinapisms, which are applied under the foot.

HYPOP'YON, Hypopyum, Hypophthal'mia, Pyophthal'mia, Empy'e'sis seu Diapy'e'sis seu Absces'sus Oculi, Oculus purulent'us, Lunell'a, Hypog'ala, Hypopyum lac'teum, Pyo'sis, Parop'sis Staphylo'ma purulent'um; from ὑπο, 'under,' and πυο, 'pus,' because the pus is under the cornea. This name has been given to small abscesses between the laminae of the cornea, as well as to different purulent collections in the chambers of the eye; hence, some pathologists have distinguished Hypop'yon of the chambers from Hypop'yon of the cor'nea. In abscesses of the chambers, the purulent matter is mixed with the aqueous humour, which it renders turbid; and is deposited particularly at the lower part of the eye: forming behind the cornea a kind of whitish crescent, that rises more or less before the pupil, and closes it entirely or in part. It requires the use of local and general antiphlogistics, and sorbefacients. At times, it is necessary to puncture the cornea and evacuate the pus.

Hypopion was used by Galen to signify "an effusion of blood under the eyelids and tunica conjunctiva, or under the lower eyelid."—Blancard.

HYPOPYUM LACTEUM, Hypopyon.

HYPORIN'ION, Hyporrhini'um, from ὑπο, 'under,' and ριν, 'the nose.' That part of the beard which grows beneath the nose. The mustaches. Also, the upper lip.

HYPORR'YSIS, Defluxion, Prolapsus.

HYPOSA'PRUS, Subputris, Putres'cens. Growing putrid; slightly putrid. Game, of various kinds, (F.) Vian'des faisandées, is, at times, preferred in an incipient state of decomposition, which certainly renders it more digestible.

HYPOSAR'CA, from ὑπο, 'under,' and σαρξ, 'flesh'; Hyposarcid'ius, Anasarca. In the Nosologies of Linnæus and Cullen, it is synonymous with Physconia.

HYPOSARCI'DIUS, Anasarca, Hyposarca.

HYPOSARCO'SIS, from ὑπο, 'under,' and σαρκωσις, 'a fleshy growth.' A small, fleshy growth:—a wart.

HYOSIAGON, Maxillary bone, inferior.

HYOSIAGONARTHRI'TIS, from ὑπο, 'under,' σιαγων, 'the jawbone,' ('lower jawbone,') αρθρον, 'a joint,' and ιτις, denoting inflammation; Inflamma'tio artic'uli maxill'æ inferior'is. Inflammation of the joint of the lower jaw.

HYOSIALADEN, Submaxillary gland.

HYOSIALADENITIS, Hypogonathadenitis.

HYOSPA'DIA, Hypospadi'asis, from ὑπο, 'under,' and σπαι, 'I draw.' A malformation, in which the canal of the urethra, instead of opening at the apex of the glans, terminates at its base, or beneath the penis, at a greater or less distance from the symphysis pubis. When the orifice of the urethra is very near the root of the penis, the serotum is divided, as it were, into two great labia; and this malformation has often been taken for a case of hermaphroditism. Hypospadia is ordinarily incurable; and an idea has been entertained that it is the cause of impotence. It is not exactly so; but it renders impregnation less probable.

HYOSPA'DIAS, Hypospadi'æ'us, Hypospad'icus. One affected with hypospadia.

HYOSPADIASIS, Hypospadia.

HYOSPATHI'SMUS, from ὑπο, 'under,' and σπαθιον, 'a ladle or spatula.' A surgical operation, with the ancients, in cases of severe 'defluxion to the eyes,' which consisted in incisions made in the scalp down to the bone, and the insertion of an instrument called a spath'ion or hypospathis'ter to enable the intermediate parts to be divided. The precise character of the operation is not well described, and it is no longer known.—Paulus of Ægina.

HYOSPATHISTER, see Hypospathismus.

HYOSPHAG'MA, from ὑπο, 'under,' and σφαζω, 'I kill.' The coagulated blood, which is collected when an animal is killed and used for food. Also, an effusion of blood, especially under the conjunctiva.

HYOSPHAGMA, Hæmophthalmia.

HYPOSTAPHYLE, Staphylœdema.

HYPOSTAPHYLITIS, see Staphylitis.

HYPOS'TASIS, from ὑπο, 'under,' and στασις, 'the act of placing.' A morbid deposition in the body. Sediment.

HYPOSTAT'IC, Hypostat'icus, from ὑπο, 'under,' and στασις, 'stagnation.' Relating to bypostases, sediments or depositions.

HYPOSTATIC HYPERÆMIA. A congestion of blood in the vessels of a part, caused by its depending position.

HYPOSTEMA, Sediment.

HYPOSTHENIA, Debility.

HYPOSTHENIC, Contrastimulant.

HYPOS'TROPHE, ὑποστρόφη, 'change of position,' from ὑπο, and στρέφω, 'I turn.' Act of a patient turning himself. Also, a relapse or return of a disease.—Hippocrates, Fœsius.

HYPOSTYP'TIC, Hypostyp'ticus, from ὑπο, 'under,' and στυψις, 'constriction.' A feeble astringent.

HYOSYPH'ILIS, from ὑπο, 'under,' and syphilis. A mild form of syphilis.

HYPOTH'ENAR, Sub'vola, from ὑπο, 'under,' and θναρ, 'the palm of the hand or sole of the foot.' Hypothenar Em'inance. The fleshy projection of the palmar surface of the hand, which corresponds with the little finger, and is supported by the fifth metacarpal bone. This eminence is formed of four muscles: the Palmaris brevis, Adductor seu Flexor brevis minimi digiti, and Opponens minimi digiti. The name Hypothenar has also been given to different muscles of the hand. The Hypothenar minimi digiti of Riolan comprehended the Abductor, Flexor brevis and Opponens minimi digiti; and his muscle, Hypothenar pollicis, corresponded to the Abductor and a portion of the Flexor brevis pollicis. Winslow called the Adductor minimi digiti, muscle petit hypothenar ou hypothenar du petit doigt.

HYPOTHENAR MINIMI DIGITI, Flexor parvus minimi digiti—h. Minor metacarpeus, Abductor minimi digiti—h. Riolani, Flexor parvus minimi digiti.

HYPOTHETON, Suppository.

HYPOTHYMIAMA, Fumigation.

HYPOTHYMIASIS, Fumigation.

HYPO'TIUM, (Emplastrum;) from ὑπο, 'under,' and οὖς, 'the ear.' Emplastrum auricula'ræ; a plaster applied behind or under the ear.

HYPOTROPHE, Relapse.

HYPOTROPH'IA, Hypot'rophy, from ὑπο, 'under,' and τροφη, 'nourishment.' Scanty nourishment or nutrition. Atrophy.

HYPOTROPIASMUS, Relapse.

HYPOTRYGUS, Feculant.

HYPOUCANNA, Ipecacuanha.

HYPOUTRION, Abdomen.

HYPOXĒMIE, Asphyxia.

HYPOXYS ERECTA, Stargrass; from ὑπο, 'beneath,' and ἄξυς, 'sharp,' because the pod is acute at the base [?]; indigenous; Order, Amarillydaceæ. The root is eaten, and has been used as a vulnerary; and in chronic ulcers and agnes.

HYPOZOMA, from ὑπο, 'under,' and ζώνη, 'I bind round'; Membrana succivigenis. A membrane or septum, as the mediastinum, diaphragm, &c.

HYPOCRAS, Claret.

HYPSELOGLOSSUS, Basioglossus.

HYSILODES, OS, Hyoides os.

HYSILOGLOSSUS, Hyoglossus.

HYPSONOSUS, Puna.

HYPSOPHONUS, from ὑψος, 'high,' and φωνή, 'voice.' One who has a clear high voice.

HYPSSOSIS, Sublimation.

HYPTIASMA, Supination.

HYPTIASMOS, from ὑπτιάζω, 'I lie with the face upwards.' Lying in a supine posture. Also, inversion of the stomach, as in nausea, regurgitation, or vomiting.—Hippocrates, Galen.

HYPULUS, from ὑπο, and οὐλή, 'cicatrix.' Imperfectly cicatrized.

Ulcera hypula. Ulcers healed at the top, but not at the bottom.

HYRAUCEUM. A substance found in the Cape Colony, which Thunberg and other travellers mistook for a kind of bitumen; but, according to Dr. Pape, it is obtained from the urine of the Klipdas or Hyraæ Capensis, which, when passed, is thick and of a glutinous nature. The animal is in the habit of evacuating the urine at one spot, where its aqueous parts evaporate in the sun—the more tenacious adhering to the rock and hardening.

In smell, and medical properties, it most resembles castor, which, according to Dr. Pape, it may replace. It is used by the Cape farmers in nervous and spasmodic affections.

HYRAX CAPENSIS, see Hyraceum.

HYRTOCHEILIDES, Labia pudendi.

HYSOPE, Hyssopus.

HYSSOP, Hyssopus—h. Hedge, Gratiola officinalis.

HYSSOPITES. Ancient name of a wine, of which hyssop was the chief ingredient, and which Dioscorides extolled in chronic inflammation of the chest. It was regarded as diuretic and emmenagogue.

HYSSOPUS, from the Hebr. Azob, Cassi'ala, Hyssopus officinalis, Common hyssop, (F.) Hysope. It has been chiefly used as an aromatic, stimulant, and pectoral, in the form of infusion.

HYSTERA, ὑστέρα, ὑστέρα, 'the uterus.' Hence:

HYSTERA, Secundines.

HYSTERALGIA, Hysterodyn'ia, (F.) Fortraiture, from ὑστέρα, 'the uterus,' and ἄλγος, 'pain.' Pain in the uterus. Irritable uterus, (F.) Névrologie de l'utérus. Hippocrates uses the epithet Hysteralg'es, ὑστέραλγης, for any thing that excites uterine pain; and, especially, [?] for vinegar.

HYSTERALGIA CATARRHALIS, Metrorrhœma—h. Galaetia, Phlegmatia alba dolens—h. Lochialis, Dysloch'ia—h. Rheumatica, Metrorrhœma.

HYSTERAPOPNIXIS, Angone.

HYSTERATREXISIA, Atretome'tria, from ὑστέρα, 'the uterus,' and ἀτρητος, 'imperfurate.' Imperforation of the os uteri.

HYSTERELCO'SIS, from ὑστέρα, 'uterus,' and ἔλκος, 'an ulcer.' Uteri exulcerat'io, Uteri ulcus. Ulceration of the uterus.

HYSTERELOSIS, Hysteroloxia.

HYSTEREMPHYSEMA, Physometra.

HYSTERIA, H. vaga, Hysterici'smus, Hysteris- mus, Hysterias, Hysteri'asis, Hysteropathi'a, Hypereinc'sia uteri'na seu hyst'eria, Uteri adscen'sus, Suffocat'io hyst'eria seu uteri'na seu mulie'rurum, Asthma u'teri, Præfocat'io matric'is seu uteri'na, Sypsa'sia hyst'eria, Malum hyst'ericum seu hyst'ericohypochoindr'acum, Vapores uteri'ni, Affect'io seu Passio hyst'eric'a, Morbus hyst'ericus, Strangul'tio uteri'na seu Vulvæ, Vapours, Hyst'eric's, Hyst'eric fit, Mother, (F.) Hystérie, Mal de Mère, Maladie imaginaire, Passion hystérique, Suffocation utérine, Étranglement, Épilepsie utérine, Vapeurs, Maux de Nerfs, from ὑστέρα, 'the uterus.' A species of neurosis, classed amongst the spasmi by Sauvages and Cullen, and in the Névroses de la génération, by Pinel. It received the name of hysteria, because it was reputed to have its seat in the uterus. It generally occurs in paroxysms; the principal characters of which consist in alternate fits of laughing and crying, with a sensation as if a ball set out from the uterus and ascended towards the stomach, chest, and neck, producing a sense of strangulation. If the attack be violent, there is, sometimes, loss of consciousness (although the presence of consciousness generally distinguishes it from epilepsy) and convulsions. The duration of the attacks is very variable. It appears to be dependent upon irregularity of nervous distribution in very impressible persons, and is not confined to the female; for well-marked cases of hysteria are occasionally met with in men. During the fit,—dashing cold water on the face, stimulants applied to the nose, or exhibited internally, and antispasmodics, form the therapeutical agents. Exercise, tranquillity of mind, amusing and agreeable occupations constitute the prophylactics. See Mania, dancing.

HYSTERIA CATALEPTICA, Catalepsy—h. Vaga, Hysteria.

HYSTERIAS, Hysteria.

HYSTERIASIS, Hysteria.

HYSTERICA, see Hysterical.

HYSTERICAL, Hyst'ericus, Va'pourish, Va'pouring, (F.) Hystérique. Same etymon as hysterical. Relating to or affected with hysteria.

The word hysterica was used by Martial for a female affected with nymphomania or with strong sexual desires.

HYSTERICISMUS, Hysteria.

HYSTERICUS, Hysteria.

HYSTÉRIE, Hysteria.

HYSTERISMUS, Hysteria.

HYSTERITES, Hydrometra.

HYSTERITIS, Metritis, Hydrometra.

HYSTERICARCINOMA, Metrocarcinoma.

HYSTEROCE'LE, from ὑστέρα, 'the womb,' and κήλη, 'hernia.' Metroce'le, Hernia uteri, Hernia of the womb. This is a rare disease. The womb may protrude through the inguinal or the crural canal, or through the lower part of the linea alba.

HYSTEROCELE NUDA, Prolapsus uteri.

HYSTEROCOLICA, Colica uterina.

HYSTEROCONIEMUS, from ὑστέρα, 'uterus,' and κνησμος, 'itching.' Pruritus of the uterus or genitals.

HYSTEROCRANIUM, Oeciput.

HYSTEROCYESIS, Pregnancy.

HYSTERO-CYSTIC, Hys'terocyst'icus, from ὑστέρα, 'the uterus,' and κυστις, 'the bladder.' Relating to the uterus and bladder. Some authors have called Hystero-cystic Retention of urine, that which is caused by the compression of the bladder by the uterus, during pregnancy.

HYSTERO-CYSTOCE'LE, from ὑστέρα, 'the womb,' κυστις, 'the bladder,' and κήλη, 'a tumour.' Hernia of the uterus complicated with displacement of the bladder.

HYSTERODYNIA, Hysteralgia.
 HYSTERŒDEMA, Hydrometra.
 HYSTEROID, Hysteroïdes, Hysteroïdes, from hysteria, and eidōs, 'resemblance.' Resembling hysteria.—as a hysteroid disease, symptom, &c.
 HYSTEROL'OGY, Hysterolog'ia, from ὑστέρα, 'the uterus,' and λογος, 'a description.' A treatise on the sound and morbid uterus.
 HYSTEROLOX'IA, Hysterelō'sis, Obliquitas seu Situs obliquus uteri, Flexio seu Versio incompleta seu Inclinatio uteri, Metrolox'ia, Metrocamp'sis, Metroscolio'ma, Uterus obliquus seu Inclinatus; from ὑστέρα, 'the uterus,' and λοξος, 'oblique.' An oblique position of the uterus, occurring during pregnancy. Anteversio of the uterus, Hysterolox'ia anterior, Anteversio seu Pronatio uteri, Venter propendens; and Retroversio of the uterus, Hysterolox'ia posterior, Retroversio uteri, Reflexio uteri completa, are varieties.
 HYSTEROMALA'CIA, Hysteromalaco'sis, Hysteromalaco'ma, Metromalaco'sis, Metromalaco'ma, Malaco'sis uteri, Emollit'ies uteri morbosa, Putrescentia uteri grav'idi, from ὑστέρα, 'the uterus,' and μαλακία, 'softness.' Softness of the uterus during pregnancy, which renders it liable to rupture in labour.
 HYSTEROMALACOMA, Hysteromalacia.
 HYSTEROMANIA, Nymphomania.
 HYSTEROMETER, see Sound, uterine.
 HYSTEROMOCILIUM, Lever.
 HYSTERON'CUS, from ὑστέρα, 'the uterus,' and ογκος, 'tumour.' Metron'cus, Hysterophy'ma, Metrophyma, Tumor uteri. A tumour of the uterus.
 HYSTERO-PARAL'YSIS, Hysterople'gia, from ὑστέρα, 'the uterus,' and παλσις, 'paralysis.' Paralysis of the uterus.
 HYSTEROPATH'IA, from ὑστέρα, 'the uterus,' and παθος, 'suffering.' Disease or suffering in the uterus. Also, hysteria, and deutero-pathia.
 HYSTEROPHYMA, Hysterocnus.
 HYSTEROPHYSE, Physometra.
 HYSTEROPHYYSIS, from ὑστέρα, 'the uterus,' and φύση, 'wind.' Distension of the uterus with air: Emphyse'ma uteri.
 HYSTEROPLEGIA, Hysteroparalysis.
 HYSTEROPNIX, Angone.
 HYSTEROPOLYPUS, Metropolypus.
 HYSTEROPSOPHIA, Physometra.
 HYSTEROPTO'SIS, from ὑστέρα, 'the womb,' and πτωσις, 'fall'; Prolapsus uteri. Also, Inversio uteri, Anastrophē uteri. In a general sense, a protrusion of any part of the genital organs or of excrescences from them into the genital passages; Edopto'sis.

HYSTEROPTOSIS, Prolapsus uteri—h. Vagina prolapsus, Prolapsus vagina.

HYSTERRRHAGIA SANGUINEA, Metrorrhagia.

HYSTERRRHEXIS, Uterus, rupture of the.
 HYSTERRRHEA, Metrorrhagia—h. Mucosa, Leucorrhœa.

HYSTERSALPINX, Tube, Fallopian.

HYSTERSCIRRHUS, Metrosclirrus.

HYSTERSCOPE, from ὑστέρα, 'the uterus,' and σκοπεω, 'I view.' A metallic mirror, used in inspecting the state of the os uteri for throwing the rays of a taper to the bottom of the speculum uteri.—Colombat de l'Isère.

HYSTERSPASM'US, from ὑστέρα, 'the womb,' and σπασμος, 'spasm.' Spasm of the uterus. Also, hysterical spasm.

HYSTERTOSTOMA, Os uteri.

HYSTERTOSTOMAT'OMUS, from ὑστέρα, 'the womb,' στομα, 'orifice,' and τεμνειν, 'to cut.' An instrument invented by Coutouly for dividing the os uteri, when it is important to deliver immediately, as in cases of convulsions.

HYSTERTOSTMIUM, Os uteri.

HYSTERSYNZESIS, Metrosynzesis.

HYSTERTOTOME, Hysterotomus.

HYSTERTOTOM'IA, Hysterotomy. Same etymon as Hysterotomus. Cæsarean section. Also, dissection of the uterus.

HYSTERTOTOMOTOCIA, Cæsarean section.

HYSTERTOTOMUS, Hysterotome, Metrot'omus, Me'trotome, from ὑστέρα, 'the womb,' and τεμνειν, 'to cut.' An instrument for dividing the womb through the vagina. It is a kind of Bistouri caché, and is intended to divide the cervix and os uteri.—Hysterotomat'omus.

HYSTERTOTRISM'US, from ὑστέρα, 'the womb,' and τριζω, 'I gnash.' Spasmodic contraction of the uterus, especially of its mouth.

HYSTREMPHYSEMA, Physometra.

HYSTRIASIS, Hystriaciasis.

HYSTRICI'ASIS, Hystri'asis, Hystrix, Hystri'cis'mus, Cerostro'sis, Tricho'sis seto'sa, from ὑστρίξ, ὑστρίχος, 'a hedgehog or porcupine.' A disease of the hairs, in which they stand erect like the quills of the porcupine.

HYSTRICISMUS, Hystriaciasis.

HYSTRIX, Hystriaciasis.

HYVES, Iives.

IATRALEIP'TICE, Iatralipticē (Ars), Iatraleiptic or Iatraliptic method; from ιατρος, 'a physician,' and αλειψω, 'I anoint.' The method of treating diseases adopted by the Iatraliptes,—that is, by friction chiefly.

IATRALEP'TES, Iatralipt'ees, Iatralipt'ea,

Iatroleip'tes, Medicus Unguenta'rius. One who treats diseases by unguents, frictions, and by external means generally. Prodicus, a disciple of Æsculapius, was the chief of the Iatraliptes.

IATRALIPTES, Iatraliptes.

IATRALIPTICE, Iatraliptice.

IATREUSIOLOG'IA, from ιατρεισις, 'the exercise of the art of healing,' and λογος, 'a description.' The doctrine of the exercise of the healing art.—Reil.

IATREUSIS. The exercise of the healing art.

IATRIA, Medicina.

IATRICE, Medicina.

IATRICUS, Medical; see Digitus.

IATRINĒ, Medicina. Also, a female practitioner of medicine; a midwife.

IATR'ON, ιατρειον, Iatre'on, Iü'tron, Ietri'on, Medicatr'ina. The house or office of a physician or surgeon. Also, the physician's fee or honorarium.

IATROCHEMIA, Chymiatría.

IATROCHYMIA, Chymiatría.

IATROGNOM'ICA, Iatrognom'icē; from ιατρος, 'a physician,' and γινωσκω, 'I know.' A knowledge of medical objects.—Hufeland.

IATROLEPTES, Iatroleptes.

IATROLOG'IA, Iatrol'ogy, from ιατρος, 'a physician,' and λογος, 'a description.' A treatise on physic and physicians.

IATROMAN'TIS, from ιατρος, 'a physician,' and μαντεια, 'divination.' A physician who is a soothsayer.

IATRO-MATHEMATICAL PHYSICIANS, Iatromathemat'ici. Mechanical physicians.

IATROMECHANICI, Mechanical physicians.

IATRION, Iatrimon.

IATROPHYSICS, Physics, medical.

IATROS, Iatros.

IATROSOPHIS'TA, from ιατρος, 'a physician,' and σοφιστης, 'one skilled in an art or science.' A learned, or thoroughly educated physician.

IATROTECH'NA, Iatrotech'nes; from ιατρος, 'a physician,' and τεχνη, 'art.' A practical physician or surgeon.

IATROTECHNICE, Medicina, Therapeutics.

IATRUS, Iatros, Physician; also, a surgeon.

IBERIS, Lepidium iberis.

IBERIS AMA'RA, Bitter candytuft, (F.) Passerage, from Iberia, where it is indigenous. A small herbaceous plant, Ord. Crucifere, indigenous in Europe, which was employed, of old, in gout, rheumatism, &c. The seeds have been used, in the dose of one to three grains, in asthma, bronchitis, dropsy, and hypertrophy of the heart. It is said to possess acro-narcotic properties; but it is not much used.

IBERIS BURSA PASTORIS, Thlaspi bursa—i. Campestris, Thlaspi campestre—i. Sophia, Cardamine pratensis.

IBICUBA, Beeuiba, Beeuiba nux. A species of nut from Brazil, the emulsive kernel of which is ranked amongst balsamic remedies.

IBIS, ibis. A bird held sacred by the Egyptians. When sick, it is asserted that it was wont to inject the water of the Nile into its fundament: whence, according to Langius, was learned the use of glysters.

IBISCHA MISMALVA, Althæa.

IBISCUS, Althæa.

IBIXUMA, Saponaria.

ICE, Sax. ij, Gla'cies, Frozen water, (F.) Glacé. Iced water is much used internally, as the best refrigerant in fever. It is, also, applied externally, in cases of external inflammation, as well as in phrenitic and hernial affections, &c., in the form of the ice-cap and ice-cataplasm or ice-poultice; formed by half filling a bladder with pounded ice.

ICE-CAP, see Ice.

ICE-COLD, Icy cold, (F.) Froid glacial. A very strong morbid sensation of cold, compared by the patient to that which would be produced by the application of pieces of ice.

ICE-POULTICE, see Ice.

ICELAND, MINERAL WATERS OF. Hot springs are found in every part of Iceland. The most noted of these is one called Geyser, two days' journey from Hecla, and near Skalholt. The diameter of the basin is 59 feet; and the height to which the water is thrown is often more than 100. The heat of the water is 212°.

ICE-PLANT, Mesembryanthemum crystallinum, Monotropa uniflora.

ICHNOS, ichnos. The foot. The sole of the foot. The heel.

ICHOR, ιχωρ, Ichos. The serum of the blood, Sanies, Sordes, Virus, Pus malignum, Tubum. A thin, aqueous, and acrid discharge.

ICHOROIDES, Ichorous.

ICHOROUS, Ichoro'sus, Ichoro'id'es, Sanio'sus, Sanio'sus, (F.) Ichoroux, Scaieur. Belonging to or resembling ichor.

ICHOS, Ichor.

ICHTHYA, Hook, blunt.

ICHTHYOCOL'LA, from ιχθυς, ichthos, 'a fish,' and κόλλα, 'glue.' Colla Piscium, Pis'inglass, Fish-glué, (F.) Ichthyocolle, Colle de Poisson. A name given to the dried swimming bladder or sound of Acipenser luso, and other species of acipenser, which is almost wholly composed of gelatin, and is employed in medicine in the formation of nutritive jellies. It is, also, occasionally used in anatomical injections. The English Cowt Plaster is made with it. In Russia, the Acipenser is not the only genus from which isinglass is procured; it is also obtained from Silurus Glanis, which Dr. Royle suggests to be the source of the Samory or Somoy Isinglass of commerce. The sounds of the cod, ling, hake, &c., yield it. From these it is made in New England; and, in England, is termed New York Isinglass.

ICHTHYOPH'AGISTS, Ichthyoph'agi, from ιχθυς, ichthos, 'a fish,' and φαγω, 'I eat.' People who feed habitually on fish;—generally the most uncivilized of mankind.

ICHTHYOPHAGOUS, Piscivorous.

ICHTHYOSE, Ichthyosis.

ICHTHYO'SIS, from ιχθυς ichthos, 'a fish,' from the resemblance of the scales to those of a fish. Lepido'sis, Ichthy'o'sis, L. Ichthy'o'sis, Lep'ra Ichthy'o'sis, Alcaras nigra (Arab.), Impet'igo excorticat'iva, (F.) Ichthyose; Fishskin, Porcupine Disease. A permanently harsh, dry, scaly, and, in some cases, almost horny texture of the integuments of the body, unconnected with internal disorder. Willan and Bateman have two varieties, I. simplex and I. cornea. Alibert has three, the I. naerée or pearly, the I. cornée, and the I. pellagre or Pellagra.

ICHTHYOSIS PELLAGRA, Pellagra.

ICHTHYOSIS SEBA'CEA, Sebaceous Ichthy'o'sis. A morbid incrustation of a concrete subaceous substance upon the surface of the epidermis, confounded, according to Mr. E. Wilson, with ichthyosis, to which it bears a close resemblance. In many cases there is neither redness nor heat, nor is the affection often accompanied by constitutional symptoms.

ICHTHYOTOX'ICUM, from ιχθυς, ichthos, 'a fish,' and τοξικον, 'a poison;' Ich'thyus, fish poison.

ICHTHYUS, Ichthyotoxicum.

ICICA ARACOUCHI'NI, Aracouchini is a balsam, extracted by incision from this tree in Guyana. The Galibis use it for healing wounds.

ICICA ICICARIBA, see Amyris elemifera.

ICTAR, Vulva.

ICTERE, Icterus—i. Bleu, Cyanopathy—i. des Nouveau-nés, Icterus infantum—i. Noire, Melæna.

ICTERIC, Ictericus.

ICTERIC FEVER, REMITTING, see Relapse.

ICTÉRICIE, Icterus.

ICTERICUS, Anticterie. Also, relating to, or rembling Icterus; Ic'teric, Ictero'id'es, Ictero'id'es, (F.) Ictérique.

ICTERITIA ALBA, Chlorosis—i. Flava, Icterus—i. Rubea, Erysipelas—i. Rubra, Erysipelas.

ICTEROIDES, Ictericus.

IC'TERUS, I. flavus seu verus, from ικτις, a species of weasel, whose eyes are yellow [?]. (Ik'teros meant, with the ancients, a yellow bird, perhaps the Oriole;) Morbus arcua'tus seu arquatus, Lece- ali morbus (Paracelsus), Auru'go, Auri'go, Morbis regius seu lute'olus, Cholelith'ia icterus, Cholelith'ia, Cholæ'mia, Cholopla'nia, Cholo'sis, Dermatocolo'sis, Suffu'sio aurigino'sa seu fellis seu bilis, Icteritia flava, Il'eus flavus seu icteroides, Cachex'ia icter'ica, Fellis suffu'sio seu obstructio seu Superfu'sio, Bil'ious Dys'crasy, Jaundice, Yellows, Janders, Jaunders, (Sc.) Gulschock, (Prov.) Jonas, (F.) Ictère, Ictérique, Jauisse, Bile répandue. A disease, the principal symptom of which is yellowness of the skin and eyes, with white feces and high-coloured urine. It admits of various causes; in fact, anything which can directly or indirectly obstruct the course of the bile, so that it is taken into the mass of blood and produces the yellowness of surface;—the bile being separated by the kidneys, causes yellowness of urine, and its being prevented from reaching the intestine occasions the pale-coloured feces. The prognosis, in ordinary cases, is favourable;—when complicated with hepatic disease, unfavourable. The treatment is simple:—an emetic or purgative, given occasionally so as to elicit the return of the bile to its ordinary channels; light tonics; unirritating diet; cheerful company, &c.

ICTERUS ALBUS, Chlorosis.

ICTERUS INFAN'TUM, I. Neonatorum, Neotocic'erus, Pædiat'erus, Auri'go nophyto'rum, Yellow gum, Yellow gown, (F.) Ictère des nouveau-nés, is a common affection, and frequently dependent upon obstruction of the choledoch duct by the meconium. It requires time; and castor oil, occasionally.

ICTERUS MELAS, Melæna—i. Neonatorum, I. infantum—i. Niger, Melæna.

ICTERUS SATURNINUS, Lead jaundice. The earthy-yellow hue in saturnine cachexy.

ICTERUS VIRIDIS, Green jaundice. Icterus when the skin is of a green or olive hue.

ICTODES FŒTIDUS, Dracontium foetidum.

ICTUS. 'A stroke or blow;' Plegè, Plaga. Ictus solis, a stroke of the sun. See Coup de soleil. Ictus, also, means the pulsation of an artery, and the sting of a bee or other insect.

ICTUS, Blow—i. Cordis, see Heart—i. Cordis et artiarum, Pulse—i. Sanguinis, Apoplexy—i. Solis, Coup de soleil.

IDEA, Idea, Ideolum, Ideach [? Paracelsus], (F.) Idee, from εἶδω, 'I see.' The image or representation of an object in the mind.

IDEA, FIXED or PREDOMINANT, Idea fixa, Ideopeg'ma. Tension of the mind on one notion; often observed in insanity.

IDEA MORBI. Knowledge or idea of a disease.

IDEACH, Idea.

IDEAGENOUS, Sentiment.

IDEAL, Ideal'is. Mental, notional, fancied. Morbi ideales. Ideal diseases. Diseases of the imagination.

IDEA'TION, Idea'tio, from 'idea.' The establishment of a distinct mental representation or idea of an object.

IDÉE, Idea.

IDEN'TITY (PERSONAL), Iden'titas, from iden, 'the same.' Sameness. It is sometimes a question in legal medicine to decide upon personal identity: that is, whether an individual be the same he represents himself to be. Physical marks form the great criteria.

IDEOLOGY, Ideology'ia, from εἶδω, 'I see,' and λογος, 'a discourse.' The science of ideas. Intellectual philosophy.

IDEO-MOTOR. A name given by Dr. Carpenter to muscular movements, the result of complete engrossment by an idea, which he regards as automatic, although originating in the cerebrum.

IDEOPEGMA, Idea, fixed.

IDÉOSYNCHYSIE, Delirium.

IDIANŒA, Idiotism.

IDIAPOCAUSIS, Combustion, human.

IDIEMPRESIS, Combustion, human.

IDIOCRASIS, Idiosyncrasy.

IDIOCTONIA, Suicide.

IDIOCY, Idiotism.

IDIO-MIASMATA, see Miasm.

IDIOPATH'IA, Idiopath'e'ia, Protopath'i'a, Pro'prius affectus, Morbis idiopath'icus seu proprius seu prima'rius seu protopath'icus seu original'is, Malum prima'rium, from idios, 'peculiar, proper,' and πάθος, 'an affection.' A primary disease; one not depending on any other.

IDIOPATH'IC, Pro'prio hab'itu seu Constitutio'nè pro'pria pendens, Idiopath'icus, Idiopath'es. Primary affections and their symptoms are so denominated.

IDIOPTCY, Achromatopsia.

IDIOPTS, see Achromatopsia.

IDIOSYNCRASIA, Idiosyncrasy—i. Hæmorrhagica, Hæmatophilia—i. Olfactoria, Parosmia.

IDIOSYNCRASY, Idiocrasy, Idiosyncrasis, Idiosyncrasia, Idiotrop'ia, Idiocrasis, Idiosyncrasi'a, from idios, 'peculiar,' σύν, 'with,' and κράσις, 'temperament.' A peculiarity of constitution, in which one person is affected by an agent which, in numerous others, would produce no effect. Thus, shell-fish, bitter almonds, produce urticaria in some, by virtue of their idiosyncrasies. Others faint at the sight of blood, &c.

ID'IOT, Idio'ta, 'foolish, stupid, ignorant.' Now used for one who is fatuous, or who does not possess sufficient intellectual faculties for the social condition, and for preserving himself from danger,—Homo fat'uus, (Prov.) Daleop, Fondling, Hobblin. In law, one who has been without understanding from his birth, and whom the law presumes to be never likely to attain any.

IDIOTIA, Idiotism—i. Endermica, Cretinism.

IDIOTIE, Idiotism.

ID'IOTISM, Idiotis'mus, Idiot'ia, Idianc'a, Imbecillitas mentis; Mo'ria demens, Anc'a, Mo'ria, Moro'sis, Meio'sis, Fatu'itas, Ament'ia, Demen'tia natural'is, Stupid'itas, Veeor'dia, Imbecill'itas Ingen'ii, Id'ioicy, Id'ioicy, Fatu'ity. (F.) Démence innée, Idiotisme, Idiotie, Apsychisme.—Piorry. Same etymon. A species of unsound mind, characterized by more or less complete obliteration of the intellectual and moral faculties. It may supervene on mania and melancholia, when it is termed Demen'tia, but more commonly it depends upon original conformation. It may also, be symptomatic of organic disease of the brain, which has come on after birth. Idiotism exists in various degrees. Some idiots are mere automatæ, exhibiting scarcely any sensibility to external impressions; others are capable of articulating a few words, and possess certain mental emotions to a limited extent. The physiognomy is usually vacant, step unsteady, and articulation imperfect or broken. The affection is almost always incurable; but it may often be palliated.

IDIOTISME, Idiotism.

IDIOTISMUS, Idiotism—i. Endemicus, Cretinism.

IDIOTROPIA, Idiosyncrasy.

IDOLUM, Hallucination, Idea.

IDROSIS, Ephidrosis.

IETRION, Iatrimon.

IF, Taxus baccata.

IFFIDES, Plumbi subcarbonas.

IGDE, Mortar.

IGDIS, Mortar.

IGNA'TIA AMA'RA, Strychnos Ignat'ii, Ignat'ia'na Philippin'ica. Ord. Apocynaceæ. The systematic name of the plant which affords St. Ignatius's Bean, Faba In'dica seu Sancti Ignat'ii seu febrif'uga, (F.) Ignatie, Fève de Saint Ignace, Noix d'Igasur. The seeds are bitter and poisonous, containing strychnia, and only appear to differ from nux vomica in containing a larger proportion of that alkaloid.

IGNAVIA, Inertia—i. sen Ignavitas partium genitalium, Impotence.

IGNIS, 'fire.' Hence:

IGNIS ACTUALIS, Cauterium—i. Animalis, Animal heat.

IGNIS CALIDUS. 'A hot fire.' A violent inflammation, about to degenerate into gangrene.

IGNIS COLUMELLE, Erysipelas.

IGNIS FRIGIDUS. 'A cold fire.' Sphaecelus.

IGNIS NATURALIS, Animal heat—i. Persicus, Anthrax, Herpes zoster—i. Philosophicus, Phosphorus—i. Potentialis, see Cauterium—i. Sacer, Erysipelas, Herpes zoster—i. Sancti Antonii, Erysipelas.

IGNIS SAPIENTUM. The ancient name for the heat of horses' dung.

IGNIS SYLVATICUS, I. sylvestris seu volaticus seu volegrius, Strophulus sylvestris seu volaticus, Wildfire rash, (F.) Feu sauvage ou volage, Flamboise. Probably, the Porri'go larva'lis or Crusta lac'tea of infants. Also, a transient redness of the face and neck, sometimes observed in hysterical and chlorotic females.

IGNIS SYLVESTRIS, I. sylvaticus—i. Vitalis, Animal heat—i. Volagrarius, I. sylvaticus—i. Volaticus, I. sylvaticus.

IGNIVOROUS, Pyrophagus.

IGNYE, Poples.

IGNYS, Poples.

ILEA, Flanks.

ILEAC PASSION, Ileus.

ILEADELPH'US, from ileum, 'the ileon,' and adelphos, 'brother.' A double monster, united at the pelvis, and below.

ILECH, Y'lech, Ilei'as, Ilias'ter, Ylia'ter, Elias'ter, Ilias'trum, Ilei'ados, Ilei'dos, Ilei'adum, Ili'adus. Terms used by Paracelsus to designate the first matter:—the beginning of every thing.

ILEIADOS, Ilech.

ILEIADUM, Ilech.

ILEIAS, Ilech.

ILEIDOS, Ilech.

ILEIT'IS, from ileum, 'the intestine ileum,' and itis, a suffix denoting inflammation. Inflammation of the ileum.

ILEO. In composition, relating or appertaining to the ileum.

ILEO-CHOLOSIS, Diarrhœa, bilious.

ILEO-COLIC, Ileo-colicus. Relating to the ileum and colon:—as the ileo-colic valve or valve of Bauhin.

ILEO-COLITIS, Enteritis.

ILEO-DICLIDITE, see Typhus.

ILEO-LUMBAR, Ileo-lumba'lis, Ilio-lumba'ris. Belonging to the ilium and lumbar region.

ILEO-LUMBAR ARTERY, Ilio-lumbar artery, Iliaco-muscular, (Ch.) is given off by the hypogastric, opposite the base of the sacrum. It ascends behind the psoas muscle, and divides into two branches;—an ascending and a transverse, which give off numerous ramifications to the neighbouring parts.

ILEO-LUMBAR LIG'AMENT, Ilio-lumbar or Ilio-lumbo-ver'tebral ligament, Vertebro-iliac ligament, is a broad, membraniform, triangular ligament, extending horizontally from the transverse process of the 5th lumbar vertebrae to the upper and posterior part of the iliac crest. It unites the vertebral column with the pelvis.

ILEON, I'evm, Ei'leon, I'ium, Intesti'num circumvolutum, from ει'ev, 'to turn,' 'to twist.'

Anatomists have given this name to the longest portion of the small intestine, which extends from the jejunum to the cæcum. It was so called from its forming a considerable number of convolutions.

ILEOPYRA, see Typhus.

ILEOSIS, Ileus.

ILEO-TYPHUS, see Typhus.

ILES, Flanks.

IL'EUS, Ei'leos, from ει'λω, 'I twist or contract.' Co'lica Ileus seu spasmod'ica, Enterole'sia, Enterole'sis, Ileus spasmod'icus, Chordap'sus, Passio Ili'aca, Iliac or Ileac Passion, Vol'vulus, Ileo'sis, Misere'rê mei, Convul'sus, Tormentum, Intercept'io Intestino'rum, Enterosten'o'sis volvulus, (F.) Colique de Miséricorde, C. de Misérêrê. A disease, characterized by deep-seated pain of the abdomen, stercoraceous vomiting, and obstinate constipation. It is occasioned by hernia or other obstruction to the passage of the fæces through a part of the intestinal canal, Enterosten'o'sis. The term Ileus has been applied to various affections—to simple nervous colic, intussusception, and to strangulation of the small intestine, &c. Various remedies have been employed;—the majority for the purpose of procuring alvine evacuations,—as purgatives, in draught, pill, or glyster; suppositories, tobacco glysters; pure mercury; leaden bullets; antispasmodics and narcotics; blisters to the epigastrium; ice by the mouth, or injected into the rectum. Some of these have, occasionally, succeeded,—especially the tobacco glyster, and ice to the tumour, where the disease has been occasioned by strangulated hernia. It is very dangerous.

ILEUS FLAVUS, Icterus—i. Icteroides, Icterus—i. Inflammatorius, Enteritis.

ILEX AQUIFOLIUM. The systematic name of the Common Holly, Aquifolium, Agrifo'lium, παιος of the ancients [?], (Prov.) Hollen, (Se.) Holyn, Holene, (F.) Houx, H. commun ou Chêne vert. Ord. Aquifoliaceæ. The leaves of this plant have been recommended as tonic, astringent, and antiseptic, and have been prescribed in atonic gout, intermittents, dyspepsia, &c. Ilicine, the active principle, has also been advised. It is obtained by dissolving the alcoholic extract of the leaves of the holly in water, and successively treating it with the subacetate of lead, sulphuric acid, and carbonate of lime. The filtered and evaporated product is then dissolved in alcohol; and the mixture filtered and evaporated in shallow vessels.

ILEX CASSINE, Ilex vomitoria.

ILEX MAJOR. From the berries of this tree, called by the Spaniards Bellotas, a juice may be expressed, which forms a slightly astringent emulsion with water, and has been recommended by some Spanish physicians in humid cough, hæmoptysis, &c.

ILEX MATE, Ilex paraguensis.

ILEX OPA'CA, American Holly, grows throughout the Atlantic portion of the United States. It is said to possess the same properties as the European variety.

ILEX PARAGUENSIS, Vibur'nium lævigatum seu Cassinoides, Cassinê Pera'gua seu Carolinia'na, I. Maté; a native of Paraguay. It affords the celebrated Matte, or Maté, Folia Apalachines seu Pera'gua, which is drunk in place of the Chinese tea by the people of Paraguay. By M. Lenoble, of Montevideo, the maté is referred to Psora'lea glandulo'sa.

ILEX VOMITORIA, I. Cassi'ne, Cussi'na, Daloon holly, Apalach'inê Gallis, South-Sea Tea, Evergreen Cassi'nê, Casse'na, Yanpon, Yopon, (F.) Thé des Apalaches, Houx Apalachine, Apalachine, Thé de la Mer du Sud. A tree, indigenous in the southern parts of the United States.

The leaves, when dried, are aromatic, stimulant, stomachic, and expectorant, and are used as a tea. When fresh, they are emetic and cathartic.

ILIA, Flanks.

ILIAC. Il'acus, Il'ial, (F.) Iliaque, from Ilia, 'the flanks.' Relating to, or connected with, the flanks.

ILIAC ARTERIES, Arte'ria Il'iacæ. This term has been given to several arteries. The Primary Iliacs, (F.) A. Iliques primitives,—Pelvicurales, (Ch.) arise from the bifurcation of the aorta, opposite the body of the 4th lumbar vertebra, and descend, in a divergent manner; until, opposite the sacro-iliac symphysis, they divide into two considerable trunks,—the internal Iliac or hypogastric (which see), and the external Iliac—Portion Iliaque de la crurale, (Ch.) This proceeds from the sacro-iliac juncture as far as the crural arch, when it assumes the name Femoral Artery. Before passing under the arch it gives off two pretty considerable branches,—the Epigastric, and the Circumflexa Ilii. This last, which is called, also, anterior Iliac by some anatomists,—Circonflexe de l'Ilium (Ch.); leaves the external iliac at the crural arch. It ascends along the outer edge of the iliacus muscle, and divides into two branches—an internal and an external.

The Iliaca Inter'na Minor seu Ilio lumb'al'is is a small artery, which sometimes arises from the hypogastric; at others, from the beginning of the gluteal. It is sent, chiefly, to the psoas and iliacus internus muscles.

ILIAC CREST, Crista Il'i, is the upper margin of the ilium. (F.) Crête Iliaque. It is very thick, and curved like the Italic S. It affords attachment to the broad muscles of the abdomen.

ILIAC FOSSE are two in number; the internal, the depression presented by the ilium on its interior, and at the upper part in which the Iliacus internus is lodged:—and the external, an excavation on the outer surface of the same bone, occupied by the Glutæi muscles.

ILIAC MUSCLE, INTERNAL, Il'acus internus Muscle, Iliacus, Iliaco-trochantérien (Ch.); Femur moventium septimum, Iliac muscle, is situated in the fossa iliaca, and at the anterior and superior part of the thigh. It is broad, radiated, triangular; and is attached, above, to the two upper thirds of the fossa iliaca, and to the internal part of the iliac crest:—below, it terminates by a tendon, which is common to it and the psoas magnus, and is fixed into the lesser trochanter. When this muscle contracts, it bends the pelvis on the thigh, and conversely. It is also a rotator of the thigh outwards, and prevents the trunk from falling backwards.

ILIAC PASSION, Ileus.

ILIAC REGIONS, Regio'nes il'i'acæ, Inan'ia, are the sides of the abdomen between the ribs and the hips.

ILIAC SPINES, Spinous Proc'esses of the Ilium, are four in number. They are distinguished into anterior and posterior. Of the anterior, one is superior. It bounds the crista ilii anteriorly, and affords origin to the sartorius muscle. The other is inferior, and receives the tendinous origin of the rectus femoris.

The two Posterior Iliac Spines are divided, like the anterior, into superior and inferior. They afford insertion to strong ligaments, which unite the ilium with the sacrum.

ILIACO-TROCHANTÉRIEN, Iliacus internus.

ILIACUS, I. internus—i. Externus, Pyramidalis.

ILIADUS, Ilech.

ILIALL, Iliac.

ILIASTER, Ilech.

ILIASTRUM, Ilech.

ILINGOS, Vertigo.

ILIO. In composition, relating or appertaining to the ilium.

ILIO-ABDOMINAL, Obliquus internus abdominis—i. Aponévrosi-fémoral, Fascia lata muscle—i. Costal, Quadratus lumborum—i. Cresti-tibial, Sartorius—i. Femoral, Coxo-femoral—i. Hypogastricus (nervus), Musculo-cutaneous nerve, superior—i. Inguinal, Musculo-cutaneous nerve, inferior—i. Ischii-trochantérien, Glutæus minimus—i. Lombo-costo-abdominal, Obliquus internus abdominis—i. Lumbalis, Ileo-lumbar, see Iliac arteries—i. Lumbi-costal, Quadratus lumborum—i. Lumbo-vertebral ligament, Ileo-lumbar ligament.

ILIO-PECTINE'A, Ileo-pectineal, belonging to the ilium and to the pecten or pubis.

ILIO-PECTINEAL EMINENCE is so called from being formed by the junction of the ramus of the ilium with that of the pubis. It affords attachment to the psoas minor.

ILIO-PECTINEA LIN'EA, Linea innomina'ta, is the projecting line or ridge of the ilium and pubis, which forms part of the brim of the pelvis.

ILIO-PRÉTIBIAL, Sartorius.

ILIO-PSOÏ'TIS, from Ilium, 'the ilion,' ψοατ, 'the loins,' and itis, denoting inflammation. Inflammation of the ilium and psoas muscle.

ILIO-PUBO-COSTO-ABDOMINAL, Obliquus externus abdominis—i. Rotulien, Rectus femoris—i. Sacral, Sacro-iliac—i. Sacral articulation, Sacro-iliac articulation—i. Sacro-fémoral, Glutæus major—i. Scrotal nerve, Musculo-cutaneous, superior—i. Trochantérien, Glutæus medius—i. Trochantérien petit, Glutæus minimus.

IL'ION, Il'ium, Il'eum, Haunch bone. The largest of the three bones which constitute the os innominatum in the fetus and child. It was probably so called from its seeming to support the intestine ilion; or, perhaps, because its crest is curved upon itself, from ειλεω, 'I twist,' 'I roll.' This portion of the os innominatum is usually so called in the adult. The posterior surface is called Dorsum, the internal Venter. The upper semicircular edge is the Crista or Spine, at the anterior part of which is the anterior and superior spinous process; and, below, the anterior and inferior spinous processes. At the back part of the spine are two spinous processes, the posterior and superior, and posterior and inferior. See Iliac.

Loss of power over one or more of the members. Commonly, it means want of sexual vigour; incapacity for copulation; and chiefly on the part of the male. Astys'ia, Astyp'h'ia, Asyno'dia, Adynamia vir'ilis. It has, also, been used synonymously with sterility. Impotence may be absolute or relative, constitutional or local, direct or indirect, permanent or temporary.

IMPOTENTIA, Adynamia, Impotenc—i. Gen-erandi, Impotence.

IMPOVERISHED, Effe'tus, Depaupera'tus, (F.) Appau'ri. 'Having become poor;' originally from (L.) pauper, (F.) pauvre, 'poor.' The Humorists applied this epithet to a humour, deprived of a part of its constituents, and particularly to the blood. This fluid was considered to be impoverished when it was pale, without the proper consistence, and abounding in serum. It was, on the contrary, rich, in their opinion, when of a scarlet colour; possessing consistence; when it coagulated promptly, and the quantity of serum, compared with that of the clot, was by no means considerable.

IMPRÆGNATIO, Fecundation, Pregnancy.

IMPREGNATIO, Fecundation, Pregnancy.

IMPRESSIBILITY, see Sensibility—i. Great, Hyperæsthesis.

IMPRESSSION, Impres'sio (in, and premere, pressum, 'to press'), Pros'bolē, (F.) Empreinte. A more or less deep indentation which certain organs seem to make on others. Inequalities observable on the bones, which appear to be made by the subjacent organs.

IMPRES'SIONS DIG'ITAL, Impres'sio'nes digita'tæ era'nii, Fossæ digita'les, are the depressions of various forms, observable at the inner surface of the cranium, which look, at first view, as if they were made with the fingers.

IMPRESSIONABILITÉ, see Sensibility.

IMPUBER, Impu'bes, Impu'bis, Ane'bus, Capilla'tus, from in, 'negation,' and puber, 'at the age of puberty.' (F.) Impubère. One who has not attained the age of puberty.

IMPUBES, Impuber.

IMPUDICUS, see Digitus.

IMPUISSANCE, Impotence.

IMPULSE, DIAS'TOLIC, Impul'sus diastol'icus, Back stroke of the heart. A jog or stroke which has been termed the 'back stroke,' felt at the end of each pulsation, and which would seem to be owing to the refilling of the ventricles.

IMPULSE OF THE HEART, see Heart.

IMPULSION DU CŒUR, see Heart.

IMPURITATES ALVINÆ, Fæces.

INANIA, Iliac regions.

INANITIATED, see Inanitation.

INCRUSTATIO, Decussation.

INCRUSTATION, Incrustatio, from in, and crusta, 'a crust;' Con'asis. The act of forming a crust on the surface of a body, as well as the crust itself. Also, the calcareous deposits or cartilaginous plates, which sometimes form in organs.

INCUBATIO, Incubation.

INCUBATION, Incubatio, Incubit'io, Incubitus, from incubare, incubitum, (in, and cubare,) 'to lie upon.' This word, which is used in natural history for the sitting of birds upon their eggs, is employed, figuratively, in medicine, for the period that elapses between the introduction of a morbid principle into the animal economy and the invasion of the disease.

INCUBITIO, Incubation.

INCUBITUS, Incubation.

INCUBO, Incubus.

INCUBUS. Same etymon. In'cubo, Epial'tes, Ephial'tes, I. nocturnus, Hypnophob'ia, Epilep'sia nocturna, Asthma nocturnum, Pnigal'ion, Suc'cubus, Oneirodyn'ia grævus, Erethis'mus oneirodyn'ia, Noctur'na oppres'sio, Epib'olê, Brubzic'rius, Nightmare, Wildmare, Riding-hug, (Prov.) Bitch-daughter, Hella, (F.) Cauchemar, Caucherieille, Cochemar, Oneirodymic gravative. Same etymon. A sensation of a distressing weight at the epigastrium during sleep, and of impossibility of motion, speech, or respiration; the patient at length awaking in terror, after extreme anxiety. Nightmare is often the effect of difficult digestion or of an uneasy position of the body. At other times, it occurs in consequence of severe emotions. The sensation of suffocation was formerly ascribed to the person's being possessed, and the male spirits were called incubes—the female succubes. The disease requires no particular treatment. The causes must be avoided.

INCUBUS VIGILAN'TIUM, Ephial'tes vigilantium, E. hypochondri'aca, Daymare. This is produced during wakefulness; the sense of pressure being severe and extending over the abdomen; respiration frequent, laborious, and constricted; eyes fixed; sighing, deep and violent; intellect, undisturbed.

INDURATIO, Induratio, Sclerys'ma, Sclerys'mus, Callositas, Indurescentia, Poro'ma, Poro'sis, (F.) Endurcissement. The hardness which supervenes, occasionally, in an inflamed part. It is one of the terminations of inflammation, and is owing to a change in the nutrition of the part.

INDURATION OF THE AREOLAR OR CELLULAR TISSUE, Induratio cellulosa, Induratio seu Oppila'tio telæ cellulosa neonatorum, Ethmyphot'osis, Edema neonatorum, Compact Edema of Infants, Cal'ochus Infantum, Scleremia, Sclerema, Scleroma, Scleroder'ma, Cutis tensa chronica, Dermatoperiscler'osis, Dermatoperisclerysmus, Halonit'is, Phlegmasia cellularis, Scirrhusar'ca neonatorum, Scler'osis neonatorum, Scler'osis, Stipa'tio telæ cellulosa Infantum, Skin-bound Disease, Skin-bind, Skin-tight, Hidebound, (F.) Endurcissement du tissu cellulaire; Edème du tissu cellulaire des nouveau-nés, Asphyxie lente des nouveau-nés, is a disease which attacks infants a few days after birth, and which Chausser proposed to call Scléride, from σκληρος, 'hard.'

The Induration of the areolar tissue of the adult, Sclerosteno'sis cutanea, has been regarded as the result of inflammation of the corium, Chorionit'is.

INDURATION OF THE BRAIN, Sclerencephalia—i. Grise, see Hepatitis.

INDURESCENTIA, Induration.

INDU'SIUM, Chitonis'cos. Strictly, 'a shirt,' 'a small tunic.' Some have so called the amnion.

INE'BRIANT, Inebrians, Phantas'ticus; from in and ebrio, 'I intoxicate.' Intoxicating. An agent that intoxicates.

INEBRIATION, Tumulentia.

INE'BRIATION QUINIQUE, Quinism.

INEDIA, Fasting.

INER'TIA, from in, 'negation,' and ars, artis, 'art,' Ignavia, Ener'vitas. Sluggishness, inactivity.

INER'TIA OF THE WOMB, (F.) Inertie de la matrice. The diminution and even total cessation of the contractions of the uterus during labour; as well as the species of languor into which it sometimes falls after the expulsion of the fœtus.

INERTIE PAR ÉPUISEMENT, see Parturition—i. de la Matrice, Inertia of the womb.

INESIS, Matris.

INETHMOS, Cenosis.

IN EXTREMIS, Psychorages.

IN'FANCY, Infantia, from in, 'negation,' and fans, from fari, 'to speak.' Early childhood. Childhood; Nep'otes, Paid'ia, (F.) Enfance. It generally includes the age from birth till the seventh year. See Age.

INFANS, Paid'ion, Nep'ios, (Sc.) Gaiting,

Gything, (Old Eng. and Prov.) Bairn; (Sc.) Bairn, (F.) Enfant. An infant, a baby, a child, one in infancy. In law, one who has not attained the age of legal capacity; which is, in general, fixed at twenty-one years.

INFANS RECENS NATUS, Nouveau-né.

INFANTIA, Infancy.

INFAN'TICIDE, Infanticid'ium, Tecnocton'ia, Child-murder, from infans, 'a child,' and cædere, 'to kill.' The murder of a child newly born, or on the point of being born. It may be perpetrated by the mother, or by some other person, either by commission, that is, in consequence of a direct voluntary act;—or by omission of those cares which are necessary for the preservation of the new-born.

INFARCTIO, Emphraxis.

INFARCTION, Emphraxis.

INFARCTUS, from in, and farvere, farctum, 'to stuff.' Emphraxis.

INFARCTUS INTESTINORUM, Enteremphraxis—i. Hæmopticus Laennecii, see Hæmoptysis—i. Lactei extremitatum, Phlegmatia dolens—i. Lienis, Splenoncus.

INFARCTUS MAMMÆ LACTEUS, Lactis concretiones, Nodi seu Thrombi lactei, Trich'asis lactea. Knotty tumours of the female mammeæ, owing to the accumulation and arrest of milk in the galactophorous ducts.

INFARCTUS UTERI, Metremphraxis.

INFECTIO PURULENTA, see Pyohæmia.

INFECTION, see Contagion.

INFECTIOUS, see Contagious.

INFECUNDITY, Sterility.

INFECUNDUS, Sterile.

INFERNAL, Infer'nus; 'relating to hell.' A name applied to caustic—Lapis Infernalis—on account of its strong burning properties.

INFIBULATIO, Fibulatio, Infibulatio, Anerterias'mus; from fibula, 'a clasp.' (F.) Boulement. An operation, formerly practised, which consisted in passing a ring through the prepuce, after having drawn it over the glans;—in order to prevent coition. The ancients employed infibulation with their gladiators to preserve all their strength by depriving them of venery. In the women, to preserve their chastity, the ring was passed through the labia majora.

INFILTRATION, Infiltratio, from filtrare, 'to filter.' Effusion. The passage or effusion of a fluid into the areolæ of any texture, and particularly of the areolar membrane. The fluid effused is ordinarily the Liquor sanguinis, sound or altered—sometimes blood or pus, feces, or urine. When infiltration of a serous fluid is general, it constitutes anasarca; when local, œdema.

INFILTRATION PURULENTE, see Hepatization.

INFINITESIMAL, Infinitesimus, from in, and finitus, 'limited.' Unlimited. An epithet employed by the homœopaths for their endless subdivisions of drugs:—the decillionth of a grain, for example, is "an infinitesimal dose."

INFIRM, Infirm'us, Imbecillus, Deb'ilis, As'thenes, Hypoc'rates, from in, negative, and firmus, 'firm.' Not firm or sound; weak; feeble.

INFIRMARIUM, Hospital.

INFIRMARY, Hospital.

INFIRMATORIUM, Hospital.

INFIRMIER (F.), from infirmus, (in, negative, and firmus.) Infirmarius, Nosocomus, Cura'tor infirmorum. One employed in an hospital or infirmary to take care of the sick.

INFIRMITY, Infirm'itas, Asthen'ia, Arrhos'tia, Invaletu'do. Any disease which has become habitual, either owing to its chronic character, or its numerous relapses.

INFLAMED, (Old Eng.) Flamed, Inflamma'

tus, (F.) Enflammé, Phlogosé,—Phlogosé, according to some. Same etymon as inflammation. Affected with inflammation.

INFLAMMABLE AIR, Hydrogen, carburetted.

INFLAMMAT'ION, Inflammatio, from in, and flamma, 'flame,' 'fire'; Phlegmonê, Phlogosis, Ephlogosis, Epiphleg'ia, Exap'sis, Phlegmasia, Causo'ma, Empres'ma, Phlog'ia, Hyperendosmose (Dutrochet), Incen'dium, Hyperhæmatosis, Hyperæ'mia act'iva, Phlebotero'sis ephrac'tica, (F.) Angiite, is so called in consequence of the acute or burning pain felt in a part affected with it. An irritation in a part of the body is occasioned by some stimulus;—owing to which the blood flows into the capillary vessels in greater abundance than natural, and those vessels become over-dilated and enfeebled; whence result pain, redness, heat, tension, and swelling; symptoms which appear in greater or less severity, according to the structure, vital properties, and functions of the part affected, and its connexion with other parts, as well as according to the constitution of the individual.

Simple accumulation of blood in the capillaries of the part is hyperæmia, not inflammation. The latter requires, in addition, altered nutrition either of the vessels themselves, or of the surrounding tissues, or of both.

The inflammations of the areolar and serous membranes greatly agree;—and those of the mucous and skin; the former being more active, and constituting the phlegmonous variety;—the latter, the erythematic or erysipelalous. Of this variety is the diffusive inflammation produced by morbid poisons,—as during dissection, where solutions of continuity exist on the fingers of the operator. It is seen, too, in workers in bone, and hence has been called bone fever. Preparatory to the turning of bones, it is customary to macerate them in water. The fluid soon becomes putrid, and if the hands be kept in it diffusive inflammation results. Inflammation may end by resolution, suppuration, gangrene, adhesion, effusion, or induration. Each of the inflammations of internal organs has received a name according to the organ affected;—as, gastritis, cephalitis, enteritis, hepatitis, &c. Besides the above inflammations, it has been considered, that there is an instinctive kind established for the union of parts which have been divided, whether the union takes place immediately, or by the aid of an intermediate body. This is the adhesive inflammation of some; but it may well be questioned whether inflammation is ever desirable in such cases. See Adhesion, Callus, Cicatrix. Broussais considered that the term inflammation should include every local exaltation of the organic movements which is sufficiently great to disturb the harmony of the functions, and disorganize the texture in which it is situate. He farther extended the name inflammation to irritations which do not induce disorganization of the textures, and which had been previously, and are still, called fevers.

Examination of the blood drawn always exhibits an increase of the fibrinous elements—the average proportion of which, in healthy blood, is about three in the thousand. In inflammation, it at times rises as high as ten. In fevers unaccompanied with inflammation, the proportion is natural, or below the average; but whenever inflammation supervenes, it immediately rises.

External inflammation is easily detected by the characters already mentioned:—internal, by disturbance of function and pain upon pressure; but the last sign is often not available. Both forms require the removal of all irritation, and the reduction of vascular excitement and nervous irritability; hence, blood-letting—local and general—sedatives, refrigerants, and counter-irritants become valuable remedies in almost all cases of inflammation.

Inflammation is not always of the active kind. There is a form, Inflamma'tio deb'ilis, which occurs in low conditions of the system, and in broken down constitutions, which, like many forms of chronic inflammation, requires a stimulant, rather than a sedative, mode of treatment.

INFLAMMATIUN' CULA, Subinflamma'tio. A superficial and often insignificant inflammation of the skin, as in many cutaneous affections.

INFLAMMATORY, Inflammat'orius; Phlog'icus, Phlog'odes, Phlogisticus, Phlogistic, belonging to inflammation;—as, inflammatory tumour, inflammatory fever, &c. The blood is said to be inflammatory when cupped or buffed. See Corium phlogisticum.

INFLAMMATORY BLUSH, Erythema.

INFLAMMATUS, Inflamed.

INFLATIO, Emphysema, Puffiness, Colica flatulenta—i. Parotidum, Cynanche parotidæa—i. Uteri, Physometra.

INFLEXIO, Campsis.

INFLUENCE, Influenza.

INFLUENTIA, Influenza.

INFLUENZA. The Italian for 'Influence.' Influenza Europæa, Influent'ia, Catarrhus epidem'icus, C. a conta'gio, Febris catarrhalis epidem'ico, Rheuma epidem'icum, Morbus Vervec'ianus seu Catarrhalis seu Ariet'is, Syn'ochus seu Deflux'io catarrhalis, Cephalat'gia contagiosa (epidemics of the 16th and 17th centuries): (F.) Tac, Quinte, Florion, Coqueluche, Barquette, Générale, Grippe, Follette, Grenade, Coquette, Cocote, Petite Poste, Petit Courier, Allure, Ladendo, Fiebre catarrhale épidémique; Influence, Epidemic catarrh. A severe form of catarrh occurring epidemically, and generally affecting a number of persons in a community. See Catarrh, epidemic. Gluge, from his investigations considers that the following is the chronological order of the return of the influenza:—14th century, 1323, 1326—15th century, 1410, 1411, 1414—16th century, 1510, 1557, 1562, 1574, 1580, and 1593—17th century, 1658, 1669, 1675, 1693—18th century, 1708, 1712, 1729, 1732, 1733, 1742, 1743, 1761, 1762, and 1775—19th century, 1800, 1803, 1831, and 1833. To these may be added 1837, and 1843.

INFLUENZA EUROPÆA, Influenza.

INFLUENZOID, Influenzoï'des. An expressive but hybridous compound: from influenza, and adog. 'resemblance.' Resembling influenza.—Dr. T. Thompson.

INFORMITAS, Deformation.

INFORTUNUM, Contrafractura.

INFRA-ATLOIDÆUS, Sub-atloïdæus.

INFRA-AXOIDÆUS, Sub-axoidæus.

INFRA-COSTALES, see Intercostal muscles.

INFRA-MAXILLARIS, Sub-maxillary.

INFRAMAXILLOSTERNODYMIA, Cephalosomatodymia.

INFRA-ORBITAR, Sub-orbital.

INFRAPUBIAN LIGAMENT, Triangular ligament.

INFRA-SCAPULARIS, Subscapularis.

INFRA-SPINALIS, Infra-spinatus.

INFRA-SPINA'TUS, Infra-spinatus, from infra, 'beneath,' and spina, 'spine.' Situate beneath the spine of the scapula.

INFRA-SPINA'TA FOSSA, (F.) Fosse sous-épineuse. A large excavation on the posterior surface of the scapula, beneath its spine. It is filled by the INFRA-SPINATUS Muscle, Grand Scapulo-trochitérien, Superscapularis inferior (Ch.), (F.) Sous-épineux, which is broad, flat, and triangular. It is attached, by its base, to the three inner quarters of the fossa; and is inserted, by a long tendon, into the middle part of the great tuberosity of the os humeri (Troch'iter). It turns the arm outwards, and, when the arm is elevated, carries it backwards.

INFRINGENS, Corrigent.

INFUNDIB'ULUM, (in, and fundere, fusum, 'to pour out.')

A Funnel, Tritorium, Choa'næ, Chonos, (F.) Entonnoir,—of which various kinds are employed in pharmaceutical operations. A name, given to many parts which, more or less, resemble a funnel. See Proventriculus. It is particularly appropriated to the following organs:—

INFUNDIB'ULUM OF THE BRAIN, Infundibulum seu Pelvis seu Choa'na seu Cy'athus seu Scyphus seu Concha seu Lac'na seu Em'bolum seu Aquæductus seu Labrum seu Conca'vitas conchula'ris seu Processus orbicula'ris Cer'ebri, (F.) Entonnoir de l'entréec du moyen du cerveau, Tige Pituitaire, Tige sus-sphénoïdale. A depression in the inferior paries of the middle ventricle, above the pituitary gland. It was, anciently, regarded as a canal by which the fluid, collected in the ventricles of the brain, was evacuated, and poured into the nasal fossæ.

INFUNDIBULUM CEREBRI, I. of the Brain.

INFUNDIBULUM OF THE COCHLEA, I. Coch'lea, Scyphus Viessent'ii seu audit'orius, Cucullus, Canal'is Scala'rum commun'is. This, with the modiolus, forms the nucleus around which the gyri of the cochlea pass. It is an imperfect funnel, the apex of which is common with that of the modiolus; and the base is covered with the apex of the cochlea, termed Cu'pola.

In Surgery, infundibula or funnels are used to direct steam or vapours; to conduct the actual cautery to certain morbid parts, &c.

INFUNDIBULUM OF THE ETHMOID BONE, OR OF THE NASAL FOSSÆ. One of the anterior cells of that bone, which is broad and expanded above, and narrow below; opening, above, into the frontal sinus; below, into the anterior part of the middle meatus of the nasal fossæ.

INFUNDIBULUM OF THE HEART, Conus arteriosus—i. of the Kidney, see Calix—i. Laerymale, Lachrymal Sac—i. Tubarum Fallopii, see Tube Fallopii—i. Ventriculi, Œsophagus.

INFUSË, Infusion.

INFUS'ION, Infus'io, En'chysis, from infundere (in, and fundere, fusum), 'to pour in,' 'to introduce.' A pharmaceutical operation, which consists in pouring a hot or cold fluid upon a substance whose medical virtues it is desired to extract. Infusion is, also, used for the product of this operation. (F.) Infusion, Infusé. In Surgery, infusion—Chirurg'ia infusoria, Ars clysmat'ica nova—is the act of introducing into the veins medicinal substances, by aid of an instrument called Infusor. See Infusoir. This mode of introducing medicines was called Ars infusoria.

INFUSUM CASSIÆ SENNÆ, I. sennæ compositum.

INFUSUM CAT'ECHEU COMPOSITUM, I. Catechu seu Aca'cia Catechu, Infusion of Catechu. (Catechu, in pulv. $\bar{3}$ ss; cinnam. cont. $\bar{3}$ j; aq. bullient. Oj. Macerate for an hour, and strain.) Dose, f $\bar{3}$ iss to f $\bar{3}$ ij.

INFUSUM CINCHO'NÆ, I. Cinchona lancifolia, Infusion of Cinchona. (Cinch. contus. $\bar{3}$ j; aq. fervent. Oj. Macerate for two hours, and strain.) This infusion may also be made from the same quantity of bark in coarse powder by the process of displacement with hot or cold water. Dose, f $\bar{3}$ j to f $\bar{3}$ ij. The Pharmacopœia of the United States has an Infusum Cincho'næ flavæ, Infusion of yellow bark, and an Infusum Cincho'næ rubræ, Infusion of red bark, which are prepared in the same manner. It has also an Infusum Cincho'næ Compositum, which is made as follows: (Cinchon. rubr. in pulv. $\bar{3}$ j; Acid. Sulph. aromat. f $\bar{3}$ j; aq. aquæ, Oj. Macerate for twelve hours, occasionally shaking, and strain.) Dose, same as the last.

INFUSUM CINCHONÆ COMPOSITUM, see Infusum Cinchonæ—i. Cinchonæ flavæ, see Infusum Cinchonæ—i. Colombæ, I. calumbæ.

INFUSUM CUSPARIÆ, I. Angusturæ, Infusion of Cusparia. (Cuspar. cort. contus. $\bar{3}$ ss; aq. bullient. Oj. Macerate for two hours, and strain.) Dose, f $\bar{3}$ j to f $\bar{3}$ ij.

INFUSUM DIGITALIS, I. Digitalis purpurea, Infusion of Foxglove. (Digital. $\bar{3}$ j; aq. bullient. Oss; inct. cinnamomi, f $\bar{3}$ j. Macerate for two hours, and add sp. cinnam. f $\bar{3}$ j.) Dose, f $\bar{3}$ j.

INFUSUM DIOS'MÆ, Ph. U. S., 1842, I. Buchu, Ph. U. S., 1851, Infusion of Buchu. (Diosm. $\bar{3}$ j; aq. bullient. Oj. Macerate for two hours in a covered vessel, and strain.—Ph. U. S.) Dose f $\bar{3}$ iss.

INFUSUM EUPATORII, Infusion of Thoroughwort. (Eupator. $\bar{3}$ j; aq. bullient. Oj. Macerate for two hours, and strain.—Ph. U. S.) Dose f $\bar{3}$ ij.

INFUSUM GENTIANÆ COMPOSITUM, Compound Infusion of Gentian. (Gentian. cont. $\bar{3}$ ss; Aurant. cort., Coriandr. contus. $\bar{a}\bar{a}$ $\bar{3}$ j; alcohol. dilut. f $\bar{3}$ iv; aq. aquæ, f $\bar{3}$ xij. First pour on the alcohol, and three hours afterwards, the water; then macerate for twelve hours, and strain.—Ph. U. S.) Dose, f $\bar{3}$ j to f $\bar{3}$ ij.

Marsden's Antiscorbutic Drops, an empirical preparation, consist of a solution of corrosive sublimate in an infusion of gentian.

INFUSUM HUMULI, I. Lu'puli, Infusion of Hops. (Humul. $\bar{3}$ ss; aq. bullient. Oj. Macerate for two hours, and strain.—Ph. U. S.) Dose, f $\bar{3}$ iss to f $\bar{3}$ ij.

INFUSUM JUNIP'ERI, Infusion of Juniper. The common mode of making this infusion is by an ounce of Juniper Berries to a pint of boiling water. The whole may be taken in the twenty-four hours.

INFUSUM KRAMERIÆ, Infusion of Rhatany. (Kramer. contus. $\bar{3}$ j; aq. bullient. Oj. Macerate for four hours, and strain.—Ph. U. S.) Dose, f $\bar{3}$ iss.

INFUSUM LINI, I. L. compositum.

INFUSUM LINI COMPOSITUM (Ph. U. S., 1851), I. Lini (Ph. U. S., 1842), I. Lini usitatisim. Infusion of Linseed, Flaxseed Tea. (Lini sem. cont. $\bar{3}$ ss; glycyrrh. rad. cont. $\bar{3}$ j; aq. aquæ bullient. Oj. Macerate for two hours, and strain.) Dose, a teacupful, ad libitum.

INFUSUM LUPULI, Infusum Humuli—i. Malti, Wort.

INFUSUM MATICO, Infusion of Matico. (Matico, $\bar{3}$ ss (avoirdupois); aq. bullient. Oss (Imp. meas.). Infuse for an hour, and strain.—Ph. D.) Dose, f $\bar{3}$ iss to f $\bar{3}$ ij.

INFUSUM MENTHÆ VIRIDIS, Infusion of Spearmint, Mint Tea. (Mentha virid. $\bar{3}$ ij; aq. bullient. Oss. Infuse for an hour, and strain.—Ph. D.) Dose, f $\bar{3}$ j to f $\bar{3}$ ij.

INFUSUM PAREIRÆ, Infusion of Pareira Brava. (Pareir. $\bar{3}$ vj; aq. bullient. Oj (Imp. meas.). Infuse for two hours, and strain.—Ph. E.) Dose, f $\bar{3}$ j or f $\bar{3}$ ij.

INFUSUM PICIS EMPYREUMATICÆ LIQUIDÆ, see Pinus sylvestris—i. Picis liquidum, see Pinus sylvestris—i. Polygalæ, Infusum Senegæ.

INFUSUM PRUNI VIRGINIÆ, Infusion of Wild Cherry Bark. (Prun. Virginian. cont. $\bar{3}$ ss; aq. aquæ, Oj. Macerate for 24 hours, and strain.—Ph. U. S.) Dose, f $\bar{3}$ j to f $\bar{3}$ ij.

INFUSUM QUASS'LE, I. Quassia excel'sæ, Infusion of Quassia. (Quassia lign. cont. $\bar{3}$ j; aq. (frigid.) Oj. Macerate for twelve hours, and strain.—Ph. U. S.) Dose, f $\bar{3}$ j to f $\bar{3}$ iv.

INFUSUM RHEI, An'ima Rhei, Infusion of Rhubarb. (Rhei. cont. $\bar{3}$ j; aq. ferv. Oss. Macerate for two hours, and strain.—Ph. U. S.) Dose, f $\bar{3}$ j to f $\bar{3}$ iv.

INFUSUM ROSÆ COMPOSITUM, I. Rosæ Gallicæ, Infusion of the Rose. (Ros. Gallic. $\bar{3}$ v; aq. bullient. Ojss; acid. sulph. d. f $\bar{3}$ ij; sacch. purif. $\bar{3}$ ss. Add the water, and afterwards the acid;—macerate for half an hour; strain, and add the sugar.—Ph. U. S.) Dose, f $\bar{3}$ iss to Oss.

INFUSUM SARSAPARILL'Æ, Infusion of Sarsaparilla. (Sarsaparill. contus. $\bar{3}$ j; aq. aquæ bullient. Oj. Digest for two hours in a covered vessel, and strain.—Ph. U. S.) It may also be prepared by displacement. Dose, f $\bar{3}$ ij to f $\bar{3}$ iv.

INFUSUM SASS'AFRAS, I. Sassafras medull'æ, Infusion of Sassafras Pith, Mu'cilage of Sassafras Pith. (Sassafras medull. $\bar{3}$ j; aq. aquæ (frigid.), Oj. Macerate for three hours, and strain.—Ph. U. S.) An emollient collyrium, and a demulcent drink.

INFUSUM SEN'EGÆ, Infusum Polygalæ, Infusion of Senega. (Seneg. $\bar{3}$ x; aq. bullient. (Imp. meas.). Infuse for four hours, and strain.—Ph. E.) Dose, f $\bar{3}$ j to f $\bar{3}$ ij.

INFUSUM SENNÆ, I. S. Compositum, I. Cassiæ Sennæ seu Sennæ simplex, Infusion of Senna. (Sennæ, $\bar{3}$ j; coriandr. cont. $\bar{3}$ j; aq. bullient. Oj. Macerate for an hour, and strain.—Ph. U. S.) Dose, f $\bar{3}$ j to f $\bar{3}$ iv.

The Black Draught, Black Dose, Black bottle, Haustus niger, is usually formed of this infusion. It may be made of infus. sennæ, f $\bar{3}$ v; aq. cinnam. f $\bar{3}$ j; mannæ, $\bar{3}$ iv; magnes. sulph. $\bar{3}$ vj. Dose, a wineglassful.

Selway's Prepared Essence of Senna is a concentrated infusion of the leaves in combination with an alkali.

INFUSUM SENNÆ COMPOSITUM, I. sennæ.

INFUSUM SERPENTARIÆ, Infusion of Virginia Snakeroot. (Serpentar. $\bar{3}$ ss; aq. bullient. Oj. Macerate for two hours, and strain.—Ph. U. S.) Dose, f $\bar{3}$ iss.

INFUSUM SIMARU'Æ, Infusion of Simaruba. (Simarub. cort. cont. $\bar{3}$ ij; aq. fervent. Oj. Macerate for two hours, and strain.—Ph. E.) Dose, f $\bar{3}$ j to f $\bar{3}$ ij.

INFUSUM SPIGELIÆ, Infusion of Pinkroot. (Spigel. $\bar{3}$ ss; aq. bullient. Oj. Macerate for two hours, and strain.—Ph. U. S.) Dose, f $\bar{3}$ iv to Oss.

INFUSUM TAB'ACI, Infusion of Tobacco. (Tabaci fol. $\bar{3}$ j; aq. ferv. Oj. Macerate for an hour, and strain.—Ph. U. S.) Half of this per anum in strangulated hernia.

INFUSUM TARAX'ACI, Infusion of Dan'delion.

(Taraxac. contus. $\mathfrak{Z}\text{ij}$; aq. bullient. Oj. Macerate for two hours, and strain.—Ph. U. S.) Dose, $f\mathfrak{Z}\text{iss}$, as a diuretic, &c.

INFUSUM ULMI, Infusion of Slippery Elm, Slippery Elm Tea. This preparation, in the Pharmacopœia of the United States, is made by infusing one ounce of slippery elm bark in a pint of boiling water.

INFUSUM VALERIANÆ, Infusion of Valerian. (Rad. valerian. in crass. pulv. $\mathfrak{Z}\text{ss}$; aq. bullient. Oj. Macerate for an hour, and strain.—Ph. U. S.) Dose, $f\mathfrak{Z}\text{iss}$ to $\mathfrak{Z}\text{ij}$.

INFUSUM ZINGIBERIS, Infusion of Ginger, Ginger Tea. (Zingib. contus. $\mathfrak{Z}\text{ss}$; aq. bullient. Oj. Macerate for two hours, and strain.—Ph. U. S.) Dose, $f\mathfrak{Z}\text{iss}$ to $f\mathfrak{Z}\text{ij}$, as a carminative.

INGA. A genus of plants, Ord. Leguminosæ, belonging to South America, many of the species of which are possessed of astringent properties. Inga bark is used in South America as a tonic astringent in diarrhœa, gonorrhœa, &c. An extract, prepared from it, possesses all the properties of rhatany.

INGENIUM (Morbi). The nature or genius of a disease, from in, and geno, for gigno, 'to generate.' This word is employed, especially by the French, synonymously with nature. They speak, for instance, of Génie inflammatoire, bilieux, &c. Some, also, use génie in the place of type of an intermittent.

INGESTA, from in, and gerere, gestum, 'to bear or carry into.' Substances, introduced into the body by the digestive passages; as food, condiments, drinks, &c.

INGLUVIES, Aples'tia, Victus intemperantia:—Gluttony, Insatiableness; also, the Crop or Gorge of Birds, (F.) Sabot; and the first stomach or paunch of ruminant animals—Pen'ula, Rumen, Venter magnus, (F.) Panse, Herber, Double. Also, the Pharynx.

INGRAS'SIAS, APOPH'YSES OF. The lesser alæ of the sphenoid bone.

INGRAVIDATIO, Fecundation, Pregnancy.

INGRAVIDATION, Fecundation, Pregnancy.

INGRESSUS SUPERIOR, Cardia.

INGUEN, Bubon, Bubo, 'the groin,' (Prov.) Lank, Last, Lisk, Lesk; Edœ'on, H'patis emunctoria, (F.) Aine. The oblique fold or depression which separates the abdomen from the thigh. It is only, properly speaking, a line that extends from the anterior and superior spinous process of the ilium to the middle part of the horizontal ramus of the pubis. Also, the genital organs.

INGUINAL, Inguinalis, from inguen, inguis, 'the groin.' Belonging or relating to the groin. This epithet has been given to various parts met with in the region of the groin or inguinal region.

INGUINAL ARTERY is that portion of the femoral artery situate immediately beneath the crural arch in the inguinal region.

INGUINAL CANAL is a canal, about two inches in length, proceeding obliquely downwards, inwards and forwards at the lower part of the abdomen; through which passes the spermatic cord, in men, and the round ligament of the uterus in women. This canal is formed, inferiorly and anteriorly, by the aponeurosis of the greater oblique muscle; posteriorly by the fascia transversalis, which is joined to the preceding aponeurosis, and forms with it a deep channel, into which are received the lesser oblique and transversalis muscles. The inguinal canal has two apertures; the one, the lower and inner, is called the inguinal or abdominal ring. It is bounded by two strong tendinous pillars which fix it—the innermost to the symphysis, the outermost to the spine of the pubis. The upper and outer aperture is formed by the fascia transversalis. From the edge of this aperture arises a membranous funnel,—a prolongation of the fascia transversalis,—which receives the spermatic vessels; forms their proper sheath, and accompanies them as far as the testicle. On its inside lies the epigastric artery. Above it, is the lower edge of the transversalis muscle: and, below, it is bounded by the channel of the greater oblique. By following the oblique direction of this canal, and passing, consequently, on the outside of the epigastric artery, the viscera are displaced, so as to constitute internal inguinal hernia.

INGUINAL RE'GION, Re'gio inguinalis, Bubo, Inguen. The region of the groin.

INGUINAL RING, Abdominal Ring, An'nulus abdominis, (F.) Anneau Inguinal, is the inferior aperture of the inguinal canal.

INGUINO-CUTA'NEUS. A name given by Professor Chaussier to the middle ramus of the anterior branch of the first lumbar nerve, because it sends its numerous filaments to the groin, scrotum, and to the skin of the superior part of the thigh.

INHERENS, Inherent.

INHALATIO, Absorption, Inhalation—i. Cutis, see Absorption.

INHALA'TION, Inhalatio; from in, and halare, 'to breathe.' The act of drawing air or vapour into the lungs—Inhalatio pulmonalis. Also, absorption.

INHA'LER. Same etymon. An apparatus for inhalation. Mudge's Inhaler is an apparatus for inhaling the steam of hot water, in affections of the air-passages. It consists of a pewter tankard provided with a lid, into which a flexible tube is inserted. Through this the vapour is inhaled.

INHER'ENT, Inhærens, (in, and hæreo, 'I stick.') That which adheres, or which is joined or united to any thing.

INHERENT CAUTERY, (F.) Cautère inhérent, is the actual cautery, left in contact with a part until it is reduced to the state of a deep eschar.

INHUMA'TION, Inhumatio, from inlum, inlumatus, (in, and humus), 'I put into the ground.' The sepulture of the dead. This belongs to the subject of medical police. Also, digestion of substances in earth or dung. See Areuatio.

INIAD, see Inial.

IN'IAL, from iniov, 'the nape of the neck.' An epithet, proposed by Dr. Barclay, for an aspect towards the plane of the ridge of the occiput. Iniad is employed by him adverbially to signify 'towards the inial aspect.'

INIENCEPH'ALUS, (F.) Iniencéphale, from iniov, 'occiput,' and εγκεφαλος, 'encephalon.' A monster whose encephalon is in great part in the cranium, and in part out of it, behind, and a little beneath the cranium, which is open in its occipital portion.—I. G. St. Hilaire.

INIODYMUS, Diprosopus.

INION, iniov. Some of the Greek physicians give this name to the occiput, or the ridge of the occiput; others to the back part of the neck, and the muscles of the occiput. Blancard says it is the commencement of the spinal marrow.

INIOPS, Iniopie, from iniov, 'occiput,' and ωψ, 'the eye, face.' A monster, double above the umbilicus, which has two ears very near each other, or only one median ear, and above it, at a greater or less distance, a median orbit and eye, more or less imperfect. The rudimental face appearing to be directly opposite the principal face suggested the name.—I. G. St. Hilaire.

INI'TIS, Inohymenitis, from is, gen. ivos, 'a fibre,' and itis, a suffix denoting inflammation. Fibrous inflammation.

INITIUM, Arche—i. Asperæ arteriæ, Larynx —i. Extuberans Coli, Cæcum.

INIUM, avor. The nucha. Also, the muscles at the back of the neck. See Inion.

INJACULA'TIO, (in, and jaculo, jaculatus, 'to shoot.') A term employed by Van Helmont to designate an acute pain of the stomach, with rigidity and immobility of the body.

INJECT'ED, Injec'tus, from injicere, injectum, (in, and jacere, 'to throw into.') The face and other parts are said to be injected, when the accumulation of blood in the capillary vessels gives them an evident red colour. A subject or part of a subject is also said to be injected, when its vessels have been filled, by the anatomist, with an appropriate composition.

INJECT'ION, Injec'tio, Eis'bolē: same etymon. The act of introducing, by means of a syringe or other instrument, a liquid into a cavity of the body. The liquid injected is also called an injection. Anatomists use injections — Injectio'nes anatom'icæ — for filling the cavities of vessels, in order that they may be rendered more apparent, and their dissection be facilitated. For this purpose, they employ syringes of different dimensions, and various materials. The most common injections are made of soot, wax, and turpentine, coloured with lamp-black, vermilion, &c. There are three kinds chiefly used by anatomists, — the coarse, the fine, and the minute. The following are formulæ for each.

COARSE INJECTION.

No. 1.

Pure yellow wax, oz. xvj.
Bleached rosin, oz. viij.
Turpentine varnish, by measure, oz. vj.

No. 2.

Yellow rosin, lb. ij.
Yellow wax, lb. j.
Turpentine varnish, a sufficient quantity to make the mixture flexible when cold.

No. 3.

Tallow, lb. ij.
White wax, oz. x.
Common oil, oz. vj.
Venice turpentine, oz. iv.
Mix and liquefy over a slow fire or over boiling water.

To make any of these mixtures.

Red — add vermillion, oz. ij.
Yellow — King's yellow, oz. iiss.
White — best flake white, oz. vss.
Pale-blue { best flake white, oz. iiiss.
 { fine blue smalt, oz. iiiss.
Dark-blue — blue verditer, oz. xss.
Black — lamp-black, oz. j.
Green { powdered verdigris, oz. ivss.
 { best flake white, oz. iss.
 { powdered gamboge, oz. j.

FINE INJECTION.

Brown spirit varnish, oz. iv.
White spirit varnish, oz. iv.
Turpentine varnish, oz. j.

To make this mixture,

Red — add vermillion, oz. j.
Yellow — King's yellow, oz. j½.
White — best flake white, oz. ij.
Light-blue { fine blue smalt, oz. iss.
 { best flake white, oz. j½.
Dark-blue — blue verditer, oz. iv.
Black — lamp-black, oz. ss.

MINUTE INJECTION.

Take of transparent size, broken to pieces, or Icinglass, oz. viij.
Water, lb. iss. Dissolve.

To make this mixture,

Red — add vermillion, oz. v.
Yellow — King's yellow, oz. iv.
White — best flake white, oz. v.
Blue — fine blue smalt, oz. viij.
Green { powdered verdigris, oz. iij.
 { best flake white, dr. ij.
 { powdered gamboge, dr. j.
Black — lamp-black, oz. j.

Beautiful injections, are made with ether as the menstruum.

COLD INJECTION.

White lead and red lead, each, oz. iv; linseed oil, enough to form a thick paste when they are rubbed well together. Liquefy this paste with turpentine varnish, oz. viij.

The advantage of this mixture is, that the subject need not be heated.

In order to inject the arteries, the injection must be forced from the great trunks towards their ultimate ramifications. To inject the veins, on the contrary, it is indispensable, on account of their valves, to send the injection from the smaller divisions towards the greater. The lymphatics are usually injected with mercury. The practitioner injects, by forcing with a syringe, liquids, such as emollient, narcotic, stimulant, and other decoctions or infusions, into different hollow organs, as the rectum, vagina, nasal fossæ, urethra, tunica vaginalis, auditory canal, &c., to fulfil various therapeutical indications.

The following injection has been strongly recommended by Dr. Horner to preserve the dead body.

Take of Liverpool, St. Ubes, or Turk's Island Salt, oz. 36 avoird.
Nitrate of potassa, " 19
Carbonate of Soda, " 8
Molasses (Sugar-house,) " 4 by meas.
Water, six pints.

The saline constituents to be dissolved first of all in boiling hot water; the molasses to be afterwards stirred in; the starch to be mixed well with half a pint of cold water, and then to be stirred in with the other articles. As soon as it begins to boil, the whole mass swells up, when it must be removed from the fire. On the proper reduction of temperature it is fit for use.

INJECTION, MATTHEW'S, see Tinctura cantharidis.

INJECTIONES ANATOMICÆ, see Injection.

INK, Atramentum.

INKBERRY, Prinos glaber.

IN-KNEED, Entogonyancon.

IN'NATE, from in, and nascor, natus, 'I am born.' Inborn.

INNATE DISEASES, Morbi connati seu congeniti, (F.) Maladies innées. Diseases with which the infant is born. They are not always hereditary, as hereditary diseases are not always innate.

INNERLEITH'EN, MINERAL WATERS OF. These springs, situate near the Tweed, and supposed to be the scene of "St. Ronan's Well," contain chlorides of sodium and calcium, and carbonate of magnesia.

INNERVATION, Innervatio, from in, 'in,' and nervus, 'a nerve.' By this term is meant — the nervous influence, necessary for the maintenance of life and the functions of the various organs; — an influence of whose character and source we are ignorant. It seems to resemble the galvanic or electric agencies. See Nerves.

INNOMINATUM, Anonymum, from in, 'negation,' and nomen, 'a name.' (F.) Anonyme. Having no name.

INNOMINATA ARTERIA, Brachio-cephalic artery, Arteria anonyma, Right Subclavian, (F.) Artère innominée, Artère brachio-céphalique (Ch.), is the trunk common to the right primitive carotid and to the subclavian. It arises from the anterior part of the arch of the aorta, ascends obliquely to the right, along the trachea; and after a course of about an inch in length, divides into two trunks, which go off at right angles. The one is external—the right subclavian proper; the other superior—the primitive carotid, of the same side.

INNOMINATA CARTILAGO, Cricoid.

INNOMINATA CAVITAS. A cavity of the outer ear, between the helix and anthetic.

INNOMINATUM FORAMEN. A foramen, near the middle of the anterior surface of the pars petrosa of the temporal bone, leading backwards for the passage of the Vidian nerve, reflected from the 2d branch of the 5th to the portio dura of the 7th pair.

INNOMINATA FOSSA, see Fossa—i. Linea, see Linea-pectinea.

INNOMINATI SEU ANONYMI NERVI. Some anatomists have thus called the nerves of the fifth pair.

INNOMINATUM OS, Os Coxen'dicis seu Coxæ seu anomalym seu pelvis laterale, (F.) Os innominé, Os Coxal, Os anonyme. A very large, flat bone, which forms the anterior and lateral paries of the pelvis. It is curved upon itself in two opposite directions. In the first periods of life, it is composed of three portions;—the ilium, ischium, and pubis, which join each other in the acetabulum. It is articulated before with its fellow, — behind with the sacrum; and laterally with the femur.

INNOMINATA MINORA OSSA, Lesser Ossa innominata, Ossicula innominata. Some anatomists have given this name to the three cuneiform bones of the tarsus.

INNOMINATA OSSICULA, Innominata minora ossa—i. Tunica Oculi, Sclerotic.

INNOMINATÆ VENÆ, OF VIUSSENS. Viussens has given this name to two or three veins, which arise on the anterior surface and right margin of the heart, and open into the auricle towards its right margin. The term VENÆ INNOMINATÆ OF MECKEL is given to the brachiocephalic veins, which are generally included in the description of the subclavian vein, and correspond to the arteria innominata, being formed by the union of the internal jugular vein and the subclavian properly so called, which correspond to the common carotid and subclavian arteries.

INNOMINATUS, Anonymus.

INNUTRITIO OSSIUM, Rachitis.

INOCULABLE. Same etymon as the next. Capable of inoculation, or of being communicated by inoculation.

INOCULATION, Inoculatio, Insit'io, Insit'io variolarum, from inoculare, (in, and oculus, 'an eye,') 'to ingraft.' Any operation by which small-pox, for example, may be artificially communicated, by introducing the virus of the particular disease into the economy, by means of a puncture or scratch made in the skin. When the word inoculation is used alone, it usually means that for the small-pox,—Variolation. See Syphilization.

INOCULATION, COWPOX, Vaccination—i. Jennian, Vaccination.

INOCULATOR, same etymon. In'sitor. One who practises inoculation.

INODULAR TISSUE, see Tissue, inodular.

INODULE, Tissue, inodular.

INOHYLOMA, Tumour, fibrous.

INOHYMENTITIS: from is, gen. ivos, 'a fibre;' tymp, 'a membrane,' and itis, denoting inflammation. Inflammat'io telæ fibrosæ. Inflammation of the fibrous tissue.

INOMA, Tumour, fibrous.

INOXYTION, Inunction.

INOPOLYPUS, see Polypus.

INORGANIC, Inorganicus, Unorgan'ized, (F.) Inorganique; from in, 'negation,' and organum, 'an organ.' A term applied to bodies which have no organs;—such as minerals. At the present day, naturalists admit of but two classes of bodies,—the organized and inorganic. Parts of the body which, like the epidermis, are devoid of blood-vessels and nerves, have been called anorganic.

INOSCLEROMA, from is, gen. ivos, 'a fibre,' and σκληρωμα, 'induration.' Induration of the fibrous tissue.

INOSCULATIO, Anastomosis.

INOSIS, Hyperinosis.

INOSITE, In'sit, Muscle sugar; from is, ivos, 'a fibre.' An unfermentable sugar, found only in the juice of the cardiac muscle.—Lehmann.

INOSTEATOMA, from is, ivos, 'a fibre,' and steatoma. A tumour of a mixed fibrous and steatomatous character.

INQUIES, Inquietude.

INQUIETATIO, Inquietude.

INQUIETUDE, Inquiet'udo, In'quies, Inquiet'atio, Jactit'atio, from in, 'negation,' and quies, 'rest.' Agitation or trouble, caused by indisposition. Restlessness.

INQUINAMENTUM, Miasm.

INQUISITIO MEDICO-LEGALIS, see Medico-legal.

INSALIVATION, Insaliva'tio, from in, and saliva. The mixture of the food with the saliva, and other secretions of the mouth.

INSALUBRIOUS, Insalu'bris, Nose'ros, Noso'des. That which is unhealthy,—which injures the health.

INSANABILIS, Incurable.

INSANE, Insanus; from in, 'negation,' and sanus, 'sound;' Alienatus, Crazy, Mad, Nonsane, Demented, Deranged, Bedlamite, (Sc.) Daft, Wod, (F.) Aliéné, Fou, Insensé. One affected with mental aberration, or of unsound mind.

INSANIA, Mania—i. Cadiva, Epilepsy—i. Lupina, Lycanthropia—i. Puerperanum, Mania, puerperal.

INSANITAS, Insanity.

INSANITY, Insania, Insan'itas. Same etymon. Mental alienation, Abalienatio seu Alienatio Mentis, Arreptio, Unsound Mind, Derangement, Deranged intellect, Craziness, (Sc.) Daffin, Daffing, Wodnes; Aphros'yné, Ephros'nia, Ephros'yné, Parallage, Parallax'is, Delir'ia, Vesania, Delir'ium (Crichton), Insipient'ia, (F.) Folie, Égarément d'Esprit, Paraphrénie. This term includes all the varieties of unsound mind,—Mania, Melancholia, Moral Insanity, Dementia, and Idiocy. A slight degree of insanity is sometimes popularly called "a kink in the head;" in Scotland, "a bee in the bonnet."

INSANITY, HOMICIDAL, see Homicidal—i. Incoherent, Dementia—i. Moral, Pathomania—i. Puerperal, Mania, puerperal—i. Religious, Sebastomania—i. Senile, Delirium senile—i. Suicidal, see Suicide.

INSANUS, Insane.

INSCRIPTION, see Matriculate.

INSCRIPTIONES TENDINÆ MUSCULORUM, Intersectio'nes seu Enevrat'io'nes tendin'æ musculorum, Interne'dia ligamenta'tia seu ner'vea. The tendinous portions which cross several muscles, and especially the straight muscles of the abdomen.

INSEMINATION, see Ejaculation.

INSENECENTIA, Agerasia.

INSENSÉ, Insane.

INSENSIBIL'ITY, Anæsthesia, Insensibilitas. Loss or absence of sensibility. It is very common in cerebral affections, and may extend to every part, or be limited to one or more. Some organs are much more sensible than others. The bones, cartilages, ligaments, &c., are insensible in health, but acutely sensible in disease.

INSEN'SIBLE, Sensibilitatē carens. That which is devoid of sensibility. This word is applied, also, to phenomena which cease to be appreciable to the senses. Thus, we say, the pulse becomes insensible.

INSER'TION, Inser'tio, Symph'ysis, Eno'sis, from inserere, insertum, (in, and serere, 'to join or knit,') 'to ingraft' (F.) Attache. The attachment of one part to another. Insertions occur chiefly on bones, cartilages, and fibrous organs: thus, we speak of the insertion of muscular fibres into a tendon or aponeurosis; the insertion of a tendon, aponeurosis, or ligament, into a cartilage or bone. The word insertion has likewise been used by pathologists for the act of inoculating or introducing a virus into the body.

INSES'SIO, from insidere, inessum, (in, and sedere,) 'to sit in.' This term is, sometimes, applied to a vapour bath, the person being seated in a perforated chair, beneath which a vessel, filled with hot water, or the hot decoction of some plant, is placed. See Semicupium.

INSESSUS, Bath, half.

INSICIUM, Iscium.

INSIDEN'TIA, Epis'tasis. Any thing which swims on or in—the urine, for example. It is opposed to the Hypostasis or subsidentia.

INSIPIENTIA, Insanity.

INSTIIO, Inoculation—i. Ciliorum, Blepharoplastice—i. Dentis, Transplantatio Dentis—i. Variolarum, Inoculation.

INSOLA'TION, Insolatio, from in, and sol, the sun; Apricatio, Helio'sis, Hel'asis, Helio'rosis, Siro'asis. Exposure to the sun. Exposure of a patient to the rays of the sun is, sometimes, had recourse to, with the view of rousing the vital forces when languishing, or of producing irritation of the skin. Insolation is occasionally used in the same sense as coup de soleil.

In Pharmacy, insolation means the drying of chemical and pharmaceutical substances.

INSOLAZIONE DE PRIMIVERA, Pelagra.

INSOM'NIA, Insom'nitas, Sahara, Zaara, Perrigillum, Pernoc'tia, Aijp'nia, Agryp'nia, Ahypp'nia, Anyp'nia, Typhoma'nia, Sleep'lessness, Vig'illance, from in, 'negation,' and somnus, 'sleep,' 'absence of sleep.' This may exist alone, and constitute a true disease; or it may be connected with another affection. It is an unequivocal sign of suffering in some organ; even when the patient experiences no pain.

INSOMNIUM, Somnium.

INSEPECTIO MEDICO-LEGALIS, see Medico-legal.

INSPIRATEUR, Inspiratory.

INSPIRA'TION, Inspira'tio, Empneumato'sis, Eisp'noë, Adspira'tio, Aspira'tio, from in, 'in,' and spiro, 'I breathe.' The action by which the air penetrates into the interior of the lungs. A movement opposed to that of expiration. As regards the average quantity of air received into the lungs at each inspiration, there is much discrepancy amongst observers. The following table sufficiently exhibits this:—

Cubic inches at each inspiration.

INSPIRATION OF VENOUS BLOOD. By this is meant the aspiration of blood towards the heart, occasioned by the approach to a vacuum produced by the dilatation of the thorax during inspiration.

IN'SPIRATORY. Same etymon. Inspira'tio'ni inser'viens, (F.) Inspirateur. A name given to muscles, which, by their contraction, augment the size of the chest, and thus produce inspiration. The diaphragm and intercostal muscles are the chief agents of inspiration. In cases where deep inspirations are necessary, the action of these muscles is aided by the contraction of the pectoralis major and pectoralis minor, subclavius, serratus major anticus, scaleni, serratus posticus superior, &c. Most of these muscles become inspiratory, by taking their fixed point at the part which they ordinarily move, and elevating the ribs.

INSPIS'SANT, Inspis'sans. Same etymon as the next. Any remedial agent, that renders the blood thicker, directly, or indirectly. The opposite to diluent.

INSPISSA'TIO, Pycno'sis, from in, and spissare, spissatum, 'to thicken.' The act of rendering thick; as in the formation of an extract—Succus Inspissatus.

INSTEP, Collum pedis, Neck-of-the-foot, (F.) Coude-pied, Cou-de-pied. The projection at the upper part of the foot, near its articulation with the leg—the tarsus.

INSTILLATIO, Instillation.

INSTILLA'TION, Enstalax'is, Instillo'tio, from in, 'into,' and stilla, 'a drop.' The act of pouring a liquid drop by drop.

INSTINCT, (L.) Instinctus, (in, and stinguo, stinctum, 'to sting,') 'inwardly moved.' Brutia, Hornæ. The action of the living principle, whenever manifestly directing its operations to the health, preservation, or reproduction of a living frame or any part of such frame—Molimen natu'rae salutarium. The law of instinct is, consequently, the law of the living principle, and instinctive actions are the actions of the living principle. Instinct is natural. Reason is acquired.

INSTINC'TIVE, Instinctus. Same etymon. Relating to or caused by instinct; as instinctive actions. See Emotional. Those instinctive actions of animals which are owing to impressions made on the sensory ganglia, exciting respondent motor influences that are propagated to the various muscles of the body, are termed consensual.

Consensual movements which accompany voluntary efforts without our consciousness are termed associated, (F.) Associés.

INSTITUTES OF MEDICINE, see Theory of medicine.

INSTITUTUM ORTHOPÆDICUM, Orthopedic institution.

INSTRUMENT, Instrumen'tum, Or'ganum. A tool, an agent.

INSTRUMENTA, Pudibilia.

INSTRUMENTUM CHIRURGICUM. A surgical tool or instrument.

INSTRUMENTUM DIGESTIONIS. The digestive apparatus.

INSTRUMENTUM INSTRUMENTORUM, Manus.

INSUFFICIENCY, (F.) Insuffisance; from in, and sufficiens. Inadequateness to any end or purpose,—as Insufficiency of the valves of the heart, (F.) Insuffisance des valvules du Cœur;—a condition in which they are not adapted, as in health, to properly close the apertures.

INSUFFISANCE, Insufficiency.

INSUFFISANCE DES VALVULES DU CŒUR, Insufficiency of the valves of the heart.

INSUFFLATION, Insufflat'io, from in, sub, and flare, 'to blow.' The act of blowing a gas or vapour into some cavity of the body; as when tobacco smoke is injected into the rectum; or when air is blown into the mouths of new-born children to excite the respiratory functions.

INSULA, Insula cerebri.

IN'SULA CER'EBRI, Island or In'sula of Reil. The intermediate lobe of the brain, Lobus interme'dius cer'ebri. A remarkable group of convolutions within the fissure of Sylvius. It is called, by Cruveilhier, Lobule of the Fissure of Sylvius, Lobule of the corpus striatum. The 'island' of Reil, with the substantia perforata, forms the base of the corpus striatum.

INSULA SANGUINIS, see Blood.

INSULÆ, Maculæ albæ—i. Pulmonales, see Pulmo.

INSULTUS, Attack, Paroxysm.

INSURANCE OF LIFE, see Life Insurance.

INTEGRITAS, Sanitas, Virginity.

INTEGUMENT, Integumen'tum, Tegumen'tum, Teg'umen, Teg'imen, Tegmen, Involu'crum seu Velamen'tum corp'oris commu'nē; Vela'men seu Velamentum nat'ivum, from in, and tegere, tectum, 'to cover.' (F.) Tégument. Any thing which serves to cover, to envelop. The skin, including the cuticle, rete mucosum, and cutis vera, is the common integument or tegument of the body.

INTEGUMENTA FETÛS. Membranes of the fetus.

INTEGUMENTUM, Integument—i. Comune, Integument.

INTELLECT, Intellect'us, Nous, Mens, Gnomē, Noos, Nūs, Noe'sis, Syn'esis, from intelligere, intellectum, (inter, 'between,' and legere, 'to choose,') 'to understand,' 'conceive,' 'know.' (F.) Entendement, Intelligence. The aggregate of the intellectual faculties—perception, formation of ideas, memory, and judgment.

INTELLECT, DERANGED, Insanity.

INTELLIGENCE, Intellect.

INTEMPERANCE, Intemperan'tia; Immoderant'ia, Immoderatio, Acri'sia, Acolu'sia, Ples'monē, Amet'ria, Aplet'ria, from in, 'negation,' and temperare, 'to temper.' Immoderate use of food and drink, especially the latter;—a fruitful source of disease.

INTEMPERIES. Same etymon. Dyscrasia. Derangement in the constitution of the atmosphere and of the seasons; bad constitution; derangement or disorder in the humours of the body.

INTENSIVUS, Entaticus.

INTENTION, Inten'tio, from in, and tendere, tensum seu tentum, 'to stretch.' Propos'itum. The object which one proposes. In surgery, a wound is said to heal by the first intention, Reu'nio per primam intentio'nem, when cicatrization occurs without suppuration; union by the second intention, Reu'nio per secundam intentio'nem, being that which does not occur until the surfaces have suppurated. To obtain union by the first intention, the edges of a recent wound must be brought in apposition and kept together by means of adhesive plasters and a proper bandage. Delpech has substituted for those expressions, Ré-union primitive, and Réunion secondaire.

INTERANEA, Entrails.

INTERARTICULAR, Interarticula'ris; from inter, 'between,' and articulus, 'a joint.' Parts situate between the articulations are so called; as interarticular cartilages, interarticular ligaments, &c.

INTERCADCENCE, Intercaden'tia, Interciden'tia, from inter, 'between,' and cadere, 'to fall.' Disorder of the arterial pulsations, so that, every now and then, a supernumerary pulsation occurs. The pulse, in such case, is said to be intercurrent.

INTERCALARY, Intercala'ris, Inter'cidens, from intercalare, 'to insert.' Embol'imos, Interpol'd'tus, Provocato'rius. The days which occur between those that are critical. The term has, also, been applied to the days of apyrexia in intermittent fevers.

INTERCELLULAR, Intercellula'ris, (F.) Intercellulaire; from inter, 'between,' and cellula, 'a small cell, a cellule.' That which is between cells or cellulæ.

INTERCELLULAR FLUID, Liqueur Sanguinis.

INTERCELLULAR PASSAGES. A term given by Mr. Rainey to irregular passages through the substance of the lung, which form the terminations of the bronchial tubes, are clustered with air-cells, and not lined by mucous membrane.

INTERCELLULAR SUBSTANCE, see Cytoblastema.

INTERCEPTIO, from inter, 'between,' and capere, 'to take.' A bandage, by the aid of which the ancients proposed to arrest the progress of the material cause of gout and rheumatism; and which consisted in covering the affected limbs with carded wool; surrounding them, afterwards, with broad bandages, applied from the fingers to the axilla, or from the toes to the groin.

INTERCEPTO INTESTINORUM, Ileus.

INTERCERVICAUX, Interspinales colli.

INTERCIDENS, Intercalary.

INTERCIDENTIA, Intercadence.

INTERCILIUM, Mesophryon.

INTERCLAVICULAR, Interclavica'lis, from inter, 'between,' and clavicula, 'a clavicle.' That which is placed between the clavicles.

INTERCLAVICULAR LIGAMENT is a fibrous bundle, placed transversely above the extremity of the sternum, between the heads of the two clavicles. This ligament is flat. Its fibres, which are always longer above than below, are separated by small apertures, which are traversed by vessels. It prevents the separation of the two clavicles in the forced depression of the shoulder.

INTERCOSTAL, Intercosta'lis, from inter, 'between,' and costa, 'a rib.' Mesopleu'rus, Mesopleu'rius. That which is situate between the ribs. (F.) Sous-costal.

INTERCOSTAL ARTERIES vary in number. There is constantly, however, a superior, Arte'ria, Intercosta'lis superior seu Intercosta'lis subclav'ia, which is given off from the posterior part of the subclavian, and which sends branches into the first two or three intercostal spaces; and, generally, eight or nine inferior or aortic intercostals. These arise from the lateral and posterior parts of the pectoral aorta, and ascend obliquely in front of the vertebral column, to gain the intercostal spaces, where they divide into a dorsal branch and an intercostal, properly so called.

INTERCOSTAL MUSCLES are distinguished into internal, — inter-plévrocostaux of Dumas, — and external. The former are inserted into the inner lip, the latter into the outer lip of the edge of the ribs. The fibres of the external intercostals are directed obliquely downwards and forwards; and those of the internal downwards and backwards. Both are inspiratory or expiratory muscles, according as they take their origin on the upper or lower rib. Some small, fleshy fibres, seen occasionally at the inner surface of the thorax, descending obliquely from one rib to another, have been called Infracostales.

INTERCOSTAL NERVE, Trisplanchnic nerve.

INTERCOSTAL NERVES, Branches souscostales (Ch.), Costal or Dorsal nerves, proceed from the anterior branches of the dorsal nerves. They are twelve in number, and are distributed especially to the muscles of the parietes of the chest and abdomen.

INTERCOSTAL SPACE, Interval'um seu Interstitium intercostal'e, Mesopleurum, Mesopleurium, is the interval which separates one rib from that immediately above or below it.

INTERCOSTAL VEINS are distinguished like the arteries. The right superior intercostal vein is often wanting. When it exists, it opens into the back part of the subclavian. The same vein of the left side is very large. It communicates with the demi-azygos, receives the left bronchial vein, and opens into the corresponding subclavian. The right inferior intercostal veins open into the vena azygos; and those of the left into the demiazygos.

INTERCOSTO-HUMERAL NERVES. So called from their origin and distribution. They are the cutaneous branches of the second and third intercostal nerves.

INTERCURRENT, Intercurrens, from inter, 'between,' and currere, 'to run.' Diseases are so called which supervene at different seasons of the year, or which cannot be considered as belonging to any particular season. — Sydenham. A disease is likewise so termed which occurs in the course of another disease, as Intercurrent Pneumonia.

INTERCUTANEOUS, Subcutaneous.

INTERDENTITIUM, from inter, 'between,' and dens, dentis, 'a tooth.' The interval between teeth of the same order. — Linden.

INTERDIGITALE, Interdigital.

INTERDIGITAL, Interdigitalis, (F.) Interdigitaire; from inter, 'between,' and digitus, 'a finger.' That which relates to the spaces between the fingers. Interdigital space, (F.) Espace interdigitaire, is used, also, for the commissure between the fingers.

INTERDIGITIUM. Same etymon as the last. A corn or wart, which grows between the fingers and toes, especially between the latter. — Pliny.

INTERÉPINEUX CERVICAUX, Interspinales colli.

INTERFEMINEUM, Perinæum, Vulva.

INTERFINIUM NARIUM, Septum narium.

INTERFEMINEUM, (inter, 'between,' and femen, feminis, the inner part of the thigh,) Perinæum, Vulva.

INTERFORAMINEUM, Perinæum.

INTERGANGLIONIC, Interganglionicus, from inter, 'between,' and ganglion, 'a knot.' An epithet for nervous cords, placed between ganglia, which they connect together.

INTERITUS, Death.

INTERLOBAR, Interlobaris, (F.) Interlobaire, from inter, 'between,' and lobus, 'a lobe.' That which is between lobes, — as of the lungs.

INTERLOBULAR, Interlobularis, from inter, 'between,' and lobulus, 'a small lobe.' That which is between lobules, — as of the lungs.

INTERLOBULAR FISSURES. The intervals between the lobules of the liver. The narrower spaces are called Fissuræ interlobulares, the wider spatia interlobulares. — Kölliker. See Liver.

INTERLOBULAR PLEXUS OF THE BILIARY DUCTS. See Liver.

INTERLOBULAR SPACES. The angular interstices formed in the liver by the apposition of several lobules.

INTERLOBULAR TISSUE, Textum interlobulare, Ligamenta interlobularia pulmonum. The cellular tissue between the pulmonary lobules.

INTERLOBULAR VEINS, see Liver.

INTERMAXILLARY, Intermaxillaris, from inter, 'between,' and maxilla, 'a jaw.' That which is situate between the maxillary bones.

INTERMAXILLARY BONE, Inci'sive, Pal'atine, or Labial bone, is a bony portion, wedged in between the two superior maxillary bones, which supports the other incisors. This bone is found in the mammalia; and, also, in the human fœtus.

INTERMÈDE, Excipient.

INTERMEDIA LIGAMENTALIA seu NERVEA, Inscriptiones tendineæ musculorum.

INTERMÉDIAIRE DE WRISBERG, Portio Wrisbergii.

INTERMEDIATE VASCULAR SYSTEM, Capillary system.

INTERMENT, Premature, Zoothapsis.

INTERMIS'SION, Intermissio, Dialipsis, Dialipsis, Tempus intercalare, Interval'um, from inter, 'between,' and mittere, missum, 'to put or send.' (F.) Intermittence. The interval which occurs between two paroxysms of an intermittent or other disease — during which the patient is almost in his natural state. There is said to be intermission of the pulse, when, in a given number of pulsations, one or more may be wanting.

INTERMITTENCE, Intermissio.

INTERMITTENT, Intermittens. Same etymon. That which has intermissions.

INTERMITTENT FEVER, Febris intermittens, Dialipsis, Intermissio, An'etus, Pyretotypo'sis, Ague, Ague and Fever, Fever and Ague, Paludal or Periodic Fever, (Prov.) Agah, Cold-chill, Shaking, Shakes, (Old Eng.) Aksis, Auggere, Azes, (F.) Fievre intermittente, F. d'Accès, F. des marais, F. Périodique, is a fever consisting of paroxysms, with a complete state of apyrexia in the intervals. The chief types are the Quotidian, Tertian, and Quartan. The symptoms of intermittents are those of a decided and completely marked cold stage: (F.) Stade de froid, attended with paleness; collapse; impaired sensibility; and coldness, more or less diffused, followed by general rigors. After this occurs the hot stage; Stade de la Chaleur, the heat returning partially and irregularly, and at length becoming universal, and much above the standard of health. The pulse is now hard and strong; tongue white; urine high-coloured; thirst considerable. At length, the sweating stage, (F.) Stade de Sueur, makes its appearance; the moisture usually beginning on the forehead, face, and neck, and soon extending universally; the heat abating; thirst ceasing; the urine throwing down a sediment, and the functions being gradually restored to their wonted state. The tertian type is the most common, and the quartan the most severe. The quotidian more readily changes into a remittent and continued fever. The quartan has, generally, the longest cold stage, the tertian the longest hot. The chief exciting cause is marsh miasmata. Ague, also, occurs in districts where there are no marshy emanations. Such districts are, generally, of a volcanic nature; further we know not. When the disease has once attacked an individual, it is apt to recur. The prognosis is, in general, favourable, as far as regards life; but long protracted intermittents are apt to induce visceral obstructions, and engorgements, which may end in dropsy. In some countries, the disease is of a very pernicious character. The indications of treatment are, 1. To abate the violence of the paroxysm; and, 2. To prevent its return. The first indication demands the adoption of the general principles and remedies required in ordinary fever. The second is the most important. The period of apyrexia is that for action. The means for fulfilling this indication are:—the use of emetics, purgatives, cinchona, quinia, &c., arsenic, and forcible impressions made on the mind of the patient.

INTERMUSCULAR, Intermuscularis, from inter, 'between,' and musculus, 'a muscle.' That which is placed between muscles.

INTERMUSCULAR APONEUROSES are aponeurotic laminae or septa, situate between muscles, to which they often give attachment.

INTERNAL, Inner, Inter'nus. That which is placed on the inside. This epithet is given to parts that look towards an imaginary central plane, which divides the body into two equal and symmetrical portions, as well as to those which correspond with a cavity. Thus, we say—the internal or inner surface of the arm or thigh, skull, &c.

INTERNAL DISEASES, Morbi inter'ni, are those which occupy the inner parts of the body. Their investigation belongs to the physician; external diseases falling under the management of the surgeon.

INTERNAT. The post or office of an interne.

INTERNE, see House-Surgeon.

INTERNODIA DIGITORUM MANUS, Phalanges of the fingers—i. Digitorum pedis, Phalanges of the toes.

INTERNOIDIUM, from inter, 'between,' and nodus, 'a knot.' The part of the fingers between the joints. A phalanx.

INTERNUNCIAL, Internuncialis, from inter, 'between,' and nunciatus, 'a messenger.' Relating or belonging to a messenger between parties. A term applied by Mr. Hunter to the functions of the nervous system.

INTERNUNTII DIES, Critical days.

INTERNUS AURIS, Tensor tympani—i. Mallei, Tensor tympani.

INTEROSSEOUS, Interosseus. That which is situate between the bones; from inter, 'between,' and os, 'a bone.'

INTEROSSEOUS ARTERIES OF THE FOREARM AND HAND. Of these there are several. The common interosseous artery arises from the posterior part of the ulnar, a little below the bicipital tuberosity of the radius; passes backwards and divides into two branches: the one called anterior interosseous descends vertically, anterior to the interosseous ligament; the other, called posterior interosseous, passes above the ligament, appears at its posterior part and divides into two great branches,—the posterior recurrent radial and the posterior interosseous, properly so called. In the hand,—1. The dorsal metacarpal interosseous arteries are given off by the dorsalis carpi, a division of the radial artery. 2. The palmar interosseous arteries, which arise from the convexity of the deep palmar arch, and give off the middle interosseous arteries. 3. The dorsal interosseous of the index, proceeding directly from the radial artery. In the foot, are distinguished:—1. The dorsal interosseous arteries, three in number, which arise from the artery of the metatarsus, a branch of the dorsalis tarsi. 2. The plantar interosseous arteries, which are, also, three in number, and arise from the plantar arch.

INTEROSSEOUS LIG'AMENTS. Ligaments seated between certain bones, which they unite; such are the ligaments between the radius and ulna, and between the tibia and fibula.

INTEROSSEOUS MUSCLES. These occupy the spaces between the bones of the metacarpus and metatarsus; and, consequently, belong,—some to the hand, others to the foot.

INTEROSSEOUS NERVE is a branch, given off by the median nerve, which descends before the interosseous ligament, accompanying the artery of the same name.

INTEROSSEOUS VEINS have the same arrangement as the arteries.

INTEROSSEUS MANUS, (F.) Muscle interosseus de la main.—Métacarpo-phalangien-latéral sus-palmaire et métacarpo-phalangien latéral, (Ch.) These muscles are seven in number; two for each of the three middle fingers, and one for the little finger. Four are situate on the back of the hand, and three only in the palm. They are inserted into the metacarpal bones, and send a tendon to the tendon of the extensor communis. According to their office, they are, to each finger, an adductor and an abductor. The index has a dorsal abductor and a palmar one. The middle finger has two dorsal muscles for adductor and abductor; the ring finger has a dorsal adductor and a palmar abductor; and the little finger has only one interosseous abductor, which is palmar. These muscles produce abduction and adduction of the fingers, which they can also extend, owing to their connexion with the extensor tendons.

INTEROSSEUS PEDIS, Métatarso-phalangien-latéral, (Ch.) The number, arrangement, shape, and uses of these are the same as in the case of the preceding muscles. Four are dorsal, and three plantar: six belong to the three middle toes and one to the little toe. The great toe is devoid of them. As in the hand, they are distinguished, in each toe, into abductor and adductor.

INTEROSSEUS SECUNDUS, Prior medii digiti—i. Quartus, Prior annularis.

INTEROSSEUX DE LA MAIN, Interosseus manus.

INTERPARIETAL BONE, Os Interparietale. A bone found in the skulls of the children of the Peruvian races. It lies in the situation of the upper angle of the occipital bone, where the parietal bones separate from each other; and is the analogue of the interparietal bone of ruminants and carnivora.—Tschudi.

INTERPEDUNCULAR, Interpeduncularis; from inter, 'between,' and pedunculi, 'peduncles.' A term, applied to that which is placed between the peduncles of the encephalon,—as Interpeduncular space; a lozenge-shaped interval, behind the diverging peduncles or crura of the cerebrum, in which are found the posterior perforated space, corpora albicantia, tuber cinereum, or infundibulum, and pituitary body.

INTERPELLA'TUS, (Morbus), from interpello, (inter, and pello.) 'I interrupt.' A term, by which Paracelsus designated those diseases whose progress is unequal, and paroxysms irregular.

INTERPLEVRO-COSTAUX, Intercostal muscles.

INTERPOLATUS, Intercalary.

INTERRUPTIO MENSTRUATIONIS, Amenorrhœa.

INTERSCAPULAR, Interscapularis, (inter, and scapula.) That which is between the scapula; as the interscapular region. The interscapular cavities, Cavitates interscapulares, are the depressions between the scapulae and the spinous processes of the vertebrae.

INTERSCAPULIUM. The spine of the scapula.

INTERSECTIO, Decussation, Intersection.

INTERSECTION, Intersectio, Diac'opè, from inter, 'between,' and seco, sectum, 'to cut.' The point where two lines meet and cut each other. The name aponeurotic intersection is given to fibrous bands, which certain muscles present in their length, and by which they seem interrupted. Aponeurotic intersections are found in the recti muscles of the abdomen; in the semi-membranosus, complexus, sterno-thyroideus, &c.

INTERSECTIONS TENDINEÆ MUSCULORUM, Inscriptiones tendinæ musculorum.

INTERSEPIMENTUM THORACIS, Mediastinum.

INTERSEPTA HORIZONTALIA PACCHIONI, Tentorium.

INTERSEPTUM, from inter, 'between,' and septum, 'a partition.' Cion, κίον. The uvula; also, the septum narium. The diaphragm.

INTERSEPTUM NARIUM, Septum narium—i. Virginal, Hymen.

INTERSPINAL, Interspinalis, from inter, 'between,' and spina, 'the spine.' That which is seated between the spinous processes.

INTERSPINAL LIGAMENT, Membra'na interspinalis, (F.) Ligament interépineux. These occupy the intervals between the spinous processes in the back and loins. In the neck, they are replaced by the muscles of the same name. They prevent the too great flexion of the spine, and keep the spinous processes in situ. The outermost thickened portions of these are, sometimes, termed Ligamenta a'picum.

INTERSPINALES COLLI, Spinales Colli minores, Spina'ti, (F.) Intérépineux-cervicaux, Intercervicaux, (Ch.) These are twelve in number, and occupy, in two parallel rows, the intervals between the spinous processes of the cervical vertebrae, from that of the atlas and vertebra dentata, to that between the last cervical and first dorsal vertebra. They are flat, thin, and quadrilateral. These muscles contribute to the extension of the neck and to throwing the head backwards.

INTERSPINALES DORSI ET LUMBORUM; portions of the Transversaire-épineux of Boyer, and the sacro-spinal of Chaussier. These muscles are of two kinds. The one (Muscle grand épineux du dos, of Winslow) representing fleshy bundles of different lengths, applied upon the lateral surfaces of the spinous processes, from the third dorsal vertebra to the second lumbar. The other (Muscle petit épineux du dos, Winslow) covered by the preceding. They are situate on each side of the interspinal ligament, in the form of small, short flat bundles, which pass from one spinous process to the second, third or fourth above it. These muscles aid in extending the vertebral column; and incline it a little to one side, when they act on one side only.

INTERSTICE, Interstit'ium, Aræo'ma, from inter, 'between,' and sto, 'I stand.' Diaste'ma, Interval'um. Anatomists have given this name to the intervals between organs. The iliac crest, crista ilii, for example, has two lips and an interstice between them, which affords attachment to the lesser oblique muscle of the abdomen.

INTERSTICE, Pore.

INTERSTIT'IAL, Interstitia'lis, same etymology. Applied to that which occurs in the interstices of an organ, — as 'interstitial absorption,' 'interstitial pregnancy,' &c.

INTERSTITIUM, Interstice — i. Ciliare, Ciliary ligament—i. Intercostale, Intercostal space—i. Jugulare, Throat.

INTERTINCTUS, Discreet.

INTERTRACHÉLIENS, Intertransversales colli.

INTERTRANSVERSAIRES DES LOMBES, Intertransversales lumborum.

INTERTRANSVERSALIS, Intertransversarius. That which is placed between the transverse processes of the vertebrae.

INTERTRANSVERSALES COLLI, (F.) Intertransversaires cervicaux, Intertrachéliens, (Ch.) These are small, muscular bundles; quadrilateral; thin and flat; situate, in pairs, in the intervals between the transverse processes of the neck, except between the first and second, where there is only one. They are distinguished into anterior and posterior. The former are six in number; the latter five. These muscles bring the transverse processes of the neck nearer each other, and contribute to the lateral flexion of the neck.

INTERTRANSVERSALES LUMBORUM, Musculi intertransversi lumborum, (F.) Intertransversaires des lombes. These are almost entirely fleshy, and ten in number; five on each side. They are similar to the preceding in general arrangement; except that they are more marked, and not placed in two rows. Each intertransverse space contains only one. They are quadrilateral, and flat. The first occupies the space between the transverse processes of the first lumbar and the last dorsal vertebrae; and the last is between that of the fourth and fifth lumbar vertebrae. These muscles incline the lumbar region laterally; and straighten it when inclined to one side.

INTERTRIGO, Chafing—i. Podicis, Chafing.

INTERVAL, LUCID, see Lucid.

INTERVALLUM, Intermission, Interstice—i. Intercostale, Intercostal space.

INTERVENIUM, Mesophlebium.

INTERVERTEBRAL, Intervertebra'lis, (inter, and vertebra.) That which is situate between the vertebrae.

INTERVERTEBRAL CARTILAGES, Fibro-cartilages or discs, Ligamenta intervertebra'lia, Fibro-cartilag'ines intervertebra'les. These organs are of a fibro-cartilaginous nature; sections of a cylinder; flexible; whitish; resisting; and situate between the bodies of the vertebrae, — from the space between the second and third as far as that between the last vertebra and sacrum. Their form is accommodated to that of the vertebra with which they are in connexion; so that, in the neck and loins, they are oval, whilst in the dorsal region they are nearly circular.

INTERVERTEBRAL DISCS, Intervertebral cartilages — i. Fibro-cartilages, Intervertebral cartilages.

INTESTABILIS, Castratus.

INTESTATUS, Castratus.

INTESTIN, Intestine.

INTESTINAL, Intestina'lis, Enter'icus, Enter'ic, (F.) Entérique, from intus, 'within.' That which belongs to the intestines, — as intestinal canal, &c. Borden uses the term Pouls intestinal for a pulse, which he conceived to announce an approaching crisis by the intestines.

INTESTINAL JUICE, Succus entericus.

INTESTINAL TUBE or TRACT, Cana'lis seu Tractus intestino'rum. The canal formed by the intestines from the pyloric orifice of the stomach to the anus.

INTESTINE, Intesti'num, En'teron, Chorda, Gut, Nedy'a (pl.), Pan'tices (pl.), Boel'li (pl.), Bowel, (F.) Intestin, Boyau. Same etymon. A musculo-membranous canal, variously convoluted, which extends from the stomach to the anus, and is situate in the abdominal cavity; the greater part of which it fills. In man, its length is six or eight times that of the body. It is divided into two principal portions, called small intestine and large intestine. The former, Intesti'num *ten'ne, I. grac'ilē, (F.) Intestin grêle, constituting nearly four-fifths of the whole length, begins at the stomach and terminates in the right iliac region. It is divided into duodenum, jejunum and ileum. Some anatomists give the name small intestine to the last two only; which are kept in place by the mesentery, and form a large paquet, occupying the umbilical and hypogastric regions, a part of the flanks, of the iliac regions, and of the cavity of the pelvis. It is composed of, 1. A serous membrane, which is peritoneal. 2. Of a muscular coat, whose fibres are very pale, and are placed, in part, longitudinally; but the greater part transversely. 3. Of a whitish, mucous membrane; villous, and forming folds or valves—valvulæ conniventes—at its inner surface, and furnished with a number of mucous follicles, called glands of Lieberkühn, (Crypts or Follicles of Lieberkühn), and in the duodenum with the glands of Brunner. The arteries of the small intestine proceed from the superior mesenteric; its veins open into the vena porta. Its nerves proceed from the superior mesenteric plexus. The large intestine, Intestinum crassum, Megalocœlia, (F.) Gros intestin, forms a sequence to the small. It is much shorter, and is solidly attached in the regions of the abdomen which it occupies. It begins in the right iliac region; ascends along the right flank, till beneath the liver, when it crosses the upper part of the abdomen, descends into the left iliac fossa, and plunges into the pelvic cavity, to gain the anus. The great intestine is usually divided into three portions,—the æcum, colon and rectum. It receives its arteries from the superior and inferior mesenteries. Its veins open into the vena porta. Its nerves are furnished by the mesenteric plexuses. Its lymphatic vessels, which are much less numerous than those of the small intestine, pass into the ganglions or glands seated between the different reflections of the peritoneum, which fix it to the abdominal parietes. The use of the intestines is,—in the upper part, to effect the chylification of the food and the absorption of the chyle;—in the lower, to serve as a reservoir, where the excrementitious portion of the food collects; and, also, as an excretory duct, which effects its expulsion.*

INTOXICATION SATURNINE, Lead poisoning; saturnine cachexy. The aggregate of symptoms which present themselves prior to an attack of lead colic.—Tanquerel des Planches.

INTRALINGUAL SALIVARY GLANDS, see Salivary glands.

INTRALOBULAR, Intralobularis; from intra, 'within,' and lobulus, 'a lobule.' Relating to the space within a lobule:—as the 'intra-lobular veins,' venæ seu venulæ intralobulares seu centrales, of the liver:—veins which communicate with the interlobular veins, and are the radicles of the hepatic veins.

INTRA-PELVIO TROCHANTÉRIEN, Obturator internus.

INTRA-UTERINE, Intrauterinus; from intra, 'within,' and uterus, 'the womb.' That which takes place within the womb—as 'intra-uterine life.'

INTRICATURA, Decussation.

INTRIN'SIC, Intrin'secus; from intra, 'within,' and secus, 'towards.' Applied to the internal muscles of certain organs; as those of the ear, tongue, and larynx. Linnæus gave the name Intrin'seci to internal diseases.

INTROITUS PELVIS, see Pelvis—i. Vaginæ, Rima vulvæ.

INTROMISSION, Intromissio; from intro, 'within,' and mitto, missum, ('I send.' The act of introducing one body into another, as Intromissio Penis, (F.) Intromission de la Verge.

INTUMESCENTIA, Intumescencia, Onco'sis, Dionco'sis, from intumescere, (in, and tumescere, 'to swell.') Augmentation of size in a part or in the whole of the body. Sauvages uses the word Intumescencia for an order of diseases, in which he comprehends polysarcia, pneumatosis, anasarca, œdema, physconia, and pregnancy.

INTUMESCENTIA GANGLIFORMIS, Ganglion of Gasser, see Facial nerve—i. Lactea Mammarum, Sparganosis—i. Lienis, Splenoncus—i. Semilunaris, Ganglion of Gasser.

INTUS INVERSUS, Transposition of the viscera.

INTUSSUSCEPTIO, from intus, 'within,' and suscipio, susceptum, 'I receive.' Intussusceptio. In physiology:—the mode of increase peculiar to organized bodies. In pathology, like Convolvulus, Volvulus seu Susceptio seu Parisago'gê intestinorum, Chordap'sus, Enteroparisago'gê, Indigitatio, Tormen'tum, and Inevagatio, it means the introduction of one part of the intestinal canal—intussusceptum—into another, which serves it as a sort of vagina or sheath. Generally, it is the upper part of the small intestine, which is received into the lower—intussusceptiens—when the intussusception is said to be progressive. At times, however, it is retrograde. As the disease cannot be positively detected by the symptoms, it must be treated upon general principles. At times, the invaginated portion has separated and been voided per anum,—the patient recovering. The disease is, however, of a very dangerous character.

INTUSSUSCEPTUM, see Intussusceptio.

INTUSSUSCIPiens, see Intussusceptio.

INTYBUS, Cichorium endivia.

INTYBUS HORTENSIS, Cichorium endivia.

INULA, see Inula helenium—i. Britannica, I. dysenterica—i. Common, I. helenium—i. Conyzæa, I. dysenterica.

IN'ULA DYSENTERICA. The systematic name of the Lesser Inula, I. Britan'nica seu Conyzæ'a, Aster dysentericus seu undulatus, Pulicaria dysenterica, Conyza, C. media, Ar'nica Suedensis seu spur'ria, Cuni'la mas'cula seu media, Cuni'lo'go, (Prov.) Mare's fat, (F.) Aunée antidysentérique, Herbe de Saint Roch. Nat. Ord. Compositæ. This plant was once considered to possess great antidysenteric virtues. The whole plant is acrid and somewhat aromatic.

INULA HELEN'UM. The systematic name of the El'ecampane, En'ula, E. camp'na, Elen'ium, Necta'rium, Helc'ium, Aster helen'ium seu officin'alis, Corrisar'tia helen'ium, Common Inula, (F.) Aunée ou Aunée officinale. The root In'ula

(Ph. U. S.) was formerly in high esteem in dyspepsia, cachexia, pulmonary affections, &c. It is now scarcely used.

INULA, LESSER, Inula dysenterica—i. Squarrosa, Conyza squarrosa.

INUNCTIO, Inunction, Liniment.

INUNCTION, Inunctio, Perunctio, Illitio, Illitus, Illinitio, Oblinitio, Chrisis, Catachrisis, Diachrisis, Epichrisis, Unctio, from inungere, inunctum, (in, and ungere, unctum.) 'to anoint.' The act of rubbing in an ointment or a liniment, unction, (F.) Onction, Inunction. Inunction of the whole body with a piece of bacon, lard, or with oil, has been recommended in scarlatina, measles, and in scrofulous or tuberculous cachexia.

INUNDATIO, Depuration.

INUSTIO, Cauterization, Cauterium.

INUSTORIUM, Cauterium.

INVAG'INATED, Invagina'tus, from in, and vagina, 'a sheath.' Applied to a part which is received into another, as into a sheath.

The invaginated or slit and tail bandage is one in which strips or tails pass through appropriate slits or button-holes.

INVAGINATIO, Intussusceptio.

INVAGINATION, Invagina'tio. Intussusceptio. Also, an operation, which consists in introducing one end of a divided intestine into the other, with the view of restoring the continuity of the intestinal canal.

The name Invagination is, likewise, given to an operation for the radical cure of crural hernia, which consists in introducing into the crural canal a thick tent of charpie, the effect of which is, by compression and adhesive inflammation, to obliterate the neck of the hernial sac.—Nysten.

IODETUM HYDRARGYRICUM, Hydrargyri iodidum rubrum.

IODHYDRARGYRITE DE CHLORURE MERCUREUX, Mercury, iodide of chloride of.

IOD'IC, Iod'icus, (F.) Iodique. Same etymon as Iodine. Containing iodine.

IODIDUM HYDRARGYRI CHLORIDI,

Mercury, iodide of chloride of—i. Hydrargyricum, Hydrargyri iodidum rubrum—i. Hydrargyrosum, Hydrargyri iodidum.

IODINE, Io'dina, Io'dinum (Ph. U. S., 1842), Iodin'ium (Ph. U. S., 1851), Iodin'eum, Io'dum, Io'dium, Io'nium, Io'num, (F.) Iode; from ιωδης, violæceus, 'of a violet colour,' so called from the violet vapour it exhales when volatilized. It is contained in the mother waters of certain fuci, and is obtained by pouring an excess of concentrated sulphuric acid on the water obtained by burning different fuci, lixiviating the ashes and concentrating the liquor. The mixture is placed in a retort to which a receiver is attached, and is boiled. The iodine passes over and is condensed. It is solid, in the form of plates; of a bluish gray colour, of a metallic brightness, and smell similar to that of the chloride of sulphur. Its s. g. is 4.946. When heated, it becomes volatilized, and affords the vapour which characterizes it. With oxygen it forms Iodic acid, and with hydrogen Hydriodic acid. The tincture of iodine and the iodides have been employed with great success in the treatment of goitre and of some scrofulous affections. It must be administered in a very small dose and for a long period. It is said to be apt, however, to induce cholera morbus, signs of great nervous irritability, Iodome'thē, (F.) Ivesse iodique, and emaciation of the mammae. When these symptoms, collectively termed Iodism, Iodo'sis, and Iodin'ia, (F.) Cachexie iodée, are urgent, the dose may be diminished, or it may be wholly discontinued, and afterwards resumed.

Various preparations of iodine are employed in medicine.

IODINED, Iodized.

IODIZED, Iodined; Iodisa'tus. Impregnated, or affected with, iodine, or its preparations.

IODINIA, see Iodine.

IODIQUE, Iodic.

IODISM, see Iodine.

IODIUM, Iodine.

IODIFORM, Iodoformum, (F.) Iodoforme, Iodure de formyle; so called from its analogy to chloroform. It is obtained by the reaction on each other of iodine, bicarbonate of potassa, water, and alcohol. It is in crystalline plates, of a beautiful citrine colour; and may be given in the same cases as the other preparations of iodine. Dose, one grain, three times a day. It is the sesqui-iodide of carbon. See Carbonis sesqui-iodidum.

IODOGNOSIE, Iodognosis.

IOGNO'SIS, (F.) Iodognosie; from iodine, and γνωσις, 'knowledge.' A knowledge of iodine in its various relations.—Dorvault.

IODOHYDRARGYRATE OF POTASSIUM, see Iodine.

IODOMETHE, see Iodine.

IODOPE'GÆ, from iodum, 'iodine,' and πηγη, 'a spring.' Mineral waters containing iodine.

IONIDIUM MARCUCCI, Cinchunchulli—a South American plant. Ser. Syst. Pentandria Monogynia; Nat. Ord. Violariæ; said to be extremely efficacious in the Mal de San Lazaro, of Colombia.

IONIUM, Iodine.

IONTA, see Excretion.

IONTHUS, Varus, Violet Eruption, from iov, 'the violet,' and αἶθος, 'a flower,' or οἶθος, 'foulness' [?]. An unsuppurative, tubucular tumour; stationary; chiefly on the face. A genus in the class Hæmatica, order Phlogotica of Good.

IONTHUS CORYMBIFER, Gutta rosea—i. Varus, Acne.

IONUM, Iodine.

IOTACIS'MUS, from the Greek letter Iota. Defective articulation,—the patient not being able to pronounce the palatals j and g soft.

IRIS, (gen. I'ridis) Grammè. So called from its resembling the rainbow in a variety of colours. A membrane, stretched vertically at the anterior part of the eye, in the midst of the aqueous humour, in which it forms a kind of circular, flat partition, separating the anterior from the posterior chamber. It is perforated by a circular opening called the pupil, which is constantly varying its dimensions, owing to the varying contractions of the fibres of the iris. Its posterior surface has been called uvea, from the thick, black varnish which covers it. The pigmentary stratum, on its free surface, appears to be bounded by a delicate, but sharply defined, line, which has been described as a special membrane—Membrana pigmenti seu limitans seu limitans Poci'ni seu Jaco'bi Arnold. The greater circumference of the iris is adherent to the ciliary processes and circle. It has an external plane of radiated fibres and an internal one of circular fibres, which serve—the one to dilate, the other to contract the aperture of the pupil. The iris receives the irian nerves. Its arteries are furnished by the long ciliary arteries, which form two circles by their anastomoses; the one very broad, near the great circumference; the other, smaller, and seated around the circumference of the pupil. The veins of the iris empty themselves into the Vasa vorticosæ, and into the long ciliary veins. The use of the iris seems to be,—to regulate by its dilatation or contraction, the quantity of luminous rays necessary for distinct vision. The different colours of the iris occasion the variety in the colours of the human eye.

IRIS, see Herpes Iris—i. Common, I. Germanica—i. Commun, I. Germanica—i. de Florencia, I. Florentina.

IRIS FLORENTINA, Florentine iris or orris, (F.) Iris de Florencia. Order, Iridaceæ. The rhizoma of this plant is extremely acrid in its recent state; and, when chewed, excites a pungent heat in the month, that continues for several hours. When dried, the acrimony is lost, or nearly so, and the smell is very agreeable. It is indebted to its agreeable flavour for its retention in the pharmacopœias, although it is ranked as an expectorant. The orris root of the shops is said to consist of the rhizomes of three species—I. Florentina, I. pallida, and I. Germanica.

IRIS FÆTIDISSIMA, I. fœtida, Spathula fœtida, Xyris, Stinking iris, (F.) Iris puant, Glayeul puant. The root has been esteemed antispasmodic and narcotic.

IRIS GERMANICA. The systematic name of the Flower-de-Luce, Iris nostras seu vulg'ris, Aier'sa, Common iris or orris, Gladiolus cœruleus, (F.) Iris commun, Flambe. The fresh roots have a disagreeable smell, and an acrid, nauseous taste. They are powerfully cathartic, and are given in dropsies, where such remedies are indicated.

IRIS HEXAGONA, I. versicolor.

IRIS LACUS'TRIS, Dwarf-flag, Dwarf lake-iris; has the properties of I. versicolor.

IRIS LAKE, DWARF, I. lacustris—i. Lutea, I. pseudacorus—i. des Marais, I. pseudacorus—i. Nostras, I. Germanica—i. Palustris, I. pseudacorus.

IRIS PSEUDACORUS. The systematic name of the Yellow water-flag, Iris palustris seu lu'tea, Gladiolus luteus, Ac'orus vulg'ris seu adulterinus seu palustris, Pseudacorus, Butomum, (F.) Iris des marais, Faux acore, Flambe bâtarde, Acore bâtarde. The root has an acrid, styptic taste. It is an errhine, sialogogue, and acrid astringent. The expressed juice is diuretic, and said to be a useful application to serpigulous and other cutaneous affections. Rubbed on the gums, or chewed, it is said to cure toothache.

IRIS PUANT, I. fœtidissima—i. Stinking, I. fœtidissima.

IRIS VERSICOLOR, I. hexago'na, Blue flag. The rhizoma of this is an active cathartic, and has been much used, as such, by the American Indians. It is reputed to be diuretic.

IRIS VIRGINICA, Slender Blue flag: and Iris verna, are said to have virtues like those of I. versicolor.

IRIS VULGARIS, I. Germanica.

IRISITIS, Iritis.

IRY'TIS, Inflammation of the iris, Inflammat'io Iridis, Iris'itis, Iridi'tis, from Iris, and itis, denoting inflammation, Uve'i'tis is colour. The chief symptoms are;—change in the colour of the iris; fibres less movable; tooth-like processes shooting into the pupil; pupil irregularly contracted, with the ordinary signs of inflammation of the eye. If the inflammation does not yield, suppuration takes place; and although the matter may be absorbed, the iris remains immovable. It is often caused by syphilis. The general principles of treatment are, to deplete largely and exhibit mercury freely; along with attention to other means advisable in ophthalmia. The free use of quinia is sometimes serviceable. When the inflammation is seated in the serous covering of the iris, it is termed Iritis serosa.

IRRADIATION, Irradiat'io (ir and radius). Shooting or proceeding from a centre—as an 'irradiating pain.'

IRREDUCIBLE, (F.) Irréductible. An epithet given to fractures, luxations, herniæ, &c., when they cannot be reduced.

IRREDUCTIBLE, Irreducible.

IRREGULAR, Irregula'ris, Anom'alous; from ir, negation, and regula, 'a rule.' A term chiefly applied to the types of a disease; and also, to the pulse when its beats are separated by unequal intervals.

IRREGULAR PRACTITIONER. One who does not practise his profession according to rules sanctioned by law or custom.

IRREMIEDIABLE, Incurable.

IRREPTIO, Attack.

IRRIGATION, Irriga'tio, Embroc'atio, Irrora'tio: 'the act of watering or moistening,' from ir, and rigo, 'I water.' The methodical application of water to an affected part, to keep it constantly wet.

IRRITABILITAS, Irritability—i. Halleriana, Irritability—i. Morbosa, see Subsultus tendinum—i. Vesicæ, Cysterethismus.

IRRITABILITY, Irritabil'itas, from irrito, (ir, 'negation,' and ritus, 'the usual manner,') 'I provoke.' Vis irritabilit'is, V. Vita, V. in'sita of Haller, V. vitalis of Gorter, Oscilla'tio of Boerhaave, Tonic power of Stahl, Vita propria, Irritabil'itas Halleriana, Inherent power, Con- tractility, Excitability, &c. (F.) Irritabilité, I. Hallérienne. A power, possessed by all living, organized bodies of being acted upon by certain stimuli, and of moving responsive to stimulation. It is the ultimate vital property.

IRRITABLE, Irritabilis. That which is endowed with irritability. Every living organized tissue is irritable; that is, capable of feeling an appropriate stimulus, and of moving responsive to such stimulus. Irritable is often used in the same sense as impressible, as when we speak of an irritable person, or habit, or temper. This last condition has been variously termed—Debil'itas nervo'sa, D. Erethis'ica, Hypercine'sia nervo'sa, Neurastheni'a, Neurostheni'a, Sensibil'itas anom'ala, S. Morbo'sa, S. aucta.

IRRITAMEN, Irritant, Stimulus.

IRRITAMENTUM, Erethism, Irritant, Stimulus—i. Metallicum, Galvanism.

IRRITANT, Irritans, Irrita'men, Irritamentum. Same etymon. That which causes irritation or pain, heat and tension; either mechanically, as puncture, acupuncture, or scarification; chemically, as the alkalies and acids; or in a specific manner, as cantharides.

Irritants are of great use in the treatment of disease.

IRRITATING POISON, see Poison.

IRRITATIO, Erethism, Gargale, Irritation.

IRRITATION, Irritatio, Erethis'mus. Same etymon. The state of a tissue or organ, in which there is excess of vital movement; commonly manifested by increase of the circulation and sensibility. Broussais defines irritation to be;—the condition of an organ, the excitation of which is carried to so high a degree, that the equilibrium resulting from the balance of all the functions is broken. In this signification, he also uses the word surirritation, which he considered as a higher degree, and as the essential cause of fever. Irritation is the precursor of inflammation.

IRRITATION, MORBID, Constitutional irritation, Irritative fever, Pseudo-fever, is that excitement which occurs after injuries done to the body, or to any part thereof;—constituting cases of diseased sympathy.

IRRITATIVE FEVER, Irritation, morbid.

IRRORATIO, Irrigation.

IS, Fibre.

ISADELPH'IA, from isos, 'equal,' and ἀδελφος, 'brother.' A double monstrosity, in which both bodies are equally and perfectly developed, and possessed of independent vital organs; and which are united by parts of little significance.—Gurlt.

ISATIS TINCTO'RIA, Wood, Pastel. Ord. Cappari'daceæ. A European plant, whose leaves have a fugitive pungent smell, and an acrid durable taste. They are not used, however, in medicine at the present day, but are the source of the dye-stuff, wood.

ISCA, Boletus ignarius.

ISCHÆ'MIA, from ισχω, 'I retain,' and 'αἷμα, 'blood.' Morbid retention or suppression of an habitual flux of blood, as of the hemorrhoidal or menstrual flux or of epistaxis. See Hæmatostatica.

ISCHÆ'MON, Ischæ'mum. Same etymon. A medicine which restrains or stops bleeding.

IS'CHESIS, from ισχειν, 'to retain.' Suppression or retention of a discharge or secretion.

IS'CHIA, MINERAL WATERS OF. In this volcanic isle, five miles from Naples, there are several thermal waters, one of which—that of Gurgitello—raises the thermometer of Fahr. to 167°.

ISCHIACUS, Ischiatic.

ISCHIADELPHUS, Ischiopages.

ISCHIADICUS MORBUS, Neuralgia femoro-poplitea—i. Nervus, Sciatic nerve.

ISCHIADOCELE, Ischiocele.

ISCH'IAGRA, Is'chias, Ischal'gia, from ισχω, 'the haunch,' and ἀγρα, 'a seizure.' A name given to ischiatic gout. Femoro-popliteal neuralgia has, also, been so called.

IS'CHIAL, Ischia'lis. Relating or belonging to the ischion.

ISCHIALGIA, Ischiagra, Neuralgia femoro-poplitea.

ISCHIAS, Ischiagra—i. Nervosa Antica, Neuralgia femoro-prætibialis—i. Nervosa Cotunnii, Neuralgia femoro-poplitea—i. Nervosa digitalis, Neuralgia cubito-digitalis—i. Nervosa postica, Neuralgia femoro-poplitea—i. à Sparganosi, Phlegmatia dolens.

ISCHIAT'IC, Ischiad'ic, Ischiat'icus, Ischiad'icus, Isch'iaeus, Sciat'ic, (F.) Ischiatique, from ισχω, 'the haunch;' whence the word Sciatic. An epithet given to parts connected with the ischium. The SCIATIC NOTCHES, (F.) Échan-crures Ischiatiques, are formed by this bone; the ISCHIATIC SPINE belongs to it, and gives attachment to the small sacro-sciatic ligament. The TUBEROSITY OF THE ISCHIUM, Os sedenta'rium, Tuber Is'chii, (F.) Tubérosité sciatique, is formed by it. It receives the insertions of different muscles of the thigh, and forms the projection on which the body rests when seated.

ISCHIATIC ARTERY, Sciatic Ar'tery, (F.) Artère Fémoro-Poplitée (Ch.) arises singly from the hypogastric, or with the gluteal; and seems to be really a continuation of the trunk of the hypogastric. It issues from the pelvis, at the lower part of the great sciatic notch; and, afterwards, divides into a considerable number of branches, which are distributed particularly to the posterior and superior region of the thigh.

ISCHIATIC REGION, Sciatic region; Regio ischiad'ica. The region of the hip.

ISCHIATIC VEIN presents the same arrangement as the artery.

ISCHIATICUS, Sciatic.

ISCHIATOCELE, Ischiocele.

ISCHIDRO'SIS, Sudor'is suppressio, Oligid'ria, from ισχω, 'I restrain,' and 'ιδρως, 'sweat.' Suppression of perspiration.

ISCHIO. In composition, belonging or relating to the ischium.

ISCHIOBLEN'NIA, Ischoblen'nia, from ισχω, 'I restrain,' and βλενω, 'mucus.' The suppression of a morbid but habitual discharge of mucus.

ISCHIO-CAVERNO'SUS. Belonging to the ischium and corpus cavernosum.

ISCHIO-CAVERNOSUS muscle, Collatera'lis, Director seu Erector seu Sustenta'tor Penis, (F.) Érecteur du Pénis, Ischio-uréthral, (Ch.) is a small, long, flat muscle, which surrounds the origin of the corpus cavernosum. It is fixed below to the inner side of the tuberosity of the ischium, and above to the root of the penis, where it is confounded with the fibrous membrane of the corpus cavernosum. It draws the root of the penis downwards and backwards.

ISCHIO-CAVERNOSUS of the female, Erector seu Sustenta'tor seu Superior rotun'dus clitor'idis, (F.) Ischio-clitoridien, Ischio sous-clitorien, (Ch.) is arranged nearly as in the male, but is less bulky. It arises, by aponeurosis, from the tuberosity of the ischium, and terminates by embracing the corpus cavernosum of the clitoris, to the erection of which it appears to contribute.

ISCHIOCE'LE, Ischiatoce'lè, Ischiadoce'lè, Hernia ischiat'ica; from ισχω, 'the ischium,' and κηλη, 'tumour.' Ischiatic hernia. One in which the viscera issue by the great sciatic notch. It is a rare disease. The protruded parts must be reduced—the patient being placed in a favourable position, and they must be retained by a bandage.

ISCHIO-CLITORIANUS. That which is connected with the ischium and clitoris.

ISCHIO-CLITORIAN ARTERY of Chaussier is a division of the internal pudic, which furnishes the two arteries of the clitoris—the superficial and deep-seated.

ISCHIO-CLITORIAN NERVE, of the same professor, is the superior branch of the pudic nerve, which is distributed to the clitoris.

ISCHIO-CLITORIDIEN, Ischio-cavernosus—i. Coccygeus, Coccygeus—i. Crêti-tibial, Semitendinosus—i. Femoralis, Adductor magnus—i. Fémoro-péronier, Biceps flexor cruris—i. Périneal, Transversus perinæi—i. Popliti-fémoral, Semi-membranosus—i. Popliti-tibial, Semi-membranosus—i. Prétibial, Semitendinosus—i. Sous-clitorien, Ischio-cavernosus—i. Sous-trochantérien, Quadratus femoris—i. Spino-trochantérien, Ischio-trochanterianus—i. Uréthral, Ischio-cavernosus.

ISCHIODYMIA, see Somatodymia.

IS'CHION, Ischium, Os ischii, Os coxæ dicis, Hip-bone, Huckle-bone, Seat-bone, (Sc.) Heuck-bane, Hukebane, Lunyjebane, (Prov.) Chancebone, Pinbone, (F.) Os de l'assiette. The lowermost of the three portions which compose the os innominatum in the fœtus and young individual. The inferior region of the same bone has, also, been called ischium, in the adult. According to Hesychius, the ancients designated by the word ischion the capsular ligament of the coxo-femoral articulation, as well as the articulation itself. Some derive the word from ισχis, the lumbar region; others from the verb ισχω, 'I arrest,' 'I retain;'—because that bone serves as a base or support for the trunk, when we are seated.

ISCHION, Haunch.

ISCHIO-NEURALGIA, Neuralgia femoro poplitea.

ISCHIOPA'GES, Ischiadelphus, from Ischion, and παγω, 'I fasten.' A monstrous union of two fœtuses, in which they are attached to each other by the ischia.—Geoffroy St. Hilaire. See Hypogastrodidymus.

ISCHIOPHTHISIS, Tabes coxæ ria seu ischiadica, Phtthisis ischiadica, from ισχιον, 'ischium,' and phtthisis. Phtthisis in consequence of suppuration of the hip-joint. See Coxarum morbus.

ISCHIO-PRÔSTAT'ICUS. Winslow, Sanctorini, Albinus, and Sömmerring, have given this name to the fibres of the transversus perinæi muscle, which go towards the prostate.

ISCHIO-RECTAL FOSSA, Perineal fossa.

ISCHIOSIS, Neuralgia femoro poplitea.

ISCHIO-TROCHANTERIANUS, Gem'ini, Genelli. Part of the Marsupiallis of Cowper; Car'neum Marsupium, Ischio-spini-trochantérien, Secun'dus et tertius quadrigen'inus, (F.) Muscle cannelé, Accessoire à l'obturateur interne. Two small, fleshy bundles, long and flat, which arise,—the superior on the outside of the sciatic spine; the inferior behind the tuberosity of the ischium. Both pass horizontally outwards, and are attached to the tendon of the obturator internus, which they accompany into the fossa of the trochanter. These muscles are rotators of the lower limb outwards. They can, also, turn the pelvis on the femur, in standing on one foot.

ISCHIUM, Ischion.

ISCHL, MINERAL WATERS OF. These springs, which are in Upper Austria, contain iodine and bromine.

ISCHNOPHO'NIA, from ισχυος, 'slender,' and φωνη, 'voice.' Slenderness of voice.—Hippocrates, Galen.

ISCHNOTES, Emaciation.

ISCHNO, ισχω, 'I keep back,' 'I restrain,' 'I hold firm.' Hence:

ISCHOBLENNIA, Ischioblennia.

ISCHOCENO'SIS, from ισχω, 'I arrest,' and κνωσις, 'evacuation.' Retention or suppression of a natural evacuation—as of the menses.

ISCHOCOL'IA, from ισχω, 'I arrest,' and χολη, 'bile.' Retentio bilis. Retention or suppression of the biliary secretion.

ISCHOCOILLA, Constipation.

ISCHOCOPRIA, Constipation.

ISCHOGALAC'TIA, Retentio lactis, from ισχω, and γαλα, 'milk.' Want of milk in the mamma.

ISCHOLOCH'IA or Ischloch'ia, Lochios'chesis, Suppressio lochio'rum, from ισχω, 'I restrain,' and λοχεια, 'the lochial discharge.' Retentio lochio'rum. Suppression of the lochial discharge.

ISCHOMENIA, Amenorrhœa.

ISCHONEURALGIA, Neuralgia femoro-poplitea.

ISCHOPHONIA. Balbuties.

ISCHOSPER'MIA, from ισχω, 'I retain,' and σπερμα, 'sperm;' Sem'inis retentio. Retention or suppression of the spermatie secretion.

ISCHURETIC, Ischuret'icum. Same etymon as the next. A medicine for relieving suppression of urine. A diuretic.

ISCHURIA, Urinæ suppressio, Stoppage of urine, Suppressio lotii, Par'uria retentio'nis; from ισχω, 'I arrest,' 'I retain,' and ουρον, 'urine.' Retention of, or impossibility of discharging, the urine, Anurorrhœe—Piorry. Often restricted to suppression of the secretion, Renal Ischuria, An'uria, Anur'esis, Nephran'uria, Anurocr'ine.—Piorry.

Ischuria Vera is that in which the urine, having accumulated in the bladder, the patient is unable to pass it, notwithstanding the inclination which constantly distresses him. In false ischuria, Par'uria inops, P. retentio'nis renalis, Ischuria notha seu spuria, of some, (F.) Suppression d'Urine, owing to some disease of the kidney or ureters, the urine cannot reach the bladder.

Ischuria has likewise received various other names, according to the seat and character of the obstacle which opposes the exit of the urine: hence the expressions—Renal, Ureteric, Vesical, Urethral, and Calculous Ischuria. Vesical Ischuria is generally used synonymously with Retention of Urine, which see.

ISCHURIA CYSTO-PHLEGMATICA, Cystirrhœa—i. Phimosus, see Phimosicus—i. Spasmodica. Cystospasmus—i. Spuria, see Ischuria—i. Urethralis à phimosi, see Phimosicus—i. Vera, see Ischuria—i. Vesicalis, Retention of urine.

ISIC'IUM, Isicos, Insic'ium, Tomac'ulum, Tom'aclum, Tomac'inum. A kind of sausage, formed of mixed meat and spices.

ISINGLASS, Ichthyocolla.

ISIR, Elixir.

ISIS NOBILIS. see Coral.

ISLAND OF REIL, Insula cerebri.

ISLE OF WIGHT, CLIMATE OF. This beautiful island is a favourable summer retreat for invalids. Undercliff is the situation chosen as a winter residence for phthisical valetudinarians. Cowes, Niton, Sandown, Shanklin, and Ryde, are delightful summer residences.

ISNARDIA PALUSTRIS, Ludwigia palustris.

ISCH'RONOUS, Isch'ronus, Ischchron'ius, Isod'ronus, from ισος, 'equal,' and χρονος, 'time.' That which takes place in the same time, or in equal times. The pulsations of the arteries, in various parts of the body, are nearly isochronous.

ISCH'RYSON, Auro compar; from ισος, 'equal,' and χρυσος, 'gold.' A collyrium, described by Galen as worth its weight in gold. Libavius has also given this name to an amalgam, made with equal parts of antimony and mercury.

ISOC'RATES, from ισος, 'equal,' and κρατος, 'strength.' A mixture of equal parts of wine and water.—Hippocrates.

ISODROMUS, Isochronous.

ISOLUSINE, see Polygala senega.

ISOM'ERIC, Isomer'icus, Isom'erus, Isomœ'rus, Isom'orus, from ισος, 'equal,' and μερος, 'part.' An epithet applied to different bodies which agree in composition, but differ in properties. The condition is termed Isom'erism.

ISOMERISM, see Isomeric.

ISOMORPHISM, see Isomorphous.

ISOMOR'PHOUS, Isomor'phus, Isomor'phicus, from ισος, 'equal,' and μορφη, 'form.' An epithet applied to different bodies which have the same crystalline form. The condition is called Isomorph'ism.

ISONANDRA GUTTA, see Gutta pereba.

ISOPATH'IA, Isop'athy, from ισος, 'equal,' and παθος, 'disease.' This term has been used by some of the German writers to signify the cure of diseases by the disease itself, or its products;—under the hypothesis, that every contagious disease contains in its contagious matter the means for its cure;—thus, that variola may be cured by homœopathic doses of variolous matter; syphilis, with venereal matter, &c., &c. Others have given to isopathy another form;—maintaining, that every diseased organ has its remedy in the same organ,—that eating liver, for example, will remove disease of the liver!

Isopathia has been used by an American writer—Dr. J. M. B. Harden, of Georgia—to mean "Parallelism of Diseases;" "the disposition of diseases to "anastomose with each other," or to wear each other's livery."

ISSUE, Fongiculus—i. Peas, Aurantia curasaventia, see Fongiculus.

ISTHME DU GOSIER, Isthmus of the fauces.

ISTHMION, Isthmus, Pharynx.

ISTHMI'TIS, Inflammat'io Fau'cium seu Palati, Angin'a simplex seu mitis seu fau'cium, Angor fau'cium, Cynan'che simplex, (F.) Angine simple, from isthmus, and itis, denoting inflammation. Inflammation of the isthmus faucium, and of the fauces. See Cynanche pharyngea, and Angina.

ISTHMIUM, Isthmus.

ISTHMOCATAR'RHUS; from ισθος, 'the fauces,' and καταρροος, 'catarrh.' Catarrh of the fauces.

ISTHMODYN'IA, from ισθος, 'the fauces,' and δωρη, 'pain.' Pain in the fauces.

ISTHMOPL'GIA; from ισθος, 'the fauces,' and πληγη, 'a stroke.' Paralysis of the fauces.

ISTHMOS, Pharynx.

ISTHMOTYPHUS, Cynanche maligna.

ISTHMUS, Isth'mion, Isth'mium, (F.) Isthme. A tongue of land joining a peninsula to a continent, or which separates two seas. Anatomists have given the name Isthmus of the Fauces, I. Fau'cium, Claustrum Gut'turis, (F.) Isthme du gosier, to the strait which separates the mouth from the pharynx. It is formed above by the velum palati and uvula; at the sides, by the pillars of the fauces and the tonsils; and below, by the base of the tongue. Also, the Fauces.

ISTHMUS OF THE ENCEPH'ALON. The narrowed and constricted portion of the encephalic mass, situate between the cerebrum, the cerebellum and the medulla oblongata, which corresponds to the free margin of the tentorium cerebelli, and comprises the pons varolii, and middle peduncles of the cerebellum, the peduncles of the cerebrum, the tubercula quadrigemina, the superior peduncles of the cerebellum, and the valve of Vieussens.—Cruveilhier.

ISTHMUS OF THE FOSSA OVA'LIS: Isthmus Vieussen'ii, Striga cartilagine'na cordis, is the prominent arch formed above the fossa ovalis by the union of the two pillars which bound the cavity.

ISTHMUS OF THE THYROID GLAND is a narrow band that unites the two chief lobules composing the thyroid gland.

ISTHMUS HEPATIS, see Lobulus anonymus—i. Urethrae, see Urethra—i. Uteri, see Uterus—i. Vieussenii, Isthmus of the fossa ovalis, see Ovalis fossa.

ITHYPHAL'LUS, from ιθυς, 'straight,' and φαλλος, 'penis.' An amulet, in the form of an erect penis, anciently worn round the neck, to which were attributed alexiterial properties.

ITINERARIUM, Conductor, Director.

ITIS, from ιτης, 'bold,' 'rash,' [?]. A suffix denoting inflammation;—as encephal'itis, inflammation of the encephalon;—Pleur'itis, inflammation of the pleura. According to some, as Kraus, encephal'itis, for example, was, with the ancients, the adjective agreeing with νοσος, 'a disease,' understood to express a disease of the encephalon, and it was only in modern times, that the suffix was used to denote inflammation.

IVA, Teucrium iva—i. Arthritica, Teucrium chamæpitys—i. Moschata Monspelienisium, Teucrium iva—i. Pecanga, Smilax sarsaparilla.

IVETTE MUSQUÉE, Teucrium iva—i. Petite, Teucrium chamæpitys.

IVOIRE, Ivory.

IVORY, Ebur, El'ephias, (F.) Ivoire. The tusk of the elephant. It is chiefly composed of phosphate of lime, and is used for the fabrication of pessaries, artificial teeth, handles of instruments, &c. Formerly, when calcined to whiteness, it entered into some pharmaceutical preparations. It was regarded as astringent and anthelmintic, and was called Spo'dium.

The dentine is the ivory of the human tooth. See Tooth.

IVORY BLACK, see Carbo animalis—i. Vegetable, Phytelephas macrocarpa.

IVRAIE, Lolium temulentum.

IVRESSE, Temulentia—i. Iodique, see Iodine—i. Quinique, Quininism.

IVROGNERIE, see Temulentia.

IVY, Hedera helix, Kalmia angustifolia—i. American, Ampelopsis quinquefolia—i. Big, Kalmia latifolia—i. Fine-leaved, Ampelopsis quinquefolia—i. Ground, Glecoma hederacea.

IXIA, Varix, Viscum album.

IXINE, Atractylus gummifera.

IXIR, Elixir.

IXOS, Viscum album.

IXUS, Galium aparine.

IXYOMYELITIS, from ίξυς, 'the lumbar region,' μυελος, 'marrow,' and ιτις, denoting induration. Inflammation of the spinal marrow in the lumbar region.

IXYS, ίξυς, Ic'ya, Ic'yē. Used by different authors for the ilia, flanks, and loins; most frequently for the last.

JARRET, Poples.

JARRETIER, Popliteus muscle, Hamstring.

JARRETIÈRE (F.), Peris'celis, a garter, from garretum or garretum, in low Latin, the ham. A kind of furfuraceous herpes, which occupies the part of the leg where the garter is worn.

JASMIN, Jasminum officinale.

JASMINUM ARABICUM, Coffea Arabum.

JASMINUM OFFICINALE, Jasminum, Jesen'inum, the Jes'samine, (F.) Jasmin. Ord. Jasminææ. The flowers of this beautiful plant have a very fragrant smell, and a bitter taste. They afford, by distillation, an essential oil; which is much esteemed in Italy, for rubbing paralytic limbs, and in the cure of rheumatic pains.

JASPER, Jaspis.

JASPIS, Jasper. A precious stone, supposed by the ancients to be capable of arresting hemorrhage when worn as an amulet.

JATAMANSI, Sumbul.

JATROPHA CURCAS, (from ιαματ, 'I heal,' and τροφα, 'I nourish.') Ric'inus major, Ricinoi'des, Pi'neus seu Curcas purgans, Pinho'nes Indici, Faba cathartica, Avella'na cathartica, Nux cathartica America'na seu Barbade'nsis, Physic Nut, (F.) Pignon d'Inde, Médecinier cathartique, Grand haricot de Pérou, Pignon de Barbarie, Noix cathartique, N. Américaine ou des Barbades. Nat. Order, Euphorbiacææ. The seeds of this plant afford a quantity of oil, given, in many places, like the castor oil; to which, indeed, it is nearly allied. They contain a peculiar acid, the Jatrophic or Igauric.

The seeds of JATROPHA MULTIFIDA are called Purging Nuts, and give out a similar oil.

JATROPHA ELASTICA, see Caoutchouc.

JATROPHA MANIHOT, Jan'ipha Man'ihot, Man'ihot utilis'sima, Bitter Cassa'va. The plant affording the Cassa'da or Cassa'va Root, Caca'vi, Cassa'rè, Cazabi, Pain de Madagascar, Ric'inus Minor, Man'ioe, Mandioc, Magnoe, Maniot, Yuca, Maniibar, Aipi, Aipima coxera, Aippoca, Janipha. The juice of the root is extremely acrid and poisonous. What remains, after expressing it, is made into cakes or meal; of which the cassada or cassava bread is formed. This bread constitutes a principal food of the inhabitants of those parts where it grows.

The fecula of the root forms Tapioca, Cipipa, Fec'ula Tapi'o'ka, Am'ylum manihot'icum, which is very nutritious. It may be prepared in the same manner as sago.

A factitious Tapioca is met with in the shops, which is in very small, smooth, spherical grains, and is supposed to be prepared from potato starch. It is sold under the name pearl tapioca.

JATROPHA URENS. A most deadly plant. The touch of its five bristly stings had nearly cost Mr. Smith, the curator of Kew gardens, his life.

JOANNETTE, MINERAL WATERS OF.

Several springs are found at Joannette, about five leagues from Angers, in France. The waters are both cold and warm, and contain sulphate of lime; subcarbonate of soda; chloride of sodium; some iron; and chloride of calcium, and, sometimes, a kind of saponaceous matter. They are chiefly used as a tonic in chlorosis, leucorrhœa, &c.

JOE PYE, Eupatorium perfoliatum, and E. purpureum.

JOHNE, MINERAL WATERS OF. Johnne is a village near Dol in Franche-Comté, France, where is a mineral spring, which contains subcarbonate of soda, and subcarbonates of magnesia and iron. It is used chiefly as a bath in certain diseases of the skin, and in atonic affections.

JUDÆUS, Judaïcus seu Phœnicites Lapis, Teco'llithos, (F.) Pierre Judaïque. A stone, found in Judæa, Palestine, &c. Called, also, Lapis Syriacus. It was formerly esteemed to be diuretic and lithontriptic.

JUDGMENT, Judic'ium, (F.) Jugement. The faculty of the intellect, by which ideas are compared with each other, and their relative worth appreciated.

JUDICATORII DIES, Critical days.

JUDICIUM, Judgment.

JUGA ALVEOLARIA, see Alveolar arches.

JUGA CEREBRALIA, Prominences on the inner surface of the bones of the cranium, between the digital impressions.

JUGAL, Zygomatic—j. Process, Zygomatic process.

JUGAL REGION, Re'gio Jugal'is. The region of the cheek-bone.

JUGALE OS, Malæ os.

JUGALIS, Zygomatic.

JUGALIS SUTU'RA, from जुगु, jugum, (from jungere, junctum, 'to join,') 'a yoke.' The suture which unites the Os Malæ or Os Jugal'is with the superior maxillary bone. Also, the sagittal suture.

JUGEMENT, Judgment.

JUGOLINE, Sesamum orientale.

JUGLANS, BLACK, J. nigra.

JUGLANS CINEREA (Ju-glans, quasi Jovis glans), Butter or Oil Nut, White Walnut. Ord. Juglandaceæ. The inner bark of the root of this tree, Juglans (Ph. U. S.), which is abundant in the United States, is used in medicine, in the form of extract, as an efficacious and mild laxative, in doses of from 10 to 20 grains. It is in the secondary list of the Pharmacopœia of the United States.

JUGLANS NIGRA, Black Juglans, Black Walnut; indigenous. The rind of the unripe fruit is said to remove ringworm and tetter. A decoction has been given as an anthelmintic.

JUGLANS RE'GIA, Juglans, Nux Juglans, Carya basil'ica, kava, Carya. The Walnut, French nut, (F.) Noyer, the tree; Noix, the nut, kapoor, Car'yon. The unripe fruit, in the state in which it is pickled, was formerly esteemed to be anthelmintic. The putamen or green rind of the walnut has been celebrated as a powerful antisyphilitic, and used as a sort of diet drink. The kernel is an agreeable article of dessert; but, like all nuts, is difficult of digestion. The expressed oil, Huile de Noix, is used in France as an aliment, and, like other fixed oils, is laxative.

Various preparations of the leaves have been recommended in scrofulous affections.

JUGULAR, Jugularis, from jugulum. (itself from jugum, because the 'yoke' was attached there,) 'the throat.' Relating to the throat.

JUGULAR FOSSA, Fossa Jugularis, is a cavity in the petro-occipital suture. It is formed by the petrous portion of the temporal bone, and by the occipital bone, and lodges the origin of the internal jugular vein. It is, sometimes, called thimble-like cavity.

JUGULAR VEINS, Venæ Jugula'res seu spagit'ides seu apoplec'ticæ seu sopora'les. These are situate at the lateral and anterior parts of the neck. They are two on each side; one external, the other internal. 1. The External Jugular Vein, Trachélo-sous-cutané, (Ch.) is of less size than the internal. It descends, almost vertically, along the anterior and lateral part of the neck, from the cervix of the lower jaw to the subclavian vein, into which it opens, a little above the internal jugular. It is formed by the internal maxillary, superficial temporal, and posterior auricular veins. It is this vein which is commonly opened in bleeding in the neck. 2. The Internal Jugular Vein, V. Céphalique (Ch.), Vena apoplec'tica, is much larger, and more deeply seated than the preceding. It descends, vertically, along the anterior and lateral part of the neck, from the posterior part of the foramen lacerum posterius as far as the subclavian vein. It commences at the sinus of the jugular vein, (F.) Golfe de la veine jugulaire, and receives the blood, which returns by the sinus of the dura mater, and that of the facial, lingual, pharyngeal, superior thyroid, occipital, and diploic veins.

JUGULUM, Clavicle, Throat—j. Uteri, Collum uteri.

JUGUM PENIS, Presse-wèthre.

JUICE, EXPRESSED, see Succus.

JU'JUBE, Ju'juba, Ziz'yphum, Baccæ jujubæ, B. Ziz'yphi. A word of Arabic origin. The fruit of Rhamnus Ziz'yphus seu Ziz'yphus vulga'ris. Ord. Rhamnææ. A native of the south of Europe. It was formerly ranked amongst the pectoral fruits. It has an agreeable sweet taste. The fruits of two other species of Zizyphus—Z. jujuba, Rhamnus jujuba, Mansana arbo'rea, a native of the East Indies, and Z. lotus, Rhamnus lotus, Zizyphus nit'ida seu sati'va seu sylyves'tris, growing in North Africa, possess properties similar to those of Zizyphus vulgaris.

JU'JUBE PASTE, Paste of jujubes.

JULAPIUM, Julep—j. Camphoræ, Mistura Camphoræ.

JULEB, Julep.

JULEP, Jula'pium, Jule'pus, Zula'pium, Juleb of the Persians. A sweet drink. A demulcent, acidulous or mucilaginous mixture.

JUNCUS ODORATUS, from jungere, junctum, 'to join,' in allusion to the use of rushes for bands. [?] Andropogon schœnan'thus seu bicor'nis seu citrat'us seu citriodo'rus, Cymbopo'gon schœnan'thus, Fœnum camelo'rum, Juncus aromati'cus, Camel's hay, Sweet rush, Schœnan'thus, Schœnan'thum, Scœnan'thum, Cal'amus odora'tus, Squinan'thus, Gramen orienta'le, (F.) Jonc odorant, Foin de chameau. Ord. Graminææ. The dried plant, which is generally procured from Turkey and Arabia, has an agreeable smell, and a warm, bitterish taste. It was formerly used as a stomachic and deobstruent.

JUNGLE FEVER. A variety of remittent occurring in the jungle districts of India.

JUNIPER TREE, Juniperus communis.

JUNIPERUM VINUM. Wine impregnated with juniper berries.

JUNIPERUS COMMUNIS, J. Suec'lica, Arceuthos, Ju'niper tree; Akat'alis, Akat'era, (Sc.) Jenepere. Family, Coniferæ. Sex. Syst. Diœcia Monadelphia. The berries, Junip'erus (Ph. U. S.), (Sc.) Eatin-berries, Etagh-berries, are ordered in the pharmacopœias. Their odour is strong, but not unpleasant. Taste warm, pungent. Properties dependent upon essential oil, which they yield to both water and alcohol. Dose, ℞j to ℥ss, rubbed with sugar. In Holland, juniper berries are used for flavouring gin. The oil, O'leum junip'eri, possesses the virtues of the plant. It is called, by Ruland, Targar. (F.) Genévrier (the plant), Genièvre (the berry).

JUNIPERUS LYCIA. This plant—Thu'rea, Th. virga, Arbor thurifera—has been supposed to afford the true frankincense, Cedros Oliv'anum, Thus Libanotos, Libano'tum, Lib'anos, Thus mas'culum, Thus verum, (F.) Eucens. By some, however, it is supposed to be the produce of an An'yris, and by others of Boswell'ia serrata, or B. thurifera. The odour of olibanum is peculiar and aromatic; taste bitterish and slightly pungent; partly soluble in alcohol, and forming a milky emulsion, when triturated with water. It was formerly used in dysentery and hæmoptysis, but is now never employed except as a perfume in a sick room.

JUNIPERUS OXYCEDRUS, (F.) Genévrier Oxycedre, Cade, Oxi'cedre, Oxy'cedre, grows in the south of Europe, Siberia, &c. By combustion of the wood, a liquid tar, O'leum ca'dinum, Junip'eri o'leum empyreumat'icum, Oil of Cade, (F.) Huile de Cade ou de Genévrier, is obtained, which is employed externally in various chronic cutaneous and other diseases.

JUNIPERUS SABI'NA, Sabi'na, S. ster'ilis, Savi'

na, Bruta, Cedrus baccifera, Common or barren savin; Brathu, Brathys, Ba'rathron, Bo'rathron, (F.) Sabine, Savinier. The odour of savin tops, Sabi'na of the pharmacopœias, is strong and disagreeable. Taste hot, acrid, and bitter, depending on an essential oil. Their operation is stimulant, emmenagogue, anthelmintic, and abortive; externally, escharotic. Dose, internally, gr. v to x of the powder. As an escharotic, they are applied in powder or formed into a cerate. The essential oil, O'leum Sabi'næ (Ph. U. S.), has the virtues of the savine. Dose, two to five drops.

JUNIPERUS SUECICA, J. communis.

JUNIPERUS VIRGINIANA, Red cedar. This tree is known throughout the United States by the name of savine, and is often used for the same purposes. The tops and leaves are official in the Pharmacopœia of the United States.

JUNK, Pad.

JUNO LUCINA, Iithyia.

JUNO'S TEARS, Verbena officinalis.

JUPITER, Tin.

JUPITER'S BEARD, Sempervivum tectorum.

JURIBALI, Euribali. A tree in the forests of Pomeroon. Fam. Meliaceæ. Class, Octandria. Nat. Order, Monogynia. The bark is febrifuge, and may be given in powder or infusion, (ʒj ad aq. bullient. Oij.)

JURISPRUDENCE, MEDICAL, from jus, juris, 'law,' and prudentia, 'knowledge.' Jurisprudentia Medica. This word is often used synonymously with Legal Medicine. It is at times employed for the embodied laws and regulations that relate to the teaching and practice of medicine.

JURY OF MATRONS. A jury formed of women empanelled under a writ de ventre inspiciendo, to try the question, whether a woman is with child or not.

JUS, Zomos, Zomid'ium, Sorbit'io, Sorbitum. Soup, broth, Jusculum or bouillon.

JUS BOVINUM, Beef-tea—j. Coagulum, Gelly. JUS D'HERBES (F.). The juice of certain vegetables administered as depuratives; as that of fumitory, burdock, water trefoil, &c.

KENTUCKY, MINERAL WATERS OF. The Olympian Springs, Mudlick, in this State, are near the sources of Licking river. There are three different kinds, in the space of half a mile. One of them is saline, impregnated with sulphur;—another is chalybeate, and a third a sulphureous spring. In various parts of Kentucky, there are saline waters, which are frequented by invalids. The Salines at Bigbone, formerly employed in the manufacture of salt, are now resorted to. A spring, near Harrodsburg, in Mercer County, is strongly impregnated with sulphate of magnesia, and is much visited. At the Blue Licks on both banks of the Licking river, there are sulphureous saline waters.

KERION, see Favosus.

KERMES, Chermes, Alkerm'es. One of the species of the genus kermes lives on a green oak, and is called Coccus il'icis, Kermes animal, Cocci granum, Coecum, C. baph'icum seu infectorium seu tinctorium seu scarlatinum, &c. The oak, to which allusion has been made, is known by botanists under the name Quercus coccif'era, and grows abundantly in the uncultivated lands of southern France, Spain, and in the islands of the Grecian Archipelago. The kermes inhabiting it has the appearance of a small, spherical, inanimate shell. Its colour is reddish-brown, and it is covered with a slightly ash-coloured dust. This is the kermes of the shops. It is now only used in dyeing; but was formerly reputed to possess aphrodisiac, analeptic, anti-abortive, and other virtues.

KERMES MINERAL, Antimonii sulphuretum precipitatum and A. sulphuretum rubrum.

KERNEL, Tubercle.

KERNELS, WAXING, see Waxing kernels.

KERN-MILK, Buttermilk.

KERUA, Ricinus communis.

KETCHUP, Catchup. A pickle prepared from the liquor of the mushroom, walnut, tomato, &c.

KETMIA ÆGYPTIACA, Hibiscus abelmoschus.

KEY, Sax. cæz, Clavis, Cleis, Clavis Anglica, (F.) Clef; Clef de Garageot. An instrument, used for extracting teeth. It consists of a firm handle, with a claw at right angles to it, and moving upon a pivot. This claw embraces the tooth. It has undergone several modifications, and hence various instruments are used under this denomination. The French have the Clef à pompe, Clef à pivot, and Clef à noir.

KEYRI CHEIRI, Cheiranthen cheiri.

KHALA MIMUC, Bit noben.

KHAYA SENEGALENSIS, Swietenia Senegalensis.

KHUS-KHUS, Andropogon muricatus.

KIAS'TER, Chiaster, from χιαζω, 'to cross.' A species of bandage, having the form of the Greek letter χ , which the ancients used for approximating, and maintaining in contact, the fragments of the patella, in cases of fracture of that bone. It was applied in the form of the figure 8.

KIBE, Chilblain.

KIBISTITOME, Cystitome.

KIDNEY. Its etymology is uncertain. Serenius derives it fancifully from Su. Goth. qued, the belly; and nigh, (quasi, quidney.) Ren, Nephros, Protne'sis, (Sc.) Neir, Nere, (F.) Rein. The kidneys or reins are the secretory organs of the urine. They are two glands, situate deeply,—the one on the right, and the other on the left side—in the hypochondres: at the sides of the lumbar vertebrae; behind the peritoneum; and in the midst of an abundant, fatty areolar tissue, Tu'nica seu Cap'sula adiposa. The kidney is of a reddish-brown colour; oval form; and flattened on two surfaces. It has, at its internal margin, a deep fissure, by which the renal vessels and nerves enter or quit the organ, and the ureter issues. It resembles, pretty accurately, the haricot or kidney-bean. Two substances are readily distinguishable in it;—the outer, secerning, cortical, glandular or vascular, Substan'tia cortical'is seu glandulosa, which secretes the urine; and the inner, tubular, medullary, uriferous, conoidal or radiated, Substan'tia Medullaris seu Tubulosa seu Fibro'sa, which appears under the form of small cones or unequal papilla or mammilla, each resulting from the union of small capillary tubes, adherent by one of their extremities to the cortical substance; and opening, by the other, at the summit of the cone, into calices, a species of membranous tubes, more or less numerous, which transmit the urine of the papillæ to the pelvis. By the pelvis is meant a small, membranous sac, of an irregularly oval shape, at the base of which are the orifices of the calices, and the other extremity of which is continuous with the ureter. The kidney is surrounded by a fibrous membrane proper to it, Perinephrus, Tunica propria seu abugin'ea. It has been shown by Mr. Bowman and others that the renal artery is distributed to the corpora Malpighiana, forming a pellet of convolutions, which is received into a flask-like dilatation of the ureter—Bowman's Capsule, and through which—it is conceived—the watery portion of the urine is separated. The blood then becomes venous, and is distributed by different veins—portal veins of the kidney—to the convoluted tubes through which the proper urine is secreted. Hence the blood passes into the renal vein. The intermediate vessels between the Malpighian bodies and the convoluted tubes have been termed the Portal System of the Kidney.

KIDNEY, BRIGHT'S DISEASE OF THE, Morbus Bright'ii seu albuminensis seu granulosus Renum, Nephritis albuminosa seu sociata, Nephria, Nephrochalazosis, Nephrococcosis, Uroze'mia albuminosa, Cachectic or Associated nephritis, Inflammation of the Malpighian corpuscles, Disease of Bright, Granular Degeneration or Disorganization of the Kidney, Granular Kidney of Bright, Cachectic nephritis, Chalazonephritis, (F.) Maladie de Bright, Néphrite albumineuse, État Granuleux ou Dégénérescence granulée du Rein, Albuminorrhée. A granular disease of the cortical part of the kidney, which gives occasion to the secretion of urine that contains albumen, and is of less specific gravity than natural, and which destroys by inducing other diseases. It was first described by Dr. Bright, of London.

KIDNEY, GRANULAR, OF BRIGHT, Kidney, Bright's disease of the.

KIESTEINE, K'estein, properly Ky'esteine, Ky'estein, Kystein, Cy'esteine or Cy'estein, Kiestein,—(Lehmann), from κωειν, 'to be pregnant,' and εσθης, 'a garment or pellicle.' A peculiar albuminoid pellicle, which forms on the urine of a pregnant female when allowed to stand for a few days. It is whitish, opalescent, slightly granular, and may be compared to the fatty substance that swims on the surface of soups, after they have been allowed to cool. When taken in conjunction with other phenomena, it is a valuable aid in the diagnosis of early pregnancy.

KIESTINIC, Kiestin'icus; same etymon. Relating or appertaining to kiesteine; as 'kiestinic urine.'

KILBURN, MINERAL WATERS OF. These springs contain carbonic acid, sulphohydric acid; carbonates of lime, magnesia, and iron; sulphates of soda, lime, and magnesia, and chloride of sodium.

KILE, Ulcer.

KILL LAMB, Andromeda mariana.

KILOGRAMME, Chiliogram'ma, from χιλιοι, 'a thousand,' and γραμμα, 'a gramme.' The weight of a thousand grammes;—two pounds, eight ounces, one drachm, and twenty-four grains, Troy.

KILOLITRE, from χιλιοι, 'a thousand,' and λιτρα, 'a litre.' A measure containing a thousand litres.

KINA KINA, Cinchona.

KINANCIE, Cynanche.

KINCOUGH, Pertussis.

KINDCOUGH, Pertussis.

KINESIP'ATHY, Kinesitherapi'a, Cinecip'athy, Movement cure, Motor'pathy, Medici'na mechan'ica, from κινωσις, 'motion,' and παθος, 'disease.' A mode of treating disease by gymnastics or appropriate movements proposed by Ling, a Swede, and hence called Lingism.

KINETIC, Motory.

KINGCURE, Pyrola maculata.

KING'S EVIL, Scrofula.

KINGSHOOD, Reticulum.

KINICI ACETAS, Quinia, acetate of.

KININUM, Quinine.

KINIUM, Quinine.

KINK, Quinte.

KINK IN THE HEAD, see Insanity.

KINKHAUST, Pertussis.

KINKHOST, Pertussis.

KINKINA, Cinchona.

KINO, Gummi Gambien'se seu rubrum adstrin-gens Gambien'se seu adstrin'gens Fothergilli, African, East India or Amboy'na kino, (F.) Gomme, suc ou extrait de kino. The trees, whence one variety of this resin is obtained, are not botanically ascertained. The London college ascribe it to Pterocarpus erinacea; the Edinburgh to Eucalyptus resinifera seu gummifera, Iron bark; and the Dublin to Butea frondosa. The Pharmacopœia of the United States, (1842 and 1851), defines it to be "an extract obtained from an uncertain plant;" that of 1851 states it to be the inspissated juice of Pterocarpus mcrsuri-pium (De Candolle) and of other plants. On wounding the bark, the kino flows drop by drop. A West India variety is said to be derived from Coccoloba wifera or Sea-side Grape; and a Botany Bay kino is said to be the concrete juice of Eucalyptus resinifera or brown gum-tree of New Holland. See Syst. Icosandria Monogynia. Nat. Ord. Myrtaceæ. Kino consists chiefly of tannic and gallic acids, oxide of iron, and colouring matter. It is inodorous: the taste a sweetish bitter; and it is sometimes gritty between the teeth. It comes to us in fragments of a dark ruby red colour, and is easily pulverized. Its properties are powerfully astringent. Dose, gr. x to gr. xx in powder.

KIONORRHAPHIA, Staphyloraphy.

KIOTOME, Kiot'omus, from κωων, 'a pillar,' 'support,' and τεμνειν, 'to cut.' (F.) Coupebride. An instrument invented by Desault to cut any accidental brides or filaments in the rectum and bladder; and which he afterwards used for the removal of the tonsils. It is composed of a flat, silver sheath, open at one edge. This sheath is provided with a cutting blade, which can be forced through the opening, and thus all the parts can be divided with which it comes in contact.

KIPPERNUT, Bunium bulbocastanum.

KIRATE, A weight of four grains, according to Blancard.

KIRIAGHUMA, Gymneura lactiferum.

KNEADING, Shampooing.

KNEE, Genu.

KNEE, HOUSEMAID'S. An inflammation of the bursa, which in most individuals is in front of the patella, and is apt to inflame and enlarge from effusion in those in whom it is subjected to much pressure. Hence its name. It is a form of capsular rheumatism.

KNEE-HOLLY, Ruscus.

KNEE-JOINT, Genu.

KNEE SCAB, Crusta genu equinae—k. Encircled hoof. Crusta genu equinae.

KNIFE, Sax. cnif. Swed. Knif. Dan. Kniv. (F.) Canif. Culter, Suile, Cultellus, Tomeion, Tomeus, Macha'ra, Macha'rion, Macha'ris, (F.) Couteau. A cutting instrument, used in surgery to divide the soft parts, and which only differs from the bistouri or scalpel in being usually larger.

The most common knives are the following:

KNIFE, AMPUTATION, (F.) Couteau à amputation, C. droit, Culter rectus. This is the largest of the knives used in surgery. Formerly, they were curved; now they are straight, and provided with one or two edges.

KNIFE, CATARACT, Ceratot'omus, Keratot'omus, (F.) Couteau à cataracte. The cataract knives of Richter, Wenzel, Ward, and others, being intended to perform the section of the transparent cornea, are so shaped as to exactly fill the small wound made by them; and thus to prevent the discharge of the aqueous humour, until the section is completed. The blade of the knives of Wenzel and Ward resembles a very narrow lancet, blunt in the posterior five-sixths of one of its edges. The blade of that of Richter is pyramidal, cutting through the whole length of its inferior edge, and also blunt in the five-sixths of the upper.

KNIFE, CHES'ELDEN'S. A knife with a fixed handle; very convex on its edge, concave on the back, which was used by Cheselden in lithotomy.

KNIFE, CROOKED, Culter falcatus, Culter curvus, (F.) Couteau courbe. A knife, which is crooked and concave on its cutting edge. It was formerly employed in amputation of the limbs.

KNIFE, CROCHET, Cultellus uncus, (F.) Couteau à crochet. A steel instrument, composed of a round staff, furnished with a handle at one extremity, and at the other with a curved knife. It was formerly used to cut to pieces monstrous fetuses in utero, and to open the head when necessary.

KNIFE, DOUBLE-EDGED, Anceps cultellus, Amphis'mela, Amphis'mile, Catling, (F.) Couteau à deux tranchans ou désarticulateur ou interosseux. A knife, the blade of which is straight and sharp on both sides. It is used for disarticulating bones; and for cutting the soft parts situate between the bones, in amputation of the leg and forearm.

KNIFE EN SERPETTE. (F.) Couteau en serpette. A sort of knife, of the shape of a serpette or pruning-knife, invented by Desault for dividing the bony paries of the maxillary sinus, for the purpose of extracting fungi from it.

KNIFE, LENTICULAR, Culter lenticularis, (F.) Couteau lenticulaire. An instrument, used in the operation of trepanning, for removing inequalities in the inner table of the skull, which may have been left by the crown of the trephine around the opening made by it. It is formed of a lenticular button, fixed at the extremity of an iron staff, which is convex on one side, flat on the other; sharp at both edges, and mounted on an ebony handle.

KNIFE, LITHOTOMY, (F.) Couteau lithotome. A name, given by Foubert to a large knife, the narrow blade of which, four and a half inches in length, was sharp in its whole extent, and made an obtuse angle with the handle. He used it in the lateral operation.

KNIFE, POLYPTUS, Polypotome.

KNIFE, ROOT-CUTTING. In Pharmacy, a knife moving on a joint at its pointed extremity, by which roots and other ligneous matters are divided in pharmaceutical processes.

KNIFE'SMAN, see Surgery, salvation.

KNIT-BACK, Syphythum.

KNOBWEED, Collinsonia.

KNOCK-KNEED, Entogonyancon.

KNOT, Taberele.

KNOT, PACKER'S, (F.) Nœud d'emballleur. A compressive bandage, used for arresting hemorrhage from the temporal artery or its branches. The nœud d'emballleur is made with a double-headed roller, five ells long. A graduated compress is placed over the opening in the artery, and the bandage is applied over it; the balls of the roller being carried horizontally round to the opposite temple, where they are crossed obliquely and carried back to the part where the compress is situate. The hands are then changed with the rollers, crossing them so as to form a knot, and taking one above the head; the other beneath the chin. They are then crossed again, so as to form several knots, one above the other. This bandage is called, by some surgeons, solar or oblique chevestre or capistrum.

KNOT, SURGEON'S, Nodus chirurgicus, (F.) Nœud du chirurgien. A double knot made by passing the thread twice through the same noose. This knot is used frequently in the ligation of arteries, the umbilical cord, &c.

KNOTBERRIES, Rubus chamaemorus.

KNOTGRASS, Polygonum aviculare.

KNOTROOT, Collinsonia Canadensis.

KNOTWEED, Collinsonia Canadensis, Polygonum aviculare.

KNOWLTON'IA VESICATORIA. Nat. Order, Ranunculaceæ. An acrid plant of South Africa, used by the Cape colonists as a blister in rheumatism.

KOINO-MIASMATA, see Miasm.

KOKUM, Garcinia purpurea—k. Butter, see Garcinia purpurea.

KOLERUS, a name given by Paracelsus to a dry ulcer.

KOLPORAPHY, Elytrorrhaphy.

KOLTO, Plica.

KOOCHLA TREE, Strychnos nux vomica.

KOSSO, Hagenia Abyssinica.

KRONE, Crown.

KRYSTALLINE, see Crystalline.

KUA KAHA, Curcuma longa.

KUMYSS, Koumyss, Koumis. A beverage used in families by the people of Yakutz. It resembles sour buttermilk, without being greasy. According to Sir George Simpson, it is prepared in a very simple way from mare's milk, which is merely allowed to stand for some days in a leather churn till it becomes sour. It is then bottled for use. This drink is rather nutritious than exhilarating; but from the same material the Burats and the Kirghez prepare an intoxicating spirit in which they indulge to excess.

KUSSAUDEK, Convulvulus panduratus.

KUTKULEJA, Cæsalpinia bonducella.

KUTOOKURUNJA, Cæsalpinia bonducella.

KUTUBUTH. An Arabic name for a species of melancholy in which the patient is never quiet at any one place, but wanders about here and there, see Cuttubuth. Also, the name of an insect, which lives at the surface of stagnant waters, and is in a constant state of agitation. Some lexicographers imagine that it is on account of this last circumstance, that the name of the insect has been given to the disease.

KWOSO, Hagenia Abyssinica.

KYANOSIS, Cyanopathy.

KYAPUTTY, Caieput.

KYESTEINE, Kiesteine.

KYESTINIC, Kiestinic.

KYLLOPODIA, Kyllosis

KYLLO'SIS, from κύλλος, 'crooked,' 'lame.' Cylo'sis, Kyllopod'ia. Professor Chaussier so calls congenital distortion of the feet, Clubfoot, Polt'foot, Stumpf'foot, (Prov.) Pummel-foot, Tal'ipes, (F.) Pied bot. Of this there are many varieties. In one, the foot, instead of resting on the soil, by the whole plantar surface, touches it only with the metatarso-phalangeal articulations. It seems as if turned backwards and broken upon the leg. (Pes seu Tal'ipes Equinus, Hip'opus, Oxyppod'ia, Tip-foot, Horsefoot.) In other cases the foot is twisted inwards, (Varus, Tal'ipes varus, Blæso'podes, Blæ'sopus, Cyllœopus, Cyllop'oda, Cyllopod'ion, Lo'ripes, Crossfoot, (F.) Cagneux), so that it rests only on the ground on its outer edge; or it may be twisted outwards, (Valgus, Tal'ipes Valgus, Out-bow-foot), or rest only on its inner edge, or on the back part of the heel, Talipes calcæneus, Heel clubfoot. In the flatfoot or splayfoot, Duck-foot, Splat-foot, Sar'apus, Plat'yypus, Platypod'ia, (F.) Pied plat, the plantar surface of the foot is flattened instead of being concave.

These deformities are rarely accidental. They are almost always congenital, and may be rectified, at an early period, by proper mechanical means to strengthen the foot gradually and restore it to its proper shape and direction; and if these means fail, the tendons and muscles concerned in the deformity may be divided.

KYMOGRAPH'ION, Cymograph'ion; from κύμα, 'wave,' and γράφω, 'I describe.' A wave describer or measurer.' An instrument invented by Ludwig, which is self-registering, and exhibits the relation between the waves of the pulse and the undulations produced by respiration.

KYNA, Pastinaca opopanax.

KYPHOSIS, see Cyphosis—k. Inflammatoria, Vertebral disease—k. Paralytica, Vertebral disease.

KYST, Cyst, Kystis, Cystis, from κύστις, 'a bladder,' 'pouch.' (F.) Kyste. This term is generally applied to a pouch or sac, — Cysto'na, — without opening, and commonly of a membranous nature, which is accidentally developed in one of the natural cavities, or in the substance of organs. Many theories have been successively emitted to explain the formation of cysts, but none are entirely satisfactory. Some are formed by a thin, translucent membrane, having scarcely the thickness of the arachnoid; others of a whitish, fibro-cellular membrane, more or less thick. Some contain cartilaginous or bony flakes. The greater part have but one cavity; others, on the contrary, have several, separated by complete or imperfect septa, as is frequently seen in those developed in the ovaries. The matter contained in cysts is sometimes limpid, serous, yellowish white, reddish, and, at others, more or less thick, albuminous, adipous, or caseous. The tumour, formed by them, is called Encysted.

KYSTE, Kyst—k. Anévrysmal, Aneurismal sac.

KYSTEIN, Kiesteine.

KYSTHITIS, Cysthi'tis, from κύσθος, 'the vagina.' Inflammation of the vulva and of the mucous membrane of the vagina.

KYSTITOME, Cystitome.

KYSTHOPTOSIS, from κύσθος, 'the vagina,' and πτίπω, 'I fall.' Prolapsus or inversion of the vagina.

KYTE, Abdomen, Stomach.

KYTTARRHAG'IA, from κύτταριον, 'an alveolus,' and ρᾶγω, or ρήννυμι, 'I break forth.' Discharge of blood from an alveolus.

L.

LABARIUM, from labi, 'to fall.' Looseness of the teeth.

LABDACISMUS, Lallation.

LABDAMEN, Cistus creticus.

LABDANUM, see Cistus creticus.

LABE, from λαβω, λαμβάνω, 'I seize,' 'I take,' 'the act of grasping.' Invasion. Also, employed to denote the first paroxysm of fevers.—Galen, Hippocrates.

LABEO, Chilon.

LABES, Chilon, Macula.

LABIA CUNNI, Lips of the vulva—l. Interna seu Minora, Nymphæ—l. Majora, Lips of the vulva—l. Pudendi, Lips of the vulva—l. Pudendi minora, Nymphæ.

LABIAL, Labialis, from labium, 'a lip.'

LABIAL, Orbicularis oris.

LABIAL ARTERY. Haller and Sabatier call this the facial artery of the majority of anatomists. The labial arteries, properly so called, coronary arteries of the lips, (F.) Coronaires des lèvres, are two in number. The superior arises from the facial, above, and very close to, the commissure of the lips. It is large and tortuous, and is distributed to the upper lip. The lower arises from the facial, at a considerable distance from the commissure, and proceeds, in a serpentine course, into the substance of the lower lip, to which it is distributed.

LABIAL GLANDS. This name is given to a multitude of muciparous follicles, of some size, round, prominent, and separate from each other, which are found on the inner surface of the lips, below the mucous membrane.

LABIAL VEINS are distinguished, like the arteries, into superior and inferior. They open into the facial vein;—a division of the internal jugular.

LABIALIS, Orbicularis oris.

LABIDOMETER, Labimeter.

LABI'METER, (F.) Labimètre ou Labidomètre, from labis, labidos, 'forceps,' and μετρον, 'measure.' A scale adapted to the handles of the forceps, which indicates the distance of the blades from each other, when applied to the head of the child in utero.

LABIS, Forceps.

LABRUSCA, Bryonia alba.

LAB'YRINTH, Labyrinthus, Antrum buccino'sum. A place, full of turnings, the exit of which is not easily discoverable. Anatomists have given this name to the aggregate of parts, constituting the internal ear, Labyrinthus auris interna, Intima pars organ'is audit'us, Labyrinth'ic cavity of the ear. The Labyrinth is situate between the tympanum and meatus auditorius internus. It is composed of several cavities, which communicate with each other in the dried bone; as the vestibule, cochlea, semicircular canals, &c. It is lined by periosteum, and also by a pulpy membrane, constituting the membranous labyrinth, on which the auditory nerve is regularly dispersed. This membrane forms two sacks in the vestibule, called sacculus vestibuli and sacculus, respectively, which resemble in shape that of the bony cavities containing them. Each sac contains calcareous matter, constituting the Otoliths and Otoconies. When the sac is laid open, upon the upper and outer part, a partition appears, partaking of the nature of the sac, and called by Meckel, Septum vestibuli nervo'so-membrana'ceum.

Labyrinth is also applied to the lateral portions of the ethmoid bone, which are formed of large irregular cells.

LABYRINTH, MEMBRANOUS, see Labyrinth.

LABYRINTH'IC, Labyrinth'icus, (F.) Labyrinth'ique. Relating or appertaining to the labyrinth.

LACAPH'THON. Supposed to be the bark of some fir or other tree. It entered into the composition of the Cyphi, used in fumigations—Paulus of Ægina. Supposed to be the Narcaph'thum or Naseaph'thum.—Ruellius.

LACCA, from lakah, Arab. Gummi lacca, Stick, Gum, Seed, or Shell, lac, (F.) Laque, Gomme Laque. Lac is a substance formed by an insect, and deposited on different species of trees, chiefly in the East Indies, for example, on Croton lac-ciferum, and two species of Ficus,—Ficus religiosa, and F. Indica. The various kinds, distinguished in commerce, are stick-lac, which is the substance in its natural state, investing the small twigs of the tree; and seed-lac, which is the same broken off. When melted, it is called shell-lac.

Lac was, at one time, used in the form of tincture, as a tonic and astringent; and it still forms part of particular dentifrices.

LACERATION, Laceratio, Rhegē, Rheg'mus, Rhegma, Ruptura, Rupture, from lacerare, laceratum, 'to tear:'—Dilaceratio, Sparagma, (F.) Arrachement, Déchirement, Dilacération, Broiement. The act of tearing or rending. The breach made by tearing or rending; as a lacerated wound, Tresis vulnus laceratum, Laceraturæ, Vulnus laceratum.

LACERTUS, Brachium, Muscle, see Muscular fibre.

LAC'ERUM. Same etymon as Laceration. Any thing torn, or appearing as if torn.

LAC'ERUM FORAMEN ANTE'RIOUS, (F.) Trou déchiré antérieur, Hiatus sphéno-pétreux, (Ch.) is an irregular opening, formed by the sphenoid, occipital and petrous portion of the temporal bone. It is closed by cartilage, and forms a kind of fontanelle, situated at the termination of the petro-occipital suture.

LACERUM FORAMEN POSTE'RIOUS, Foramen jugula'rè, F. lacerum in Basi Cra'nii, (F.) Trou ſchiré poſtérieur, Hiatus occipito-pétréux, (Cb.) is formed by the occipital bone, and the inferior edge of the petrous portion of the temporal bone. Through it, the internal jugular vein, the eighth pair of nerves, and accessory nerve paſs out of the cranium.

LACERUM FORAMEN SUPERIUS, Sphenoidal fiſſure.

LACH'ANON, from λαχανον, 'I dig.' A pot herb; Oliv, pl. Olera, a vegetable uſed as food.

LACHESIS PICTA, ſee Arrow-poison.

LACHESIS RHOMBEA'TA, Flammion. A poiſonous ſerpent common in the lower foreſts of Peru.

LACHNANTHES TINCTO'RIA, Dilat'ris tinctoria, Redroot; indigenous. Ord. Hæmorrhæaceæ; (from λαχνη, 'wool,' and ανθος, 'a flower,' owing to its woolly flowers.) The root is aſtringent and tonic.

LACHRYMA, Tear; ſee Vitis vinifera.

LACHRYMAL, Lacryma'lis, from lacryma, 'a tear.' Belonging to the tears. This epithet is given to various parts.

LACHRYMAL APPARATUS, ſee Lachrymal Paſſages.

LACHRYMAL ARTERY proceeds from the ophthalmic; and diſtributes its principal branches to the lachrymal gland.

LACHRYMAL CANAL or DUCT, Nasal Canal or duct, Canalis lacryma'lis ſeu orbitæ naſalis ſeu Sacci lacryma'lis, Ductus ad Naſum ſeu Naſalis orbitæ, is formed by the ſuperior maxillary bone, os unguis, and os turbinatum inferius; and is ſeated in the outer paries of the naſal foſſæ. It is lined by a prolongation of the mucous membrane of the lachrymal ſac; and its inferior orifice is furniſhed with a valvular duplicature. This duct tranſmits the tears, which have been abſorbed at the great angle of the eye by the puncta lacrymalia, into the naſal foſſæ.

LACHRYMAL CARUNCLE, ſee Caruncula lacrymalis.

LACHRYMAL DUCT, Lachrymal Canal.

LACHRYMAL FOSSA, Fossa ſeu Fovea lacryma'lis, is a ſlight depression at the upper part of the orbit, which lodges the lachrymal gland.

LACHRYMAL GLAND, Glandula lacryma'lis ſeu innominata Gale'ni, is ſeated in a depression of the frontal bone at the upper, anterior, and outer part of the orbit. It is of about the ſize of an almond; and of an oval ſhape, flattened above and below:—its great diameter being the antero-poſterior. It is composed of ſeveral ſmall lobules, united by areolar tiſſue, and ſeparated by it as well as by veſſels and nerves which creep in the intervals. This gland has ſeven or eight excretory ducts, which open behind the upper eyelid. Its uſe is to ſecrete the tears, and pour them on the globe of the eye by the excretory ducts.

LACHRYMAL GROOVE, (F.) Gouttière lacrymale, is the bony channel, which lodges the lachrymal ſac. It is ſeated at the anterior and inner part of the orbit, and is formed by the os unguis and the aſcending proceſs of the upper jaw bone.

LACHRYMAL HERNIA, Lachrymal Tumour, Hernia Sacci Lacryma'lis, is when the tears enter the puncta, but cannot paſs to the noſe, and accumulate. By Anel, this was called Dropsy of the Lacrymal ſac.

LACHRYMAL NERVE is the ſmalleſt of the three branches formed by the ophthalmic nerve. It is diſtributed, particularly, to the lachrymal gland and to the upper eyelid. In its courſe it gives off a spheno-maxillary and a malar filament.

LACHRYMAL PAPILLA, ſee Lachrymal Puncta.

LACHRYMAL PASSAGES, Via lacryma'les, (F.) Votes lacrymales. The organs concerned in the ſecretion of tears, in ſpreading them over the eye, and taking them up again to tranſmit them into the naſal foſſæ. The lachrymal paſſages are composed of the lachrymal gland, caruncle, puncta, ducts, lachrymal ſac, and naſal duct, which, together, form the lachrymal apparatus, (F.) Appareil lacrymal.

LACHRYMAL PUNCTA, Puncta Lacryma'lia, Spiramina Palpebrarum, (F.) Points lacrymaux, are two ſmall, round, and contractile openings, ſituate in the centre of a tubercle or papilla, Papilla lacryma'lis, Tuberculum lacryma'le, about a line and a half diſtant from the inner commiſſure of the eyelids, and continuous with the lachrymal ducts. Theſe ducts, Lacryma'les Canaliculi, Canales ſeu Ductus lacryma'les, Ductus lacrymales laterales ſeu punctorum lacryma'lium, Cor'nea lacryma'lia ſeu lima'cum, Collic'ia punctorum lacryma'lium, Canaliculi lima'cum, (F.) Conduits lacrymaux, are two in number—a ſuperior and an inferior—which extend from the puncta to the lachrymal ſac. They ſeem formed by a very delicate prolongation of the conjunctiva, which is continuous with the mucous membrane of the lachrymal ſac, (F.) Reservoir des larmes:—the Sacculus ſeu Sinus ſeu Lucus lacryma'lis, Dacryocyst'is, Infundibulum lacryma'le.

LACHRYMAL TUBERCLE, ſee Lachrymal puncta.

LACHRYMAL VEINS accompany the artery of the ſame name, and open into the ophthalmic and palpebral veins.

LACHRYMATION, Lacrymatio—1. Sanguineous, Dacryhæmorrhysis.

LACINIA, 'a hem or fringe.'

LACINLE TUBARUM FALLOPII, ſee Tube, Fallopian.

LACIOS, Plexus.

LACMUS, Lichen roccella.

LACMUS TINCTORIUS, Lichen roccella.

LACONICUM, Vaporarium, ſee Stove.

LACQ, Laqueus.

LACRIMA, Tear.

LACRUMA, Tear.

LACRYMA, Tear.

LACRYMALIS, Lacrymal.

LACRYMA'TIO, Lacrymation, Epiphora. Also, a profuſe ſecretion of tears from any cauſe:—weeping, Fletus, Ploratio, Ploratus.

LACRYMINE, ſee Tears.

LACTALBUMEN, Casein.

LACTANS, Nurse.

LACTARIUM, Lactarium; from lac, 'milk.' Food prepared from milk. Milk diet or food.

LACTATE DE FER, Ferri lactas—1. de Quinine, Quinine lactas.

LACTATION, Lactatio, Thelasis, Thelasmus, from lacto, lactatum, (lac, 'milk,') 'I ſuckle,' 'I give milk.' Suckling:—the giving of ſuck, (F.) Allaitement. The French make four varieties of lactation. 1. Allaitement maternal—Maternal Lactation, when the mother ſuckles the child. 2. A. étranger mercenaire,—when another ſuckles it. 3. A. artificiel, when the child is brought up by hand. 4. A. animal, when the child is ſuckled by an animal.

LACTÉ, Lactic.

LACTEAL, Lactic—1. Sac, ſee Lactiferous veſſels.

LACTEALS, Chyliferous veſſels.

LACTEIN, Milk, ſolidified.

LACTENS, Sucking child.

LACTES, Meſentery, Pancreas.

LACTEUS, Lactic.

LACTIC, Lac'teus, Galac'ticus, Galac'tinus, lacteal, milky, (F.) Lacté, Laitéux, from lac, lactis, 'milk.' Appertaining to, or reſembling milk.

LACTIC ACID, Ac'idum Lac'teum ſeu Lactis ſeu Lac'ticum, Acid of milk, Galac'tic, Nan'ceic or Ca'ſeic Acid, (F.) Acide Lactique. This has been recommended as a therapeutical agent in atonic dyspepsia, owing to its being preſumed to be one of the gastric acids secreted in health. It is given either in the form of lemonade or of lozenges. The acid is obtained either from milk or from the juice of the red beet.

LACTICA, Typhoid.

LACTIGANS, Nurse.

LACTICINIA, Parotid.

LACTICINIUM, Lactarium.

LACTIFÈRE, Lactiferous.

LACTIFÈROUS, Galactoph'orous, Lac'tifer, (F.) Lactifère, from lac, lactis, 'milk,' and fero, 'I carry.' Milk-conveying.

LACTIFEROUS VESSELS, Lactiferous or Galactoph'orous Ducts, Tu'buli lactiferi, Ductus lactiferi seu lac'tei, (F.) Vaisseaux ou conduits lactifères, are the excretory ducts of the mammary gland, each of which, running towards the nipple, dilates beneath the areola into an elongated sacculus—the lacteal or galactophorous sac, receptacle or sinus—sac'culus seu sinus lactiferus.

LACTIFEROUS or LACTEAL SWELLING. A tumefaction of the breast, supposed by Sir Astley Cooper to arise from a large collection of milk in one of the lactiferous tubes, the result of chronic inflammation of the tube near the nipple, with closure of its aperture, and obliteration of the canal for an inch or more. The tube requires to be punctured.

LACTIFUGA, Lac'tifuge, from lac, lactis, 'milk,' and fugo, 'I drive away.' Medicines which dispel milk.

LACTIGO, Porrigio larvalis.

LACTINE, Sugar of milk.

LACTIN'IA, from lac, lactis, 'milk.' Food prepared with milk.

LACTIPOTOR, Galactopotes.

LACTIS CONCRETIONES, Infarctus Mam-mæ lacteus.

LACTIS REDUNDANTIA, Galactia—l. Retento, Galactischesis—l. Sanguinolenti Excretio, Galactohaemia.

LACTISUGIUM, Antlia lactea.

LACTIVORUS, Galactophagous.

LACTOCELE, Galactocoele.

LACTOLINE, Milk, solidified.

LACTOMETER, Galactometer.

LACTOSE, Sugar of milk.

LACTUCA, from lac, lactis, 'milk;' so called, from its milky juice. Lactuca Sat'iva, Lettuce, Garden Lettuce, Eum'chium Meco'nis, Thridax, Cherbas, (F.) Laitue ordinaire. Ord. Compositæ, is used as a wholesome salad. The seeds possess a quantity of oil, which, when formed into an emulsion, has been advised in arduo urinæ, &c.

The inspissated juice, Lactuca arduo, Thrid'acè, Lettuce opium, resembles, in odour and appearance, that of opium, and is, like it, narcotic, but uncertain. Dose, gr. j to x, and more.

LACTUCA ELONGATA, see L. virosa—l. Graveolens, L. virosa—l. Floridana, Mulgedium Floridanum.

LACTUCA SCARI'OLA, L. Sylves'tris, Scariola, (F.) Laitue Scariole ou Sauvage, possesses a stronger degree of bitterness than L. sativa. It has similar virtues with Z. virosa.

LACTUCA SYLVESTRIS, L. scariola—l. Villosa, Mulgedium acuminatum.

LACTUCA VIRO'SA, L. grav'olens, Strong-scented Lettuce, (F.) Laitue vireuse. The odour of this plant, the leaves of which are used in medicine, is strongly narcotic, and the taste bitter. They are narcotic, diuretic, and aperient; and have been used in dropsies. Lactu'ca elonga'ta, Wild Lettuce of the United States, has been employed for L. virosa.

LACTUCARIUM, see Lactuca.

LACTUCIMEN, Aphthæ.

LACTUCIMINA, Aphthæ.

LACTUMEN, Porrigio larvalis.

LACTUMINA, Aphthæ.

LACU'NA, Canalic'ulus, diminutive of lacus, 'a lake or deep ditch.' A Fossa or Ditch. A small cavity in a mucous membrane, the parietes of which secrete a viscid humour. It is used synonymously with crypt. Also, the external opening of such cavity.

LACUNA, Crypta, Fontanella—l. Cerebri, Infundibulum of the brain, Pituitary gland.

LACUNA seu SULCUS seu SULCULUS LA'BII SUPERIO'RIS, Amab'itè, Amato'rium, Philtrum, Phile'trum. The hollow of the upper lip under the nose.

LACUNA MAGNA, see Urethra.

LACUNÆ, see Urethra.

LACUNÆ OF BONE. Certain dark stellate spots, with thread-like lines radiating from them, seen under a high magnifying power. These were at first believed to be solid osseous or bone corpuscles or cells, Corpus'cula os'sium, Corpuscles of Purkinje, (F.) Cellules des os ou osseuses, Corpuscules des os ou noirs ou ramifiés ou calcaires, Ostéoplastes; but are now regarded as excavations in the bone—Sac'culi chalicoph'ori—with minute tubes or canaliculi proceeding from them, and communicating with the Haversian canals. The lacunæ and canaliculi are fibres concentrated in the transit of nutrient fluid through the osseous tissue.

LACUNÆ GRAAFIA'NÆ, L. mucosæ vulvæ. The mucous follicles of the vagina.

LACUNÆ MUCOSÆ VULVÆ, L. Graafianæ—l. Palpebrarum, Meibomius, glands of.

LACU'NAR, La'quear, 'an arched roof.' The roof of a chamber. Hence, LACU'NAR OR'BITÆ. The roof of the orbit.

LACUNAR VENTRICULI QUARTI SUPERIOR, Valvula Viennensi.

LACUNE DE LA LANGUE, Cæcum foramen.

LACUS LACRYMALIS, Lachrymal sac.

LACUS LACRYMA'RUM. A small space in the inner angle of the eye between the lids, towards which the tears flow, and at which the triangular canal formed between the closed lids terminates.

LADA, Piper nigrum.

LADANUM, see Cistus creticus.

LADENDO, Influenza.

LÆDENS, pl. Lædentia, from lædo, 'to hurt.' Any thing hurtful or injurious, as to the economy.

LÆMOPARALYSIS, Œsophagoplegia.

LÆMOS, Pharynx.

LÆMOSCIR'RHUS, Cancer pharyng'is et œsoph'agi, Læmosteno'sis seu Dysph'agia scirrho'sa; from laipos, 'the pharynx or œsophagus.' Cancer of the pharynx or œsophagus.

LÆMOSTENOSIS, Dysphagia constricta—l. Scirrhusa, Læmoscirrhus.

LÆSIO, Lesion — l. Continui, see Continuity, solution of.

LÆTIFICAN'TIA, from lætifico (lætus, and facio). 'I make glad.' Medicines formerly used as cordials, in depression of spirits, &c.

LÆVIGATIO, Levigation.

LÆVITAS INTESTINORUM, Lientery.

LAGENTOMUM, Harelip.

LAGNEA, Coition, Satyriasis, Sperm.

LAGNEIA, Coition, Satyriasis, Sperm.

LAGNESIS, Furor Femininus, Nymphomania — l. Furor masculinus, Satyriasis — l. Salacitatis, Satyriasis.

LAGONES, Flanks.

LAGONOPONOS, Pleurodynia.

LAGONTOMUM, Harelip.

LAGOPHTHALMIA, from lagos, 'a hare,' and ὀφθαλμος, 'an eye.' Lagophthalmus, Leporinus oculus, Hare's Eye; (F.) Œil de Lièvre. A vicious arrangement of the upper eyelid, which is so retracted that it cannot cover the globe of the eye during sleep. It has been asserted that this condition of the eye is natural in the hare when asleep.

LAGOPHTHALMUS, Lagophthalmia, Geum urbanum.

LAGOSTOMA, Harelip.

LAG TEETH, Molar teeth.

LAICHE, Sarsaparilla Germanica — l. des Sables, Sarsaparilla Germanica.

LAIT RÉPANDU, (F.) L. épanché. A popular expression in France, under which is comprehended every kind of disease (and particularly vague pains) occurring after delivery; all being ascribed to diffusion or deposition of milk.

LAIT DE TERRE, Magnesiæ carbonas — l. de Vache, Milk of the cow — l. Virginal, Virgin's milk.

LAITEUX, Laetic.

LAITERON DOUX, Sonchus oleraceus.

LAITIAT, (F.) Sour whey, in which different wild fruits have been macerated. Said to be much used in the Jura as a refreshing drink.

LAITY, La'ici; from laos, 'the people.' Formerly, and generally at the present day, the people as distinguished from the clergy. Frequently, however, employed in the sense of the people as distinguished from those of the other learned professions. A layman is one of the laity.

LAKEWEED, Polygonum hydropiper.

LALIA, Voice, articulated.

LALLA'TION, Lalla'tio, Lambdacis'mus, Labdacis'mus, Lul'laby speech. Sauvages uses this term for a vicious pronunciation, in which the letter L is improperly doubled, or softened, or substituted for R.

LAMAC, Acaciæ gummi.

LAMBDAÇISMUS, Lallation.

LAMBDOID, Lambdoïd'al, Lamdoï'des, Lambdoï'des, Lambdoï'dens, from the Greek letter Δ, λαμβδα, and ειδος, 'shape,' 'resemblance.' Anatomists have given the name LAMBDOIDAL STURE, Sutura Lambdoïd'al'is seu lambdoï'des seu lamb- doï'dea seu Proræ, to the suture, formed by the parietal bones and the occipital, because it resembles the letter Δ, lambda, of the Greeks. It is the Occipito-parietal suture, Suture occipitale, (Ch.) In this suture, the ossa Wormiana are most frequently met with; and the denticulations are most distinctly marked.

LAMBEAU, Flap.

LAMBITIVUM, Eclectos.

LAMBKILL, Kalmia latifolia.

LAMBKILLER, Andromeda mariana.

LAME, Lamina — l. Cornée, Tænia semicircularis — l. Ruysschienne, Ruysehiana tunica.

LAMELLA, Lamina — l. Piana, Planum os.

LAMELLAR, Lamello'sus, Lam'inated, (F.) Lamelleux, Lamineux, composed of thin laminæ or leaves — as the Lamellar or laminated tissue; i. e. the arcolar tissue.

LAMELLEUX, Lamellar.

LAMENESS, Claudication.

LAMIER, Lanium album.

LAMINA, Lamel'la, (F.) Lame. A thin, flat part of a bone, a plate or table, as the cribriform lamina or plate of the ethmoid bone. Lamina and Lamella are generally used synonymously; although the latter is properly a diminutive of the former.

LAMINA CILIARIS, Ciliary zone.

LAMINA CINER'EA. A thin layer of gray substance, which forms the anterior part of the inferior boundary of the third ventricle of the brain.

LAMINA COR'NEA, Tænia Tari'ni. A yellowish band or a thickening of the lining membrane of the ventricle, by which the vena corporis striati is overlaid in the lateral ventricle of the brain.

LAMINA PERITONÆI EXTERNA. The outer lamina or fold of the peritonæum.

LAMINA PRIMA CUTIS, Epidermis.

LAMINA SPIR'ALIS, Septum scalæ seu coch'leæ auditivæ. A partition between the scalæ of the cochlea. The largest part of this, next the modiolus, is formed of bone. The remainder, or that part next the opposite side of the scalæ, is composed of a cartilaginous membrane, called, by Valsalva, Zona seu Zo'nula Coch'leæ. By some anatomists, the lamina is divided into a Zona os'sea and Z. mollis. By others, it is considered to consist of four laminae, when examined with a strong glass: a Zona os'sea, next to the modiolus — a Zona cori'acea, on the outer side of this: a Zona vesicul'aris — and a Zona membrana'cea, which is, perhaps, the lining membrane of the cochlea. At the apex of the cochlea, the lamina spiralis terminates by a pointed hook-shaped process, ham'ulus lam'inæ spir'al'is.

LAMINA OF A VERTEBRA, see Vertebra.

LAMINÆ DORSAL'ES, Dorsal laminae. Two oval masses on each side of the primitive groove of the embryo, which approach so as to form a groove, in which are lodged the future brain and spinal marrow.

LAMINÆ SPONGIOSÆ NASI, Turbinated bones.

LAMINÆ VENTRA'LES, L. viscera'les. Thickened prolongations of the serous layer of the germinal membrane, which, by their union, form the anterior wall of the trunk of the new being.

LAMINARIA DIGITATA, Tangle. One of the Algæ eaten in Scotland, and hawked about the streets with the Pepper-dulse.

The leaf of a sea-weed — a species of Laminaria — is employed in the Himalayas under the name of goitre leaf; so called because chewed by the inhabitants, where goitre prevails.

LAMINATED, Lamellar.

LAMINEUX, Lamellar.

LA'MIUM ALBUM, L. foliosum, Urtica mor-tua, Galeopsis Archangelica, Dead or White Archangel Nettle, (F.) Ortie blanche ou morte, (S.) Daynettle, Lamier. Ord. Labiatae. Infusions of this plant have been recommended in uterine hemorrhage, and leucorrhœa. It is not used.

LA'MIUM AMPLEXICAULÈ, Dead Nettle, Henbit; naturalized; flowering from May to October; is regarded as tonic, diaphoretic, and laxative.

LAMOTTE, MINERAL WATERS OF. These thermal springs are in the department of Isère, France. Temperature, 184°.

LAMPOURDE, Xanthium.

LAMPROPHONUS, from λαμπος, 'clear,' and φωνη, 'voice.' One who has a clear voice.

LAMPASANA, Lapsana.

LAMPYRIS NOCTILUCA, Cicindela.

LANA PHILOSOPHORUM, Zinci oxydum.

LANARIA, Saponaria, Verbascum nigrum.

LANCE DE MAURICEAU, (F.) An instrument invented by Mauriceau for perforating the head of the fetus. A perforator.

LANCELET, Lancet.

LANCEOLA, Lancet.

LANCEOL, Lance'ola, Lancet'ta, Schaste'rion, Scalpm chirurgicum, Lancet'let, (Prov.) Fame, (F.) Lancette,—diminutive of lancea, 'a lance.'

A surgical instrument, used in the operation of phlebotomy. It is composed of two parts, the handle, (F.) Chasse, and the blade, (F.) Lame. The former is made of two small plates of ivory, bone, or shell, movable on the blade for whose preservation they are intended. The blade is formed of well-polished steel. Lancets are made of different shapes; some being broad-shouldered—others, spear-pointed. The French distinguished three kinds: 1. Lancette à grain d'orge, which, on account of the almost oval shape of its point, makes a large opening. 2. The L. à langue de serpent, which is very narrow towards the point; and, 3. L. à grain d'avoine, which holds a medium station between the two former, and is generally preferred.

The Abscess Lancet is merely a large lancet for the purpose of opening abscesses.

The employment of a lancet, for opening abscesses, &c., is called Lancing.

LANCETTA, Lancet.

LANCETTE, Lancet.

LANCETIER, (F.) A lancet-case.

LANCINANT, Lancinating.

LANCINATING, Lan'cinans, from lancinare, lancinatum (lancea, 'a lance,') 'to strike or thrust through.' (F.) Lancinant, (substantive, Élancement.) A species of pain, which consists in lancinations or shootings, similar to those that would be produced by the introduction of a sharp instrument into the suffering part. It is especially in cancer that this kind of pain is felt.

LANCING, see Lancet—l. the Gums, Dé-chaussement.

LAND'S END, CLIMATE OF. The climate of the Land's End, in England, resembles that of the south of Devonshire, but is more relaxing. It is considered to be most likely to prove beneficial in consumptive cases, in which the disease is accompanied by an irritated state of the pulmonary mucous membrane, producing a dry cough. Where the system is relaxed, and the secretion from the lungs considerable, the climate, it is conceived, will generally prove injurious.

As a brumal retreat, the southern coast of Devonshire would seem to be preferable to it.

LANGÉAC, MINERAL WATERS OF. Acidulous, mineral waters at Langeac, in the department of Haute-Loire, France. They are employed as refrigerant, aperient, and diuretic. They contain carbonic acid, carbonates of soda and magnesia, and a little iron.

LANGDEBEF, Anehusa officinalis.

LANGENSCHWALBACH, Schwalbach.

LANGII AQUA EPILEPTICA, Epileptic Water of Langius, formerly employed against epilepsy. It was composed of the flowers of convallaria and lavender, Spanish wine, cinnamon, nutmeg, mistletoe, peony and dittany roots, long pepper, cubeb, and rosemary flowers.

LANGUEUR, Languor.

LANGUOR, Aph'esis, Faintness, (F.) Languor. A species of atony, depression, or debility, which generally comes on slowly.

LANGWORT, Veratrum album.

LANGK, Inguen.

LANTANA, Sage Tree, Blueberry, (F.) Cail-leau. The leaves of this indigenous plant form a fine-scented tea, like L. Camara or Bahama Tea, and L. Pseudoth'ea or Brazil Tea. The tea is used as a diaphoretic.

LANUGO, Pili cutis, Pluma, from lana, 'wool.' The soft, fine hair on different parts of the body, especially of the young.

LANUGO PRIMA, Genies—l. Pudendorum, Pubes—l. Siliquæ hirsutæ, see Dolichos pruriens.

LANUVIUM, Hivra.

LAÏONICA CURATIO seu CURA, from λαος, 'the people.' A popular mode of treating the gout in the middle ages, which consisted in the employment of local applications, proper for evacuating the morbid matter. [?]

LAOS, Tin.

LAPACTICUS, Cathartic, Laxative.

LAPARA, Abdomen, Flanks, Lumbi.

LAPARENTOTOMIA, Laparo enterotomy.

LAPAROCÈLÈ, from λαπαρα, 'the lumbar region,' and κηλη, 'rupture,' Lumbar Hernia, through a separation of the fibres of the quadratus lumborum, and a protrusion of the aponeurosis of the transverse muscle on the outside of the mass common to the sacro-lumbalis and longissimus dorsi.—Cloquet.

LAPAROCYSTOTOMIA, see Lithotomy.

LAPARO-ELYTROTOMIA, Cæsarean section.

LAPARO-ENTEROTOMY, Lap'aro-enterotom'ia, Laparenterotom'ia, from λαπαρα, 'the lumbar region,' the 'abdomen,' εντερον, 'intestine,' and τομη, 'incision.' The operation of opening the abdomen and intestinal canal, for the removal of disease.

LAPAROSCOPIA, Abdominoscopia.

LAPAROTOMY, Gastrotomy, especially when executed in the lumbar region. See Gastrotomy.

LAPATHOS, Rumex acutus—l. Aquaticum, Rumex hydrolapathum—l. Chinense, Rheum—l. Orientale, Rheum—l. Sanguineum, Rumex sanguineus—l. Unctuosum, Chenopodium bonus Henriens.

LAPAXIS, Evacuation.

LAPE, Mucus.

LAPIDILLUM, from lapis, 'a stone.' Blasius has given this name to a kind of secoop, used for extracting stone from the bladder.

LAPILLATIO, Lithia.

LAPILLI GLANDULÆ PINEALIS, see Pineal gland.

LAPILLUS, diminutive of lapis, 'a stone.' A small stone; gravel; a grain of sand.

LAPIS, Calculus—l. Accipitrum, Hieracites—l. Aerosus, Calamina—l. Ammoniæ, see Ammoniac gum—l. Animalis, Blood—l. Armenius, Melochites—l. Aureus, Urine—l. Bezoardicus, Bezoar—l. Cæruleus, Cupri sulphas—l. Calaminaris, Calamina—l. Carneolus, Cornelian—l. Causticus, Potassa cum calce, Potassa fusa—l. Collymus, Ætites—l. Contrayervæ, Pulvis contrayervæ compositus—l. Cyanus, l. lazuli.

LAPIS DIVINUS, L. Ophthalmicus seu Ophthalmicus Sti. Ivesii. Coprum alumina'tum, (F.) Pierre divine, (Cupri sulphat, Alumin., Potass. nitrat. ãã ʒj. Melt together, adding at the end Camphor. ʒjss.) Employed to make an eye-water, ʒij ad aquæ ʒiv.

LAPIS FULMINEUS, Cerannon—l. Hematites, Hæmatites—l. Heracleus, Magnet—l. Infernalis, Argenti nitras—l. Infernalis alkalinus, Potassa fusa—l. Infernalis sive septicus, Potassa cum calce—l. Judaicus, Judæus (lapis).

LAPIS LAZULI, L. Cyanus, Asulei, Laz'ulite, (F.) Pierre d'azur, Outremer. A stone, of a beautiful blue colour; opaque; and close-grained; fracture, dull. It is composed of silic; alumina; carbonate and sulphate of lime; oxide of iron, and water. It was formerly looked upon as a purgative and emetic, and given in epilepsy.

LAPIS MALUCENSIS, Bezoard of the Indian porcupine—l. Nauticus, Magnet—l. Ophthalmicus, L. Divinus—l. Ophthalmicus St. Ivesii, L. Divinus—l. Phœnicites, Judæus (lapis)—l. Porcinus, Bezoard of the Indian porcupine—l. Prunellæ, Potassæ nitras fusus sulphatis paucillo mixtus—l. Sardinus, Cornelian—l. Septicus, Causticum commune, Potassa fusa—l. Specularis, S. lucidum—l. Syderitis, Magnet—l. Syriacus, Judæus (lapis)—l. Vini, Potassæ supertartas impurus.

LAPPA, Arctium lappa, Galium aparine, Lip-pitudo—l. Minor, Xanthium.

LAPPULA HEPATICA, Agrimony.

LAP'SANA, Lamp'sana, Na'pium, Papilla'ris herba, Dock-creases, Nipple-Wort, (Sc.) Bolgan leaves, (F.) Lampane, Herbe aux Manelles. This plant is a lactescent bitter. It has been chiefly employed, however, as an external application to sore nipples, &c.

LAPSUS PILORUM, Alopecia.

LAQ, Laqueus.

LAQUE, Lacca.

LAQUEAR, Lacunar.

LA'QUEAR VAGINÆ, Fundus Vaginæ (laquear, 'the inward roof of a house'). The part of the vagina in which the cervix uteri terminates.

LA'QUEUS, Funis. A cord, ligature or bandage, with running knots;—a Noose, a loop. A fillet, Brochos, Pach'etos, (F.) Lac, Laq ou Lacq. The term is applied to a bandage or fillet of any kind, attached by means of a loop upon any part, with the view of fixing it; as in certain cases of labour, where a hand or foot presents; or to facilitate extension in luxations and fractures.

Also:—A prominent band in the brain, Lemniscus, behind the brachium posterius of the corpora quadrigemina, which marks the course of the superior division of the fasciculus olivaris.

LAQUEUS GUTTURIS, 'Noose of the throat.' Violent inflammation of the tonsils, in which the patient appears as if suffocated by a noose. According to some, gangrenous cyanache.

LARCH, Pinus larix.

LARD, Adeps.

LARDACÉ, Lardaceous.

LARDA'CEOUS, Larda'ceus, Lar'deus, Lard'iform, Lardifor'mis, (F.) Lardacé; from lardum, 'lard,' the fat of bacon. An epithet given to certain organic alterations in the textures, whose aspect and consistence resemble lard. (F.) Tissus lardacés. They constitute what has been termed the Larda'ceous or Chol'esterine Disease. From their waxy appearance the pathological condition has been called Cero'ma.

LARDEUS, Lardaceous.

LARDIFORM, Lardaceous.

LARDUM, Adeps.

LARGE, Broad.

LARIDUM, Adeps.

LARKSPUR, BRANCHING, Delphinium consolida.

LARME, Tear.

LARMOIEMENT, Epiphora.

LAROCHE POSAY, MINERAL WATERS OF. Simple sulphurous waters in the department of Vienne, France.

LAR'REA MEXICANA, L. glutinosum, Cree'asote plant. Order, Zygophyllaceæ. A shrub, growing in Arkansas, Southern Texas, New Mexico, and Northern Mexico, which abounds in a strong-scented resinous matter; and is used, externally and internally, in rheumatism, and in syphilitic, and other pains.

LARVA, Mask. Also the larve, grub, or vermiform condition of an insect: the first change it experiences after leaving the ovum. Larves of insects are occasionally developed in the intestinal canal from ova swallowed. See Ectozaa.

LARVE, Mask.

LARVÉ, Masked.

LARYNGÉ, Laryngeal.

LARYNGE'AL, Larynge'us, (F.) Laryngé, Laryngien. Same etymon as Larynx. That which belongs to the larynx.

LARYNGEAL ARTERIES are given off from the thyroid arteries.

LARYNGEAL NERVES, (F.) Nerfs Laryngés, are two in number;—a superior and an inferior. The superior laryngeal nerve is given off from the trunk of the pneumogastric, at the upper and deep part of the neck. It passes downwards and inwards, behind the internal carotid artery, and divides into two secondary branches; the one, external, which distributes its filaments, on the outside of the larynx, to the sterno-thyroid, hyo-thyroid, constrictor inferior, crico-thyroid muscles, &c. The other, the internal, which crosses the thyro-hyoid membrane, and gives filaments to the epiglottis, the mucous membranes of the pharynx and larynx, to the arytenoid gland, the arytenoid and crico-thyroid muscles, and ultimately anastomoses with the inferior laryngeal nerve. The inferior laryngeal nerves or recur'rents, Nervi reversi'vi, Rameaux Trachéaux (Chaus.) arise from the trunk of the pneumogastric within the thorax. They ascend in the furrow, which separates the trachea from the œsophagus, to be distributed on the neck, after having been reflected;—the left around the arch of the aorta; the right, around the corresponding subclavian. They send off filaments to the cardiac plexuses; to the parietes of the œsophagus, and trachea; to the thyroid gland; to the inferior constrictor of the pharynx; the posterior and lateral crico-arytenoid and thyro-arytenoid muscles; and to the mucous membrane of the pharynx and larynx.

LARYNGEAL PHTHISIS, Phtthisis, laryngeal.

LARYNGEAL POUCHES. Small culs-de-sac, which lead from the anterior part of each ventricle of the larynx upwards, for the space of half an inch, between the superior ligaments on the inner side, and the thyroid cartilage on the outer, reaching as high as the upper border of that cartilage at the sides of the epiglottis. Numerous small glands open into them.

LARYNGEAL SOUND, Laryngeche.

LARYNGEAL VEINS open into the internal jugular. Winslow gives the name laryngeal to the superior thyroid artery.

LARYNGEAL VOICE, see Voice.

LARYNGE'CHE, from larynx, and ηχη, or ηχος, 'sound.' The laryngeal sound heard by the stethoscope during breathing and speaking.

LARYNGEMPHRAX'IS, from larynx, and μπαράξις, 'obstruction.' Obstruction of the larynx from any cause.

LARYNGIEN, Laryngeal.

LARYNGISM'US, from larynx. Spasm of glottis, giving occasion to contraction or closure of the opening.

LARYNGISMUS STRIDULUS, Asthma thymicum.

LARYNGI'TIS, from larynx, and itis, a suffix denoting inflammation; Inflammat'io Laryng'is, Cynanchē seu Angi'na larynge'a, (F.) Laryngite, Catarrhe laryngien, Angine laryngé, Inflammation of the Larynx. This disease, in some measure, resembles croup; but is usually devoid of that peculiar sonorous inspiration, which attends the latter. There is, also, pain upon pressing the larynx; and, whilst laryngitis is a disease of more advanced life, croup attacks children. The membraniform exudation is, also, absent; probably, because the inflammation, being seated above the glottis, the coagulable lymph is readily expectorated. It requires the most active treatment.

Simple Laryngitis is called by some mucoſa Laryngitis, Laryngitis acuta seu muco'sa acuta, (F.) Laryngite muqueuse, to distinguish it from submucoſa Laryngitis or Œdema of the glottis.

Chronic Laryngitis is generally regarded as synonymous with laryngeal phthisis; but it may exist independently.

LARYNGOCACE, Cynanche trachealis.

LARYNGO-CATAR'RHUS, Catarrhus Laryngis et tracheal'is. Catarrh affecting the larynx and trachea more especially, as indicated by alteration of the voice—hoarseness—itching and sensation of burning in those parts; short cough and expectoration, &c.

LARYNGO-ET-TRACHEO-PHTHISIS, Phthisis laryngea.

LARYNGO'GRAPHY, Laryngogra'phia; from larynx, and γραφη, 'a description.' An anatomical description of the larynx.

LARYNGOL'OGY, from larynx, and λογος, 'treatise.' A treatise on the larynx.

LARYNGOPARALYSIS, see Aphonia.

LARYNGOPH'ONY, Laryngopho'nia, Tracheoph'ony, Larynge'al voice, Tracheal voice; from larynx, and φωνη, 'voice.' The sound heard in health, when the stethoscope is placed over the larynx or trachea at the time a person speaks. The voice appears to pass immediately up to the ear of the auscultator. A similar physical sign exists when there is a cavity in the lungs, and the instrument is placed over it whilst the patient speaks. See Pectoriloquy.

LARYNGOPHTHISIS, Phthisis laryngea.

LARYNGOSPASMUS, Asthma thymicum.

LARYNGOSTASIS, Cynanche trachealis.

LARYNGOSTENO'SIS, from larynx, and στενωσις, 'contraction.' Contraction or narrowness of the larynx.

LARYNGOT'OMY, Laryngotom'ia, from larynx, and τεμνειν, 'to cut.' A surgical operation, which consists in opening the larynx, either to extract a foreign body, or to remedy an obstruction of the glottis. The operation is, sometimes, erroneously called Bronchotomy, and Trachetomy.

LARYNGO-TRACHEITIS, Cynanche trachealis—l. Tracheitis with Diphtheritic exudation, Cynanche trachealis.

LARYNX, (gen. Laryng'is), λαρυγγίς, λαρυγγος, Caput seu Oper'culum seu Init'ium seu Finit'is superior seu Ter'minus superior seu Pars prima as'peræ arte'riæ. The apparatus of voice is situate at the superior and anterior part of the neck; and at the top of the trachea, with which it communicates. It is composed of four cartilages,—the thyroid, cricoid, and two arytenoid; is moved by a number of muscles, and lined by a mucous membrane, having certain membranous reflections, constituting the superior ligaments of the glottis, &c.

PARTS COMPOSING THE LARYNX.

The vessels and nerves of the larynx are called Laryngeal.

The larynx is destined to give passage to the air, in the act of respiration, and to impress upon it certain modifications, which constitute voice. Its dimensions vary in different individuals. In men, it is always larger, and situate lower, than in women.

LARYNX, PELLICULAR or PLASTIC INFLAMMATION OF THE, Cynanche trachealis.

LAS'ANUM, Sella familiar'ica, (F.) Chaise perçée. A close stool.

LASCIVIA, Satyriasis.

LASCIVITAS, Satyriasis.

LASCIVUS, Libidinous.

LASER, Laserpitium — l. à larges feuilles, Laserpitium latifolium.

LASERPIT'IUM, Laser, Sil'phium, σπος αλ-φισιον. A term applied, anciently, both to a plant and its juice, regarding the nature of neither of which we possess any precise information. Bentley, Laurence, Geoffroi, &c., regard it to have been the same as asafetida: — Theophrastus, Dioscorides, and the ancient scholiast of Aristophanes, however, by assigning a sweet and agreeable flavour to the laserpitium, discountenance the idea. From whatever plant obtained, it was so rare, and consequently so costly, that the Romans deposited it in the public treasury. It was obtained from Cyrene — Succus Cyrena'icus — and likewise from Persia — the latter being the most valuable. The Laserpitium is called by Avicenna, Althit.

LASERPITIMUM ASPERUM, L. latifolium.

LASERPITIMUM LATIFOLIUM, L. as'perum, Gentiana alba, White Gentian, Cervaria alba; (F.) Laser à larges feuilles. The root of this plant is bitter and tonic.

LASERPITIMUM MONTANUM, L. siler.

LASERPITIMUM SILER, L. trifolia'tum seu montanum, Ses'eli, Seselis, Siler montanum seu lancifolium, Heart-wort, Sermountain. The seeds and roots are possessed of aromatic properties.

LASERPITIMUM TRIFOLIATUM, L. siler.

LASSITUDE OCULAIRE, Coryopia.

LASSITUDO, Copos.

LAST, Inguen.

LATENS IN ORE, Pterygoideus internus.

LATENT, Latens, from latere, 'to lie hid.' 'Lying hid,' 'concealed.' An epithet applied to certain diseases or states of disease, in which the symptoms are so concealed and obscure, morbi occulti, as to escape the observation of the physician. Thus, we say latent inflammation, latent period of small-pox.

LATERAD, from latus, lateris, 'the side.' A term used adverbially by Dr. Barclay to signify 'towards the lateral aspect.'

LATERAL ASPECT, see Mesial.

LATERIT'IOUS, Laterit'ius, Laterie'ius, (F.) Briqueté, from later, lateris, 'a brick.' An epithet applied to the brick-like sediment, occasionally deposited in the urine of people afflicted with fever; Sedimentum urinae laterie'ium; — (F.) Urine briqueté.

LATEROFLEX'ION, Lat'ero'flex'io. A bending to one side, — as of the uterus.

LATÉRO-VERSION, Lat'ero-ver'sio. A turning or version to one side, — as of the uterus.

LATESCENTIS CHORDÆ (Musculus), Palmaris longus.

LATEX NIVEUS, Milk.

LATHYRIS, Euphorbia lathyris.

LATIB'ULUM, from lateo, 'I lie hid.' The foyer of a febrile poison; whence it spreads to every part to induce a paroxysm. See Clapier.

LAT'ICA. Same etymon. Amphimer'ina lat'ica of Sauvages. A species of quotidian remittent, whose paroxysms are very long, and which is accompanied with latent or slightly developed fever, whence its name.

LATICES LACTEI, Receptaculum chyli.

LATISSIMUS COLLI, Platysma myoides.

LATIS'SIMUS DORSI, (superlative of latus, 'broad.') Aniscap'lor, Brachium movens quartus, (F.) Lombo-huméral (Ch.), Dorsi-lombo-sacro-huméral, Muscle grand dorsal, M. très large du dos. A flat muscle; broad, especially below; thin; quadrilateral; and situate at the posterior, lateral, and inferior region of the trunk. It is attached to the posterior half of the outer lip of the crest of the ilium; to the posterior surface of the sacrum; to the spinous processes of the six or seven last dorsal vertebrae, to all those of the loins, and to the last four false ribs, and is inserted by a strong tendon at the posterior edge of the bicipital groove of the humerus. Its upper fibres are almost horizontal; the middle very long and oblique upwards and outwards; and the anterior almost vertical. This muscle carries the arm backwards, depressing it, and making it turn on its axis. It also draws backwards and downwards the prominence of the shoulder. When, suspended by an arm, we make an effort to raise ourselves, it draws the trunk towards the arm. It can, also, raise the ribs by assuming its fixed point on the humerus, and become an inspiratory muscle.

LATTUDO HUMERI, Scapula.

LATTICE WORK, Cancelli.

LATUS, Broad — l. Ani, Levator ani.

LAU, see Spirit.

LAUCA'NIA, Leuca'nia, Lau'chanz. The fauces and œsophagus. Also, the chin. — Goræus.

LAUCHANE, Laucania.

LAUD'ANUM or LAUDA'NUM. Perhaps, from laus, laudis, 'praise;' laudat'um, 'praised.' Every preparation of opium, solid or liquid, but more particularly the extract and tincture, and especially the latter.

LAUDANUM ABBATIS ROUSSEAU, Guttæ Abbatis Rousseau, Vinum opiat'um fermentatio'nè parat'um, Abbe Rousseau's Drops. (Mel. Narbonnens., §xij; agua calida, Oij. Set in a warm place, and, as soon as the mixture ferments, add opium, §iv, dissolved in water, f§xij. Let it ferment for a month, and evaporate to f§x: strain, and add rectified spirit of wine, f§ivss.

LAUDANUM, FORD'S, Vinum opii — l. Liquid, Tinctura opii — l. Liquidum Hoffmanni, Vinum opii — l. Liquidum Sydenhami, Vinum opii — l. Opiatum, Extractum opii — l. Simplex, Extractum opii — l. Sydenham's, Vinum opii.

Rose*, Nerium oleander — l. de Trébisonde, Prunus lauro-cerasus.

LAURO-CERASUS, Prunus lauro-cerasus.

LAUROSE, Nerium oleander.

LAURUS, Laurus nobilis, Daphne, Sweet Bay. Nat. Ord. Lauraceæ. (F.) Laurier, L. noble ou des cuisines ou commun ou d'Apollon. The leaves and berries, Laurus (Ph. L.), have a sweet, fragrant smell, and an aromatic, astringent taste. Sweet bay has been advised as a stomachic and carminative, but is now rarely used. It is, sometimes, employed as a fomentation and in gylsters; and the berries are an ingredient in the Emplastrum Cuminii.

LAURUS ÆSTIVALIS, L. benzoin—L. Alexandrina angustifolia, Ruscus hypoglossum.

LAURUS BENZOÏN, Benzoin odoriferum, Laurus Pseudo-benzoin seu æstivalis, Spice wood, Spice bush, Benjamin bush, Allspice bush, Wild allspice, Spice berry, Fever wood, Fever bush. An indigenous shrub, growing in moist, shady places, in all parts of the United States; flowering early in spring. All parts of the shrub have a spicy, agreeable flavour, which is strongest in the bark and berries. An infusion or decoction of the small branches is used in popular practice as a vermifuge, and an agreeable drink in low fevers. The bark has been used in intermittents; the berries, dried and powdered, for allspice. The oil of the berries is used as an excitant.

LAURUS CAMPHORA, see Camphor—L. Canella, L. Cassia.

LAURUS CAS'IA, L. Canella, Persea cassia. The species of Laurus which yields the Ca'sia, Cas'sia, Canella, Cassia lignea seu cinnamo'mea, C. lignea Malabarica, Cortex Canella Malabarica, Cortex cras'sior, Xylo-cassia, Canella Malabarica et Javen'sis, C. Cuba'na, Arbor Juda'ica, Canellifera Malabarica, Cinnamo'mum Malobaricum seu Indicum seu Sinen'se, Calihac'ha canella, Wild Cinnamon, Malabar Cinnamon, Cassia, (F.) Cannelle de Malabar ou de Java ou de la Chine ou des Indes ou de Coromandel, C. fausse, C. matte, Cassa en bois ou aromatique. The bark and leaves abound with the flavour of cinnamon, for which they may be substituted; but they are much weaker. The unopened flower-buds are used in the same manner. AQUA CASSIA, Water of Cassia, prepared by distillation, is official in the Edinburgh Pharmacopœia.

LAURUS CINNAMOMOIDES, Nectandra cinnamomoides.

LAURUS CINNAMOMUM, Persea cinnamo'mum, Cinnamo'mum, C. Zeylanicum, Darseni, Darsi'ni, Cinnamon, Xylo-cinnamomum, Curdo Canella, (Sc.) Cannel, (F.) Cannelle, Baume de Cannelle, Cannelle officinale ou de Ceylon. Cinnamon bark, which is obtained, also, from the Cinnamo'mum aromati'cum, is stimulant and carminative, and is employed, chiefly, as a grateful aromatic, to cover the taste of nauseous remedies. Dose, gr. x to ʒj. The flowers, called Cassia Flores in the shops, possess aromatic and astringent virtues, and may be used wherever cinnamon is required. The volatile oil of the bark—O'leum Cinnamo'mi—Oil of Cinnamon, is official in the Pharm. U. S.

LAURUS CUBEBA, Piper cubeba—L. Culilaban, L. Culilawan.

LAURUS CULILAWAN, L. Culilaban seu Caryophyllus, Cinnamo'mum Culilaban. The tree that affords the Cortex Culilawan seu Culilaban, Culilawan, Culilawan, Cortex caryophyllioides seu Caryophyllioides Amboinensis. This bark resembles the sassafras in appearance and properties, and is used in Java as a condiment.

LAURUS SAS'SAFRAS, Persea sas'safra, Sassafras, Cornus mas odorata, Anhuiba, Ague-free, Ague-tree, (F.) Pavane. Indigenous in the United States. Sassafras wood and root, and especially the bark of the root, Sassafras Radicis Cortex (Ph. U. S.), have been considered stimulant, sudorific, and diuretic. The virtues depend upon essential oil, Oleum Sassafras, the odour of which is not unlike that of fennel. It has been used in cutaneous diseases, chronic rheumatism, &c.

The pith of the stems, Sassafras medulla (Ph. U. S.), abounds in gummy matter, which it readily imparts to water, forming a limpid mucilage, which is much employed as a collyrium in ophthalmia, and as a drink in dysentery, catarrh, &c. (one drachm of the pith to a pint of boiling water).

LAUTIS'SIMA VINA. (Superlative of latus, 'elegant.') Wines were formerly so called, which were strongly impregnated with myrrh.

LAVAMENTUM, Clyster, Enema.

LAVANDE, Lavandula—L. de Mer, Staticæ limonium—L. Triste, Staticæ limonium.

LAVANDULA, Lavandula, from lavo, 'I wash'; so called from being used in baths. Lavandula spica (Linnæus) seu angustifolia seu officinalis seu vera, Common Lavender, (F.) Lavande. Ord. Labiate. The odour of lavender flowers, Lavandula (Ph. U. S.), is fragrant and agreeable; taste warm and bitterish—depending upon an essential oil. It has been used as a stimulant; particularly in the form of the oil,—O'leum lavandulae. The dried leaves have been employed as an errhine.

The French use, also, LAVANDULA STÆCHAS, Stæchas et Stichus Arabica, French Lavender, of which they have a compound syrup, Syrupus de stæchadæ compos'itus: given as a pectoral.

LAVANDULA LATIFOLIA, Lavandula.

LAVANDULA SPICA (Linnæus), L. Latifolia Spica, French Lavender, (F.) Lavande, Aspic, Spic, yields the Oil of Spike, O'leum spicæ, (F.) Huile d'Aspic ou de Spic, which is used to make varnishes, and as a liniment in paralysis.

LAWSONIA INERMIS, L. alba, Alean'a vera seu Orientalis, Cyppe'rus antiquorum, Ligustrum Egyptiacum, Smooth Lawsonia, (F.) Henné, Alhauve. An East Indian and African plant, the root of which is slightly astringent.

In India, the root of the Lawsonia spinosa is employed in lepra and other cutaneous affections.

LAX. Diarrhoea.

LAXANS, Laxative, Relaxant.

LAXATIVE, Laxativus, Laxans, Le'niens, from laxare, laxatum, 'to loosen'; Minorativus, Solutivus, Alviducus, Hypochoreticus, Hypagogus, Hypellatus, Hypocatharticus, Lapacticus. A medicine which gently opens the bowels; such as tamarinds, manna, &c.

LAXATIVUS INDICUS, Cambogia.

LAXATOR AURIS INTERNUS, L. tympani.

LAXATOR TYMPANI, L. major tympani, Ecternus seu Anterior mall'ei, Obliquus seu Externus auris, Laxator auris inter'nus, Eustachii musculus, (F.) Antérieur du marteau, Acoustico-malléen, Sphéno-salpingo-mallien. A muscle which arises from the spine of the sphenoid bone and from the cartilage of the Eustachian tube, and is inserted, by a tendon, into the apophysis of Rau. It relaxes the membrana tympani.

LAXATOR TYMPANI MINOR. A very small muscle which extends from the upper part of the external auditory canal, and is inserted at the inferior part of the process of the handle of the malleus. Its existence is denied by most anatomists.

LAX'ITY, Lax'itas, Lazness. Same etymon. Condition of a tissue when loose or relaxed; or of one which wants tone. We say laxity of fibre, laxity of skin, to express that those parts have lost some of the tenseness proper to them.

LECONTIA VIRGINICA, Peltandra Vir-ginica.

LECTISTERNIUM, from lectus, 'a bed,' and sternere, 'to spread.' The arrangement of a bed so as to adapt it to a particular disease. Also, a supplication, with the Romans, in times of public danger, when beds or couches were spread for the gods, as if they were about to feast, and their images were taken down from their pedestals and placed upon these couches around the altars. The lectisternium was first introduced in the time of a pestilence.—Livy.

LECTUAL'IS, from lectus, 'a bed.' An epithet applied to a protracted disease.

LECTULUS MEDICATUS, see Fomentation—l. Stramineus, Fænon.

LEDE SAUVAGE, Ledum sylvestire.

LEDOYEN'S DISINFECTING LIQUID or FLUID. A solution of nitrate of lead, (Plumb. nitrat. ʒj ad aquæ fʒj) used as an antiseptic and antibiotic.

LEDUM LATIFOLIUM, Labrador' Tea, Ord. Ericaceæ, grows in damp places, in Canada and the United States. The leaves have a pleasant odour and taste, and have been used as tea. They have also been esteemed pectoral and tonic.

LEDUM PALUS'TRE, Rosmar'inus seu Anthos sylv'es'tris, Marsh Tea, (F.) Lède ou Rosmarin sauvage, Olivier de Bohême. Nat. Ord. Ericinæ. Sex. Syst. Decandria Monogynia. This plant has a bitter, subastringent taste, and was formerly used in Switzerland in place of hops: the virtues are equivocal. The leaves are chewed by the Cree Indians, and applied to burns, which are said to heal rapidly under their influence. The cake of chewed leaves is left adhering to the sore until it falls off.—Sir J. Richardson.

LENTISCUS VULGARIS, Pistacia lentiscus.

LENTITIA, Lentor.

LENTITIS, Phacitis.

LENTITUDO, Lentor.

LENTOR, Leniti'ia, Lenitu'do, from lentus, 'clammy.' A viscosity or sizziness of any fluid. See Gluten.

LENT ROSE, Narcissus pseudonarcissus.

LENUM. Torcular Herophili.

LEONOTIS LEONURUS. Ord. Labiatæ, A South African plant, which has a peculiar smell and nauseous taste, and is said to produce narcotic effects if incautiously used. It is employed in decoction in chronic cutaneous diseases. The Hottentots smoke it like tobacco, and take a decoction of its leaves as a strong cathartic. It is also given as an emenagogue. In the eastern districts of the Cape Colony, Leonotis ovala, (Prov.) Crouparsnep, Male, is used for the same purpose.

LEONOTIS OVATA, see Leonotis leonurus.

LEONTIASIS, Leont'ion, from λεων, λεωντος, 'a lion.' A name given to lepra of the face, from some fancied resemblance between the countenance of those labouring under it and that of the lion. To this kind of lepra the epithets le'onine and le'ontine have been given.

LEONTICE THALICTROIDES, Caulophyllum thalictroides.

LEONTION, Leontiasis.

LEONTODON TARAX'ACUM, L. officina'le seu vulga're, Tarax'acum officina'le, Dens Leo'nis, Hedyp'nois tarax'acum, Urina'ria, Caput Mon'achi, Dan'delion, Piss-a-bed, (Prov.) Shitabed, Puffball, (Sc.) Dentilium, (F.) Pissenlit, Liondent, Dent de lion, Couronne de Moine, from λεων, λεωντος, 'a lion,' and οδοντος, 'a tooth.' Order, Compositæ. The young leaves are sometimes eaten as salad. The roots are, also, roasted and used as a substitute for coffee. The root, Tarax'acum, (Ph. U. S.) is, moreover, reputed to be aperient and diuretic; hence its vulgar names. Its efficacy is doubtful.

LEONTOPODIUM, Alchemilla.

LEONURUS, from λεων, 'a lion,' and ουρα, 'a tail,' Lion's Tail.

LEONURUS CARDIACA, Agripa'ma Gallis, Marrubium, Cardi'aca crista seu triloba'ta seu vulga'ris, Herba cardiaca seu Pata lapi'na, Motherwort, Throatwort, (F.) Agripaume. Ord. Labiatæ. Its properties are those of a nauseous bitter; and hence it has been used in hysteria and other nervous affections.

LEONURUS LANATUS, Ballota lanata.

LEOPARD'S BANE, ROMAN, Arnica montana, Doronicum pardalianches.

LEPAS, Lepis, lepas, gen. λεπαδος; λεπς, gen. λεπδος, 'a scale.'

LEPER, see Leprous.

LEPER HOSPITAL, Ladrerie.

LEPIA CAMPESTRIS, Thlaspi campestre—1. Sativa, Lepidium Iberis.

LEPID'IUM, from λεπς, λεπδος, 'a scale,' so called from its supposed usefulness in cleansing the skin from scales and impurities. Pepper-wort. Ord. Crucifera.

LEPIDIUM CAMPESTRE, Thlaspi campestre.

LEPIDIUM IBERIS, Iberis, Cardaman'tica, Sci-al'tica cresses. This plant possesses a warm, penetrating, pungent taste, like other cresses, and is recommended as an antiscorbutic, antiseptic, and stomachic.

LEPIDIUM SATIVUM, Lep'ia sativ'a, Thlaspi nasturtium seu sativum, Nasturtium horten'se seu sativum, Garden cress, Dittander, Green mustard, (F.) Cresson alénois, Cresson des Jardins. This plant possesses warm, stimulating properties, and is used like the last.

LEPIDIUM SQUAMATUM, Cochlearia coronopus.

LEPIDODES, Squamous.

LEPIDODES, Squamous.

LEPIDOSARCO'MA, Tumor squamifor'mis carnosus. A fleshy tumour, covered with scales; from λεπτις, λεπίδος, 'a scale,' and σαρκωμα, 'a fleshy tumour.' Marcus Aurelius Severinus describes tumours of this kind in the interior of the mouth.

LEPIDOSIS, Scaly disease.

LEPIDOSIS ICHTHYIASIS, Ichthyosis—1. Ichthyiasis cornigera, Horny excrescences—1. Lepriasis, Lepra—1. Pityriasis, Pityriasis—1. Psoriasis, Psoriasis.

LEPIDOTIS CLAVATA, Lycopodium clavatum.

LEPIRA, Lepra.

LEPIS, Scale.

LEPISMA, Squamous portion.

LEPORINUM LABIUM, Harelip—1. Ros-trium, Harelip.

LEPORINUS OCULUS, Lagophthalmia.

LEPOSTEOPH'YTON; from λεπτις, 'a scale,' οστέον, 'a bone,' and φύρον, 'a plant or growth.' A thin scale of bone, the result of a morbid growth.

LEPRA, Lep'ira, from λεπρος, 'scaly.' Lepido'sis Lepri'asis, Lepro'sis, Lepro'sitas, Vitili'go, Lepra Græco'rum, Herpes furfuraceus circinal'tis, Grævy, Leap'ery, (Sc.) Lepyr, Lipper, (F.) Lèpre, Mal Saint-Main, Dartre furfuracée arroundie. This term has been applied to various affections, very different in character. 1. To the Leprosy of the Jews, Lencé, Lepido'sis Lepriasis canes'cens, Lepra Mosai'ca seu Hebræo'rum,—a variety of the Alphos or Lepra alphi'des. The leuce was, generally, not scaly, but consisted of smooth, shining patches, on which the hair turned white and silky, and the skin, with the muscular flesh, lost its sensibility. It was incurable. 2. To the Elephantiasis or Lepra of the Arabs, see Elephantiasis; and 3. To the Lepra of the Greeks, which includes all the varieties met with at the present day. It is characterized by scaly patches of different sizes, but having always nearly a circular form. Bateman and Willan describe three chief varieties of this lepra.

1. Lepra alphi'des, Lepido'sis Lepri'asis alb'ida, Alphos, Morphæa alba, Vitili'go albus, Al'baras alba, Albaras, Albaras, Lèpre écailluse of Alibert, White leprosy. An affection, characterized by white patches, surrounded by a rose-coloured areola, which appears here and there on the surface; depressed in the middle.

2. Lepra nigricans seu melas seu maculo'sa nigra, Vitili'go melas seu nigra, Morphæa seu Al'baras nigra, Melas, Lepido'sis lepri'asis ni'gricans, Black leprosy; in which the scales are livid; the size of half a dollar; and diffused over the body, but less widely than in the Alphi'des. The French pathologists usually admit three species of lepra, to which they give the epithets scaly, (squameuse), crustaceous, (crustacée), and tubercular, (tuberculeuse), according as the skin may be covered with scales, crusts, or tubercles.

3. Lepra vulga'ris, Lepido'sis lepri'asis vulga'ris, Dartre furfuracée arroundie, of Alibert, characterized as follows: scales glabrous, whitish, size of a crown piece; preceded by smaller reddish and glossy elevations of the skin, encircled by a dry, red, and slightly elevated border; often confluent; sometimes covering the whole of the body except the face.

Lepra appears to be endemic in Egypt, in Java, and certain parts of Norway and Sweden. Imperfect and faulty nutriment appears to contribute to its development. The means, best adapted for its removal, are:—a mild, unirritating diet, emollient fomentations—sulphureous baths, fumigations, &c; but, often, all remedial agents will be found ineffectual.

LEPRA ARABUM, Elephantiasis Arabica—1. As-turica, see Pellagra—1. Borealis, Radzyge—1. Fungifera, Framboesia—1. Gangrenosa, Ngeren-gere—1. Græcorum, Lepra—1. Hebræorum, see Lepra—1. Ichthyosis, Ichthyosis—1. Lombardica, Pellagra—1. Maculosa nigra, 1. Nigricans—1. Mediolanensis, Pellagra—1. Melas, Lepra nigri-cans—1. Mercurial, Eczema mercuriale—1. Mosa-ica, see Lepra—1. Norvegica, Radzyge—1. Squa-mosa, Impetigo—1. Taurica, Mal de Crimée.

LEPSIS, Attack.

LEPTAN'DRA VIRGIN'ICA, Veroni'ca seu Pædero'ta Virgin'ica, Culver's physic. Ord. Scrophulariaceæ. An indigenous plant, which grows throughout the United States, and flowers in August. The flowers are white, and terminate the stem in a long spike. A variety with purple flowers has been described, as LEPTANDRA PURPU'REA, Physic root, Black root, Whorlywort, Culver's root, Brinton root, Bow-man root. The root is bitter and nauseous, and when fresh is emetic and cathartic. In the dried state it is more uncertain. Dose of the powder, gr. xx to ʒi.

LEPTO, LEPTOS, λεπτος, 'thin,' 'light.' Hence:

LEPTOCEPHA'LIA, from λεπτος, 'thin, fine,' and κεφαλη, 'head.' Monstrosity, in which the head is abnormally small.

LEPTOCHRO'A, Leptochros, from λεπτος, 'thin, fine,' and χρῶμα, χρῶμα, 'the colour of the skin.' Fineness, thinness of skin.

LEPTOCHYM'IA, from λεπτος, 'thin,' and χυμος, 'a juice.' Morbid thinness of the juices.

LEPTOHYME'NIA, from λεπτος, 'thin,' and ὑμην, 'a membrane.' Thinness, delicacy of membrane.

LEPTOMER'IA, from λεπτος, 'thin, fine,' and μερος, 'a part.' Fineness, delicacy of bodily formation.

LEPTONTIQUES, Attenuants.

LEPTOPHONIA, Oxyphonia.

LEPTOSPERMUM LEUCADENDRUM, Melaleuca cajaputi.

LEPTOTHRIX, Leptotrichus.

LEPTOTRICH'IA; same etymon as the next. Fineness of hair.

LEPTOTRICHUS, Leptothrix, from λεπτος,

'fine,' and Σριξ, τριχος, 'hair.' One who has fine hair.

LEPTOTROPHIA, Microtrophia, Microtrapezia, from λεπτος, 'light,' and τροφή, 'nourishment.' Light nutrition.

LEUCOCYTE, see Globules of the blood.

LEUCOCYTHÆMIA, 'white cell blood,' from λευκος, 'white,' κυτος, 'cell,' and αίμα, 'blood.' A condition of the blood, which consists in a su-perabundant development of the white corpuscles, a disease which has been observed at times to be accompanied by enlargement of the spleen and liver, and at others by increased size of the lymphatic glands. See Leucæmia.

LEUCODENDRON, Melaleuca cajaputi.

LEUCENUS, see Wine.

LEUCOIIUM, Lunaria rediviva—1. Luteum, Cheiranthus cheiri.

LEUCOLACHANUM, Valeriana.

LEUCOLEIN, Leukoleinum.

LEUCO'MA, from λευκος, 'white.' Oculo'rum albu'go, Leucom'ma, Leuco'sis, Albu'go, Al'bu'la, Ceratoleuco'ma, Ephem'otes. Leucoma and Albu'go are often used synonymously to denote a white opacity of the cornea. Both are essentially different from nebula of the cornea; nebula being usually the result of chronic ophthalmia and an effusion of a milky serum into the texture of the delicate continuation of the conjunctiva over the cornea;—the others are the result of violent, acute ophthalmia. In this state, a thick, coagulable lymph is extravasated from the arteries, sometimes superficially, at other times deeply into the substance of the cornea. On other occasions, the disease consists of a firm, callous cicatrix on this membrane,—the effect of a wound or ulcer with loss of substance. The affection is more difficult of cure in proportion to its duration and to the age of the individual; the activity of the absorbents being greater in youth. If inflammation still exist, antiphlogistics must be persevered in, and, afterwards, gentle stimulants be used to excite absorption; along with the internal use of mercury or iodine.

LEUCOMA, Albumen—1. Gerontotoxon, Gerontotoxon—1. Margaritaceum, see Margaritaceus.

LEUCOMMA, Leucoma.

LEUCOMORIA, Cutabuth.

LEUCONECRO'SIS, from λευκος, 'white,' and νεκρωσις, 'death.' A form of dry gangrene,—the opposite in appearance to anthraconecrosis.

LEUCONYMPIÆA, Nymphæa alba.

LEUCOPHAGIUM, Blanc-manger.

LEUCOPHLEGMASIA, Leucophlegmatia—1. Dolens puerperarum, Phlegmatia dolens.

LEUCOPHLEGMA'TIA, Leucophlegmasia, Hydrops leucophlegmatia, Tumescen'tia rituito'sa, from λευκος, 'white,' and φλεγμα, φλεγματος, 'phlegm.' A dropsical habit, Hydrocachex'ia. Some writers use the word synonymously with anasarca and œdema; others with emphysema.

LEUCOPHLEGMATIA ÆTHIOPICUM, Chthonophagia.

LEUCOPIPER, Piper album.

LEUCOPYRIA, Hætic fever.

LEUCORRHÉE, Leucorrhœa.

LEUCORRHŒA, *Fluxus seu Fluor mulie'bris, Proflu'vium mulie'brè, Cursus matric'is, Fluxus matric'is, Elythrit'is, Coleosit'is, Colp'tis, Destillatio uteri, Fluxio alba seu vulvæ, Ulex uteri, Catar'rhus genitalium, Hysterorrhœa mucosa, Catamen'ia alba, Menses albi, Men'strua alba, Menorrhag'ia alba, Fluor mulie'bris non Gall'icus, Blennely'ria, Gonorrhœa benigna notha inveterata, Purgatio mulie'bris alba, Alba purgamenta, Cachex'ia uteri'na, Rheuma uteri, Uteri Cory'za, Medorrhœa femina'rum insons, Blennorrhœa seu Blennorrhag'ia genitalium, Edeoblenorrhœa seu Medoblenorrhœa femina'rum; The whites; (F.) Fleurs ou Fluxus blanches, Pertes blanches, Écoulement blanc, Catarrhe utérin, Perte utérine blanche, from λευκος, 'white,' and ρρω, 'I flow.' A more or less abundant discharge of a white, yellowish, or greenish mucus; resulting from acute or chronic inflammation, or from irritation of the membrane lining the genital* organs of the female. Vag'inal Leucorrhœa has been termed Blennorrhœa seu Fluor albus vagi'næ, Leucorrhœa, Medorrhœa vagina, Vagini'tis, Elytrobrennorrhœa, Colporrhœa.—Uterine Leucorrhœa has received the names Fluor albus uteri, Leucorrhœa seu Medorrhœa uteri, Metroblennorrhœa, Bleuometri'tis, Metroblennozœmia, Metrocatarrhus, Metroleucorrhœa, (F.) Leucorrhœe utérine, Catarrhe utérin. It is often attended with pain and a sense of heaviness in the loins, abdomen and thighs; disordered digestive functions, &c., so that, at times, the health suffers largely, although there are few females who are not occasionally subject to moderate leucorrhœa. Attention to the general health, change of air, keeping up a perspirable state of the surface by flannel worn next the skin, the horizontal posture, &c., do more than pharmaceutical agents; which are almost entirely confined to astringent injections. These may be employed, when the discharge is so great as to require them.

LEUCORRHOEA ANALIS, see Hæmorrhœis — I. Nabothi, see Parturition.

LEUCORRHOIS, see Hæmorrhœis.

LEUCO'SES; from λευκος, 'white.' In the nosology of M. Alibert, all the diseases of the lymphatic apparatus. The 7th family in his Nosologie. In that of Fuchs, it is a family of diseases, (G.) Leukosen, which includes the various forms of anæmia.

LEUCOSIS, Leucoma, Paleness. See Albino.

LEUK or LOCHE, MINERAL WATERS OF. Saline, chalybeate waters, about six leagues distant from Sion. They contain chloride of sodium, with a little sulphate of magnesia; sulphate of lime, carbonate of magnesia, carbonic acid, and protoxide of iron.

LEUKÆMIA, Leucæmia.

LEUKOLEIN'UM, Chinolein'um, Leukol, Leu'coleine, Leu'colein, Chi'nolein, Chi'nolin. This substance is the product of the dry distillation of coal; mixed with picolin, anilin and other substances, in mineral tar. It is procured, also, by heating quinia, cinchonina and strychnina, with as concentrated a ley of potassa as can be made. Its specific gravity is 1.081; and it is slightly soluble in water, and miscible in all proportions with alcohol, ether and essential oils.

LEVAÏN, Ferment.

LEVATOR, Elevator.

LEVATOR AN'GULI ORIS, Abdu'cens labio'rum, Eleva'tor labio'rum commu'nis, Canin'us, (F.) Sus maxillo-labial, Petit sus-maxillo-labial (Ch.). Muscle canin. A small, flat, long, quadrilateral muscle, which arises from the fossa canina, and is inserted at the commissure of the lips, where it is confounded with the triangularis. It raises the corner of the mouth, and draws it towards the ear.

LEVATOR ANI, Levator magnus seu internus, Latus ani, Eleva'tor ani, Sedem attol'lens, (F.) Pubio-coecygi'en annulaire, Sous pubio-coecygi'en (Ch.), Releveur de l'anus. A muscle, situate at the lower part of the pelvis. It is broad, flat, quadrilateral, and broader above than below. It represents a kind of membranous partition, which closes the outlet of the pelvis, and the upper convexity of which is opposed to that of the diaphragm. It is attached, above, to the posterior surface of the body of the pubis, to the upper part of the obturator foramen, and to the spine of the ischium; and is inserted into the coccyx, into an aponeurotic line common to it and its fellow, and into the lateral parts of the rectum. This muscle supports the rectum; raises it, and carries it upwards during the evacuation of the excrement. It can, also, compress the bladder and vesiculæ seminales, and thus favour the expulsion of the urine and sperm.

LEVATOR ANI PARVUS, Transversus perinæi — I. Auris, Attollens aurem — I. Coecygis, Coecygeus.

LEVATOR GLAN'DULE THYROIDÆÆ. A muscle occasionally found connected with the upper border or isthmus of the thyroid gland; and attached superiorly to the body of the os hyoides, or to the thyroid cartilage.

LEVATOR MENTI, Levator labii inferioris — I. Oculi, Rectus superior oculi — I. Proprius scapulae, L. scapulae.

LEVATOR LABII INFERIO'RI, L. menti, Elevator labii inferioris seu labii inferioris proprius, Incisiv'us inferior, Mus'culus penicilla'tus, (F.) Houppementon, Releveur de la lèvre inférieure ou du menton. A portion of the mento-labial of Chaussier. A small muscle situate before the symphysis menti. It is thick, conical; and attached by its apex to a fossette at the side of the symphysis in the inferior maxillary bone. Its fibres proceed diverging and vanishing in the manner of a tuft. (F.) Houppé, on the skin of the chin. This muscle raises the chin, and pushes upwards the lower lip.

LEVATOR LABII SUPERIO'RI, ALÆQUE NASI, Incisiv'us lateralis et pyramidalis, (F.) Grand sus-maxillo-labial (Ch.), Élévateur commun de l'aile du nez et de la lèvre supérieure. This muscle is a fleshy, thin, triangular bundle, situate at the sides of the nose. It arises from the ascending process of the superior maxillary bone: thence its fibres descend in a diverging manner, a part being inserted into the ala of the nose, and a part losing themselves in the upper lip. This muscle raises the upper lip and ala nasi, which it draws a little outwards.

LEVATOR LABII SUPERIORIS PROPRIUS, Mus'culus incisiv'us, Elevator labii superioris proprius, (F.) Moyen sus-maxillo-labial, (Ch.), Orbito-maxillo-labial. This thin, flat, quadrilateral muscle is situate at the middle and inner part of the face. It arises from the os malæ and the os maxillare superius, and is inserted into the upper lip, which it raises, at the same time carrying it a little outwards.

LEVATOR PAL'ATI, L. Palati Mollis, Petrosalpin'go-staphylin'us, Salpin'go-staphylin'us internus, Salpingo-staphylinus, Pter'yygo-staphylinus externus, Spheno-staphylinus, Spheno-palatin'us, Peristaphylinus internus superior, Pétro-staphylin, (Ch.). This muscle is long, narrow, and almost round above; broader and flatter inferiorly. It arises from the lower surface of the pars petrosa; from the cartilage of the Eustachian-tube; and is inserted into the substance of the velum palati. Its use is to raise the velum palati.

LEVATOR PAL'PEBRÆ SUPERIO'RI, Palpebræ superioris primus, Apertor Oculi, Ape'riens Palpebræ'rum rectus, Recl'u'sor palpebræ'rum, (F.) Orbito-palpébral (Ch.), Orbito-sus-palpébral, Élévateur de la paupière supérieure. A long, small, thin muscle, situate at the upper part of the orbital cavity. By its posterior extremity it is inserted into the little ala of the sphenoid bone, immediately in front of the foramen opticum, and, by its anterior extremity, which is expanded, it terminates at the upper margin of the tarsal cartilage of the eyelid. This muscle raises the upper eyelid, draws it backwards, and sinks it into the orbit.

LEVATOR PROS'TATÆ. (F.) Releveur de la prostate. Santorini has given this name to the anterior fibres of the levator ani, which embrace the prostate.

LEVATOR SCAP'ULÆ, Eleva'tor scapulae. E. seu Mus'culus Patientia, Angula'ris, Levator proprius scapulae, — (F.) Trachélo-scapulaire (Ch.), Angulaire de l'omoplate, Releveur de l'omoplate.

This muscle is so called, because it is attached to the upper and internal angle of the scapula. It is situated at the posterior and lateral part of the neck, and at the upper part of the back. It is long, flat, and broader above than below. In this latter direction, it is inserted into the superior internal angle of the scapula; and, in the former, into the tops of the transverse processes of the first four cervical vertebrae. It depresses the prominence of the shoulder, by raising the posterior angle of the scapula, on which it impresses a kind of rotary motion. It can, also, draw the head to one side.

LEVATOR URETHRÆ, (F.) Releveur de l'Urethre. Santorini describes under this name a portion of the transversus perinaei muscle.

LEVATORES COSTARUM, Supracostales.

LEVEN, Ferment.

LEVER, from levare, 'to lift up.' Vectis, Mochlus, Porrectum. An inflexible rod, turning round a fixed point, and used for moving bodies, bearing burdens, or raising them. The point on which the lever moves is called the Fulcrum, Hypomochlion. The force which moves the lever is called the power; and the weight to be moved, the resistance. There are three kinds of levers. A lever of the first kind has the fulcrum between the power and resistance. A lever of the second kind has the resistance between the fulcrum and power; whilst a lever of the third kind has the power between the fulcrum and resistance. In the locomotive system of the human body, we have examples of all the three kinds. The bones represent levers; the muscles of locomotion are powers; the weight of parts to be moved constitutes the resistance. The fulcra, are, at times, the joints; at others, the ground, &c. The head moves on the neck, as a lever of the first kind; the first cervical vertebra forming the fulcrum. We rise on tiptoe by a lever of the second kind, the fulcrum being the ground under the toes; and we have examples of a lever of the third kind in the flexion of the fore-arm on the arm, in the elevation of the arm, &c.

LEVER, Hystero-mochlium, Mochlis'cus, Vectis obstetri'cus, Vectis, (F.) Lever, is an instrument curved at the extremity, and having a fenestra. It is used to assist the extraction of the child's head, when instrumental aid is necessary. Levers are, also, used by the dentist for extracting stumps, &c. The Lever de l'Écluse, Langue de Carpe, Trivellin or Punch, is employed for extracting the molar teeth.

LEVATHAN PENIS, Pria'pus Ceti, Bale'nus. The penis of the whale. This singular medicine was, at one time, given in powder, in cases of dysentery and leucorrhœa.

LEVIER, Lever—l. de l'Écluse, see Lever.

LEVIGATION, Lævigatio, from lævigare, lævigat'um, (lævis, 'smooth,') 'to polish.' Porphyriat'ion. An operation, by which bodies are reduced to very fine powder. It is performed by putting substances, already pulverized, into water; the coarser parts are not long in being deposited, whilst the finer molecules remain suspended in the water. The liquor is decanted into another vessel, and suffered to remain at rest, until the fine particles are collected at the bottom. The fluid part is then separated by decantation.

LEVISTICUM, Ligusticum levisticum.

LÈVRE, Lip.

LÈVRES GRANDES, Labia pudendi—l. Petites, Nymphæ—l. de la Vulve, Labia pudendi.

LEXIPHARMACUS, Alexipharmic.

LEXIPYRETICUS, Febrifugus.

LEY, Lixivium, Lye—l. Soap, Liquor potassæ.

LEYS'SERA GNAPHALOIDES. A South

African plant, Nat. Ord. Compositæ, which is emollient, and highly recommended at the Cape, in catarrh, cough, and even in phthisis.

LÉZARD, Lizard.

LIAN À RÉGLISSE, Abrus precatorius.

LIA'TRIS SPICA'TA, Gayfeather, Button snakeroot. Ord. Compositæ. An indigenous plant, growing in meadows and moist grounds in the Middle and Southern States. Its beautiful purple compound flowers are in a spike. They appear in August. The root has been considered diuretic.

LIA'TRIS SCARIO'SA and L. SQUARRO'SA, Throatwort, Sow-wort, Backache root, Devilsbite, Blazing star, Prairie pines, Rough root, are called from their reputed powers in bites from the rattlesnake, Rattlesnake's master. The roots, bruised, are applied to the wound, and the decoction, in milk, is given internally.

LIBER PHARMACEUTICUS, Dispensatorium.

LIBIDINIS SEDES, Clitoris.

LIBIDINOSUS, Libidinous.

LIBID'INOUS, Libidino'sus, Lasci'vus, Yeneriv'agus; from libido, 'lust,' Lecher'ous, Lick'orous. Levd; lustful.

LIBI'DO. Desire, necessity. Authors speak of Libido urina'e, Libido intesti'ni. Some employ it synonymously with Prurigo; others, with Salac'itas, Lubi'do, H'neros.

LIBOS, from λειβω, 'to drop.' A defluxion from the eyes.—Galen.

LIBRA, Pound.

LIBRANOS, Index, see Digitus.

LICHE, Body.

LICHEN, λεχηρ or λεχηρ, (pronounced l'ken.) Exor'mia Lichen, Leichen, Serpi'go, Volat'ica, Pap'ula, P. sicca, Peti'go, Pustula sicca, Sea'bies sicca see a'gria, Lichen'asis adultorum, L'chenous rash, (F.) Gale sèche, Dartre furfuracée volante, Poussée. The cutaneous affection described under this name by the Greek writers, is not clearly defined. Some have believed it to be Impetigo, but this is doubtful. The name is, now, generally applied to a diffuse eruption of red pimples, accompanied by a troublesome sense of tingling or pricking. Drs. Willan and Bateman define it,—"an extensive eruption of papulæ affecting adults, connected with internal disorder, usually terminating in scurf; recurrent, not contagious." One of their varieties, however, the Lichen Tropicus, does not accord well with this definition; for it affects children as well as adults, and is unconnected with internal disorder.

LICHEN A'GRIS, L. A'gria, Exor'mia Lichen ferus, Lichen ferus, Pap'ula a'gria, Wild Lichen, is distinguished by pimples in clusters or patches, surrounded by a red halo; the cuticle growing gradually harsh, thickened, and chappy, often preceded by general irritation. In addition to antiphlogistics, a cooling ointment may be used, to allay itching.

LICHEN BARBATUS Plicatus, L. plicatus.

LICHEN CIRCUMSCRIP'TUS is characterized by clusters or patches of papulæ, having a well defined margin, and an irregularly circular form: continuing for six or eight weeks. These varieties require but little medical treatment. The antiphlogistic plan is all that is necessary.

LICHEN FERUS, Lichen agris.

LICHEN LIV'IDUS. The papulæ have a dark red or livid hue, without any fever. They are more permanent in this variety. It requires the mineral acids and bark.

LICHEN PILARIS, Exor'mia Lichen pilaris, is merely a modification of the preceding; the papule appearing at the roots of the hair.

LICHEN SIMPLEX, Exor'mia Lichen simplex, consists of an eruption of red papule, appearing first on the face or arms, and afterwards extending over the body; preceded for a few days by slight febrile irritation, which usually ceases when the eruption appears,—with an unpleasant sense of tingling during the night. It generally dies away in ten days or a fortnight.

LICHEN TROPICUS, Exor'mia Lichen tropicus, Ezees'ma, Es'sera [?], Sudam'ina [?], Prickly Heat, Summer Rash. The pimples are bright red, and of the size of a small pin's head; with heat, itching, and pricking, as if by needles. It is local; produced by excessive heat; and disappears when the weather becomes cooler, or the individual is inured to the climate.

LICHEN URTICATUS, L. Urtico'sus, Exor'mia Lichen urtico'sus, is another variety. The Nettle Lichen consists of papule, accompanied by wheals like those of nettle rash. A variety of this is said to be called, in America, blights.

LICHEN WILD, Lichen agrilus.

LICHEN APHTHO'SUS, Pelti'dea aphtho'sa; Ord. Lichenaceæ; is said to be cathartic and anthelminthic.

LICHEN ARBORUM, Lichen pulmonarius—l. Barbatus plicatus, Lichen plicatus—l. Blanc de Neige, L. caninus—l. Boëtier, L. pyxidatus.

LICHEN CANINUS seu spu'rius seu terres'tris seu veno'sus seu ciner'eus terres'tris, Muscus canin'us, Phys'cia nival'is, Peltig'era canin'a, Pelti'dea canin'a seu leucorrh'iza seu mal'acea seu amplis'sima seu spu'ria, Ash-coloured Ground Liverwort, (F.) Lichen contre-rage, Lichen blanc de neige. This cryptogamous plant was, for a long time, considered capable of preventing and curing Rabies canina. It has, also, been used in mania and in spasmodic asthma.

LICHEN CINEREUS TERRESTRIS, L. caninus—l. Carrageen, Fucus crispus—l. Cociferus, L. pyxidatus—l. contre Rage, L. caninus—l. Entonnoir, L. pyxidatus—l. Eryngifolius, L. islandicus—l. Floridus hirtus, L. plicatus—l. Hirtus, L. plicatus.

LICHEN ISLANDICUS, L. eryngifo'lins, Lichenoides Island'icum, Loba'ria Island'ica, Muscus Islandicus seu cathar'ticus, Clado'nia seu Phys'cia seu Cetra'ria seu Parme'lia Island'ica, Iceland Lichen or Liverwort or Moss, (F.) Lichen d'Islande, Mousse marine perlée, Mousse d'Islande. This plant is inodorous, with a bitter and mucilaginous taste. It is esteemed to be tonic, demulcent, and nutrient. Dose, \mathfrak{zj} to \mathfrak{ziv} , being first steeped in water holding in solution some carbonate of potassa to extract the bitter, and then boiled in milk. A bitter principle has been extracted from it, termed Cetrarin, Cetrarinum, Cetra'rium, which has been given in intermittents.

LICHEN LACINIATUS, L. saxatilis—l. Parietinus, Parmelia parietina.

LICHEN PLICATUS, L. hirtus seu barba'tus plicatus seu Floridus hirtus, Parme'lia plica'ta, Usne'a plica'ta, U. Flo'ida hirta seu hirta, Muscus arbo'reus seu albus seu quernus, Querc'ni Herba. This plant is applied, by the Laplanders, as an astringent, to bleeding vessels; and to parts which are excoriated after long journeys.

LICHEN PULMONARIUS, L. arborum seu reticulatus, Parme'lia pulmona'cea, Beticula'ria officinal'is, Muscus pulmonarius querc'ni'us, Pulmona'ria arbo'rea, Loba'ria pulmonaria, Sticta pulmona'cea, Oak Lungs, Tree Lungwort, Hazel Crotches, Hazelraw, (F.) Lichen pulmonaire, Pulmonaire en arbre ou de chêne. This plant is sub-astringent, and rather acid. It was once in high repute for curing diseases of the lungs.

LICHEN PYXIDATUS, Muscus Pyxidatus, Scyphoph'orus pyxidatus, Musculus pyxoides terres'tris, Lichen pyxidatus major seu cocciferus, Herba Ignis, Cup Moss, (F.) Lichen entonnoir, Lichen Boëtier, L. Pyxidé. This plant is sub-astringent, and has been used in decoction in whooping-cough.

LICHEN RETICULATUS, L. pulmonarius.

LICHEN ROCCEL'LA, Parme'lia roccel'la, Roccella, R. tinctoria, Seta'ria roccella, Litmus, Laenus, L. tinctorius, Orchill, Canada Archell, Chinney Weed, Herb Archell, (F.) Orseille. The chief use of this plant is as a blue dye. It has been employed to allay cough in phthisis, &c.

LICHEN SAXATILIS, L. tinctorius seu lacinia'tus, Parme'lia saxatilis, Imbricia'ria saxatilis, Loba'ria saxatilis, Muscus Crad'ni hum'dni, Usne'a. This moss, when found growing on a human skull, was formerly in high estimation against head affections, &c.

LICHEN SPURIUS, L. caninus—l. Stellatus, Marchantia polymorpha—l. Tinctorius, L. Saxatilis—l. Wall, yellow, Parmelia parietina.

LICHENIASIS ADULTORUM, Lichen—l. Strophulus, Strophulus.

LICHENOIDES ISLANDICUM, Lichen Islandicus.

LICKOROUS, Libidinous.

LICINIUM, Tent.

LICORICE, Glycyrrhiza.

LICULMEN, Garum.

LIEBENSTEIN, MINERAL WATERS OF.

These waters, situated in the duchy of Saxe-Meiningen, are amongst the strongest acidulous chalybeates in Germany. They contain sulphate of soda, chloride of sodium, sulphate of lime, chloride of calcium, carbonate of lime, chloride of magnesium, and carbonate of iron.

LIEBERKÜHN'S GLANDS or FOLLICLES, Glandulæ seu Cryptæ Lieberkühnia'næ, so called from their first describer, are fine, capillary, blind sacs, the openings of which are from 1-20th to 1-30th of a line in diameter, so closely placed over the whole of the small intestine as to give the mucous membrane a general sieve-like or perforated appearance. They secrete the succus entericus.

LIEBERSCHES AUSZEHRUNG'S KRAUTER, see Galeopsis grandiflora—l. Brustkrauter, see Galeopsis grandiflora.

LIEBWERDA, MINERAL WATERS OF. Lieberwerra is a Bohemian village, near the Silesian frontier. The springs are much frequented. There are four, all of which are rich in carbonic acid, and contain but little saline matter.

LIÈGE, Suber.

LIEN (F.), Vin'culum. A band, strap or garter, used in certain operations; as to tie patients during the operation of lithotomy; to fix the apparatus in fracture, &c. Also, the spleen.

LIEN ACCESSORIUS, Lienculus—l. Ingens, Splenonecus—l. Succenturiatus, Lienculus.

LIEN'CLUS, diminutive of lien, 'spleen,' Lien succenturiatus seu accessorius. A supernumerary spleen.

LIENITIS, Splenitis.

LIENOSUS, Splenis.

LIENTERY, Lienter'ia, from λειος, 'smooth,' 'slippery,' and εντερον, 'intestine' Læ'vitas seu Lax'itas intestino'rum, Diarrhœa lienter'ia, Fluxus Lienter'icus, Chymorrhœa seu Lax'itas ingestorum, Bromato'c'crisis, Diarrhœa Dyspep'tica seu cum Apepsiâ seu Ingestorum, Slip'periness of the Guts. Frequent liquid evacuations, the food only half digested. This condition is always symptomatic of great irritation in the intestinal canal, the sensibility of which is so much augmented that it cannot bear the sojourn of the food in it.

LIERRE, Hedera helix—l. Grimpant, Hedera helix—l. Terrestris, Glechoma hederacea.

LIFE, Sax. lif, lýf, Vita, Bios, B'otē, B'otos, Zoē, Pneuma, Spir'itus, (F.) Vie. The state of organized beings, during which, owing to the union of an unknown force with matter, they are capable of performing functions different from those that regulate other natural bodies; all of which functions, however numerous and diversified, work to one end. Life has only a limited duration; beyond which,—the organic functions ceasing to be executed,—the body is given up to the agency of chemical affinity. Hence Bichat has defined life to be—the aggregate of the functions which resist death. On account of the difference that exists among the vital functions, he applied the term Organic Life to the functions inservient to composition and decomposition;—as digestion, respiration, circulation, calorification, absorption, secretion, and nutrition; and Animal Life, to the functions which connect man and animals with external bodies; as the understanding, sensations, locomotion and voice.

LIFE-BLOOD. A term, commonly used for a twitching or quivering of the eyelids—a kind of involuntary or muscular tic. See Cillo.

LIFE, DURATION OF, see Longevity.

LIFE EVERLASTING, Gnaphalium margaritaceum—l. Everlasting, plantain, Antennaria plantaginifolia—l. Everlasting, sweet-scented, Gnaphalium polycephalum.

LIFE, EXPECTATION OF, see Longevity.

LIFE-INSURANCE. A contract entered into, usually by an insurance company, to pay a certain sum of money on a person's death, on the condition of his paying an annual premium during his life. The medical practitioner may be applied to to certify that the life of the insured is one that is insurable according to the rules of the company.

LIFE ROOT, Senecio aureus.

LIFE, VALUE OF, see Longevity, and Mortality.

LIFE'S BLOOD, Life-blood, Cillo.

LIGAMENT, Ligamentum; from ligare, ligatum, 'to bind'; Desmos, Syndes'mos, Colligamen, Cop'ula. A name given to fibrous structures, which serve to unite bones, and to form articulations; hence the division into interosseous and articular ligaments. They are of a white, close texture; are but little extensible, and difficult to break. The name ligament has, also, been given to any membranous fold, which retains an organ in its situation.

TABLE OF THE PRINCIPAL LIGAMENTS.

1. Of the Lower Jaw.
 - Capsular ligament.
 - Suspensory ligament of the stylo-glossus.
 - Lateral ligament.
 - Two capsular ligaments between atlas and head.
 - Circular ligament.
 - Two capsular between atlas and axis.
 - Perpendicular ligament.
 - Two lateral or moderator ligaments.
 - Transverse ligament and its appendices.
 - Anterior common.
 - Crucial intervertebral.
 - Ligaments running from the edge of the bony arch and spinous process of one vertebra to that of the next.
 - Interspinous ligament.
 - Ligamentum nuchæ.
 - Intertransverse.
 - Capsular.
 - Posterior or internal common.
2. Connecting the Head with the first and second Vertebra, and these with each other.
 - Two capsular ligaments between atlas and head.
 - Circular ligament.
 - Two capsular between atlas and axis.
 - Perpendicular ligament.
 - Two lateral or moderator ligaments.
 - Transverse ligament and its appendices.
3. Of the other Vertebra.
 - Anterior common.
 - Crucial intervertebral.
 - Ligaments running from the edge of the bony arch and spinous process of one vertebra to that of the next.
 - Interspinous ligament.
 - Ligamentum nuchæ.
 - Intertransverse.
 - Capsular.
 - Posterior or internal common.

4. Of the Ribs, Sternum, &c.
 - Capsular of the head of ribs.
 - Capsular of the tubercles.
 - Ligamenta transversaria interna.
 - Ligamenta transversaria externa.
 - Ligamenta cervicis costarum externa.
 - Ligamentous fibres running from the margins of the extremities of the ribs to the corresponding cartilages.
 - Radiated ligaments from cartilage of ribs to the sternum.
 - Capsular ligaments of the cartilages of the ribs.
 - Proper membrane of sternum.
 - L. of cartilago-ensiformis.
 - Tendinous expansions over the intercostales, &c.
5. Of the Pelvis.....
 - Two transverse,—one superior, one inferior.
 - Pilo-sacral.
 - Capsular of the sacro-iliac synchondrosis.
 - Two sacro-ischiatric,—posterior and anterior, with the superior and inferior appendices.
 - Longitudinal of os coccygis.
 - Inguinal ligament.
 - Capsular of symphysis pubis.
 - Ligament of foramen thyroideum.
6. Of the Clavicle.....
 - Radiated ligament.
 - Capsular.
 - Interclavicular.
 - Ligamentum rhomboideum.
 - Claviculo-acromial.
 - Conoid.
 - Trapezoid.
7. Of the Scapula.....
 - Anterior triangular.
 - Proper posterior.
8. Of the Shoulder-Joint.
 - Capsular.
9. Of the Elbow-Joint.
 - Capsular.
 - Brachio-ulnar.
 - Brachio-radial.
 - Coronary of the radius.
 - Anterior and posterior accessory.
 - Intermuscular of the os humeri.
10. Carpal Extremity of Radius and Ulna, and between those bones.
 - Interosseous ligament.
 - Oblique or chorda transversalis cubiti.
 - Capsular.
11. Between Fore-arm and Wrist.
 - Capsular.
 - Two lateral.
 - Mucous.
12. Of the Carpus.....
 - Annular.
 - Capsular.
 - Short ligaments.—oblique, transverse, capsular, and proper.
13. Between Carpal and Metacarpal bones.
 - Articular lateral.
 - Straight, perpendicular, &c.
14. Between the extremities of the Metacarpal bones.
 - Interosseous, at the bases and heads,—dorsal, lateral, palmar.
15. At the base of the Metacarpal bone of the Thumb, and at the first joint of the Fingers.
 - Capsular.
 - Lateral.
16. Of the first and second joints of the Thumb, and second and third joints of the Fingers.
 - Capsular.
 - Lateral.
17. Retaining the Tendons of the Muscles of the Hand and Fingers in situ.
 - Annular.
 - Vaginal or flexor tendons.
 - Vaginal or crucial of the phalangen.
 - Accessory of the flexor tendons.
 - Posterior annular.
 - Vaginal of extensors.
 - Transverse of extensors.

18. Connecting the Os Femoris with the Os innominatum. { Capsular and accessory slips.
Round or teres ligament.
Cartilaginous ligament.
Double cartilaginous ligament.
Ligamenta mucosa.
19. Of the Knee-Joint. { Lateral,—internal and external.
External short lateral ligament.
Posterior ligament.
Ligament of the patella.
Capsular.
Ligamentum alare,—majus et minus.
Ligamentum mucosum.
Two crucial,—anterior and posterior.
Transverse.
20. Connecting Fibula and Tibia. { Capsular.
Interosseous.
Anterior superior.
Posterior superior.
21. Connecting the Tarsal with the Leg Bones. { Anterior ligament of the fibula.
Posterior of fibula.
Deltoides of tibia.
Capsular.
22. Of the Tarsus..... { Capsular.
Short ligaments.
Capsular, broad superior, and lateral ligaments, connecting astragalus and naviculare.
Superior, lateral, and inferior, fixing os calcis to os cuboides.
Long, oblique, and rhomboid, forming the inferior ligaments.
Superior superficial, interosseous and inferior transverse ligaments, fixing the os naviculare and os cuboides.
Superior lateral, and plantar, which fix the os naviculare and cuneiform.
Superior superficial and plantar, connecting the os cuboides, and os cuneiforme externum.
Dorsal and plantar, uniting the ossa cuneiformia.
The proper capsular of each bone.
23. Between Tarsus and Metatarsus. { Capsular.
Dorsal, plantar, lateral, straight, oblique, and transverse.
24. Connecting the Metatarsal Bones. { Dorsal, plantar, and lateral, connecting the metatarsal bones.
Transverse ligaments.
25. Of the Phalanges of the Toes. { Capsular.
Lateral.
26. Retaining the Tendons of the Foot and Toes in situ. { Annular.
Vaginal of the tendons of the peronei.
Laciniated.
Vaginal of the tendon of the flexor longus pollicis.
Vaginal and crucial of the tendons of the flexors of the toes.
Accessory of the flexor tendons of the toes.
Transverse of the extensor tendons.

LIGATE, see Ligature.

LIGATIO, Fascia, Ligature—1. Linguae, Aphonia.

LIGATION, see Ligature.

LIGATURA, Ligature, Fascia—1. Glandis, Phimosis.

LIG'ATURE, Ligatu'ra, Ligatio, Alligatu'ra, Deligatio, Vinctu'ra, Fascia, Epid'esis. This word has various acceptations. It means, 1. The thread with which an artery or vein is tied, to prevent or arrest hemorrhage. 2. The cord, or thread, or wire, used for removing tumours, &c. 3. The bandage used for phlebotomy. Ligature is, also, sometimes applied to the act of tying an artery or considerable vessel—Lig'ation, and occasionally we meet with the terms ligature and ligate, used unnecessarily in this sense, in place of to take up or tie a vessel. When the artery alone is tied, the ligature is said to be immediate; when any of the surrounding parts are included, it is said to be mediate. The ligature occasions obliteration or adhesion of the arterial parietes, by cutting through the middle and internal coats; the adhesion being favoured by the formation of a coagulum, which acts, in some degree, as a barrier against the impulse of the blood, and subsequently disappears by absorption.

LIGHT. Sax. leoht, liht, (G.) Licht, Luz, Lumen, Phos, (P.) Lumière. An extremely rare fluid; diffused over the universe; emanating from the sun and fixed stars; traversing more than four millions of leagues in a minute; passing through transparent bodies, which refract it ac-

LIGAMENT, ANTERIOR, OF THE BLADDER. A name given by the older anatomists to a portion of the superior pelvic aponeurosis, which becomes attached to the front of the neck of the bladder.

LIGAMENT ARTÉRIEL, Arterial ligament—1. Camper's, Perineal fascia—1. Cervical supraspinal, see Supraspinosa ligamenta—1. Ciliaire, Ciliary ligament.

LIGAMENT, CORONARY, OF THE LIVER, is a reflection formed by the peritoneum, between the posterior margin of the liver, and the lower surface of the diaphragm. See Falx.

LIGAMENT, COSTO-XIPHOID, Xiphoid ligament—1. Dentelé, Denticulatum ligamentum—1. Denticulé, Denticulatum ligamentum—1. Dorsocording to their density and combustibility; and arrested by opaque bodies, by which it is reflected at an angle equal to the angle of incidence. It is the cause of colour in all bodies, being entirely reflected by white surfaces and absorbed by black. It is decomposed in passing through a transparent prism into seven rays—red, orange, yellow, green, blue, purple, and violet.

Light acts upon the body as a gentle and salutary stimulus. It urges to exercise, whilst privation of it induces sleep and inactivity, and disposes to obesity. Hence it is, that, in rural economy, animals which are undergoing the process of fattening are kept in obscurity. When vegetables are deprived of light, their nutrition is interfered with, and they become etiolated. To a certain extent this applies to animals, and there is every reason to believe, that want of light prevents the due development of organized bodies. It has been found that, when tadpoles were deprived of light, they did not undergo the perfect metamorphosis into the frog, but that monstrosities from arrest of development were induced.

LIGHTNING, Astrape.

LIGHTS, Pulmo—1. Rising of the, Cynanche trachealis.

LIGNE, Line—1. Apré, Linea aspera—1. Blanche, Linea alba—1. Courbe, Curved line—1. Médiane de l'abdomen, Linea alba—1. Sous-trochantérienne, Linea aspera.

LIGNEOUS, Ligno'sus, (F.) Ligneux. Woody. Having the character or appearance of wood; as 'Ligne'ous Scirrhus,' or S. of the mamma, which has for its principal characteristics, hardness, the inextensibility of wood, and no defined limits.—Velpeau. A form of this, in plates, or diffused over the mammary integuments, is termed, by M. Velpeau, Squirre en cuirasse.

LIGNIN, from lignum, 'wood.' Ligneous or woody fibre; the fibrous structure of vegetable substances.

LIGNYODES, Fuliginosus.

LIGNYS, Fuligo.

LIG'ULA, Lin'gula, 'a small tongue, a tongue of land; the tongue of a shoe.' The clavicle; also, the glottis and epiglottis. A measure containing 3 drachms and a scruple, or about half an ounce. Also, a species of bandage or ligature.—Scribonius.

LIGUSTICUM, L. Levisticum.

LIGUSTICUM ACTÆIFO'LIUM, Thas'pium actæifo'lium, Angel'ica b'oida, Angel'ica Nendo, White root, indigenous; Ord. Umbelliferae. The root is aromatic and carminative.

LIGUSTICUM CAPILLACEUM, Æthusa meum—1. Carvi, Carum—1. Fœniculum, Anethum.

LIGUS'TICUM LEVIS'TICUM, from Λιγυστικός, appertaining to Liguria. Levis'ticum, Laserpitium Germanicum, Ligusticum, Angel'ica levis'ticum seu paludapifo'lia, Lovage, (F.) Livèche, Ache des montagnes. Ord. Umbelliferae. The properties of this plant are said to be stimulant, carminative, emmenagogue, &c.

LIGUSTICUM MEUM, Æthusa meum—1. Phellandrium, Phellandrium aquaticum.

LIGUSTICUM PODAGRA'RIA, Podagra'ria ægopod'ium, Ægopod'ium seu Sison podagra'ria, Pimpinella angelicajolia, Sium vulgare, Tragoselinum angelica, Ses'eli ægopod'ium, Angel'ica sylvestris, Gout-need. A British plant, once considered useful in cases of gout.

LIGUSTICUM SILAUS, Peucedanum silaus.

LIGUSTRUM ÆGYPTIACUM, Lawsonia inermis.

LIGUS'TRUM VULGA'RE, Privet, Privy, Prin, (F.) Troëne. Ord. Oleaceae. A shrub, which grows wild both in Europe and in the United States, usually in hedges. The leaves are astringent and bitter; and the flowers, which are snow-white, and of an agreeable odour, have been employed in decoction, in sore throat, and ulcerous stomatitis. The berries are said to be cathartic.

LIGYSMA, Distortion.

LILAC, COMMON, Syringa vulgaris—1. Vulgaris, Syringa vulgaris.

LILLI, Lilium Paracelsi.

LILLIA'GO. Dim. of Lilium, the lily; Spiderwort; Lilias'trum. This plant was formerly said to be alexipharmic and carminative.

LILLIASTRUM, Liliago.

LIL'ium CANDIDUM, L. album, Crinon. The white lily. (F.) Lis blanc. Ord. Liliaceae. The infusion of the flowers of the lily in olive oil is emollient, and often applied externally, under the name of Lily oil, (F.) Huile de lis. The scales of the bulb, roasted, are sometimes employed as maturatives.

LIL'ium CONVALLIUM, Convallaria maialis.

LIL'ium PARCEL'SI, Tinctura Metallo'rum, Lili. A medicine employed by Paracelsus. It was prepared by melting in a crucible four ounces of each of the following alloys: Antimony and iron, antimony and tin, antimony and copper, previously mixed with eighteen ounces of nitrate of potassa and as much salt of tartar. The melted mass, when pulverized, was treated with rectified alcohol, which really dissolved only the potassa set at liberty by the decomposition experienced by the nitre and salt of tartar. The Lilium Paracelsi was used as a cordial. It entered into the composition of the theriacal elixir, &c.

LILY, GROUND, Trillium latifolium—1. May, Convallaria maialis—1. Pond, Nelumbium luteum—1. Pond, White, Nymphaea odorata—1. Pond, yellow, Nuphar advena—1. Toad, Nymphaea odorata—1. of the Valley, Convallaria maialis—1. Water, little, Brasenia hydropeltis—1. Water, sweet, Nymphaea odorata—1. Water, sweet-scented, Nymphaea odorata—1. Water, white, Nymphaea alba—1. Water, yellow, Nymphaea lutea—1. White, Lilium candidum, Nelumbium luteum.

LIMA, CLIMATE OF. The climate of Peru does not appear to be favourable to the generation of consumption: and Lima would seem to be a good residence for the phthisical valetudinarian. Many have been benefited by a residence there; but when they have gone farther south, as to Chili, the effect, according to Dr. M. Burrough, has generally been fatal.

LIMA DENTARIA, Scalprum dentarium.

LIMAÇIEN (F.), from limaçon, (limax, limacis, 'the snail,' 'the cochlea of the ear.' A branch of the acoustic or labyrinthine nerve sent to the cochlea.

LIMAÇON, Cochlea, Helix pomatia, Limax—1. Rampes du, see Cochlea.

LIMACUM CORNUA, see Lachrymal puncta.

LIMANCHIA, Abstinentia.

LIMATIO, from limo, limatum, 'to file.' Filing: an operation employed by the dentist more especially to prevent immediate contact of the teeth with each other.

LIMATURA FERRI, Ferri Limatura.

LIMAX, λιμαξ, λιμακος, Helix, Slug or Snail, (F.) Limaxon, Colimaçon, Escargot. A syrup has been prepared from these animals, which has been given in phthisis, &c. The raw snails have also been taken in consumption. They have been used as food.

LIMB, Membrum.

LIMBUS ALVEOLARIS, Alveolar border—l. Fossæ Ovalis, see Ovalis fossa—l. Luteus retinæ, see Foramen centrale—l. Posterior corporis striati, Tænia semicircularis.

LIME. A fruit like a small lemon, the juice of which is strongly acid, and is much used for making punch. It is, also, used in long voyages as an antiscorbutic, &c. It is a species of lemon, the fruit of Citrus acida.

LIMNE, Marsh.

LIMNE'MIC, Limnæmic, Limne'mic, Limnæmicus, Limnæmicus, from λιμνη, 'a marsh,' and αιμα, 'blood.' An epithet given to affections induced by paludal emanations; (F.) Affections limnæmiques.

LIMOCTON'IA, Abstinence. Abstinence to death. Death from hunger; from λιμος, 'hunger,' and κρονος, 'death.' Suicide by hunger.

LIMODES, Hungry.

LIMON, see Citrus medica.

LIMONADA, Lemonade.

LIMONADE, Lemonade—l. Gazeuse, see Lemonade—l. Sèche, Lemonade, dry; see Citric acid.

LIMONIUM, Statice limonium—l. Malum, see Citrus medica.

LIMONUM BACCA, see Citrus medica.

LIMO-PHTHISIS, from λιμος, 'hunger,' and φθιας, 'wasting.' Wasting from privation of food.

LIMOS, λιμος, 'hunger.' Hence:

LIMO'SIS, Stomach disease, Morbid appetite. A genus in the class Cœliaca, order Enterica, of Good.

LIMOTHEAPEIA, Nestitherapeia, Nestotherapeia, Nestiatri'a, Peinotherapi'a, Cura'tio morbi per in'e'diam, from limos, and θεραπεια, 'treatment.' Hunger-cure. Cure by fasting.

LINDEN TREE, Tilia, Tilia Americana.

LINE, Lin'ea, Gramme, (F.) Ligne. Extent in length, considered without regard to breadth or thickness. As a measure, it means the 12th part of an inch.

MEDIAN LINE OF THE BODY is an imaginary line supposed to set out from the top of the head and to fall between the feet, so as to divide the body vertically into two equal and symmetrical parts.

LINEA, Line.

LINEA ALBA, Linea alba Abdom'inis, (F.) Ligne blanche ou médiane de l'abdomen (Ch.), Candidula abdom'inis lin'ea, Lin'ea centra'lis. A tendinous, strong, and highly resisting cord; extending from the ensiform cartilage of the sternum to the symphysis pubis, with the umbilicus near its middle. The linea alba is formed by the decussation of the aponeurosis of the abdominal muscles; and its use is to limit the movement of the chest backwards; to prevent it from separating too far from the pelvis, and to furnish a fixed point for the muscles of the abdomen in their contraction.

LINEA AS'PERA, Ragged ridge, (F.) Ligne âpre, Ligne sous-trochantérienne, (Ch.) A rough projection at the posterior surface of the femur, which gives attachment to muscles.

LINEA CANDIDULA ABDOMINIS, L. alba—l. Centralis, L. alba—l. Innominata, Ilio-pectinea Linea.

LINEÆ ARCUATÆ, Curved lines—l. Semicirculares externæ, Curved lines.

LINEÆ SEMILUNA'RES are the lines, which bound the outer margin of the recti muscles of the abdomen. They are formed by the union of the abdominal tendons. The lines which cross these muscles are called Lineæ transversæ.

LINEÆ TIB'LE, Anguli tib'ie. Sharp lines on the tibia.

LINEÆ TRANSVERSÆ, see L. semilunares, and Processus teretes.

LINÉAIRE, Linear.

LIN'EAMENT, Lineamentum, from linea, 'a line,' lineare, 'to mark by lines.' A delicate trait observed on the countenance, which constitutes its special character, enables us to preserve its image, and is the cause of resemblance to others. A feature.

Bonnet gave the name Linéament to the first traces of organization in the embryo of man and animals.

LIN'EAR, Linea'ris, Linea'rius, from linea, 'a line.' (F.) Linéaire. Pathologists apply the epithet linear to fractures which are very narrow, and in which the fragments are scarcely separated.

LINE'OLA; a diminutive of linea, 'a line.' A small line.

LINE'OLÆ MAMMA'RUM. The white lines on the breasts.

LINGISM, Kinesipathy.

LIN'GUAL, Lingua'lis, from lingua, 'the tongue.' Relating or belonging to the tongue.

LINGUAL ARTERY, Arteria lingua'lis, arises from the external carotid; and, after several tortuosities, reaches the base of the tongue, becomes horizontal, and, under the name Ranine, advances to the tip, where it anastomoses with its fellow. In its course, it gives off the Dorsalis linguæ and sublingual.

LINGUAL MUSCLE, Lingualis, Basio-glossus (Cowper), Glossid'anus, is a small, long, fasciculus of fibres, hidden beneath the sides of the tongue, between the hyoglossus and styloglossus muscles, which are on the outside, and the genioglossus, within. This muscle passes from the base to the tip of the tongue; and, at its sides, is confounded with the muscles just referred to. It shortens the tongue, depresses its point, and can carry it to the right or left side.

LINGUAL NERVE is a name which has been given to the ninth pair or hypoglossus. It is, also, a term applied to a branch given off from the Inferior maxillary, or third branch of the fifth pair. Near its origin it anastomoses with, or simply runs close to, the chorda tympani. It afterwards gives off a considerable number of filaments, which are distributed to the tongue, and some of which are said to have been even traced as far as the papillæ;—a distribution which has occasioned it to be regarded as the Gustatory nerve, (F.) Nerf gustatif.

LINGUAL SALIVARY GLANDS, see Salivary glands.

LINGUAL VEIN follows nearly the same distribution as the artery. It opens into the internal jugular.

LINGUALIS, Lingual muscle.

LINGUETTA LAMINOSA, Lingula.

LINGULA, Ligula.

LIN'GULA, Linguetta lamino'sa. A thin, transversely grooved lobule of gray substance, derived from the anterior border of the cerebellum, which, for a short distance, lies over the velum medullare arterius.

LINGULA FISTULÆ, Epiglottis.

LINI USITATISSIMI SEMINA, see Linum usitatissimum.

LINIMENT, Linimen'tum, Litus, Enchris'ton, Catachris'ton, Perich'risis, Perichris'ton, Aleiph'a, Aleim'ma, Enchris'ta, Frictum, Fricato'rium, Inunctio, from linire, linuntum, 'to anoint gently,' 'to anoint.' An unctuous medicine, containing usually oil or lard, which is used externally in the form of friction.

LINIMENT OF AMMONIA, COMPOUND, see Lotion, Granville's.

LINIMENT AMMONIACAL, Linimentum ammoniæ—l. de Carbonate d'Ammoniaque, Linimentum ammoniæ carbonatis.

LINIMENT ANODYNE, Linimentum opii.

LINIMENT ANTIHÉMORRHOÏDALE DE SIEUR ANDRY, (F.) This is formed of Norbonne honey, Olive oil, and Turpentine.

LINIMENT ANTIPARALYTIQUE, (F.) Composed of subcarbonate of ammonia, alcoholized oil, black soap, and oil of rosemary.

LINIMENT ANTISCROFULOUS, of HUFELAND. Composed of fresh ox-gall, White soap, Unguentum althæ'æ, Volatile oil of petroleum, Carbonate of ammonia, and Camphor.

LINIMENT RÉSOLUTIF DE POTT, composed of oil of turpentine and muritic acid. Used in rheumatism, swellings, &c.

LINIMENT, SAINT JOHN LONG'S. A liniment used by a celebrated empiric at the commencement of the second quarter of the 19th century. It is said to have consisted of oil of turpentine and acetic acid, held in suspension by yolk of egg. It was a powerful counter-irritant.

LINIMENT DE SAVON, Linimentum saponis compositum—l. de Savon opiacé, Linimentum saponis et opii.

LINIMENT SAVONNEUX HYDROSULFURÉ DE JADELLOT. Composed of sulphuret of potass, $\mathfrak{z}v\text{j}$; white soap, lbij ; oil of poppy, lbiv ; oil of thyme, $\mathfrak{z}ij$. Used in itch.

LINIMENTUM, Liniment.

LINIMENTUM ÆRUGINIS, Ox'ymel Æruginis, Unguentum Ægyptiacum, Mellitum de aceta'te cupri, Liniment of verdigris, (F.) Liniment de Vert-de-gris, Miel d'acétate de cuivre. (Ærugin. cont. $\mathfrak{z}j$; acet. $\mathfrak{z}vij$; mellis despum. pond. $\mathfrak{z}xiv$. Liquefied, strained, and inspissated by boiling.—Ph. L.) It is used as an escharotic and detergent;—diluted, as a gargle in venereal ulcerations and in foul ulcers.

LINIMENTUM ALBUM, Ceratum cetacei, Unguentum cetacei—l. ad Ambustiones, L. aquæ calcis.

LINIMENTUM AMMONIÆ, Sapo ammoniacalis, Linimentum ammoniatum seu ammonicum seu Anglica'nium, Sapo ammoniæ olea'ceus, Unguentum album resoluens, Oleum ammoniatum, Strong liniment of ammonia, (F.) Liniment volatil ou ammoniacal, Savon ammoniacal. (Liq. ammon. $\mathfrak{f}\mathfrak{z}j$; olei olivæ, $\mathfrak{f}\mathfrak{z}ij$. Mix.—Ph. U. S.) A stimulating and rubefacient soap.

LINIMENTUM AMMONIÆ CARBONATIS, Liniment of subcarb'onate of ammonia, Linimentum ammoniæ sesquicarbonatis, L. volatilè, Hartshorn and oil, (F.) Liniment de carbonate d'ammoniaque. (Solut. subcarb. ammon. $\mathfrak{f}\mathfrak{z}j$; olei olivæ, $\mathfrak{f}\mathfrak{z}ijj$. Shake till they unite.—Ph. L.) A stimulating liniment, mostly used to relieve rheumatic pains, bruises, &c.

LINIMENTUM AQUÆ CALCIS, L. Calcis (Ph. U. S.), L. ad ambustio'nes, Oleum lini cum calcè, Sapo calca'rius, Liniment of limewater, Carron oil, (because much used in the Carron iron works in Scotland), (F.) Liniment d'eau de chaux, Savon calcaire, Liniment calcaire ou oléo-calcaire. (Olei lini, aquæ calcis, \mathfrak{aa} $\mathfrak{f}\mathfrak{z}ij$. Miscè.) A cooling and emollient application to burns and scalds.

LINIMENTUM CAMPHORÆ, Oleum Camphora'tum, Solutio camphoræ oleo'sa, Camphor liniment, (F.) Liniment Camphrê, (Camphoræ, $\mathfrak{z}iv$; olei olivæ, $\mathfrak{f}\mathfrak{z}ij$. Dissolve.—Ph. U. S.) It is used as a stimulant and discutient.

LINIMENTUM CAMPHORÆ COMPOSITUM, Ward's essence for the headache, Compound camphor liniment. (Camphor. $\mathfrak{z}iiss$; ol. Lavand. $\mathfrak{f}\mathfrak{z}j$; Sp. rectificat. $\mathfrak{f}\mathfrak{z}xvij$; Liquor ammon. fortior. $\mathfrak{f}\mathfrak{z}iij$. Dissolve the camphor and oil in the spirit; add the ammonia, and shake till they are mixed. Ph. L.) It is stimulant and discutient.

LINIMENTUM CANTHARIDIS, Liniment of Spanish Flies. (Cantharid. in pulv. ℥j; Ol. Terebinth. Oss. Digest for three hours by means of a water-bath, and strain.—Ph. U. S.) Used as an excitant liniment in typhus, &c.

LINIMENTUM E CANTHARIDIBUS CAMPHORATUM, Camphorated liniment of cantharides, (F.) L. cantharide camphré. (Tinct. cantharid. ℥ss; ol. amygd. dulc. ℥iv; sapon. amygd. ℥ij; camphor. ℥ss. Dissolve the camphor in the oil, and add the mixture to the tincture and soap.—Ph. P.) Rubefacient, and discutient.

LINIMENTUM CROTONIS, Croton oil Liniment, (Ol. Croton. f℥j; Ol. Terebinth. f℥vij, M. Ph. D.) Rubefacient, causing an eruption when continued.

LINIMENTUM HYDRARGYRI, L. Hydrargyri composutum, Mercurial liniment, (F.) L. de Mercure. (Ung. Hyd. fort., adip. præp. āā, ℥iv; camphoræ, ℥ij; sp. rect. gtt. xv; liquor ammon. f℥iv. Rub the camphor with the spirit; add the ointment and lard; and, lastly, gradually add the solution.—Ph. L.) It is used as a stimulant and discutient to venereal swellings, &c.

LINIMENTUM HYPERICI, see Hypericum perforatum.

LINIMENTUM OPII, Liniment of Opium. Anodyne Liniment. (Sapon. ℥vj; Opii. ℥iiss; Camphor. ℥iij; Ol. Rosmarin. f℥vj; Spirit rectificat. Oij. (Imp. meas.) Macerate the soap and opium in the spirit for three hours; filter, and add the oil and camphor.—Ph. L.) Anodyne and slightly rubefacient.

LINIMENTUM PLUMBATUM, Unguentum plumbi superacetatis—l. Saponaceum opiatum, L. Saponis et opii.

LINIMENTUM SAPONACEUM HYDROSULPHURATUM. (Common Soap, 500 p. Liquefy in a water bath in an earthen vessel; and add white poppy oil, 250 p. Mix intimately, and add dry sulphuret of potass, 100 p. Beat together, and add oil of poppy seed, 750 p.—Ph. P.) In cutaneous affections, as psora, herpes, &c.

LINIMENTUM SAPONATO-CAMPHORATUM, L. Saponis camphoratum.

LINIMENTUM SAPONIS, Tinctura saponis camphorata (Ph. U. S.), Camphorated Tincture of Soap, Soap Liniment. (Saponis concis. ℥iv; camphor. ℥ij; Ol. Rosmarin. f℥ss; alcohol. Oij. Digest the soap and alcohol in a water-bath, until the former is dissolved; filter, and add the camphor and oil.—Ph. U. S.) Used in sprains, bruises, and as an embrocation.

LINIMENTUM SAPONIS CAMPHORATUM, L. S. composutum, L. Saponato-camphoratum, Balsamum opodel'doc, Tinctura saponis camphorata (Ph. U. S.), Opodel'doch, Steer's opodel'doch, Compound Soap Liniment, (F.) L. de Savon. (Sapon. rasur. ℥ij; Camphor. ℥ij; Ol. Rosmarin. f℥ss; Aquæ, f℥iv; Alcohol. Oij. Mix the alcohol and water; digest the soap in the mixture by means of a water-bath, until it is dissolved; filter, and add the camphor and oil.—Ph. U. S.) Stimulant and anodyne; in bruises, local pains, &c.

Freeman's Bathing Spirits consist of lin. sapon comp. coloured with Daffy's elixir.

Jackson's Bathing Spirits differ from Freeman's in the addition of some essential oils.

LINIMENTUM SAPONIS ET OPII, L. saponaceum opiatum, Soap and opium liniment, Bates's anodyne balsam, Balsamum anodynum, Tinctura saponis et opii, (F.) L. de Savon opiacé. (Saponis dur. ℥iv; opii. ℥ij; camphoræ, ℥ij; olei rosmarin. f℥ss; alcohol. Oij.—Ph. E.) Anodyne; in chronic rheumatism and local pains in general.

LINIMENTUM SIMPLEX, Simple Liniment. (Ol. oliv. 4 p.; cera alba, 1 p. fiat linimentum.—Ph. E.) Emollient; used in chaps, &c.

LINIMENTUM SIMPLEX, Unguentum cereæ.

LINIMENTUM TEREBINTHINÆ, L. Terebinthina'tum, Turpentine liniment. (Cerat. resinæ, ℥j; ol. terebinth. Oss. Melt the cerate and stir in the oil.) A stimulant; applied to burnis, &c.

LINIMENTUM VOLATILE, L. ammoniac carbonatis.

LINN, Tilia Americana.

LINNÆA, L. Borealis. Ord. Caprifoliaceæ. This plant, called after Linnæus, has a bitter, sub-astringent taste; and is used, in some places, in the form of fomentation, in rheumatic pains. An infusion in milk is used in Switzerland for the cure of sciatica.

LINOSPERMUM, see Linum usitatissimum.

LINSEED, see Linum usitatissimum.

LINT, Carbasus, Linteum.

LINTEAMEN, Linteum, Pledget.

LINTEUM, 'a linen cloth,' from linum, 'flax, linen,' L. carptum seu rasum, Linte'men, Oth-onē, Othon'ion, Car'basus, Car'basa, Car'pia, Motos, Motē, Motum, Linamentum, Tilma, Xystos, Xysma, Achnē, Lint, (F.) Charpie. A soft, flocculent substance, made by scraping old linen cloth, (F.) Charpie râpée, or by unravelling old linen cut into small pieces—(F.) Charpie brute; and employed in surgery as a dressing to wounds, ulcers, &c., either simply or covered with ointment.

LINTEUM CARPTUM, see Linteum—l. Rasum, see Linteum—l. Scissum, Splitcloth (bandage.)

LINUM, see Linum usitatissimum—l. Arvense, L. usitatissimum.

LINUM CATHARTICUM, L. minimum, Chamælinum, Purging flax, Mill mountain, (F.) Lin purgatif. Ord. Linaceæ. This plant is possessed of cathartic properties, and has a bitterish, disagreeable taste. Dose, ℥j, in substance.

LINUM CRUDUM, see Apolinosis—l. Minimum, L. Catharticum.

LINUM USITATISSIMUM, L. arven'sē, Common flax, (F.) Lin. The seed, Linum, (Ph. U. S.), Semina lini usitatissimum, Linospermum, Linseed, Flaxseed, (F.) Grains de lin, are inodorous, and almost tasteless; yielding mucilage to warm water, and oil by expression. They are demulcent and emollient. Linseed, when ground into powder, forms a good emollient poultice. It is only necessary to stir the powder into boiling water. The oil, Oleum lini, Flaxseed oil, (F.) Huile de Lin, is emollient and demulcent.

LIONDENT, Leontodon taraxacum.

LIPODIA, see Leiopus.

LIOPUS, Leiopus.

LIP, Sax. and Germ. Lippe, Cheilos, Labium, Labrum, (F.) Lèvre. [In Entomology, labium means the lower lip, —labrum, the upper.] The lips are composed of different muscular fasciculi, nerves, and vessels, covered by the skin and mucous membrane of the mouth. They circumscribe the anterior aperture of that cavity; and are inservient to mastication, pronunciation, &c. They are distinguished into upper and lower—Anocheilon; and Catocheilon, (Prov.) Fipple—and are placed in front of each jaw, forming between them the anterior aperture of the mouth. They unite at each side, and form what are called the angles or commissures of the mouth—Chal'ini. Their free edge is covered with a mucous membrane, of a more or less livid red, according to the individual. They receive their arteries from the external carotid. Their veins open into the two jugulars. Their lymphatic vessels descend into the ganglions situate beneath the chin. Their nerves are derived from the infra-orbital, mental, and facial.

LIPS, La'bia, (F.) Lèvres de la vulve, are folds belonging to the genital organs of the female.

and distinguished into—1. Labia pudendi seu Cunni seu majo'ra, Episi'a, Alæ pudendi mulie'bris, Hydrocheilides, Rupes, Alæ majo'res, Crem'noi, (F.) Grande Lèvres. These are two membranous folds, thicker above than below, which limit the vulva laterally, and extend from the inferior part of the mons veneris to the perinæum. They unite anteriorly and posteriorly, forming commissures; the posterior of which is called Fourchette. Their outer surface is convex; formed of skin and covered with hair. The inner surface is white, and covered by a mucous membrane, continuous with that lining the other parts of the vulva. The space between the skin and mucous membrane is filled with a fatty tissue and fibrous bands, some fibres of the constrictor vaginæ muscle, vessels, and nerves.

We speak, also, of the lips of a wound, ulcer, &c., when alluding to the edges of these solutions of continuity.

LIPA, λιπα, fat; also, Lippitude.

LIPARA, from λιπαρος, 'fatty.' Plasters, containing much oil or fat.

LIPARIA, see Polysarcia.

LIPAROCÉ'LE, Lipocel'le, from λιπαρος, 'fatty,' and κηλη, 'tumour.' Lipoma, or fatty tumour of the serotum, Her'nia pinguedino'sa seroti.

LIPARODES, Fatty.

LIPARODÉ, Cerate.

LIPAROLÉ, Pomatum, Pommade.

LIPAROTES, see Polysarcia.

LIPAROTRICH'IA, from λιπαρος, 'fatty,' and Σπιξ, τριχος, 'hair.' Too great oiliness of the hair.

LIPARUS, Fatty.

LIPASMA, see Polysarcia.

LIPEMANIA, Melancholy, see Lypemania.

LIPHEMIA, Leiphæmia.

LIPHEMOS, Leiphæmos.

LIPOCELE, Liparocèle.

LIPODERMIA, Apothia.

LIPODERMOS, Leipodermos.

LIPOMA, Lypo'ma, from λιπα, 'fat.' A fatty tumour of an encysted or other character.

LIPOMATODES, Lipomatous.

LIPOM'ATOUS, Lipomato'sus, Lipomato'des, (F.) Lipomateux. Having the nature of lipoma—as a 'lipomatous mass.'

LIPOMÉ'RIA, Leipome'ria, from λιπω, 'I leave,' and μέρος, a 'part.' Monstrosity from arrest of development, or from defect. Deficiency of one or more of the parts of the body; for example, in one who has only four fingers.

LIPOPSYCHIA, Syncope.

LIPOS, Fat.

LIPOSIS, see Polysarcia.

LIQUIDAM'BAR STYRACIF'LUA, Liquidam'bra, Sweet gum, White gum. Ord. Balsaminæ. The name of the tree which affords the Liquid amber and Storax liquida, Styrax liquida or Liquid storax. Liquid amber is a resinous juice of a yellow colour, inclining to red; at first of about the consistence of turpentine; by age, hardening into a solid, brittle mass. It is not used medicinally.

Styrax Liquida is obtained from this plant by boiling. There are two sorts,—one more pure than the other. It is used occasionally, as a stoma'chie, in the form of plaster.

LIQUIDE AMNIOTI'QUE, Liquor Amnii—l. Céphalo-rachidi'enne, Cephalo-spinal fluid.

LIQUIDUM NERVEUM, Nervous fluid.

LIQUIRITIA, Glycyrrhiza.

LIQUOR, (liqueo, 'I am liquid,') Liqua'men, Hygros, Hygrotis, (F.) Liqueur. A name given to many compound liquids, and especially to those the bases of which are water and alcohol.

LIQUOR ACIDUS HALLERI, Elixir acidum Halleri—l. Æthereus, Ether—l. Æthereus sulphuricus, Spiritus ætheris sulphurici.

LIQUOR ALU'MINIS COMPOSITUS, Aqua alu'minis composita seu aluminosa Bateana, Bates's alum water, Compound solution of Alum, (F.) Liqueur d'alumine composée. (Aluminis, zinci sulphat. sing. $\frac{\text{ss}}$, aqua fervent. Oij. Dissolve and filter through paper.) Detergent and stimulant. Used as a collyrium, when properly diluted, in ophthalmia; as an injection in gleet, leucorrhœa, &c.

LIQUOR EX AMMONIÁ ET OLEO SUCCINI, Spiritus ammoniæ succinatus

LIQUOR AMMO'NIÆ, L. ammoniæ pura, Al'cali ammoniacum fluidum, Ammoni'a liquida seu caustica liquida seu pura liquida, Lixivium ammoniacal'e, Spiritus salis ammoniaci aquosus, Aqua ammoniæ seu ammoniæ causticæ, Liquid ammonia, Solution of ammonia, (F.) Ammoniaque liquide. Directed to be made in the Pharm. U. S. from muriate of Ammonia, in fine powder; and Lime, each a pound; distilled water a pint; water, Line fluid ounces. The water is employed to slake the lime; this is mixed with the muriate of ammonia and put into a glass retort in a sand-bath. Heat is applied so as to drive off the ammonia, which is made to pass into a quart bottle containing the distilled water. To every ounce of the product three and a half fluidrachms of distilled water are added, or as much as may be necessary to raise its s. g. to 0.96. This Liquor Ammonia may also be made by mixing one part of liquor ammonia fortior with two parts of distilled water. (Ph. U. S. 1842.) Its s. g. is 0.960. LIQUOR AMMONIE FORTIOR, Stronger solution of ammonia (Ph. U. S.) is an aqueous solution of ammonia of the s. g. 0.882. Liquor ammonia is stimulant, antacid, and rubefacient. Dose, grt. x to xx, in water or milk.

LIQUOR AMMONIE ACETA'TIS, Alcali ammoniacum acetatum, A. volatili acetatum, Aqua acetatis ammoniacæ seu ammoniacæ acetatæ, Solution of acetate of ammonia, Acetas ammoniacæ, Spirit of Mindere'rus, Sal ammoniacum vegetabile, Spiritus ophthalmicus Mindere'ri, Sal acetosus ammoniacalis. (Acid. acetic. dilut. Oij, Ammon. carbonat. in pulv. Add the salt to the acid until it is saturated. Ph. U. S. 1851.) A sudorific; externally, cooling. Dose, fʒij to fʒiiss.

LIQUOR AMMONIE SESQUICARBONATIS, Liquor Ammonia Subcarbonatis.

LIQUOR AMMONIE CITRA'TIS, Solution of Citrate of Ammonia. This preparation is official in the Dublin Pharmacopœia. It is made by saturating a solution of citric acid with sesquicarbonate of ammonia. It is given in cases of adynamic fever.

LIQUOR AMMONIE SUBCARBONA'TIS, Liquor Ammonia Sesquicarbonatis, Solutio subcarbonatis ammoniacæ, Aqua carbonatis ammoniacæ, Solution of subcarbonate of ammonia, Water of carbonate of ammonia. (Ammonia carbon. ʒiv, aqua destillat. Oj. Dissolve and filter through paper.) Use;—the same as that of the carbonate of ammonia.

LIQUOR AMMONII HYDROTHIODIS, Ammonia sulphuretum—l. Ammonii vinosus, Spiritus ammonia.

LIQUOR AM'NII, Aqua amnii. The liquor of the amnios. (F.) Eau ou Liqueur de l'arnios, Liquide amniotique. The fluid exhaled by the amnios, and which envelops the fœtus during the whole period of utero-gestation. It is often simply called the waters, (F.) Les Eaux. Its relative quantity diminishes as pregnancy advances, although its absolute quantity continues to increase till the period of delivery. In some women, only five or six ounces are met with: in others, it amounts to pints. It is limpid, yellowish, or whitish; exhales a faint smell, and has a slightly saline taste. It contains water in considerable quantity; albumen; chloride of sodium; phosphate of lime; an alkaline substance; and a particular acid. It facilitates the dilatation of the uterus, and aids delivery by acting as a soft wedge enclosed in its membranes, Bag of waters, Poche des Eaux, &c. It is probably innoxious to useful purposes in the nutrition of the fœtus.

LIQUOR AMNII, FALSE. The fluid contained between the amnion and chorion in the early periods of foetal existence.

LIQUOR, ANODYNE, HOFFMANN'S, Spiritus ætheris sulphurici compositus—l. Anodynus martialis, Alcohol sulphurico-æthereus ferri.

LIQUOR ANOD'YNIUS TEREBINTHINA'TUS. A formula prescribed by Rademacher in cases of gallstone, and of obstructions and indurations of the liver and spleen. It was composed of Hoffmann's anodyne liquor ʒj; rectified oil of turpentine ʒij. Dose, 5 to 10 drops. It resembles the Remède de Durande, Mixture lithontriptique de Durand, M. de Whitt, Éthérolé d'essence de térébenthine, which is formed of Sulphuric ether, 30 parts; Essence of turpentine, 15 parts. It is used in the same cases.

LIQUOR ARSENICA'LIS, L. Potasæ arsenitæ (Ph. U. S.), Solutio arsenicalis seu arsenicata seu arsenitæ kalicæ, Arsenical solution, Mineræ solvent, Arsenis potasæ liquidus seu potassæ aquosus, Fowler's solution of arsenic, Solvens mineræ, Italian poison, Acqua seu Aqua Toffania, Acqua della Toffana, A. di Napoli, Acquetta [ʒ], Tasteless aque drop, (F.) Liqueur arsenicale. (Acid. Arsenios. in frustulis, potassæ carbonatis pur., sing. gr. lxxiv., aqua destillat. q. s. Boil together the arsenious acid and carbonate of potassa with twelve fluidounces of distilled water, in a glass vessel, until the arsenic is dissolved. When the solution is cold, add Spirit. lavand. c. fʒiv, and as much distilled water as will make the whole one pint. Ph. U. S.) fʒj contains gr. ss of the arsenious acid. Dose, grt. x.

For Pearson's Solution, see Arseniate of Soda.

LIQUOR ARSENICI CHLO'RIDI, Solution of Chloride of Arsenic, of the London Pharmacopœia of 1851, is made by boiling Arsenious acid ʒss, in hydrochloric acid fʒiiss (Imp. meas.) mixed with a fluidounce of distilled water, until it is dissolved: then adding water to make the quantity a pint (Imp. meas.) Each fluidounce contains a grain and a half of arsenious acid, or an equivalent quantity of terchloride. Properties the same as those of Liquor Arsenicalis. It is a substitute for, and imitation of De Valangin's Arsenical Solution, Solutio solventis mineræ, lalis, much used by many British practitioners. Dose, grt. v-x.

LIQUOR ARSENICI ET HYDRARGYEI IODIDI, see Arsenic and Mercury, iodide of—l. Barii chloridi, Baryta, muriate of, solution of—l. Bellosti, L. Hydrargyri nitrici—l. Calcii chloridi, see Calcis murias.

LIQUOR CALCIS, Solutio calcis, Aqua calcis seu benedicta seu Calcaria ustæ, Calcaria pura liquida, Solution of Lime, Lime Water, (F.) Eau de chaux. Calcis ʒiv., aq. destill. cong. Pour the water on the lime, and stir. Let it stand in a covered vessel three hours; bottle the lime and water in stopped bottles, and use the clear solution.) It is astringent, tonic, and antacid; and is used in diarrhœa, diabetes, heartburn, &c., and as a lotion to foul and cancerous ulcers, &c. Dose, fʒij to Oss, in milk.

LIQUOR CALCIS CHLORINA'TÆ, Solution of Chlorinated Lime (Ph. D.), is made by triturating half a pound of chlorinated lime with half a gallon of water; shaking the mixture; filtering, and keeping in a well-stopped bottle. Used in the same cases as chlorinated lime. Dose, fʒss to fʒj.

LIQUOR CALCIS COMPOSITUS, Aqua Calcis composita seu benedicta composita, Compound lime water. (F.) Eau de chaux composé. (Liquaiaic. ras. lbss, rad. glycyrrh. ʒj, cort. sassafra, ʒss; semin. coriand. ʒij, liquor calcis, Ovj. Macerate for two days, and filter.) It is stimulant, diaphoretic, and astringent, and is used in cutaneous affections.

LIQUOR CALCIS MURIATIS, see Calcis murias—l. Cereris, Cerevisia—l. Chloreti natri, L. sodæ chlorinatæ—l. Chlorini, see Chlorine—l. Chlorureti natri, L. Sodæ chlorinatæ—l. Chlorureti sodæ, L. sodæ chlorinatæ.

LIQUOR CUPRI AMMONIA'TI, Liquor Cupri ammonio-sulphatis, Aqua seu solutio cupri ammoniatæ seu sappharina, Blue eyewater, Solution of ammoniated copper; (F.) Liqueur ou Eau de cuivre ammoniacal. (Cupri ammoniat. ʒj, aqua destill. Oj. Dissolve and filter the solution through paper. Ph. L.) Corrosive and detergent. Used externally to foul ulcers; and diluted with an equal part of distilled water, it is applied by means a hair pencil to specks and films on the eye.

LIQUOR CUPRI AMMONIO-SULPHATIS, Liquor Cupri ammoniati.

LIQUOR CUPRI SULPHATIS COMPOSITUS, Aqua cupri vitriolati composita. (Cupri sulphat., alumin. sulphat. āā ʒij , aquæ puræ Oij., acid sulph. ʒij . Boil the salts in the water until they are dissolved; then filter the liquor, and add the acid.) Used as an astringent in epistaxis, &c. It was also called Aqua Styptica.

LIQUOR CYRENIACUS, Benjamin—l. Entericus, Succus entericus—l. Excitans, Spiritus ammoniæ succinatus.

LIQUOR FERRI ALKALINI, Solution of Alkaline Iron, (F.) Liqueur de fer alcaline. (Ferri ʒiiss , acid. nitricæ, ʒij , aquæ destillat. fʒvj , liq. potass. subcarb. fʒvj . To the acid and water mixed, add the iron; and, after the effervescence, add the clear solution, gradually, to the liq. potassæ subcarb.; shaking it occasionally till it assumes a deep brown-red colour, and the effervescence stops. After six hours' settling, pour off the clear solution. Ph. L.) It is tonic like other preparations of iron. Dose, fʒss to fʒiss .

LIQUOR FERRI IODIDI, Solution of Iodide of Iron, Syrupus Ferri iodidi, Syrup of Iodide of Iron. (Iodin. ʒij , Ferri rament. ʒj , Sacchar. pulv. ʒxij , Aquæ destillat. q. s. Mix the iodine with fʒx of the distilled water, in a porcelain or glass vessel, and gradually add the iron filings, constantly stirring. Heat the mixture gently until the liquor acquires a light greenish colour; then, having added the sugar, continue the heat a short time, and filter. Lastly, pour distilled water upon the filter, and allow it to pass until the whole of the filtered liquor measures twenty fluidounces. Keep the solution in closely stopped bottles.—Ph. U. S.) Dose, 20 or 30 drops.

LIQUOR FERRI MURIATIS, Tinctura ferri muriatis.

LIQUOR FERRI NITRATIS, L. Ferri Sesquinitrat'is seu ternitrat'is, Solutio Ferri nitrat'is, Solution of nitrate, of ternitrate of sesquioxide, or of sesquinitrate of iron, has been recommended in chronic diarrhoea and dysentery. Its virtues exactly resemble those of chloride of iron. It is prepared as follows:—Ferri fili, incis. ʒj , Acid. nitricæ, fʒij , Aq. destillat. q. s. Mix the acid and a pint of distilled water, until gas ceases to be given off; filter, and add distilled water to make ʒxxx .—Ph. U. S.) Dose, 10 to 20 drops.

LITHATE, Urate—l. of Soda, Urate of soda.

LITHECTASY, Lithectasia, Lithagoectasia, Lithodectasia, from λιθος, 'a stone,' and εκτασις, 'dilatation;' Cystectasy. An operation which consists in extracting stone from the bladder by dilating the neck of the organ, after making an incision in the perineum, and opening the membranous portion of the urethra.

LITH'IA, Lithiasis, Lithogen'ia, Uri'asis, Urolithi'asis, Cachex'ia calculosa, Calculi Morbus, Lapillatio, Generatio calculi, from λιθος, 'a stone.' The formation of stone, gravel, or concretions in the human body. Also, an affection in which the eyelids are edged with small, hard, and stone-like concretions.

LITH'IA, CARBONATE OF, Lith'ia Carbonas, Lithium Carbonicum, (F.) Carbonate de Lithine. A salt found in certain mineral waters, which have been serviceable in lithuria. Hence, it has been suggested in that morbid condition.

LITHIA RENALIS ARENOSA, Gravel—l. Renalis, Nephrolithiasis—l. Vesicalis, Calculi, vesical.

LITHOECTASIA, Lithectasy.

LITHODIALYSIS, from λιθος, 'a stone,' and διαλυω, 'to dissolve.' The dissolving of a stone in the bladder.

LITHODRAS'SIC, Lithodras'sicus, (F.) Lithodras'sique, from λιθος, 'a stone,' and δρασσειν, 'to seize hold of.' An epithet given to a form of stone forceps—Pince lithodras'sique—used in the operation of lithotry, by MM. Meirieu and Tanchou.

LITHOGENIA, Lithia.

LITHOID, Lithoides, Lithoid'es; from λιθος, 'stone,' and ειδος, 'resemblance.' Of the nature of stone, or resembling stone: as LITHOÏDES OS, see Temporal bone.

LITHOLABE (F.), Litholabum, from λιθος, 'a stone,' and λαβω, λαμβανω, 'I seize hold of.' An instrument, employed for laying hold of a stone in the bladder, and keeping it fixed, so that lithotric instruments can act upon it.

LITHOLABON, Forceps, (Lithotomy.)

LITHOL'ABUM, from λιθος, 'a stone,' and λαμβανω, 'I seize.' An instrument concerned in extracting stone from the bladder. It had various shapes.—Fabricius ab Aquapendente, Hil-danus.

LITH'OLYTE, from λιθος, 'a stone,' and λυω, 'I dissolve.' An instrument, of the catheter kind, for conveying solvents of calculi into the bladder.

LITHOLYTIC, Lithotriptic.

LITHOME'TRA, from λιθος, 'a stone,' and μετρα, 'the uterus.' Osseous, or other concretions of the uterus.

LITHONEPHRITIS, see Nephritis.

LITHONLYTIC, Lithotriptic.

LITHONTHRYPTIC, Lithotriptic.

LITHONTRIP'TIC, Lithotripticus, Lithotryp'tic, Litholyt'ic, Lithonlyt'ic, Calculif'ragus, Sacif'ragus, from λιθος, 'a stone,' and θρυπτω, 'I break in pieces.' A remedy believed to be capable of dissolving calculi in the urinary passages. There is not much reliance to be placed upon such remedies. By antilithics, exhibited according to the chemical character of the calculus (see Calculi, urinary,) the disease may be prevented from increasing; but most of the vaunted lithotripts for dissolving the calculus already formed have been found unworthy of the high encomiums which have accompanied their introduction.

LITHOPÆ'DION, Infans lapideus, Osteopæ'dion, from λιθος, 'a stone,' and παις, παιδος, 'a child.' A fœtus, petrified in the body of the mother.

LITHOPH'AGUS, from λιθος, 'a stone,' and φαγω, 'I eat.' A stone-eater. Cases are on record of persons who have swallowed stones for purposes of exhibition.

LITHOPH'THISIS, see Calculi, pulmonary, and Lithiasis pulmonum.

LITHOPRINE, Lithotry.

LITHOPRIONE, from λιθος, 'a stone,' and πριων, 'a saw.' An instrument proposed by M. Leroy for preventing the fragments of a calculus, when subjected to lithotry, from falling into the bladder. It is a variety of litholabe.

LITHOPRISIE, Lithotry.

LITHORINEUR, from λιθος, 'a stone,' and ρινειν, 'to file.' An instrument, proposed by MM. Meirieu and Tanchou for filing down calculi in the bladder.

LITHOS, Calculus.

LITHOSPERMUM OFFICINA'LE, Milium Solis, Egon'yachon, Gromwell, Bastard A'kanet, Little-wale, (F.) Grémil officinal, Herbe aux Perles. Ord. Boraginæ. The seeds of this plant were formerly supposed, from their stony hardness, (λιθος, 'a stone,' and σπερμα, 'seed,') to be efficacious in calculous affections. They have, also, been considered diuretic.

LITHOSPERMUM VILLOSUM, Achusa tinctoria.

LITHOTERE'THIRUM, from λιθος, 'stone,' and τριειν, 'to rub.' A lithotritor.

LITHOTHLIBIE (F.), from λιθος, 'stone,' and θλιβω, 'I crush.' The crushing of a friable calculus between a finger, passed by the rectum or vagina as far as the bas-fond of the bladder, and a catheter introduced into the bladder.

LITHOTHRYPsis, Lithotry.

LITHOTRYPTORS, see Lithotripsy.

LITHOTOME, Lithotomus, from λιθος, 'a stone,' τεινω, 'I cut,' and τομη, 'an incision.' This name has been given to a number of instruments of different shapes and sizes, which are used in the operation for the stone, to cut the neck or body of the bladder. They ought, with more propriety, to be called Cystotomes.

The Lithotome Caché of Frère Côme is the most known, and is still occasionally used. It is composed of a handle, and a flattened sheath, slightly curved: in this there is a cutting blade, which can be forced out, by pressing upon a bascule or lever, to any extent that may be wished by the operator.

A Double Lithotome was used by Dupuytren in his bilateral operation. See Lithotomy.

LITHOTOMIST. Same etymon. Lithotomus. One who devotes himself entirely to operating for the stone. One who practises lithotomy.

LITHOTOMY, Lithotomia, Cystotomia, Urolithotomia, Sectio vesicalis, Lithocystotomy. Same etymon. (F.) Taille. The operation by which a stone is extracted from the bladder. The different methods, according to which this operation may be practised, are reducible to five principal; each of which has experienced numerous modifications.

1. The Method of Celsus, Meth'odus Celsiana, Cystotomia cum apparatu parvo, Apparatus Minor, Cutting on the Gripe. This consisted in cutting upon the stone, after having made it project at the perinæum by means of the fingers introduced into the rectum. This method was attended with several inconveniences; such as the difficulty of dividing the parts neatly, injury done to the bladder, as well as the impossibility of drawing down the stone in many persons. It is sometimes, also, called Meth'odus Guytoniana; from Guy de Chauliac having endeavoured to remove from it the discredit into which it had fallen in his time. It was termed Apparatus Minor, (F.) Le petit appareil, from the small number of instruments required in it.

2. Apparatus Major. This method was invented, in 1520, by John de Romani, a surgeon of Cremona, and communicated by him to Mariano-Santo-di-Barletta, whence it was long called Mariano's Method, Sectio Maria'na. It was called, also, Apparatus Major, and Cystotomia seu Meth'odus cum apparatu magno, (F.) Le grand appareil, from the number of instruments required in it. An incision was made on the median line; but the neck of the bladder was not comprehended in it. It was merely dilated. The greater apparatus was liable to many inconveniences, such as ecchymoses; contusion; inflammation of the neck of the bladder; abscesses; urinary fistulæ; incontinence of urine; impotence, &c.

3. The High Operation, Apparatus altus, Cystotomia cum apparatu alto, C. Hypogastrica, Epicystotomia, Laparocystotomia, Sectio seu Meth'odus Franconiana, S. Hypogastrica seu alta, (F.) Haut appareil, Taille Hypogastrique, Taille sus-pubienne, was first practised by Peter Franco, about the middle of the 16th century. It consisted in pushing the stone above the pubis by the fingers introduced into the rectum. Rousset afterwards proposed to make the bladder rise above the pubis by injecting it. The method had fallen into discredit, when Frère Côme revived it. It is used when the calculus is very large. It was practised by opening first the membranous part of the urethra upon the catheter passed into the canal. Through this incision, the Sonde à dard—a species of catheter, having a spear-pointed stilet—was introduced into the bladder.

An incision was then made into the linea alba, above the symphysis pubis, of about four or five fingers' breadth, and the peritoneum detached to avoid wounding it. The stilet was pushed through the bladder, and used as a director for the knife, with which the bladder was divided anteriorly, as far as the neck; and the stone extracted. It was performed in England by Douglass, in 1719, and since by others, with various modifications.

4. The Lateral Operation, Hypocystotomia, Cystotomia lateralis, Cystauchenotomia, Cystotrachelotomia, Urethrocystauchenotomia, Urethrocystotrachelotomia, Sectio lateralis, Apparatus lateralis, (F.) Appareil lateralisé, so named from the prostate gland and neck of the bladder being cut laterally, was probably invented by Peter Franco. It was introduced into France by Frère Jacques de Beaulieu. He performed it with rude instruments, invented by himself, and improved by the suggestions of some of the Parisian surgeons. In England, it received its earliest and most important improvements from the celebrated Cheselden. It is the method practised at the present day, according to different modes of procedure. In this method, the patient is placed upon a table; his legs and thighs are bent and separated; the hands being tied to the feet. The perinæum is then shaved, and a staff is introduced into the bladder; the handle being turned towards the right groin of the patient. An oblique incision is now made from the raphe to the middle of a line drawn from the anus to the tuberosity of the ischium of the left side; and, taking the staff for a guide, the integuments, areolar tissue of the perinæum, membranous portion of the urethra, transversus perinæi muscle, bulbo-cavernosus, some fibres of the levator ani, the prostate and neck of the bladder, are successively divided. For this latter part of the operation, the knife, the beaked bistoury, Bistouri or Lithotome Caché, cutting gorget, &c., is used, according to the particular preference. The forceps are now introduced into the bladder, and the stone extracted. In the operation, care must be taken not to injure the rectum, or the great arterial vessels, distributed to the perinæum.

A variety of the Lateral Apparatus, called by the French Appareil latéral, consisted in cutting into the bas-fond of the bladder, without touching the neck of that organ; but it was soon abandoned, on account of its inconveniences.

The method of Le Cat and of Pajola—Urethrocysteo-aneurysmatotomia—consists in dividing the prostate in part only,—the enlargement of the wound being effected by a peculiar dilator.

The Bilateral Operation is founded on that of Celsus. It consists in making an incision posterior to the bulb of the urethra, and anterior to the anus, involving both sides of the perinæum by crossing the raphe at right angles: an incision is then made through the membranous part of the urethra, and the prostate may be cut bilaterally, either with the double lithotome of Dupuytren, or the prostatic bisector of Dr. Stevens, of New York.

5. Lithotomy by the Rectum, Proctocystotomia, Sectio recto-vesicalis, (F.) Taille par la Rectum, Taille postérieure, T. Recto-vésicale. This was proposed by Vegetius in the 16th century; but it was never noticed until M. Sanson, in the year 1817, attracted attention to it; since which time it has been successfully performed in many instances. It consists in penetrating the bladder through the paries corresponding with the rectum, by first cutting the spincter ani and rectum about the root of the penis, and penetrating the bladder by the neck of that organ, dividing the prostate,—or by its bas-fond.

Lithotomy in women, from the shortness of the urethra, is a comparatively insignificant operation.

LITHOTOMY BY THE RECTUM, see Lithotomy—1. by the Vagina, see Lithotomy.

LITHOTRESIS, Lithotrixy.

LITHOTRIPSIS, Lithotrixy.

LITHOTRIPSY, Lithotrixy.

LITHOTRIPATORS, see Lithotrixy.

LITHOTRITES, see Lithotrixy.

LITHOTRITOR, see Lithotrixy.

LITHOTRITY, Lithotritia, Lithotryp'sy, Lithotripsy, Lithotrip'sy, Lithothrypsis, Lithotres'sis, Lithotripsis, Lithoceno'sis, Lithoclastia, Lithoprivie, Lithoprisme, (F.) Braiement de la Pierre, from λιθος, 'a stone,' and τριβω, 'I break.' The operation of breaking, bruising or sawing the stone in the bladder. It has been performed, of late years, with success, by French, and, after them, by English and American surgeons. The instruments employed for this purpose are called, in the abstract, Lithotrites, Lithotriteurs, Lithotritors, Lithotriptors, Lithothryptors, Lithotrype'tæ and Lithoclasts. The most celebrated are those of Civiale, Jacobson, Heurteloup and Weiss. See Brise-Pierre articulée; and Peruteur à Marteau.

LITHOTRYPETÆ, see Lithotrixy.

LITHOXIDURIA, from λιθος, 'a stone,' αξίδη, and ουρον, 'urine.' The discharge of urine containing lithic or xanthic oxide.

LITHURIA, Lithuria, Lithure'sis, Lithorrhœe (Piorry); from λιθος, 'a stone,' and ουρον, 'urine.' Lithic, or Lithic Acid, Diathesis. The condition of the system and of the urine in which deposits of lithic acid and the lithates—Lithic sediments or concretions—take place in the urine. See Urine.

LITHUS, Calculus.

LITMUS, Lichen roccella.

LITRA, Pound.

LITRE, Litra. A measure containing a cubed decimètre, which is equal nearly to 2.1135 pints. The ancients gave the name litra, λίτρα, to a measure capable of containing 16 ounces of liquid.

LITSÆA CUBEBA, Piper cubeba—1. Pipe-rita, Piper cubeba.

LITTLE-WALE, Lithospermum officinale.

LITUS, Liniment.

LIVÊCHE, Ligusticum levisticum.

LIVER, Sax. liver, Hepar, Jecur, Jec'innus, (F.) Foie. The liver is the largest gland in the body. It is an azygous organ; unsymmetrical; very heavy; and of a brownish-red colour; occupying the whole of the right hypochondrium, and a part of the epigastrium. Above, it corresponds to the diaphragm; below, to the stomach, transverse colon, and right kidney; behind, to the vertebral column, aorta, and vena cava; and before, to the base of the chest. Its upper surface is convex; the lower, irregularly convex and concave, so that anatomists have divided the organ into three lobes,—a large or right or colic lobe;—a lesser lobe, lobule, or inferior lobe, the Lobulus Spigelii,—and a middle or left lobe. At its inferior surface, are observed:—1. A Sulcus or Furrow or Fissure, called horizontal or longitudinal or great fissure, Fossa Umbilicalis, (F.) Sillon horizontal, longitudinal ou de la veine ombilicale, Sulcus antero-posterior Jec'oris seu horizontalis Jec'oris seu longitudinalis Jec'oris seu sinist'iter Jec'oris seu Umbilicalis, which lodges, in the fœtus, the umbilical vein and ductus venosus. 2. The Principal Fissure, termed Sulcus Transversus, Fossa transver'sa, Transverse fossa, Sinus Porta'rum, Porta, P. seu Manus Jec'oris seu He'patis Fossa or Fissure of the Vena porta, Portal

Fissure or Fossa, (F.) Sillon transversal ou de la veine porte, which receives the sinus of the vena porta. 3. The Fissure of the Vena Cava infer'rior, Sillon de la veine cave inférieure, situate at the posterior margin of the organ, and lodging the vena cava inferior. 4. The Lobulus Spigelii, or posterior portal eminence. 5. The anterior portal eminence, Auri'ga seu Lobulus anon'ymus. 6. Depressions corresponding to the upper surface of the stomach, gall-bladder, arch of the colon, right kidney, &c. Continued from the fossa umbilicalis is a small fossa, called Fossa Ductûs Venosi, between the left lobe and Lobulus Spigelii. The posterior margin of the liver is very thick; much more so than the anterior. The liver is surrounded by a serous or peritoneal covering, which forms for it a suspensory or broad ligament and two lateral and triangular ligaments. See Falx. The blood-vessels of the liver are very numerous. The hepatic artery and vena porta furnish it with the blood necessary for its nutrition and the secretion of bile. The hepatic veins convey away the blood, which has served those purposes. The lymphatic vessels are very numerous; some being superficial; others deep-seated. The nerves are, also, numerous, and proceed from the pneumogastric, diaphragmatic, and from the hepatic plexuses.

The intimate structure of the parenchyma of the liver has been well studied. When cut, it presents a porous appearance, owing to the division of a multitude of small vessels. When torn, it seems formed of granulations;—the intimate structure of which has given rise to many hypotheses. In these granulations are contained the radicles of the excretory ducts of the bile; the union of which constitutes the hepatic duct. According to Mr. Kiernan, the intimate structure consists of a number of lobules—hepatic lobules, hepatic islets—composed of intralobular or hepatic veins, which convey the blood back that has been inservient to the secretion of bile. The interlobular plexus of veins is formed by branches of the vena porta, which contain both the blood of the vena porta and of the hepatic artery; both of which, according to Mr. Kiernan, furnish the pabulum of the biliary secretion. The biliary ducts form likewise an interlobular plexus, having an arrangement similar to that of the interlobular veins. Mr. Kiernan's views are embraced by many anatomists; but are denied by some.

The liver is the only organ, which, independently of the red blood carried to it by the hepatic artery, receives black blood by the vena porta. The general opinion is, that the vena porta is the fluid which furnishes bile, whilst that of the artery affords blood for the nutrition of the liver. It is probable, however, that bile is secreted from the blood of the latter vessel. Besides bile the liver forms sugar, and is a great assimilating organ.

The liver is liable to a number of diseases. The principal are—Hepatitis or inflammation, cancer, biliary calculi, encysted and other tumours or tubercles, hydatids, &c.; and it has, at times, been the fashion to refer to it as the cause of symptoms with which it is no wise connected.

LIVER, Hepar. Under this name the ancients designated several substances, having a brownish colour analogous to that of the liver; and composed of sulphur and some other body. See Potassæ Sulphuretum, Liver of Sulphur.

LIVER of Antimony is the semi-vitreous sulphuret, &c.

LIVER DISEASE, Hepatopathia—1. Fatty, Adiposis hepatica—1. Gin, L. nutmeg—1. Gin-drinkers', L. nutmeg—1. Granulated, Cirrhosis of the liver.

LIVER-GROWN, Tu'mido jec'orê præ'ditus. Having a large liver.

LIVER, HOBNAIL, Cirrhosis of the liver—1. Mammillated, Cirrhosis of the liver.

LIVER, NUTMEG, Hepar variegatum, Tuberiform liver. An appearance of the liver when cut across, resembling that of the section of a nutmeg, Myristica tivo hepatis, supposed by some to be the result of intemperance in the use of alcoholic drinks; but occurring under other causes. The terms whisky liver, gin-drinkers' liver, and gin liver, occasionally applied to it, are, consequently, not distinctive.

LIVER SPOT, Chloasma.

LIVER, TUBERCULATED, Cirrhosis of the liver—1. Tuberiform, L. nutmeg.

LIVER WEED, Hepatica triloba.

LIVER, WHISKY, Liver, nutmeg.

LIVER WORT, Hepatica triloba, Marchantia polymorpha—1. Wort, ground, ash-coloured, Lichen caninus—1. Wort, Iceland, Lichen Islandicus—1. Wort, noble, Hepatica triloba.

LIVIDUS MUSCULUS, Pectinalis.

LIXIVIA TARTARIZATA, Potassæ tartras—1. Vitriolata, Potassæ sulphas—1. Vitriolata sulphurea, Potassæ sulphas cum sulphure.

LIXIVIE seu KALICUM ACETAS, Potassæ acetas.

LIXIV'IAL, Lixivio'sus, from lixivium, 'lee.' (F.) Lixivial, Lixivieux. An ancient term for salts obtained by washing vegetable ashes,—such as the fixed alkalies.

LIXIVIA'TION, Elixivia'tion, Lixivia'tio, Same etymon. An operation which consists in washing wood-ashes with water, so as to dissolve the soluble parts. The filtered liquor is the lee.

LIXIV'UM, Lixiv'ia, Con'ia, Lee, Ley, Lye, (F.) Lessive. Any solution containing potassa or soda—Sal lixivio'sum—in excess; from lix, 'lye.'

LIXIV'UM AMMONIACALE, Liqueur ammoniacæ—1. Ammoniacale aromaticum, Spiritus ammoniacæ aromaticus—1. Causticum, Liqueur potassæ—1. Magistrale, Liqueur potassæ—1. Saponarium, Liqueur potassæ—1. Tartari, Liqueur potassæ subcarbonatis.

LIXIVUS CINIS, Potash of commerce.

LIZARD, Lacer'ta, Lacer'tus, said to be so called in consequence of its limbs resembling the arms (lacerti) of man (?). Saura, Sauros, (F.) Lézard. Lizards were formerly employed in medicine as sudorifics; and were, at one time, extolled in syphilis, cutaneous affections, and in cancer.

LIZARD'S TAIL, Saururus cernuus.

LOADED, see Enduit.

LOADSTONE, Magnet.

LOATHING, Disgust.

LOBARIA ISLANDICA, Lichen Islandicus—1. Pulmonaria, Lichen pulmonarius—1. Saxatilis, Lichen Saxatilis.

LOBE, Lobus. A round, projecting part of an organ. The liver, lungs, and brain, for example, have lobes.

LOBE OF THE EAR, Lob'ule of the Ear, is a soft, rounded prominence, which terminates the circumference of the pavilion inferiorly, and which is pierced in those who wear rings.

The under surface of the brain is divided into two anterior, two lateral, two posterior, and two intermediate lobes or processes. These Chaussier calls lobules of the brain: the cerebral hemispheres he terms lobes.

LOBE, BIVEN'TRAL. A wedge-shaped lobe of the cerebellum, situate behind the amygdala.

LOBE DOUDÉNAL, Lobulus Spigelii—1. Pancreatique, Lobulus Spigelii—1. Petit du foie, Lobulus Spigelii—1. de Spigel, Lobulus Spigelii.

LOBELIA, BLUE, L. syphilitica.

LOBE'LIA CARDINA'LIS, Lobelia coccin'ea, Tra-che'llium Ameri'canum, Card'inal Plant, Card'inal Flower, Scarlet Lobelia. Ord. Lobeliaceæ. This species is indigenous in the United States. It blooms in autumn, having beautiful carmine flowers. The root is a reputed anthelmintic with the Indians.

LOBELIA COCCINEA, L. Cardinalis.

LOBELIA INFLA'TA, Indian or Wild Tobacco. Puke Weed, Asthma Weed, Eyebright, Emet'ic Weed, Lobe'lia (Ph. U. S.). The prominent virtues of this American plant are those of an emetic. In smaller doses it is sedative, and has been given as a pectoral in croup, asthma, &c. It is, also, sudorific and cathartic, and is an æro-narcotic poison. Twenty grains act as an emetic.

LOBELIA, PALESPIKED, L. spicata.

LOBELIA PINIFOLIA. A South African plant, the root of which is excitant and diaphoretic. A decoction of it is sometimes used in the Cape Colony as a domestic remedy in cutaneous affections, chronic rheumatism, and gout.

LOBELIA, SCARLET, L. Cardinalis.

LOBELIA SPICA'TA, Palespiked Lobelia; indigenous: is a diuretic.

LOBELIA SYPHILIT'ICA, L. reflex'a, Ranun'culus Virginia'nus, Rapunt'ium Syphilit'icum, Blue Lobelia, Blue Card'inal Flower. The root of this plant, which is indigenous in the United States, is an emetic and drastic cathartic. It has been used in syphilis; hence its name. The mode of preparing it is to boil $\frac{3}{4}$ ss of the dried root in Oxij of water, until the fluid is reduced to Ovij. Dose, Oss.

LOBES BIJUMEAUX, Quadrigena tubercula—1. Cerebral, see Lobe.

LOBES OF THE LIVER, Pinna seu Lobi seu Pin-nulæ He'patis. See Lobule.

LOBES, OPTIC, Quadrigena tubercula—1. Optiques, Quadrigena tubercula.

LOBI HEPATIS, Lobes of the liver—1. Pulmonum, see Pulmo.

LOB'ULAR, Lobula'ris. Same etymon as Lobule. Relating to or belonging to a lobule:—as lobular pneumonia, (F.) Pneumonie lobulaire, P. mamelonnée, P. disséminée. Pneumonia anatomically characterized by nuclei of red or gray hepatization disseminated in variable numbers in one or both lungs.

LOBULAR BILIARY PLEXUS. The plexus formed of lobular hepatic ducts, which are derived chiefly from the interlobular. This plexus forms the principal part of the substance of the lobule.

LOBULAR VENOUS PLEXUS. The plexus interposed between the interlobular portal veins, and the intralobular hepatic vein.

LOB'ULE, Lob'ulus, diminutive of lobus, 'a lobe.' A little lobe. Mr. Kiernan uses the term lobule, for the acinus of the liver of many anatomists.

LOBULE OF THE CORPUS STRIATUM, Insula cerebri—1. of the Ear, Lobe of the Ear—1. of the Fissure of Sylvius, Insula cerebri—1. du Foie, Lobulus Spigelii—1. of the Liver, see Liver—1. of the Lung, see Pulmo—1. Pneumogastric, Flocculus.

LOBULI, see Lobulus—1. Pulmonales, see Pulmo.

LOBULUS ACCESSORIUS ANTERIOR QUADRATUS, L. anonymus.

LOB'ULUS seu LOBUS ANON'YMUS, L. accesso-rius ante'rior quadra'tus, L. quadra'tus, (F.) Éminence porte antérieure. This is situate in the liver between the passage for the round ligament and the gall-bladder, and is less prominent, but broader, than the Lobulus caudatus. From the lobulus anonymus a bridge runs across the passage for the round ligament. It is called Pons seu Isthmus he'patis.

LOBULUS seu LOBUS CAUDA'TUS, Processus caudatus. This is merely the root or one of the angles of the lobulus Spigelii, advancing towards the middle of the lower side of the great lobe, and representing a kind of tail. Also, the termination of the helix and anthelix of the ear, which is separated from the concha by an extensive fissure.

LOBULUS CERTRA'LIS. A small lobule or prominence of the superior veruiform process of the cerebellum, situate in the incisura anterior.

LOBULUS NASI, see NASUS—1. Pneumogastricus, Flocculus—1. Posterior, 2. Spigelii—1. Positicus papillatus, L. Spigelii—1. Quadratus, L. anonymus—1. Renum, Ferrein, pyramidiform.

LOBULUS SEU LOBUS SPIGE'LII, L. posterior seu posticus papillatus, (F.) Éminence postérieure, Lobule ou Petit lobe du foie, Lobe de Spigel ou duodénal ou pancréatique, is situate near the spine, upon the left side of the great lobe of the liver, and is of a pyramidal shape, projecting, like a nipple, between the cardia and vena cava, at the small curvature of the stomach.

LOBUS, Lobe, see Lobulus—1. Quadrangularis, see Cerebellum—1. Semilunaris, see Cerebellum—1. Superior anterior, see Cerebellum—1. Superior posterior, see Cerebellum.

LOCAL, Localis, Topicus, Mericus, Partialis, Topical, (F.) Locale, Topique. An affection is called local—Morbis Localis,—when confined to a part, without implicating the general system; or, at all events, only secondarily. Local is thus opposed to general. A local or topical application is one used externally. See Topical.

LOCH, Looch.

LOCHADES, see Sclerotic.

LOCHIA or LO'CHIA, Purgament'a Puerperii seu Uteri, Purgat'io puerperii, Lyra, from λοχος, 'a woman in childbed,' λοχεια, 'parturition;' (F.) Suites de couches, Vidanges. The cleansings. A sero-sanguineous discharge following delivery. During the first two or three days, it is bloody; but afterwards becomes green-coloured,—green waters—and exhales a disagreeable and peculiar odour. The lochia, in different stages, have received the names Lochia cruenta, L. serosa and L. alba seu mucosa seu lactea. The duration, quantity, and character of the discharge vary according to numerous circumstances. It flows from the part of the uterus which formed a medium of communication between the mother and foetus, and continues, usually, from 14 to 21 days. See Parturition.

LOCHIOCELIITIS, Puerperal fever.

LOCHIODOCHIUM, Lochodochium.

LOCHIOPIRYA, Puerperal fever.

LOCHIORRHAG'IA, from loch'ia, and ρηνυμι, 'I make an irruption.' An immoderate flow of the lochia. Hemorrhage from the uterus in the child-bed state.

LOCHIORRHŒ'A, from loch'ia, and ρρω, 'I flow.' Discharge or immoderate discharge of the lochia.

LOCHIORUM RETENTIO, Ischolochia.

LOCHIOSCHESIS, Ischolochia.

LOCHICH, Looch.

LOCHODOCHIUM, Lochiodochium, from λοχος, 'a female in childbed,' and δεχομαι, 'I receive.' An institution for the reception of pregnant and childbed females. A Lying-in-hospital.

LOCHOMETRITIS, see Metritis.

LOCHOMETROPHLEBITIS, see Phlebitis.

LOCHOOPHORITIS, see Oaritis.

LOCHOPERITONITIS, see Peritonitis.

LOCHOS, Puerpera.

LOCI, Uterus—1. Muliebres, Uterus, Vulva.

LOCK HOSPITAL. A term of uncertain origin, generally given to venereal hospitals in Great Britain.

LOCKED JAW, Trismus.

LOCKING, Coxofemoral articulation.

LOCOMOTILITY, see Locomotion.

LOCOMOTION, Locomotio, from locus, 'a place,' and movere, motum, 'to move.' An action peculiar to animal bodies, by which they transport themselves from place to place. It, as well as musculat'ion, has also been used for the function of animal movements. The faculty is sometimes called Locomotiv'ity and Locomotil'ity.

LOCOMOTION OF AN ARTERY, is the movement produced in the vessel with a curvature, by the impulse of the blood sent from the heart, which tends to straighten the artery, and causes the movement in question.

LOCOMOTIVITY, see Locomotion.

LOCULAMENTA COLI, see Colon.

LOCUS CINEREUS, Substantia ferruginea.

LOCUS NIGER, see Peduncles of the Brain.

LOCUS PERFORAT'US ANTE'CUS seu ANTE'RIOR. A triangular flat surface of the brain, which corresponds to the posterior extremity of each of the optic process in front of the optic tract, and near the entrance of the fissure of Sylvius. Substantia seu Lamina perforata anterior.

LOCUS PERFORATUS POSTICUS, see Tarini pons

LOCUST, BLACK, Robinia pseudo-acacia.

LOCUST EATERS, Acridophagi—1. Plant, Cassia Marilandica—1. Tree, Robinia pseudo-acacia.

LOEMIA, Plague.

LOEMICUM, see Læmology.

LOEMOCHOLOSIS, Fever, yellow.

LOEMOCOMIUM, from λοιμος, 'plague,' and κομωω, 'I take care of.' An hospital for those affected with plague.

LOEMOGRAPHY, Loimography.

LOEMOLOGIUM, see Læmology.

LOEMOL'OGY, Læmolog'ia, from λοιμος, 'plague,' and λογος, 'a description.' The doctrine of plague and pestilential diseases. A treatise on the same,—Læmicum, Læmolog'ium.

LOEMOPHTHALMIA, see Ophthalmia.

LOEMOPYRA, Plague.

LOEMOS, Plague.

LOGADES, Sclerotic.

LOGADITIS, Sclerotitis.

LOGIA'TROS, Logiat'er; from λογος, 'a word,' and ιατρος, 'a physician.' In the bad sense, a physician without experience; a mere theorist. In the good sense, a rational physician; one who treats disease according to theoretical or scientific principles.

LOGONEURO'SES, from λογος, 'mind, reason,' and νευρον, 'a nerve.' Diseases of the mental activity.—Romberg.

LOGOS, Reason.

LOGWOOD, Hæmatoxylon Campechianum.

LOG'Y, λογος, 'a description.' A suffix denoting 'a treatise or description.' Hence, Angiology and Neurology, &c.

LOHOCH, Looch.

LOIMOCHOLOSIS, Fever, yellow.

LOIMOG'RAPHY, Loimograph'ia, Læmog'raphy, from λοιμος, 'plague,' and γραφωω, 'I describe.' A description of the plague and pestilential diseases.

LOIMOLOGY, Læmology.

LOIMOS, Plague.

LOINS, Lumbi.

LOISELEURIA PROCUMBENS, Azalea procumbens; indigenous; Order, Ericacæ; has some reputation as an astringent.

LOLIACEUM RADICE REPENTE, Triticum repens.

LOLIUM ANNULUM, L. temulentum.

LOLIUM TEMULENTUM, L. annuum, Crepula temulentata, Bromus temulentus, Darnel, (Prov.) Cockgrass, Jum, (F.) Herbe d'Ivrogne. A species of the genus Lolium, (F.) Ivrate; Ord. Graminæ; Sec. Syst. Triandria digynia, which has decidedly poisonous properties; occasioning, when mixed in bread or beer, intoxication, vertigo, nausea, and vomiting.

LOMBAIRE, Lumbar.

LOMBES, Lumbi.

LOMBRICAUX, Lumbricales.

LOMBRICOÏDE, Ascaris lumbricoides.

LONGHADES, see Sclerotic.

LONGHADITIS, Sclerotitis.

LONGHITIS, Polypodium filix mas.

LONG, Longus, Macros. That which is much greater in length than in breadth; as the long bones. The epithet is, also, applied to several muscles, to distinguish them from others of similar function, when the latter are shorter. We say, for instance, long flexors, and long extensors, in opposition to short flexors, and short extensors.

LONG DU COU, Longus colli—l. du Dos, Longissimus dorsi.

LONGÆVUS, Macrobiotic.

LONGANON, Rectum.

LONGAON, Rectum.

LONGAS, Rectum.

LONGEVITY, Longævitæ, from longus, 'long,' and ævum, 'age,' Macrobiotic, Macrobiotes. The prolongation of existence to an advanced age. Haller collected examples of more than one thousand centenarians. He had knowledge of sixty-two persons aged from 110 to 120 years; of twenty-nine, from 120 to 130 years; and of fifteen, who had attained from 130 to 140 years. Beyond this advanced age, examples of longevity are much more rare and less sufficiently attested.

The following list of instances of very advanced ages has been given :

	Lived. Age.
Apollonius of Tyana.....	A. D. 99...130
St. Patrick.....	491...122
Attila.....	500...124
Llywarch Hen.....	500...150
St. Coemgene.....	618...120
Piastus, King of Poland.....	861...120
Thomas Parr.....	1635...152
Henry Jenkins.....	1670...169
Countess of Desmond.....	1612...145
Thomas Damme.....	1648...154
Peter Torten.....	1724...185
Margaret Patten.....	1739...137
John Rovin and wife.....	1741...172 and 164
St. Monagh or Kentigen.....	1781...185

Longevity also means length or duration of life, (F.) Durée de la vie. The mean age at death, (F.) Vie moyenne, of different classes and professions enables an estimate to be formed of the expectation or value of life in each.

LONGING, Malacia.

LONGISSIMUS, superlative of longus, 'long.' Longest. A term applied to parts, which are very long in their relation to others.

LONGIS'SIMUS DORSI, Semi-spina'tus, (F.) Lombo-dorso-trachélien, Portion costo-trachélienne du sacro-spinal (Ch.). Long dorsal, Long du dos, is situate vertically at the posterior part of the trunk, and fills, in a great measure, the vertebral furrows. It is thick and almost square below; thin and pointed above. It is attached to the posterior surface of the sacrum, to the transverse processes of all the lumbar and dorsal vertebrae, and to the inferior margin of the last 7 or 8 ribs. It maintains the vertebral column in a straight position; straightens it when bent forwards, and can even carry it back. It also assists in the rotatory motion of the trunk.

LONGISSIMUS FEMORIS, Sartorius—l. Oculi, Obliquus superior oculi.

LONG-SIGHTEDNESS, Presbytia.

LONGUS, Long.

LONGUS COLLI, (F.) Pré-dorso-cervical, Pré-dorso-atloïdien, (Ch.,) Long du cou. This muscle is situate at the anterior and superior part of the vertebral column. It is long, flat, and broader at its middle than at its extremities, which are pointed. It is attached to the anterior surface of the bodies of the first three dorsal and last six cervical vertebrae; to the intervertebral ligaments; to the anterior edge of the transverse processes of the last five cervical vertebrae; and to the tubercle on the anterior arch of the first. This muscle bends the cervical vertebrae upon each other and upon the dorsal vertebrae. If the upper portion acts on one side only, it occasions the rotation of the atlas on the vertebra dentata; and, consequently, of the head on the neck.

LONGICERA GERMANICA, L. Periclymenum—l. Marilandica, Spigelia Marilandica.

LONGICERA PERICLYMENUM, L. Germanica, Periclymenum, P. vulgare, Coprifolium, C. Periclymenum seu sylvestricum seu distinctum, Common Woodbine, Honeysuckle, (Prov.) Suckling, (F.) Chèvre-feuille. This common plant is slightly astringent and tonic, and was formerly much used in gargles.

LONGICERA SEMPERVIRENS, Coprifolium sempervirens, Scarlet or Trumpet Honeysuckle. Ord. Caprifoliaceæ; indigenous. A syrup of the leaves is said to have been given in asthma and in amygdalitis. [?]

LONG, Coxofemoral articulation.

LOOCH, Lohoch, Loch, Lochoch, Looch, of Arabic extraction. A linctus. See Elegma and Electos.

LOOCH ABSQUÈ EMULSIONÈ PARATUM, Looch préparé sans émulsion; Looch prepared without emulsion. (Pulv. g. trag. gr. xvj—gr. xxx, ol. amygd. dulc. ℥ss, sacchar. ℥j, aquæ ℥ij, aquæ flor. aurant. ℥ij. Mix by rubbing in a marble mortar.) Demulcent.

LOOCH ALBUM, L. amygdalinum, Linctus albus seu amygdalinus seu communis, Elegma album seu gummo-so-oleosum, (F.) Looch blanc, L. b. amygdalin, L. b. pectoral. (Amygd. dulc. ℥ss, amygd. amar. No. ij, sacchar. alb. ℥iv. Make an emulsion by gradually adding ℥iv of water. Then take pulv. tragacanth. gr. xvj. ol. amygd. dulc. recent. ℥ss, sacch. ℥ij. Add the almond milk gradually to this, and afterwards aq. flor. aurant. ℥ij. Ph. P.) It is demulcent and pectoral.

LOOCH EX OVO, L. pectoral'è len'iens, Potio seu emul'sio seu mistu'ra len'iens seu oleo'sa, Looch of Egg, (F.) Looch d'œuf, Looch rouge, Émulsion huileuse, Mixture calmante, Potion pectorale, Lait adoucissant. (Vitell. ovi. recent. ℥ss, ol. amygd. dulc. ℥iss, symp. althææ, ℥j. Rub in a mortar, and add by degrees, aq. flor. aurant. ℥j, aq. papav. rhœad. ℥ij. Ph. P.) Virtues the same as the preceding.

LOOCH VIR'IDĒ, L. cum crocē et pista'ois, (F.)
Looch vert. (Syrup. Violar. ʒj, tinct. croci gtt. xx., aqua ʒiv. Mix, and add pistaciā semin. sic. ʒj. Ph. P.) Virtues like the last.

LOOK, Looch — l. d'Œuf, Looch ex ovo — l. Préparé sans émulsion, Looch absque emulsione paratum.

LOOSE STRIFE, CREEPING, Lysimachia nummularia — l. s. Four-leaved, Lysimachia quadrifolia.

LOOSENESS, Diarrhœa — l. of the Teeth, Odontoseisis.

LOPEZ RADIX, Radix lopeziana seu Indica lopeziana. The root of an unknown Indian tree, not possessed of any remarkable smell or taste, or of any appearance of resinous matter. It has been extolled, notwithstanding, in cases of colliquative diarrhœa. Gaubius compares its action to that of simarouba, but thinks it more efficacious.

LOPHADIA, Lophia.

LOPHIA, Lophadia, λοφία. The upper part of the neck. The first vertebra of the back — Vertebra dorsi prima. — Gorraeus.

LOPIMA, Fagus castanea.

LOQUAC'ITY, Garrulitas; from loquor, 'I speak. (F.) Babillement. The act of speaking with volubility. It is sometimes a symptom of disease, and is observable in hysteria, &c.

LORDO'SIS, Lordo'ma, from λοδος, 'curved,' bent.' Repanda'tio, Repan'ditas. A name given to curvatures of the bones in general; and particularly to that of the vertebral column forwards; Spina dorsi intro'sum flexa, Emprosthoecyrto'ma. This gives rise to the projection of the sternum called chicken-breasted or pigeon-breasted. Pectus carinatum, Pig'leon breast, narrow chest.

LORIND MATR'ICIS, Epileps'ia uteri'na, Convulsi'vus uteri morbus, A barbarous name given to a pretended epilepsy of the womb.

LORIPES, see Kyllosis.

LORUS, Hydrargyrum.

LOT, Urine.

LOTA MOLVA, see Oleum jecoris aselli — l. Vulgaris, see Oleum jecoris aselli.

LOTIO, Enema, Lotion — l. Cupri sulphatis camphorata, Lotion, camphorated, of Bates — l. Rubra, Lotion, camphorated, of Bates.

LOTIO RUBRA, Red wash, (Hydrarg. chlorid. corrosiv. gr. xviii; H. sulphureti rubr. gr. ix; Creasot. ℥ vi; Aqua fʒviij. May be used in the proportion of fʒj; to from fʒi to fʒiij of water; like the yellow wash.

LOTIO SAPOACEA, see Sapo.

LOT'ION, Lo'tio, Lotu'ra, from lavare lotum, 'to wash.' (F.) Hydrolotif, Hydro'l. A fluid external application. Lotions are ordinarily applied by wetting linen in them and keeping it on the part affected.

LOTION, BARLOW'S, Lotion of Sulphuret of potassivum. (Potassii sulphur. ʒij; Sapon. ʒiiss; Aq. Calcis, fʒviiss; alcohol. dilut. fʒij. M.) Used in various chronic cutaneous diseases.

LOTION, CAMP'ORATED, OF BATES, Bates's camphorated water, Lo'tio cupri sulphat'is camphora'ta, Lo'tio rubra, Red wash. (Cupri sulphat. ʒij; Bol. rubr. ʒij; Camphor. ʒss; Aq. bullient. Oij. Strain through linen. fʒij of this, added to fʒiv of water, forms Bates's Collyrium, Collyrium Bateanum, which may also be made extemporaneously as follows: — Cupri sulphat. gr. viij; bol. gr. viij; Camphor. gr. ij; Aq. bullient. fʒviij. Mix and filter.

LOTION, FEBURE'S. A cancer remedy, which consisted of arsenic, gr. x; water, Oj; extract of hemlock, ʒj; Liquor Plumbi subacetatis, fʒiij; laudanum, fʒj.

LOTION, GOWLAND'S. An empirical preparation. (Bitter almonds, ʒj; sugar, ʒij; distilled water, ℥ij. Grind together, strain, and add corrosive sublimate, ʒij, previously ground with sp. vini rect. ʒij.) Used in obstinate eruptions.

LOTION, GRANVILLE'S COUNTER-IRRITANT, Granville's Lotion, Granville's antidy'nous lotion. Of this lotion, Dr. Granville gives two forms — a milder, and a stronger. The milder is made as follows: Liq. ammon. fort. fʒj; Sp. Rosmarin. fʒvj; Tinct. camphor. fʒij, M.

The stronger is made as follows: Liq. ammon. fort. fʒx; Spir. Rosmar. fʒss; Tinct. camphor. fʒij, M.

The stronger lotion vesicates rapidly. A piece of cotton or linen folded six or seven times, or a piece of thick flannel may be imbued with them, and laid for a few minutes on the part to be irritated.

The Dublin Pharmacopœia has a Linimentum Ammoniac Compositum, Compound Liniment of Ammoniac, which is a close imitation of Granville's Lotion.

LOTION, HANNAY'S, Preventive wash. This famous nostrum for the prevention of venereal infection, was nothing more than a solution of caustic potass.

LOTION, HYDROCYAN'IC, Lotio Ac'idi Hydrocyan'ici. (Hydrocyanic acid, fʒiv; rectified spirit of wine, fʒj; distilled water, fʒxss.) Used with much success in impetigo, &c.

LOTION, STRUVE'S, FOR HOOPING-COUGH. (Antim. et Potass. tart. ʒj; Aqua, ʒij. Add tinct. cantharid. ʒj.)

LOTIUM, Urine.

LOTURA, Lotion.

LOTUS SYLVESTRIS, Trifolium melilotus — l. Virginiana, Diospyros Virginiana.

LOUCHEMENT, Strabismus.

LOUCHES, see Strabismus.

LOUPE, Wen.

LOUSE, Pediculus.

LOUSINESS, Phtheiriasis.

LOUSY DISEASE, Phtheiriasis.

LOUTRON, Bath.

LOVAGE, Ligusticum levisticum.

LOVE, Eros, Amor, from Sax. lupian, (G.) lieben, 'to love.' (F.) Amour. A tender and elevated feeling, which attracts one sex to the other. Love is occasionally a cause of disease, especially of insanity.

LOVE APPLE PLANT, Solanum lycopersicum — l. Begot, Illegitimate — l. Child, Illegitimate — l. Pea, Abrus precatorius.

LOW SPIRITS, Hypochondriasis.

LOWER, TUBERCLE OF, Tuber'culum Loweri. Anatomists have given this name to a small projection, the existence of which is by no means constant, and which is found in the sinus venosus, between the superior and inferior cava.

LOXAR'THRUS, Loxar'thrum, from λοξος, 'oblique,' and ἀρθρον, 'articulation.' (F.) Percession de la tête des os et des muscles. A vicious deviation or direction of the joints, without spasm or luxation, — as in clubfoot.

LOXIAS, Torticollis.

LOXOPHTHALMUS, Strabismus.

LOZANGIA, Lozenge.

LOZENGE, Tabella.

tine, Trochisci emetinæ pectorales—l. Rhubarb, Tabellæ de rheo—l. of Scammony and senna, compound, Tabellæ de scammonio et sennâ—l. Spitta's, see Trochisci glycyrrhizæ cum opio—l. Worm, Ching's, see Worm lozenges, (Ching's.)

LUBIDO, Libido—l. Intestini, Voluntas descendendi.

LUBRICANTIA, Demulcents, Emollients.

LUBRICUM CAPUT, Penis.

LUCCA, MINERAL WATERS AND CLIMATE OF. The baths and waters, near this ancient Italian city, have been long celebrated. They are thermal, and resemble, in properties, those of Plombières in France, and of Bath England. They contain carbonic acid, sulphates of alumina, soda, magnesia, and iron. There are ten different sources, the temperature of which varies from 94° to 130° Fahr.

Luca is much frequented in summer; partly on account of its mineral waters, but more on account of the coolness of the situation.

LUCID, Lu'cidus, from luceo, 'I shine.' In medicine, the word lucid is particularly applied to the intervals, Interval'la lucida, of apparent reason, which occur in mental alienation.

LUCIFER-MATCH-MAKERS' DISEASE, see Phosphorus.

LUCIFUGUS, from lux, lucis, 'light,' and fugere, 'to shun.' Photoph'obus, Photophob'icus. Dreading or avoiding the light.

LUCINA, Ilithyia.

LUCOMANIA, Lycanthropia.

LUCTUEUX (F.), Luctuo'sus, 'mournful.' Plaintive. An epithet applied to the respiration—(F.) Respiration luctueuse—when accompanied by moaning.

LUCUMA, (S.) A fruit which grows in the southern provinces of the coast of Peru, and the north of Chili. It is round; and the gray-brown husk encloses a fibrous, dry, yellow-coloured fruit with its kernel.—Tschudi.

LUCUMORIANUS, probably from lux, 'light,' and morari, 'to tarry.' Continuing for several days: hence, Dormit'io lucumoria'na. A morbid sleep persisting for several days.

LUDUS HELMONTII, L. Paracel'si, Fel terra. A calcareous stone, the precise nature not known, which was used by the ancients in calculous affections. The term was also applied to every species of calculous concretion occurring in the animal body.

LUDUS PARACELSI, L. Helmontii.

LUDWIGIA PALUS'TRIS, L. nit'ida, Isnar'dia palus'tris, Water Purslane, Phthisis Weed. Order, Onagraceæ; indigenous. An infusion of the dried plant has been used as a pectoral in asthma and chronic cough.

LUETTE, Uvula—l. Vésicale, see Urinary bladder.

LUG, Ear.

LUGDUS, Erysipelas.

LUJULA, Oxalis acetosella.

LULLABY SPEECH, Lallation.

LUMBA'GO, from lumbi, 'the loins.' Arthro' sia lumborum, Lumbago seu Nephral'gia rheumat'ica, Rachirrhœuma, Rachiorrhœuma, Rheumatis'mus dorsal'is, Osphyrrhœuma. Rheumatism affecting the lumbar region.

Lumba'go psoad'ica, L. apostemato'sa, L. ab arthro'acè. Pain in the loins from abscess. See Psoids.

LUMBAGO A NISU, see Effort.

LUMBAGO, Lumba'ris seu Lumba'tis, (F.) Lombaire. From lumbi, 'the loins.' Belonging or having reference to the loins.

LUMBAR ABSCESS, Psoas abscess, Apostema psoad'icum, Abscessus lumborum, Morbus psoad'icus. This abscess is so called from the matter being found on the side of the psoas muscle, or betwixt that and the iliacus internus. Between these muscles is a quantity of loose, areolar substance; and when an abscess takes place there, it can find no outlet except by a distant course. Generally, it descends along the psoas muscle, forming a swelling immediately beneath Poupart's ligament; at times, however, it extends down the thigh under the fascia. Severe hectic follows the bursting of the abscess, and often death. Its causes are,—scrofula, injury to the loins, &c.

When, from the pain of the back continuing for some time, with other symptoms, the disease is suspected, caustics, or the moxa, applied opposite the transverse processes of the lumbar vertebrae, may be recommended; and, when the abscess is ready for opening, it may be emptied by repeated discharges of the matter, through a small opening, made with a lancet, or small, lancet-pointed trocar. The medical treatment consists in supporting the system, under the great restorative efforts required of it.

LUMBAR ARTERIES are four or five in number on each side. They arise from the sides of the abdominal aorta, and pass behind the muscles situate in front of the lumbar portion of the spine, to gain the broad muscles of the abdomen. They give off, 1. Spinal branches. 2. Anterior, posterior, and external muscular branches.

LUMBAR NERVES are five in number, and issue from the vertebral column by the spinal foramina of the loins. The first lumbar nerve gives off three branches:—the external or ilio-scrotal; the middle or inguino-cutaneous, and the internal or infra-pubian. Along with the three pairs below it, it forms the lumbar plexus.

LUMBAR PLEXUS, Portion lombaire du plexus crural (Ch.), Plexus Lombo-abdominal. This plexus is formed by the union of the Rami communicantes of the anterior branches of the first four lumbar nerves. It is situate behind the psoas muscle, and before the transverse processes of the lumbar vertebrae. It furnishes, besides the branches which proceed from the first pair, several filaments, that are distributed to the psoas muscle, to the iliacus, the integuments, and glands of the groin; and three great branches—the crural, obturator, and lumbo-sacral.

LUMBAR REGION, Lumbi.

LUMBAR VEINS have an arrangement analogous to that of the arteries of the same name. They communicate with the vertebral sinuses, azygous veins, &c., and pass into the vena cava inferior.

LUMBARIS EXTERNUS, Quadratus lumborum—l. Internus, Psoas magnus.

LUMBI, The loin or loins, Lumbar region, (Old Eng.) Lende, (Sc.) Lendis; Re'gio lumbal'is, Lap'ara, Psoa, plural Psoæ, Osphy's, Reins, (F.) Lombes. The posterior regions of the abdomen, composed between the base of the chest and the pelvis. The parts which enter into the formation of the lumbar region are,—the skin; a considerable quantity of areolar texture; broad and strong aponeuroses:—the Latissimus Dorsi, Obliquus externus, and Obliquus internus abdominis, Transversalis abdominis, Quadratus lumborum, and the mass common to the Sacro-lumbalis, Longissimus dorsi, and Multifidus spinæ. These muscles surround the lumbar region of the vertebral column. The vessels, nerves, &c., of the loins, are called lumbar.

LUMBO-SACRAL. Belonging to the lumbar and sacral regions. (F.) Lombo-sacrè. Bichat calls thus a very large nerve, given off from the anterior branch of the fifth lumbar pair, which descends into the pelvis before the sacrum to join the sciatic plexus.

LUMBRICA'LIS, Vermicula'ris. Resembling a lumbricus, or 'earthworm.' A name given to small muscles, (F.) Lombricaur, met with in the palm of the hand and sole of the foot.

LUMBRICALES MANÛS, Fidicina'les, Flexor primi internodii digitorum manûs seu perforatus lumbrical'is, (F.) Annuli-tendino-phalangiens, Palmi-phalangiens. Four small, fleshy, thin, round, long, fusiform fasciculi, situate in the palm of the hand, and distinguished into first, second, third, and fourth, counting from without to within. They arise from the tendons of the flexor communis digitorum, and are inserted at the outer and posterior side of the superior extremity of the first phalanges of the last four fingers. These muscles bend the fingers on the metacarpus, and fix the tendons of the flexor digitorum communis.

LUMBRICALES PEDIS, (F.) Planti-tendino-phalangiens, Planti-sous-phalangiens, (Ch.) They are analogous to those of the hand in form, number, and arrangement. They increase the flexion of the toes, and draw them inwards.

LUMBRICUS, Ascaris lumbricoides — 1. Latus, Bothriocephalus latus, Tænia solium — 1. Teres hominis, Ascaris lumbricoides.

LUMBUS VENERIS, Achillea millefolium.

LUMEN, Light, Pupil — 1. Constans, Phosphorus.

LUMIÈRE, Light.

LUMINOSITY, Phosphorescence.

LUNA, Argentum, Moon — 1. Albini, Sciatic notch, lesser — 1. Imperfecta, Bismuth — 1. Potabilis, Argentum nitras.

LUNACY, see Lunatic.

LUNAR, Lunatic.

LUNA'RE OS, Os semiluna'rè. The second bone in the upper row of the carpus.

LUNARIA, Menses.

LUNA'RIA REDIVIVA, Leucoïum, Bulbonach, Satin, Honesty. Said, by Ray, to be a warm diuretic.

LUNARIS, Lunatic.

LUNATIC, Lunaticus, Luna'ris, Luna'rius, Lunar, from luna, 'the moon.' Relating to the moon. An epithet given to diseases which are supposed to appear at certain phases of the moon, or to those who are affected by them. The term lunatic (Moon'ed, Moonstruck, Selenoble'tus), is restricted to one labouring under lunacy or mental alienation, Dementia accidentalis seu adventitia, that is, under any form unsoundness of mind, except idiocy. In law, a lunatic is one who has had an understanding, but by disease, grief, or other accident, has lost the use of his reason, and become non compos mentis or non compos.

LUNATICUS, Epileptic, Lunatic, Somnambulist.

LUNATISMUS, Somnambulism.

LUNE, Moon — 1. d'Eau, Nymphæa alba.

LUNELLA, Hypopyon.

LUNES, Menses.

LUNETTES ORDINAIRES, Spectacles.

LUNG, Pulmo — 1. Black, of coal miners, Anthracosis — 1. Cancer of the, Phthisis, cancerous.

LUNG FEVER, Catarrh, Pneumonia.

LUNG, PERFORATING ABSCESS OF THE. A purulent collection, which forms exterior to the lung, and afterwards perforates its tissue, so that it is evacuated through the bronchial tubes.

LUNG PROOF, Docimasia pulmonum — 1. Wort, Pulmonaria — 1. Wort, cow's, Verbascum nigrum — 1. Wort, tree, Lichen pulmonarius.

LUNULA, Onyx — 1. Unguium, see Nail — 1. Scapulæ, Notch, scapular.

LUNYIE, Lumbi.

LUNYIE-BANE, Ischion.

LUPIA, Encystis, Wen — 1. Junctura, Spina ventosa.

LUPINUS. Under this term the white lupin, Lupinus albus seu sativus, Ord. Leguminosæ, is meant, in some pharmacopœias. The seeds, which were much eaten in the days of Pliny and of Galen, are now neglected. The meal is, however, occasionally used as an anthelmintic, and as a cataplasm.

LUPOID, Lupoï'des, badly compounded from lupus, and eidōs, 'resemblance.' Resembling, or having the character of, lupus.

LUPULINA, Lupulin, Lupulinic glands. A substance which exists in Humulus lupulus or hop. It is in the form of small, shining, yellowish grains, which cover the base of the scales of the hop; is pulverulent, and of an aromatic odour. When analyzed, it is found to contain resin, volatile oil in small quantity, and a bitter principle — Lupulite. It is aromatic and tonic, and — according to some — narcotic.

LUPULINIC GLANDS, Lupulina.

LUPULITE, see Lupulina.

LUPULUS, Humulus lupulus — 1. Communis, Humulus lupulus — 1. Salictarius, Humulus lupulus — 1. Scandens, Humulus lupulus.

LUPUS, 'the wolf.' So named from its rapacity. Lupus exedens seu vorax seu devorans, Jacob's Ulcer, Ulcus Tuberculo'sum, Cancer seu Phymato'sis lupus, Noli me tang'ere. Tubercular excrescences, with ragged, spreading ulcerations, chiefly about the alæ nasi, where they destroy the skin, &c., for some depth. Sometimes they appear in the cheek, circularly, or in the shape of a sort of ringworm, destroying the substance, and leaving a deep and deformed cicatrix. The knife or caustic should be used to separate the sound from the morbid parts. Arsenic has been given internally with advantage. See, also, Herpes exedens, and Lycoides.

LUPUS CANCRO'SUS, Cancer — 1. Devorans, see Lupus — 1. Exedens, Lupus — 1. Vericosus, Nævi — 1. Vorax, Herpes exedens, see Lupus.

LURCO, Glutton.

LURID, Luridus. Pale, yellow, sallow, — applied to the complexion.

LURKEY-DISH, Mentha pulegium.

LUROR, Paleness.

LUS, Sacrum.

LUSCIOSTAS, Luscitas, Myopia.

LUSCIOSUS, Borgne, Myops.

LUS'CITAS, Luscio'sitas, Luscit'ies, Luscit'ion, from luscus, 'a blinkard,' lusciosus, 'dim-sighted.' Strabismus. The term has also been given to any case of obliquity in which the eye is fixed in an unnatural position. — Beer. The obliquity termed Cock-eye is a form of Luscitas.

LUSCITIES, Luscitas.

LUSCUS, Borgne.

LUSS, Pityriasis.

LUSTRAMENTUM, Cathartic.

LUT, Lute.

LUTE, Lutum ('mud'), Cæmentum. (F.) Lut. A composition employed either for closing apertures in a pharmaceutical instrument, or for covering the surface of retorts, tubes, &c., which have to support a great degree of heat. Lutes are composed differently, according to the object to be accomplished. Commonly, they are made of linseed meal and starch. The fat lute is formed of clay and drying oil. Sometimes, the white of egg and lime are used; and that which is employed for covering vessels, intended to be strongly heated, is made of clay, sifted sand, and water.

LUTEOLA, Reseda luteola.

LUTEUS, Yellow.

LUTRON, λουτρον. A bath. Also, an ophthalmic medicine.—Galen.

LUX, Light.

LUXATIO, Luxation—l. Imperfecta, Sprain.

LUXA'TION, Eluxa'tion, from luxare, luxatum, 'to put out of place.' Disloc'a'tion, Olisth'e'ma, Apoped'asis, Luxa'tio, Disloc'a'tio, Ec'clisis, Strem'ma, Luxatu'ra, Ectop'ia, Epto'sis, Flap'sus, Lygis'mus, Emo'tio, Ec'stasis, Exarthre'ma, E. luxa'tio, Exarthro'na, Exarthro'sis, Exo'sis, Epothe'sis, Paratop'ia, Streblo'sis, Deloca'tio, Earticula'tio, (F.) Luxation, Dislocation, Déboîtement. A displacement of a part from its proper situation. A putting out of joint. A displacement of two or more bones, whose articular surfaces have lost, wholly, or in part, their natural connexion: either owing to external violence, (accidental luxation), or to disease of some of the parts about the joint (spontaneous luxation.) Luxation is complete when the bones have entirely lost their natural connexion; incomplete, when they partly preserve it; and compound, when a wound communicates with the luxated joint. The general indications of treatment, are;—1. To reduce the protruded bone to its original place. 2. To retain it in situ. 3. To obviate any attendant or consequent symptoms.

To reduce requires extension, counter-extension, and coaptation.

LUXEUIL, MINERAL WATERS OF. Saline waters, at the town of Luxeuil, at the foot of the Vosges, in the department of Haute Saône. Five springs are thermal, and two cold. They seem to contain carbonic acid, carbonates of iron and lime, and chloride of sodium; and are employed as aperient, tonic, and stimulant.

LUZ, Sacrum.

LYCAN'CHE, Lycan'chis, from λυκος, 'a wolf,' and αγκω, 'I strangle.' Wolf quinzey, Wolf choak;—as Cynanche means Dog choak. Also, hydrophobia. See Lycoides.

LYCANCHIS, Lycanche.

LYCANTHROPE, see Lycanthropia.

LYCANTHRO'PIA, from λυκος, 'a wolf,' and ανθρωπος, 'a man.' Lyc'onia, Insa'nia lupi'na, Lycoman'ia. A variety of melancholy, in which the person believes himself to be changed into a wolf, and imitates the voice and habits of that animal. One so circumstanced is called a Lycanthrope, Lycanthro'pus.

LYCANTHROPUS, see Lycanthropia.

LYCAON, Lycanthropia.

LYCHNIDIUM, Biolychnium.

LYCHNIS GITHA'GO, Agrostem'ma githa'go, Corn cockle, Rose campion. A naturalized European plant. Ord. Caryophyllaceæ. The seeds are somewhat acrid, but not poisonous. They were, at one time, employed in cutaneous diseases, and in hemorrhage, and as a topical application to ulcers and fistulae.

LYCNIS OFFICINALIS, Saponaria—l. Sylvestris, Saponaria.

LYCHNIUM, Biolychnium.

LY'CIUM, λυκων. A medicinal substance, anciently obtained from the roots and branches of a thorny shrub growing in Lycia. It was astringent, and used in dysentery, ulcers of the gums, &c. By some, it has been considered to be the catechu.

LYCOÍDES, Lycoides, from λυκος, 'a wolf,' and εϊδος, 'form.' Lupo sim'ilis. An epithet for a species of cynanche, called, also, Lupus, and Strangula'tor, and absurdly attributed to excessive retention of sperm in its reservoirs and its passage into the blood [?].—Galen.

LYCOMANIA, Lycanthropia.

LYCOPE DE VIRGINIE, Lycopus Virginicus.

LYCOPER'DON, from λυκος, 'a wolf,' and περδω, 'I break wind;' L. Bovis'ta seu Arrhizon seu Globo'sum, Bovis'ta, Crep'itus Lupi, Fungus Chirurgo'rum, Puff-ball, Bull Fists, Moll'lipuffs, (Prov.) Puff, (Sc.) Deit's snuffbox, (F.) Vesseloup. Ord. Fungi. The puff-ball dries into a very fine, light brownish dust, which is sometimes used as a mechanical styptic to arrest hemorrhage.

LYCOPERDON PROTEUS, Common puff-ball. The fumes of this substance have been found to produce anæsthetization animals.

LYCOPER'DON TUBER, L. Gulosorum, Tuber Agriocac'tanum seu Ciba'rium seu Gulosorum seu Nigrum, Tu'bera Terræ, Trubs, Truffe, (pronounced troofle), (F.) Truffe. A fleshy, firm body, unknown in its mode of reproduction, which is found under ground, especially in different parts of France, Italy, &c., and is much esteemed as an aliment. It seems to belong to the champignons, and has a particular perfume. Aphrodisiac virtues have been ascribed to it.

A Virginia truffle is called Tuckahoe.

LYCOPERSICUM ESCULENTUM, Solanum lycopersicum—l. Pomum amoris, Solanum lycopersicum—l. Tuberosum, Solanum tuberosum.

LYCOPODE, Lycopodium.

LYCOPO'DIUM, from λυκος, 'a wolf,' and ποδος, 'a foot.' L. Clava'tum seu Officina'le, Lepido'tis clava'ta, Cingula'ria, Muscus clava'tus, Club-moss, Wolf's-claw, Witch-meal. Ord. Lycopodiaceæ. This is the largest of the European mosses. The dust, which fills the capsules of its spikes, is very inflammable, and hence has been called Vegetable Sulphur;—and, also, Fari'na seu Pulvis seu Semen seu Sulphur Lycopo'dii, (F.) Lycopode, Soufre végétal. It is used in France and in the United States to roll pills and boluses in; and in medicine is a desiccative, in the excretion to which infants are liable. It is collected chiefly in Switzerland and Germany for commerce.

LYCOPODIUM CLAVATUM, Lycopodium.

LYCOPODIUM COMPLANA'TUM, Common Club-moss, Ground Pine; indigenous; has the same properties as Lycopodium selago.

LYCOPO'DIUM OFFICINALE, L. clavatum—l. Recurvum, L. Selago.

LYCOPODIUM SELA'GO, L. Recur'vum, Planan'thus fastiga'tus seu sela'go, Muscus erectus seu Cathar'ticus, Sela'go, Upright Club-moss, Fir Club-moss, Upright Fir-moss. A decoction of this plant acts violently as an emetic and purgative; and was formerly, on this account, used as an abortive. It is also employed to kill vermin.

LY'COPIUS, L. Virginicus seu uniflorus seu pumila, Bugleweed, Water Bugle, Water Horehound, Gypsy Weed, Paul's Bet'ony, (F.) Lycopo de Virginie. This indigenous herb, Sex. Syst. Diandria Monogynia, Nat. Ord. Labiatae, grows throughout the greater part of the United States. The whole herb is said to be slightly narcotic. It is given in infusion, (Lycop. ʒj; aq. fervent. Oj.)

LYCOPUS PUMILA, Lycopus.

LYCOPUS SINUA'TUS, Water Horehound, Gypsy Weed, Paul's Bet'ony, indigenous, has similar properties.

LYCOPUS UNIFLORUS, L. pumila—l. Virginicus, Lycopus.

LYCOREXIS, Fames lupina.

LYCOSA TARENTULA, see Tarantula.

LYCOSTOMA, Hyperoëchasma.

LYE, Lixivium, Ley—l. Dyspeptic, see Fuligokali—l. Medical, see Fuligokali—l. Tea, Phy-sick's, see Fuligokali.

LYGISMUS, Luxation.

LYGODES, Singultus.

LYGMUS, Singultus.

LYGODES, Singultus.

LYING-IN STATE, Parturient state.

LYING-DOWN STATE, Parturient state.

LYMA, Lochia; from λωω, 'to wash,' also, filth or sordes, (to be washed away.) λυμα, Lymē.

LYME, Lyma.

LYMPH, Lympha, from νυμφή, 'water,' by changing v into λ. White blood, Lympha Nutritiva. A name given to the fluid contained in the lymphatic vessels and thoracic duct of animals, which have been made to fast for 24 hours. According to Chevreul, the lymph of the dog contains water, fibrin, albumen, common salt, subcarbonate of soda, phosphates of lime and magnesia, and carbonate of lime. The properties and composition of lymph vary somewhat according to the part whence the lymphatic vessels obtain it. Generally, it is under the form of a transparent, slightly alkaline fluid, sometimes of a madder-red or yellowish colour,—of a spermatic odour, and saline taste; soluble in water,—the solution becoming turbid, when mixed with alcohol. When left to itself, it coagulates. The clot or solid portion becomes of a scarlet red, if put in contact with oxygen; and of a purple red, if placed in carbonic acid.

Like the blood, the lymph consists of a fluid—Liquor lymphæ—in which lymph corpuscles or globules are suspended.

The lymph is probably the product of internal absorption in different parts of the body: it then flows along the lymphatic vessels, uniting with the chyle, and is poured with it into the veins; thus becoming one of the materials of the blood. According to others, the blood, when it reaches the arterial radicles, is divided into two portions,—the one red, which is carried to the heart,—the other serous or white, which is absorbed by the lymphatic vessels, and constitutes the lymph. By others, again, the lymphatics are considered to be the vessels of return for the white blood sent to certain tissues. White blood, however, has probably no existence.

The word lymph is sometimes used unhappily by the surgeon to signify liquor sanguinis.

LYMPH, COAGULABLE, Fibrin, Liquor sanguinis.

LYMPH CORPUSCLES, see Lymph—l. Globules, see Lymph—l. Hearts, Lymphatic hearts.

LYMPH, PLASTIC, Liquor sanguinis.

LYMPHADENITIS, from lymph, and adenitis, 'inflammation of a gland.' Inflammatio glandularum lymphaticarum, Adenitis lymphatica, (F.) Adénite lymphatique. Inflammation of a lymphatic gland or ganglion.

LYMPHÆDUCTUS, Lymphatic vessels.

LYMPHANGITIS, Angioloecitis.

LYMPHANGIA, Lymphatic vessels.

LYMPHANGIECTASIS, Lymphæury'sma; from lymph, αγγειον, 'a vessel,' and εκτασις, 'dilatation.' Dilatation of lymphatic vessels.

LYMPHANGIOGRAPHY, Lymphangiographia; from lymph, αγγειον, 'a vessel,' and γραφία, 'a description.' A description of the lymphatic vessels.

LYMPHANGIOTIS, Angioloecitis.

LYMPHANGIOL'OGY, from Lymphangion,

'a lymphatic,' and λογος, 'a description.' A treatise on the lymphatics.

LYMPHANGIOT'OMY, Lymphangioto'mia; from lymph, αγγειον, 'a vessel,' and τομή, 'incision.' The anatomy or dissection of the lymphatic vessels.

LYMPHANGITIS, Angioloecitis.

LYMPHANGON'CUS, Lymphon'eus; from lymph, αγγειον, 'a vessel,' and αγκος, 'a tumour.' Tumefaction of the lymphatics.

LYMPHAT'IC, Lymphat'icus. That which relates to lymph; also, abounding in lymph. See Phlegmatic.

LYMPHATIC HEARTS, Lymph Hearts. The frog and several other animals are provided with large receptacles for the lymph immediately underneath the skin, which exhibit distinct and regular pulsations like the sanguiferous heart. Their use appears to be—to propel the lymph.

LYMPHATIC SYSTEM is that particular system of organs which is inservient to the formation and circulation of lymph. These organs are:

1. LYMPHATIC GANGLIONS OR GLANDS, see Conglobate.

2. LYMPHATIC VESSELS, Lymphæductus, Lymphangi'a, Lymphang'e'a, Venæ lymphat'icæ, Ductus sero'si, Vasa lymphatica seu resorbentia seu hydrogoga, Hydrangi'a. These are very numerous. Arising at the surface of membranes and in the tissue of the organs, they carry into the veins the lymph from those parts. Lymphatic vessels are found in every part of the body. Wherever they are met with, however, they form two orders,—one superficial, the other deep-seated;—the two orders frequently communicating with each other. Lymphatic vessels are generally smaller than arteries and veins. They are very thin, diaphanous, and cylindrical; but present, here and there, more or less considerable dilatations, caused by valves in their interior. They are slightly tortuous in their course; their anastomoses are very numerous, and they often cross each other, forming successive plexuses. Of the arrangement of the extreme radicles we are ignorant. All the branches, before joining the principal trunks, pass through lymphatic ganglions, in which they are convoluted, or subdivided almost ad infinitum. They are formed of an outer areolar membrane and an internal coat, similar to that of the veins; of the latter, the valves are formed. All the lymphatics of the body ultimately discharge themselves at the junction of the subclavian and internal jugular veins. Two of these trunks are considerably larger than the others,—the thoracic duct, and the great trunk of the right side, (F.) La grande veine lymphatique droite. The former receives the lymphatics of the abdomen, of the lower extremities, the left side of the thorax, the left upper extremity, and the corresponding side of the head and neck; the latter receives those of the right upper extremity, and of the right side of the head, neck and thorax.

LYMPHATITIS, Angioloecitis.

LYMPHE COAGULABLE, Liquor sanguinis—l. de Cotugno, Cotunnus, liquor of—l. Plastique, Liquor sanguinis.

LYMPHEURYSMA, Lymphangiectasis.

LYMPHITIS, Angioloecitis.

LYMPHIZA'TION. A term used by Professor Gross to signify effusion of coagulable lymph. It is not a happy word, inasmuch as lymph has another meaning, whilst the term 'coagulable lymph' is now almost abandoned.

LYMPHOCH'E'ZIA, from lymph, and χρῆζω, 'I go to stool.' Serous diarrhœa.

LYMPHONCUS, Lymphangoncus—l. Iridis, Iridauxesis.

LYMPHOPYRA, Fever, adeno-meningeal.

LYMPHORRHAG'IA, from lymph. and γνῦμι, 'I break forth.' Discharge of lymph from a lymphatic vessel, owing to a lesion of its coats.

LYMPHO'SIS. The preparation or elaboration of lymph.

LYMPHOT'OMY, from lymphā, 'lymph,' and τεμνω, 'I cut.' Dissection of the lymphatics.

LYNCH'S EMBROCA'TION. An emollient nostrum, formed of olive oil impregnated with bergamot and other essences, and coloured with alkanet root.

LYNGODES, Singultous — 1. Febris, Fever, singultous.

LYNGYODES, Singultous.

LYNN WAHOO, Ulmus alata.

LYNX, Singultus.

LYPE, Athymia.

LYPEMANIA, Melancholy.

LYPE'RIA CRO'CEA. A South African plant, Nat. Ord. Scrophulariaceæ, the flowers of which closely resemble saffron in smell and taste, and possess similar medical virtues.

LYPEROPHRÉNE, Melancholy.

LYPOMA, Lipoma.

LYPOTHYM'IA, from λυπη, 'sadness,' and θυμος, 'the mind.' Very great sadness or despondency.

LYRA, λυρα, 'the lyre.' Psalter, Psalterium, Corpus Psalloides, Lyra Davidis, Lam'ina medullaris triangul'ris cer'ebr'i, Spatium trigonum. The under surface of the posterior part of the body of the fornix is impressed with numerous transverse and oblique lines, which have been so called from some resemblance they bear to the ancient lyre.

LYRINGIUM, Eryngium campestre.

LYSIA, Lysis.

LYSIMA'CHIA NUMMULA'RIA, L. nem'orum, Nummularia, Hirundinaria, Centimor'bia, Creeping Loose Strife, Money Wort, (F.) Herbe aux œus. Ord. Primulacæ. This plant was formerly accounted vulnerary. It has been considered to possess antiscorbutic and astringent qualities, and has been used in leucorrhœa.

LYSIMACHIA PURPUREA, Lythrum salicaria.

LYSIMA'CHIA QUADRIFO'LIA, Four-Leaved Loose Strife, Crosswort, an indigenous plant, is astringent; and has been used as a stomachic and antiperiodic.

LYSIS, Lysis, λυσις, from λυω, 'I dissolve.' Solution. A common suffix; also, a name given to solutions or terminations of disease, which are operated insensibly; that is, gradually and without critical symptoms.

LYSSA, Hydrophobia — 1. Canina, Hydrophobia.

LYSSAS, Maniodes.

LYSSETER, Maniodes.

LYSSODEC'TUS, from λυσσα, 'canine madness,' and δηκω, or δακνω, 'I bite.' Hydroph'obus; Canē rab'ido morsus. One who has been bitten by a mad dog, or is actually labouring under hydrophobia.

LYSSODEG'MA, Lyssodeg'mus, Lyssodec'ris same etymon. The bite of a mad dog.

LYSSODEXIS, Lyssodegma.

LYTE'RIOS, λυτηριος, (from λυω, 'I dissolve,') 'solving.' An epithet given to those signs which announce the solution of a very violent disease.

LYTHRUM ALATUM, see Lythrum salicaria — 1. Hyssopifolia, Lythrum salicaria.

LYTHRUM SALICA'RIA, from λυθρον, 'blood, and dust,' on account of the colour of the flowers of some species, Lysimachia purpurea, Salicaria vulgaris seu spicata; — the Common or Purple Willow Herb. Ord. Lythracæ. The herb, root, and flowers possess a considerable degree of astringency, and are used, occasionally, in the cure of diarrhœa and dysentery, leucorrhœa, hæmoptysis, &c.

LYTHRUM HYSSOPIFO'LIA, and L. ALATUM; indigenous, have similar properties.

LYTTA CÆRULEA, see Cantharis — 1. Gigas mas, see Cantharis — 1. Ruficeps, see Cantharis.

LYTTA RU'PIFES. Class. Insecta; Ord. Coleoptera. A variety of Lytta, peculiar to Chili, which is more active as a vesicant than the cantharis, or the Lytta vittata.

LYTTA SEGETUM, see Cantharis — 1. Vesicatoria, Cantharis.

LYTTA VITTA'TA, Cantharis vittata, Potato Fly, (F.) Cantharide tachtée. Four species of meloë that blister, are found in the United States. The lytta vittata feeds principally upon the potato plant, and, at the proper season of the year, may be collected in immense numbers. The potato fly resembles the cantharides in every property, and is fully equal to them.

M.

M. This letter signifies, in prescriptions, manipulus, 'a handful.' Also, miscæ, 'mix.' See Abbreviation.

MACAPATLI, Smilax sarsaparilla.

MACARO'NI. An alimentary paste, moulded of a cylindrical shape, and formed of rice or wheaten flour. It is eaten — when boiled — in soup; prepared with cheese, &c. See Turandæ Italicæ.

Also, a name formerly given to a pulverulent compound of sugar and glass of antimony, carried into France by the Italian monks, and employed at the hospital La Charité in the treatment of painters' colic.

MACARONS, Biscuits, medicinal.

MACE, see Myristica moschata — m. Reed, Typha latifolia.

MACEDONISIUM, Smyrnum olusatrum.

MACER, Gracilis.

MACERA'TION, Maceratio, from macerare, maceratum, 'to soften by water.' An operation which consists in infusing, usually without heat, a solid substance in a liquid, so as to extract its virtues.

MACERONA, Smyrnum olusatrum.

MACES, see Myristica moschata.

MACESCERE, Emaciate.

MACHÆRA, Culter, Knife, Penis.

MACHÆRIDION, Machæridion.

MACHÆ'RION, Machærius, Machæridion, Glad'iolus, from μαχαίρα, 'a sword,' μαχη, 'a fight.' A knife. An amputating knife. Rufus of Ephesus asserts, that the Aruspices gave this name to a part of the liver of animals.

MACHÆRIS, Knife, Novacula.

MACHA'ON, from μαχων, 'I desire to fight.' The son of Æsculapius, and a celebrated physician.

MACHAÖNIA seu MACHAÖN'ICA ARS. Medicine. The Healing Art:—so called after Machaon, the son of Æsculapius.

MACH'NAL, Mechan'icus. This epithet is added especially by French writers to the word movement, to express that the will takes no part in it.

MACHINE', Mach'ina, Mach'namen'tum, Mech'anê, Mechane'ma. A more or less compound instrument or arrangement for putting a body in motion, or for producing any action whatever. Physiologists sometimes use it for the animal body;—as the machine or animal machine.

MACHLOSÝNE, Nymphomania.

MACHOIRE, Maxillary bone—m. Diacranienne, Maxillary bone, lower—m. Syncrauienne, Maxillary bone, superior.

MACIES, Atrophy, Emaciation—m. Infantum, Tabes mesenterica.

MACILENTUS, Gracilis.

MACIS, see Myristica moschata.

MACRAU'CHEN, from macros, and αυχην, 'the neck.' Longo collo præ'ditus. One who has a long neck.—Galen.

MACRE FLOTTANTE, Trapa natans.

MACRITUDO, Emaciation.

MACROBIOSIS, Longevity.

MACROBIOTES, Longevity.

MACROBIOT'IC, Macrobiot'icus, Macrobi'o-tus, Macro'bivus, Longæ'vus, from macros, and βιος, 'life.' That which lives a long time. The macrobiotic art, Macrobiot'ies, (F.) Macrobiotique, is the art of living a long time.

MACROBIOTUS, Macrobiotic.

MACROBIUS, Macrobiotic.

MACROCEPHALIA, see Capitones.

MACROCEPH'ALUS, Makroceph'alus, (F.) Macroceph'ale; from macros, and κεφαλη, 'head.' Qui magnum habet caput. 'One who has a large head.' This epithet is given to children born with heads so large that they seem to be hydrocephalic; but in which the unusual development is owing to a large size of the brain. Such are supposed to be more than ordinarily liable to convulsions. [?] The term has also been applied by Hippocrates to certain Asiatics who had long heads. See Capitones.

MACROCHI'RIA, from macros, and χειρ, 'hand.' Monstrosity, characterized by excessive development of the hands.

MACROCO'LIA, from macros, and κωλον, 'a limb.' Great length of limbs in general, and of the lower limbs in particular.

MAC'ROCOSM, Macrocosm'us, from macros, and κοσμος, 'world.' The universe, in contradistinction to Microcosm, which means man.

MACRODAC'TYLUS, from macros, and δακτυλος, 'a finger.' Having long fingers.

MACROGASTER PLATÝPUS, Acarus folliculorum.

MACROGLOSSA, see Macroglossus.

MACROGLOS'SUS, from macros, and γλωσσα, 'tongue.' One who has a very large or prolapsed tongue. See Paraglossa.

MACROMEL'IA, from macros, and μελος, 'limb.' Monstrosity, which consists in the excessive size of some limb.

MACRONOSIÆ, Chronic diseases.

MACROPHAL'LUS, from macros, and φαλλος, 'the male organ.' A large size of the male organ.

MACROPHO'NUS, from macros, and φωνη, 'voice.' One who has a strong voice.

MACROPTHAL'MUS, from macros, and οφθαλμος, 'eye.' Having large eyes.

MACROPHYSOCEPH'ALUS, from macros, φουσα, 'air,' and κεφαλη, 'head.' A word used by Ambrose Paré to designate an augmentation of the head of the fœtus, produced by a sort of emphysema [?], which retards delivery.

MACROP'IPER, Piper longum.

MACROPNE'IA, from macros, and πνεω, 'I breathe.' A long and deep respiration.

MACROP'NUS, Maerop'noës. Same etymon. Long breathed. One who breathes slowly:—a word met with in some authors.—Hippocrates.

MACROP'ODUS, Mac'ropus, Mega'opus, from macros, and πους, ποδος, 'foot.' One who has a large foot.

MACROPROSO'PIA, from macros, and προσωπον, 'face.' Monstrosity, characterized by excessive size of face.

MACROR, Emaciation.

MACROR'RHIS, from macros, and ρις, or ριν, 'nose.' One who has a long nose.

MACROS, μακρος, 'great.' Long.

MACROS'CELES, Crura longa habens; from macros, and σκελος, 'the leg.' One who has long legs.

MACROSLÆ, Chronic diseases.

MACROSOMATIA, see Giant.

MACROSOMIA, see Giant.

MACRO'TES, from macros, and ους, ωτος, 'an ear.' One who has long ears.

MACROTRY'S RACEMOSA, see Actæa racemosa.

MAC'ULA. A spot. Dyschræ'a, Celis, Labe, (F.) Tache. A permanent discoloration of some portion of the skin, often with a change of its texture. Ephelis, Nævus, Spilus, &c., belong to Maculæ.

MACULA, Molecule—m. Aurea, see Foramen centrale retinae—m. Corneæ, Caligo—m. Corneæ arcuata, Gerotoxon—m. Corneæ margaritacea, Paralampsis—m. Cribrosa, see Auditory canal, internal—m. Emortualis, see Suggillation—m. Flava, see Foramen centrale retinae—m. Fusca, Ephelides—m. Germinativa, see Molecule—m. Solaris, Ephelides.

MAC'ULÆ ALBÆ, M. Lac'tea, In'sula, Milk-spots. White spots, seen on serous membranes, especially on that investing the heart, and which appear to be the result of previous inflammatory action.

MACULÆ ANTE OCULOS VOLITANTES, Metamorphopsia—m. Lactea, M. Albæ.

MACULOSUS, Sablé.

MAD, Insane—m. Doctor, see Psychiatra.

MADAR, Mudar.

MADARO'SIS, from μαδαρος, 'bald.' Madaroma, Made'sis, Madar'otes, Made'ma, Mad'isis, Depluma'tio, Milphæ, Milpho'sis, Ptilo'sis, Calv'ities. Loss of the hair, particularly of the eyelashes.

MADAROTES, Madarosis.

MADDER, DYERS', Rubia.

MADEIRA, CLIMATE OF. This island is much frequented by pulmonary invalids, on account of the mildness and equability of its climate. Owing, indeed, to the mildness of the winter, and the coolness of the summer, together with the remarkable equality of the temperature during day and night, as well as throughout the year, it has been considered that the climate of Madeira is the finest in the northern hemisphere. Sir James Clark is of opinion that there is no place on the continent of Europe, with which he is acquainted, where the pulmonary invalid could reside with so much advantage, during the whole year, as in Madeira.

MADELEON, Bdellium.

MADEMA, Madarosis.

MADESIS, Depilation, Madarosis.

MADISIS, Depilation, Madarosis.

MADISON SPRINGS, see Georgia, Mineral waters of.

MADISTE'R'IUM, μαδιστηριον, Trichol'abium, Trichol'abis, Voise'lla. Tweezers. An instrument for extracting hairs.

MADJOUND, Madjoun. A mixture of powdered hemp and honey, used as a narcotic agent, like tobacco, by the Algerines.

MADNESS, CANINE, Hydrophobia—m. Raving or furious, Mania.

MADOR, Moisture. A cold sweat.

MADORIUS, Mudar.

MADREPORA OCULATA, see Coral.

MADWEED, Scutellaria lateriflora.

MÆA, Midwife.

MÆEIA, Obstetrics.

MÆEUMA, see Parturition.

MÆLIA, Obstetrics.

MAESA PICTA, Saoria.

MÆUSIS, Parturition.

MÆUTRIA, Midwife.

MAGDA'LIA, Magda'leon, Magda'lis. 'Crumb of bread.' Any medicine, as a pill, formed of crumb of bread. A roll of plaster.

MAGEIRICE, Culinary art.

MAGGOT PIMPLE, see Aene.

MAGIS, μαγισ, 'a cake.' A sort of cake, composed of cloves, garlic and cheese, beaten together.—Hippocrates.

MAGISTERIUM, Magistery —m. Bismuthi, Bismuth, subnitrate of—m. Jalapæ, Resin of Jalap —m. Marcasite, Bismuth, subnitrate of—m. Plumbi, Plumbi subcarbonas —m. Sulphuris, Sulphur lotum —m. Tartari purgans, Potassæ acetas.

MAG'ISTERY, Magiste'rium, from magister, 'a master.' Certain precipitates from saline solutions were formerly so called; as well as other medicines, the preparation of which was kept secret.

MAGISTRY OF BISMUTH, Bismuth, subnitrate of.

MAG'ISTRAL, Magistra'lis. Same etymon. Extempora'neous. A prescription is so called—Form'ula magistra'lis seu extempora'nea—which is prepared extemporaneously; an officinal prescription—Form'ula officina'lis—being such as has been prepared for some time before it is prescribed.

MAGISTRANTIA, Imperatoria.

MAGMA, μαγμα, (F.) Marc. The thick residuum, obtained after expressing certain substances to extract the fluid parts from them. The grounds which remain after treating a substance with water, alcohol, or any other menstruum. Also, a salve of a certain consistence.

MAGMA or MARC OF OLIVES is the residuum after the greatest possible quantity of oil has been extracted from olives by making them ferment. It was formerly employed as a stimulant, under the form of a bath—to which the name Bain de Marc was given by the French.

MAGMA or MARC OF GRAPES, Bry'tia, was once employed for the same purposes.

MAGMA RĒTICULĒ, 'reticulated magma.' The gelatiniform substance found between the chorion and amnion in the early period of embryonic existence.

MAGNES, Magnet.

MAGNES ARSENICA'LIS. (Sulphur, white arsenic, and common antimony, of each equal parts. Mix by fusion.) It is corrosive. See Magnetic plaster.

MAGNES EPILEPSIE, Hydrargyri sulphuretum rubrum.

MAGNE'SIA, Abarnahas, Chambar, Terra ama'ra, Magnesia terra, Talc earth; from magnes, 'the magnet.' An alkaline earth whose metallic base is magnesium. The term Magnesia was employed, of old, for any substance that seemed to have the power of attracting some principle from the air. At present it is restricted to—

MAGNESIA, M. usta seu calcinata, Cal'cined Magnesia, Oxide of magne'sium, (F.) Magnésie brûlée, Magnésie, M. Caustique. This is obtained by exposing carbonate of magnesia to a strong heat. It is inodorous; taste very slightly bitter; in the form of a white, light, spongy, soft powder. S. g. 2.3; requiring 2000 times its weight of water for its solution. It is antacid, and laxative when it meets with acid in the stomach. Dose, gr. x to ʒj in water or milk.

Henry's, Husband's, and Ellis's Magnesia, are dense forms of this preparation.

MAGNESIA, ACETATE OF, Magnesia acetas—m. Aerata, Magnesia carbonas—m. Alba, M. carbonas—m. Calcinata, M. usta—m. Citrata of, Magnesia citras—m. Dinneford's, see Magnesia, fluid—m. Edinburgensis, M. carbonas.

MAGNESIA, EFFERVESCING, MOXON'S. (Magnes. carb.; M. sulphat.; Sodæ bicarbon., Acid tartaric. ãa partes æquales; to be pulverized, well dried, mixed, and enclosed in bottles hermetically sealed.) Dose, a teaspoonful in half a tumbler of water, drunk in a state of effervescence.

MAGNESIA, ELLIS'S, see Magnesia.

MAGNESIA, FLUID. Under this name a preparation is designated, which consists of a solution of carbonate of magnesia in carbonated water. It is also termed carbonated magnesia water, aerated magnesia water, and condensed solution of magnesia, (F.) Eau magnésienne. Dinneford's Magnesia is a solution of this kind.

MAGNESIA, HENRY'S, Magnesia—m. Husband's, see Magnesia—m. Mitis, Magnesia carbonas—m. Muriate of, Magnesium chloridum—m. Nigra, Manganese, black oxide of.

MAGNESIA OPALI'NA. A name given by Léméry to a mixture of equal parts of antimony, nitrate of potassa, and chloride of sodium, (decrepitated.) It has emetic properties, but is not used.

MAGNESIA SALIS AMARI, Magnesia carbonas—m. Salis Ebsdamensis, Magnesia carbonas—m. Saturni, Antimonium—m. Solution of, condensed, M. fluid—m. Subcarbonate of, Magnesia carbonas—m. Subcarbonate of, hydrated, Magnesia carbonas—m. Terra, Magnesia—m. Vitriolata, Magnesia sulphas—m. and Soda, sulphate of, see Soda, sulphate of—m. Usta, Magnesia.

MAGNE'SIE ACE'TAS, Ac'etate of Magnesia. This salt is prepared by saturating carbonate of magnesia with acetic acid. It is of syrupy consistence, and about four ounces is a dose. It acts like citrate of magnesia.

MAGNE'SIE CAR'BONAS seu Subcar'bonas, Magnesia (Dublin), M. aëra'ta seu car'bonica seu alba, M. Subcar'bonica seu Mitis seu Edinburgensis seu Salis Ebsdamensis seu Salis ama'ri, Car'bonas magne'sium, Lac terra, Hypocarb'bonas magne'sia, Terra amara aëra'ta seu absorbens minera'tis seu talco'sa oxyanthrac'o'des, Subcar'bonate of Magnesia, Hydrated Subcar'bonate of Magnesia, (F.) Sous-carbonate ou carbonate de Magnésie, Magnésie aérée ou blanche ou crayonne ou douce ou effervescente ou moyenne ou Anglaise, Craie ou Terre magnésienne, Lait de Terre, Panacée Anglaise, Poudre de Sentinelli ou de Valentini ou du Comte de Palme ou de Zwinger. Prepared from sulphate of magnesia by subcarbonate of potassa. It is inodorous; insipid; light; white; spongy; opaque; effervescing with acids; insoluble in water. Properties the same as the last; but the carbonic acid, when set free, sometimes causes unpleasant distension.

MAGNE'SIE CITRAS, Citrate of Magnesia, (F.)

Citrate de Magnésie. A saline preparation, formed by saturating a solution of citric acid with either magnesia or its carbonate. Dose, an ounce. It is devoid of the bitter taste of the magnesian salts.

A solution in water, or in mineral water, sweetened with syrup, and acidulated with citric acid, makes an agreeable purgative. A simple solution in water has been called magnesian lemonade. In the effervescing state, it is the effervescent magnesian lemonade. The Pharmacopœia of the United States (1851) has a form for the LIQUOR MAGNESIÆ CITRATIS, Solution of Citrate of Magnesia. Take of Carbonate of magnesia, ℥v; citric acid, ℥viiss; Syrup of citric acid, f℥ij; Water, a sufficient quantity. Dissolve the citric acid in f℥iv of water, and add ℥iv of the carbonate of magnesia, previously rubbed with f℥iij of water. When the reaction has ceased, filter into a strong f℥xij glass bottle, into which the syrup of citric acid has been previously introduced. Rub the remaining carbonate of magnesia with f℥ij of water, and pour the mixture into the bottle, which must be well corked, and secured with twine; and shake the mixture occasionally until it becomes transparent. As a cathartic the whole of this may be taken.

MAGNESIÆ HYPOCARBONAS, M. carbonas—m. Subcarbonas, M. carbonas—m. Vitriolicum, Magnesiæ sulphas.

MAGNESIÆ SULPHAS, Sulphas Magnesiæ purificata, Magnesiæ vitriolata, Sal catharticus amarus seu catharticum amarum seu amarum seu Anglicanum seu Epsomen'sis seu catharticus Anglicanus seu Sedlicen'sis seu Ebsdamen'se seu Seydschützen'se, Terra amara sulphurica, Vitriolicum Magnesiæ, Sulphate of Magnesia, Epsom Salt, Bitter purging Salt, (F.) Sulfate de magnésie, Sel admirable de Léméry, Sel d'Égra. Generally obtained from sea-water. Its taste is bitter and disagreeable. It is soluble in an equal quantity of water at 60°. It is purgative and diuretic. Dose, as a cathartic, ℥ss to ℥ij.

MAGNESIAN LEMONADE, Magnesiæ citras.

MAGNÉSIE AÉRÉE, Magnesiæ carbonas—m. Anglaisc, Magnesiæ carbonas—m. Blanche, Magnesiæ carbonas—m. Brulée, Magnesiæ usta—m. Carbonate de Magnesiæ carbonas—m. Caus-tique, Magnesiæ usta—m. Citrate de Magnesiæ citras—m. Crayeuse, Magnesiæ carbonas—m. Douce, Magnesiæ carbonas—m. Effervescente, Magnesiæ carbonas—m. Moyenne, Magnesiæ carbonas—m. Souscarbonate de Magnesiæ carbonas—m. Sulfate de Magnesiæ sulphas.

MAGNESII CHLORIDUM, Chloride of Magnesium, Nitrate of Magnesia. This bitter deliquescent salt has been given as a mild and effective cholagogue cathartic, in the dose of half an ounce to the adult. Being deliquescent, it may be kept dissolved in its weight of water.

MAGNESIUM, see Magnesiæ—m. Chloride of Magnesium chloridum—m. Oxide of Magnesia usta.

MAGNET, Magnes, Magnetes, Ferrum magnes attractorium, Siderites, Sideritis, Lapis heracleus seu Syderitis seu nauticus, Magnitis, so called from Magnes, its discoverer, or from Magnesia, where it is said to have been first found. (F.) Aimant, Pierre d'Aimant. The magnet or loadstone. An amorphous, oxydulated ore of iron, which exerts an attraction on unmagnetized iron, and has the property of exhibiting poles; that is, of pointing by one of its extremities to the north. This ore, by constant or long rubbing, communicates its properties to iron; and thus artificial magnets are formed. Magnetic ore is found in many countries, and particularly in the island of Elba. The magnet is sometimes used to extract spicula of iron from the eye or from wounds. It has been employed as an antispasmodic; but acts only through the imagination. The powder has been given as a tonic. In Pharmacy, it is used to purify iron filings. It attracts the iron, and the impurities remain behind. It formerly entered, as an ingredient, into several plasters, to draw bullets and heads of arrows from the body—as the Emplastrum divinum Nicolai, the Emplastrum nigrum of Augsburg, the Opodeldoch, and Attractivum of Paracelsus, &c.

MAGNETES, Magnet.

MAGNETIC, Magnet'icus, (F.) Magnétique. Same etymon. That which belongs or relates to magnetism;—mineral or animal.

MAGNETIC FLUID. A name given to the impalpable fluid to which the magnet owes its virtues. By analogy it is applied to a particular principle, supposed to be the source of organic actions, which affects, it is conceived, the nervous system principally, and is susceptible of being transmitted from one living body to another, by contact or simple approximation, and especially under the influence of fixed volition. See Magnetism, Animal.

MAGNETIC PLASTER. A plaster, at present, not used. It has for its base a mixture, called Magnes arsenicalis; formed of equal parts of antimony, sulphur and arsenic melted together in a glass cucurbit. The name Magnetic plaster was, likewise, given to such as contained powdered magnet.

MAGNETINUS, Potassæ supertartras impurus.

MAGNETISM, ANIMAL, Mesmerism, Pathetism, Neurogamia, Biogamia, Biomagnetismus, Zoömagnetismus, Exon'eurism (proposed by Mr. H. Mayo), Telluris'mus, Anthropomagnetismus, Gargale, Gargalis'mus, Gargalus. Properties attributed to the influence of a particular principle, which has been compared to that which characterizes the magnet. It is supposed to be transmitted from one person to another, and to impress peculiar modifications on organic action, especially on that of the nerves. The discussions, to which this strange belief has given rise, are by no means terminated. There is no evidence whatever of the existence of such a fluid. Highly impressible persons can be thrown into a kind of hysteric or 'magnetic' sleep and somnambulism, (designated by Mr. Braid, hypnotism, neuro-hypnotism, and nervous sleep); but farther than this, the efforts of the magnetizer cannot reach. It is a mode of action upon the nerves through the medium of the senses.

MAGNETIZATION, Mesmerization.

MAGNETIZED, Mesmerized.

MAGNETIZER, Mesmerizer.

MAGNETIS, Magnet.

MAGNITUDO CORPORIS, Stature—m. Gigantea, see Giant.

Ord. Magnoliaceæ. The bark is possessed of tonic properties, resembling those of casarilla, canella, &c. The same may be said of the Magnolia tripetala seu Umbrella, Umbrel'a tree; the M. acuminata or Cucumber tree, the M. grandiflora and M. macrophylla, Laurel, Elk wood, Silverleaf, Big leaf, White Bay, Beaver Tree, Elk bark, Big bloom.

Magnolia (Ph. U. S.), is the bark of Magnolia glauca, M. acuminata, and M. tripetala.

MAGNOLIER GLAUQUE, Magnolia glauca.
MAGNUM DEI DONUM, Cinchona.

MAGNUM OS. The third bone of the lower row of the carpus, reckoning from the thumb. It is the largest bone of the carpus; and is, also, called Os capitatum; (F.) Grand Os.

MAGRUMS. A popular name in the State of New York for a singular convulsive affection, which resembles chorea. It rarely, however, occurs before the adult age; never ceases spontaneously, and, when fully developed, is devoid of any paroxysmal character.

MAGUEY, Agave Americana.

MAHMOUDY, Convolvulus scammonia.

MAHOGAN FÉBRIFUGE, Swietenia febrifuga.

MAHOGANY, Gynocladus Canadensis. Also, a drink in use among the Cornish fishermen of England, which is made of two parts gin and one part treacle, well beaten together. An analogous drink—a mixture of whisky and honey, (see Mead, under Hydromel), is known in the Highlands of Scotland by the name Athol porridge.

MALA, Gena—m. Aurea, see Citrus aurantium.

MALABATH'RINUM. Ancient name of an ointment and a wine, into which the malabathrum entered.

MALABA'THRUM, Cadeji-Indi. The leaves of a tree of the East Indies. These leaves entered into the theriac, mithridate, and other ancient electuaries. They are believed to be from a species of laurel—Laurus Cassia; but, according to others, from Laurus Malabathrum. The O'leum Malabathri is obtained from it.

MALACCÆ RADIX, Sagittarium alexipharmacum.

MALACHE, Malva rotundifolia.

MALA'CIA, from μαλακία, 'softness.' A deprivation of taste, in which an almost universal loathing is combined with an exclusive longing for some particular article of food. If the patient desires substances that are noxious or not eatable, it constitutes Pica, Pisso'sis, Pitto'sis, Heterorez'ia, Heterorrhœz'ia, Cissa, Citto'sis, Citta, Limo'sis Pica, Allotriophag'ia, Picacismus, Pica'tio, Depra'ved app'etite, (F.) Envie. These symptoms accompany several nervous affections,—those of females in particular. In pregnancy it is common, and is termed Longing.

MALACIA AFRICANORUM, Chthonophagia—m. Cordis, Cardiomalacia.

MALACISMUS, Mollities.

MALACOGASTER, Gastromalaxia.

MALACOPHO'NUS, from μαλακία, 'softness,' and φωνη, 'voice.' One who has a soft voice.

MALACOPŒA, Emollities.

MALACORIUM, see Punica granatum.

MALACOSARCO'SIS, from μαλακος, 'soft,' and σαρξ, σαρκος, 'flesh.' State of softness of the muscular system.

MALÉ OS, from malum, 'an apple;' so called from its roundness. Zygo'ma, Os mala'rē seu Juga'lē seu Jugamentum seu Genæ seu Zygomat'icum seu Hypo'pium seu Subocula'rē seu Pud'icum, (F.) Os Malaire ou Zygomatique ou de la Pommette. The cheek or malar bone. This bone is situate at the lateral and superior part of the face; and constitutes the zygomatic region of the cheek. It is irregularly quadrilateral. Its outer surface is convex, covered by muscles and skin, and pierced with canals, called malar, through which vessels and nerves pass. Its upper surface is concave, and forms part of the orbit. Its posterior surface is concave, and enters into the composition of the temporal fossa. This bone is thick and cellular. It is articulated with the frontal, temporal, sphenoid, and superior maxillary bones, and is developed by a single point of ossification.

The part of the face rendered prominent by it, the French call Pommette.

MALAG'MA, from μαλασσω, 'I soften.' An emollient cataplasm, and, in general, every local application which enjoys the property of softening organic tissues.

MALAIRE, Malar.

MALAISE, Indisposition.

MALAKIEN, Mollities.

MALAMBO BARK, Matias.

MALANDERS, Malandria.

MALAN'DRIA. A species of lepra or elephantiasis. — Marcellus Empiricus. Mal'anders or Mal'enders, is a disease of the horse, which consists of a scurfy eruption on the inside of the hock, or a little below it, as well as at the bend of the knee. It is called Mallenders in the fore-leg, and Sallenders in the hind leg. — Youatt.

MALANDRIO'SUS, Leprous. Affected with malandria.

MALAR, Mala'ris, (F.) Malaire, from mala, 'the cheek,' Belonging to the cheek, — as the malar bone.

MALAR PROCESS, Zygomatic process.

MALARE OS, Malæ os.

MALARIA, Miasm.

MALARI'OUS, Mala'rial. Owing to, or connected with Malaria, — as a malarious soil, malarious disease, &c.

MALASSIMILA'TION, Malassimila'tio; from mala, 'bad,' and assimilatio, 'assimilation.' Imperfect or morbid assimilation or nutrition.

MAL'AXATE, Molli'rē, Subig'erē, Malacissa'rē, (F.) Malaxer, from μαλασσω, 'I soften.' To produce softening of drugs, by kneading them. The process is called Malaxa'tion, Malaxa'tio.

MALAXATION, see Malaxate.

MALAXIA VENTRICULLI, Gastromalaxia.

MALAXIS, Mollities — m. Cordis, Cardioma-lacia — m. Hepatica, Adiposis hepatica.

MALAY, see Homo.

MALAZISSA'TUS, Malacissa'tus, same etymon as Malaxate. One in whom the testicles have not descended. It has, also, been used synonymously with emascula'tus and muliera'tus. — Castelli.

MALCE, Chilblain.

MALÉ, Mas, Mas'culus. Of the sex that begets young. Not female. What belongs to the male sex; as the male organs of generation.

MALE, Axilla.

MALE ORGAN, Penis.

MALE DI BREN'O, see Scherlievo — m. Scabiosa venereo, Scherlievo.

MALEFICIUM, Poisoning.

MALFORMA'TION, malforma'tio, malconforma'tio; from mal, and forma, 'form.' A wrong formation; or irregularity in the structure of parts. See Monster.

MALIE, Equinia.

MALIG'NANT, Malig'nus, (F.) Malin. A term applied to any disease whose symptoms are so aggravated as to threaten the destruction of the patient. A disease of a very serious character, although it may be mild in appearance; — Morbis malignus.

MALIN, Malignant.

MALING'ERER; from (F.) maligre, 'sickly.' A simulator of disease, so termed in the British military service.

MALIS, Malias'mos, Cuta'neous vermination, Helmintho'cus. The cuticle or skin infested with animalcules, — Phthiri'asis, Parasiti'smus superfic'iei. In Persia, this affection is produced by the Guinea worm; in South America, by the Chigre; and in Europe, occasionally by the Louse. See Equinia, and Phthieriasis.

MALIS DRACUNCULUS, Dracunculus — m. Gordii, Draconculus — m. Pediculi, Phthieriasis.

MALLENDERS, Malandria.

MALLE'OLAR, Malleola'ris, from malleolus, 'the ankle.' (F.) Malléolaire. Belonging or relating to the ankles.

MALLEOLAR ARTERIES are two branches furnished by the anterior tibial about the instep; the one — the internal — passes transversely behind the tendon of the tibialis anticus, to be distributed in the vicinity of the malleolus internus; — the other — the external — glides behind the tendons of the extensor communis digitorum pedis and the peroneus brevis, and sends its branches to the parts which surround the outer ankle, as well as to the outer region of the tarsus.

MALLE'OLUS. Diminutive of malleus, 'a mallet, or hammer;' Race'ta, Raste'ta, Rascha, Rasetta, Rasé'ta, Sphyra, Talus, Diab'ebos, Tale'olus, Peza, Ankle. (Prov.) Ancler, Ancler, Ancliff, Anclow, Ankley, Rick, (Sc.) Cute, Coot, Hancleth, Heather-clu, (F.) Malléole. Chevillé de Pied. The two projections formed by the bones of the leg at their inferior part. The inner belongs to the tibia; the outer to the fibula. The ankles afford attachment to ligaments; and each has a sort of gutter, in which certain tendons slide. See Malleus.

MALLET, Malle'olus, (F.) Maillet. A kind of hammer, used with a gouge for removing or cutting bones, in certain surgical and anatomical operations.

MALLEUS, Malle'olus, Ossic'ulum Malleola assimila'tum, (F.) Marteau. The longest and outermost of the four small bones of the ear. It is situate at the outer part of the tympanum, and is united to the membrana tympani. It has, 1. An ovoid head, which is articulated behind with the incus, and is supported by a narrow part called the neck: this has, anteriorly, a long apophysis, which is engaged in the glenoid fissure, and is called the Apophysis or Process, Processus grac'illis, of Rau. It affords attachment to the anterior seu externus mallei muscle. 2. A handle, which forms an obtuse angle with the neck, and corresponds to the membrane of the tympanum, which it seems to draw inwards. It is furnished at its upper extremity with a process — the processus brevis, to which the internus mallei is attached. This bone is developed by a single point of ossification.

MALLEUS, Equinia—M. farcininosus, see Equinia—m. Slender Process of the, Grêle apophyse du marteau.

MALLOW, COMMON, Malva—m. Compound decoction of, Decoction malvæ compositum—m. Indian, Abutilon Avicennæ—m. Yellow, Abutilon Avicennæ.

MALLS, Rubeola.

MALMEDY, MINERAL WATERS OF. Malmedy is a town in Rhenish Prussia, between Spa and Coblenz. In its immediate vicinity are several acidulous chalybeate springs.

MALO DI SCARLIEVO, Scherlievo.

MALOGRANATUM, Punica granatum.

MALPIGHI, ACINI OF, Corpora Malpighiana.

MALPIGHIA MOUREL'LA, (F.) Mourel-lier, Simarouba fauz. The bark of this shrub—a native of Cayenne—is reputed to be febrifuge, and useful in diarrhœa.

MALPIGHIAN BODIES, Corpora Malpighiana—m. b. Inflammation of the, Kidney, Bright's disease of the—m. b. of the Spleen, see Spleen.

MALPRAX'IS, Mala praxis, Malum reg'imen. Bad management or treatment.

MALT, Sax. mealt, Dutch, mout, Teut. malt; from μαλάρω, 'I soften'; [?] Bynē, Maltum, Hor'dei maltum, Bra'sium, (F.) Drêche. Barley made to germinate, for the purpose of forming beer. It has been recommended in medicine, as antiscorbutic, antiscrofulous, &c.

MALT SPIRIT. A spirit distilled from malt. It is the basis of most of the spirituous cordials.

MALTA, CLIMATE OF. The climate of Malta is pretty equable, the range of temperature in the twenty-four hours being rarely more than 6°. The air is almost always dry and clear. The most disagreeable wind is the sirocco, which is the source of more or less suffering to the pulmonary invalid. The winter climate is favourable. Dr. Liddell thinks that no place which he has seen in the south of Europe can compete with Malta, for a mild, dry, bracing air in November, December, and part of January; and during the other winter and spring months, he thinks it is equal to any of them.

MALTHA, Malthā, from μαλάρω, 'I soften.' Wax, particularly soft wax.

MALTHACTICA, Emollients.

MALTHAXIS, Mollities.

MALUS INDICA, Bilumbi biting-bing of Bontius. Ord. Rosaceæ. The juice of this East India tree is cooling, and is drunk as a cure for fevers. The leaves, boiled and made into a cataplasm with rice, are famed in all sorts of tumours. The juice, mixed with arrack, is drunk for the cure of diarrhœa. The ripe fruit is eaten as a delicacy; and the unripe is made into a pickle for the use of the table.

MALUS LIMONIA ACIDA, see Citrus medica—m. Medica, see Citrus medica—m. Sylvestris, Pyrus malus.

MALVA, Malva sylvestris seu vulg'aris, Common Mallow, (F.) Mauve sauvage. Ord. Malvacæ. The leaves and flowers are chiefly used in fomentations, cataplasms, and emollient enemas. Its properties are demulcent.

Malva rotundifolia, Mal'achē, Mal'ochē, has like virtues; as well as the other varieties.

MALVAVISCUM, Althæa.

MALVERN, WATERS OF. The village of Great Malvern, (pronounced Mau'vern), in Worcestershire, England, has for many years been celebrated for a spring of remarkable purity, which has acquired the name of the Holy well. It is a carbonated water; containing carbonates of soda and iron, sulphate of soda, and chloride of sodium; and is chiefly used externally, in cutaneous affections.

MAMA-PIAN. (F.) Maman-pian. An ulcer of a bad aspect, which is the commencement of the pian; and which, after having destroyed the flesh, extends to the bones. It is also called the Mother of Pians;—La mère des pians.

MAMEI, Mameo, Momin or Toddy tree. From incisions made in the branches of this West Indian tree, a copious discharge of pellucid liquor occurs, which is called momin or Toddy wine. It is very diuretic, and is esteemed to be a good antilithic and lithontriptic.

MAMELLE, Mamma.

MAMELON, Nipple.

MAMELONNÉ, Mammillated.

MAMELONS DU REIN, Papillæ of the kidney.

MAMILLA, Mammula, see Mamma.

MAMMA, from mamma, one of the earliest cries of the infant, ascribed to a desire for food. Masthos, Mastus, Mazos, Thelē, Tithos, Titty, Ruma, Uber, ουθαρ, Nutrix, Gemip'oma. The female breast, Pap, Pappe, (Mammil'la, Mamilla being the male breast); (F.) Mamelle. A glandular organ, proper to a class of animals—the mammalia—and intended for the secretion of milk. The mamma exist in both sexes, but they acquire a much greater size in the female; especially during pregnancy and lactation. In women, before the age of puberty, the breasts are but little developed. At this period, however, towards the central part of each breast, the skin suddenly changes colour, and assumes a rosy tint. It is of a reddish brown in women who have suckled several children. This circle has a rugous appearance, owing to the presence of sebaceous glands, and is called Are'ola or Aure'ola. These glands—Tubercles of the Areola, of Sir Astley Cooper—furnish an unctuous fluid for defending the nipple from the action of the saliva of the sucking infant. In the midst of the areola is the nipple, a conoidal eminence, of a rosy tint, susceptible of erection, and at the surface of which the galactophorous ducts open. Besides the skin covering them, the breasts are, also, composed of a layer of fatty areolar tissue, more or less thick; of a large gland; excretory ducts; vessels, nerves, &c. See Mammary.

In the animal, the mamma is called the Udder, ουθαρ, Uber, the Bag.

The breasts, plus the space between, are called the bosom, sinus, colpos (καλπος). At times, these terms are restricted to the space between the breasts. (F.) Sein.

Mamma also means a nurse.

MAMMAIRE, Mammary.

MAMMAL, plural Mamma'lia, Mam'mifer, mammiferous animal; from mamma, 'a breast.' An animal that suckles its young.

MAMMARY, Mamma'rius, (F.) Mammaire, is in mamma, 'the breast.' Relating to the breasts.

MAMMARY ABSCESS, Mastodynia apostematosa.

MAMMARY ARTERIES are three in number. They are distinguished into—1. The Internal Mammary, Arteria sternalis, A. Sous-sternal (Ch.), Internal thoracica. It arises from the subclavian, and descends obliquely inwards, from its origin to the cartilage of the third rib. Below the diaphragm it divides into two branches; the one external, the other internal. From its origin until its bifurcation, it gives branches to the muscles and glands of the neck, to the thymus, mediastinum, pericardium, and œsophagus. In each intercostal space it gives off internal and external musculo-cutaneous branches, and also, on each side, the superior diaphragmatic. Its two ultimate branches are distributed on the parietes of the abdomen, and anastomose with the external mammary, intercostal, lumbar, circumflexa illi, and epigastric arteries. 2. The External Mammary Arteries are two in number, and are distinguished into superior and inferior. The superior external mammary, First of the thoracics (Ch.), Superior external thoracic, Superior thoracic, is furnished by the axillary artery. It descends obliquely forwards between the pectoralis major and pectoralis minor, to which it is distributed by a considerable number of branches. The inferior external mammary, the second of the thoracics (Ch.), Long or inferior thoracic, arises from the axillary artery, a little below the preceding. It descends vertically over the lateral part of the thorax; curves, afterwards, inwards; becomes subcutaneous and divides into a number of branches, which surround the breast. It gives branches to the pectoralis major, serratus major anticus, the intercostal muscles, the glands of the axilla, and the integuments of the breast.

MAMMARY GLAND, Glandula lactifera, is the secretory organ of the milk. It is situate in the substance of the breast, to which it gives shape. The tissue of this gland results from the assemblage of lobes of different size, united intimately by a dense areolar tissue. Each of these is composed of several lobules, formed of round granulations, of a rosy white colour, and of the size of a poppy seed. The glandular grains give rise to the radicles of the excretory canals of the mamma, which are called galactophorous or lactiferous. These excretory vessels unite in ramusculi, rami, and in trunks of greater or less size; collect towards the centre of the gland; are tortuous, very extensible, and semi-transparent. All terminate in sinuses, situate near the base of the nipple, which are commonly from 15 to 18 in number. These sinuses are very short, conical, and united by areolar tissue. From their summits, a fasciculus of new ducts sets out, which occupy the centre of the nipple and open separately at its surface. The arteries of the mammary gland come from the thoracic, axillary, intercostal, and internal mammary. The veins accompany the arteries; the nerves are furnished by the intercostals, and brachial plexus; the lymphatic vessels are very numerous, and form two layers. They communicate with those of the thorax, and pass into the axillary ganglions.

MAMMARY SARCO'MA, Mastoid sarcoma of Abernethy, Emphy'ma sarcoma mamma'rum. A tumour, of the colour and texture of the mammary gland; dense and whitish; sometimes softer and brownish; often producing, on extirpation, a malignant ulcer with indurated edges. Found in various parts of the body and limbs.

MAMMARY VEINS follow the same course as the arteries, and have received the same denominations. The internal mammary vein, of the right side, opens into the superior cava; that of the left, into the corresponding subclavian vein. The external mammary veins open into the axillary vein.

MAMME'A AMERICA'NA, (F.) Abricot sauvage. Ord. Guttifera. The systematic name of the tree on which the mammee or mamei fruit grows. This fruit has a delightful flavour when ripe; and is much cultivated in Jamaica, where it is generally sold in the markets as one of the best fruits of the island.

MAMME'A'TA, Mamme'sa, from mamma, 'the breast.' One who has large breasts.

MAMMELLA, Nipple.

MAMMIFER, Mammal.

MAMMIFEROUS ANIMAL, Mammal.

MAMMIFORM, Mastoid.

MAMMILLA, Mamma (male), Nipple.

MAMMILLÆ MEDULLARES, see Mammillary.

MAMMILLARIS, Mastoid.

MAMMILLARY, Mammilla'ris, from Mammilla, 'a small breast, a nipple.' See Mastoid.

MAMMILLARY EM'INENCE is a name given, 1. To more or less marked prominences on the inner surface of the bones of the cranium, which correspond to the anfractuosities of the cranium. 2. To white, round, medullary tubercles, of the size of a pea, situate at the base of the brain, behind the gray substance from which the Tige pituitaire, of the French anatomists, arises. These Mammillary Tu'bercles, Cor'pora albican'tia seu Candican'tia seu Mammilla'ria seu Pisiform'ia, Bulbi for'niceis, Mammilla'æ seu Globuli medulla'res, Prominentiæ albican'tes, Processus mammilla'res cere'ebri, Protensio'nes glandula'res, Eminentie candican'tes, Prio'rum crurum for'niceis bulbi, Willis's Glands, (F.) Bulbes de la voûte à trois piliers, Tubercles pisiformes (Ch.), are united to each other by a small grayish band, which corresponds with the third ventricle. They receive the anterior prolongations of the fornix.

Some ancient anatomists, taking the nervous trunks, to which Willis first gave the name of olfactory nerves, for simple appendages of the brain, called them, an account of their shape, Caruncula' mammilla'res. Vesalius, Fallopius, Columbus, and several others, termed them Processus mammilla'res cere'ebri ad nares. They have also been called Trigo'na olfacto'ria.

MAMMILLATED, (F.) Mamelonné, from mamma, 'the female breast.' That which has mammiform projections on its surface.

MAMMILLATED LIVER, Cirrhosis.

MAMMITE, Mastitis.

MAMMITIS, Mastitis.

MAMMOSA, Mammeata.

MAM'MULA; diminutive of Mamma, Mamilla. A small breast.

MAMOE, Manei.

MAN'DUCATORY, Manducatorius; from Manducatio, 'mastication.' Appertaining or relating to mastication—s, as,

MANDUCATORY NERVE, see Trigemini.

MANŒUVRE, Manœuvre.

MANGANESE, Manganesium, Manga'nium.
A metal, which is pretty abundant in nature in an oxidized state. It is of a grayish-white colour, resembling some varieties of cast iron, is hard and brittle, and destitute of magnetic properties.
Specific gravity about 8.

MANGANESE, BLACK OXIDE OF, Mangane'sii
oxidum seu Binox'idum, Tetrox'ide of manga- nese, Magne'sia nigra, Mangane'stium vitrari'o-rum

Oxo'des man'gani nativ'a, Peroxy'dum manga- ne'stium nigrum nativum, Superoxy'dum manga'neum, (F.) Oxyde noir de manganèse. This oxide is not much used in medicine. It has been advised to dust the affected parts, in tinea capitis, with the powder. It is official in the Edinburgh phar-macopœia, and is used in preparing chlorine, solution of chlorine, and solution of chlorinated soda.

MANGANESE, SALTS OF, see Manganese, sulphate of.

MANGANÈSE OXYDE NOIR DE, Manga- nese, black oxide of.

MANGANESE, SULPHATE OF, Mangane'sii Sul- phas seu Protox'idi Sulphas, Sulphate of Pro- tox'ide of manganese. A rose-coloured and very soluble salt, isomorphous with sulphate of magnesia. It is prepared on a large scale for the use of the dyer, by heating, in a close vessel, peroxide of manganese and coal, and dissolving the impure protoxide, thus obtained, in sulphuric acid, with the addition of a little cholorhydric acid towards the end of the process. The solution is evaporated to dryness, and again exposed to a red heat, by which the persulphate of iron is decomposed. Water then dissolves the pure sulphate of manganese, leaving the oxide of iron behind.

This salt has been recommended as a cholagogue, in doses of a drachm or two.

The salts of manganese have been recommended in chlorosis and amenorrhœa, and as substitutes for chalybeates generally. The subcarbonate and the oxide have been chiefly employed.

MANGE, Scabies ferina.

MANGIFERA INDICA, M. domes'tica, from mango, the fruit, and fero, 'I bear.' The Mango tree, (F.) Manguier. Ord. Terebinthaceæ. A tree cultivated over Asia, and in South America.
Mangos, when ripe, are juicy, of a good flavour, and so fragrant as to perfume the air to a considerable distance. They are eaten, either raw or preserved with sugar. From the expressed juice a wine is prepared; and the remainder of the kernel can be reduced to an excellent flour for bread.

MANGO TREE, Mangifera Indica.

MAN'IA, Furor, Hemianthro'pia, Furor seu Ecp'hrô'nia seu Delir'ium mania, Insu'nia, Del- ir'ium mani'acum seu furi'o'sum, Mania univer- sal'is, Ves'ania mania, (F.) Manie, Hyperphrênie, Raving or furious madness, (Sc.) Wodnes; from μαῖνος, 'I am furious.' With some, it means in- sanity. Disorder of the intellect, in which there is erroneous judgment or hallucination, which impels to acts of fury. If the raving be not directed to a single object, it is mania properly so called; if to one object, it constitutes monomania, which term is, however, usually given to melancholy. Mania attacks adults chiefly; and women more frequently than men. The prognosis is unfavourable. About one-third never recover; and they who do are apt to relapse. Separation is one of the most effective means of treatment, with attention to the corporeal condition and every thing that can add to the mental comfort of the patient, and turn his thoughts away from the subjects of his delusion. In the violence of the paroxysms, recourse must be had to the strait waistcoat, the shower bath, &c. Separation should be continued for some weeks during convalescence, with the view of preventing a relapse.

MANIA, DANCING. Dancing plague. A form of convulsion, which has appeared, at various times, epidemically under the form of St. Vitus's dance, St. John's dance, Tarantism, Hysteria, Tigretier (in Abyssinia), and diseased sympathy; and which has been fully described by Hecker in his 'Epidemics of the Middle Ages.' See Con- vulsionnaire.

MANTILE, Bandage (body).

MANTLE, Panniculus carnosus.

MANUBRIUM, from manus, 'a hand.' The handle of any thing:—as manu'brum mal'lei, petiolus mal'lei, 'the handle of the malleus.'

MANUBRIUM, Chasse—m. Mandis, Radius.

MANUBRIUM STERNI. The uppermost broad part of the sternum.

MANULUVIUM, Bath, hand, Maniluvium.

MANUS, μαω, 'I feel,' μαωαι, 'I take,' Cheir, Chir, Instrumentum Instrumento'rum, Hand, Paw, (F.) Main. The part which terminates the upper extremity in man, and which is inservient to prehension and touch. It extends from the fold of the wrist to the extremity of the fingers. The hand is sustained by a bony skeleton, composed of a number of pieces, movable on each other; of muscles, tendons, cartilages, ligaments, vessels, nerves, &c. It is divided into three parts—the carpus or wrist, the metacarpus, and fingers. Its concave surface is called the palm; the convex surface the back of the hand. The facility of being able to oppose the thumb to the fingers in order to seize objects forms one of the distinctive characters of the human hand.

MANUS CHRISTI PERLA'TA. A name anciently given to troches, prepared of pearls and sugar of roses. They were called Manus Christi simplices, when pearls were not employed.

MANUS DEI. An ancient plaster, prepared of vaz, myrrh, frankincense, mastic, gum ammoniac, galbanum, oil, &c. See Opium.

MARANTA GALAN'GA, Alpi'nia galan'ga, Amo'mum galanga, Galanga. Ord. Zingiberaceæ. The smaller galan'ga. Two kinds of galangal are mentioned in the pharmacopœias; the greater, obtained from Kæmpferia galanga, and the smaller, from the root of Maranta galanga. The dried root is brought from China, in pieces from one to two inches in length, but scarcely half as thick; branched; full of knots and joints, with several circular rings, of a reddish brown colour, on the outside, and brownish within. It was formerly much used as a warm stomachic bitter, and generally ordered in bitter infusions.

MARASCHINO, see Spirit.

MARASMOP'YRA, Febris marasmo'des, from μαρασμος, 'marasmus,' and ρυρ, 'fever.' Fever of emaciation in general. Hectic fever.

MARASMUS, Atrophy—m. Lactantium, Pædatrophia—m. Phthisis, Phthisis pulmonalis.

MARASMUS SENI'LIS, Tabes senum, Gerontatrophia. Progressive atrophy of the aged.

MARIOTTE', EXPERIMENT OF, (F.) Expérience de Mariotte. A celebrated experiment of the Abbé Mariotte, which consists in placing two small round spots on a wall at some distance from each other, standing opposite the left-hand object, and looking at it with the right eye, the left being closed. By walking backwards, until the distance from the object is about five times as great as the distance between the two objects, the latter will be found to disappear. Mariotte and, after him, many ophthalmologists, inferred that the optic nerve, on which the ray doubtless falls in this experiment, is insensible; and hence that the choroid may be the seat of vision;—not the retina. The inference is illogical; for it doubtless falls on the part of the optic nerve where the central artery enters, and the central vein leaves the eyeball, and where there is necessarily no neurine.

MARIS, paps. Ancient name of a measure, containing 83 pints and 4 ounces.

MARISCA, Ficus, Hæmorrhoids.

MARJOLAINE, Origanum majorana.

MARJORAM, COMMON, Origanum—m. Wild. Origanum—m. Sweet, Origanum majorana.

MARJORANA, Origanum majorana—m. Manucurana, Origanum.

MARMALADE, Marmelade.

MARMARYGE, see Metamorphopsia.

MARMARYGO'DES, μαρμαρυγῶδες, 'brilliant.'

An epithet, joined particularly to the word οφθαλμος, to indicate a brilliant eye, a flashing eye. An eye which transmits the image of imaginary objects. See Metamorphopsia.

MAR'MELADE, Marmel'ada, Marmela'ta, Marmalade, Miva. Parts of vegetables, connected with sugar, and reduced to a pulraceous consistence.

MARMELEDE OF APRICOTS. A marmelade, prepared with two parts of ripe apricots deprived of their stones, and one part of white sugar.

MARMELEDE OF FERNEL, M. of Tronchin.

MARMELEDE OF TRONCHIN, or OF FERNEL. A kind of thick looch, of an agreeable taste, prepared with two ounces of oil of sweet almonds, as much syrup of violets, manna in tears, very fresh pulp of cassia, 16 grains of gum tragacanth, and two drachms of orange flower water. It is used as a laxative, demulcent, and pectoral.

MARMELEATA, Marmelade.

MARMOR, μαρμωρος, Marble, Calcis Car'bonas durus, (F.) Marble. White granular carbonate of lime. Used in pharmacy for the preparation of a pure lime, and the disengagement of carbonic acid.

MARMORATA AURIUM, Cerumen.

MARMOROS, Marmor.

MARMORYGE, see Metamorphopsia—m. Hip-pocratis, Hemiopia.

MAROUTE, Anthemis cotula.

MARRIAGEABLE, Nubile.

MAR'RIOTT, DRY VOMIT OF. This once celebrated emetic, called dry, from its being exhibited without drink, consisted of equal portions of tartarized antimony, and sulphate of copper.

MARRONIER D'INDE, Æsculus Hippocastanum.

MARROW, My'elos, Medul'la, M. ossium, Medullary Juice, Azun'gia de Mum'ia, Mamma de Medullis, Sax. me'rg, (F.) Moëlle, Suc médullaire. The oily, inflammable, whitish or yellowish juice, which fills the medullary canal of the long bones, the cancellated structure at the extremities of those bones, the diploë of flat bones, and the interior of short bones. The marrow is furnished by the exhalation of the medullary membrane. It is fluid during life, and appears under the form of small points or brilliant grains after death. It is enveloped in the medullary membrane.

MARROW, SPINAL, Medulla spinalis—m. Vertebral, Medulla spinalis.

MARRUBE BLANC, Marrubium—m. Noir, Ballota foetida.

MARRUBIUM, M. vulga'rè seu album seu Germanicum seu apulum, Pra'sium, Phrasum, Horehound, (F.) Marrube blanc. Ord. Labiate. The leaves have a moderately strong, aromatic smell; and a very bitter, penetrating, diffusive, and durable taste. It has often been given in coughs and asthmas, united with sugar. Dose, ℥ss to ℥j, in infusion; dose of extract, gr. x to ℥ss.

FORD'S BALSAM OF HOREHOUND, is made as follows:—horehound, liquorice root, añ lbij and ℥vij; water, q. s. to strain ßvj. Infuse. To the strained liquor add:—proof spirit or brandy, ß12; camphor, ℥j and ℥ij; opium and benjamin, añ ℥j; dried squills, ℥ij; oil of aniseed, ℥j; honey, lbij and ℥vij.—Gray. It is pectoral.

MARRUBIUM, Leonurus cardiaca—m. Album, Marrubium—m. Apulum, Marrubium—m. Germanicum, Marrubium—m. Nigrum, Ballota foetida—m. Vulgare, Marrubium.

MARS, Ferrum—m. Solubilis, Ferrum tartarizatum.

MARSEILLES, (CLIMATE OF.) The remarks made upon the climate of Montpellier apply even in greater force to that of Marseilles. It possesses all the objectionable qualities of the climate of southeastern France.

MARSH, Linnè, Helos, Palus, Sax. me'rg, (F.) Marais. Marshy districts give off emanations, which are the fruitful source of disease and the cause of great insalubrity in many countries. The chief disease, occasioned by the malaria or miasm, is intermittent fever. Hence it becomes important to drain such regions, if practicable. Some marshy countries are not so liable to phthisis pulmonalis, and it has been found, that where intermittents have been got rid of by draining, consumption has, at times, become frequent. The most unhealthy periods for residence in a marshy district are during the existence of the summer and autumnal heats; at which times the water becomes evaporated, and the marshy bottom is more or less exposed to the sun's rays. This postulatium seems necessary for the production of the miasmata: for whilst the marsh is well covered with water, no miasm is given off.

MARSH POISON, Miasm (marsh)—m. Mallow, Althæa—m. Root, Statica Caroliniana—m. Tea, Ledum palustre.

MARSHALL'S CERATE, see Cerate, Marshall's.

MARSHY, Elodes.

MARSIPIUM, Marsupion.

MARSUM, Mar'sium, Mar'sieum. An ancient wine of Marsia, in Italy, which was used as an astringent in certain diseases of the mouth.

MARSUPIAL, see Marsupion.

MARSUPIALIS, Ischio-trochanterianus, Ob-turator internus.

MARSUPIATE, see Marsupion.

MARSPION, Marsupcion, Marsypion, Marsip'pon, Marsup'ium, Marsip'um, Sac'culus, (Marsup'ion, 'a small sack, a purse.') A sack or bag, with which any part is fomented. Also, the abdominal pouch in the kangaroo, opossum, &c., into which the young, born at a very early stage of development, are received and nourished with milk secreted from glands which open into the pouches. Such animals are termed Marsup'ial, Marsup'iate, Marsup'ialia. See Generation.

MARSUPIUM, Scrotum—m. Musculorum, Dartos.

MARSPION, Marsup'ion.

MARTEAU, Malleus.
MARTIAL, Chalybeate.
MARTIALIS, Chalybeate.
MARTIANA POMA, see Citrus aurantium.
MARTIA'TUM UNGUEN'TUM, (F.) Onguent de Soldat, Soldier's ointment. This was composed of bay berries, rue, marjoram, mint, sage, wormwood, basil, olive oil, yellow wax, and Malaga wine. It was invented by Martian; and was employed by soldiers as a preservative against injuries from cold.
MARTIS LIMATURA, Ferri limatura.
MARUM CORTUSI, Teucrium marum—m.
 Creticum, Teucrium marum—m. Syriacum, Teu-crium marum—m. Verum, Teucrium marum—
 m. Vulgare, Thymus mastichina.
MARUTA COTULA, Anthemis cotula.
MAS, Male, Modiolus.
MASCARPIO, Masturbator.
MASCHALADENITIS, from μασχαλη, 'the axilla,' and adenitis, 'inflammation of a gland.'
 Inflammation of the glands of the axilla.
MASCHALE, Axilla.
MASCHALÆUS, Axillary.
MASCHALIATRI'A, from μασχαλη, 'the axilla,' and ιατρεία, 'healing.' Treatment of disease by applications made to the axilla.
MASCHALIS, Axilla.
MASCHALISTER, Axis.
MASCHALON'CUS, Maschalopa'nus, from μασχαλη, 'the axilla,' and ογκος, 'a tumour.' A tumour or bubo or swelling in the axilla.
MASCHALOPANUS, Maschalonicus.
MASCULA, Tribade.
MASCULUS, Male.
MASESIS, Mastication.
MASHUA, (S.) A tuberous root, of a flat, pyramidal shape, which is cultivated and cooked like the potato by the Serranos of Peru. It is watery and insipid, but nevertheless is much eaten by them. The Indians use the mashua as a medicine in dropsy, dyspepsia, and dysentery.
 The plant is unknown to botanists.—Tschudi.
MASK, Larva, (F.) Masque, Larve. A bandage applied over the face, as a sort of mask, in cases of burns, scalds, or erysipelas. It serves to preserve the parts from the contact of air, and to retain topical applications in situ. It is made of a piece of linen, of the size of the face, in which apertures are made corresponding to the eyes, nose, and mouth, and which is fixed by means of strings stitched to the four angles.
MASKED, Larvatus, (F.) Larvé. Disguised, —as a "masked fever," or one which is not clearly developed. See Fever, masked.
MASLACH, Moslich, Amphion, An'fion. A medicine much used by the Turks, and into the composition of which opium enters. It is ex-citant.
MASQUE, Mask.
MASS, μαζα, Maza, Massa, from μασσω, 'I mix.' The compound, from which pills have to be formed.
MASSA, Mass—m. Carnea Jacobi Sylvii, see
 Flexor longus digitorum pedis profundus perforans—m. de Dactylis, Paste. date—m. de Ex-tracto glycyrrhizæ, Pasta glycyrrhizæ, &c.—m.
 de Gummi Arabico, Paste, marshmallow—m. de Zizyphorum fructu, Paste of jujubes.
MASSAGE, Shampooing.
MASSE D'EAU, Typha latifolia.
MASSEMA, Mastication.
MASSEMENT, Shampooing.
MASSEPAINS, Biscuits, medicinal.
MASSES APOPHYSAIRES, see Vertebrae.
MASESIS, Mastication.
MASSE'TER, from μασσωμαι, 'I eat,' 'I chew.'
Musculus mandibularis, (F.) Zygomato-maxillaire. A muscle situate at the posterior part of the cheek, and lying upon the ramus of the lower jaw-bone. It is long, quadrilateral, and is attached, above, to the inferior edge and to the inner surface of the zygomatic arch; below, it terminates at the angle of the jaw, and at the outer surface and inferior margin of the ramus of that bone. It is composed of an intermixture of fleshy and aponeurotic fibres. Its office is to raise the lower jaw, and to act in mastication.

MASSETER INTERNUS, Pterygoideus internus.
MASSETER'ICUS, Mas'setericus, Masse'tericus, Masseteri'nus. (F.) Massétérin, Massétérique. Relating or belonging to the masseter muscle.

MASSETERINE, Masseteric.

MASSETERINE ARTERY arises from the trunk of the internal maxillary or temporalis profunda posterior, and is distributed to the masseter muscle, after having passed, horizontally, through the sigmoid notch of the lower jaw-bone.

MASSETERINE NERVE is given off from the inferior maxillary branch of the fifth pair. It passes through the sigmoid notch, and is distributed on the inner surface of the masseter. In luxation of the lower jaw, this nerve is strongly stretched, and considerable pain, consequently, produced.

MASSETERINE VEIN has the same distribution as the artery. It opens into the internal maxillary vein.

MASSETERINUS, Masseteric.

MASSETTE, Typha latifolia.

MASSICOT, Plumbi oxydum semivitreum.

MASSING, Shampooing.

MASSULA, Molecule.

MASTADENITIS, Mastitis.

MASTALGIA, Mastodynia.

MASTAX, Mystax.

MASTEMA, Masticatory.

MASTER OF THE WOODS, Galium circæ-zans.

MASTERWORT, Angelica atropurpurea, Heracleum lanatum, Imperatoria.

MASTESIS, Mastication.

MASTHELICOSIS, Mastodynia apostematosa.

MASTHOS, Mamma.

MASTICA'TION, Mastica'tio, Mase'sis, Masse'sis Masse'ma, Mast'e'sis, Manduca'tio, Commanduca'tio, Manduca'tion, Chewing, Chawing, from μαστιχωω, 'I gnash the teeth.' The action of bruising food in the mouth, to prepare it for the digestion it has to undergo in the stomach.
 This is executed by the joint action of the tongue, cheeks, and lips, which push the alimentary substance between the teeth; and by the motions of the lower jaw it is cut, torn, or bruised.

MAS'TICATORY, Masticato'rium, Mast'e'ma,
Dianaste'ma. (F.) Masticatoire. Same etymon.
 Chewing. Relating or appertaining to mastication or chewing. Also, a substance, chewed with the intention of exciting the secretion of saliva.

MASTICATORY NERVE, see Trigemini.

MASTICH, see Pistacia lentiscus—m. Herb, common, Thymus mastichina—m. Herb, Syrian,
 Teucrium marum—m. Tree, Pistacia lentiscus.

MASTICHELEON, see Pistacia lentiscus.

MASTICHINA GALLORUM, Thymus mastichina.

MASTIGODES HOMINIS, Trichocephalus.

MASTIGO'SIS, Flagella'tio. Flagellation, scourging; employed by the ancients as a remedy in many diseases.

MASTITIS, Mastoï'tis, Mastoï'di'tis, Mammi'- tis, Mazoï'tis, Inflamma'tio Mammae, Mastadeni'- tis, (F.) Inflammatio des Mamelles, Mammité, from μαστος, 'the breast,' and itis, denoting inflammation. Inflammation of the breast. Inflammation of the mammary gland of the pregnant or parturient female is vulgarly called a weid or weed, and a weed in the breast.

MASTITIS APOSTEMATOSA, Mastodynia apostematosa.

MASTITIS PUERPERA'LIS. Inflammation of the mamma in the childbed woman.

MASTIX, see Pistacia lentiscus.

MASTO-CARCINOMA, from μαστος, 'the breast,' and carcinoma. Carcinoma or cancer of the breast.

MASTO-CHONDROSIS, from μαστος, 'the breast,' and χονδρος, 'a cartilage.' A cartilaginous formation in the breast.

MASTODES, Mastoid.

MASTODYN'IA, Mastalgia, Mazodynia, from μαστος, 'the breast,' and οδυνη, 'pain.' Pain in the breasts; a form of neuralgia. See Neuralgia mammae.

MASTODYN'IA APOSTEMATOSA, Phlegmonē Mammæ, Mastheleosis, Mastitis apostematosa, Galactopostema, Galactomastoparctoma, Abcessus Mammæ seu lacteus, Phlegmonē Mastodynia, Abscess of the Breast, Mammary Abscess, Milk-abscess. Phlegmonous inflammation of the breasts, running on to suppuration, generally in the childbed female. It is one of the best examples of acute phlegmonous inflammation, and requires the active use of appropriate treatment.

MASTODYNIA POLYGALA, Sparganosis—m. Polygala, Mastospargosis.

MASTOID, Mastoides, Mastoïdes, Mastoides, Mammilla'ris, Papilli seu mamilli-formis, Mammiformis, Mam'miform, (F.) Mastoidien, from μαστος, 'a breast,' and ειδος, 'form, resemblance.' Having the form of a nipple. Also, that which relates to the mastoid process, Mastoides.

MASTOID APERTURE:—the opening of communication between the cavity of the tympanum and the mastoid cells.

MASTOID CANCER. A kind of firm carcinomatous growth, the section of which is thought to resemble the boiled udder of the cow.

MASTOID CELLS, Cellulæ Mastoïdæ, Antrum mastoïdeum, Mastoid Sinuses. These are situated in the mastoid process; communicate with each other, and open into the cavity of the tympanum. Their use seems to be to increase the intensity of sound.

MASTOID FORAMEN is situate behind the mastoid process, and gives passage to a small artery of the dura mater, as well as to a vein which opens into the lateral sinus.

MASTOID FOSSA, (F.) Gouttière mastoïdienne, is a depression at the inner surface of the mastoid portion of the temporal bone, which forms part of the lateral sinus.

MASTOID or DIGAS'TRIC GROOVE, (F.) Rainure mastoïdienne ou digastrique, is a groove, situate at the inner side of the mastoid process, which affords attachment to the posterior belly of the digastric muscle.

MASTOID MUSCLE, POSTERIOR, Splenius.

MASTOID or MAM'IFORM or MAM'ILLARY PROCESS, Processus mastoïdeus, Apophysis mamilla'ris, Pars mastoïdea, is situate at the inferior and posterior part of the temporal bone, and gives attachment to the digastric and mastoid muscles.

MASTOIDEUS, Sterno-cleido-mastoïdeus—m. Lateralis, Complexus minor.

MASTOÏDITIS, Mastitis.

MASTOÏDO-CONCHINIEN, Retrahens auris—m. Génien, Digastricus—m. Hyogénien, Digastricus—m. Orculaire, Retrahens auris.

MASTOME'NIA, from μαστος, 'the breast,' and μην, 'a month.' Vicarious menstruation from the mamma.

MASTON'CUS, Thelon'cus, from μαστος, 'the breast,' and ογκος, 'a tumour.' A tumefaction of the nipple, or of the breast itself. When the tumour is of an adipous character it is termed Mastopion'cus or Mastopimelon'cus.

MASTONCUS POLYGALACTICUS, Mastospargosis.

MASTOPAREC'TAMA, from μαστος, 'the breast,' and παρεκταμα, 'excessive distension.' Immoderate distension of the mammae.

MASTOPATH'IA, from μαστος, 'the breast,' and παθος, 'disease.' An affection of the breast.

MASTOPIMELONCUS, see Mastoncus.

MASTOPION'CUS, see Mastoncus.

MASTORRHAG'IA, from μαστος, 'the breast,' and ρηνυμη, 'to flow.' An unusual flow of milk.

MASTOS, Mamma.

MASTOSCIR'RHUS, from μαστος, 'the breast,' and σκιρπος, 'a hard tumour.' Scirrhus, or hard cancer of the breast.

MASTOSPARGO'SIS, Mastodynia polygala, Maston'cus polygalacticus, from μαστος, 'the breast,' and σπαργω, 'I am full to bursting.' Fulness of the breasts with milk, so that they are ready to burst.

MASTOSYRINX, Fistula mammae, from μαστος, 'the breast,' and συριξ, 'a pipe.' Fistula of the mamma.

MASTURBA'TION, Cine'dia, Gar'galē, Gar'galus, Gargalis'mus, Mastupra'tio, Manustupra'tio, Manstupra'tio, from manus, 'the hand,' and stupro, 'I ravish;' Ona'ria, On'anism, Ædœogargaris'mus, Ædœogar'galus, Anaplas'mus, Gan'dia foeda, Duct'io præputii, Vol'untary Pollu'tion, Self Pollution, Self-abuse, (F.) Abus de soi-même, Attouchement. Excitement of the genital organs by the hand.

MASTURBA'TOR, Mastupra'tor, Manustupra'tor, Mascar'pio: same etymon. One given to masturbation.

MASTUS, Mamma.

MAT, (F.) Dull.

MATSON. A dull or flat sound. The obscure note, (F.) Matité, afforded in certain diseases when any part, as the chest, is percussed. It has been compared to that produced when the thigh is struck.' It is opposed to the Son clair, or 'clear sound.'

MATE, see Ilex Paraguisensis.

MATECÔ, Matico.

MATELLA, Urinal.

MATER, Uterus—m. Dura, Dura mater—m. Herbarum, Artemisia vulgaris—m. Metallorum, Hydrargyrum—m. Mollis, Pia mater—m. Perlarum, see Pearl—m. Pia, Pia mater—m. Secalis, Ergot—m. Tenuis, Pia mater.

MATERIA, Matter—m. Fibrosa, Fibrin.

MATERIA MED'ICA, Pharmacolog'ia, Pharmacology, Acol'ogy or Aceolog'ia, Hylē Iat'ricē, Iamatolog'ia, Iamatology, (F.) Matière Médicale. The division of medical science which treats of the knowledge of medicines; their action on the animal economy, and mode of administration. The study of the Materia Medica is one of great importance;—it is a study of the tools with which the practitioner has to work in the cure of disease. Much labour has been spent in contriving classifications of the Materia Medica. Some have arranged the articles according to their natural resemblances: others according to their real or presumed virtues: others, according to their active constituent principles. The Pharmacopœias place them alphabetically. Perhaps the best classification would be one founded on the agency exerted by the articles on the different tissues; but this arrangement, in the present state of science, is by no means easy; and, moreover, ideas in regard to the action of medicines are so associated with certain terms,—as narcotics, tonics, sedatives, &c., employed to denote certain operations, which they are esteemed capable of producing, that, to abandon them, would be to throw obstacles in the way of the student, without the ultimate advantage accruing to him of possessing a better knowledge of the modus operandi of medicines than when a classification, somewhat resembling those usually embraced, is adopted.

The following is the classification adopted by the Author, in his "General Therapeutics and Materia Medica, 6th edit., Philad., 1857:—

- | | |
|---|--|
| 1. Agents that affect prominently the alimentary canal or its contents, | { Emetics,
Cathartics,
Anthelmintics. |
| 2. Agents that affect prominently the respiratory organs, | |
| 3. Agents that affect prominently the follicular or glandular organs, | { Errhines, Sialogogues,
Diuretics,
Antilithics,
Diaphoretics.
Narcotics,
Tetanics,
Antispasmodics. |
| 4. Agents that affect prominently the nervous system, | |
| 5. Agents that affect prominently the organs of reproduction, | |
| 6. Agents that affect various organs, | |
| 7. Agents whose action is prominently chemical, | { Antacids,
Antalkalies,
Disinfectants. |
| 8. Agents whose action is prominently mechanical, | |

Of old, the Materia Medica consisted of more articles than at present. The tendency, indeed, is, and must be, to diminish it still further; to get rid of those articles which possess no advantages over others equally common, or whose properties are doubtful. In a dictionary, it becomes necessary to insert all that have been reputed to possess virtues; but the majority are unnecessary. The catalogue might be largely reduced with impunity.

MATERIA MEDICA, DYNAMICAL, Pharmacodynamies.

MATERIA MORBOSA, M. Peccans, Materies Morbi, Morbid matter. The matter or material which is the cause of disease.

MATERIA OSSEA, Terra Ossea—m. Peccans, M. Morbosa—m. Sialina, see Saliva—m. Scytophica, Tannin—m. Testacea dentium, see Tooth—m. Urinosa, Urea.

MATERIALISTA, Druggist.

MATÉRIAUX IMMÉDIATS, Principles, immediate.

MATERIES, Matter—m. Morbi, Materia morbosa.

MATHEW'S PILLS, Pilulæ ex helleboro et myrrha.

MATHIEU'S VERMIFUGE, see Vermifuge.

MATIAS. The bark of a South American tree not yet determined. It is used in its native country in intermittents, and as a tonic generally. Its principal characteristic constituent is a bitter resinous matter. It is probably the same as the Malambo bark.

MATY'CO, (pronounced matee'co), Matec6, Matica, Yerba del Soldado, Soldier's weed or herb. A South American herb—Piper angustifolium seu longatum, Stephens'ia elongata, Artanthe elongata, Ord. Piperacæe—which is possessed of astringent virtues, and is used both internally and externally. It is given in infusion made of one ounce of the leaves to a pint of boiling water, of which the dose is \bar{f} \bar{z} \bar{i} \bar{s} \bar{s} , or in tincture, made of \bar{z} \bar{i} \bar{s} \bar{s} of the leaves to a pint of dilute alcohol.

MATÏÈRE, Matter—m. Caseuse, Casein—m. Cérébriforme, Encephaloid—m. Extractive du Bouillon, Osmazome—m. Fibreuse du Sang, Fibrin—m. Médicale, Materia Medica—m. de la Mélanose, see Choroidea tunica—m. Noire des Pouxons, Anthracosis—m. Perlée de Kerkring, Antimonium diaphoreticum—m. Pulmonaire noire, see Pulmo.

MATITÉ, see Mat son.

MATLOCK, MINERAL WATERS OF. Matlock is a village in Derbyshire, England, at which there is a mineral spring of the acidulous class. Temperature 66°. It differs but little, except in temperature, from good spring-water. It is generally used as a tepid bath.

MATONIA CARDAMOMUM, Amomum cardamomum.

MATORIUM, Ammeniac, gum.

MATRACIUM, Matrass, Urinal.

MATRASS, Matra'cium. A glass vessel with a long neck; and a round, and sometimes oval, body. It may be furnished with tubulures, or not. It is used in Pharmacy for distillation, digestion, &c.

MATRES CEREBRI, Meninges.

MATRICAIRE, Matricaria.

MATRICALIS, Matric'arius, from matrix, matricis, 'the uterus.' Relating to the uterus.

Matricalia are remedies for diseases of the uterus.

MATRICARIA, from matrix, matricis, 'the womb;' so called from its reputed virtues in affections of that organ. M. Parthenium, Parthenium febrifugum, Py'rethrum seu Chrysanthemum parthenium, Arythrocha'ta, Chrysoc'alis, Fever-feu, Feather-feu, Mother-wort, Couthwort, (Sc.) Fever-fouillie, (F.) Matricaire. Nat. Ord. Compositæ. The flowers resemble, in their properties, chamomile and tansy; and, like them, have been esteemed tonic, stomachic, resolvent, emmenagogue, vermifuge, &c. They are not much used.

MATRICARIA, see Matricaria chamomilla.

MATRICARIA CHAMOMILLA, M. Suav'colens, Anthemis vulg'aris, Chamæ'melum Vulg'arè, Chamomilla nostras, Leucanthemum of Dioscorides, Wild Corn, Dog's Cham'omile, German Chamomile, (F.) Camomille vulgaire. The flowers, Matricaria (Ph. U. S.), resemble Matricaria in properties.

MATRICARIA GLABRATA. A South African plant, known at the Cape as Wild Chamomile. has the same properties as the other species of matricaria.

MATRICARIA LEUCANTHEMUM, Chrysanthemum Leucanthemum—m. Suaveolens, M. Chamomilla.

MATRICE, Uterus—m. Col de la, Collum uteri—m. de l'Ongle, see Nail.

MATRICULATE, from matricula, diminutive of matrix, matricis, 'a roll,' originally 'an army roll or register.' One who is admitted into a university or college, by enrolling or having his name enrolled on the register of the institution. In France, prendre inscription means 'to matriculate;' and, in the university regulations of that country, it is required, that the inscription shall be made every three months, until the termination of the prescribed period of study; the student having to take his inscription within the first fortnight of each trimestre or of every three months, and to present himself within the last fortnight of the trimestre to establish the fact of his attendance.

In this country, it is only necessary to matriculate at the commencement of each session.

One who has thus enrolled himself in an institution is called a Matriculate.

MATRISYLVA, Asperula odorata.

MATRIX, Cytoblastema, Uterus—m. Unguis, see Nail.

MATRONA, Midwife.

MATRONALIS, Viola.

MATTEE, see Ilex Paraguensis.

MATTEE, Mat'ria, Hylé, Mat'ries, (F.) Mat'rière. Any substance which enters into the composition of a body. In Medicine, it is sometimes applied to the substance of evacuations; and is also used synonymously with pus.

MATTING OF PARTS, Hapantismus.

MATULA, Urinal.

MATURA'TION, Matura'tio, from maturare, maturatum, 'to ripen.' Pepas'mos, Pepan'sis. Progression of an abscess towards maturity. The state of maturity. Coction.

MATURATIF, Maturative.

MAT'URATIVE, Matu'rans, Pepanticos, (F.) Maturatif. Same etymon. A medicine which favours the maturation of an inflammatory tumour.

MATURATUS, Concocted.

MATU'RITY, Matu'ritas, Horæ'otes. Same etymon. The state of fruits and seeds, when comparatively developed. State of an abscess, in which the pus is completely formed.

MATURITY, PRECOCTIO S, Precocity.

MAUDLIN, Achillea ageratum—m. Tansey, Achillea ageratum—m. Wort, Chrysanthemum leucanthemum.

MAULES, Rubeola.

MAUVE SAUVAGE, Malva.

MAUX DE NERFS, Hysteria.

MAW, Stomach—m. Bound, Constipated—m. Worm, Ascaris.

MAXILLA, Maxillary Bone.

MAX'ILLARY, Maxilla'ris, (F.) Maxillaire, from maxilla, 'a jaw.' Relating or belonging to the jaws; from μασσα, 'I chew.'

MAXILLARY ARTERIES are three in number.

1. External maxillary. See Facial. 2. Internal maxillary—A. Gutturæ-maxillaire (Ch.). This arises from the external carotid with the temporal. It is remarkable for its complex course, and for the number of branches which it transmits to the deep-seated parts of the face. Immediately after its origin, it buries itself under the neck of the lower jaw, curving inwards and downwards. It then advances directly inwards; proceeding in the space between the two pterygoid muscles towards the maxillary tuberosity. It turns again, becomes vertical, and ascends into the bottom of the zygomatic fossa, until, having arrived at the floor of the orbit, it takes a horizontal and transverse direction; enters the sphenomaxillary fossa, and divides into several branches. See Artery, (table.)

MAXILLARY BONE, Maxil'la, Mandib'ula, Gam'phelè, Gnathus, Mola, Siagon, Jawbone, (Prov.) Chaffbone, Chall, Chaule, Chavel, Chawbone, Gill, (F.) Mâchoire. A name given to two bones, which support the teeth, and, by means of them, are inservient to the cutting, bruising, and tearing of alimentary substances.

MAXILLARY BONE, INFERIOR, Lower jaw-bone, Os Maxilla'rè inferius, Maxil'la inferior, Hyposi'agon, (F.) Os maxillaire (Ch.), Mâchoire dia-cranienne, (F.) a symmetrical, nearly parabolic bone, the middle portion of which is horizontal, and called the body; and the posterior is vertical, the angular portions being termed Rami or branches. These have behind a parotidian edge, which forms—by uniting with the base—the angle of the jaw. The branches terminate above by two processes, separated by the sigmoid notch or fossa; the anterior of which is called the coronoid; the posterior, the condyloid process or maxillary condyle, supported by a Cervix, Collum, or Neck. The chief parts observed on the lower jaw are—1. Externally,—the Symphysis menti, Apoph'ysis menti, Mental foramen, and the external oblique line. 2. Internally,—the Genian apoph'ysis, the internal or Myloid oblique lines, and the entrance of the dental canal. The lower jaw has, also, an alveolar edge, which contains alveoli for the reception of the teeth. The lower jaw-bone is developed by two points of ossification, which unite at the symphysis of the chin. It is articulated with the temporal bone and with the teeth.

MAXILLARY BONE, SUPERIOR, Upper jaw-bone, Maxil'la superior seu syncra'nia, Os maxilla'rè superius, (F.) Os sus-maxillaire (Ch.), Muchoire syncranienne. The upper jaw-bones are to the face what the sphenoid bone is to the cranium. They are articulated with all the portions composing it. They determine, almost alone, the shape of the face, and give it solidity. Their size is considerable; form unequal. They occupy the middle and anterior part of the face; and enter into the composition of the nasal fossæ, orbit, and mouth. The chief parts observable in the upper jaw are—1. Externally,—the Nasal process, Processus nasa'lis seu fronta'lis seu ascendens, (F.) Apophyse montante, the superior or orbital surface, Superficie's orbita'lis, Planum orbita'le, which forms almost the entire floor of the orbit, the Fora'men infra-orbita'rium, Zygoma'tic process, Canine or Myr'tiform fossa. 2. Internally,—the Palatine process, Anterior palatine canal, and the Antrum of Highmore. Its circumference is very unequal, and it has behind a round, unequal prominence, called the Maxillary tuberosity, which is pierced by the posterior dental canal. Anteriorly, there is a notch, which forms part of the anterior aperture of the nasal fossæ, and beneath, an eminence, called the anterior nasal spine. The lower part of this circumference forms the alveolar margin. Each superior maxillary bone is articulated with the ethmoid, frontal, nasal, lachrymal, palatine, inferior spongy, vomer, its fellow, the teeth of the upper jaw, and sometimes the sphenoid bone. It is developed by four or five points of ossification.

MAXILLARY NERVES are two in number, and formed of the second and third branches of the fifth pair. The SUPERIOR MAXILLARY NERVE, Nerv sus-maxillaire (Ch.), arises from the middle of the gangliform enlargement of the fifth pair; passes forwards, and issues from the cranium through the foramen rotundum of the sphenoid bone; enters the sphenomaxillary fossa, which it crosses horizontally; passes into the infra-orbital canal, which it traverses; and makes its exit to vanish on the cheek. It gives off the following branches,—the orbital, a branch which goes to the spheno-palatine ganglion; posterior dental branches; the anterior dental,—and terminates in the infra-orbital nerves, which are divided into superior, inferior, and internal. The inferior maxillary nerve, Nerv maxillaire (Ch.), is the largest of the three branches furnished by the fifth pair. It issues from the cranium by the foramen ovale of the sphenoid. Having reached the zygomatic fossa, it divides into two trunks; the one superior and external, which gives off the temporales profundi, masseterine, buccal, and ptyergoids;—the other—inferior and internal—the larger of the two, which furnishes the inferior dental, lingual, and auricular.

MAXILLARY VEINS present the same arrangement as the arteries they accompany.

MAZA, Mass, Placenta.

MAZALYSIS, Mazolysis.

MA'ZICUS, from maza, 'placenta.' Relating to the placenta.

MAZISCH'ESIS, from maza, 'the placenta,' and σχέσις, 'holding,' 'retention.' Retention of the placenta.

MAZODYNIA, Mastodynia.

MAZOITIS, Mastitis.

MAZOL'YSIS, Mazal'ysis, from maza, 'placenta,' and λυσις, 'solution.' Separation of the placenta.

MAZOPATHI'A, from maza, 'placenta,' and παθος, 'disease.' A disease of the placenta. One originating from the placenta.

MAZOS, Mamma.

MECHAMECK, Convolvulus panduratus—m. Bindweed, Convolvulus panduratus.

MECHANE, Machine.

MECHANEMA, Machine.

MECHANICAL, Mechan'icus, from μηχανη, 'a machine.' An epithet given to irritating bodies, which do not act chymically—as a mechanical irritant.

MECHANICAL or IATRO-MATHEMATICAL PHYSICIANS, Iūtro-mechan'ici seu Iūtromathemat'ici, are such as refer every function, healthy or morbid, to mechanical or mathematical principles;—Medic'na mechan'ica.

MECHANICS, ANIMAL. That part of physiology whose objects are to investigate the laws of equilibrium and motion of the animal body.

MECH'ANISM, Mechanism'us. The structure of a body; the collection or aggregate of the parts of a machine; the mode in which forces produce any effect, &c.

MÊCHE, Tent. This term is usually applied in French surgery to a collection of threads of charpie, cotton or raw silk, united together, which are used for detaching sinuous or fistulous ulcers; or to keep open or enlarge natural or artificial apertures. They are generally applied by means of an instrument called Porte-mèche.

MECHOACANA NIGRA, Convolvulus jalapa—m. Nigricans, Convolvulus jalapa.

MECHOACANÆ RADIX, Convolvulus mechoacan.

MÊCHOACAN DU CANADA, Phytolacca decandra.

MECOM'ETER, (F.) Mécomètre; from μηκος, 'length,' and μετρον, 'measure.' A kind of graduated compass,—compas de proportion,—used at the Hospice de Maternité of Paris, to measure the length of new-horn infants.

MECON, Meconium, Opium, Papaver.

MECONICUM, Opiate.

MECONIS'MUS, Intoxicatio opia'ca; from μηκων, 'the poppy.' Poisoning by opium.

MECONIUM, same etymon. Poppy juice, Papaver'culum, Purgament'a Infantis, Mecon. The excrement passed by the infant a short time after birth, which had accumulated in the intestines during pregnancy. It is of a greenish or deep black colour, and very viscid. It seems formed of the mucous secretions of the intestines mixed with bile.

MECONOLOG'IA, Opiolog'ia; from μηκων, 'a poppy,' and λογος, 'a description.' A treatise on opium.

MECONOPSIS DIPHYLLA, Stylophorum diphyllum.

MEDICINARE, Doctor.

MEDEA, Genital organs.

MEDELA, Curation.

MEDE'NI. A term used by Paracelsus for cutaneous ulcerations like those of boils.

MEDEOLA VERTICILLIFOLIA, M. Virginica.

MEDE'OLA VIRGIN'ICA, M. verticillifolia, Gyro'mia Virgin'ica, Indian cucumber. Order, Smilacæ. An indigenous herb, growing in every part of the United States, the root of which resembles a small cucumber. It has been thought to be diuretic.

MEDIAN, Media'nus; from medium, 'the middle.' That which is situate in the middle.

MEDIAN LINE. A vertical line, supposed to divide a body longitudinally into two equal parts; the one right, the other left. Chaussier calls the linea alba the ligne médiane of the abdomen.

MEDIAN NERVE, Median digital, (Ch.) This nerve arises chiefly from the anterior branches of Four-ounce Glass Measure.

the last two cervical nerves and first dorsal. The fifth and sixth cervical pairs also send it a branch, which separates from the musculo-cutaneous nerve. The median nerve descends the inner part of the arm along the biceps muscle. Opposite the elbow joint it buries itself behind the aponeurosis of that muscle, and engages itself between the two fasciculi of the pronator teres. Lower down, it is situate between the flexors—sublimis and profundus—and passes, with their tendons, under the anterior annular ligament; it then divides into five branches, which are distributed to the muscles of the thenar eminence, to the lumbricales, the integuments of the thumb, the index, middle finger, and outer part of the ring finger. This nerve gives no branches to the arm. In the forearm, it furnishes filaments to all the pronator and flexor muscles; and one of them accompanies the anterior interosseous artery. It also gives off a filament to the integuments of the palm of the hand.

MEDIAN VEINS. Three of the superficial veins of the forearm are so called. The median basilic—the median cephalic and common median or junior brachii. See Basilic and Cephalic.

MEDIANUM, Mediastinum, Mesentery.

MEDIAS'TINAL, Mediastinalis, (F.) Médiastin. Relating to the Mediastinum.

MEDIASTAL ARTERIES are very delicate arterial branches, distributed in the areolar texture of the mediastinum. They are distinguished, according to their situation, into anterior and posterior.

MEDIASTINITIS, Mesodmitis.

MEDIASTINUM, Mediastinus, quasi, in medio stans, as being in the middle; Mesod'nē, Mediad'nū, Mesotachium, Mesotachum, Septum thoracis, Hymen Diaphragmaton, Membranū Diaphragmaton seu thoracem intersep'iens, Intersepimentum thoracis, Diribitorium, Dissipimentum thoracis, (F.) Médiastin. A membranous space formed by the approximation of the pleuræ, dividing the chest into two parts, the one right, the other left. The mediastinum, formed by a double reflection of the pleura, extends from the spine to the posterior surface of the sternum. Its anterior part, called Anterior mediastinum, Mediastinum pectoralē, lodges, at its upper part, the thymus gland in the fetus, and is filled below with fatty, areolar tissue. Its posterior part, parallel to the spine, is occupied by the œsophagus, vena azygos, thoracic duct, the lower part of the windpipe, the origin of the bronchia and a number of lymphatic glands. This part is called the posterior mediastinum—Mediastinum dorsalē.

By some anatomists, Mediastinum is defined to be the pleural walls of the membranous space, whilst the space itself is termed Cavum mediastini.

MEDICABILIS, Curable.

MEDICABLE, Curable.

MED'ICÆ. Sworn midwives, whose duty it was, of old, to inspect women in cases of suspected pregnancy.

MED'ICAL, Medica'lis, Iat'ricus, Pæon'ius, Pæon'icus, Physical (of old). Esculapian, (F.) Medical. Same etymon as Medicament. Appertaining or relating to medicine or to medicines.

MEDICAL JURISPRUDENCE, Medicine, legal—m. Man, Surgeon-Apothecary.

MEDICALIS, Medical.

MED'ICAMENT, Medicamentum, Remedium, Aces'sis, Aces'ma, Aces'tium, Aces'tys, Althos, Hygias'ma, Ia'na, Aeos, Medica'men, Phar'macum, Pharmaceu'ma, Alkar, Auxil'ium, Boëth'ma, Med'icine, (old E.) Medsine; Physic, Rem'edy, Rem'etic, (F.) Remède; from medicor, medicatus, 'to cure or heal.' A medicine. Any substance exhibited with the view of curing or allaying morbid action. Medicines are obtained from the three kingdoms of nature, and are divided into internal and external, according as they are administered internally or applied externally.

In common language, medicine is often called Stuff, Doctors' stuff, and, in the Southern States, Truck.

MEDICAMENTAL, Medicinal.

MEDICAMENTO'SUS LAPIS, Medic'inal stone, (F.) Pierre médicamenteuse. A name formerly given to a mixture of peroxyl of iron, litharge, alum, nitre, sal ammoniac, and vinegar; evaporated and calcined at a red heat for an hour. The product was regarded as eminently astringent.

MEDICAMENTUM, Drug—m. ex Palmulis, Diaphœnicon.

MEDICAS'TER, Medicastra. An ignorant practitioner. A charlatan.

MEDICA'TION, Medica'tio. Same etymon as Medicament. The change in the animal economy produced by the operation of remedies. Treatment by medicine. The act of impregnating with some medicine.

MÉDICATION HYPODERMIQUE, see Hypodermic.

MEDICATRINA, Iatron.

MEDICA'TRIX, same etymon. 'Having the power of healing.' A female practitioner.

MEDIC'NA, Ars med'ica seu Machō'n'ia seu Machō'n'ia, Res medica, Iat'rice, Iat'ria, Iat'ria, Iat'ri'nē, Pæos'y'nē, Pæon'icē, Iatrotech'n'icē, Aces'toria, Scien'tia med'ica seu medendi, Sot'ria doct'ria, Med'icine, (old E.) Medsine, The healing art, Leech craft, Physic, (F.) Médecine. Same etymon. A science, the object of which is the cure of disease and the preservation of health. Occasionally, it is used to comprehend all the branches of the healing art; at others to comprise one great division, in contradistinction to surgery and obstetrics. Medicine, in this sense, includes many branches;—the chief of which are, Anatomy, Physiology, Pathology, Therapeutics, Hygiene, Materia Medica, and Pharmacy.

MEDICINABLE, Medicinal.

MEDIC'INAL, Medica'lis, Medicament'al, Medic'inable, Med'ical, Iat'ricus, Rem'edial, Rem'ediate, (F.) Médica'l, Médicamenteux. Same etymon. Having a remedial power;—as medicinal plants, &c. Relating to medicine, as MED'ICINAL DAYS, Medica'les Dies. Days on which the ancients considered that remedies might be administered; and especially evacuants. Such days were not esteemed critical.

MEDICINAL HOURS. Times at which—the stomach being freed from its digestive actions—medicine, it was thought, could be most advantageously administered, as in the morning fasting, an hour before dinner, some hours after it, and at bedtime.

MEDICINE, Medicament, Medicina.

MEDICINE is, also, used in the same sense as Medicament, and for a purging potion.

To MEDICINE was formerly used for "to restore or cure by medicine."

MEDUL'LA OBLONGA'TA, Oblong medull'a, Cerebral protuberance, Nervous system of the senses, (Gall), Cerebrum elongatum, (F.) Mésocephale, Moëlle allongée, Mésencéphale, (Ch.) The medullary substance that lies within the cranium upon the basillary process of the occipital bone. The anterior surface which rests in the basillary groove, is impressed by the basillary artery. At the upper extremity, and on its posterior surface are the Tubercula quadrigemina. At the same extremity, the medulla gives rise to two prolongations, the peduncles of the brain, separated from each other by the mammillary eminences, and becoming lost in the optic thalami. The lower extremity is called the tail or Rachid'ian bulb, Bulbus medull'æ spin'd'lis seu rachid'icus, (F.)

Bulbe rachidien, and is continuous with the medulla spinalis. It is to this part only that some anatomists apply the name Medulla oblongata. From the posterior angles two other prolongations arise, called Peduncles of the cerebellum. The medulla oblongata has several eminences — the Pons varolii, Corpora pyramidalia, C. olivaria, &c. — and it has a longitudinal fissure before, and another behind, called the anterior and posterior median fissures. The vesicular neurine in the centre of the medulla is the nervous centre of respiration and deglutition: hence it has been called centrum vita'le.

MEDULLA OSSIUM, Marrow — m. Spinæ, M. spinalis.

MEDUL'LA SPINA'LIS seu Spinæ seu dorsual'is seu vertebralis seu dorsal'is, Corda spin'd'lis, Funis argen'teus, Rhache'trum, My'elus, M. rachit'es seu notia'us seu diauche'nus seu psot'es, My'elon, Notomy'elus, Rhachit'es, Æon, Processus rachidia'nus, Sacra fist'ula, Spinal prolonga'tion, Vertebral marrow, Spinal cord or marrow, Nervous system of voluntary motion and tactile impression (Gall), (F.) Moëlle épinière, Moëlle vertébrale, called by Ch., Prolongement rachidien of the encephalon, is the continuation of the medulla oblongata. It commences at the foramen magnum of the occipital bone, and descends in the vertebral canal as low as the 2d lumbar vertebra, without filling it; presenting, in its course, several evident enlargements. It is grooved on both its anterior and posterior surfaces by a furrow, which divides it, in its whole length, into two great nervous cords, intimately united with each other. It terminates by an oval tubercle, whence a number of nerves set out called Cauda equi'na, (F.) Queue de cheval, from its resemblance to a horse's tail. The spinal marrow has no analogy, as regards its structure, with the marrow of long bones. It is formed of two substances; one white, the other gray, presenting an inverse arrangement to that which they have in the brain, the white being external, the cineritious at the centre, Substan'tia gri'sea centra'lis. It is enveloped by a yellowish, fibrous membrane, very resisting, which seems to be continued insensibly from the pia mater, and by two other membranes, which are merely prolongations of the arachnoid and dura mater. See Nerve.

MEDULLA VERTEBRALIS, M. spinalis.

MEDULLÆ, Sperm.

MED'ULLARY, Medulla'ris, (F.) Médullaire, from medulla, 'marrow.' Relating to the marrow, or analogous to marrow.

MEDULLARY ARTERIES. The arteries, which enter bones and pass to the marrow.

MEDULLARY CANAL, see Canal, medullary — m. Cells, see Medullary Membrane — m. Juice, Marrow — m. Matter of the brain, see Cerebrum.

MEDULLARY MEMBRANE, Perios'teum Inter'num, Endos'teum. A vascular, areolar web of extreme tenuity, which envelops the marrow and lines the inner surface of the medullary canal of the long bones. This membrane has been considered as a species of internal periosteum of those bones. It has numerous vessels, which bury themselves in the thickness of the marrow; and others which nourish the innermost plates of the bone. The cells formed by it are termed Cellulæ seu Sacculi medull'ares.

MEDULLARY NEURINE, see Neurine — m. Sarcoma, Encephaloid, Hæmatodes fungus.

MEDULLARY SUBSTANCE OF THE KIDNEY, see Kidney — m. s. of Schwann, see Nerve-fibre.

MEDULLARY SYSTEM. Bichat gives this name to the marrow and its membranes. He distinguishes two species of medullary systems; the one occupies the cellular tissue at the extremities of the long bones and that of the flat and short bones; the other is found merely in the central canal of long bones.

MEDULLARY TUMOUR OF THE LUNGS, Phthisis, cancerous.

MEDULLITIS, Myelitis. M. Gerdy uses Méduillite for inflammation of the marrow of bones, Osteomyelitis. — Myelitis being usually appropriated to inflammation of the spinal marrow.

MEERAN, Daucus carota.

MEGALANTHROPOGENESIS, from μεγας, μεγαλη, 'great,' ανθρωπος, 'man,' and γενεσις, 'birth.' A term used by a French physician, named Robert, to designate the art of procreating great men; men of mind; men of genius. He considered that they may be perpetuated by always taking care to have talented men united to clever women!

MEGALOCARDIA, from μεγας, μεγαλη, 'great,' and καρδια, 'heart.' The state of having a very large heart.

MEGALOCÆLIA, Intestine, great, Megaloplanchnia.

MEGALOMELIA, from μεγας, μεγαλη, 'great,' and μελος, 'a limb.' A monstrosity characterized by very large limbs.

MEGALOPHONIA, from μεγας, μεγαλη, 'great,' and φωνη, 'voice.' The condition of having a full, strong voice.

MEGALOPHTHALMUS, from μεγας, μεγαλη, 'great,' and οφθαλμος, 'eye.' A congenital deformity, in which the eye is inordinately large.

MEGALOPUS, Macro podus.

MEGALOSPLANCHNUS, from μεγας, μεγαλη, 'great,' and σπλαγχνον, 'a viscus.' Megalocælia. Hippocrates applies the epithet to those in whom a viscus, or the viscera, are tumid. Some have used the substantive Megalosplanchnia for the tumour itself.

MEGALOSPLENIA, Splenoncus.

MEGETHOS, Stature.

MEGRIM, Hemisrania.

MEIBOMIUS, GLANDS OF, Follicles of M., Palpebræ or Ciliary Follicles, Glandula sebacea ciliaris seu Meibomia. Intestivula Meibomii, Lacuna palpebrarum, (F.) Follicules palpebraux ou ciliaires, Glandes de Meibomius. Small, sebaceous follicles, called after Henry Meibomius, although known long before his description of them. They are situate in special grooves in the tarsal cartilages; and are ranged by the side of each other, in the form of yellowish, parallel, and vertical lines; sometimes straight, at others, tortuous. They may be seen at the inner surface of the eyelids, through the conjunctiva, and secrete a sebaceous humour, called Lippitudo, Gum, (F.) Chassie.

MEIOSIS, Meiosis, Miosis, Immunitio, Minutiesis, Minutiosis, from μειωω, 'I lessen.' The period of a disease, in which the symptoms begin to diminish; — the decline. Remission. Also, idiotism.

MEIUROS, Decurtatus, Myurus.

MEKILWORT, Atropa belladonna.

MEL, Meli, Niliacum, Honey, (F.) Miel. A substance of a muco-saccharine nature, prepared by the Apis mellifica, or common bee, which collects it from the nectaries of flowers. Honey is employed as aliment, condiment, and medicine. It is demulcent and aperient; and is prescribed as an adjunct to gargles in cynanche tonsillar, &c. It is, at times, used as a detergent to foul ulcers. Virgin Honey, Mel virginum seu virginicum, (F.) Miel vierge, is that which flows from the wax spontaneously.

HILL'S BALSAM OF HONEY is formed of balsam of tolu, ℥j, honey, ℥j, rectified spirit, one gallon. It was long a celebrated empirical pectoral.

HONEY WATER is a mixture of essences coloured with saffron. A little honey is added to communicate a clamminess; the effect of which is to make it retain the scent the longer. It is used as a scent.

MEL ACETATUM, Oxymel — m. Ægyptiacum, Ægyptiacum — m. Aërium, Fraxinus ornus — m. Arundinaceum, Saccharum.

MEL BORA' CIS, M. subboracis seu boraxatum, Collutorium adstringens, Linimentum de Boracæ seu ad apthas, Linctus de Boracæ seu ad apthas, Honey of Borax, Mellite de borax, Miel boratè. (Boracis contrit. ℥j, mellis despumati ℥j, Ph. L.) Detergent. Applied to the mouth in apthous affections.

MEL CANNE, Saccharum (non purificatum) — m. Coctum, Pelicide.

MEL DESPUMATUM, M. Depuratum, Clarified Honey, Anaphromeli, (F.) Miel Clarifié ou despumé ou dépuré, Mellite simple, Sirop de miel. Melt the honey in a water-bath, and remove the scum. Uses the same as honey.

MEL ROSÆ, M. rosatum, Mellitum de Rosis, Rhodomeli, Rhodostacton, Honey of Roses, (F.) Miel rosat, Mellite de Rosæ. (Rosæ gallicæ ℥ij, aquæ bullient. f ℥xij, mellis despum. f ℥xx. Macerate the roses in f ℥viij of boiling water for four hours; press out as much fluid as possible and set aside. Macerate the residue in f ℥iv of boiling water for half an hour, and again express. Reserve f ℥iv of the first infusion; mix the remainder with the infusion last obtained; add the honey, and evaporate to a pint. Lastly, add the reserved infusion, and strain. Ph. U. S.) Astringent and detergent. Used chiefly in gargles and washes for apthæ, &c.

MEL SCILLÆ, Oxymel scillæ — m. Scillæ compositum, Syrupus scillæ compositus.

MEL VINOSUM, Enomel — m. Virginum, see Mel.

MELÆNA, Melanorrhagia, Melanorrhagia, Melanodiarrhæa, Icterus niger, Melancholeus, Melanicterus, Melas Icterus, Melanismus, Morbis niger seu niger Hippocretis, Enterorrhæa, Black Jaundice, (F.) Mélène, Mélène, Mélasictère, Maladie noire, Méline, Ictère noire; from μελας, melanos, 'black.' A name given to vomiting of black matter, ordinarily succeeded by evacuations of the same character. It seems to be often a variety of hæmatemesis. The Black Vomit in yellow fever is owing to a morbid secretion from the lining membrane of the stomach and small intestines mixed with blood. Melæna also signifies hæmorrhage from the intestines; Fluvius splenicus, Dysenteria splenica, Dejectiones nigrae, Secesus niger, Hemorrhage from the Intestines.

MELÆNA FUNGOSA CARCINODES, Hæmatodes fungus.

MELÆNODIARRHÆA, Melæna.

MELÆNODIGUS, from μελας, melanos, 'black,' and αγω, 'I drive away.' A medicine believed to be capable of expelling atrabiles or 'black bile.'

MELÆNORRHAGIA, Melæna.

MÉLAINÉ, see Choroidea tunica.

MELALEUCA CAJAPUTI, M. Minor seu Leucodendron, Myrtus Leucodendron, Leptospermum Leucodendrum. Ord. Myrtaceæ. This plant affords the Cajaput Oil, (see Cajaput.) The leaves are esteemed diuretic, stomachic, and emmenagogue.

MELALEUCA LEUCODENDRON, M. Cajaputi — m. Minor. M. Cajaputi.

MELAMPHONUS, from μελας, 'obscure,' and φωνη, 'voice.' Having a hoarse or indistinct voice.

MELAMPHYLLUM, Acanthus mollis.

MELAMPODE, Helleborus niger.

MELAMPEDIUM, Helleborus niger.

MELANÆMA, Suffocation.

MELANÆMIA, Venosity.

MELANAGOGUE, Melanagogus, from μελας, μελανος, 'black,' and αγω, 'I expel.' A medicine which the ancients believed adapted for expelling black bile or melancholy.

MELANCHLO'RUS, from μελας, μελανος, 'black,' and χλωρος, 'green.' The ancients gave this name to certain dark-coloured topical remedies. See Melæna.

MELANCHOLE, Atrabilis.

MELANCHOLIA, Melancholy — m. Autochirica, Suicide — m. Errabunda, Cuttubuth, Kutubuth — m. Flatuosa, Hypochondriasis — in. Hypochondriaca, Hypochondriasis — m. Nervea, Hypochondriasis — m. Pleonectica, see Pleonectica — m. Saltans, Choreia — m. Suicidium, Suicide — m. Uterina, Nymphomania — m. Zoanthropia, Melancholy.

MEL'ANCHOLIC, Melanchol'icus, Melan'cholicus, Melanchol'ides, (Se.) Dram, Drum, (F.) Mélancolique, from μελας, μελανος, 'black,' and χολη, 'bile.' One labouring under melancholy. That which belongs or relates to melancholy. In popular language, one of a gloomy disposition.

MELANCHOLINESS, Melancholy.

MELANCHOLODES, Melancholic.

MELANCHOLUS, Melancholic.

MEL'ANCHOLY, Melanchol'ia, same etymon. Lypem'nia, Ecp'ho'nia Melanchol'ia, Mania Melanchol'ica seu Melanchol'ia, Tristema'ntia, Baryth'nia, Hypolepsioman'ia, Ano'sia adstric'ta, Fixa'tio monom'a, Mel'ancholiness, (Sc.) Dismal; (F.) Mélancolie, Lypérophrénie. Same etymon. A disease supposed, by the ancients, to be caused by black bile. A variety of mental alienation, characterized by excessive gloom, mistrust, and depression, generally, with insanity on one particular subject or train of ideas, Monom'a'nia, Monom'o'ria. Panophobia, Demonomania, Erotomania, Nostalgia, &c., may be referred to this head.

Melancholy is also used for unusual gloominess of disposition.

MELANCHOLY, EROTIC, Erotomania — m. Love, Erotomania.

MELAN'CHRUS, Melan'ochrus, from μελας, μελανος, 'black,' and χρωσ, 'a colour.' One attacked with black jaundice. Supposed, by some, to be an abbreviation of Melanchlorus.

MÉLANCOLIE, Melancholy.

MÉLANCOLIQUE, Melancholic.

MELANEPHRIDIOSIS, Sudor Anglicus niger.

MÉLANGE PECTORAL, Mistura acidi hydrocyanici.

MELAN'IC, Melan'icus, Melanot'ic, Melanot'icus, (F.) Mélané; from μελας, μελανος, 'black.' Of or belonging to Melanosis; — as Melanic deposit, a black colouring matter deposited from the blood under special circumstances; — see Melanosis.

MELANIC DEPOSIT, Melanosis.

MELANICTERUS, Melæna.

MÉLANIENNES, (Taches), Nævus.

MÉLANINE, see Choroidea tunica.

MÉLANISME, Melanismus.

MELANISMUS, Melæna. M. I. G. St. Hilaire employs the term Mélanisme, for the change of coloration of the skin in which the pigment is of a deeper hue and in greater quantity than natural.

MELANOCARCINOMA, Cancer, melanotic.

MELANOCHRUS, Melanchrus.

MELANOMA, Melanosis — m. Pulmonum, see Melanosis.

MELANOMYCES, Melanospongus.

MELANOPATHI'A, from μελας, μελανος, 'black,' and παθος, 'affection.' Nigritism, Nigrit'ies. A disease of the skin, which consists in augmentation of black pigment; generally in patches.

MELANOPHYMA, Ergot.

MELANOPIPER, Piper nigrum.

MELANOPNEUMON, see Melanosis.

MELANORRHAGIA, Melæna.

MELANORRHIZUM, Helleborus niger.

MÉLANORSE, Melanosis.

MELANO'SIS, Melan'osis, Melano'ma, Nigritu'do, (F.) Dégénérescence noire, Mélanose; from μελας, μελανος, 'black.' An organic affection, in which the tissue of the parts is converted, owing to a melan'ic deposit, into a black, hard, homogeneous substance, near which ulcers or cavities may form; — owing to the softening, either of the substance itself, or of some other morbid tissue, — of tubercles especially. This morbid change affects the lungs particularly; when it is called Melano'sis seu Melano'ma seu Anthraco'sis Pulmo'nium, Melanopneu'mon, Nigritu'do melanot'ica, Melan'osis Pulmonum, Pneumonomelano'sis, Black tubercle, (F.) Mélanose Pulmonaire. It is, also, met with in the liver and areolar texture. Its causes are very obscure. Melanosis of the lungs constitutes one of the species of phthisis of Bayle; but it is impossible to distinguish it from the other species during life.

In the classification of Fuchs, Melanosen (G.) forms a family of diseases.

The deposition of melanic matter in the tissues is not necessarily connected with malignant disease. See Cancer, melanotic.

MELANOSIS PULMONUM, see Melanosis — m. Universalis, Venosity.

MELANOSMEGMA, see Sapo.

MELANOSPON'GUS, Melanomy'ces, from μελας, μελανος, 'black,' and σπογγος, 'sponge.' The tuberiform variety of melanosis of the lungs.

MELANOTIC, Melanic — m. Cancer, Cancer, melanotic.

MEL'ANTHRIX, Atricapill'us, (F.) Mélanotrique, from μελας, 'black,' and θριξ, 'hair.' Having black hair.

MELANSIS, Melanosis — m. Pulmonum, Melanosis pulmonum.

MELANTHIUM, Nigella, M. Virginicum — m. Muscætoxicum, Amianthum muscætoxicum.

MELANTHIUM VIRGINICUM, Melanthium, Leiman'thium Virgin'icum, Quafadil; indigenous; Order, Melanthaceæ, flowering in July, is said to be a sure but severe remedy for itch.

MELAS, Lepra nigricans — m. Icterus, Melæna.

MELAS'MA, Echymo'ma Melas'ma, Nigror, from μελας, 'black.' A black spot or ecchymosis, occurring on the lower extremities of old people especially. Also a cutaneous affection analogous to chloasma, differing from it only in the dark colour of the morbid pigment. It is also called Pityriasis nigra.

MELAS'SES, Molas'ses, Melus'tum, Theriaca commun'is, Syr'upus empyreumat'icus seu niger, Sac'chari Fæx, Treacle, (Old Eng.) Triacle; from μελι, 'honey,' or from μελας, 'black.' The syrup, which remains after the juice of the sugar-cane has been subjected to all the operations for extracting sugar from it. In the United States, the syrup, made in the process of forming common sugar, is called melasses; that remaining after the refinement of sugar being termed sugar-house melasses or treacle.

MELASSES SPIRIT, Rum.

MELATROPHI'A, from μελος, 'a limb,' and ατροφια, 'wasting.' Wasting of the limbs.

MELCA, μελκα. Food made of milk, coagulated by boiling vinegar.

MELE, Specillum.

MELEA, Pyrus malus.

MELEGUETTA, Amomum grana paradisi.

MELEIOS, μηλιος, Meli'vus, Melias. A species of alum found in the island of Melos.

MÉLÉNA, Melæna.

MÉLÈNE, Melæna.

MÉLÈZE, Pinus larix.

MELI, Mel.

MELIA, Fraxinus ornus.

ME'LIA AZED'ARACH, Azedarachæ amœna, Poison Berry Tree, Azedarach, Pride of India or of China, Pride tree, Hop tree, Bead tree. Nat. Ord. Meliaceæ; Sex. Syst. Decandria Monogynia. The bark of the root—called in India Neem Bark, Azedarach, (Ph. U. S.), is usually given in decoction, in the proportion of three or four ounces of the bark of the fresh root to a quart of water, boiled down to a pint. The dose is one or two table-spoonfuls, every two or three hours, till purging is induced. It is given in this manner as an anthelmintic. It is sometimes formed into an ointment, and used in tinea capitis. The tree is a native of Syria, Persia, and the north of India, and is abundant in the southern states of the Union.

MELIA TERRA, Creta.

MELIAN'THUS MAJOR, Nat. Ord. Zygophyllæ. A south African plant, a decoction of whose leaves is a good external remedy in tinea capitis, crusta serpigiosa, necrosis and foul ulcers. It is also useful as a gargle and lotion in sore throat and diseases of the gums. The bruised leaves applied to ulcers promote granulation.

MELICERA, Porrigo favosa.

MELICERIA, Hydrarthrus, Porrigo favosa.

MELICE'RIE, Melifa'vium, from μελι, 'honey,' and κρος, 'wax.' Emphy'ma encystis melice'ris. An encysted tumour filled with a substance resembling honey. Also, Porrigo favosa.

MELIC'EROUS, Melicer'itous: same etymon. Having the characters of meliceris,—as a melicerous tumour.

MELICERUM, Porrigo favosa.

MELICHE'UM, from μελι, 'honey,' and χεω, 'I pour out.' A honey-like discharge from an ulcer.

MELICRATUM, Hydromeli.

MELIFAVIUM, Meliceris, Porrigo favosa.

MELIGE'ON, from μελι, 'honey.' A fetid humour of the consistence of honey, discharged from ulcers, accompanied with caries of a bone.

MÉLILOT, Trifolium melilotus.

MELILOTUS, Trifolium melilotus.

MELIME'LUM, from μελι, 'honey,' and μηλον, 'an apple.' A name given to two compounds:—one of honey and quince, the other of honey and apples.

MÉLINE, Melæna.

MELINI SULPHAS, Cadmii sulphas.

MELI'NUM, μηλινον. The ancient name of an ointment, and of several plasters, described by Dioscorides and Galen: so called from their resembling the μηλον or quince in colour.

MELINUM SULPHURICUM, Cadmii sulphas.

MELINUS, Meleios.

MÉLIOLE, Mellitum.

MELIPHYLLUM, Melissa.

MELIS'SA, from μελισσα, 'a bee,' because bees gather honey from it. M. officina'lis seu Romana seu hirsu'ta seu cit'rina seu citra'ta seu horten'sis, Citra'go, Citra'ria, Melite'va, Melissob'otos, Melite'na, Melissobot'anum, Melissophyll'um, Meliphyll'um, Mentha citra'ta, Melite'is, Cedronella, Apias'trum, Ero'tion. Balm. (F.) Mélisse, la Citronelle, Céline; Nat. Ord. Labiatae. The leaves of balm, Melissa (Ph. U. S.), have a pleasant odour; and an austere and aromatic taste. Balm was formerly much used in nervous diseases, but is now only employed when made into tea, as a diluent, in febrile affections. It is the basis of a celebrated preparation,—the Eau des Carmes.

MELISSA CALAMIN'THA, Calamin'tha, C. vulgari's seu officina'rum seu grandifl'ora, Thymus calamin'tha, Cal'amint, Nespite, (F.) Calament. This plant smells like wild mint, though more agreeably. It is used, popularly, as a tea in dyspepsia; flatulent colic; hysteria; uterine obstructions, &c.

MELISSA CANARIENSIS, Dracocephalum Canariense—m. Citrata, Melissa—m. Citrina, Melissa—m. Clinopodium, Clinopodium vulgare.

MELISSA GRANDIFLO'RA, Thymus glandiflorus, Calamin'tha magno floræ, C. mont'na, Mountain Cal'amint. This plant resembles the last in virtues.

MELISSA HIRSA, Melissa—m. Hortensis, Melissa—m. Huuiilis, Melittis melissophyllum.

MELISSA NEP'ETA, Thymus nep'eta seu multiflorus, Calamin'tha An'glica seu Pale'gii odoræ seu nep'eta seu parvifl'ora seu trichol'oma, Nep'eta agrest'is, Field Cal'amint, Spotted Cal'amint. Formerly used as an aromatic.

MELISSA OFFICINALIS, Melissa—m. Pulgioïdes, Hedeoma—m. Romana, Melissa—m. Tragi, Melittis melissophyllum—m. Turcica, Dracocephalum Canariense.

MÉLISSÉ DES BOIS, Melittis melissophyllum—m. de Moldavie, Dracocephalum Canariense.

MELISSOBOTANUM, Melissa.

MELISSOBOTOS, Melissa.

MELISSOPHYLLUM, Melissa, Melittis melissophyllum.

MÉLISSOT, Melittis melissophyllum.

MELITÆ'MIA, Melithæ'mia, from μελι, 'honey,' and αίμα, 'blood.' A condition of the circulating fluid, in which it contains an unusual quantity of saccharine matter.

MELITÆNA, Melissa.

MÉLITAGRE, Impetigo.

MELITEIA, Melissa.

MELITHÆMIA, Melittæmia.

MELITHOCORTON, Corallina Corsicana.

MELITHYPERURIA, Diabetes.

MELI'TIS, Inflamma'tio genæ; from μηλον, 'the cheek,' and itis, denoting inflammation. Inflammation of the cheek.

MELITTES, Hydromeli.

MELITTA, Bee.

MELITTIS, Melissa.

MELI'TIS MELISSOPHYLL'UM, La'mium mont'num, Melissa hu'milis seu sylvest'ris seu Tragi, La'mium Plin'ii, Melissophyll'um, Bastard Balm, (F.) Mélisse des Bois, Mélissot. Ord. Labiatae. This plant was formerly employed, like the balm, in uterine obstructions.

MELITTIS SYLVESTRIS, M. Melissophyllum.

MELITURIA, Urine, diabetic, see Diabetes.

MELI'TUS, Melitt'us, from mel, 'honey.' Appertaining to honey. Of the nature of honey.

MELIZO'MUM, from μελι, 'honey,' and ζωμος, 'broth'; Mead, Melli'na, Metheg'lin, (Prov.) Mulin. A drink prepared with honey.

MELLA'GO, from mel, 'honey.' Any medicine having the consistence of honey. A fluid extract.

MELLICRATUM, Hydromeli.

MELLI'FVIUM, Porrigo favosa.

MELLINA, Melizomum.

MELLITE DE BORAX, Mel boracis—m. de Roses, Mel rosæ—m. Simple, Mel despumatum.

MELLI'TUM, from mel, 'honey.' (F.) Miel me'dicinal, Hydromellé, Soccharolé liquide, Meli-olé. A prepared honey:—a medicated honey.

MELLITUM DE ACETATE CUPRI, Limentum Ærguinis.

MELLITUM DE MERCURIA'LI COMPOS'ITUM, (F.)
Miel de mercuriale composé, Syrop de longue vie.
(Succ. purif. mercurialis lbij, boraginis, anchusæ officinalis, aa ðss, iris pseudacori radicis recent. ʒij, rad. sicc. gentianæ ʒj, mellis lbij, vini albi ʒxii.) Macerate the bruised roots in the wine for 24 hours; strain; mix the juices and honey; boil slightly, and filter; then add the two liquors, and boil to the consistence of syrup. Ph. P.) Cathartic, stomachic, &c.

MELLITUM DE ROSIS, Mel rosæ.

MELLITUM SIMPLEX, Syr'upus de Melle, Syrup of Honey. (Mellis lbvj, aquæ ðss, carbonat. calcis. præparat. ʒij. Mix the honey, water, and carbonate of lime in a silver vessel: boil the mixture, stirring, at the same time, for 2 or 3 minutes: then add prepared animal charcoal ʒvj, two whites of eggs, mixed in a pint of water. Mix all, and boil to the consistence of syrup: remove from the fire; let the syrup rest for 15 minutes, and pass through a cloth. Ph. P.) Demulcent.

MELLITUS, Melitus.

MELOÆ'MIA, from μέλας, 'black,' and αἷμα, 'blood.' A state of blood, characterized by its incoagulability, black colour, and septic properties.

MELOCH'TIS, Lapis Armænius, Armeni'tes, Armænian Stone. A variety of blue carbonate of copper. It is found in Germany, the Tyrol, and especially in Armenia. It was formerly employed as a cardiac, and as proper for purging away melancholy.

MELODID'YMUS, from μέλος, 'a limb,' and δίδυμος, 'double.' A double member or limb.

MELOE MAJALIS, see Cantharis.

MELOE NIGER, M. Pennsylvan'icus; Class, Insecta; Ord. Coleoptera. A blistering fly, native of the United States. It feeds upon Prunella vulgaris or Self-heal, and Ambrosia trifida or Stick-weed. These flies resemble the Spanish flies in properties.

MELOE PENNSYLVANICUS, M. niger.

MELOE PROSCARABÆUS, Cantarel'lus, was anciently used as a diuretic and anti-hydrophobic. See Cantharis.

MELOE VESICATORIUS, Cantharis.

MELOM'ELES, from μέλος, 'a member,' and μέλος, 'unprofitable.' A monster with supernumerary limbs.

MELON, μηλον, 'an apple.' A disorder of the eye, in which it protrudes out of the socket. See Exophthalmia.—Castelli.

MELON, Cucumis melo — m. d'Eau, Cucurbita citrullus — m. Plant, Cucumis melo — m. Water, Cucurbita citrullus.

MELONGENA, Solanum melongena.

MELOPLACUNTIVM, Meloplaceus.

MELOPLA'CUS, Meloplacun'tium, from μηλον, 'an apple,' 'a quince.' A compound obtained by boiling wine, honey, quince, pepper, &c., together.—Galen.

MELOPLAS'TIC, Meloplas'ticus, Genoplas'tic, from μηλον, 'the cheek,' and πλασσω, 'I form.' (F.) Méloplastie, an epithet for the operation for forming a new cheek when any part of it has been lost.

MELOS, μέλος, Membrum. A member. A limb. An organized part, composed of other parts.—Castelli.

MELO'SIS, Catheteris'mus, Cenembate'ois, from μηλη, 'a probe.' The act of probing a wound, ulcer, &c.—Hippocrates. Catheterism.

MELOTHRUM, Bryonia alba.

MELO'TIS, Melo'tris, Specil'm minus. From μηλη, 'a probe.' A small probe,—a probe for the ear. See Apyromele.

MELOTRIS, Melotris.

MELT, Spleen. Also, the sperm of fish,—Milt.

MELTING, Fusion.

MELUM, μηλον, Malum. An apple. Fruit in general. Also, a round, firm female breast. The cheek. The apple-eye or melon-eye is an apple-formed projection of the eye from the orbit.

MELUM ARMENIACUM, Prunus armeniaca — m. Cydonium, see Pyrus cydonia.

MELUSTUM, Melasses.

MEMBRA PUDENDA, Genital organs.

MEMBRANA, Membrane — m. Abdominis, Peritonæum — m. Adiposa, Cellular membrane — m. Adventitia, Decidua reflexa — m. Agnina, Amnios — m. Amphiblastrodes, Retina — m. Arachnoidea, Hyaloid membrane — m. MEMBRA'NA PUTAM'INIS, (putamen, 'a shell or husk.') Pellic'ula Ovi. The membrane adherent to the inner surface of the eggshell. — Putamen seu Testa Ovi.

MEMBRANA RETIFORMIS CHORII, Decidua reflexa — m. Ruyschiana, Choroid (inner layer.)

MEMBRANA SACCIFORM'IS. A separate synovial membrane for the inferior radio-cubital articulation, which covers the upper surface of the triangular ligament, and the sort of incomplete ring which circumscribes the head of the ulna.

MEMBRANA SEMIPELLUCIDA, Caligo — m. Serosa, Membrane (serous) — m. Sinuosa, Decidua — m. Subcostalis, Pleura — m. Succingens, Diaphragm, Pleura.

MEMBRANA TESTE, Shell membrane. The membrane that lines the shell of the bird's egg:—a simple membrane.

MEMBRANA THORACIC INTERSEPIENS, Mediastinum—m. Tympani, see Tympanum—m. Tympani secundaria, see Fenestra—m. Urinaria, Alantoidis—m. Uteri interna evoluta, Decidua—m. Uvea, Uvea—m. Vasculosa cerebri, Pia mater—m. Vasorum Communis, Endangium—m. Verrucularis, Retina.

MEMBRANA VERSICOLOR. A peculiar membrane—according to Mr. Fielding, of Hull—situate immediately behind the retina, and in connexion with it. It is separable into distinct layers from the choroid, and is supplied with blood-vessels.

MEMBRANA WACHENDORFIANA, Pupillary membrane.

MEMBRANACEOUS, Membranous.

MEMBRANE, Membrana, Hymen, Meninx, Ependyma, Pan'nicle. A name given to different thin organs, representing a species of supple, more or less elastic, webs; varying in their structure and vital properties, and intended, in general, to absorb or secrete certain fluids; and to separate, envelop, and form other organs. Bichat has divided the membranes into simple and compound.

Simple membranes comprise three orders. 1. A Mucous membrane, Membrana mucosa seu pituitosa seu pituitaria, Phlegmymen, Phlegmat'hymen, Membrane folliculose (Ch.), is so called, on account of the mucous fluid by which it is constantly lubricated. Mucous membranes line the canals, cavities, and hollow organs, which communicate externally by different apertures on the skin. Bichat refers them to two great divisions—the gastro-pulmonary, and the genito-urinary. The mucous membranes have a striking analogy with the cutaneous tissue, in organization, functions, and diseases. They are composed of chorion, papillæ, and epidermis; and are furnished with a multitude of follicles, which secrete a viscid humour,—mucus. They receive a quantity of arterial vessels, veins, lymphatics, and nerves. 2. The Serous membranes, Membrana serosa, M. villosa simple (Ch.), are transparent, thin, and composed of one lamina. One surface adheres to other textures; the other is smooth, polished, and moistened by a serous fluid. They are arranged—in the form of sacs without apertures—as great, intermediate reservoirs for the exhalant and absorbent systems, in which the serous fluid, in passing from one system, carries some time before it enters the other. The serous membranes resemble the areolar membrane in structure and diseases. They facilitate the motion on each other of the organs which they envelop. They may be divided into (a) Serous membranes, properly so called; as the arachnoid, pleura, peritoneum, and tunica vaginalis. (b) Synovial membranes or capsules; which belong to joints, tendons, aponeuroses, &c. These membranes—mucous and serous—are constituted of similar layers—epithelium, basement membrane, condensed areolar tissue; and a looser form of areolar tissue, termed submucous in one case,—subserous in the other. 3. Fibrous membranes, Membranes albugineuses (Ch.) These are almost all continuous, and terminate at the periosteum—their common centre. They have been divided into two sections. 1. Enveloping aponeuroses, Aponeuroses of insertion, Fibrous capsules of the joints, and Fibrous sheath of tendons. 2. The Periosteum, Dura mater, Sclerotica, Tunica albuginea testis, Fibrous membrane of the spleen, &c. The fibrous membranes are not free or moistened by any particular fluid. They adhere by both surfaces to the neighbouring parts; are firm, resisting, but slightly elastic, and of a white colour; sometimes pearly and glistening. Their vessels are numerous, in some, as in the dura mater and periosteum; in others, scarcely perceptible, as in the aponeuroses. The presence of nerves has never been proved, although several circumstances, regarding their sensibility, render their existence probable. The fibrous membranes serve, in general, to augment the solidity of the organs which they envelop; to retain the muscles in their respective positions; to favour the motion of the limbs, and that of the muscles and skin; to form canals and rings for the passage of different organs, &c.

Bichat admits three species of Compound Membranes. 1. The Sero-fibrous, formed of a serous and fibrous lamina, intimately adherent to each other;—as the pericardium, dura mater, and tunica albuginea. 2. The Sero-mucous, formed of a serous and mucous lamina;—as the gall-bladder at its lower part. 3. The Fibro-mucous, constituted of the union of a fibrous and mucous membrane; as the mucous membrane of the nasal fossæ, gums, &c. Chaussier admits six kinds of membranes. 1. The laminated. See Cellular Tissue. 2. The serous or simple villous. 3. The follicular or complicated villous. 4. The muscular or fleshy. 5. The albugineous. 6. The albuminous.

MEMBRANE, ACCIDENTAL, M. false—m. Accidentelle, M. false—m. Adnée, Conjunctiva—m. Adventitious, M. false—m. Anhistous, Decidua.

MEMBRANE, BASEMENT, Primary or limitary membrane, Membrana propria. A delicate, structureless lamella of membrane found beneath the epidermis or epithelium, on all the free surfaces of the body.

MEMBRANE CADUQUE, Decidua—m. Caducæ réfléchie, Decidua reflexa—m. de Demours, see Aqueous Humour, and Cornea—m. de Descemet, see Aqueous Humour, and Cornea.

MEMBRANE, FALSE, Accidental or Adventitious membrane, Pseudo-membrane, Pseudymen, Pseudomeninx, (F.) Fausse membrane, M. accidentelle. Membranous productions, which form on all the free natural surfaces, and on every free accidental surface, are so called. They are, in general, produced by the exudation of a fibrinous matter, susceptible of organization, which takes place in consequence of inflammation of the various tissues. These accidental membranes occur on the skin after the application of a blister; on mucous surfaces, as in croup; on the parietes of inflamed veins and arteries, &c. The cicatrices of wounds are formed of them.

Of late, it has been proposed to give the name pseudo-membrane to fibrinous exudations, which are devoid of organization, whilst neo-membrane may be applied to such fresh productions as have become supplied with vessels and nerves.

MEMBRANE FAUSSE, Membrane, false—m. Germinal, see Molecule—m. Granular, Membrana granulosa—m. Granulose, Membrana granulosa—m. Haptogen, see Haptogenous—m. Primary, Membrane, basement—m. Pseudo, M. false—m. Hyaloid, see Hyaloid membrane—m. Jacob's, Tunica Jacobi—m. Limitary, Membrane, basement—m. Nasmyth's, see Enamel—m. Ruyschienne, Choroid (inner layer), Ruyschiana tunica—m. Shell, Membrana testæ—m. du Tympan, see Tympanum—m. Virginal, Hymen—m. Vitellary, Zona pellucida—m. Vitelline, Zona pellucida.

MEMBRANES ALBUGINEUSES, Membranes, fibrous, see Albuginea—m. Folliculoseuses, Membranes, mucous—m. Veloutées, Villous membranes—m. Villeuses simples, Membranes, serous.

MEMBRANES OF THE FÆTUS, Membrana fetum involventes, Velamenta infantis, Integumenta fetus, The membranes. The membranes which immediately envelop the fœtus in the cavity of the uterus and the rupture of which gives rise to the discharge of the liquor amnii. These membranes are the decidua, chorion, and amnion.

MEMBRANES, THE, Membranes of the Fœtus.

MEMBRANEUX, Membranous.

MEMBRANIFORM, Membraniformis, from membrana, and forma—resembling a membrane. A name given to thin and flat parts, which resemble membranes.

MEMBRANIFORM MUSCLES: Very broad and thin muscles, as the platysma myoides, obliquus abdominis, &c.

MEMBRANOSUS, Fascia lata muscle.

MEMBRANOUS, Membrano'sus, Membrana'-ceus, Hymeno'des, (F.) Membraneux. Having the nature of membrane. Formed of membrane.

MEMBRANULA, Hymenium—m. Coronæ ciliaris, see Ciliary—m. Lunata Vaginæ, Hymen-um. Nervorum, Neurilemma—m. Semilunaris conjunctivæ, Valvula semilunaris.

MEMBRANULE, Membran'ula, diminutive of membrana, 'a membrane.' A small membrane.

MEMBRE, Membrum—m. Viril, Penis.

MEMBROSUS, Membro'sior, Mentula'tus, Muttonia'tus, Nasa'tus, valde Mentula'tus, Fascino'sus, Psolon, (F.) Membru, from membrum, 'the male organ.' One whose penis is very large.

MEMBRU, Membrosus.

MEMBRUM, Artus, Melos, Colon, a limb, a member, (F.) Membre. The limbs or extremities or members of animals are certain parts exterior to the body, which are more or less apparent, long, and moveable. It is by means of their limbs, that animals transport themselves from one place to another; and that they defend themselves, or attack others. The limbs are arranged on each side of the trunk, with which they are articulated. In man, they are four in number:—two upper or thoracic, and two lower, pelvic or abdominal. Also, the male organ.

MEMBRUM GENITALE VIRORUM, Penis—m. Mulieb're, Clitoris—m. Seminale, Penis—m. Virile, Penis.

MEMOIRE, Memory—m. Perte de, Amnesia.

MEMORIA DELETA, Amnesia.

MEMORY, Memo'ria, Mnemē, Recordatio, Recordatus, (F.) Mémoire. The cerebral faculty, by virtue of which past impressions are recalled to the mind.

MEMPHITES LAPIS. A sort of stone, found anciently in the environs of Memphis; which was esteemed narcotic.

MENAGOGUES, Emmenagogues.

MENDESION, Ægyptiacum.

MENE, Moon.

MENECRATIS ACCIPITER, Accipiter.

MENELCO'SIS, Helcome'nia, from μην, 'a month,' and 'ελκωσις, 'ulceration.' Vicarious menstruation from an ulcer.

MENES, Menses.

MENESPAUSIE, see Menses.

MENIDRO'SIS, from μην, 'a month, and 'ιδρωσις, 'sweating.' A sweating of menstrual blood.—Bock.

MENFRIGE, see Pistacia lentiscus.

MENINGARTHRO'ACĒ, Inflamma'tio membrana'rum articulationis, Arthromening'itis, from μηνιγξ, μηνιγγος, 'membrane,' αρθρον, 'a joint,' and κακος, 'disease.' Inflammation of the membranes of a joint.

MÉNINGE, Dura mater.

MENINGÉ, Meningeal.

MENIN'GEAL, Menin'geus, from μηνιγξ, μηνιγγος, 'a membrane.' (F.) Méningé. Relating to the meninges, or merely to the dura mater.

MENINGEAL APOPLEXY, see Apoplexy.

MENINGEAL ARTERY, MIDDLE, Arte'ria menin'-gea me'dia seu Sphæno-spino'sa seu Dura Matris me'dia max'ima seu Sphæno-spina'lis, Spinal Artery, (F.) Artère méningée moyenne ou Sphæno-épineuse, ou Épineuse, is the largest of the branches given off by the internal maxillary artery. It enters the cranium by the foramen spinale, and distributes its branches chiefly to the dura mater.

MENINGEAL VESSELS, Vasa menin'gea. The vessels of the membranes of the brain.

MENIN'GES, Eitam'ides, Matres seu Involu'era Cer'e'br'i, Omen'ta seu Velamen'ta cerebra'lia, from μηνιγξ, μηνιγγος, 'a membrane.' The three membranes which envelop the brain—Dura mater, Arachnoid, and Pia mater.

MÉNINGETTE, Pia mater.

MENINGIITIS, Meningitis.

MENINGI'NA, (F.) Méningine. Same etymon. A name given by Chaussier to the pia mater, united to the cerebral layer of the arachnoid.

MENINGINA, INNER LAMINA OF THE, Pia mater.

MÉNINGINE, Meningina.

MÉNINGITE, CÉREBRO-SPINAL, Meningitis, cerebro-spinal.

MENINGINI'TIS, from meningina, and itis, denoting inflammation. Inflammation of the meningina.

MENINGION, Arachnoid membrane.

MENINGIS CUSTOS, Meningophylax.

MÉNINGITE, Meningitis—m. Granuleuse, Hydrocephalus internus—m. Rachidienne, Meningitis, spinal—m. Tuberculeuse, Hydrocephalus internus.

MENINGITIS, Meningi'tis, Encephali'tis peripher'ica seu membrano'sa, (F.) Inflammation de la membrane séreuse céphalo-rachidienne, Méningite, from meninges, and itis, denoting inflammation. Inflammation of the meninges or membranes of the brain. See Phrenitis.

MENINGITIS ARTERITICA, Cephalagra.

MENINGITIS, CER'EBRO-SPINAL, Myeli'tis, petechia'lis, Cer'e'bral or cer'e'bro-spinal typhus, (F.) Méningite cérébro-spinal, Fièvre cérébro-spinal, Typhus cérébro-spinal. An alarmingly fatal form of epidemic fever, which prevailed in different countries of Europe, and, also, in certain portions of the United States, near the middle of the 19th century. It is considered, by Boudin, to constitute the cerebro-spinal form of the nosological group of typhus.

MENINGI'TIS GRANULAR, Hydrocephalus internus—m. Hydrocephalica, Hydrocephalus internus—m. Infantum, Hydrocephalus internus—m. Membranosa, M. spinal.

MENINGITIS MESENCEPHALI'CA. Inflammation of the meninges of the medulla oblongata and pons varolii more especially.

MENINGITIS PERIPHERICA, M. spinal—m. Pottatorum, Delirium tremens—m. Rachidian, M. spinal—m. Scrophulous, Hydrocephalus internus.

MENINGITIS, SPINAL, M. Rachid'ian seu Spina'lis seu peripher'ica seu membrano'sa, Perimyeli'tis, Myelo-meningi'tis, (F.) Méningite rachidienne. Inflammation of the meninges of the spinal marrow.

MENINGITIS, TUBERCULAR, see Hydrocephalus internus—m. Tuberculosa, Hydrocephalus internus.

MENIN'GIUM. Diminutive of μηνιγξ, μηνιγγος, 'a membrane.' A fine, delicate membrane. The tunica arachnoidea of the brain.

MENINGO-CEPHALI'TIS, Meningo-encephali'tis, Ceph'alo-meningi'tis, Enceph'alo-meningi'tis, from μηνιγξ, μηνιγγος, 'a membrane,' κεφαλη, 'head,' and itis, a suffix denoting inflammation. Inflammation of the membranes and brain.

MENINGO-GASTRIC FEVER, Fever, gastric.

MENINGOGASTRITIS, Fever, gastric.

MENINGOMALA'CIA, from μηνιγξ, μηνιγγος,

'membrane,' and μαλακία, 'softening.' Softening of membranes in general.

MENINGOPHYLAX, Custos menin'gis, Depressorium, (F.) Dépressoire, from μηνίγξ, μηνίγγος, 'a membrane,' the dura mater; and φύλαξ, 'a preserver.' An instrument for depressing the dura mater, and guarding it from injury, whilst the bone is cut or rasped.

MENINGORRHŒA, from μηνίγξ, μηνίγγος, 'membrane,' and ρῶω, 'I flow.' Effusion of blood upon or between the membranes of the brain.

MENINGO'SIS. Same etymon. The union of bones by means of membrane; e. g. the articulation of the bones of the cranium in the fœtus. Meningosis is a variety of Syndesmosis.

MENINGOSYMPHYSIS; Meningosyz'ia, from μηνίγξ, μηνίγγος, 'membrane,' and συνφύσις, 'growing together.' Adhesion of or by membrane. Adhesion of the membranes of the brain to each other, or to the brain.

MENINGOSYZIA, Meningosymphysis.

MENINGURIA; from μηνίγξ, 'a membrane,' and ουρον, 'urine.' The passage of urine containing membranous shreds.

MENINX, Membrane—m. Choroides, Pia mater—m. Crassa, Dura mater—m. Dura, Dura mater—m. Exterior, Dura mater—m. Interior, Pia mater—m. Media, Arachnoid membrane—m. Pacheia, Dura mater—m. Sclera, Dura mater—m. Serosa, Arachnoid membrane—m. Vasculosa, Pia mater.

MENISCHESIS, see Amenorrhœa.

MENISCI, Cartilages, interarticular.

MENISPERMUM ANGULATUM, M. Canadense.

MENISPERMUM CANADENSĒ, M. angulatum, Ord. Menispermaceæ, from μηνή, 'the moon,' and σπέρμα, 'seed,' in allusion to the crescentic shape of the seed. A climbing plant, growing in various parts of the United States. Said to be used in Virginia as a substitute for sarsaparilla in scrofula, and to be called, in the West, Sarsaparilla. It is an excitant tonic.

MENISPERMUM COCCULUS, M. glaucum, Anamir'ta Cocculus seu paniculata, Cocculus suberosus. The systematic name of the plant, the berries of which are well known by the name of Cocculus Indicus seu suberosus, Indian Berries, Baccæ Piscatoriæ, Indian Cockles, Coccus Indicus, Cocculæ officinarum, Cocci orientales, Grana Orientis, (F.) Coque du Levant, C. levant. These berries are remarkable for their inebriating and destructive quality to fish. The deleterious principle appears to reside in the kernel, and in the active principle called Picrotoxine. Cocculus Indicus has been used in decoction to kill vermin. It has, at times, been added to beer, by fraudulent tradesmen, to render it more inebriating.

MENISPERMUM GLAUCUM, M. cocculus—m. Palmatum, Calumba.

MENISPERMUM TUBERCULATUM, M. Verrucosum, Cocculus crispus. A Chinese plant, an extract from the root of which is tonic to the stomach and bowels, and possesses some astringency. Dose, 5 to 10 grains.

The same may be said of Menispermum Cor-difolium—the Goluncha, of Bengal.

MENISPERMUM VERRUCOSUM, M. tuberculatum.

MENOCRYPHIA, Amenorrhœa.

MENOLIPSIS, see Menses.

MENOPAUSIS, see Menses.

MENOPHANIA, see Menses.

MENOPLANIA, Menstruation, vicarious.

MENORRHŒA, from μην, μηνος, 'a month,' and ρῶω, 'to flow fiercely.' Flow of the menses. Frequently, the word is used synonymously with uterine hemorrhage or metrorrhagia, or for immoderate flow of the menses—profuse menstua- tion, Parame'nia superflua seu profusa, Menorrhag'ia rubra, Catamenio'rum fluxus immod'icus, Menstrua immod'ica seu superflua, Menorrhœa.

MENORRHAGIA, Menstruation, Metrorrhagia—m. Alba, Leucorrhœa—m. Difficilis, Dysmenorrhœa—m. Erronea, Menstruation, erroneous—m. Stillitia, Dysmenorrhœa.

MENORRHŒA, from μην, μηνος, 'a month,' and ρῶω, 'I flow.' The ordinary flow of the menses. Also, too long continuing, or too often returning, menstruation. Menorrhagia.

MENOSCHESIS, see Amenorrhœa.

MENOSTASIS, Amenorrhœa.

MENOSTASIS, from μην, μηνος, 'month,' and στασις, 'stasis,' 'stagnation.' This word, according to some, signifies the retention of the menses and their accumulation in the uterus. According to others, it means the acute pain which, in some females, precedes each appearance of the menses: a pain which has been presumed to proceed from the stasis of blood in the capillary vessels of the uterus.

MENOXEN'IA, Menoxeno'sis, from μην, μηνος, 'a month,' and ξενος, 'foreign.' Irregular menstruation.

MENOXENOSIS, Menoxenia.

MENS, Anima, Intellect.

MENSA, Trap'eza, 'a table.' The upper superficial part or corona of the jaw teeth.

MENSES, (pl. of mensis, 'a month;') M. Mulie'bres, Mulie'bria, Menses, Fluxus men'strus seu luna'ris, Profluviu'm mulie'brè seu genita'tè mulie'bre, Consuetudo menstrua, Catame'nia, Men'strua, Emme'nia, Tributu'm luna'rè seu men'struu'm, Purgatio'nes, P. menstruæ, Gynæce'ia, Aphedri'a, Cursus men'strus, Horæ'a, Luna'ria, Courses, Menstrual flux, Monthly courses or periods, Flowers, Turns, Terms, the Reds, Troubles, (F.) Mois, Règles, Lunes, Fleurs, Affaires, Époques, Ordinaires, Purgations, Fleurs, Menstrues. The sanguineous evacuation from the uterus, Sanguis menstruus, Men'strual Blood, the monthly occurrence of which constitutes menstruation or monthly illness. The first appearance of the menses—menoph'nia—is usually preceded by the discharge of a fluid whitish matter from the vagina: by nervous excitement, and by vague pains and heaviness in the loins and thighs; numbness of the limbs, tumefaction and hardness of the breasts, &c. More or less indisposition and irritability also precede each successive recurrence of the menstrual flux. In temperate climates, each period, men'strual period, periodus luna'ris, ordinarily continues from three to six days; and the quantity lost varies from four to eight ounces. The menses continue to flow from the period of puberty till the age of 45 or 50. At the term of its natural cessation, Menolip'sis, Mènespansie (Gardanne), Menopau'sis, the flux becomes irregular; and this irregularity is occasionally accompanied with symptoms of dropsy, glandular tumours, &c., constituting the Parame'nia cessatio'nis of Good, and what is called the critical time or turn or change of life; yet it does not appear that the mortality is increased by it. With the immediate causes of menstruation we are unacquainted. We express only our ignorance, when we assert it to depend upon periodicity; the discharge comes from the vessels of the uterus and vagina, and differs from ordinary blood by its peculiar odour, and by its not coagulating. It is evidently connected with the condition of the ovaries, and—it has been supposed—with the periodical discharge of ova from them. It is arrested, as a general principle, during pregnancy and lactation. In warm climates, women usually begin to menstruate early, and cease sooner than in the temperate regions. The quantity lost is also greater. In the colder regions, the reverse of this holds as a general rule.

Dried menstrual blood, especially of a woman in her first menstruation—Sanguis virginis primum menstruatæ—was formerly given internally as an anti-epileptic.

MENSES ALBI, Leucorrhœa — m. Anomalæ, Paramenia — m. Devii, Menstruation, vicarious — m. Dolorifici, Dysmenorrhœa — m. Retention of the, see Amenorrhœa — m. Suppression of the, Amenorrhœa.

MENSIUM RETENTIO, see Amenorrhœa.

MENSTRUUA, Menses — m. Alba, Leucorrhœa — m. Difficilia, Dysmenorrhœa — m. Dolorosa, Dysmenorrhœa — m. Immodica, Menorrhagia — m. Superflua, Menorrhagia.

MENSTRUAL, Catamenial — m. Flux, Menses — m. Period, see Menses.

MENSTRUANT, Men'struaus, Menstruat'us, from menstrua, 'the catamenia.' One subject to the catamenia.

MENSTRUATIO ANOMALA. Paramenia — m. Difficilis, Dysmenorrhœa — m. Dolorifica, Dysmenorrhœa — m. Impedita, see Amenorrhœa — m. Per insolitas Vias, Menstruation, vicarious.

MENSTRUATIO PRÆCOX, Premature menstruation. Menstruation occurring before the usual age or time.

MENSTRUATIO RECIDIVA. Menstruation, when protracted beyond the usual age.

MENSTRUATIO RETENTA, Amenorrhœa, Paramenia — m. Suppressa, Amenorrhœa, Paramenia.

MENSTRUATIO, Menstruat'io, Chronogyn'ea, Menorrhag'ia, Fluxus menstrua'lis. The flow of the menses.

MENSTRUATIO DIFFICILE, Dysmenorrhœa — m. Difficilis, Dysmenorrhœa — m. Laboriosa, Dysmenorrhœa — m. Premature, Menstruat'io præcox — m. Profuse, Menorrhagia.

MENSTRUATION, VICARIOUS, is that which occurs from other parts than the uterus. It is called Paramenia erro'ris, Menorrhag'ia erro'nea, Mensium per ali'na loca excre'tio, M. de'vi, Aberratio mensium seu menstruorum, Menstruat'io per insol'itas vias, Hæmatopla'nia seu Hæmopla'nia menstrua'lis, Menopla'nia, (F.) Déviatio des Règles, Règles déviées. At times, the secreted fluid has all the characters of the menstrual secretion; at others, it appears to be mere blood.

MENSTRUATUS, Menstruant.

MENSTRUUEL, Catamenial.

MENSTRUUES, Menses.

MENSTRUUOUS, Catamenial. Also, one affected with the menses or catamenia.

MENSTRUUM, (F.) Menstrue. Same etymon;—the menstruum being, of old, usually continued in action for a month. The monthly discharge of the female. The plural, menstrua, is now, however, always used for the menses. The name was formerly given to every substance which possesses the property of dissolving others slowly and with the aid of heat. At present, it is used synonymously with solvent. Thus—water, alcohol, ether, acids, oils, &c., are menstrua.

MENSTRUUM AURI, Nitro-muriatic acid — m. Ventriculi. Gastric juice.

MENSURA MEDICA. A measure of 48 ounces.

MENSURATIO, Metat'io, from mensura, 'measure.' Measurement, Medical meas'uring. One of the means used for exploring the state of the thoracic and other cavities. It consists in a comparative measurement of each side of the chest, by means of a riband extended from the median line of the sternum to the spine. When effusion exists on one side, the measurement is usually greater than on the other. When, on the other hand, a portion of a lung has ceased, for some time, to exert its respiratory functions, the corresponding side of the chest becomes smaller, in consequence of the contraction of the pleura, retraction of the pulmonary tissue, and greater approximation of the ribs.

MENTA, Mentha, Penis.

MENTAGRA, Mentulagra, Sycosis — m. Infantum, Porrigio lupinosa.

MEN'TAGRAPHYTE, Men'tagrophyte, Micross'poron mentagroph'ytes, from mentagra, and φύρον, 'a plant.' A name proposed by M. Gruby, of Vienna, for a cryptogamous plant, which he considers to produce mentagra.

MENTAL, Menta'lis, from mens, mentis, 'mind;' belonging or relating to the mind, as mental phenomena, mental diseases (Morbi menta'les), &c.

In Anatomy, Mental, Menta'lis, (F.) Mentonnier, signifies that which relates to the chin; from mentum, 'the chin.'

MENTAL ARTERY, (F.) Artère mentonnaière. This is given off by the inferior dental, and issues at the mental foramen to be distributed on the lower lip.

MENTAL FORAMEN, (F.) Trou mentonnier, Anterior maxillary F., is the outer orifice of the inferior dental canal. It is situate on the outer surface of the lower jaw-bone, opposite the second incisor, or the canine tooth, and gives passage to the vessels and nerves.

MENTAL FOSSA, see Fossa, mental.

MENTAL NERVE, (F.) Nerf mentonnier, is furnished by the inferior dental nerve. It issues by the mental foramen, and is distributed, in numerous filaments, to the muscles of the lower lip.

MENTAL REGION, Re'gio menta'lis. The region of the chin.

MENTHA seu MENTA AQUATICA, (μνθη, μνθα, μνθος, 'mint.') M. palustris seu hirsuta seu rotundifolia palustris, Menthast'rum, Sisymbrium menthast'rum, Balsamus palustris, Watermint, (F.) Menthe aquatique, M. rouge. Nat. Ord. Labiatae. This is less agreeable than the Mentha viridis, and more bitter and pungent. It is used like spearmint.

MENTHA BALSAMEA, M. piperita.

MENTHA CAPEX'ISIS, which grows at the Cape of Good Hope, possesses the medical properties of the mints.

MENTHA CERVINA, Hart's pennyroyal, Hyssop-leaved mint, Pulegium cervinum, (F.) Menthe cervine. Possesses the properties of pennyroyal, but is very unpleasant.

MENTHA CITRATA, Melissa.

MENTHA CRISPA, M. hercynica, Colymbifera minor, Curled Mint, (F.) Menthe frissée on crème, Baume d'eau à feuilles ridées. Possesses the properties of peppermint.

MENTHA GENTILIS, M. viridis — m. Hercynica, M. crispa — m. Hirsuta, M. Aquatica — m. Lævigata, M. viridis — m. Officinalis, M. piperita — m. Palustris, M. Aquatica.

MENTHA PIPERITA, M. Piperitis seu officina'lis seu balsamea, Peppermint, (F.) Menthe poivrée. The odour of this variety is strong and agreeable. Taste, pungent, aromatic, and producing a sensation of coldness in the mouth. Virtues depend upon essential oil and camphor. It is stomachic and carminative. It is chiefly used in the form of essential oil—the oleum menthae piperitæ.

Essence of Peppermint consists of ol. menthae pip. $\frac{ʒij}$, sp. vin. rectific., coloured with spinach leaves, Oij. See Tinctura olei menthae piperitæ.

MENTHA PULEGIUM, Pulegium, P. regule seu latifolium, Glechon, Pennyroyal, Pudding grass, (Prov.) Hilwort, Lurkey-dish, Organ, (F.) Pouliot. The oil — Oleum pulegii — possesses the virtues of the plant. It resembles the mints in general in properties. Amongst the vulgar, it is esteemed an emmenagogue. AQUA PULEGII, Aqua Mentha pulegii, Pennyroyal Water, is officinal in the Edinburgh and Dublin Pharmacopoeias.

MENTHA ROMANA, Balsamita suaveolens, Tanacetum balsamita—m. Rotundifolia palustris, M. aquatica—m. Sarcenica, Balsamita suaveolens, Tanacetum balsamita—m. Sativa, M. viridis—m. Spicata, M. viridis.

MENTHA VIRIDIS, M. Sativa seu vulgaris seu gentilis seu spicata seu lævigata, Spearmint, (F.) Menthe sauvage ou verte ou des jardins, Baume des jardins. Odour strong, aromatic; taste warm, austere, bitterish. Virtues the same as those of the peppermint. The Oleum mentha viridis is obtained from it.

MENTHA VULGARIS, M. viridis.

MENTHASTRUM, Mentha aquatica.

MENTHE AQUATIQUE, Mentha aquatica—m. Cervine, Mentha cervina—m. Coq, Tanacetum balsamita—m. Crêpe, Mentha crispata—m. Frisée, Mentha crispata—m. des Jardins, Mentha viridis—m. Poivrée, Mentha piperita—m. Romaine, Balsamita suaveolens—m. Rouge, Mentha aquatica—m. Sauvage, Mentha viridis—m. Verte, Mentha viridis.

MENTIGO, Porrigo larvalis, Sycois.

MENTISME, from mens, mentis, 'mind.' Any irregular movement of the mind, whether from emotion or a vivid imagination.—Baumes.

MENTOBICORNEUS, Geniohyoides.

MENTO-LABIAL, Mento-labialis, from mentum, 'the chin,' and labium, 'a lip.' Under this name Chaussier has united the Levator labii inferioris, and Quadratus muscles. See Depressor labii inferioris.

MENTO-LABIAL FURROW: a transverse depression situate between the lower lip and the chin, which is remarkable for the perpendicular direction of the hairs growing upon it.

MENTON, Mentum.

MENTONNIER, Mental—m. Labial, Depressor labii inferioris.

MENTONNIÈRE, see Funda.

MENTULA, Penis—m. Muliebris, Cercosis, Clitoris—m. Parva, Pipinna.

MENTULAGRA, Men'tagra. A hybrid word, from mentula, 'the penis,' and agra, 'a seizure.' A convulsive erection of the mentula or penis; such as is said to be sometimes observed in eunuchs. See Pudendagra.

MENTULATUS, Membrosus.

MENTUM, Genion, Genium, Anthe'ron, 'the chin.' (F.) Menton. The inferior and middle part of the face, situate below the lower lip. The chin is formed of skin, areolar tissue, muscles, vessels, nerves, and the os maxillare inferius.

MENYANTHES TRIFOLIATA, Menyanthes, Minyanthes, from pnv, 'a month,' and ανθος, 'a flower,' because it keeps in flower about a month [?]. Trifolium paludosum seu aquatium seu palustre seu fibrinum, Water trefoil, Buckbean, Bogbean. Nat. Ord. Gentianaceæ. (F.) Trèfle d'eau ou des Marais ou de Castor. The taste is intensely bitter, and is extracted by water. It is tonic, anthelminthic, diuretic, cathartic, and, in large doses, emetic. In some countries, it is used as a substitute for hops in making beer.

MENYANTHES VERNA, American buckbean, Marsh trefoil, Water shamrock, Bitter root, has similar properties.

MEOSIS, Meiosis.

MEPHITIC, Mephiticus, (F.) Méphitique; from a Syriac word, signifying 'to blow, to breathe.' Any thing possessed of an unwholesome property; chiefly applied to exhalations.

MEPHITIC ACID, Carbonic acid—m. Air, Carbonic acid.

MEPHITIS, see Mephitism—m. Hepatica, Hydrogen, sulphuretted—m. Inflammabilis, Hydrogen—m. Urinosa, Ammonia.

MEPHITISM, Mephitismus, (F.) Méphitième. Same etymon. Any pernicious exhalation. Mephitis and Mophe'ta, (F.) Mofette ou Moufette, are old names for azote; and, in general, for all exhalations and gases that are unfit for respiration.

MERACUS, Merus.

MERAMAUROSIS, Hypamaurosis.

MERANÆSTHESIS, Meranæsthesia, from μερος, 'a part,' av, 'privative,' and αισθησις, 'sensation.' Insensibility of a part of the body.

MERATROPHIA, from μερος, 'a part,' and ατροφια, 'want of nourishment.' Atrophy of some part of the body.

MERCURE, Hydrargyrum—m. Bichlorure de, Hydrargyri oxyurias—m. Biiodure de, Hydrargyri iodidum rubrum—m. Bromures de, see Bromine—*m. MEROCE'LE, Miroce'le, Merorix'is, Meror-rhe'is, from μερος, 'the thigh,' and κηλη, 'tumour;' Hernia cruralis seu femor'al'is, Fem'oral or crural hernia, (F.) Hernie crurale ou femorale. In this hernia, the viscera issue from the abdomen through the crural canal; or through an opening immediately on the outer side of Gimbernat's ligament, which gives passage to lymphatic vessels. This affection is more frequent in the female than in the male, and especially in those who have had children. The tumour, formed by merocele, is generally small, round, and more or less difficult of reduction. In other respects, it possesses all the characters of hernia. The neck of the sac has, close on the outside, the epigastric artery; above, the spermatic cord and spermatic artery in the male—the round ligament in the female; on the inside, Gimbernat's ligament; and below, the pubes. When the obturator artery arises from the epigastric, it generally passes on the outside of and below the orifice of the sac; sometimes, however, it takes a turn above, and then to the inside of the opening. J. Cloquet asserts, that of 134 cases, in one only did he find the epigastric artery on the inside of the orifice of the sac.

The operation, required in strangulation of this variety, may be practised on the aponeurotic opening, by cutting downwards and inwards on the side of Gimbernat's ligament.

MEROCOXYALGIA, Coxalgia.

MEROL'OGY, Merolog'ia, (F.) Mérologie, from μερος, 'a part,' and λογος, 'a discourse.' The branch of anatomy, which treats of the elementary constituents of the tissues and humours of the organism.—Robin and Verdel.

MERO'PIA, from μερος, 'a part,' and οψις, 'vision.' A partial obscurity of vision.

MERORIXIS, Merocele.

MERORRHEU'MA, Rheumatis'mus partialis seu localis seu Membro'rum singulo'rum; from μερος, 'a part,' and ρευμα, 'defluxion, rheumatism.' Rheumatism affecting a part. Topical or local rheumatism.

MERORRHESIS, Merocele.

MEROS, Femur, Thigh.

MERRY-ANDREW. An itinerant quack, who exposes his nostrums for sale at fairs and markets. See CHARLATAN.—So called from Dr. Andrew Boorde, who lived in the reigns of Henry VIII., Edward VI., and Queen Mary, and who was in the habit of frequenting fairs and markets, at which he harangued the populace.

MERTENSIA VIRGINICA, Pulmonaria Virginica, Virginian Cowslip, Smooth Lungwort; indigenous. Family, Boraginaceæ. The plant is mucilaginous, and may be used as a demulcent.

MERULIUS, Morchella Esculenta — m. Auricula, Peziza auricula.

MERUS, Meraeus, Aceratos, 'pure, genuine;' as Vinum merum, unmixed wine.

MERUS, Femur, Thigh.

MERVINE, MALE, Cypripedium lateum.

MERYCISMUS, Rumination.

MÉRYCOLE, see Rumination.

MERYCOLOG'IA, from μῆρυκαω, 'I ruminate,' and λογος, 'a description.' Any work on rumination may be so termed.

MERYPTROPH'IA, from μερος, 'a part,' and hypertrophia, 'supernutrition.' Hypertrophy of a part.

MESA, Genital organs.

MESARÆUM, Mesentery.

MESARAIC, Mesenteric.

MESEMAR, Mismar.

MESEMBRYANTHEMUM COPTICUM, see Soda.

MESEMBRYANTHEMUM CRYSTALLINUM, M. ficoïdes (μεσημβριαω, 'to do at noon,' because its flowers expand at midday.) Diamond fig-marygold, Ice-plant, (F.) Glaciale, Crystalline. Nat. Ord. Ficoideæ: a plant common in the neighbourhood of Cape Town. It has been recommended in dysuria, ischuria, and some other affections of the urinary organs.

MESEMBRYANTHEMUM EDULÈ, and M. acinaciforme, South African plants, are much used as domestic remedies at the Cape. The expressed juice of the leaves acts as an astringent in dysentery, and as a mild diuretic. It is also used as an antiseptic gargle in malignant sore throat, violent salivation and aphthæ, and as a lotion to burns and scalds.

MESEMBRYANTHEMUM TORTUOSUM, also a South African plant, is said to possess narcotic properties.

MÉSENCÉPHALE, Medulla oblongata, Pons Varolii.

MÉSENTERIC, Mesaraic, Mesentericus, Mesaraicus, Mesaraicus, (F.) Mésentérique, Mésaraïque; from μεσεντεριον, or μεσαραιον, 'the mesentery.' That which relates or belongs to the mesentery.

MÉSENTERIC ARTERIES are two in number, and distinguished into, 1. The Superior mesenteric, which arises from the anterior part of the abdominal aorta, below the cœliac. It immediately descends to the left, forwards, behind the pancreas, and in front of the third portion of the duodenum,—to gain the superior extremity of the mesentery, where it makes a long curvature, the convexity of which is turned forwards and to the left. Towards the termination of the ileum, it ends by anastomosing with a branch of the A. colica dextra inferior. At its concavity, it gives off the three Arteriæ colicæ dextræ, which belong to the great intestine; and, at its convexity, it sends off fifteen or twenty branches, which are distributed to the small intestine, after having formed numerous arches by their anastomoses.

2. The Inferior Mesenteric Artery arises from the anterior part of the abdominal aorta, an inch and a half before its termination. It descends, on the left side, behind the peritoneum; engages itself in the substance of the iliac mesocolon, forming a considerable curvature, whose convexity faces the left side. When it reaches the brim of the pelvis, it passes along the posterior separation of the mesorectum, and attains the neighbourhood of the anus, under the name Superior hemorrhoidal artery. It gives off no branch at its concave part; but, from the convex, the three Arteriæ colicæ sinistræ arise.

MÉSENTERIC DISEASE, Tabes mesenterica.

MÉSENTERIC GLANDS are the lymphatic ganglions of the mesentery. Through them, the chyloferous vessels pass to the thoracic duct. Their uses are unknown. When diseased, nutrition is interfered with, and atrophy produced.

MÉSENTERIC HERNIA. If one of the layers of the mesentery be torn by a blow, whilst the other remains in its natural state, the intestines may insinuate themselves into the aperture, and form a kind of hernia. It is not known during life.

MÉSENTERIC PLEXUSES are furnished by the solar plexus, and have been distinguished into superior and inferior; like the mesenteric arteries which they accompany.

MÉSENTERIC or MESARAIC VEINS are two in number, and belong to the vena porta. They are distinguished into, 1. The Superior mesenteric or mesaraic or great mesaraic. This trunk receives, from above to below and on the right side, the three venæ colicæ dextræ and the Gastro-epiploica dextra. Into its left side, the veins of the small intestine open. It passes in front of the transverse portion of the duodenum; and, behind the pancreas, unites with the splenic vein to concur in the formation of the vena porta.

The inferior or lesser mesenteric vein corresponds to the artery of the same name, and opens into the splenic, near the union of that vein with the superior mesenteric, and behind the pancreas.

MÉSENTÉRIQUE, Mesenteric.

MÉSENTERITIS, Mesenteritis.

MÉSENTERITIS, Mesenterii'itis, Empres'ma peritonii'itis mesenterica, Enteri'itis mesenterica, Inflammation of the mesentery; from μεσεντεριον, 'mesentery,' and itis, denoting inflammation. The pain is here deeper seated and more immediately in the mesenteric region. The external tenderness is less than in some of the other varieties of peritonitis.

MÉSENTERIUM, Mesentery — m. Crassum, Mesocolon.

MÉSENTERON, Mesentery.

MÉSENTEROPHTHISIS, Tabes mesenterica.

MÉS'ENTERY, Mesenterium, Mesaraion, Mesara'um, Medi'um, Membra'na pinguis intestino'rum, Laetes, Mesenteron, Mesera'um, Mesora'um, Medium intesti'num, Epichor'dis; from μεσος, 'in the middle,' and εντερον, 'intestine.' (F.) Mésentère. A term in anatomy, applied to several duplicatures of the peritoneum, which maintain the different portions of the intestinal canal in their respective situations; allowing, however, more or less motion. They are formed of two laminæ, between which are contained the corresponding portion of intestine and the vessels that pass to it. One only of these duplicatures has received the name mesentery, properly so called. This belongs to the small intestine, which it suspends and retains in situ. Its posterior margin, which is the smallest, is straight, and descends obliquely from the left side of the body of the second lumbar vertebra to the right iliac fossa. Its anterior margin is curved, undulating, plaited, and corresponds to the whole length of the small intestine. The mesentery contains, between the two laminæ which form it, a number of lymphatic ganglions; the trunks and branches of the mesenteric vessels; the nervous plexuses accompanying them, and many lacteals and lymphatics.

MESERA, Tutia.

MESERÆUM, Mesentery.

MESERAION, Mesentery.

MESIAL, from μεσος, 'in the middle.' Relating or appertaining to the middle.

MESIAL PLANE, an imaginary plane, dividing the head, neck, and trunk into similar halves, towards right and left. Every aspect towards this plane is mesial; and every aspect towards right or left is lateral; every lateral aspect being dextral or sinistral.

MESIAMUM, Aniceton.

MESMERIC, Mesmericus; from Anthony Mesmer, the great promulgator of animal magnetism. Relating to mesmerism or animal magnetism:—as the 'mesmeric state,' 'mesmeric sleep,' &c. &c.

MESMERISM, Magnetism, animal.

MESMERIST. A practiser of, or believer in, mesmerism.

MESMERIZA'TION, Magnetiza'tion. The act of mesmerizing. The state of being mesmerized.

MESMERIZED, Mesmeriza'tus, Mag'netized. Affected with mesmerism or animal magnetism. When the person is in a state of 'magnetic sleep,' he is said to be hypnotized.

MESMERIZER, Animal Magneti'zer, Mag'neti'zer. One who practises mesmerism.

MESMERO-PHRENOLOGY, Phreno-magnetism.

MESO, μεσος, 'in the middle.' A prefix to certain words.

MESOBREGMATE, see Cranium.

MESOCÆ'CUM, (meso and cæcum). A name given to a duplicature of the peritoneum, (in some persons only,) at the posterior part of the cæcum.

MÉSOCÉPHALE, Medulla oblongata, Pons Varolii.

MESOCION'DRIAC, Mesochondri'acus; from meso, and χονδρος, 'cartilage.' A name given by Boerhaave to fleshy fibres situate between the cartilaginous rings of the trachea.

MESOCOLIC, Mesocol'icus. Same etymon as the next. Belonging or relating to the mesocolon.

MESOCOLON, Mesoco'lum, Mesenter'ium crasum, from meso, and κωνον, 'the colon.' A name given to the duplicatures of the peritoneum, which fix the different parts of the colon to the abdominal parietes. It has received different names, according to its situation. The right lumbar mesocolon fixes the ascending colon to the corresponding lumbar region. The transverse mesocolon arises from the concave arch of the colon, and forms a septum between the epigastric and umbilical regions. Its inferior portion is continuous with the mesentery. The left lumbar mesocolon, which contains the ascending colon, is continuous below with the Iliac mesocolon. The last includes between its layers the sigmoid flexure of the colon, and ends in the mesorectum. Under the right kidney, it is narrow and firm, and forms the right lig'ament of the colon: at the under end of the left kidney, it forms the left lig'ament of the colon.

MESOCRANIUM, Sinciput.

MESOCRANUM, Sinciput.

MESODERMUM, Corpus mucosum.

MESODME, Mediastinum.

MESODMITIS, from μεσοδμη, (μεσος, 'middle,' and δομος, 'a building,') 'the mediastinum,' and itis, 'inflammation.' Mesotachi'tis, Mediastini'tis, Inflamma'tio mediasti'ni. Inflammation of the mediastinum.

MESOËPIDID'YMIS, from μεσος, 'middle,' and επίδομις, 'epididymis.' A double serous fold, like the mesocolon, formed by the tunica vaginalis passing from the body of the epididymis, and uniting it to the testicle.

MESOGASTRIUM, Umbilical region.

MESOGASTRIUM MÜLLERI. A portion of mesentery, which passes from the vertebral column to the left curvature of the stomach.

MESOGLOSSUS, Genioglossus.

MESOGLOTTUS, Genioglossus.

MESOGONIUM, Internodium.

MESOLO'BAR. Belonging or relating to the Mésolobe or Corpus callo'sum.

MESOLOBAR ARTERIES, Arte'riæ mesolob'icæ, A. cor'poris callo'si cer'ebrî, are the arteries of the corpus callosum.

MÉSLOBE, Corpus callosum.

MESOMER'IA, from meso, and μερος, 'the thigh.' The parts of the body situate between the thighs and hips.

MESOMERION, Perinæum.

MESOMPHALUM, Umbilicus.

MESOPHLEB'IUM, from meso, and φλεψ, 'a vein;' Interve'nium. The space between two veins.

MESOPH'RYON, Glabell'a, Gabel'la, Intercil'ium, Meto'pium, Nasal eminence, from meso, and οφρυα, 'the eyebrows.' The part between the eyebrows.

MESOPLEURIUM, Intercostal space.

MESOPLEURIUS, Intercostal.

MESORÆUM, Mesentery.

MESOR'CHIUM, from meso, and ορχις, 'a testicle.' A duplicature of the peritoneum, which supports the testicle in its passage from the abdomen into the scrotum.—Seiler.

MESOREC'TUM. A hybrid word; from meso, and rectum, 'the intestine rectum.' A triangular reflection, formed by the peritoneum, between the posterior surface of the rectum and the anterior surface of the sacrum. Between the two layers of which the meso rectum is composed are found much areolar tissue, and the termination of the inferior mesenteric vessels.

MESOS, Meso.

MESOSCEOCLE, Hernia, perineal.

MESOSCELOM, Perinæum.

MESOSCELOPHY'MA, from Mesosceolon, (meso, and σκελος, 'leg,') 'perinæum,' and φυμα, 'swelling.' A tumour of the perinæum.

MESOTH'ENAR, from μεσος, and εναρ, 'the thenar,' 'the palm of the hand.' A muscle, which carries the thumb towards the palm. Winslow applied the term to the abductor pollicis, united to the deep-seated portion of the flexor brevis pollicis.

MESOT'ICA, from μεσος, 'middle.' Diseases affecting the parenchyma. Pravity in the quantity or quality of the intermediate or connecting substance of organs; without inflammation, fever, or other derangement of the general health. The first Order, class Ecce'rica of Good.

MESOTËCHITIS, Mesodmitis.

MESOTËCHIUM, Mediastinum.

MESOTËCHIUM, Mediastinum.

MES'PILUS, Mespilus German'ica seu domes'tica. Ord. Rosaceæ. The medlar, (F.) Néflier. The fruit (F.) Nêfle, and seeds of the medlar have both been used medicinally:—the immature fruit as an astringent, and the seeds in nephritic diseases. See Cratægus Aria and Sorbus acuparia.

MESPILUS ARIA, Cratægus aria—m. Domestic, Mespilus, Sorbus domestica—m. Germanica, Mespilus—m. Intermedia, Mespilus oxyacantha—m. Lævigata, Mespilus oxyacantha.

MESPILUS OXYACANTHA, M. Oxyacanthoides seu interme'dia seu læviga'ta, Oxyacantha, Spina alba, White Hawthorn. (F.) Aubepine. The flowers of this uncommon European plant are sometimes used in infusion as a pectoral.

MESPILUS OXYCANTHOIDES, Mespilus oxyacantha.

META, μετα, Meth, 'μεθ', 'with,' 'together with,' 'after,' 'change of form and place.' A common prefix to words. Hence:

METABASIS, Transitus, Metabolē, Metabol'ia, Metabol'ogē, Metallax'is, from μεταβαίνω, (meta, and βαίνω, 'I go,') 'I digress.' A change of remedy, practice, &c.—Hippocrates.

METABOLE, Metabasis, Transformation.

METABOLELOGY, Metabolelog'ia; from μεταβολη, (meta, and βαλλω), 'change,' and λογος, 'a description.' A description of the changes which supervene in the course of a disease.

METABOLIA, Metabasis.

METABOLIC, Metabol'icus, from μεταβολη, 'change.' Appertaining to change or transformation.

METABOLIC FORCE. Vis metabol'ica. A term employed by Schwann for the power possessed by living cells of changing the character of the substances brought in contact with them.

METACARPAL, Metacarpia'nus, (F.) Métacarpien. From meta, and καρπος, 'wrist.' Relating or belonging to the metacarpus.

METACARPAL ARTERY, Arteria dorsalis metacarp'i, arises from the radial, at the moment it engages itself in the upper extremity of the abductor indicis. It descends obliquely upon the back of the hand. Its branches are distributed to the abductor indicis, and the integuments: some communicate with the dorsalis carpi.

METACARPAL ARTICULATIONS are those by which the last four metacarpal bones are united together at their upper extremity.

METACARPAL BONES, or bones which compose the metacarpus, are five in number; and distinguished into first, second, third, &c., beginning from the outer or radial side. They are articulated by their superior extremity with the bones of the second range of the carpus; and by the lower with the first phalanges.

METACARPAL LIGAMENT, Inferior palmar Ligament, is a fibrous band, stretched transversely before the inferior extremities of the last four metacarpal bones, which it keeps in their respective positions.

METACARPAL PHALANGES are the first phalanges of the fingers; so called, because they are articulated with the bones of the metacarpus.

METACARPAL RANGE or row of the carpal bones, (F.) Rangée métacarpienne du carpe, is the lower row of carpal bones; so called because they are articulated with the bones of the metacarpus. It is composed of the trapezium, trapezoides, magnum, and unciniforme.

METACARPEUS, Abductor metacarpi minimi digiti.

MÉTACARPIEN, Metacarpal—m. du Petit doigt, Opponens minimi digiti—m. du Pouce, Opponens pollicis.

METACARPION, Metacarpus.

METACARPO-PHALANGÆUS POLLICIS, Abductor pollicis manus.

METACARPO-PHALANGIAN, Metacarpophalangia'nus, Metacarpophalangal, (F.) Métacarpophalangien. That which belongs to the metacarpus and phalanges.

METACARPO-PHALANGIAN or METACARPO-PHALANGAL ARTICULATIONS are formed by the bones of the metacarpus and the corresponding phalanges. In these articulations, the bony surfaces are incrustated with cartilage, covered by a synovial membrane, and kept in connexion by means of an anterior and two lateral ligaments.

MÉTACARPO-PHALANGIEN LATÉRAL SUS-PALMAIRE, ET MÉTACARPO-PHALANGIEN LATÉRAL, Interosseus manus.

METACARPUS, same etymon as Metacarpal. Metacarp'pion, Postbrachia'le, Postcar'pium, Torsus manus, (F.) Métacarpe. The part of the hand comprised between the carpus and fingers. It is composed of five parallel bones, called metacarpal; forming the back of the hand, externally, and the palm internally.

METACERASMA, Cerasma.

METACHEIRIXIS, Surgery.

METACHIRISIS, Surgery.

METACHIRISMUS, Surgery.

METACHORESIS, Metastasis.

METACHYSIS, Transfusion.

METACINEMA, Metastasis.

METACINESIS, Metastasis.

METACONDYLE, see Phalanx.

METACYE'SIS, from meta, and κνυσις, 'pregnancy;' Graviditas extra-uteri'na secundaria. Extra-uterine pregnancy in which the fetus is at first in the uterus, but subsequently in some other place.

METADERMATOSIS, from meta, and δερμα, 'skin.' A morbid development of the epidermis or epithelium.

METAGENESIS, (F.) Metagéneſe, Alternate generation, from μετα, and γενεσις, 'generation.' A term, proposed by Professor Owen, to express the changes of form, which one animal species undergoes in a series of successively produced individuals, extending from the one developed from the ovum to that which becomes the imago or last perfected individual. This term he employs in contradistinction to metamorphosis, which he restricts to the changes of form undergone by one and the same individual. See Generation, alternate.

METAL, Metal'um. From μεταλλω, 'I seek after.' A class of simple, combustible bodies; distinguished from others by considerable specific gravity; a particular splendour; almost total opacity; insolubility in water; and the property they have of ringing when struck. Metals have no effect, except of a mechanical nature, when taken into the stomach; unless they have already undergone, or undergo in the stomach, oxidation or union with an acid; when, at times, deleterious compounds may be formed. Copper cents; half-pence; quicksilver; lead, have frequently been swallowed in the metallic state with impunity. Tin and mercury are the only metals prescribed for a mechanical effect; the former as an anthelmintic,—the latter, idly enough, in cases of fancied intussusception.

MÉTAL DES CLOCHES, Bell-metal.

METALLAGE, Metabasis.

METALLAXIS, Metallage.

METALLIC VOICE, Tintement métallique.

METALLODYNIA, from μεταλλον, 'a metal,' and δωνη, 'pain.' Pain owing to the injurious influence of a metal—as lead, quicksilver, &c.

METALLUM, Metal—m. Hæmatopoeticum, ferrum.

METAMORPHOSIA, Phantasmascop'ia, Phantasmatoscop'ia, from μεταμορφωω, (μετα and μορφη, 'form,') 'I transform, and οψις, 'vision.' Suffusio, S. Oculo'rum seu metamorphop'sis seu myo'des, Imagination (Maître-Jean); Crupe'ia, Marmar'ygē, Marmor'ygē, Mac'ula ante oculos volitan'tes, Mara'gia, Oculi marmar'ygō'des, Vis'io phantas'matum, Visus defigura'tus, False sight, (F.) Berlue. Aberration of the sense of sight, which transmits the image of imaginary objects. This affection sometimes depends on a slight opacity in the transparent parts of the eye; the cornea, crystalline, or vitreous humour, when it is symptomatic and of no consequence. At other times, it appears to be idiopathic; and occurs particularly in those who have been in the habit of constantly fixing their eyes on very brilliant or small bodies. The objects fancied to be seen are various. They are sometimes circular, perpetually moving; or shining, or black spots, cobwebs, insects, or pieces of wool—when they are often termed Musca seu Flocci volitantes, (F.) Mouches volantes, and the condition Visus musca'rum, Scotom'ata, Suffu'sio Myo'des, Myo'deop'sia, Myi'dop'sia, Myodeopsia, Myodesop'ia, Visus musca'rum. These appearances sometimes continue for a few days; being dependent on the state of the nerves of the individual at the time; or they may exist for life, and ultimately impair the sight. Certain of them change their position, and appear to be seated in the humours of the eye, and—it has been supposed—in the vitreous humour more especially: hence the term eutohy'aloid musca applied to them.

If the affection be symptomatic, it is of but little moment. If idiopathic, and connected with any excitement of the brain, which is not often the case, attention will have to be paid to that organ.

METAMORPHOSIS, see Metagenesis.

METAMORPHOSIS VENTRICULI GELATINIFORMIS, Gastromalacia.

METANGISMOS, Decantation.

METAPEDIUM, Metatarsus.

METAPHRENON, Dorsum.

METAPHYTEIA, Transplantation.

METAPODIUM, Metatarsus.

METAPOROPE'A, Metaporopoe'sis, from meta, poros, 'a pore,' and ποιω, 'to make.' The change produced in the minute pores, in the capillary extremities of vessels,—when they pass from the morbid to the healthy condition.—Galen.

METAPTO'SIS, Metaschematis'mus, Metaschemat'is. Mutation, change; from μεταπρω, (μετα, and πρω, 'I fall,') 'I digress.' Any change in the form or seat of a disease. Transformation.

METARRHŒ'A, Metar'rhy'sis, from meta, and ρω, 'I flow.' Reflux. The transfer of a disease from without to within, or from one part to another.

METARRHYSIS, Metarrhœa.

METASCHEMATISIS, Metaptosis.

METASCHEMATISMUS, Metaptosis.

METASTASIS, Metachore'sis, Metacine'ma, Metacine'sis, from μεταστημι, (μετα, and στημι, 'I place,') 'I change place.' Displacement, Translocation. A change in the seat of a disease; attributed, by the Humorists, to the translation of the morbid matter to a part different from that which it had previously occupied: and by the Solidists, to the displacement of the irritation. It has also been used in the same extensive sense as Metaptosis. Disputes have often been indulged, whether a case of metastasis ought not rather to be esteemed one of extension of the disease. The phenomena of gout and acute rheumatism are in favour of metastasis occasionally supervening.

METASTASIS LACTIS, Galactoplasia, Phlegmatia dolens.

METASTAT'IC, Metastat'icus, (F.) Métastatique. Belonging or relating to metastasis. A metastatic crisis is one produced by metastasis:—a metastatic affection, one caused by metastasis, &c. See Abscess, metastatic.

METASYN'CRISIS, from meta, and συγκρινω, (συγ, and κρινω, 'I choose,' 'I judge,') Recomposition. A word employed by some disciples of Asclepiades. This physician supposed, that all animals are formed by the union or assemblage of atoms. He designated all bodies by the word συγκριματα, which signifies 'assemblage.' Συγκρινοσθαι, 'to be assembled,' was, with him, synonymous with 'to exist;' and διακρινοσθαι, 'to separate,' was, with him, synonymous with 'to dissolve,' 'to cease to exist.' The word Metasyncrisis was invented to express the recomposition of bodies after their momentary dissolution. Some have rendered the word by the Latin Recompositione.

METASYNCRIT'IC, Metasyncrit'icus, Recompositionat'ivus. Belonging or relating to metasyncrisis. A name formerly given to medicines to which was attributed the virtue of producing the metasyncrisis or regeneration of the body, or some of its parts.

METASYNCRITIC CYCLE meant a determinate series of remedies employed for this purpose.

METATAR'SAL, Metatar'seus, (F.) Métatarsien. Same etymon as metatarsus. Relating or belonging to the metatarsus.

METATARSAI ARTERY, Artère sus-métatarsienne of Chaussier, arises from the Arteria dorsalis Tarsi; passes transversely over the back of the foot; and furnishes, at its convexity, which is anterior, three branches, called A. interos'cea dorsales Pedis. These branches are distributed in the interosseous spaces.

METATARSAI ARTICULATIONS are those resulting from the junction of the metatarsal bones with each other. They are strengthened, behind, by dorsal and plantar ligaments; and before, by a transverse metatarsal ligament, which is plantar, and has the greatest analogy to the inferior transverse metacarpal ligament.

METATARSAI BONES, (F.) Os métatarsiens, are five in number, and distinguished by their number; first, second, third, &c., reckoning from the outer side.

METATARSAI PHALANGES are the first phalanges of the toes; so called because they are united to the metatarsus.

METATARSAI ROW—(F.) Rangée métatarsienne—of the bones of the tarsus, is the second row, or that contiguous to the metatarsus; comprehending the cuboides and three cuneiform bones: some add the scaphoides.

METATARSEUS, see Abductor minimi digiti pedis.

MÉTATARSIIEN, Metatarsal.

METATARSO-PHALAN'GIAN, Metatarso-phalangia'nus, Metatarso-phalangal. Relating to the metatarsus and phalanges.

METATARSO-PHALANGIAN or METATARSO-PHALANGAL ARTICULATIONS are formed by the bones of the metatarsus and the corresponding phalanges. They bear the greatest analogy to the metacarpophalangian articulations.

MÉTATARSO-PHALANGIEN-LATÉRAL, see Interossei pedis—m. Sous-phalangien transversal du premier orteil, Transversus pedis.

METATAR'SUS, Metatar'sium, Metape'dium, Metapo'dium, Præcor'dium seu So'lum pedis, Vestig'ium pedis, (F.) Métatarse, from μετα, 'after,' and ταπος, 'the tarsus.' That part of the foot which is situate between the tarsus and toes, corresponding with the metacarpus. It is composed of five parallel bones; one to each toe. Like the metacarpal bones, they are developed from two points of ossification.

METATH'ESIS, from μεταθημι, (μετα, and θημι, 'to place,') 'I change place.' Transposition. An operation, by which a morbid agent is removed from one place to another, where it may produce less disturbance in the exercise of the functions:—as, for example, in the operation of depressing cataract, or when calculus in the urethra is pushed back into the bladder. Also, Derivation.

METATIO, Mensuration.

METATOC'IA, from meta, and τοκος, 'birth.' Parturition in a preternatural manner. Preternatural labour.

METATOPTOSIS, Diadexis.

METENSOMATOSIS, Incorporation.

METEORISMUS, Sublimation, Tympanites.

METEOROL'OGY, Meteorolog'ia, from μετεωρος, (meta, and αιωρος, 'I lift up.')

'a meteor,' and λογος, 'a discourse.' The science, whose object is a knowledge of the origin, formation, appearance, &c. of meteors. The state of the atmosphere has a most important bearing upon the health of animals. Every epidemic affection has its causes seated there. Meteorological conditions have, hence, ever been attended to by the physician for the purpose of detecting the precise character of any particular epidemic influence. The barometer, thermometer, and hygrometer are the instruments used with this intent—to detect, as well the varying weight or pressure, and the temperature, as the moisture. Perhaps, of the three conditions, the last exerts more influence in the production of disease than either of the others. Our knowledge, however, of this part of physics is extremely limited and unsatisfactory.

METER, μετρον, 'a measure.' A suffix to words denoting 'a measure,' as in Barometer, Pleximeter, &c.

METH. A prefix to terms. Same signification as Meta.

METHÆMACHYMA, Transfusion.

METHÆMATA; from meth, and αιμα, 'blood.' The capillary or intermediate system of vessels in which the blood undergoes the change from venous to arterial, and conversely.—Marshall Hall. See Capillary vessels.

METHE, Temulentia.

METHEGLIN, Melizomum.

METHIEMERINUS, Quotidian.

METHOD, Meth'odus, from meth, and οδος, 'way.' This word has different acceptations in the sciences. In medicine, curative method, meth'odus meden'di, is the methodical treatment of disease.

METHOD OF COUNTING, Method, numerical—m. Mariano's, see Lithotomy.

METHOD, NUMERICAL, Method of Observation or of Counting, of Louis, (F.) Méthode numérique, consists in observing every case and every symptom of a case numerically, so as to ensure, as far as practicable, accuracy of observation; and to enable us, by the analysis and collation of such facts, to deduce general laws and conclusions. Also, the application of numbers to the study of disease. See Statistics, medical.

MÉTHODE NUMÉRIQUE, Method, numerical. Statistics, medical—m. Perturbatrix, Perturbatrix (Medicina)—m. Stibio-dermique, see Unguentum antimonii.

METHODICS, Methodists.

MÉTHODIQUES, Methodists.

METH'ODISTS, Methodical sect, Method'ics, (F.) Méthodistes, Méthodiques. Same etymon. A sect of physicians whose doctrine was in vogue after that of the Empirics and Dogmatists, towards the end of the first century. According to the Methodists, of whom Themison was the chief, almost every disease is dependent on contraction or relaxation—strictum or laxum. To these two causes, they added a third—mixed or compound—to include those affections which partook of the two characters. The doctrine, medicina method'ica, resembled, in some respects, that of Brown.

METHODOL'OGY (MEDICAL), Methodolog'ia Med'ica, from μεθοδος, 'method,' and λογος,

'a discourse.' A word used, by the French more especially, to signify method applied to the study of any science. Medical Methodology, consequently, means method applied to the study of medicine.

METHODUS CATALEPTICA, see Cataleptic—m. Celsiana, see Lithotomy—m. Curatoria, Therapeutics.

METHODUS DERIVAT'ORIA. The derivative or revellent system of treatment.

METHODUS ENDERMAT'ICA seu ENDERM'ICA, see Endermic—m. Franconiana, see Lithotomy—m. Guytoniana, see Lithotomy—m. Medendi, Method of cure, Therapeutics.

METHOMA'NIA, from μεθη, 'drunkenness,' and μανια, 'mania.' An irresistible desire for intoxicating substances. Temulentia.

METHU, see Temulentia, Wine.

METHYLE, HYDRATED OXIDE OF, Spiritus pyroxylicus.

METHYLENE, BIHYDRATE OF, Spiritus pyroxylicus.

METHYSIS, Temulentia.

METHYSMUS, Temulentia.

METHYS'TICUS, from μεθη, 'drunkenness.' That which causes, or pertains to, drunkenness.

METHYSTOPHYL'LUM GLAUCUM. A South African plant, Nat. Ord. Amyridaceæ, an infusion of whose leaves is pleasant to the taste, and is used in bronchitis, asthma, and other thoracic diseases. With the Bushmen and others, it is a favourite beverage, and is called by them Boschjesmansthee, 'Bushman's tea.' It is, also, chewed.

MÉTIS, Hybrid.

MÉTISSAGE, Crossing.

METODONT'ASIS, from meta, and οδοντιασις, 'dentition.' Faulty development of the teeth.

METOPAGES, Symphyccephalus.

METOPANTRA, Frontal sinuses.

METOPANTRAL'GIA, from μετωπον (meta, and ωψ, 'the eye') 'the forehead,' αντρον, 'a cavity,' and αλγος, 'pain.' Pain in the frontal sinuses.

METOPANTRITIS, Inflammat'io sinuum front'alium, from metopantra, and itis, denoting inflammation. Inflammation of the frontal sinuses.

METOPION, Bubon galbanum.

METOPIMUM, Mesophryon.

METOPODYNIA, Neuralgia frontalis.

METOPON, Front, Frontal bone.

METOPOS'COPY, Metoposcop'ia, from μετωπον, (meta, and ωψ, 'the eye,') 'the forehead,' and σκοπειν, 'to view.' The art of knowing the temperament and character of a person by inspecting the traits of his forehead or face. See Physiognomy.

MËTRA, μητρα, Uterus.

MËTRÆ, Secundines.

MËTRÆMORRHAGIA, Metrorrhagia.

MËTRÆMORRHŌID'ES, from metra, and αιμορροιδες, 'hemorrhoids.' Hemorrhoids or varicose veins at the orifice of the uterus.

MËTRAL'GIA, Metrodyn'ia, from metra, and αλγος, 'pain.' Pain in the uterus.

MËTRANÆMIA, from metra, and ανæmia. An anæmic condition of the uterus.

MËTRANASTROPHE, Uterus, inversion of the.

MËTRANEURYSMUS, Metreuryisma.

MËTRATRE'SIA, Imperforat'io u'teri, from metra, and ατρασια, 'imperforation.' An unnatural closure of the uterus.

MËTRATROPH'IA, from metra, a, 'privative,' and τροφη, 'nourishment.' Atrophy or want of development of the uterus.

MËTRAUX'Ë, Hypertroph'ia seu Sarco'sis uteri, from metra, and αυξη, 'increase.' Hypertrophy of the uterus.

METRECTA'SIA, from metra, and εκτασις, 'dilatation.' Dilatation of the womb.

METRELCO'SIS, Methelco'sis, from metra, and ελκος, 'an ulcer.' Ulceration of the uterus.

METREMPHRA'X'IS, from metra, and εμφρασσω, 'I obstruct.' Obstruction of the womb or of the vessels of the womb—Infarctus uteri. A name under which some authors have confounded chronic inflammation of that viscus, and the different degenerations to which it is exposed.

METREMPHYSEMA, Physometra.

METREN'CHYTA, Metren'chytes, from metra, and εγχυω, 'I inject.' Injection of the uterus. Substances injected into the uterus are called Metren'chyta.

METREURYS'MA, Metranenry'smus, from metra, and ευρυς, 'dilated.' A morbid dilatation of the womb.

METRHELCO'SIS, Metrelco'sis.

METRYMENITIS, see Metritis.

METRIOPATH'IA, from μετριος, 'tempered,' and παθος, 'affection.' State of an individual whose passions are temperate.

METRI'TIS, from metra, and itis, denoting inflammation. Febris uterina, Hysteri'tis, Emp're'sma Hysteri'tis, Inflammat'io Uteri, Metrop'hlogo'sis, Inflammation of the Uterus or Womb, (F.) Inflammation de la matrice. The characteristic symptoms of this affection are:—pain, swelling, and tenderness in the hypogastric region; with heat, pain, and tenderness of the os uteri; vomiting, smallness, and frequency of pulse. It occurs most frequently after delivery, Lochometri'tis, when there is generally suppression of the lochial discharge. The treatment must be vigorous,—bleeding early, so as to make a decided impression; followed by a full dose of opium, fomentations, blisters, &c.

Acute inflammation of the womb, seated in its internal membrane, Endo-metri'tis, Metrymenit'is, Enmetri'tis, has been called Inflammat'io catarrah'lis uteri or Acute catarrah, (F.) Catarrhæ aigu, of that viscus. It is known by the discharge of a clear, stringy fluid per vaginam; preceded by pains, which, from the hypogastric region, shoot to the thighs, groins, &c., with more or less fever. It requires the antiphlogistic treatment. Chronic metritis sometimes succeeds the acute. To it must be referred the indurations, observed in the uterus, and many of the leucorrhæal discharges to which females are subject.

METRITIS RHEUMATICA, Metrorrheuma—m. Septica, Metrocace—m. Venosa, see Phlebitis.

METROBLENNORRHEA, Leucorrhæa uteri.

METROBLENNOZEMIA, Leucorrhæa uteri.

METROBOTRYTES, Cauliflower excrescence of the uterus.

METROC'ACE, Metri'tis septic'a, from metra, and κακος, 'evil.' Putrescency or gangrene of the uterus.

METROCAMP'SIS, Hysteroloxia.

METROCARCINO'MA, Hystero-carcino'ma, Uteri carcino'ma, Cancer uteri, from metra, and καρκινωμα, 'cancer.' Cancer of the uterus.

METROCATARRHUS, Leucorrhæa uteri.

METROCELE, Hysterocele.

METROCELIDES, Nævus.

METROCHOLO'SIS, from metra, and χολος, 'bile.' Febris puerperal'is bilio'sa.

METRODYNIA, Metralgia.

METROHÆMIA, Hypermetrohémie, from metra, and αιμα, 'blood.' Hyperæmia or congestion of blood in the uterus.

METROHEMORRHAGE, Metrorrhagia.

METROLEUCORRHEA, Leucorrhæa uteri.

METROLOXIA, Hysteroloxia.

METROMALACOMA, Hystermalacia.

METROMALACOSIS, Hystermalacia.

METROMANIA, Nymphomania.

METROMY'ZEUS, from metra, and μυζω, 'I suck.' An exhausting syringe, to be applied to the os uteri, for exhausting the womb in cases of amenorrhæa.

METRONCUS, Hysteroncus.

METROPARAL'YSIS, from metra, and παρ'αλυσις, 'paralysis.' Paralysis of the uterus.

METROPATH'IA, from metra, and παθος, 'affection.' An affection of the womb.

MÉTRO-PÉRITONITE PUERPÉRALE, see Peritonitis.

METROPERITONITIS, from metra, and 'peritonitis.' Inflammat'io uteri et peritonæi. Inflammation of the uterus and peritoneum. Puerperal Fever. See Peritonitis.

METROPHLEBITIS, from metra, φλεψ, 'a vein, and itis, denoting inflammation. Inflammation of the veins of the uterus.

METROPHLEBITIS PUERPÉRALE, see Phlebitis.

METROPHLOGOSIS, Metritis.

METROPHTHI'SIS, Phthi'sis uteri'na, from metra, and φθιω, 'I consume.' Consumption from ulceration of the uterus—Ul'cera seu Helco'sis uteri.

METROPHYMA, Hysteroncus.

METROPLETHO'RA, Metryperæ'mia, from metra, and πληθωρα, 'fulness.' Congestion or hyperæmia of the uterus.

METROPOL'YPUS, Hys'tero-pol'ypus, Polyypus Uteri, from metra, and πολυypus. Polypus of the uterus.

METROPROPTOSIS, Prolapsus uteri.

METROPTOSIS, Prolapsus uteri.

METORRHAG'IA, Metæorrhag'ia, Hæ-morrhagia uteri'na seu uteri, Sanguifl'uus uteri'nis, Sanguinis stillicid'ium ab Utero, Fluor uteri'ni sanguinis, Profl'uivium Sanguinis ex utero, Hystero'rrhag'ia sanguinea, Hystero'rrhæ'a, Hæmorrhæ'a uteri'na (of some), Menorrhag'ia (of some), Hæmatome'tra, Hæmatoma'tra, Uterine Hemorrhage, Hemorrhage from the Womb, Metrohæmorrhage, (F.) Hémorrhagie de la Matrice, Pertes, Pertes utérines rouges, P. de sang; from metra, and ρρηνυμι, 'I break forth.' An effusion of blood from the inner surface of the uterus, either at the menstrual or other periods; but in a greater quantity than proper. Uterine hemorrhage may be caused by those influences which produce hemorrhage in general. It happens, however, more frequently during pregnancy, and during or after delivery, when the vascular system of the uterus is so circumstanced as to favour its occurrence more than at other periods. The termination of metrorrhagia is usually favourable. Should it, however, be very copious, or frequently recur; or should it happen to a great extent after delivery, death may take place very speedily; and, in some cases, without the discharge being perceptible; constituting internal hemorrhage.

Uterine hemorrhage may be active or passive; requiring obviously a different treatment. The main management is similar to that of hemorrhage in general;—the horizontal posture; acid drinks; free admission of cool air; cold applications to the loins, thighs, and abdomen; injection of cold water, even of iced water, into the vagina; plugging the vagina, so as to prevent the discharge per vaginam, and thus induce a coagulum in the mouths of the bleeding vessels. Such will be the special plan adopted where the hemorrhage has occurred in one not recently delivered. In uterine hemorrhage after delivery, the same cooling plan must be followed; but, as the flow of blood is owing to the uterus not contracting so as to constrict its vessels, pressure must be made on the abdomen to aid this; and, if necessary, the hand must be introduced into the uterus to stimulate it to contraction. Should the female be excessively reduced, so as to render the accoucheur apprehensive that she may expire from loss of blood, brandy may be exhibited. The profuse exhibition of opium in such cases is, at least, a doubtful plan.

Transfusion has, at times, been practised as a last resource.

METRORRHEUMA, Rheumatis'mus U'teri, Hyster'al'gia rheumat'ica seu catarrh'al'is, Met'r'itis rheumat'ica, (F.) Rhumatisme de l'utérus; from metra, and ρῆμα, 'defluxion,' 'rheumatism.' Rheumatism of the uterus.

METRORRHENIS, Uterus, rupture of the.

METRORRHE'A, from metra, and ρῆω, 'I flow.' A protracted discharge of any fluid from the uterus.

METROSALPINX, Tube, Fallopian.

METROSCIRRHUS, Hysteroscir'rhus, Scir'rhus seu Carcin'o'ma u'teri, from metra, and σκιρρῶς, 'scirrhous.' Scirrhous of the uterus.

METROSCOLIOMA, Hysteroloxia.

METROSCOPE, Metrosco'pium, from metra, and σκοπεῖν, 'to view.' An instrument, invented by M. Nauche, for listening to the sounds of the heart of the fœtus, in utero-gestation, when the sounds and movements are imperceptible through the parietes of the abdomen. The extremity of the instrument—the first notion of which was given to M. Nauche by the stethoscope of Laënnec—is introduced into the vagina and applied against the neck of the uterus.

METROSIDEROS GUMMIFERA, see Kino.

METROSTERE'SIS, from metra, and στερησις, 'privation.' Extirpation of the uterus. Want of uterus.

METROSYNIZE'SIS, Hysterosynize'sis, from metra, and συνίζωσις, 'running together.' Morbid union of the uterus to adjacent parts.

MÉTROTOME, Hysterotomus.

METROTOMIA, Cæsarean section.

METRYPERÆMIA, Metroplethora.

METRYPERÆSTHESIS, see Uterus, irritable.

MEU, Æthusa meum.

MEULIÈRE, Molar.

MEUM, Æthusa meum—m. Anethifolium, Æthusa meum—m. Athamanticum, Æthusa meum.

MEURTRISSURE, Contusion.

MEVIUM, Syphilis.

MEZEA, Genital organs.

MEZEREON, Daphne mezereum.

MEZEREUM ACETATUM, see Daphne mezereum.

MIAMMA, Miasma.

MIANSIS, Miasma.

MIARIA, Miasma.

MIAS'MA, Miasm, μαϊαμα, 'a stain,' from μαίω, 'I contaminate.' Miam'ma, Mian'sis, Mia'ria, Mias'mus, Inquinamen'tum, Molyn'sis, Contag'ium. The word miasm has, by some, been employed synonymously with contagion. It is now used more definitely for any emanation, either from the bodies of the sick, or from animal and vegetable substances, or from the earth, especially in marshy districts, (Marsh poison, Efflu'vium palus'træ, Gus palus'træ, (F.) Intoxication des Marais,) which may exert a morbid influence on those who are exposed to its action. To these terrestrial emanations—the Koino-mias'mata of Dr. E. Miller, of New York—the Italians give the name aria cattiva, but, more commonly, malaria ('bad air'); a word which has been adopted into other languages. The deleterious effluvia, originating from the decomposition of matter derived from the human body, have been called by Dr. Miller, Idiomias'mata; the epithets Koino and Idio being derived respectively from κοινος, 'common,' and ιδιος, 'personal.' Of the miasms which arise either from the animal body or from the most unhealthy situations, we know, chemically, nothing. All that we do know is, that, under such circumstances, emanations take place, capable of causing disease in many of those who are exposed to their action.

MIASMAT'IC, Miasmatic'us. Belonging or relating to miasmata. Sauvages, in his classification of diseases according to their etiology, has a class under the name Morbi miasmatic'i. A fever that arises from marshy miasms, is styled malaria'rius, palu'dal, Helop'yra, Helop'yretus, &c.

MIASMUS, Miasma.

MIAULANTES, see Convulsionnaire.

MICE PANIS, see Triticum.

MICATIO CORDIS, Systole.

MICHE'LIA CHAM'PACA, Champaca, Michelia Tsjampaca. Ord. Magnoliaceæ. An Oriental tree, much prized for the odour and beauty of its flowers. The oily infusion of the flowers is employed in the Moluccas in headache.

MICLE'TA. A medicine used by Mesue for arresting hemorrhage; perhaps, according to Siebenhaar, from the Arabic, michnata, "proved by experience."

MICOSIS, Frambœsia.

MICRANATOMIA, see Anatomy.

MICRANGIA, Capillary vessels.

MICRENCEPHALUM, Cerebellum.

MICRENCEPHALON, Cretinism.

MICRENCEPHALUM, Cerebellum.

MICROCEPHALIA, see Microcephalus.

MICROCEPHALUS, Mikroceph'alus, Microcran'ius, from micros, and κεφαλη, 'head.' One who has a small head. A monster having a small imperfect head, or a small imperfect cranium. The condition is called Microceph'al'ia, Craniostenosis. With some it means Idiotism.

MICROCORIA, Myosis.

MI'CROCOSM, Micocos'mus, from micros, and κοσμος, 'world.' A little world. Some philosophers have given this appellation to man, whom they consider as the epitome of all that is admirable in the world. The world they call Ma'crococosm.

MICROCOSMETOR, Vital principle.

MICROCOSM'ICA MACH'INA. The organism of man.

MICROCOSMICA SCIENTIA, Physiology.

MICROCOSMICUM SAL, with the ancients meant the salts of the urine,—Sal ur'inae.

MICROCOSMOGRAPHIA, Physiology.

MICROCOUST'IC, Microcous'ticus, from micros, and ακουω, 'I hear.' This word, as well as Microph'onous, from μικρος, 'small,' and φωνη, 'voice,' means any thing that contributes to increase the intensity of sound—as the speaking trumpet—by collecting the sonorous rays.

MICROCRANIUS, Microcephalus.

MICROGLOS'SIA, from micros, and γλωσσα, 'tongue.' Original smallness of tongue.

MICROLEUCONYMPHÆA, Nymphæa alba.

MICROLOGY, see Microscopy.

MICROM'ELUS, Hemin'eles, from micros, and μελος, 'a limb.' A monster having imperfectly developed extremities.

MICROMMATUS, Microphthalmus.

MICROPHONOUS, Microcoustic.

MICROPHTHAL'MUS, Microm'matus, from micros, and ὀφθαλμος, 'eye.' One who has small eyes. A monster with two small, or imperfectly developed eyes. A small eye,—Ophthalmid'ium, Ophthalmium.

MICROPODIA, Microopus.

MICROPROSOPUS, Aprosopus, from micros, and πρόσωπον, 'face.' A monster in which a part of the face is absent.

MICROPUS, from micros, and πους, 'foot.' One who has small feet. The condition is called Micropodia.

MICROPYLE, Micropylum, from micros, and πύλη, 'gate.' An opening in the epispem of seeds, through which the fecundating pollen enters the ovule to fecundate it. It has been supposed, that such a micropyle exists in the human ovule.

MICRORCHIDES, from micros, and ρχις, 'a testicle.' They who have very small testicles.

MICROS, μικρος, 'little,' as in MICROSCOPY, Microscopia; from micros, and σκοπη, 'a view.' Observation by the microscope: an important agency in the examination of the healthy and morbid tissues. A description of the results of such observation is Micrography. Micrology is often used with the same signification, and for a treatise on the microscope and the results of microscopy.

MICROSOMIA, Nanosomia.

MICROSPHYCTUS. Same etymon as the next. One who has a small pulse.

MICROSPHYXIA, from micros, and σφυγμος, 'pulse.' Smallness or weakness of pulse.

MICROSPORON AUDOUINI, see Porrigo decalvans—m. Furfur, see Chloasma—m. Mentagrophytes, Mentagrophyte.

MICROS'TOMUS; from micros, and στομα, 'mouth.' One who has a small mouth.

MICROTESIA, Parvium organica'rum parvitas morbo'sa; from μικροτης, 'smallness.' Morbid smallness of organic parts.

MICROTRAPEZIA, Leptotrophia.

MICROTRICHIA; from micros, and τριχ, 'hair.' Fineness or shortness of hair.

MICROTROPHIA, Leptotrophia.

MICTIO, Micturition — m. Cruenta, Hæmaturia—m. Inopportuna, Enuresis—m. Involuntaria, Enuresis—m. Sanguinea, Hæmaturia.

MICTION, Micturition.

MICTURITION, Mictio, Mictus, Ure'sis, Uris'sis, Omiche'sis, (F.) Miction, Action de pisser, from micturio, and mingere, mictum, 'I make water.' The act of making water—Urination. Also, morbid frequency of passing the water.

MICTUS, Micturition — m. Cruentus, Hæmaturia.

MIDRIFF, Diaphragm.

MIDWIFE, from mid, 'with,' and wif, 'wife,' or, from mid, 'need,' 'recompense,' and wif, 'wife.' Matro'na, Obstet'rix, Hyper'tria, Mæa, Mæas, Mæut'ria, Aces'toris, Aces'tris, Aces'tria, (Sc.) Howdy, (Prov.) Grace-wife, Handwoman, Heads'woman, Howdy-wife, (F.) Sage femme, Accoucheuse. A female who practises obstetrics.

MIDWIFERY, Obstetrics.

MIEL, Mel—m. d'Acétate de Cuvire, Linimentum æruginis—m. Boraté, Mel boracis—m. Dépuré, Mel despumatum—m. Despumé, Mel despumatum—m. Médicinal, Mellitum—m. Mercuriale composité, Mellitum de mercuriali compositum.

MIEUTER, Accoucheur.

MIGMA, Mistura.

MIGRAINE, Hemicrania.

MIGRANA, Hemicrania.

MIGRATION DU LAMBEAU, see Flap.

MIKANIA GUACO, Guaco.

MIKROCEPHALUS, Microcephalus.

MIL, Panicum miliaceum.

MILFOIL, Achillea millefolium.

MILIAIRE, Miliary, Miliary fever.

MILIARIA, Miliary fever—m. Sudans, Miliary fever—m. Sudatoria, Miliary fever.

MILIARIS SUDATORIA, Sudor anglicus, Spicardicus.

MILIARY, Miliaris, (F.) Miliaire; from milium, 'millet.' Resembling millet seed—hence, miliary fever, miliary glands, &c.

MILIARY FEVER, Em'phlysis miliaria, Miliaris, Miliaria, M. sudans seu sudatoria, Sudor, S. miliaris, Pap'ula miliaris, Ecanthe'ma miliaria, Syn'ochus miliaria, Aspre'do milia'ceum, Febris miliaris seu essero'sa seu puncticul'aris seu culicula'ris seu vesicula'ris seu lenticula'ris seu purpura'te rubra et alba miliaris, Pur'pura purp'era'rum, P. miliaris, Pap'ula sudo'ris Millet seed rash, (F.) Miliaire, Millot, Pourpre blanc, Millet. It is so called from the eruption resembling the seed of the milium or millet. Fever, accompanied by an eruption of small, red, isolated pimples, rarely confluent, but almost always very numerous, slightly raised above the skin, and presenting, at the end of 24 hours, a small vesicle filled with a white transparent fluid; which quickly dries up, and separates in the form of scales. Miliary fever is now rare, in consequence of the cooling practice in fevers and other states of the system. It is almost always brought on by external heat, and hence the prevention is obvious. The treatment is simple. It requires merely the antiphlogistic regimen, in ordinary cases.

MILIARY GLANDS, Sebaceous glands—m. Granulations or Tubercles, see Granulation.

MILII SEMINA, Panicum Italicum.

MILIOIUM. Diminutive of milium, 'millet.' Cenchr'id'ion. A small tumour on the eyelids, resembling, in size, a millet-seed.

MILITARIS HERBA, Achillea millefolium.

MILITARY, Militaris, from miles, militis, (F.) Militaire, 'a soldier.' Pertaining to a soldier or an army—as 'Military medicine,' Medicina militaris, (F.) Médecine militaire; and Military surgery, Chirur'gia militaris, (F.) Chirurgie militaire. Medicine and surgery applicable to the soldier.

MILIUM, Grutum, Panicum miliaceum, see Hydatid—m. Esculentum, Panicum miliaceum—m. Indicum, Panicum Italicum—m. Panicum, Panicum miliaceum—m. Solis, Lithospermum officinale.

MILK, Sax. melc, Lac, Gala, Humor lac'teus, Latez ni'veus, (F.) Lait. A fluid secreted by the mammary glands of the females of the mammalia. The skimmed milk of the cow, (F.) Lait de Vache, contains water, caseous matter, traces of butter, sugar of milk, chloride of sodium, phosphate, and acetate of potassa, lactic acid, lactate of iron, and earthy phosphate. The cream is formed of butter, casein, and whey, in which there is sugar of milk and salts. When examined by the microscope, milk is seen to contain a large number of particles, of irregular size and shape, varying from $\frac{1}{2}$ to $\frac{1}{10}$ of an inch in diameter. They consist of oily matter, surrounded by a delicate pellicle, and are the milk globules.

Cow's milk is employed for the preparation of cream, butter, cheese, whey, sugar of milk, and frangipane. It is useful in a number of cases of poisoning; either by acting as a demulcent, or by decomposing certain poisons, or by combining with others so as to neutralize them. It is constantly employed as aliment, and may be regarded as an emulsion in which butter and casein are found in suspension. When taken into the stomach, it is coagulated by the gastric fluids, and the coagulum is digested like any other solid. The watery parts are absorbed.

Between milk, flour, and blood, there is great similarity of composition. The following table is given by Dr. Robert Dundas Thomson:

Milk.	Flour.	Blood.
Curd or Casein	Fibrin,	Fibrin,
	Albumen,	Albumen,
	Casein,	Casein,
	Gluten,	Colouring matter.
Butter.....	Oil.	Fat.
Sugar.....	Sugar, Starch,	Sugar.
Chloride of potassium, sodium,	Do.	Do.
Phosphate of soda, lime,
magnesia,
iron,

From a considerable number of experiments, Messrs. Deyeux and Parmentier class the six kinds of milk, which they examined, according to the following table, as regards the relative quantity of materials they contain.

Casein.	Butter.	Sugar of Milk.	Serum.
Goat	Sheep	Woman	Ass
Sheep	Cow	Ass	Woman
Cow	Goat	Mare	Mare
Ass	Woman	Cow	Cow
Woman	Ass	Goat	Goat
Mare	Mare	Sheep	Sheep

MILK ABSCESS, Mastodynia apostematosa.

MILK, ALMOND, Emulsio amygdalæ.

MILK AND SODA WATER. An agreeable mode of taking milk in cases where it lies heavily on the stomach. Heat, nearly to boiling, a teacupful of milk; dissolve in it a teaspoonful of sugar, put it into a large tumbler, and pour over it two-thirds of a bottle of soda water.

MILK, ASSES', (F.) Lait d'Anesse, considerably resembles human milk, of which it has the consistence, smell, and taste: but it contains a little less cream, and more soft, caseous matter. It is often used by those labouring under pulmonary affections.

Artificial Asses' Milk may be made by taking gelatin \mathfrak{z} ss; dissolving it, by the aid of heat, in barley water Oij; adding refined sugar \mathfrak{z} j; pouring into the mixture new milk Oj; and beating the whole with a whisk.

It may also be prepared by dissolving sugar of milk \mathfrak{z} ij in tepid skimmed cow's milk Oj.

MILK BLOTCH, Porriigo larvalis — m. Crust, Porriigo larvalis.

MILK, EWES', (F.) Lait de Brebis. It affords more cream than cows' milk; but the butter is softer. The caseum, on the contrary, is fatter, and more viscid. It contains less serum than cow's milk. The Roquefort cheeses are made from it.

MILK FEVER, see Fever, milk — m. Glass, Breast glass — m. Globules, see Milk.

MILK, GOATS', (F.) Lait de Chèvre, resembles cows' milk: the butyraceous matter, however, which enters into its composition, is more solid than that of the cow.

Artificial Goat's Milk may be made by taking fresh suet \mathfrak{z} j; cutting it into small pieces; tying it in a muslin bag, large enough to leave the morsels free from compression; and boiling in a quart of cow's milk, sweetened with a quarter of an ounce of white sugar candy.

Used as a diet in scrofulous cases, and also in phthisis.

MILK, GREEN, Colostrum.

MILK, HUMAN, (F.) Lait de femme,—contains more sugar, milk, and cream, and less caseum, than cows' milk. Its composition differs according to the distance of time from delivery.

MILK KNOT, Galacto-ganglion; (F.) Ganglion lacteum. The knots often observed in the breast after inflammation of the organ, or for some time after the suppression of the secretion. They generally end by resolution.

MILK LEG, Phlegmatia dolens.

MILK, MALES', Sperm.

MILK, MARES', (F.) Lait de Jument,—contains only a small quantity of fluid butyraceous matter; a little caseum, softer than that of cows' milk, and more serum.

MILK SCALL, Porriigo larvalis.

MILK SICKNESS, Sick stomach, Swamp sickness, Tires, Slows, Stiff joints, Puking fever, River sickness. A disease occasionally observed in the States of Alabama, Indiana, and Kentucky, which affects both man and cattle, but chiefly the latter. It is attributed in cattle to something eaten or drunk by them; and in man to the eating of the flesh of animals labouring under the disease. Owing to the tremors that characterize it in animals, it is called the Trembles. It is endemic.

The symptoms of the disease are such as are produced by the acro-narcotic class of poisons—vomiting, purging, extreme nervous agitation, &c.: and the approved indications of treatment appear to be—gentle emetics and laxatives, with quiet, and mucilaginous drinks.

MILK, SNAKES', Euphorbia corollata.

MILK, SOLIDIFIED. Milk, to which little less than an equal weight of white sugar has been added, evaporated to dryness. When re-dissolved in water, it has all the qualities of fresh milk, with the additional quantity of sugar.

To milk, evaporated to dryness, M.M. Grimaud and Galais have given the names Lactoline and Lactine.

MILK SPOTS, Maculæ albæ, Strophulus.

MILK STONE, Morochthus.

MILK, SUGAR OF, Sugar of milk.

MILK OF SULPHUR, Sulphur præcipitatum—m. Sweet, Galium verum.

MILK Teeth, see Dentition—m. Thrush, Aphthæ—m. Vetch, Astragalus verus—m. Vetch, stemless, Astragalus exscapus—m. Weed, Apocynum androsæmifolium, Asclepias Syriaca, Euphorbia corollata—m. MILKY, Lactic.

MILL MOUNTAIN, Linum catharticum.

MILLEFEUILLE, Achillea millefolium—m. Aquatique, Phellandrium aquaticum.

MILLEFEUILLET, Omasum.

MILLEFOLIUM, Achillea millefolium.

MILLEMORBIA SCROPHULARIA, Scrophularia nodosa.

MILLEPEDES, Onisci aselli.

MILLEPERTUIS ORDINAIRE, Hypericum perforatum.

MILLET, Aphthæ, Miliary fever—m. Barbadoes, Panicum Italicum—m. Common, Panicum miliaceum—m. Indian, Panicum Italicum—m. des Oiseaux, Panicum Italicum—m. Ordinaire, Panicum miliaceum.

MILLET-SEED RASH, Miliary fever.

MILLIGRAMME, from mille, 'a thousand,' and γραμμα, 'a gramme.' The thousandth part of a gramme;—about 0.0154 Troy grain.

MILLIGRAMMA, Herniaria glabra.

MILLIMÈTRE, Millim'eter, from mille, 'a thousand,' and μετρον, 'measure.' The thousandth part of the metre;—equal to 0.03937 English inch, or about two-fifths of a line.

MILLOT, Miliary fever.
MILPHÆ, Madarosis.
MILPHOSIS, Madarosis.
MILT, Melt, Spleen.
MILT-LIKE. An epithet for a form of cancer, characterized by a soft pale growth, containing scarcely any blood;—so called from its resemblance to the milt of a fish.
MILT-LIKE TUMOUR, Encephaloid.
MILTUS, Plumbi oxydum rubrum.
MILTWASTE, Asplenium.

MIND, ABSENCE OF, Aphelxia socors—m. Abstraction of, Aphelxia intenta—m. Unsound, Insanity.

MINERALIUM, Antimonium.
MINER'S ELBOW. An enlargement of a bursa over the olecranon, occurring in such as are in the habit of leaning much upon it; and, therefore, often seen in those who work on the side in low-roofed mines.

MIN'IM, Min'imum, 'the least part or portion.' The 60th part of a fluidrachm. This measure has been introduced by the London College of Physicians, in consequence of the uncertainty of the size of the drop, (see Gutta.) The subdivision of the wine pint has, accordingly, been extended to the 60th part of the fluidrachm; and glass measures, called "minim-measures," have been adopted by the London College. The proportion between the minims and the drops of various fluid preparations is exhibited in the following table. The results were obtained by Mr. Durand, a skilful pharmacien of Philadelphia, under circumstances, as regards the different articles, as nearly identical as possible.

MINIM'ETER; badly compounded from minimum and μετρον, 'measure.' An instrument for measuring minims, invented by Mr. Alsop. It consists of a glass tube, graduated from the conical point into minims; and having a piston, by the elevation of which, fluid may be drawn into the tube, and by its depression be forced from it.

MINIM MEASURE. A measure for the divisions of a fluidrachm.

Minim measure.

MINIMUM, Minim.
MINISTER GYMNASTÆ, Pædotribes.

MINUTHOSIS, Meiosis.
MINIUM, Plumbi oxydum rubrum—m. Græcorum, Hydrargyri sulphuretum rubrum—m. Purum, Hydrargyri sulphuretum rubrum.

MINOR HEL'ICIS. A muscle situate on the posterior border of the helix of the ear, at its commencement in the fossa of the concha.

MINORATIVUS, Laxative.

MINT, COCK, Tanacetum balsamita—m. Curled, Mentha crispa—m. Cat, Nepeta—m. Horse, Monarda coccinea and M. punctata—m. Horse, hairy, Blephilia hirsuta—m. Horse, Ohio, Blephilia hirsuta—m. Horse, sweet, Cunila Mariana—m. Hyssop-leaved, Mentha cervina.

MINT JULEP. A drink, consisting of brandy, sugar, and pounded ice, flavoured by sprigs of mint. It is an agreeable alcoholic excitant.

MINT, MOUNTAIN, Monarda coccinea—m. Mountain, common, Pycnanthemum incanum—m. Pepper, Mentha piperita—m. Spear, Mentha viridis—m. Squaw, Hedeoma—m. Stone, Cunila Mariana.

MINT TEA, Infusum Menthæ viridis.

MINT, WATER, Mentha aquatica.

MINTHA, Mint.

MINUTHESIS, Meiosis.

MINYANTHES, Menyanthes.

MIOSIS, Meiosis.

MIRLES, Rubeola.

MIROCELE, Merocele.

MIRROT, Daucus Carota.

MISADIR, Ammonia murias.

MISANTHRO'PIA, Misan'thropy, Exanthro'pia, Phyganthro'pia, from μισος, 'hatred,' and ανθρωπος, 'man.' Aversion to man and society:—a symptom of melancholy, and hypochondriasis.

MISCARRIAGE, Abortion.

MISERERE MEI, Ileus.

MISHME TEETA, Coptis teeta.

MISMAR, Mesemar. A name given by Avicenna to a kind of nodus, which forms on the toes as the sequel of contusion or inflammation of those parts.

MISOPTO'CHUS, from μισος, 'hatred,' and πτωχος, 'poor.' That which has hatred for the poor. The gout has been so called by some, because it commonly affects the rich.

MISSADAN, Hydrargyrum.

MISSIO SANGUINIS, Blood-letting.

MISSISSIPPI, MINERAL WATERS OF. Cooper's Well, in Hinds County, four miles from Raymond, and thirteen from Jackson, is a sulphuretted saline, the chief constituents being the sulphates of soda and magnesia. Of the solid ingredients upwards of 3 per cent. are of peroxide of iron. The waters are chiefly used in chronic gastro-enteric affections. Ocean Springs, in Jackson County, is an acidulo-sulphureous chalybeate.

MISTIO, Mistura.

MISTLETOE, Viscum album—m. Yellowish, Viscum flavescens.

MISTU'RA, μιξις, Propotisma, Migma, Mis'tio, Mix'tio, Mixtu'ra, Mixture; (F.) Potion, from miscere, mixtum, 'to mix.' A mingled compound, in which different ingredients are contained in the fluid state; suspended or not by means of mucilaginous or saccharine matter. In this sense, it is synonymous with the French Potion. In France, however, the word mixture is more frequently understood to mean a liquid medicine, which contains very active substances, and can only be administered by drops. A mixture, in other words, in the French sense, may be regarded as a potion deprived of watery vehicle.

MISTURA, (S.) A fragrant yellow-coloured water, used as a perfume by the ladies of Peru. It is prepared from gillyflower, jasmine, and flor de mistela (Talinum umbellatum). See Campomanesia lineatifolia.

MISTURA ACACIÆ, Mucilago Acaciæ.

MISTURA AC'IDI HYDROCYAN'ICI, Mixture of Prussic acid, Mélange pectoral (Magendie). (Medicinal prussic acid, ʒij, distilled water, ʒxiv, pure sugar, ʒiiss.) A dessert-spoonful every morning and evening, as a pectoral, &c.

MISTURA AMMONI'ACI, Lac ammoniaci, Mixture of ammoniac. (Ammoniac, ʒij, aquæ Oss. Rub the ammoniacum: adding the water gradually until they are perfectly mixed. Ph. U. S.) Dose, fʒss to ʒj.

MISTURA AMYGDALÆ, Emulsio amygdalæ.

MISTURA ASAFETIDÆ, Lac asafetidæ, Emulsio antihysterica, Mixture of asafetida. (F. Lait d'asafetida. (Asafetida ʒij, aquæ Oss. Rub together, adding the water by degrees. Ph. U. S.) Used where pills cannot be swallowed, and as a glyster in irritations during dentition, and in ascarides. Dose, fʒss to fʒiiss.

MISTURA ASAFETIDÆ PRO CLYSMATE, Enema fetidum.

MISTURA CAMPHORÆ, Aqua camphoræ (Ph. U. S.), Camphor mixture or julep, Mixture camphorata, Julepium e camphorâ seu camphoratum, (F.) Julep camphræ. (Camphor, ʒij, alcohol, ℥xl, magnes. carb. ʒiv, aquæ Oij. Rub the camphor with the alcohol, and afterwards with the magnesia, add the water, and filter. Ph. U. S.) Virtues like those of camphor. See Emulsio camphoræ.

MISTURA CORNU USTI, Decoc'tum cornu cervi ni seu album, Decoction of burnt hartshorn, Mixture of burnt hartshorn. (Cornuum ust. ʒij, acaciæ gum. cont. ʒj, aquæ Oijj. Boil to Oij, constantly stirring, and strain. Ph. L.)

MISTURA CREASOTI, Creasote mixture. (Creasot., Acid. acetic. ʒi ℥xvj, Sp. Junip. comp., Syrup., ʒi fʒj; Aquæ fʒxiv. Mix the creasote and the acid; add gradually the water, and then the syrup and spirit. Ph. E.) A fluidounce contains a minim of creasote.

MISTURA CRETÆ, Potio carbonatis calcis, Mixture creta'cea, Mucilago cret'ica, Chalk or Creta'ceous mixture, Chalk julep, (F.) Mixture de Craie. (Cretæ pp. ʒss, sacchar., acaciæ gum. in pulv., ʒi ʒij, aquæ cinnam., aquæ, ʒi fʒiv. Mix. Ph. U. S.) Antacid and absorbent. Dose, fʒj to fʒij.

MISTURA DIABOL'ICA. A mixture under this name is kept in military hospitals for malingerers. It is made of sundry nauseous ingredients, as aloes, asafetida, castor, &c., and is given so as to keep up a disagreeable impression on the gustatory nerves.

MISTURA EMETINE VOMITO'RIA, Emetic mixture of emetine. (Emetine 4 gr., orange flower water ʒij, syrup ʒss; M.) A dessert-spoonful every half hour till it acts.

MISTURA FERRI COMPOS'ITA, Compound mixture of iron, (F.) Mixture de fer composée, Griffith's mixture. (Myrrh. cont., ʒj, potassæ carb. gr. xxv, aquæ rosæ fʒviiss, ferri sulph. in pulv., ʒj, sp. lavand. ʒss, sacchar. ʒj. Rub together the myrrh, subcarbonate of potassa, and sugar; then add, while triturating, the rose-water, spirit of nutmeg; and, lastly, the sulphate of iron.

Pour the mixture directly into a glass bottle, and stop it close. Ph. U. S.) It is tonic and emmenagogue, and is useful wherever iron is indicated.

MISTURA GLYCRRHIZÆ COMPOS'ITA, Compound mixture of Lic'horice, Brown Mixture, (Extract. Glycyrrhiz. pulv., Acaciæ pulv., Sacchar., ʒi ʒss; Tinct. opii camphorat. fʒij; Vinantimon. fʒj; Spirit. æther. nitric. fʒss; Aquæ fʒxij. Rub the liquorice, gum arabic, and sugar with the water, gradually poured upon them; add the other ingredients and mix. Ph. U. S.) A popular cough medicine, but not deserving of being made officinal. Dose, a tablespoonful or fʒss.

MISTURA GUAIA'ACI, Mixture of guaiac, Lac guaiacæ, Emulsio guaiac'ina, Mixture guaiacæ gummo'sa seu gummi guaiac' Ber'geri, Solutio guaiacæ gummo'sa seu resinæ guaiacæ aquo'sa, (F.) Mixture de Guyac. (Guaiac. g. resin. ʒiiss, sacch. pur. ʒij, muc. acaciæ gum. ʒij, aq. cinnam. fʒviij. Rub the guaiacum with the sugar; then with the mucilage. Add, gradually, the cinnamon water. Ph. L.) Dose, fʒss to fʒij.

MISTURA GUMMI GUAIA'ACI BERGERI, Mixture Guaiacæ—m. Hordei, Decoction Hordei compositum—m. Leniens, Looch ex ovo.

MISTURA MOSCHI, M. moscha'ta, Musk mixture. (Moschi, acaciæ gum. contus., sacch. purif., sing. ʒj, aq. rosæ fʒvj. Rub the musk with the sugar; add the gum, and, by degrees, the rose-water. Ph. L.) Dose, fʒss to fʒij.

MISTURA SCAMMONII, Scammony Mixture. (Scammon. gr. vij, Lactis fʒij. Triturate to form an emulsion. Ph. E.) The whole is a cathartic dose.

MISTURA SPIRIT'US VINI GALL'ICI, Brandy Mixture. (Sp. Vin. Gallicæ, Aq. cinnam. ʒi fʒij; Vitel. ovo. ij; Sacchar. ʒss; Ol. cinnam. ℥ij. M. Ph. L.) An excitant draught for the low stages of fever.

MISTURA STRYCH'NIÆ, Mixture of strychnia. (Distilled water, ʒij, very pure strychnia, 1 gr., white sugar, ʒij; M.) Dose, a dessert-spoonful.

MISTURA SULPHURICO-ACIDA, Elixir acidum Halleri—m. Vulneraria acida, Arquebusade, Eau d'.

MITCHELL'IA REPENS, Partridge berry. A pretty little indigenous trailing evergreen, of the Cinchona family—Cinchonaceæ,—which flowers from June to July. It has been considered an expectorant, emmenagogue, and diuretic; and has been prescribed in dropsy and gout.

MITELLA, Sling.

MITHRIDATE, Mithridatium, Mithridaticum medicamentum, Antidotum Mithridaticum, Diascin'ci antidotus, Confectio Damoc'ratis. A very compound electuary, into which entered—Myrrh of Arabia, Saffron, Agaric, Ginger, Cinnamon, Frankincense, Garlic, Mustard, Birthwort, Galbanum, Castor, Long pepper, Popovana, Beldium, Gum Arabic, Opium, Gentian, Orris, Sagapenum, Valerian, Acacia, Hypericum, Canary wine, Honey, &c. It was invented by Mithridates, king of Pontus and Bithynia, and was formerly regarded as alexipharmic. It is little used at the present day, and, from its heterogeneous nature, should be wholly abandoned.

MITHRIDATICUM MEDICAMENTUM, Mithridate.

MITIGANS, Lenitive.

MITRA HIPPOCRATICA, Bonnet d'Hippocrate.

MITRAL, Mitra'lis, from μῆτρα, mitra, 'a headdress.' Having the form of a mitre; resembling a bishop's mitre.

MITRAL REGURGITATION, see Regurgitation.

MITRAL VALVES, Valvulæ mitral'es seu Cordis mitral'es seu episcopa'les seu bicuspidal'es seu bicuspidat'æ. Two triangular valves at the opening of communication between the left auricle of the heart and the corresponding ventricle. These valves are formed by the inner membrane of the left cavities of the heart; and are retained on the side of the ventricle by tendinous cords, proceeding from the columnæ carneæ. They form a species of valve, which permit the blood to pass from the auricle into the ventricle and oppose its return.

MITRIUM, Sling.

MITTE (F.), Effluvium Latrinarium. An emanation exhaled from privies, which strongly irritates the eyes. It consists of ammonia, united to the carbonic and hydro-sulphuric acids.

MIUAMARU, see Arrow poison.

MIVA, Marmelade.

MIXIS, Coition, Mistura.

MIXTIO, Mistura.

MIXTURE, Mistura.

MIXTURE, Mistura—m. Almond, Emulsio Amygdalæ—m. of Ammoniac, Mistura ammoniaci—m. of Asafoetida, Mistura asafoetidæ.

MIXTURE, BRANDY, Mistura spiritus vini Gallici—m. Brown, Mistura glycyrrhizæ composita—m. Calmante, Looch ex ovo.

MIXTURE, CAMPHOR, Mistura camphoræ—m. Chalk, Mistura cretæ.

MIXTURE DE CRAIE, Mistura cretæ—m. of Creasote, Mistura creasoti.

MIXTURE, CRETACEOUS, Mistura cretæ.

MIXTURE OF EMETINE, (emetic, Mistura emetinæ vomitoria—m. de Fer composée, Mistura ferri composita—m. de Gayac, Mistura Guaiaci.

MIXTURE, GRIFFITH'S, Mistura ferri composita.

MIXTURE OF GUAIAIC, Mistura Guaiaci—m. of Gum Arabic, see Emulsio Acaciæ—m. of Harts-horn, burnt, Mistura cornu uesti—m. of Iron, compound, Mistura ferri composita.

MIXTURE, HOPE'S. A mixture recommended by Mr. Hope in diarrhoea and dysentery. It is essentially a nitrate of morphia. Although the proposer employed the acidum nitrosus of the Edinburgh Pharmacopœia, nitric acid is generally used. (Acid. nitros. f ʒi; Aquæ camphor. f ʒvii; Tinct. opii gtt. xl; M.) Dose, a fourth part every three or four hours.

MIXTURE OF LIQUORICE, COMPOUND, Mistura glycyrrhizæ composita—m. Lithontripcticæ de Durande, see Liquor anodynus terebinthinatus—m. of Marsh mallows, Decoctum althææ.

MIXTURE, MUSK, Mistura moschi—m. Neutral, Liquor potassæ citratis—m. of Prussic acid, Mistura acidi hydrocyanici.

MIXTURE OF SCAMMONY, Mistura scammonii.

MIXTURE, SCUDAMORE'S. A mixture recommended by Sir C. Scudamore in gouty and rheumatic affections, and much prescribed in the United States. Magnes. sulph. ʒi—ʒij; Aquæ menthæ f ʒx; Aceti colchic. f ʒj—f ʒiiss; Syrup croci f ʒj; Magnes. ʒvii; M. Dose, one, two, or three tablespoonfuls, repeated every two hours in a paroxysm of gout, until from four to six evacuations are produced in the twenty-four hours.

MIXTURE OF STRYCHNIA, Mistura strychniæ—m. de Whitt, see Liquor anodynus terebinthinatus.

MNEMĒ, Memory.

MNEME CEPHALICUM BAL'SAMUM. A very compound medicine, into which entered Balm, Lily, Rosemary, Lavender, Borage, Broom, Roses, Violet, Saffron, Thyme, Storax, Galbanum, &c.

MNEMONEUICE, Mnemonics.

MNEMONICS, Mnemon'icæ, Mnemon'euticæ, Mnemotechnæ, (μνήμη, 'memory'; μνημονικός, 'appertaining to memory,') from μναμαι, 'I recollect.' The art of aiding the memory; and of forming, in some sort, an artificial memory.

MNEMOTECHNE, Mnemonics.

MOANING, from Sax. mænan, 'to grieve.' Respira'tio luctu'osa, Mychthis'mos. A plaintive respiration, in which the patient utters audible groans,—moans, (F.) Gémissements.

MOBILE, see Saint Augustine.

MOBILITY, Mobil'itas, from mob'ilis, contraction of movibilis, 'that can be moved.' The power of being moved. In physiology, great nervous susceptibility, often joined to a disposition to convulsion. Greatly developed excitability.

MOCCASIN FLOWER, Cypripedium acaule, C. luteum—m. Plant, Cypripedium luteum.

MOCH'LIA. Reduction of a luxated bone; from μοχλος, a lever.

MOCHLICUS, Purgative.

MOCHLISCUS, Lever.

MOCHLUS, Lever.

MOCHTHUS, Agony.

MOCK-KNEES, Crusta genu equinæ.

MOD'ELLING PROCESS. A term proposed by Dr. Macartney, of Dublin, to signify the mode in which wounds are healed without inflammation or suppuration, by a deposit of plastic matter from the surface of the wound, by which the gap is more rapidly filled,—portion being laid upon portion, without waste, after the manner of clay in the hands of the sculptor;—hence the term.

MODI'OLUS, 'the nave of a wheel.' Pyra-mis seu Axis seu Columella coch'leæ. A hollow cone in the cochlea of the ear, forming a nucleus, axis, or central pillar, round which the gyri of the cochlea pass. The modiolus forms the inner and larger portion of the central pillar, and is the cavity seen at the bottom of the meatus auditorius internus. It lodges a branch of the auditory nerve. The central portion of the modiolus contains a number of minute canals, and is called in consequence Tractus spiralis foraminulosus. Into these the nerves of the cochlea enter, and pass out at right angles between the bony plates forming the zona ossea of the lamina spiralis, to be expanded on the membranous portion of the lamina.

MODIOLUS, Mas, also means the crown of the trepan.

MODIRA CANIRAM, Strychnos colubrina.

MO'DIUS. A dry measure, the third of an amphora, equal to the bushel.—Varro.

MODUS OPERAN'DI, 'mode of operating.' This term is applied to the general principles upon which remedies act in morbid states of the body;—a subject of much interest, although involved in considerable obscurity.

The following classification will convey some idea of the ways in which different organs may be excited into action.

1. By actual or immediate contact of the remedy, and by absorption or mediate contact.
2. By an impulse conveyed by the nerves, through an impression made on the stomach or elsewhere.
3. By contiguous or continuous sympathy, or by mere proximity or continuity of parts.

MOËLLE, Marrow—m. Allongée, Medulla oblongata—m. Épinière, Medulla spinalis—m. Vertébrale, Medulla spinalis.

MŒNIA DENTIUM, Alveoli dentium.

MÉROR, Athymia.

MOFETTE, Azote, see Mephitism.

MOFFAT, MINERAL WATERS OF. Moffat is a village situate about 56 miles S. W. of Edinburgh. The water is a cold sulphureous; containing, in a wine gallon, 36 grains of chloride of sodium, 5 cubic inches of carbonic acid, 4 of azote, and 10 of sulphohydric acid. It resembles Harrogate water in its properties.

A strong chalybeate spring was discovered there about the year 1828, which contains sesquiphosphate of peroxide of iron, sulphate of alumina, and uncombined sulphuric acid.

MOGIGRAPHIA, Cramp, writers'.

MOGILALIA, Paralalia, from μογίς, 'with difficulty,' and λαλέω, 'to speak.' This word is inaccurately written by Paul Zacchias,—Mola'lia, and Mollia'lia. Difficult or defective articulation. Impeding of speech. See Balbuties.

MOGOSTOCIA, Dystocia, Laborious labour.

MOGUS, Agony.

MOHAWK TASSEL, Eupatorium purpureum.

MOHRIA THURIFRAGA. A South African fern. Nat. Ord. Filices, the dry leaves of which, pulverized and made into an ointment with fat, are serviceable in burns and scalds.

MOIGNON, Stump.

MOIS, Menses.

MOISTURE, Mador, (F.) Moîteur, anciently moisteur. Simple humidity of the skin. The skin is said to be moist or in a state of moisture, when there is slight perspiration.

MOITEUR, Moisture.

MOLA, Maxillary bone, Molar tooth, Mole, Patella.

MOLAGOCODI, Piper nigrum.

MOLAIRE, Molar.

MOLALIA, Mogilalia.

MOLAR, Mola'ris, My'licus, (F.) Molaire, Mentière. That which bruises or grinds; from molaris, 'a grindstone,' or mola, 'a millstone,' (molo, 'I grind'.)

MOLAR GLANDS. Two small bodies formed by a collection of mucous crypts; seated in the substance of the cheeks, between the masseter and buccinator muscles, and whose excretory ducts open into the mouth opposite the last molar tooth.

MOLAR TEETH, Grinders, Jaw Teeth, Mola'ris permanentes dentes, Dentes molares seu maxillares seu gom'phii seu clava'les, Molæ, Gomphioi, My'laeri, Mylodontes, My'lodi, Momis'ci, Lag-teeth, Wall teeth, (Prov.) Azzle teeth, Azle teeth, Cheek teeth, Wang teeth, (F.) Dents molaires ou mâchelières, occupy the farther part of each alveolar arch. Their coronæ are broader than they are high: unequal; tuberculated; and the roots are more or less subdivided. They are 20 in number, 10 in each jaw. The first two pairs of molar teeth in each jaw have been called lesser molares, premo'lar or bicuspid, Dentes bicuspidati seu buccales. The coronæ have two tubercles; the outer being more prominent and larger than the inner. The root is commonly simple; sometimes bifurcated. The other three pairs have been termed, Great molares—Dentes multicuspidées (Ch.) Their coronæ are cubical, rounded, and have, at the upper surface, four or five tubercles, separated by deep furrows. The root is divided into two, three, four, and five fangs, which are more or less curved. The third great molaris appears a long time after the others, and hence has been called Dens sapientiæ or Wisdom tooth.

MOLASSES, Melasses.

MOLE, Mola, from moleis, 'mass.' Mytē, Zephyr'ius fœtus, Germen falsum, Pseudocye'nis molaris, Gravid'itas molaris, Mooncalf, old French, Fardeau. A fleshy, insensible, at times, soft—at others, hard—mass; of variable and determinate size, which forms in the uterus, and is slightly united by vessels to that organ; from which its feeble vitality is derived. It has been conceived by some to be always owing to imperfect conception; but moles may form in the undoubted virgin. They seem to be owing to a morbid process; and certainly are generally connected with conception. At times, they contain parts of the fœtus; but commonly do not. At very different periods, in different women, the diseased mass is expelled from the uterus, with ordinary symptoms of abortion; and the case requires similar management. See, also, Nævus, and Conception, (false.)

MOLE PLANT, Euphorbia lathyris.

MOLECULAR, Molecula'ris. Of or belonging to molecules or minute portions of any thing. Hence molecular death, in contradistinction to somatic death.

MOLÉCULE, Molecula, Mass'ula; diminutive of moleis, 'a mass.' A minute portion of any body. Also, the cicatric'ula, ma'cula, gallat'ura, gelat'inous molecule, tread of the cock, or embryo part of the impregnated ovum, observable by the microscope before the ovum has left the ovarium of the hen. It lies under the epidermic coats of the yolk, and upon its proper coat. If the ovum, according to Valentin, be lacerated and its contents minutely examined, the cicatricula is found like a grayish white disk, which in its whole periphery is dense, granulous, and opaque; but in the centre presents a clear, nongranulous, and perfectly diaphanous point. Purkinje found, that when he removed the dark granulous mass by suction with a small tube, there remained a perfectly transparent vesicle filled with a pellucid lymph, which had a decidedly spherical form, but, being extremely delicate, was easily lacerated, and then its fluid escaped. As he found this, which later naturalists have named—after its discoverer—the Purkin'jean vesicle, in the ova of the ovary, but could not see it in ova, which had already entered the oviduct, he gave it the name germinal vesicle, or germ cell, vesic'ula prolifera seu germinati'va, (F.) Vésicule germinative. Besides a perfectly colourless fluid, this contains one or more dark corpuscles, which appear as a nucleus through the including membrane in the shape of opaque spots—the germinal spot, mac'ula germinati'va seu germinans, nu'cleus germinati'vus, Blasto-car'dia, Cor'eulum germinis, (F.) Tache germinative. The granulous membrane—its thickened portion, the so-called 'cicatricula,'—and the germinal vesicle, constitute those parts of the ovum which pass immediately into the original foundation of the embryo, the blastoderma or germinal membrane, vesic'ula blastodermatica, blastodermic vesicle.

MOLECULE, GELATINOUS, Molecule.

MOLÈNE, Verbascum nigrum.

MOLES GANGLIFORMIS, Ganglion of Gasser.

MOLIBDUS, Plumbum.

MOLLALIA, Mogilalia.

MOLIMEN, pl. MOLIM'INA, from moliōr, 'to move or stir.' An attempt, a struggle. Hence: MOLIMEN CRIT'ICUM. An impulsion towards a sudden solution or crisis of a disease.

MOLIMEN HÆMORRHAG'ICUM. The hemorrhagic diathesis or impulsion.

MOLIMEN HÆMORRHOIDAL'E. The hemorrhoidal diathesis or impulsion. See Hæmorrhoids.

MOLIMEN MENSTRUAL'E. The menstrual diathesis or impulsion.

MOLIMEN NATURE SALUTARIUM, Instinct.

MOLKENKUR, Whey cure.

MOLLESCENCE, Mollities.

MOLLET, Sura.

MOLLIPUFFS, Lycoperdon.

MOLLIS MATER, Pia mater.

MOLLIT'IES, Molles'cence, Malacis'mus, Mollit'ia, Mollit'udo, Emollit'ies, E. morbosa, Mollitio, Malax'is, Malaco'osis, Malthax'is, (F.) Rammolissement; (G.) Malakien (Fuchs); from mollis, 'soft.' Preternatural softness of an organ or part of an organ.

MOLLITIES CEREBRI, Malaco'osis Cer'ebr'i, Encephalomalacia, Encephalomalax'is, Necroencephalus (W. Farr), Cerebromalacia, Encephaloseps'is, Molles'cence or softening or a kind of liquefaction of the cerebral substance; the remainder preserving its ordinary consistency. (F.) Ramollissement du cerveau. The neurine often contains small clots of blood, giving rise to what has been termed Apoplexie capillaire, (Cruveilhier.) The symptoms denoting it are equivocal.

MOLLITIES CORDIS, Cardiomalacia.

MOLLITIES MEDULLÆ SPINALIS, Myelomalacia, (F.) Ramollissement de la Moëlle Épinrière. Softening of the spinal marrow.

MOLLITIES OS'SIUM, Malacosteosis, Malacositeon, Emollit'is os'sium, Paros'tia flex'ilis, Osteomalacosis, Osteomalacia, Rachit'is seu Rachit'is adultor'um, Spina vento'sa (of some), Softening of the bones, (F.) Ostéo-malacie, Ostéo-malacie, Ostéo-malachie, Ramollissement des os. A rare affection, in which the bones are deprived of their salts, particularly of the phosphate of lime, and consist only, or mainly, of gelatin; hence they acquire a degree of suppleness which renders them unfit for the performance of their functions. The disease generally affects all the bones; but it is especially remarkable during life in the long bones, which assume any curvature that may be wished. Very violent pain is often experienced in them; and the urine frequently contains an enormous proportion of calcareous phosphate. The patient is compelled to remain in the horizontal posture; the bones no longer being fixed points for the muscles to act upon. The disease has, hitherto, always terminated fatally, and dissection has exhibited the gelatinous nature of the bones; which, by desiccation, have become transparent, as if they had been macerated in acid.

Experience has afforded no means of relief in this dreadful affliction. The alkaline salts, earthy phosphates, &c. are of little or no use.

MOLLITIO, Mollities.

MOLLITUDO, Mollities.

MOLLUS'CUM, Athero'ma, Ochth'asis. A cutaneous affection, so called in consequence of its resemblance to certain molluscous animals. It consists of numerous tumours, varying in size from that of a pea to that of a pigeon's egg, filled with an atheromatous matter, which are developed in the substance of the derma, and are of various shapes, some having a large base, — others adherent by means of a pedicle.

Molluscum contagio'sum, (F.) Aéné molluscoïde, a singular variety, is characterized by the presence of hard, round, tubercles, which are smooth and transparent, and when pressed, pour out from an orifice in their summits a little opaque or milky fluid.

The disease is probably seated in the sebaceous follicles.

If internal treatment be adopted at all, it must consist of eutrophics, as arsenic, iodine, &c. The external treatment consists in the employment of measures calculated to excite the tubercles to inflammation, as by touching them with potassa.

MOLOCHE, Malva rotundifolia.

MOLOPES, Vibices.

MOLYBDÆNUM MAGNESII, Manganese, black oxide of.

MOLYBDOCACHEXIA, Saturnismus.

MOLYBDOCOLICA, Colica metallica.

MOLYBDONOSUS, Lead-poisoning.

MOLYBDOPARESIS, Palsy, lead.

MOLYBDOS, Plumbum.

MOLYBDOISIS, Lead-poisoning.

MOLYNE, Anus.

MOLYNSIS, Miasma.

MOMIE, Mummy.

MOMIN, Mamei.

MOMISCI, Molar teeth.

MOMOR'DICA, M. Balsami'na, from mordeo, momordi, morsum, 'to bite,' Balsami'na, Nevro- sper'ma cuspidat'a, Balm-apple, Balsam apple, (F.) Balsamine, Pomme de merveille. Ord. Cucurbitaceæ. The fruit of this oriental tree, Pomum mirabil'e seu hierosoolymita'num, was formerly considered vulnerary.

MOMORDICA ASPERA, M. Elaterium.

MOMOR'DICA ELATERIUM: M. as'pera, Elate'rium, Eebal'ia Elate'rium, Ecbalium officina'rum seu agrest'e seu cordifo'lium, Cu'eumis agrest'is seu asini'nus seu sylves'tris, Charan'tia, Boubd'lios, Guarbera orba, Ecbol'ium elate'rium, Wild, Squirting, or Asses' cu'cumber, (F.) Concombre Sauvage, Momordique. Nat. Order, Cucurbitaceæ. The dried sediment from the juice is the elaterium of the shops. (See Extractum Elaterii.) It is a most powerful cathartic, and, as such, has been used in dropsies. Its active principle is the Elatin, Elaterin or Elaterium. Dose, gr. $\frac{1}{2}$ to gr. j. until it operates.

MOMORDIQUE, Momordica elaterium.

MONAD, from μοναs, μοναδος, 'unity.' A simple particle, or atom, or unit. — Leibnitz. The smallest of all visible animalcules. A primary cell or germ.

MONÆ, Nates.

MONAR'DA, M. did'yma seu coccin'ea seu purp'urea seu Kalmia'na, Scarlet Rose balm, Mountain mint, Oswego Tea, Mountain Balm, Horsemint, Squire stalk, Red balm; a beautiful indigenous plant, Sex. Syst. Diandria Monogynia. Nat. Ord. Labiata, having the excitant properties of Monarda punctata.

MONARDA ALLOPHYLLA, M. fistulosa — m. Clinopodia, M. fistulosa — m. Coccinea, Monarda — m. Didyma, Monarda.

MONAR'DA FISTULOSA, M. rugosa and oblongata; M. clinopodia seu alloyphylla, Wild bergamot, Horsemint. The leaves have a fragrant smell; and an aromatic, somewhat bitter taste. They are reputed to be nervine, stomachic, and deobstruent [?].

MONARDA KALMIANA, Monarda — m. Oblongata, M. fistulosa.

MONAR'DA PUNCTATA, Horsemint. Indigenous in the United States. Stimulant and carminative. The Oleum monardæ is official in the United States.

MONARDA PURPUREA, Monarda — m. Rugosa, M. fistulosa.

MONDER (F.), from mundus, 'cleanly.' To render clean or pure. In Pharmacy, it means to separate any substance from its impure or useless portion. In surgery, monder ou mondifier une plaie, is to clean or deterge a wound.

MONDIFICATIFS, Detergents.

MONDIFIER UNE PLAÏE, see Monder.

MONEMERON, Monoe'meron, Monohemer'on; from μονος, 'one,' and ἡμερα, 'a day.' A name given to several collyria, which were supposed to be capable of curing diseases of the eyes in a day.

MONENTERUM, Colon.

MONESIA. A vegetable extract imported into Europe from South America, in hard, thick cakes. It is prepared from the bark of a tree, whose botanical name is uncertain — probably Chrysophyllum glycyphæ'um seu Buranhem, Buranhem, Guaranhem; Ord. Sapotaceæ. It is very friable, and its fracture very much resembles that of a well-torrefied cocconut. It is wholly soluble in water; and its taste — which is at first sweet like liquorice — sometimes becomes astringent. It is on account of its astringent properties that it has been prescribed in chronic bronchitis, hæmoptysis, diarrhoea, leucorrhœa, uterine hemorrhage, &c. It has been applied locally, in the form of ointment, (Mones, p. 1, Adipis, p. vij.)

The dose of Monesia is from 12 to 40 grains a day.

MONEYWORT, Lysimachia nummularia.

MONGOLIAN. Anthropologists give the name Mongolian race to a variety of the human species, spread over a great part of the north of Asia, in China, India, Thibet, the Moluccas, &c. The individuals composing it have the skin of a brown red, forehead flat, nose broad, cheeks prominent, and lips large. See Homo.

MONGREL, Hybrid.

MONIPLIES, Omasum.

MONISM, Monismus; from μῶνις, 'unity.' The doctrine, which declares matter and mind to be identical.

MONK PHYSICIANS AND SURGEONS. A class of practitioners of whom Frère Cosme and Jacques Beaulieu in France, and Pravetz in Germany, were the most distinguished.

MONKSHOOD, Aconitum—m. Common, Aconitum napellus—m. Salutory, Aconitum anthora—m. Wild, Aconitum uncinatum.

MONNI'NA POLYSTA'CHIA. A beautiful South American plant. Nat. Ord. Polygalææ. Sex. Syst. Diadelphia Octandria. The bark of the root is a powerful astringent, and much used in South America in diseases of the bowels.

MONNYPLIES, Omasum.

MONOUBLEP'SIS, from monos, and βλεψις, 'sight.' An affection in which vision is confused, imperfect, and indistinct, when both eyes are employed; but perfect or nearly so, when either eye is used singly.

MONOCAR'PÆ, from monos, and καρπός, 'fruit.' A division of cutaneous affections, of the family of Eczematosen, of Fuchs, which includes strophulus, psudracia, and eethyma.

MONOCEPH'ALUS, from monos, and κεφαλή, 'head.' A compound monster having two bodies with a single head.

MONOCOLON, Cæcum, Rectum.

MONOCRA'NUS, from monos, and κρανιον, 'cranium.' A monster with one cranium, but with the face in part double.—Gurlt.

MONOCULUM, Cæcum.

MONOCULUS, Mon'ocle, Monophthal'mus, Unio'culus, Unoc'ulus, from monos, and oculus, 'an eye.' A bandage employed to maintain topical applications over one of the eyes. This bandage, called by some surgeons Simplex oculi, (F.) Œil simple, is made of a roller three or four ells long, rolled into a single ball. See Cyclops.

MONODIPLO'PIA, from δι-δουος, 'double,' and ὄψ, 'eye.' Double vision with one eye.

MONOEMERON, Monemeron.

MONOGASTRIC, Monogast'ricus, from monos, and γαστήρ, 'stomach.' That which has but one stomach. Man is monogastric; ruminating animals, on the contrary, are polygastric.

MONOGENY, see Generation.

MON'OGRAPH, MED'ICAL, Monograph'ia medic'a, from monos, and γραφῆν, 'description.' An ex professo treatise on a single class of diseases, or on a single disease.

MONOHEMERON, Monemeron.

MONOMACHON, Cæcum.

MONOMACUM, Cæcum.

MONOMANIA, see Melancholy—m. Homicidal, Homicidal insanity—m. Incendiary, Pyromania.

MONOMA'NIAC, Monomani'acus, (F.) Monomane, Monomaniacque, from monos, and μανία, 'mania.' One who labours under monomania, or insanity on one subject.

MONOMANIE, Melancholy—m. Homicide, Homicidal insanity.

MONOMMATOS, Cyclops.

MONOMORIA, see Melancholy.

MONOPHALUS, from monos, and ομφαλός, 'a navel.' A monster produced by the union of two bodies having a common umbilicus. Such a double monster is called by I. G. St. Hilairo Monomphal'ian, (F.) Monomphal'ien.

MONOPAGIA, Clavus hystericus, Hemierania; MONOP'ATHY, Monopath'ia, from monos, and παθος, 'disorder.' A state in which one organ or function is disordered. Applied to melancholy or monomania; which is said to be a monopathic affection.

MONOPEGIA, Clavus hystericus, Hemierania. MONOPHTHALMUS, Cyclops, Monoculus.

MONOPLAST'IC, Monoplast'icus, from monos, and πλασσω, 'I form.' That which has one form. A monoplastic element, in histology is one which retains its primary form.—Gerber.

MONOPODIA, Sympodia.

MONOPS, Cyclops.

MONOPSIA, Cyclopia.

MONOPUS, Symmeles.

MONOR'CHIS, (F.) Monorchide, from monos, and ορχις, ορχιδος, 'testicle.' One who has only one testicle.

MONOS, μονος, one alone; as in

MONOS'CELUS, from monos, and σκελος, 'a leg.' One legged.

MONOSI'TIA, from monos, and σιτος, 'food,' 'repast.' The habit of taking only one meal in the day.

MONOSO'MIAN, (F.) Monosomien, from monos, and σῶμα, 'a body.' An epithet applied to a double monster, which seems, in the first instance, to have had but one body.

MONOTROPA UNIFLO'RA, (monos, and τροπος, 'a turn,' the solitary flower turned to one side), Indian pipe, Iceland, Pipe-plant, Nest root, Fit root. Ord. Ericaceæ. An indigenous plant, whose juice, mixed with water, has been extolled by the Indians in ophthalmia. The dried root in powder has been given in epilepsy and nervous diseases.

MONS VEN'ERIS, Montic'ulus Ven'eris, ('Mount of Venus,') Ephebe'um, (F.) Mont de Vénus, Pévil, Motte, Éminence sus-pubienne. The more or less projecting eminence, situate at the base of the hypogastrium, above the vulva and in front of the os pubis. At the period of puberty it becomes covered with hair, formerly called Tressoria.

MONSONIA OVA'TA, Keita, of the Hottentots. A plant of the Nat. Ord. Geraniaceæ, which grows at the Cape of Good Hope. The root and herb are very astringent, and are used successfully in dysentery.

MONSTER, Monstrum, ('anything strange,') Porten'um, Teras, Pelor, Pelo'ria, Pelo'rium, Pelo'rum, (F.) Monstre. Any organized being, having an extraordinary vice of conformation, or a preternatural perversion of every part, or of certain parts only.

The following classification embraces the main varieties of malformations—Vitia primæ conformationis.—1. Those in which certain parts of the normal body are absent or defective—monstra deficientia, constituting Ectrog'eny (Serres),—Monstrosity by defect, (F.) Anomalie ou Monstrosité par défaut, Agénéésie. 2. Those produced by fusion or coalition of organs—coalitio partium, symphysis. 3. Those, in which parts, united in the normal state, are separated from each other—clefts, fissures. 4. Those in which normal openings are occluded—atresia. 5. Those by excess, or in which certain parts have a disproportionate size—monstra abundantia, Monstrosity by excess, (F.) Monstrosité par excès, Hypergénésie. 6. Those, in which one or more parts have an abnormal position—situs mutatus. 7. Those affecting the sexual organs—hermaphroditism; and to these "true malformations" Vogel adds 8. Diseases of the fœtus, and abnormal states of its envelopes.

Amongst the numerous hypotheses entertained on the origin or cause of monsters, or of monstrosity—teratosis, monstrositas, (F.) monstruosité, as the state has been called—three only are worth mentioning. They have been attributed, 1. To the influence of the maternal imagination on the fœtus in utero. 2. To accidental changes, experienced by the fœtus at some period of its uterine existence: and 3. To a primitive defect in the germs. The second seems to be the only one that is philosophical.

As a medico-legal question, monsters, if capable of action as individuals, have the same rights as other persons.

MONT DE VÉNUS, Mons Veneris.

MONTBRISON, MINERAL WATERS OF. Montbrison is a town in France, in the department of the Loire, fifteen leagues from Lyons. There are three cold springs here, which are highly acidulous, and used as refrigerants and aperients.

MONT-DE-MARSAN, MINERAL WATERS OF. Mont-de-Marsan is a small French town, 10 leagues from Dax; where there is a chalybeate spring, somewhat frequented.

MONT-D'OR, MINERAL WATERS OF. Mont-d'Or is a village seven leagues from Clermont, (Puy-de-Dôme.) at which are several mineral springs, cold and thermal. Those of the Fountain La Madeleine, and of the Great Bath, are thermal, temp. 112° Fahr., and contains carbonic acid, subcarbonate and sulphate of soda, chloride of sodium, subcarbonate of lime and magnesia, alumina and oxide of iron. Those of St. Margaret are cold, and contain much carbonic acid.

MONTECATINI, MINERAL WATERS OF. This town is situate near Borgo-Buggiano, in Tuscany. The springs are thermal; ranging from 78° to 118° Fahrenheit.

MONTPELLIER, CLIMATE OF. This seat of a celebrated medical school in the S. E. of France was at one time renowned for its climate, and especially in regard to its adaptation to consumptive cases. This is now exploded, and it is at present esteemed an unfit residence for them. The climate possesses the general characters of that of south-eastern France—being dry, hot, and irritating; subject to frequent vicissitudes, and especially to blasts of keen, cold, northerly winds. It is, indeed, most injurious in pulmonary diseases.

MOON, Luna, Selēnē, Menē. Sax. Mona, (G.) Mond, (F.) Lune. The moon has been supposed to exert considerable influence over the human body, in health and disease. Such influence has been grossly exaggerated. Not many years ago, it would have been heretical to doubt the exacerbation of mania at the full of the moon; yet it is now satisfactorily shown, that if the light be excluded at this period, the lunatic is not excited more than ordinarily.

MORPHICA, from μορφή, 'shape.' Monstrosities of birth.' The 3d order, class Typhica of Good.

MORPHINA, Morphia, Morphium, Morphinē, Morphine, from Μορφεύς, Morpheus, the 'god of sleep.' A solid, colourless alkali; crystallizable in beautiful pyramids, truncated and transparent; soluble in alcohol, and slightly so in boiling water. It exists, combined with meconic acid, in opium. It may be obtained by decomposing, by means of ammonia or calcined magnesia, an aqueous solution of opium made in the cold.

The following is the process of the Pharm. U. S. Opium, sliced, ℥j; distilled water, alcohol, animal charcoal, each a sufficient quantity; solution of ammonia, fʒvj. Macerate the opium with four pints of distilled water for 24 hours, and having worked it with the hand, digest for 24 hours, and strain. Macerate the residue twice successively with distilled water, and strain. Mix the infusions; evaporate to six pints, and filter; then add first five pints of alcohol, and afterwards three fluidounces of the solution of ammonia, previously mixed with half a pint of alcohol. After 24 hours, pour in the remainder of the solution of ammonia, mixed as before with half a pint of alcohol; and set the liquor aside for 24 hours, that crystals may form. To purify these, boil them with two pints of alcohol till they are dissolved; filter the solution, while hot, through animal charcoal, and set it aside to crystallize.

Morphia dissolves perfectly in the acids, which it saturates; and with which it forms very crystallizable salts, with the exception of the acetate. All these salts have a bitter taste, and act upon the animal economy in the same manner as opium, but more powerfully. The acetate is the salt commonly employed in medicine. It was, at one time, supposed that Morphia is the purely sedative part of opium, divested of its irritating properties; but experience has not confirmed this. On the contrary, it will generally disagree where opium does. Dose of morphia, $\frac{1}{4}$ to $\frac{1}{2}$ of a grain.

MORPHINÆ ACETAS, Morphiæ Acetas, Morphium aceticum, Ac'etate of Morphine, Acetate of Morphia. A salt formed by saturating morphia with acetic acid. (Morphia, in powder, freed from narcotina by boiling with sulphuric ether, ʒj; distilled water, Oss; acetic acid, a sufficient quantity. Mix the morphia with the water; then carefully drop in the acid, constantly stirring until the morphia is saturated and dissolved. Evaporate the solution in a water-bath to the consistence of syrup. Lastly, dry the acetate with a gentle heat and rub it into powder.—Ph. U. S.) Dose, from $\frac{1}{2}$ of a grain to half a grain.

MORPHINÆ SULPHAS, MORPHIÆ SULPHAS, Sulphate of Morphia. A salt, formed by saturating morphia with sulphuric acid, evaporating, and crystallizing. Dose, the same as of the acetate.

Muriate, and Citrate of Morphia, Morphiæ citras, have likewise been used; but they possess no advantages over the other salts. The sulphate and muriate are official in the Ph. U. S. The muriate—MORPHIÆ MURIAS—is directed to be prepared as follows. (Morphiæ, in pulv., ʒj; Aquæ destillatæ, Oss; Acid. muriat. q. s. Mix the morphia with the water; carefully drop in the acid, till the morphia is saturated and dissolved. Evaporate and crystallize.) One-sixth of a grain is equal to a grain of opium.

MORPHIUM, Morphina — m. Aceticum, Morphina acetat.

MORPHOLOGICAL, Morpholog'icus, from μορφή, 'shape,' and λογος, 'a description.' That which has relation to the anatomical conformation of parts. Applied, at times, to the alterations in the form of the several parts of the embryo, in contradistinction to histological, which is applied to the transformation by which the tissues are gradually generated. In comparative anatomy, it is applied to the history of the modifications of forms, which the same organ undergoes in different animals.

MORPHOLOGY, Anatomy.

MORPHOLYSIS, from μορφή, 'shape,' and λυσις, 'solution.' Destruction of organization. An agent, that occasions such destruction, is called a morpholytic.

MORPHOLYTIC, see Morpholysis.

MORPHONOMY, Morphonom'ia; from μορφή, 'shape,' and νομος, a law.' The laws of organic formation. The department of anatomical science which teaches the laws of organic configuration.

MORTAL, Morta'lis, from mors, mortis, 'death.' Lethal'is, Leta'lis, Thanato'ces, Thanas'imus, (F.) Mortel. That which is subject to death; — that which causes death: — as, man is mortal; a disease is mortal. Of old, it was the custom to have a division of mortal or deadly wounds, which gave rise to many errors in medico-legal investigations, as the mortality of wounds depends upon various circumstances; and it is often a matter of extreme difficulty to pronounce whether or not a wound is necessarily mortal.

MORTALITY, Mortal'itas, Lethal'itas, Leta'litas, (F.) Mortalité. Same etymon. This word, taken in an extended sense, expresses the condition of all organized bodies, — of being subject to the cessation of life. In the sense in which it is most frequently employed, it signifies,—the proportional quantity of individuals who, in a certain population, die in a given time. If we assume the population of the earth to be one thousand millions, and a generation to last thirty-three years; in that space of time the one thousand millions must all die, and, consequently, the number of deaths will be, by approximation,

Each year.....	30,000,000
Each day	82,109
Each hour	3,421
Each minute.....	57
Each second.....	1 nearly.

If, on the other hand, as has been supposed, the number of deaths is to that of the births as TEN to TWELVE: there will be born,

Each year.....	36,000,000
Each day.....	98,356
Each hour.....	4,098
Each minute.....	68
Each second.....	1 & 2-15ths.

It has been estimated that the average mortality of the Pays du Vaud, is 1 in 49; of Sweden and Holland, 1 in 48; of Russia, 1 in 41; of France, 1 in 40; of Austria, 1 in 38; of Prussia and Naples, 1 in 33 to 35; of England, 1 in 45; and of South America, 1 in 30. The same rate of mortality has been given to the United States as to France; but the statistical details on all this matter have been inadequate, and—it is not improbable—inaccurate. The following has been given as the annual mortality of some of the chief cities of this country and Europe: (See the author's Human Health, p. 101: Philadelphia, 1844.) Philadelphia, 1 in 45·68; Glasgow, 1 in 44; Manchester, 1 in 44; Geneva, 1 in 43; Boston, 1 in 41·26; Baltimore, 1 in 41; London, 1 in 40; New York, 1 in 37·83; St. Petersburg, 1 in 37; Charleston, 1 in 36·50; Leghorn, 1 in 35; Berlin, 1 in 34; Paris, Lyons, Strasburg, and Barcelona, 1 in 32; Nice and Palermo, 1 in 31; Madrid, 1 in 29; Naples, 1 in 28; Brussels, 1 in 26; Rome, 1 in 25; Amsterdam, 1 in 24; and Vienna, 1 in 22½.

In the cities, the mortality under two years of age bears a large ratio. This is exhibited by the following table:

AGES.		London.	Philad.	Baltimore.
Under 1 year, }		28·52	22·7	24·11
From 1 to 2, }			8·6	8·55
	2 to 5,	9·97	7·3	11·18
	5 to 10,	4·33	4·	5·
	10 to 20,	4·03	5·	6·3
	20 to 30,	6·64	12·	9·87
	30 to 40,	8·08	12·	10·53
	40 to 50,	8·89	10·	8·88
	50 to 60,	8·89	7·2	5·78
	60 to 70,	9·15	5·	4·5
	70 to 80,	7·83	3·5	3·
	80 to 90,	3·18	1·9	1·67
	90 to 100,	0·40	0·5	0·26
	100 to 120,	—	0·09	} 0·18
	110 to 120,	—	0·013

It would not be proper to regard the value of life in different countries, or in different periods in the same country, to be indicated by the average mortality; inasmuch as in one case a greater mortality may occur amongst children, and in another amongst adults.

MORTALITY, BILLS OF, Bills of Necrology, Mortuary Registers, (F.) Tables de Mortalité. Tables, instituted for the purpose of exhibiting the number of deaths, &c., in a given time. Well-kept bills of mortality are of great use to the physician and political economist. Those of London were proverbial for their inaccuracy and insufficiency; especially as regards the complaints of which the persons have died. They were formerly made out by the parish clerks, and the information was conveyed to them by two old women, who were appointed in each parish, and were called Searchers;—their duty being to see that the deceased had died a natural death. This miserable system has, however, been abolished; and the Registrar-General's annual reports of births, deaths, and marriages, exhibit how admirably vital statistics are now collected in Great Britain.

MORTAR, Morta'rium, Moreta'rium, Morto'rium, Piso, Ae'onē, Pila, Holmos, Igdē, Igdus, (F.) Mortier. A vessel for reducing to powder different solid substances, and for making certain mixtures. Various substances are employed in the construction of mortars;—iron, marble, glass, wedgewood ware, &c.

MORTARIOLUM, Alveolus.

MORTEL, Mortal.

MORTIER, Mortar.

MORTIFER, Lethiferous.

MORTIFICATIO, Mortification—m. Pulmonum, Necropneumonia.

MORTIFICA'TION, Mortifica'tio, Necro'sis, Sphacela'tion, from mors, mortis, 'death,' and fo, 'I become.' The loss of vitality in a part of the body. The incipient stage of mortification, when the case is still recoverable, is called Gangrene; when totally destroyed, Sphacelus. Mortification of a bone is called Necrosis.

MORTIFICATION, COLD, Sphacelus—m. Ergot, Ergotism—m. Hot, Gangrene—m. Mildew, Ergotism.

MORTUOTH, Cupri sulphas.

MORUS NIGRA, M. lacinia'ta, Mulberry Tree, More'a, Sycami'nos, (F.) Mûrier Noir. Ord. Urticacæ. The fruit of the mulberry tree, Morum, popov, Sycami'num, (F.) Mûre, is pleasant, sweet, subacid, and abounds with a deep violet-coloured juice, Mori succus (Ph. L.). A syrup is directed in the London Pharmacopœia. The bark of the root has been regarded as an anthelmintic.

MORUS RUBRA, Red Mulberry, Wild Mulberry; indigenous. The root has been used to destroy tænia.

MOS, Habit.

MOS MORBI BENIG'NUS seu MALIG'NUS. The benign, or malignant character of a disease.

MOSCHARD'NA, Muscer'da, from μοσχος, 'musk.' A lozenge for the mouth, composed of musk, ambergris, and other aromatics.

MOSCHELÆ'ON, Moscolæ'a. A compound aromatic oil, containing musk.

MOSCHUS, Musk—m. Arabum, Hibiscus abelmoschus—m. Fæctitious, Musk, artificial.

MOSCOLÆA, Moschelæon.

MOSLICH, Maslach.

MOSQUITA, see Mosquito.

MOSQUITO (S.), Diminutive of (S.) mosca, 'a fly.' Musquito. A very troublesome insect in warm, moist situations. Curtains, called Mosquito curtains or bars, are used by way of protection. The entrance of mosquitos into the bedchamber may also be prevented, to a certain extent, by keeping the doors and windows closed until the lights are extinguished. The pain and itching from the bites are alleviated by washing them with hartshorn.

MOSQUITA is a name given, by the Portuguese, to small, red pimples on the skin, resembling the bites of the musquito.

MOTILITY, Motilitas, from motus, 'movement.' (F.) Motilitéé, Motricitéé. Faculty of moving; moving power; contractility.

MOTION, Motus, Mot'io, Mot'a'tio, Mot'a'men, Commo'tio, Permo'tio, (movere, motum, 'to move.') Cine'sis, Movement, (F.) Mouvement. The act of changing place. The various motions may be divided into,—First, the voluntary or those that are executed under the influence of the brain. Secondly, the involuntary, which may be subdivided into, 1. The excited, of the reflex function of Dr. Marshall Hall and others,—as the closure of the larynx on the contact of acrid vapours, of the pharynx on that of the food,—a function of the spinal marrow; and, 2. Those that are executed under the organic and other nerves of involuntary function. It is probable, too, that every living tissue is capable of moving responsive to its appropriate irritant. See Irritability.

MOTOR, Motory.

MOTOR OCULI EXTERNUS, Nervus tim'idus, (F.) Nerf oculo-musculaire externe (Ch.), Nerf moteur oculaire externe, Sixth pair of nerves, arises from the furrow which separates the pons Varolii from the medulla oblongata. It enters the cavernous sinus; anastomoses on the outside of the carotid artery with two filaments furnished by the superior cervical ganglion; enters the orbit by the sphenoidal fissure, and is lost on the rectus externus oculi. This pair is, also, called Abducentes.

MOTORES OCULORUM, Moto'rii Oculorum, Oculares communes, Ophthalmici externi, Common Oculo-muscular Nerves, (F.) Nerfs moteurs oculaires communs (Ch.), The third pair of nerves, Par tertium. This nerve arises from a depression at the inner side of the peduncles of the brain, between the tuber annulare and corpora mammillaria. It enters the outer part of the cavernous sinus, and passes into the orbital cavity. Behind the sphenoidal fissure, it divides into two branches; the one superior and the other inferior. The former is lost on the rectus superior oculi and the levator palpebræ superioris; the latter—the larger of the two—divides into three branches, which pass to the rectus internus, rectus inferior, and lesser oblique. The last furnishes a filament, which passes to the ophthalmic ganglion.

MOTORIAL, Motory.

MOTORPATHY, Kinesipathy.

MOTORY, Motive, Motor, Moto'rial, Motrix, Kinet'ic or Cinet'ic, (F.) Moteur. Same etymon.

That which moves or causes movement, as motor nerves, in contradistinction to sensory.

MOUTH, Sax. muð, Os, Cavum Oris, Stoma, Gab, (Sc.) Mou, (Prov.) Gob, (F.) Bouche. This word sometimes signifies the cavity situate between the jaws, and containing the tongue, &c.;—at others, the outer orifice of that cavity. The mouth, in the first acceptation, Cav'itas seu Spatium Oris, is the cavity; bounded, above, by the palatine arch; by the tongue; before, by the lips; and behind, by the velum palati and pharynx. The sides of the mouth and the organs it contains are lined by a mucous membrane. The anterior aperture of the mouth is, sometimes, called facial—the posterior, pharyngeal. In the mouth are the teeth, gums, alveolar margins, tongue; the excretory ducts of the salivary glands, and those of a number of mucous follicles, &c. It is in this cavity that the food is cut, torn, or bruised by the teeth; is impregnated with saliva, and formed into a mass or bolus, which is then subjected to the act of deglutition. The mouth contains the organs of taste; and it serves in respiration, articulation, expectoration, suction, &c.

The condition of the mouth requires to be attended to in Semeiology. The state of the mucous membrane, like that of the tongue, indicates the condition of the membrane of the alimentary canal generally.

MOUTH, Os, Apertu'ra, Orific'ium, Hiat'us, Peristomium, is, also, applied to the open extremities of vessels or other canals.

MOXA, Moxiburium. A word by which the Chinese and Japanese designate a cottony substance, which they prepare by beating the dried leaves of the Artemisia moxa,—a kind of mugwort. With this down they form a cone, which is placed upon the part intended to be cauterized, and is set fire to at the top. The heat and pain gradually increase, in proportion as the combustion proceeds downwards, until ultimately an eschar may be formed. In Europe and this country, the same operation is usually practised with a cylinder of cotton-wool, or with one formed from the pith of the greater sun-flower. This mode of cauterization is employed as a powerful counter-irritant; which it assuredly is. Sloughing may be in some measure prevented, according to Baron Larrey, by the application of liquid ammonia to the burnt part.

The term moxa has been extended to any substance, which by gradual combustion on or near the skin is employed as a counter-irritant,—as the electric or galvanic moxa or cautery, in which voltaic electricity is employed as the cauterizing agent.

MOXIBURIUM, Moxa.

MOXIBUSTION, Moxibustio, Moxocau'sis, Eucau'sis. Mode of cauterization by means of moxa.

MUCHA'RUM, Muca'rum. A barbarous term, formerly used for an aqueous infusion of roses, sweetened, and evaporated to the consistence of syrup.

MUCIFIC, Blennogenous.

MUCIFORM, Muciform'is, Myxo'des, Blennoides, Blennoides, Blennoides, from mucus, and forma, 'form.' Resembling mucus in character or appearance.

MUCILAGE, Mucila'go, Muca'go, Muce'do, Muccin'ium, from the Lat. mucus,—itself presumed to be from mungere, munctum, 'to wipe the nose.' A mixture of gum and a small quantity of matter analogous to mucus, which is found in abundance in linseed, quince-seed, &c. It is obtained by heating in water the parts, or products, of plants which contain it. It is much used in the preparation of emollient cataplasms and the greater part of the demulcent tisanes, (F.) Hydrolés, Hydrolites.

MUCIN, Mucens.

MUCIP'AROUS, Mucip'arus, (F.) Mucipare, from mucus, and pario, 'I bring forth.' Mucus-producing; as muciparous glands or follicles.

MUCITIS, Mycoderm'itis, from mucus, and itis, denoting inflammation. A term, badly formed, for inflammation of a mucous membrane.

MUCKSWEAT, Desudatio.

MUCOCE'LE, Hernia sacci lacrymalis, from mucus, and κλῆ, 'rupture.' An enlargement or protrusion of the mucous membrane of the lachrymal passages, giving occasion to fistula lacrymalis. Also, dropsy of the lacrymal sac.

MUCO-ENTERITIS, see Enteritis.

MUCO-PURULENT, Muco-purulentus, Pyoblen'nicus, from mucus, and pus. Having the character or appearance of mucus and pus.

MUCUS, Mucor, Muco'sus humor, Mucos'itas, Myxa, Myces, Lapē, Pituita, Blenna, Zoömy'cus, Zoömy'ca, Pit'uite, Animal mucus, Animal mucilage, (F.) Muqueux animal, Morve, Mucilage animal, presumed to be from mungere, 'to wipe the nose.' A substance, analogous to vegetable mucilage; from which, however, it differs, by affording subcarbonate of ammonia on distillation. Mucus exudes through the skin, in a state of combination with a peculiar oily matter; and, drying, forms the epidermis. It constitutes, in part, the different epidermic productions, as the hair, nails, wool, and horn of animals, feathers of birds, and scales of fish. It is found at the surface of the mucous membranes, and presents some difference in its composition and properties, according to the particular mucous membrane from which it is obtained. Its chief organic constituent is an albuminoid compound,—mucin, mucosin. Mucus preserves the membranes moist, and in a state best fitted for the performance of their functions. The French give the term glaisse to the thick, stringy mucus, secreted by the mucous membranes when in a state of disease.

When mucus is examined with the microscope it is found to contain numerous epithelial scales or flattened cells; together with round, granular bodies, commonly termed mucous corpuscles or mucous globules, which are contained in a fluid portion—liquor mucii.

MUDAR, Madar. The Calotropis mudarii seu madarii, C. gigante'a, Ascle'pias gigante'a, Mad'o'rius. Ord. Asclepiadaceæ. In the Hindoo practice of physic, the bark of the root, as well as the concrete juice of the plant, enters into various compound formulæ for the cure of elephantiasis and many other disorders. Experiments instituted by Dr. Duncan, Jr., exhibit its properties to be like those of ipecacuanha. Mixed with oil it is used in gout in Malabar.

MULÂTRE, Mulatto.

MULATTO, (F.) Mulâtre, (S.) Mulata. An individual of the human species engendered of a white and black race; from mulus, 'a mule.'

The following table exhibits the proportion of white blood in the various castes,—arising from the hybridous admixture of white and black,—according to the principles sanctioned by usage.

PARENTS.	OFFSPRING.	DEGREE OF MIXTURE.
Negro and White,.....	Mulatto,	1-2 White, 1-2 Black.
White and Mulatto,	Terceron,	3-4 — 3-4 —
Negro and Mulatto,	{ Griffo, Griff, or Zambo, } or Black Terceron, }	1-4 — 3-4 —
White and Terceron,	Quarteron or Quadroon,	7-8 — 1-8 —
Negro and Terceron	Black Quarteron or Quadroon	1-8 — 7-8 —
White and Quarteron.....	Quinteron,.....	15-16 — 1-16 —
Negro and Black Quarteron,.....	Black Quinteron	1-16 — 15-16 —

The last two were considered to be respectively white and black, in the British West India Islands; and the former, prior to modern changes, were white by law, and consequently free. See Half-caste.

MULATTO JACK, Fever, yellow.

MULBERRY CALCULUS, see Calculi, urinary.

MUL'BERRY MASS. The mulberry-like appearance, presented by the embryo, at a very early stage, when the different cells have drawn around them a portion of the vitellus or yolk.

MULTIFŒTATION, Multifœtatio, from multus, 'many,' and fœtus. Pregnancy with more than two fœtuses.

MULTILOCU'LAR, Multilocularis, from multus, 'many,' and loculus, 'a cell.' Having many cells or small cavities.

MULTIMAM'MÆ, (F.) Multimammæ, from multus, 'many,' and mamma, 'a breast.' A variety of hypergenesis, in which there are supernumerary mammae.

MULTIP'AROUS, Multip'arus, (F.) Multipare, from multus, 'many,' and parire, 'to bring forth.' One that brings forth several young at the same time. Such a birth is called plural.

MULTIPLICATION MÉRISMATIQUE, see Generation.

MULTITUDO, Plethora.

MULTIVORANTIA, Polyphagia.

MULTIVOROUS, Polyphagous.

MUMIA, Mummy—m. de Medullis, Marrow.

MUMISATIO, Mummification.

MUMIFICA'TION, Mumificatio, from mummy, and fit, 'to be made.' Sceletusis. The mode of preparing a mummy.

MUMMY, Mumia, Arab. Moumya, from num, 'wax.' Rebotea, Rebona, (F.) Momie. A dead body simply dried, or dried after having been embalmed. The latter acceptance is the most common. Formerly, the Egyptian mummy was extolled as useful in contusions. It was presumed, also, to have healing, tonic, and resolvent properties. It is now only regarded as an archaic curiosity.

MUMPS, Cynanche parotidea.

MUNCHATOE, Mystax.

MUNC'TIO, Apomezis, (F.) l'Action de moucher, from mungere, munctum, 'to blow the nose.' The act of blowing the nose.

MUNDIFICANTIA, Detergents.

MUNDIFICATIVA, Detergents.

MUND'TIA SPINO'SA. A plant of the Nat. Ord. Polygalææ, which grows in Southern Africa, and a decoction of whose branches is used in atrophy, phthisis, &c.

MUNGOS RADIX, Ophiorrhiza mungos.

MUNGREL, Hybrid.

MUNIMENTUM CASTITATIS, Hymen.

MUQUEUX ANIMAL, Mucus.

MUR, see Coryza.

MURAL, Muralis, from murus, 'a wall.' Vesical calculi are so called, when rugous and covered with tubercles or asperities. They are composed of oxalate of lime.

MURE, Moro, see Moros nigra.

MURFLES, Ephelides, Papulæ.

MUR'IA, Halmé, Sabeila'go, Brine, (F.) Saumure, ('αλμυρις, 'salt water.') This was formerly used as a glyster in dysentery, in certain inveterate neuralgiæ, &c.

MURIAS AURICO-NATRICUM, see Gold.

MURIATE D'AMMONIAQUE, Ammoniac murias—m. d'Ammoniaque et de fer, Ferrum ammoniatum—m. d'Or, Gold, muriate of, see Gold.

MURIAT'IC AC'ID. from muria; Ac'idium salis seu mar'ium concentra'tum seu salis culina'ris seu salis mari'ni, Spir'itus salis mari'ni seu salis Glaube'ri seu salis ac'idus seu fumans, Acidum hydrochlor'icum seu muriat'icum, Spir'it of salt, (F.) Acide hydrochlorique ou muriatique. An aqueous solution of chlorhydric acid gas of s. g. 1.16. The odour of muriatic acid is suffocating; taste very acid and caustic. It is nearly colourless when pure; but commonly of a pale yellow; volatile; the fumes visible. Muriatic acid is possessed of tonic and antiseptic properties. It is used in typhus; cutaneous eruptions; in gargles for inflammatory and putrid sore throats, (gtt. xxx to fʒvj of water,) &c. When added to a pediluvium, it renders it stimulating.

ACIDUM MURIAT'ICUM DILU'TUM of the Ph. U. S. contains four fluidounces of muriatic acid, to twelve fluidounces of distilled water.

MURIDE, Bromine.

MÛRIER NOIR, Morus nigra.

MURIGENE, Chlorine.

MURINA, Bromine.

MURMUR, (F.) Murmure. A word existing both in the Romanic and Teutonic languages, and probably a variety of onomatopœia;—mur mur expressing the kind of sound which the word indicates. A low continued or continuously repeated sound, as that of flame, or of a stream running over a stony bottom.

MURMUR AURIUM, Tinnitus Aurium—m. Intestinale seu intestinorum seu Ventris, Borborygismus.

MURMUR, RES'PIRATORY. (F.) Bruit respiratoire. The noise heard during inspiration and expiration, especially the former. It is produced by the passage of the air through the bronchial tubes and into the air-cells. It has been also called murmur of the expansion of the lungs, (F.) Bruit d'expansion pulmonaire; and, when distinctly vesicular, Respiration of the cells or vesicular respiration, (F.) Respiration ou murmure vésiculaire. Vesicular respiration is of course absent when the cells of the lungs have been obliterated from any cause. We may then have the Respiration nulle, Absence du bruit respiratoire, Silence, and Respiration silencieuse of the French writers.

At times, it is rude during inspiration or expiration, or both—the Respiration rude or R. râpeuse of the French. At others, there is a blowing sound, (F.) Souffle, Respiration soufflante, as if some one were blowing into the auscultator's ear through a tube. This is heard in the healthy state over the larynx, trachea, (F.) Souffle trachéal, and about the bifurcation of the bronchia, (F.) Souffle bronchique; but when it proceeds from the lungs it denotes disease. It may be tubular or diffused. In the former, the whiffing murmurs appear to occur in a space limited to the immediate neighbourhood of the part examined. In the latter, they are produced with but moderate intensity, and sometimes at a distance from the ear, over a tolerably extended space.

The respiration, perceived over the trachea and bronchia in health, is called tracheal or bronchial or tubal, (F.) Respiration bronchique, Souffle tubaire, according to the situation in which it is heard.

MURMUR, UTERINE, Bruit placentaire—m. Utero-placental, Bruit placentaire.

MURMUR, WHIFFING, see Murmur, respiratory.

MURR, Murrain, from A. S. mýrphan, 'to destroy,' or from (L.) mori, 'to die.' (F.) Claveau, Clavelée, Pestilential Fever. An epizootic, perhaps contagious, disease, having some resemblance to small-pox, which affects cattle—especially sheep; and is said to have been transferred to man.

MURRAIN, see Coryza.

MURREN, Coryza.

MUSA, M. Paradisiaca—m. Cliffortiana, M. Paradisiaca—m. Mensaria, M. Paradisiaca.

MUSA PARADISI'ACA, Musa, M. Mensa'ria seu Cliffortia'na, Amusa, Palma hu'milis, Ficus In' dica, Bata, Plat'anus, Plantain tree. Family, Musaceæ. Sex. Syst. Hexandria Monogynia. It grows in many parts of India and South America. The fruit, which is largely eaten for bread, consists of a mealy substance, Plantain meal, Conquin-tay. It is clammy; has a sweetish taste, and will dissolve in the mouth without chewing. The whole spike of fruit often weighs forty or fifty pounds. The leaves of the tree serve the Indians for tablecloths and napkins. Being smooth and soft, they are also employed as dressings for blisters. The water from the soft trunk is astringent, and sometimes used in diarrhœa.

MUSA SAPIENTUM. The Bana'na tree, Baco'ba, (F.) Bananier, Bacove. This differs somewhat from the last. The fruit, Bana'na, (S.) Platano, is shorter, straighter, and rounder; the pulp softer and of a more luscious taste. When ripe, it is very agreeable; it is eaten like the plantain, and relished by all ranks of people in the West Indies. Both varieties are natives of Guinea.

MUSC, Musk.

MUSCA HISPANICA, Cantharis.

MUSCÆ ENTO-HYALOID, see Metamorphopsia—m. Volitantes, see Metamorphopsia.

MUSCADE, see Myristica moschata.

MUSCADIER, Myristica moschata.

MUSCERDA, Moschardina.

MUSCLE, (old Eng.) Brawn, Mus'culus, Torus, Lacer'tus, Mys, Myon, from μῦς. 'a mouse or rat;' because, say some etymologists, the ancients compared the muscles to flayed mice or rats. According to Diemerbroeck, Douglass, Chaussier, &c., μῦς comes rather from μύειν, 'to close,' 'to move,' &c., a function proper to muscles. This etymon is the more probable. Muscles have been divided into those of Animal life or of the life of relation—voluntary muscles—which execute movements under the influence of the will; as the muscles of the limbs, head, trunk, &c., and into those of organic life—involuntary muscles—which contract under the influence of certain special stimuli; as the heart, fleshy fibres of the stomach, &c. Mixed muscles are those which belong partly to each of these divisions;—as the muscles of respiration; the sphincters, &c. Muscles that act in opposition to each other are called antagonists; thus, every extensor has a flexor for an antagonist, and conversely. Muscles that concur in the same action are termed congenerous. The muscles present numerous varieties in form, size, situation, use, &c., and have been divided, by some, into long, broad, and short. Each of these divisions comprises simple and compound muscles. Simple or rectilinear muscles have all their fibres in a similar direction, and only one body—as the Sartorius, Pronator quadratus, &c. Compound muscles are those which have only one belly and several tendons, as the flexors of the fingers and toes; or several bellies and several tendons,—as the biceps flexor cubiti, sacro-lumbalis, &c. To the compound muscles belong, also, the radiated muscles. Their fibres set out from a common centre, and are arranged like the radii of a circle;—such are the diaphragm, iliacus, temporal, &c. Pennated or Penniform Muscles. Their fibres are arranged in two rows, which are united at a median line, at greater or less angles; nearly as the feathers are inserted into a quill. The palmaris longus is one of these. Semi-penniform muscles: their fibres are oblique, as in the last case; but they are inserted only on one side of the tendon. Hollow Muscles are,—the heart, intestines, urinary bladder, &c.

Much difference has existed in the enumeration of muscles. Some authors reckon them at upwards of 400. Chaussier admits only 368. The greater part of them are in pairs. Very few are azygous.

TABLE OF THE MUSCLES, ARRANGED AFTER THE MANNER OF DR. BARCLAY, ACCORDING TO THEIR ACTIONS.

THE HEAD IS MOVED

Forwards by	Backwards by	To either side by
Platysma myoides, Sterno-mastoideus, Rectus anticus major, " " minor, Assisted (when the lower jaw is fixed) by Mylo-hyoideus, Genio-hyoideus, Genio-hyo-glossus, Digastrici.	Part of trapezius, Splenius capitis, Complexus, Trachelo-mastoideus, Rectus posticus major, " " minor, Obliquus capitis superior.	Platysma myoides, Sterno-mastoideus, Part of trapezius, Splenius capitis, " colli, Trachelo-mastoideus, Complexus.

THE NECK IS MOVED

Forwards by	Backwards by	Laterally by
Platysma myoides, Sterno-mastoideus, Digastricus, Mylo-hyoideus, Genio-hyoideus, Genio-hyo-glossus Omo-hyoidei, Sterno-hyoidei, Thyro-hyoidei, Rectus anticus minor, Longus colli.	Part of trapezius, Rhomboides minor, Serratus posticus superior, Splenius capitis, " colli, Complexus, Trachelo-mastoideus, Transversalis colli, Inter-spinales colli, Semi-spinales colli, Rectus posticus major, " " minor, Obliquus capitis superior, " " inferior, Scaleni postici, Levator scapulæ.	Various combinations of those muscles which separately move it for wards and backwards, assisted by the scaleni, intertransversales, and recti laterales.

THE TRUNK IS MOVED

Forwards by	Backwards by	Laterally by
Rectus abdominis, Pyramidalis, Obliquus externus abdominis, Obliquus internus, Psoas magnus, " parvus,	Trapezius, Rhomboides major, Latissimus dorsi, Serratus posticus superior, " " inferior, Sacro-lumbalis, Longissimus dorsi, Spinales dorsi, Semi-spinales dorsi, Multifidus spinæ, Inter-transversales dorsi et lumborum.	Obliquus externus, " internus, Quadratus lumborum, Longissimus dorsi, Sacro-lumbalis, Serrati postici, Latissimus dorsi.

Assisted in some circumstances by			Assisted occasionally by
Biceps, Coraco-brachialis.			Pectoralis major, Latissimus and teres major.
			Outwards by
			Supra-spinatus, Infra-spinatus, Teres minor.

THE FORE-ARM IS MOVED

Forwards by	Backwards by	Rotated inwards by
Biceps, Brachialis anticus, Pronator teres,	Triceps, Anconeus.	Pronator teres, Flexor carpi radialis, Palmaris longus, Flexor sublimis, Pronator quadratus,
Assisted by		Outwards by
Flexor carpi radialis, " sublimis, " ulnaris, Supinator longus.		Biceps, Supinator brevis, Extensor secundi internodii.

THE CARPUS IS MOVED

Forwards by	Backwards by	Outwards by	Inwards by
Flexor carpi radialis, Palmaris longus, Flexor sublimis, " carpi ulnaris, " profundus, " longus pollicis.	Extensor carpi radialis longior, Extensor carpi radialis brevis, Extensor secundi internodii, Indicator, Extensor communis digitorum, Extensor proprius pollicis.	Flexor carpi radialis, Extensor carpi radialis longior, Extensor carpi radialis brevis, Extensor ossis metacarpi, Extensor primi internodii.	Flexor sublimis, " carpi ulnaris, " profundus, Extensor communis digitorum, Extensor minimi digiti, Extensor carpi ulnaris.

THE THUMB IS MOVED

Inwards and forwards, across the palm, by	Outwards and backwards by	Upwards and forwards, away from the other fingers, by	Backwards and inwards, to the other fingers, by
Opponens pollicis, Flexor brevis, " longus	Extensor ossis metacarpi pollicis, Extensor primi internodii, Extensor secundi internodii.	Abductor, Assisted by part of the Flexor brevis.	Adductor, Extensor primi internodii, Extensor secundi internodii.

THE FINGERS ARE MOVED

Forwards, or flexed, by	Backwards, or extended, by	Outwards, to radial border, by	Inwards by
Flexor sublimis, " profundus, Lumbricales, Interossei, Flexor brevis digiti minimi, Abductor digiti minimi.	Extensor communis, " minimi digiti, Indicator.	Abductor indicis, " digiti minimi, Interossei.	Abductor digiti minimi, Interossei.

THE THIGH IS MOVED

Forwards by	Backwards by	Inwards by	Outwards by
Psoas magnus, Iliacus, Tensor vaginæ femoris, Pectineus, Adductor longus, brevis.	Gluteus maximus, Part of gluteus medius, Pyriformis, Obturator internus, Part of adductor magnus, Long head of biceps, Semi-tendinosus, Semi-membranosus.	Psoas magnus, Iliacus, Pectineus, Gracilis, Adductor longus, " brevis, " magnus, Obturator externus, Quadratus femoris.	Tensor vaginæ femoris Gluteus maximus, " medius, " minimus, Pyriformis.

THE THIGH IS ROTATED

Inwards by	Outwards by
Tensor vaginæ femoris, Part of gluteus medius, And, when the leg is extended, by Sartorius, Semi-tendinosus.	Gluteus maximus, Part of gluteus medius, Pyriformis, Gemellus superior, Obturator internus, Gemellus inferior, Quadratus femoris, Obturator externus, Psoas magnus, Iliacus, Adductor longus, " brevis, " magnus, Biceps cruris, slightly.

THE LEG IS MOVED

Backwards, or flexed, by	Extended by
Semi-tendinosus, Biceps, Semi-membranosus, Gracilis, Sartorius, Popliteus.	Rectus, Crureus, Vastus externus, " internus.

THE FOOT IS MOVED

Forwards, or flexed, by	Backwards, or extended by	Inclined inwards by	Outwards by
Tibialis anticus, Extensor proprius pollicis, Extensor longus digitorum, Peroneus tertius.	Gastrocnemius, Plantaris, Soleus, Flexor longus digitorum, " longus pollicis, Tibialis posticus, Peroneus longus, " brevis.	Extensor proprius pollicis, Flexor longus digitorum, " longus pollicis, Tibialis posticus.	Peroneus longus, " brevis, Extensor longus digitorum, Peroneus tertius.

THE TOES ARE MOVED

Backwards, or flexed, by	Forwards, or extended, by	Inclined inwards by	Outwards by
Abductor pollicis, Flexor brevis digitorum, Abductor minimi digiti, Flexor longus pollicis, " digitorum, " accessorius, Lumbricales, Flexor brevis pollicis, Adductor pollicis, Flexor brevis minimi digiti, Interossei.	Extensor longus digitorum, Extensor proprius pollicis, " brevis digitorum.	Abductor pollicis, Interossei.	Adductor pollicis, " digiti minimi, Interossei.

Muscles have been variously named. 1. According to their uses, as diaphragm, buccinator, extensors, flexors, adductors, abductors, levators, depressors, &c. 2. According to their position, as interspinales, interossei, subclavius, popliteus, anconeus, cubitalis, iliacus, temporalis, &c. 3. According to their shape, as trapezius, splenius, lumbricalis, serratus, digastric, deltoid, scalenus, rhomboides, &c. 4. According to their dimensions, as pectoralis major, rectus capitis anticus major, pectoralis minor, glutæus maximus, medius, and minimus. 5. According to their direction, as obliquus abdominis, transversalis abdominis, rectus femoris, rectus abdominis, &c. 6. According to their composition, as semi-membranosus, semi-tendinosus, complexus, &c. 7. According to their attachments, or the different points of the skeleton with which they are connected by means of tendons or aponeuroses; as sterno-cleido-mastoideus, sterno-hyoideus, &c. On this is grounded the nomenclature of M. Dumas, and that of Chaussier.

The end of the muscle, which adheres to the most fixed part, is usually called the origin or head, (F.) Tête; and that which adheres to the more moveable part, the insertion or tail, (F.) Queue; the intervening part or body of the muscle being called the venter or belly, Venter musculi, Médium musculi, (F.) Ventre: hence the names gastrocnemii, digastricus, biceps, and triceps; according as they have two bellies, two or three heads, &c.

Muscles are formed,—1. Essentially of the muscular or fleshy fibre, (see Muscular Fibre.) 2. Of Areolar tissue, which unites together the fibres. This areolar tissue is not very visible between the fine and loose fibres; but becomes more so, when they unite in more considerable fasciculi. It forms, moreover, to each muscle, an external envelope, which unites it to the neighbouring parts, and admits of its motion. This envelope was formerly called Tunica propria musculorum. 3. Of Arteries. These proceed from neighbouring trunks, and are, generally, very large. Their size and number are always in proportion to the bulk of the muscle. With the exception of some viscera, as the lungs and the kidneys, there are few organs that receive as much blood as the muscles. 4. Of Veins. They follow the same course in the muscles as the arteries. Bichat asserts that they are generally devoid of valves. 5. Of Lymphatics. Of these we know little, and cannot easily follow them between the fleshy fibres. 6. Of Nerves. These are numerous, and of different sizes. They, almost all, proceed from the encephalon; some, however, issue from ganglions, and accompany the arteries. In general, they penetrate the fleshy tissue along with the vessels, with which they are closely united. After they have entered the muscles, they divide and subdivide until they are lost sight of.

MUSCLE CANIN, Levator anguli oris—m. Cannelé, Ischio-trochanterianus.

MUSCLE OF GAVARD. The oblique muscular fibres of the stomach.

MUSCLE GRAND FESSIER, Glutæus major—m. of Guthrie, Compressor Urethrae—m. of Horner, Tensor Tarsi—m. of Houston, Compressor venæ dorsalis penis—m. très Large du dos, Latissimus dorsi—m. of Wilson, Compressor urethrae.

MUSCULAR, Muscularis, Musculo'sus, Toro'sus, (F.) Musculaire, Musculeux. That which belongs or relates to the muscles. Well furnished with muscles, Locerto'sus.

MUSCULAR ARTERIES. Arteries that are distributed to the muscles. The name, Muscular Arteries of the eye, has been especially given to two branches sent off by the ophthalmic artery:—the one, inferior, which furnishes branches to the rectus inferior oculi, lachrymal sac, &c., and some of the anterior ciliary arteries: the other—the superior, which is sometimes wanting; but, when it exists, gives branches to the rectus superior oculi and levator palpebrae superioris.

MUSCULAR CONTRACTION. The exertion of the power, possessed by muscles, of shortening themselves, or of contracting to produce motion:—muscular motion being the change in the situation and relation of organs, induced by muscular contraction. When a muscle contracts, its fibres assume more the zigzag direction, and the extremities approximate; but the bulk of the whole muscle is not augmented. This contraction takes place, at times, with extreme velocity: a single thrill, in the letter r, can be pronounced in the 1-30,000th part of a minute. The force of contraction, Myodyn'namis, depends upon the healthy physical condition of the muscle, combined with due energy of the brain. The duration, in voluntary motion, is for a certain time dependent upon the will:—contractions, excited involuntarily, cannot be so long maintained.

MUSCULAR CURRENT. A current, which, according to Matteucci, exists in every living muscle, whose tendinous extremities are not equally disposed—one, for example, forming a cord; the other broad and ribbon-like—and which circulates in the muscle from the tendinous extremity to the muscular surface.

MUSCULAR FIBRE, Fleshy fibre, Filum musculare, Fibrilla muscularis. A name given to the filaments, which, by their union, form the muscles. This fibre is flat, soft, downy, linear, but little elastic, and more or less red. It is firmer in adults than in the young or the aged; of the same size in the great and small muscles; and runs its course without bifurcation or ramification. It is but slightly resisting in the dead body, tearing readily; but during life it supports very great efforts without laceration. It is, itself, composed of a considerable number of fibrils, similar to each other, and subdividing almost ad infinitum. The ultimate filaments into which the fibre can be decomposed by mechanical means seem to be hollow or tubular. The fibre exists under two forms, the striated or striped, (F.) Fibre striée, and the non-striated, smooth, or unstriped, (F.) Fibre lisse; the muscles composed of the former ministering, as a general rule, to the animal functions,—the latter always, perhaps, to the organic. The colour of the muscular fibres is red in man, and white in several animals. A greater or less number,—united in fasciculi, Fasciculi seu Lacerti musculorum, approximated to each other, and forming a distinct mass, of very variable size and shape, the extremities being attached to bones by means of tendons,—constitutes a muscle. In this are included areolar membrane, vessels and nerves.—See Muscle.

MUSCULAR NERVES. The nerves distributed to the muscles are so named. Winslow calls the 4th pair of nerves—Nerf musculaire oblique supérieur.

MUSCULAR SYSTEM. A term given to the aggregate of the muscles of the body.

MUSCULAR VEINS. These bring back the blood, which has been carried to the muscles by the muscular arteries.

MUSCULARIS, Corroborant.

MUSCULATION, See Locomotion.

MUSCULEUX, Muscular.

MUSCULI ACCESSORII AD SACRO-LUMBALUM, see SACRO-LUMBALIS—m. Papillares. Columnæ carneæ—m. Pectinati—Pectinated muscles.

MUSCULINE, see Fibrin.

MUSCULO-CUTANEOUS, Musculo-cutaneus, from musculus, 'a muscle,' and cutis, 'skin.' That which appertains to muscles and skin.

MUSCULO-CUTANEOUS NERVE. This name is especially given to two nerves;—the one, the External cutaneous nerve, furnished by the brachial plexus (see Cutaneous:—) the other, given off from the popliteus externus, (F.) Nerv Sciaticus, Poplitæ externe, Prætibio digital (Ch.). It descends on the anterior and outer part of the leg,—at first, hid among the muscles; becomes superficial about the middle of the leg; and divides into two branches, which pass superficially on the back of the foot. Two musculo-cutaneous nerves—superior and inferior—proceed from the first lumbar. The superior musculo-cutaneous—il'io-scrotal, il'io-hypogast'ricus—which divides into two branches,—abdominal and scrotal. The inferior musculo-cutaneous is smaller than the superior, and is distributed as its name, il'io-in'guinal, indicates.

MUSCULO-RACHIDÆ'US. Belonging or relating to muscles and to the spine. A name given to branches, furnished behind by the intercostal, lumbar, and sacral arteries, which are distributed to the spine and to the muscles of the neighbourhood.

MUSCULOSA EXPANSIO, Platysma myoides.

MUSCULO-SPIRAL NERVE, Radial nerve.

MUSCULOSUS, Muscular.

MUSCULUS ACCLIVIS, Obliquus internus abdominis—m. Auxiliarius, Pyramidalis abdominis—m. Constrictorius, Sphincter—m. Cutaneus, Platysma myoides—m. Eustachii, Laxator tympani—m. Fallopii, Pyramidalis abdominis—m. Femoris membranosus, Fascia lata—m. Patientiæ, Levator scapulæ—m. Penicillatus, Levator labii inferioris—m. Pyxidatus terrestris, Lichen pyxidatus—m. Scandularius, Parathenar—m. Subcutaneus, Platysma myoides—m. Succenturiatus, Pyramidalis abdominis—m. Succingens, Diaphragm—m. Supercilii, Corrugator supercilii—m. Testicondus, Cremaster—m. Testis, Cremaster—m. Tubæ novæ, Circumflexus.

MUSCULUS ARBOREUS, Lichen plicatus—m. Caninus, Lichen caninus—m. Catharticus, Lycopodium selago—m. Clavatus, Lycopodium—m. Corallinus, Corallina Corsicana—m. Cranii humani, Lichen saxatilis—m. Erectus, Lycopodium selago—m. Helminthocortus, Corallina Corsicana—m. Islandicus, Lichen islandicus—m. Marinus, Corallina Corsicana—m. Maritimus, Corallina—m. Pulmonarius quercinus, Lichen pulmonarius—m. Pyxidatus, Lichen pyxidatus—m. Villosus, Peristroma.

MUSEAU DE TANCHE, Os uteri.

MUSEUM ANATOM'ICUM, Supel'lex anatom'ica. An anatomical museum.

MUSHROOM, Fungus.

MUSIC, Mus'ica, (F.) Musique, from μουσα, musæ, 'a song.' The art of producing harmonious and cadenced sounds; an art, which has, at times, been beneficially used in diseases, particularly in those of the mind; or on which the mind could act in a salutary manner.

MUSICOMA'NIA, Musoma'nia, from music, and mania. A variety of monomania in which the passion for music is carried to such an extent as to derange the intellectual faculties.

MUSING, LISTLESS, Aphelxia otiosa.

MUSIQUE, Musice.

MUSK, Moschus, Mosch (Arab.), (F.) Musc. A peculiar concrete animal substance, of a very diffusible odour, bitter taste, and a deep brown colour: solid, and enclosed in the preputial follicles of Moschus moschiferus, Musk Deer, (F.) Chevrotain porte-musc. It is possessed of stimulant and antispasmodic properties. Dose, gr. v to ʒj in bolus.

MUSK, ARTIFIC'IAL, Moschus factit'ius, Resina Succini. (Ol. succini rectific. 1 part, acid. nitric. 4 parts. Digest;—a black matter will be deposited, which must be well washed with water.)

MUSKGRAPE FLOWER, Bulbus vomitorius.

MUSKMALLOW, Hibiscus abelmoschus.

MUSKROOT, Smbul.

MUSKSEED, see Hibiscus abelmoschus.

MUSKWOOD, Thymiama.

MUSOMANIA, Musicomania.

MUSQUITO, Mosquito.

MUSSEN'DA FRONDO'SA, Bel'ilia, Bele'son. A decoction of this Ceylonese plant has been esteemed refrigerant.

MUSSEL, Mytilus edulis.

MUSSELLED, see Mytilus edulis.

MUSSITATIO, Mussitatio, from mussitare, mussitatum, itself from mussare, 'to murmur.' A condition, in which the tongue and lips move, as in the act of speaking, but without sounds being produced. This sort of murmuring is an unfavourable sign in disease, as indicating great cerebral debility.

MUSTA'CEUM: from Mustacea, a kind of laurus used in making it. A kind of wedding-cake used by the ancients, which consisted of meal, aniseed, cummin, and several other aromatics; its object—it has been conceived—being to prevent or remove the indigestion occasioned by too great indulgence at the marriage feast. Lau-reolum in mustaceo quærere—"to seek for glory in pitiful performances."—Cicero.

MUSTACHE, Mystax.

MUSTARD, BLACK, Sinapis—m. Clammy, Polanisia graveolens—m. Essencé of, White-head's, see Sinapis—m. False, Polanisia graveolens—m. Green, Lepidium sativum—m. Hedge, Erysimum—m. Mithridate, Thlaspi campestre—m. Stinking hedge, Alliaria—m. Treacle, Thlaspi arvense—m. White, Sinapis alba—m. Wild, Sinapis arvensis.

MUSTELANEUS, Galeancon.

MUSTUM, Wort.

MUTACIS'MUS, Mutocism, from μυτακίζω, 'I use the letter m, uv, too frequently.' A vicious pronunciation; consisting, according to Sauvages, in the frequent repetition of the letters m, b, and p, which are substituted for others.

MUTA'TIO SEXÛS. 'A change or conversion of sex.' A notion prevailed in antiquity that such a conversion was possible.

MUTEO'SIS, from mutus, 'dumb.' Under this name is comprehended every phenomenon of expression, voluntary and involuntary, which impresses the sight or touch.

MUTILA'TION, Mutilatio, Maiming, from mutillus, 'broken.' The removal or privation of a limb, or of some other external part of the body. In all countries, this crime has been punished with severity.

MUTINUS, Penis.

MUTISME, Mutitas.

MUTITAS, (mutus, (F.) Muet, 'dumb.'). Obtumescentia, Ala'lia, Anan'dia, Dumbness, Speechlessness, (F.) Mutisme, Mutité. Impossibility of articulating sounds; although they can be elicited. Dumbness is often congenital, and united with deafness, of which it is an effect. In some cases it is accidental.

MUTITAS SURDORUM, Apho'nia Surdorum, Surdomutitas, Deaf-dumbness, (F.) Surdimutité. Speechlessness from deafness; congenital, or produced during infancy. The subjects of this affection are called deaf-dumb, (F.) Sourds-muets.

MUTITÉ, Mutitas.

MUTO, Penis.
 MUTONIATUS, Membrosus.
 MUTTERKORN, Ergot.
 MUTTON TEA. Prepared from a pound of mutton, freed from the fat and cut into thin slices; and a pint and a half of boiling soft water poured over them, as in the case of beef tea; except that it requires to be boiled for half an hour after the maceration, before it is strained through a sieve.
 MUTUNNUS, Priapus.
 MYACANTHA, Ruscus.
 MYALGIA, Cramp.
 MYASTHENIA, from μῦς, 'a muscle,' and ασθενεία, 'debility.' Muscular debility.
 MYCE, Occlusion.
 MYCES, Fungus.
 MYCHTHISMUS, Moaning, Suspirium.
 MYCODERMA. My'codermi; from μύκης, 'a mushroom,' and δέρμα, 'skin.' A cryptogamous growth, which constitutes the crusts of favus. See Porrigo favosa.
 MYCODERMA CEREVISIÆ, Torula cerevisiæ.
 MYCODERMA PLICÆ, Trichomaphyton. A cryptogamous growth, said to be the essence of Plica.
 MYCODERMITIS, Mucitis.
 MYCODES, Fungoid.
 MYCODIARRHŒA, see Diarrhœa.
 MYCODYSENTERIA, see Dysentery.
 MYCOPHTHISIS, see Bronchorrhœa.
 MYCORTHOPNŒA; from μύκος, 'mucus,' and ορθοπνοία, 'difficulty of breathing except when in the erect attitude.' Orthopnoea from excessive secretion of mucus in the air-passages—Orthopnœa pituitosa.
 MYCOSIS, Fungus.
 MYCTERES, Myxæ, Nares.
 MYCTEROPHONIA, Rhinophonia.
 MYCTEROXEROTES, Mycteroxero'sis, from μύκτηρες, 'the nares,' and ξηρότης, 'dryness.' Narium siccatas. Dryness of the interior of the nose.
 MYCUS, Mucus.
 MYDE'SIS, from μυδῶω, 'I abound with moisture,' 'I am putrid.' Moisture. In its most general sense, it means corruption. By some, it is used for a mucous discharge from inflamed eyelids.
 MYDON, μυδών. Same etymon. Fungus or putrid flesh in certain fistulous ulcers.—Pollux. Also, flesh putrid from mouldiness.
 MYDRIASIS, Platyco'ria, Platyco'riasis, Amydri'asis. A name given by several writers to morbid dilatation of the pupil; and, by others, to weakness of sight, produced by hydrophthalmia, or superabundance of humours, from μυδός, 'moisture.'
 MYDRIATICUS, Mydriat'ic. Relating to or causing dilatation of the pupil.—Pereira.
 MYELALGIA; from μυελός, 'the spinal marrow,' and άλγος, 'pain.' Pain in the spinal marrow.
 MYELANALOSIS, Tabes dorsalis.
 MYELAPOPLEXIA, Apoplexia myelitica.
 MYELATELIA; from μυελός, 'the spinal marrow,' and ατελεία, (a, privative, and τελος, 'end,') 'want of end or finish.' Incompleteness of the spinal marrow.
 MYELATROPHIA, Tabes dorsalis.
 MYÉLITE, Myelitis.
 MYELITIS, M. parenchymatosa seu spin'alis, Inflammat'io medull'is spin'alis, Spin'itis, Spinodors'itis, Notomyel'itis, Rachionyel'itis, Rachialgi'itis (of some), (F.) Myélite, Inflammation de la moëlle épinière, I. rachidienne, from μυελός, 'the marrow,' and itis, denoting inflammation. Inflammation of the spinal marrow or its membranes;—indicated by deep-seated burning pain in the spine, with various nervous and vascular irregularities of function. It is not common. Dr. Marshall Hall proposes to call inflammation of the membranes of the brain Meningitis; that of the substance of the brain Myelitis.

 MYELITIS PERECHIALIS, Meningitis, cerebro-spinal—m. Spinalis, Myelitis—m. Exsudativa, Hydrorachis—m. Parenchymatosa, Myelitis.
 MYELOCHYSIS, Hydrorachis.
 MY'ELOCYTES, from μυελός, 'marrow,' and κύτος, a mass, body or cell. Granules of the brain. Nuclei of the cells of the gray substance.
 MYELOGANGLIITIS, Cholera (sporadic).
 MY'ELOÏD, Myeloid'es, Myelo'des; from μυελός, 'marrow,' and εἶδος, 'resemblance.' Marrow-like.
 MYELOID TUMOR, Fibroplastic tumour. A sarcomatous tumour, the more characteristic constituents of which are—peculiar many-nucleated corpuscles, which have been recognised as constituents of the marrow and diploe of bones, especially in the fœtus, and in early life.—Paget.
 MYELOMA, see Encephaloid.
 MYELOMALACIA, Mollities medullæ spinalis.
 MYELOMENINGITIS, Meningitis, spinal.
 MYELOMYCES, see Encephaloid.
 MYELON, Medulla spinalis.
 MYELOPARALYSIS, Paraplegia.
 MYELOPHTHISIS, Tabes dorsalis—m. Sicca, Tabes mesenterica.
 MYELOPHYMATA, Tuber'cula medullæ spin'alis, from μυελός, 'marrow,' and φύμα, 'a tubercle.' Tubercles of the spinal marrow.
 MYELOPLAXE, from μυελός, 'marrow,' and πλαξ, 'a plate or lamella.' Plates or lamellæ with numerous nuclei in the marrow of bones.—Robin.
 MYELORRHAGIA, Apoplexia myelitica.
 MYELOSPONGUS, see Encephaloid.
 MYELUS, Marrow, Medulla spinalis—m. Dicauchenis, Medulla spinalis—m. Dorsites, Medulla spinalis—m. Notigæus, Medulla spinalis—m. Psoides, Medulla spinalis.
 MYENERGIA, from μῦς, 'a muscle,' ερ, and εργον, 'work.' Muscular strength.
 MYGMUS, Suspirium.
 MYIOCEPHALUM, Staphyloma.
 MYIODOPSIA, Metamorphopsia.
 MYITIS, Myositis, Rheumatism, acnte.
 MYLABRIS CICHORII, see Cantharis—m. Punctata, see Cantharis—m. Pusulata, see Cantharis.
 MYLACEPHALUS, from μύλη, 'a mole,' a, privative, and κεφαλή, 'head.' A monster with only traces of viscera, and without head or extremities.
 MYLACRI, Molar teeth.
 MYLACRIS, Patella.
 MYLE, Patella, Mole.
 MYLICUS, Molar.
 MYLO, in composition, from μύλη, 'the jaw.' Relating or belonging to the jaw.
 MYLODI, Molar teeth.
 MYLODONTES, Molar teeth.
 MYLOGLOSSUS, from mylo, and γλωσσα, 'the tongue.' Winslow has given this name to muscular fibres, which pass from the posterior part of the myloid line of the lower jaw, and from the sides of the base of the tongue to the parietes of the pharynx. These fibres belong to the constrictor superior pharyngis.
 MYLO-HYOID LINE, see Mylo-hyoidens.
 MYLO-HYOID FURROW or GROOVE. A furrow which passes from the superior orifice of the inferior dental canal of the lower jaw in the same direction as the canal, and lodges the mylo-hyoid nerve, a branch of the inferior-dental.
 MYLO-HYOID NERVE, see Mylo-hyoid furrow.
 MYLO-HYOÏDEUS, from mylo, and υοιήδης, 'the os hyoides.' Mylo'des, (F.) Mylo-hyoidien.

The Mylo-pharyngeus of Morgagni and Santorini. This muscle is situate at the upper and anterior part of the neck, behind the lower jaw. It is broad, flat, and has the form of a truncated triangle. It arises from the internal oblique, internal maxillary or mylo-hyoid line of the lower jaw bone, and is inserted at the fore part of the body of the os hyoides. Its innermost fibres unite with those of the opposite side to form a raphe on the median line. The mylo-hyoideus raises the os hyoides and carries it forward, or it depresses the lower jaw.

MYLO-PHARYNGEUS, Constrictor pharyngis, Mylo-hyoideus.

MYLUODES, Mylo-hyoideus.

MYO, in composition, from μῦον, 'a muscle.' Appertaining or relating to a muscle.

MYOCARDIIS, Carditis.

MYOCEPHALITIS, Myi'tis cephal'ica; from myo, κεφαλη, 'head,' and itis, denoting inflammation. Inflammation of the muscles of the head.

MYOCEPHALON, Staphyloma.

MYOCELIAL'GIA, from myo, κοιλια, 'abdomen,' and αλγεω, 'I suffer.' Pain in the muscles of the abdomen.

MYOCELITIS, Myoceli'tis, Inflamma'tio musculor'um abdomina'lium, from myo, κοιλια, 'lower belly,' and itis, denoting inflammation. Inflammation of the muscles of the abdomen.

MYODEOPSIA, Metamorphopsia.

MYO'DES, from myo, and ειδος, 'resemblance.' Like unto muscle. Muscular.

MYODESOPIA, Metamorphopsia.

MYODESOPSIA, Metamorphopsia.

MYODYNA'MIA, Vis muscula'ris; from myo, and δυναμις, 'power.' The force or power of a muscle.

MYODYNAMICS, see Muscular contraction.

MYODYNAMIOMETER, Dynamometer.

MYODYNAMOMETER, Dynamometer.

MYODYN'IA, from myo, and δυννη, 'pain.' Pain in the muscles,—rheumatismal or other. Rheumatism.

MYODYNIA INFLAMMATORIA, Myositis.

MYOGRAPHY, Myogra'phia, from myo, and γραφειν, 'to describe.' An anatomical description of the muscles.

MYOID, Myoi'des, from μῦς, 'muscle,' and ειδος, 'resemblance.' An epithet given to tumours composed of fibre cells or muscular fibres of organic life.

MYOLEM'MA, Myole'ma, from myo, and λεμμα, 'a coat.' The membranous tube of each muscular fibre. It has also the same signification as Sarcolemma.

MY'OLINE, from μῦον, 'a muscle.' A name given by Mr. Erasmus Wilson to a transparent substance that fills the cells, which, he conceives, by their juxtaposition form the ultimate muscular fibril.

MYOL'OGY, Myolog'ia, Sarcolog'ia, Myosiolog'ia, from myo, and λογος, 'a discourse.' That part of anatomy which treats of the muscles.

MYON, Muscle.

MYONARCO'SIS, from myo, and ναρκη, 'stupor.' Numbness of the muscles.

MYONITIS, Myositis.

MYON'OSUS, Myonu'sus, Myopathi'a, from myo, and νοσος, 'disease.' A disease of the muscles.

MYOPALMUS, Subsultus tendinum.

MYOPARALYSIS, see Paralysis.

MYOPATHIA, Myonosus.

MYOPE, Myops.

MYOPHO'NIA, from myo, and φωνη, 'voice.' The sound of muscular contraction,—as that of the ventricles of the heart, during the systole of that organ.

MYO'PIA, Myopi'asis, Luscios'itas, Myo'sis,

Parop'sis propin'qua, Amblyo'pia dissito'rum, Dyso'pia dissito'rum, Dyspho'tia, Visus ju'venum, from μῦς, 'I close,' or from μῦς, 'a mouse,' and ωψ, 'the eye;' My'opy, Short-sightedness, Near-sightedness, Mouse-sight, Purblindness, (F.) Vue courte, V. basse. Persons who can only see objects very near. The defect is owing to the too great convexity of the eye, or too great density of the humours, and is palliated by wearing concave glasses.

MYOP'IC, Myop'icus; same etymon. Short-sighted, Poreblind, Purblind, Spurbblind. Relating or appertaining to myopia.

MYOPODIORTHO'TICON, from μῦωψ, 'one that is short-sighted,' and διορθωτικον, 'having power to correct.' An apparatus for the cure of short-sightedness.—A. A. Berthold.

MYOPS, Lucio'sus, Myo'pus, My'ope. Same etymon. One affected with myopia or short-sightedness.

MYOPY, Myopia.

MYORRHEX'IS, from myo, and ρηξις, 'rupture.' Rupture of a muscle.

MYOSARCO'MA, from μῦον, 'a muscle,' and sarcoma. A sarcomatous tumour in which muscular fibres are found.

MYO'SIS, from μῦς, 'I close.' Microcor'ia. Smallness of the pupil. Phthi'sis pupilla'ris. Permanent contraction of the pupil. It is usually caused by iritis, and is extremely difficult to cure. When it exists to such an extent as to obliterate the pupil, it is called Synizesis. Also, Myopia.

MYOSITTE, Myositis.

MYOSIT'IC, Myosit'icus, from Myosis. Causing contraction of the pupil,—as opium.—Pereira.

MYOSIT'IS, Myi'tis, Mysi'tis, Myoni'tis, Sarcei'tis, Rheumatis'mus phlegmono'des, Myodyn'ia inflamma'tia, Phlegma'sia myo'ica, Inflamma'tio seu Phleg'mon'e Musculo'rum, (F.) Myosite, Inflamma'tio des muscles, from μῦον, 'a muscle.' A name proposed by Sagar for inflammation of the muscles. Also, Rheumatism.

MYOSOTIS, Hieracium pilosella, Rheumatism, Rheumatism, acute.

MYOSPASMUS, Cramp.

MYOTIL'ITY, Myotil'itas, (F.) Myotilit'e, from μῦον, 'a muscle.' Muscular contractility.—Chaussier.

MYOT'OMY, Myotom'ia, from myo, and τεμνειν, 'to cut.' The part of practical anatomy which treats of the dissection of the muscles. Also, the surgical operation of the division of muscles to remove deformity.

MYOTYRBE, Chorea.

MYRAC'OPUM, from μυρον, 'an ointment,' α, 'privative,' and κοπος, 'fatigue.' An ointment used by the ancients in cases of fatigue.

MYREPSUS, Unguentarius.

MYR'IAGRAMME, from μυρια, '10,000,' and γραμμα, 'gramme.' A weight equal to 10,000 grammes, or to 26 pounds, 9 ounces, and 6 drachms Troy.

MYRIAM'ETRE. A measure of 10,000 metres; equal to 16 miles, 1 furlong, 156 yards, and 14 inches.

MYRICA ASPLENIFOLIA, Comptonia asplenifolia—m. Cerifera, see Cera flava et alba, and Wax, myrtle.

MYRICA GALE, M. palus'tris, Myrtus Braban'tica seu Ang'lica, Myrtifolia Bel'gica, Gale, Gagel, Rhus sylves'tris, Ac'aron, Elæagnus, E. Cordo, Chama'æog'nus, Dodonæ'a, Dutch myrtle, Sweet gale, Sweet willow, Candleberry myrtle, (Sc.) Scotch gale, (F.) Piment Royal, Thé de Simon Pauli, Gale odorant. Ord. Myricaceæ. Sex. Syst. Diœcia Tetrandria. The leaves, flowers, and seeds have a strong, fragrant smell, and a bitter taste. They are used for destroying moths and cutaneous insects. The infusion is given internally as a stomachic and vermifuge.

MYRICA PALUSTRIS, M. Gale.

MYRINGA, see Tympanum.

MYRINGITIS, Inflammatiō tym'pani, from Myringa, 'the membrana tympani;' and itis, denoting inflammation. Inflammation of the membrana tympani; and, also, of the tympanum.

MYRINX, see Tympanum.

MYRIS, μυρίς, Myroth'eōs, Narthe'cia, Narthe'cium, Narthez, from μυρον, 'a perfumed oil or ointment.' A perfumed oil jar or ointment box.

MYRIS'TICA, M. Moscha'ta seu aromat'ica seu officin'al'is seu fragens, Comacon. Nat. Ord. Myristicæ. The tree which produces the nutmeg and mace. (F.) Muscadier. The Nutmeg, Myristica, (Ph. U. S.) Myrist'icæ seu Myrist'icæ moscha'tæ nu'cleus, Nux moscha'ta seu unguent'a'ria, Nucis'ta, Nux myrist'icæ seu aromat'ica, Chryso'bal'anus Gale'ni, Unguent'a'ria, As'sala, (F.) Muscade, is the seed or kernel. It has a fragrant, aromatic odour; an agreeable pungent taste, and is much used for culinary purposes. Alcohol extracts its active matter. It has the properties of aromatics in general; being stimulant and stomachic. The oil—O'leum myrist'icæ seu nucis'tæ æther'eum—possesses the virtues of the nutmeg. Dose of the nutmeg, gr. v. to ℥j;—of the oil gr. iij. to gr. vj.

Mace, Macis, Maces, Flores macis seu ma'cidis, (F.) Fleurs de muscade, is the involucre of the fruit. It is membranous, with the odour and taste of the nutmeg, and is possessed of similar qualities. The O'leum macis seu ma'cidis is a fragrant, sebaceous substance, expressed in the East Indies. It is only used externally. It is the Adeps myrist'icæ, Myrist'icæ o'leum express'um, O'leum seu Bal'samum nucis'tæ, Butter of nutmegs, Express'ed oil of Mace.

MYRISTICÆ NUCLEUS, see Myristica moschata.

MYRISTICATIO HEPATIS, Liver, nutmeg.

MYRMECIA, Formica.

MYRMECIASIS, Convulsio cerealis, Formication.

MYRMECIASMUS, Convulsio cerealis, Formication.

MYRMECISMUS, Convulsio cerealis, Formication.

MYRMECIZON, Formicant.

MYRMECOSIS, Convulsio cerealis, Formication.

MYRMEX, Formica.

MYROBAL'ANICA, from μυρον, 'an ointment,' and βαλανος, 'a nut;' so called, because formerly used in ointment; Angoloc'acos, Myro'bolan, Glans unguent'a'ria, Palma unguentario'rum. A dried Indian fruit, of the plum kind, of different species of Terminalia. Ord. Combretaceæ. Of this there are several varieties—the M. Bellir'ica or Bellir'ie myrobalan, Bellegu, Bellerigi, Belnileg—the M. chebul'a or Chebul'e myrob'al'an; the M. cit'r'ina or Yellow myrobalan, Ara'ra; the M. Em'blica or emblic myrobalan, and the M. In'dica, As'uar, Indian or Black myrobalan. All the myrobalans have an unpleasant, bitterish, very austere taste; and strike an inky blackness with a solution of steel. They are said to possess laxative as well as astringent properties.

MYROLES, see Olea volatilia.

MYRON, Myrum, Unguentum.

MYROISSOCE'RON. A topical application in alopecia, referred to by Galen; from μυρον, 'ointment,' πίσσα, 'pitch,' and κρηος, 'wax.'

MYROPEUS, Unguentarius.

MYROPOLES, Apothecary, Unguentarius.

MYROSPERMUM FRUTESCENS, Myroxylon Peruiferum—m. Peruiferum, see Myroxylon Peruiferum—m. of Sonsonate, see Myroxylon Peruiferum—m. Toluiferum, see Toluifera Balsamum.

MYROXYLON, see M. Peruiferum.

MYROXYLON PERUIFERUM, Myrospermum frutescens seu Peruiferum, Quinquino, from μυρον, 'an ointment,' and ξύλον, wood; 'Caburei'ba. Nat. Ord. Leguminosæ. Supposed to be the tree which affords the Peruvian balsam, Bal'samum Peruvia'num (Ph. U. S.) seu Perua'num, Putzochill, Myroxy'lyli Peruiferi bal'samum, Myroxy'ylon, Caburei'ciba, Indian, Mexican, or American balsam, (F.) Baume de Pérou ou des Indes. This balsam consists of benzoic acid, resin, and essential oil. Its odour is fragrant and aromatic; taste hot and bitter: it is soluble in alcohol, and miscible in water by the aid of mucilage. It is stimulant and tonic, and considered to be expectorant: as such, it has been employed in paralysis, chronic asthma, chronic bronchitis and rheumatism, gleet, leucorrhœa, &c., and externally, for cleansing and stimulating foul indolent ulcers. Dose gr. v. to gr. xxx.

White Balsam of Peru, Natural balsam, Bal'samum album, Styrax alba, Balsamelæon, is obtained by incision from Myrospermum peruiferum.

The Myroxylon of Sonsonate in Central America—Myrospermum Pereira of Dr. Royle, has been supposed to furnish balsam of Peru.

MYROXYLON OF SONSONATE, see M. Peruiferum—m. Toluiferum, Toluifera Balsamum.

MYRRHA, Heb. מֵרְרָה; Bola, Stactis, Ergas'ma, Myrrh, Calo'nia, Smyrna, Myrrha rubra, (F.) Myrrhe. The exudation, μυρον, of an unknown plant of Abyssinia or Arabia Felix, said to be the Balsamaden'dron myrrha. This gum-resin has a fragrant, peculiar odour; and bitter aromatic taste. It is in reddish-yellow, light, brittle, irregular tears; partially soluble in distilled water when aided by friction. S. G. 1.360. It is stimulant; and has been used in cachectic affections, humoral asthma, chronic bronchitis, &c. Dose, gr. x. to ℥j.

MYRRHA IMPERFECTA, Bdelium.

MYRRHINE, Myrtus.

MYRRHIS ANNUA, Athamanta Cretensis—m. Major, Chærophyllum odoratum—m. Odorata, Chærophyllum odoratum.

MYRSINA AFRICANA, Tatzé.

MYRSINE, Myrtus.

MYRSINELE'ON, from μυρσινῆ, 'the myrtle,' and ελαίον, 'oil.' Oil of myrtle.—Dioscorides.

MYRSINITES, μυρσινίτης. Wine in which branches of myrtle have been macerated.

MYRTACANTHA, Ruscus.

MYRTE COMMUN, Myrtus.

MYRTID'ANON, μυρτιδ'ανον. An exerescence, growing on the trunk of the myrtle, and used as an astringent. With Hippocrates, either the myrtus caryophyllata or myrtus pimenta. [?] Also, a wine—Vinum Myrtid'anum—made from wild myrtle berries.

MYRTIFOLIA BELGICA, Myrica gale.

MYRTIFORM, Myrtiform'is, Myrto'des, from myrtus, 'a myrtle,' and forma, 'shape.' Having the shape of a leaf of myrtle. A name given to a muscle (depressor alæ nasi), to the fossa incisiva; and to certain caruncles, &c.

MYRTIFORMIS, Compressor naris, Depressor alæ nasi.

MYRTITES, from μυρτον, the 'myrtle berry.' A name given to a medicine prepared with honey and myrtle berries.

MYRTLE, Myrtus—m. Berry, Vaccinium myrtillus—m. Candleberry, Myrica gale—m. Dutch, Myrica gale—m. Wild, Ruscus.

MYRTOCHELIDES, Nymphæ.

MYRTOCHILA, Nymphæ.

MYRTODES, Myrtiform.

MYRTON, Clitoris.

MYRTUS, Myrtus communis seu communis Italica, μυρτος, Myrsi'nē, Myrrhi'nē, The Myrtle, (F.) Myrte Commun. Ord. Myrtacæ. The berries of this plant have been recommended in alvine and uterine fluxes and other disorders of relaxation and debility. They are moderately astringent and somewhat aromatic.

MYRTUS ANGLICA, Myrica gale—m. Brabantica, Myrica gale.

MYRTUS CARYOPHYLLATA, Calyptanthes caryophyllata, Cassia seu Canel'la caryophyllata, (F.) Capeclet, Cannelle giroflée. The tree which is considered to afford the Clove bark; Cortex caryophyllatus seu caryophyllata. This bark is a warm aromatic; resembling clove with an admixture of cinnamon. It may be used with the same views as cloves or cinnamon.

MYRTUS CARYOPHYLLUS, Eugenia caryophyllata—m. Leucodendron, Melaleuca cajaputi.

MYRTUS PIMENTA, Eugenia Pimenta. The tree which bears the Jamaica pepper, Pimenta baccæ, Pimento berries, Pimento, Piper caryophyllatum seu chia'pæ seu odora'tum Jamaicensè seu Jamaicensè seu tabas'cum, Coc'culi Indi aromati'ci, Ano'mum pimenta, Fructus pimenti, Carive, Caryophyllus America'nus seu Pimenta, Allspice, (F.) Poivre de Jamaïque, Toute épice, Assourou. The unripe berries—Pimenta (Ph. U. S.)—have an aromatic odour; resembling a mixture of cinnamon, nutmeg, and cloves; and the taste is pungent, but mixed, like the odour. Like other peppers, this is stimulant and carminative. The oil—O'leum Pimentæ—possesses the virtues of the berries. The powdered fruit has been called Quatre épices or Four spices. Dose, gr. v. to ℥ij.

Aqua Pimentæ, Pimento water, is officinal in the London, Edinburgh, and Dublin Pharmacopœias. It is carminative. Dose, fʒj or fʒij.

MYRUM, Myron, μυρον. A perfumed oil or ointment. A liquid perfume. The spontaneously exuding juice of many plants, especially of that from which myrrh is obtained.

MYS, Muscle.

MYSILOGIA, Myology.

MYSITIS, Myositis.

MYSTAX, Mastax, μυσταξ, μυσταχος. The hair growing on each side of the upper lip in men. The mustache or mustachio, (Old Eng.) Munchat'oe, (F.) Moustache. Also, the upper lip.

MYSTE'RIUM, μυστηριον, 'a mystery.' An arcanum, nostrum, or secret preparation in general. Also, an antidote referred to by Galen and others.

MYSTRON, μυστρον. A Greek measure, which held about three drachms.

MYTILUS EDULIS. The common mussel, (F.) Moule. A bivalve, the flesh of which, when at all in a state of decomposition, is highly poisonous. When fresh, it is an agreeable, but not very digestible article of diet, producing, in some persons, all the symptoms of urticaria. One affected with such phenomena is said, occasionally, to be musselled.

MYU'RUS, Mei'rus. A pulse is so called when it sinks progressively and becomes smaller and smaller like a rat's tail; and from μυς, 'rat,' and ουρα, 'tail.' Pulsus myurus reciprocus, a pulse, which, after having become gradually weaker resumes, by degrees, its former character.

MYXA, Mucus, Sebestina.

MYXÆ, Mycteres.

MYXIOSIS, Gonorrhœa impura.

MYXODES, Muciform.

MYXOR'RHOOS, μυξορροος, from μυξα, 'mucus,' and ρῶω, 'I flow.' One who is subject to mucus discharge. Applied to an infant, that discharges a considerable quantity of mucus and saliva.

MYXOSARCO'MA, from μυξα, 'mucus,' and σαρξ, σαρκος, 'flesh.' A tumour which is mucocarcinous; partly mucus and partly fleshy.

MYXOTER, Nacus.

MYZESIS, Sucking.

N.

N. This letter, in prescriptions, is an abridgment of Numero, 'by number.'

NAB'ALUS ALBUS, Prenanthes alba seu serpenta'ria, White Lettuce, Lion's Foot, Rattlesnake's Master, Rattlesnake root, Gall of the Earth, from ναβλα, 'a harp,' owing to the lyrate leaves. An indigenous plant, of the order Compositæ, which, with several other species of the genus, is reputed to possess the power of curing the bites of serpents. The root has been used in dysentery.

NABALUS FRASERI has similar properties.

NABOT, Saccharum candidum.

NABO'THI GLAN'DULÆ, Ovula seu Ova Nabothi seu Nabothi'na, Ova'rium Nabothi, Folliculi rotundi et oblongi, Vesiculæ seu Bullæ rotundæ cervicis uteri, V. seminales mulierum, Cor'pora seu Corpus'cula globosa, Glandulæ seu Hydat'ides cervicis uteri, Glands of Naboth. Small, mucous crypts or follicles situate in the interstices of the duplicatures of the lining membrane of the cervix uteri. Naboth, from noticing them in a morbid condition, mistook them for ova; and hence they received the name Ovula Nabothi.

NACRA, Nakra, Nasa. A kind of influenza common in the East Indies.

NACRÉ, Margaritaceus.

NACREOUS, Margaritaceus.

NÆVI, see Nævus—n. Pigmentary, see Nævus.

NÆVUS, Plural Nævi; Nævus mater'nus seu Sigil'lum, Nota mater'na, Nævus, Mac'ulæ matricis seu mater'næ seu matrici'les, Notæ infantum, Lupus varicosus, Stigmata, Metrocel'ides, Congen'itæ notæ, Mother's or Fancy marks, Mother's spots, (F.) Envie, Tache de Naissance. Spots of various kinds on the skin of children when born, which have been attributed to the influence of the maternal imagination on the fœtus in utero. They are of various appearances, some much better supplied with blood than others. Some are merely superficial or stain-like spots, Pigmentary nævi; others are prominent, Vascular tumours, and often have long, irregular hairs growing from them. These have usually been called Moles, Spili, Spilo'ma, Epichro'ses spili, &c. The red, rosy, violet or bluish spots are called by I. G. St. Hilaire, Taches Sanguines;—those of an intermediate hue, between the normal colour and black, Taches melaniennes. See Telangiectasia.

When nævi are superficial, without any disposition to enlarge or spread, they need not be meddled with: but all those that partake of the character of aneurism by anastomosis had better be removed, where practicable.

ŊEVUS SIGILLUM, Ŋevus.

NAFDA, Naphtha.

NAIL, Sax. næsl, (G.) Nagel, Unguis, Onyx, (F.) Ongle. A whitish transparent substance, similar to horn, which covers the dorsal extremity of the fingers. Three portions are distinguished in it; the extremity, which is free, at the end of the finger;—the body or middle portion adherent by its inner surface; and the root, Radix seu Matrix unguis, In'timum unguis, (F.) Matrice de l'ongle. The last presents two distinct parts; the one, terminated by a thin, serrated edge, is buried in a duplicature of the skin, Vallee'ula unguis, which acts the part of a nail-follicle; the other, called Lu'nula seu Semilu'nula seu Sele'nē seu Arcus seu Exor'tus seu Anat'olē seu Albe'ol un'guum, is whitish and of a semilunar shape, and is situate above the part where the epidermis terminates. The nails are composed of a horny tissue, of the same nature as that which forms the hoofs, horns, and scales of different animals. When the nail has been torn off, the papillæ of the skin become covered by a soft, whitish lamina, whose consistence gradually augments. New laminae are then formed underneath, and give the nail the thickness it ought to possess. The corneous substance, being thus constantly produced at the extremity of each of these laminae, the whole of the nail is pushed forwards, and it would grow indefinitely, were it not cut or worn by friction.

The nails protect and support the extremities of the fingers against the impression of hard bodies. They are, also, useful in laying hold of small bodies; and dividing those that have but little consistence.

NAIL-FOLLICLE, see Nail.

NAIL SPRING, Hangnail.

NAIN, Nanus.

NAISSANCE, see Parturition.

NAKRA, Nacra.

NANGNAIL, Hangnail.

NANISME, see Nanus

NANNARI, Hemidesmus Indicus.

NANNYBERRY, Viburnum lentago.

NANOCEPHALIA, see Nanocephalus.

NANOCEPHALUS, from vavos, 'a dwarf,' and κεφαλή, 'head.' One of a monstrous state—Nanoccephalia—in which the whole head or certain of its parts are too small, whilst the trunk and extremities are normal.

NANOCORMIA, see Nanocormus.

NANOCORMUS, from vavos, 'a dwarf,' and κορμος, 'a trunk.' One of a monstrous condition—Nanocormia—in which the trunk is too small, whilst the head possesses its normal size.

NANOMELIA, see Nanomelus.

NANOMELUS, from vavos, 'a dwarf,' and μελος, 'a limb.' One of a monstrous condition—Nanomelia—in which some part of an extremity is too small, and the whole limb too short.

NANOSOMIA, from vavos, 'a dwarf,' and σωμα, 'body.' Microsomia. Dwarf'ishness, (F.) Nanisme. A state in which the entire body with all its parts is smaller than common.

NANOSOMUS, Nanus.

NANUS, vavos, Pumil'lo, Pu'milo, Pusil'lus, 'a dwarf;' Nanosom'us, (Prov.) Crut, Rope Spin'nick, (Sc.) Croil, Crok, Dearch, Derch, Droich, Wratack. (Pu'milus, Pumil'lius, 'dwarfish.') (F.) Nain. One who is much below the usual stature. The term is applicable to all organized beings from man to the vegetable. Trees have their dwarfs, as the human species have theirs. Some curious authenticated instances of human dwarfs are on record. Bebe, the dwarf of Stanislaus, king of Poland, was 33 inches (French) long, and well proportioned. The Polish nobleman, Borwlaski, who was well made, clever, and a good linguist, measured 28 Paris inches. He had a brother, 34 inches high, and a sister 21. A Friesland peasant, at 26 years of age, had attained 29 Amsterdam inches. C. H. Stöberin, of Nürnberg, was under three feet high at 20, yet he was well proportioned and possessed of talents. General Tom Thumb, so called, was seen by the Author in 1847. He was said to be 15 years old; measured 28 inches in height, and when weighed at the mint was found to weigh 20 pounds and 2 ounces. Two remarkable Indian dwarfs were exhibited in the United States and in Europe, about the middle of the 19th century, under the name of 'Aztec children,'—the boy, from 7 to 8 years of age, was 33½ inches in height, and weighed 20½ pounds;—the girl, from 4 to 6 years of age, was 29½ inches high, and weighed 17 pounds. They were very deficient in intellect. See Pygmy.

NAPE OF THE NECK, Nucha.

NAPELLUS VERUS, Aconitum napellus.

NAPHE FLORES, see Citrus aurantium.

NAPHTHA, Acetone.

NAPHTHA, ναφθα, Nafda, Napta, Napta'lius, O'leum petræ album; (F.) Naphte; from a Chaldaic and Syriac word signifying bitumen. A bituminous substance, found in Persia, Calabria, Sicily, &c. It is liquid, limpid, of a yellowish-white colour, a smell slightly resembling that of oil of turpentine, and lighter than water. It resembles petroleum in its properties, and has been chiefly used as an external application; although occasionally, as an anthelmintic, and in inhalation in phthisis pulmonalis. Also, Ether.

NAPHTHA ACETI, Ether aceticus—n. Coal Tar, Light, see Anæsthetic—n. Sulphurica, Ether sulphuricus—n. Vitrioli, Ether sulphuricus—n. Vitrioli camphorata, Tinctura ætherea camphorata—n. Vitrioli martialis, Tinctura seu Alcohol, sulphurico-æthereus ferri—n. Wood, Acetone.

NAPHTHALINE, Naphthal'ina, Naph'thalin.

When coal tar is subjected to distillation, naphthaline passes over after coal naphtha. It is a white, shining, concrete, crystalline substance, fusible at 176° and boiling at 423°. It is soluble in alcohol, ether, naphtha and the oils, but insoluble in water. It has been used as an excitant expectorant, in the dose of 8 to 30 grains, in emulsion or syrup, and repeated. It has also been used as an anthelmintic; and, when made into an ointment, in psoriasis, lepra vulgaris, &c.

NA'PIFORM, Napiform'is, Bu'noid, Bunioi'des, from vavos, 'a turnip,' and forma, 'shape.' An epithet for a form of scirrhus tumour whose cut surface presents concentric lines resembling those seen in the interior of a turnip.

NAPIUM, Lapsana, Sinapis.

NAPLES, (CLIMATE OF.) The climate of Naples in its general characters resembles that of Nice, but it is more changeable: the sirocco too, which is little known in Nice, is severely felt at Naples. It is not a good residence for the phthisical invalid: Sir James Clark, indeed, considers it altogether unsuitable.

NAPLES, MINERAL WATERS OF. In the Quarter Santa Lucia, near the coast, is a cold spring, rich in sulphuretted hydrogen and carbonic acid. It is much used as an aperient tonic, and in cutaneous affections.

NAPLES WATER, FACTIT'IOUS, Aqua Neapolitana seu acid'ula hydrosulphurata, (F.) Eau de Naples. (Acidulous water, containing four times its bulk of carbonic acid, ℥xv , and ʒij ; hydro-sulphuretted water, ʒix ; carbonate of soda, gr. viij; carbonate of magnesia, gr. x. M. Ph. F.)

NAPTA, Nanus, Nata.
 NAPTALIUS, Nanus.
 NAPUS, Sinapis — n. Leucosinapis, Sinapis alba — n. Sylvestris, Brassica napus.

NAPY, Sinapis.

NARCAPHTE, Thymiana.

NARCAPH'THON, Nascaph'thon. The bark of an aromatic tree formerly brought from India. By some, supposed to be that of the tree which affords the olibanum. It was used in fumigation, in diseases of the lungs. See Lacaphthon.

NARCE, Narcosis.

NARCEMA, Narcosis.

NARCESIS, Narcosis.

NARCESIS D'AUTOMNE, Colebicum autumnale — n. Fauz, Narcissus pseudo-narcissus — n. des Prés, Narcissus pseudo-narcissus — n. Sauvage, Narcissus pseudo-narcissus.

NARCIS'SUS PSEUDO-NARCIS'SUS, N. festalis seu glauca seu grandiflorus seu hispanicus seu major seu serratius seu sylvestris, Bulbocodium, Pseudo-narcissus, Daf'fodil, (Old Eng.) Aff'udil, Belle-Blome, (Prov.) Affrodile, Bellflower, Butter and Eggs, Lent-rose. Ord. Amaryllidaceæ. (F.) Narcisse sauvage, Narcisse des prés, Fauz narcisse, Porrillon, Aiault, Zouzinette, Jeannette. The root is emetic and cathartic, in the dose of ʒij. The flowers are antispasmodic. Dose, 24 grains.

NARCODES, Narcotized,

NARCO'SIS, Nar'cotism, Narcē, Narca, Narce'ma, Narce'sis, from ναρκωω, 'I benumb.' Torpe'do, Torpor, Stupor, Stupefactio. The aggregate effects produced by narcotic substances. At times, narcotism is confined to a state of more or less profound stupor; and constitutes, in certain cases, a useful remedial condition; at others, it is a true poisoning, characterized by vertigo, nausea, a state of intoxication or apoplexy, constant delirium, convulsive motions, &c. Emetics in strong doses, and not much diluted with water; purgatives and glysters are the first means to be used in this condition. The stupor may afterwards be combated by the use of exciting and stimulating drinks.

NARCOSIS FOLLICULO'RUM. A state of the scalp, which Mr. Erasmus Wilson conceives to be dependent upon torpid action of the hair follicles, and in which the scalp and hair are found covered with a yellowish, dirty-looking powder, composed of an admixture of granular particles and furfuraceous scales.

NARCOSPAS'MUS, from ναρκη, 'stupor,' and σπασμος, 'spasm.' Stupor combined with spasm.

NARCOTIA, Narcotine.

NARCOTIC POISON, see Poison.

NARCOTICO-ACRID, see Poison.

NARCOTICS, Narcol'ica, Carol'ica, Obstupefacient'ia, Stupefacient'ia, Stupefacients, (F.) Stupefactifs, Stupefians. Same etymon. Substances, which have the property of stupefying; — as opium, stramonium, hyoscyamus, belladonna, &c. They are used in medicine as soothing agents; exerting their special influence on the brain and tubular matter of the spinal marrow. In small doses, as a general rule, narcotics stimulate; in large, they act as sedatives. The following is a list of the chief narcotics: — Aconitum, Ætherea, Belladonna, Camphora, Cannabis, Conium, Digitalis, Humulus, Hyoscyamus, Lactucarium, Opium and Morphia, Stramonii Folia, Stramonii Semina, Mental Narcotics, (Appropriate Music, Monotonous sounds, or any succession of monotonous impressions.)

NARCOTINE, Narcol'ina, Narcol'ia, Narcol'ia, Narcol'ina, Opia'ma, Opia'ma; same etymon; (F.) Sel de Déroene ou d'opium, Opiane, Principe cristallizable de Déroene. A solid, white, inodorous, and insipid substance; by some considered to be alkaloid; by others neuter; crystallizable in straight prisms with a rhomboidal base; fusible like the fats; soluble in boiling alcohol and ether, and scarcely soluble in water. Narcotine produces all the unpleasant effects of opium; but, at the same time, throws the animal into a state of stupor. It is not used in medicine, on account of these objections. The salts, which are very bitter, have been used successfully in India for the cure of intermittents.

NARCOTISM, Narcosis.

NAR'COTIZED, Tor'pidus, Narco'des. Affected with stupor, as from the use of a narcotic.

NARD, CELTIC, Valeriana Celtica — n. Indica, Nardus Indica — n. Indien, Nardus Indica — n. Indique, Nardus Indica — n. Petit, Aralia nudicaulis — n. Sauvage, Asarum.

NARDOSTACHYS JATAMANSI, Nardus Indica — n. Patrinia, Nardus Indica.

NARDUM GALLICUM, Valeriana Celtica.

NARDUS AMERICANUS, Aralia nudicaulis — n. Celtica, Valeriana Celtica — n. Celtica altera, Arnica montana — n. Montana, Asarum.

NARDUS INDICA, Spica nardi seu Indica, Andropogon nardus seu citridorus, Ord. Gramineæ [?], or Nardos'tachys seu Valeria'na seu Patrin'ia Jatamansi, Valeria'na spica; Order, Valerianaceæ; Indian nard, Spikenard. The root of this plant is one of the ingredients in the mithridate and theriaca. It is moderately warm and pungent, and has a flavour by no means disagreeable. It is used by the Orientals as a spice: — (F.) Nard Indien ou Indique. An ointment was formerly used, called Unguentum nardi'num. It was prepared of Nard, Malabathrum leaves, Oil of worms, Costus, Anomum, Myrrh, &c., and was used as a detergent.

NARDUS RUSTICA, Asarum.

NARES, Rhines, Cav'itas seu Cavum seu Ca'nea seu Caver'na na'rium, Nasus inter'nus, Mycetes, Na'rium ad'itus, Ochetes'mata, The nostrils, (Prov.) Shirrels, Saurles, (F.) Narines. Two elliptical apertures, situate beneath the nose, and separated from each other by the cartilaginous septum seu colum'na nasi. These apertures are continually open, and give passage to the air we breathe, and to the mucous fluids secreted in the nasal fossæ.

NARES INTERNE, Nasal fossæ.

NARES POSTERIOR, Nares postre'mæ, Extre'mæ nares, Ostia posterio'ra seu Choanæ na'rium, Na'rium Ex'itus, (F.) Arrières narines, Ouvertures postérieures des fosses nasales, are the posterior apertures of the nasal cavities, which establish a communication between those cavities and the pharynx. They are bounded, above, by the body of the sphenoid bone; below, by the palate bone, and the base of the velum pendulum; and, on the outside, by the internal ala of the pterygoid process. They are separated from each other by a septum, of which the vomer is the bony part.

NARIFUSO'RIA, from nares, 'the nostrils,' and funderc, fusum, 'to pour.' Medicine dropt into the nostrils.

NARINES, Nares.

NARIUM ADITUS, Nares — n. Siccitas, Mycetoxerotes.

NARROW CHEST, see Lordosis.

NARTHECIA, Formulary, Myris.

NARTHECIUM, Formulary, Myris.

NARTHEX, Formulary, Myris, Splint — n. Asafetida, see Asafetida.

NASA, Nacra, Nata.

NASAL, Nasa'lis, from nasus, 'the nose.' That which relates to the nose.

NASAL ARTERY. This is the largest of the two branches in which the ophthalmic artery terminates. It issues from the orbit, above the tendon of the orbicularis palpebrarum, passes above the side of the root of the nose, and anastomoses with the last extremity of the facial. Haller gave the name nasal to the sphenopalatine. He also called the dorsales nasi, furnished by the external maxillary, Nasa'les laterales.

NASAL BONES, Ossa nasi seu nasa'lia, Ossicula nasi, Ossa maxillæ superioris quarta seu quinta seu secunda, (F.) Ossa nasaux, Osses du nez. These bones are situate beneath the nasal notch of the os frontis, and occupy the space between the nasal or angular processes of the superior maxillary bone. Their shape is nearly quadrilateral. They have an external or cutaneous surface, an internal or nasal, and four margins. Each is articulated with its fellow, with the os frontis, ethmoid, and superior maxillary bones. They ossify from a single point.

NASAL CARTILAGE, Cartilago triangularis Nasi. A cartilage formed of three portions, which unite at the dorsum nasi, and are distinguished into the cartilage of the septum, and the lateral cartilages. This cartilage is continuous, above, with the ossa nasi, and, inferiorly, with membranous fibro-cartilages, which form the supple and movable part of the nostrils. They are two in number—the one before, the other behind.

NASAL DUCT, Lachrymal duct—n. Eminence, Mesophryon.

NASAL FOSSÆ, Cavi narium, Nares internæ. Two large, anfractuous cavities, situate between the orbits below the cranium, and lined by the pituitary or Schneiderian membrane. These cavities have no communication with each other; but the various sinuses in the neighbouring bones—the ethmoidal, sphenoidal, superior maxillary, &c.—all communicate with them. The general cavity of each nostril is divided by the ossa spongiosa into three meatus or passages, which run from before backwards. 1. The Meatus narium superior, placed at the upper, inner, and back part of the superior spongy bone. 2. The Meatus medius, situate between the superior and inferior spongy bones; and 3. The Meatus inferior, situate between the inferior spongy bone and the bottom of the nose. The Schneiderian membrane receives the first pair of nerves, and various branches from the fifth pair. The arteries are furnished by the branches of the internal maxillary, known under the names of sphenopalatine, infra-orbital, superior alveolar, palatine, pterygo-palatine; by the supra-orbital, and ethmoidal branches of the ophthalmic artery; by the internal carotid, superior labial, and dorsales nasi. Its veins are little known, and generally follow the course of the arteries. The lymphatics are almost unknown. The nasal fossæ are the seat of smell; they aid, also, in respiration and phonation.

NASAL MEATUS, see Nasal fossæ.

NASAL MUCUS, Mucus narium, Phlegma narium crassum, Mucor seu Pitu'ita seu Blenna seu Lympha muculen'ta narium, Apomyxia, vulgarly called Snot, Snob, Snoth, (F.) Morve, is the mucus secreted by the Schneiderian membrane.

NASAL NERVE, Naso-palpebralis (Ch.), Naso-ocularis (Sümmering), Naso-ciliaris. One of the three branches of the ophthalmic nerve of Willis. It enters the orbit by the sphenoidal fissure, passes along the inner paries of that cavity, and divides, opposite the internal and anterior orbital foramen, into two branches. 1. The internal and posterior, which passes into the Foramen orbitarium internum anterius, enters the cranium beneath the dura mater, and passes into the nasal fossæ, through an aperture at the side of the Crista galli. It afterwards divides into several filaments: one of them—the Naso-lobar, of Chaussier—is very small, and descends on the posterior surface of the os nasi, and ramifies on the integuments of the ala nasi. A second terminates near the septum; others descend along the outer paries of the nasal fossæ. 2. The other is external and anterior, and is called the external nasal nerve. It is distributed to the outside of the orbit. Before dividing, the nasal nerve communicates with the ophthalmic ganglion, and gives off two or three ciliary nerves. Sümmering has given the name Posterior Nasal Nerve to the nerves which arise from the internal part of the sphenopalatine ganglion.

NASAL NOTCH, (F.) Échancrure nasale. A semicircular notch, situate between the nasal prominence of the frontal bone, and articulated with the nasal bones and the nasal processes of the superior maxillary bones.

NASAL PROCESS, Maxillary bone, superior.

NASAL PROMINENCE, (F.) Bosse nasale. A prominence, situate on the median line, at the anterior surface of the os frontis, between the two superciliary arches.

NASAL REGION, Re'gio nasa'lis. The region of the nose.

NASAL SPINES. These are three in number.

1. The Superior nasal spine of the os frontis, occupying the middle of its nasal notch, and articulated before with the nasal bones, behind with the ethmoid. 2. The inferior and anterior nasal spine, situate at the inferior part of the anterior opening of the nasal fossæ. It is formed by the two superior maxillary bones; and 3. The inferior and posterior nasal spine, Épine gutturale (Ch.), a process, formed on the median line by the two palate bones at the posterior part of the palatine arch.

NASALE, Errhine.

NASALIS, Compressor naris.

NASALIS LABII SUPERIORIS. A small muscular slip, which runs up from the middle of the orbicularis and the lip to the tip of the nose. It lies exactly in the furrow, and is occasionally a levator of the upper lip, or a depressor of the tip of the nose.

NASAS, Nata.

NASATUS, Membrosus.

NAS'CALÈ. A kind of pessary, made of wool, or cotton, which was formerly introduced into the vagina, after being impregnated with oil, ointment, or some other proper medicament.

NASCAPHTHON, Narscarphthon.

NASDA, Nata.

NASI, see Oryza.

NASITAS, Rhinophonia.

NASITIS, Rhinitis—n. Postica, Angina nasalis.

NASO, Nasutus, from nasus, 'the nose.' One who has a long nose. In composition, appertaining or relating to the nose.

NASOCILIARIS (Nervus), Nasal nerve.

NASO-LA'BIAL, Naso-labialis; from naso, and labium, 'a lip.' Relating to the nose and lip.

NASO-LABIAL LINE. A line or furrow, which separates the lip from the cheek, and commences at the ala nasi.

NASO-LABIALIS. A muscular fasciculus described by Albinus, which arises from the anterior extremity of the septum nasi, and terminates in the orbicularis oris.

NASO-PAL'ATINE, Naso-palatinus. That which belongs to the nose and velum palati.

NASO-PALATINE GANGLION is situate in the foramen palatinum anterius. Its greater extremity receives the two nasopalatine branches; whilst the smaller gives off two or three filaments, which reach the palatine vault, where they ramify on the membrane of the same name, anastomosing with filaments of the great palatine nerve.

NASO-PALATINE NERVE, Nerve of Cotun'nius, is furnished by the sphenopalatine, which proceeds from the ganglion of Meckel. It traverses the vault of the nasal fossæ, and proceeds upon the septum between the two layers of the pituitary membrane. It enters the anterior palatine canal, and terminates at the superior angles of the nasopalatine ganglion, without attaining the mouth.

NASO-PALPÉBRAL, Orbicularis palpebrarum.

NASTA, Nata.

NASTURTIUM AMPHIBIUM, see Sisymbrium—n. Aquaticum, Cardamine pratensis, Sisymbrium nasturtium—n. Bursa pastoris, Thlaspi bursa—n. Hortense, Lepidium sativum—n. Indicum, Tropæolum majus—n. Officinale, Sisymbrium nasturtium—n. Palustre, see Sisymbrium—n. Peruvianum, Tropæolum majus—n. Pratense, Cardamine pratensis—n. Sativum, Lepidium sativum.

NASUM DILATANS, Pyramidalis nasi.

NASUS, Nose, Rhin, Rhis, Organon olfactus seu odora'tus seu olfacto'rium, Promonto'rium faciei, Myzo'ter, Enunco'torium cerebri, Snout, (Sc.) Neis, Nes, (F.) Nez. The nose is a pyramidal eminence, situate above the anterior apertures of the nasal fossæ, which it covers; and, consequently, occupying the middle and upper part of the face, between the forehead and upper lip, the orbits and the cheeks. Its lateral surfaces form, by uniting angularly, a more or less prominent line, called Dorsum seu Rhachis seu Spina Nasi, (F.) Dos du nez. This line terminates, anteriorly, by the lobe,—Lob'ulus. The sides are called Alæ Nasi, Pinnæ Naris, (F.) Ailes du nez. The columna is the inferior part of the partition. Its apex or tip has been called Glob'ulus nasi.

The chief varieties of the nose are the aq'uiline, the flat nose, (F.) Nez camarot ou épaté, and the snub nose, (F.) Nez retroussé. The nose is formed, besides its bones, of fibro-cartilage, cartilage, muscles, vessels, and nerves; and its use seems to be to direct odours to the upper part of the nasal fossæ.

NASUS INTERNUS, Narcs.

NASUTUS, Naso.

NATA, Natta, Nasa, Nasda, Nasta, Nasas, Napta. A fleshy, indolent excrescence, having the shape of the nates.

NATARON, Natron.

NATA'TION, Nata'tio, from natare, natatum, itself from nare, 'to swim.' Swimming. The action of swimming, or of supporting one's self, or moving upon the water. Swimming resembles the horizontal leap in its physiology—the medium being water instead of air. The difference between the specific gravity of the human body and that of water is not great; so that but little exertion is required to keep a part of the body above water. Swimming is a healthy gymnastic exercise, combining the advantages of bathing.

NATES, Ephed'rana, Sca'phia, Podex, Clunes, Glutoi, Gluti, Glut'ia, Sedi'lia, Pygæ, Monæ, Bottom, Backside, Poste'riors, Buttocks, (Prov.) Tout, (Sc.) Doup, Doup, Dolp, Droddum, Hurdies, Lendis, &c., (F.) Fesses. Two round projections, at the inferior and posterior part of the trunk, on which we sit. Amongst the mammalia, man alone has the nates prominent and round. They are formed chiefly by the skin, and a thick layer of areolar tissue, which covers the three glutæi muscles.

NATES CEREBRI, Quadrigenina corpora—n. et Testes, Quadrigenina corpora.

NATRIUM, Sodium.

NATROCRENÆ, Natropegæ.

NATRON, Natrum, Nat'aron, Nitrum, Anatrum, Aphronitrum, from Natron, a lake in Judæa. A saline compound, very abundant in Egypt, which is almost wholly formed of subcarbonate of soda.

NATRONIUM, Sodium.

NATROPE'GÆ, Natrocre'næ, from natron, and πηγη, 'a spring.' Soda springs.

NATRUM, Natron—n. Chloratum liquidum, Liquor sodæ chlorinatæ—n. Muriaticum, Soda, muriate of—n. Muriatum, Soda, muriate of—n. Præparatum, Soda, subcarbonate of—n. Tartarizatum, Soda, tartrate of—n. Vitriolatum, Soda, sulphate of—n. Nitricum, Soda, nitrate of—n. Oxymuriaticum, Soda, chloride of—n. Oxyphosphorodes, Soda, phosphate of—n. Sulphuricum, Soda, sulphate of.

NATTA, Nata.

NATULÆ, Quadrigenina tubercula.

NATU'RA, from nasci, 'to be born or arise.' Physis. Nature. Also, the genital organs.

NATU'RA MORBI. The essence or condition of a disease.

NATURAL PARTS, Genital organs.

NATURALIA, Genital organs.

NATURISM, Naturalism. A view which attributes every thing to nature, as a sage, prescient, and sanative entity.—Nysten. See Expectation.

NATURIST. A physician who scrupulously investigates, interprets, and follows the indications presented by nature in the treatment of disease.

NAU'CLEA GAMBIR, Unca'ria gambir. A plant of the Nat. Order, Rubiaceæ, native of the Malayan Peninsula and Indian Archipelago, which yields large quantities of the kind of Catechu known by the names Terra Japonica and Square Catechu, and which, in Indian commerce, is called Gambier or Gambir. It is a powerful astringent, much used in tanning, and in medicine. See Catechu.

NAU'SEA, Nau'sia, Nausi'asis, Nausio'sis, Nau'tia, Queas'iness, Squeas'iness, (F.) Nausée, Envie de vomir; from vau, navis, 'a ship'; because those unaccustomed to sailing are so affected. Sickness. Inclination to vomit.

NAUSEA, KREAT'IC, (κρας, κρεατος, 'flesh.') The sickness and vomiting, excited, in some nervous patients, by the smallest portion of animal food.

NAUSEA MARI'NA, Morbus nau'ticus, Vom'itius navigan'tium seu mari'nus, Sea-sickness, (F.) Mal de mer. The sickness, vomiting, &c., experienced at sea by those unaccustomed to a sea-life; and from which those who are accustomed are not always exempt. It generally ceases when the person becomes habituated to the motion of the vessel, and not till then.

NAUSEABOND, Nauseant.

NAUSEANT, Nau'seans, (F.) Nauseabond, Nauseeux. An agent that excites nausea, which is a state of diminished action. Nauseants are, hence, valuable remedies in diseases of excitement.

NAUSIA, Nausea.

NAUSIASIS, Nausea.

NAUSIO'SIS. This word, besides being synonymous with nausea, has been used to express the state of venous hemorrhage, when blood is discharged by jets.

NAUTIA, Nausea.

NAVEL, Umbilicus—n. Striug, Funiculus umbilicalis—n. Wort, Cotyledon umbilicus—n. Wort, Venus's, Cotyledon umbilicus.

NAVET, Brassica rapa—n. du Diable, Bryonia alba—n. Galant, Bryonia alba.

NAVETTE, Brassica rapa.

NAVICULAR, Navicula'ris, Navifor'mis, (F.) Naviculaire, from navicula, 'a little ship.'

NAVICULAR FOSSA, Fossa Navicula'ris seu Scaphoi'des, Navic'ula, Scaph'ula. See Scaphoid. This name has been given, 1. To a small depression between the entrance of the vagina and the posterior commissure of the labia major or fourchette. 2. To a perceptible dilatation, presented by the urethra in man, near the base of the glans. 3. To the superficial depression which separates the two roots of the helix. This is also called Scapha.

NAVICULARE OS, Scaphoides os.

NAVIFORMIS, Navicular.

NAVIS, Vulva.

NEAR-SIGHTEDNESS, Myopia.

NEARTHRO'SIS, from neos, 'young or new,' and arthron, 'a joint.' A new joint.

NEBLE, Nipple.

NEB'ULA, Nubes, Nubec'ula, Nephos, νεφελη, Neph'elē, Neph'e'lium, Visus nebulosus, (F.) Nuage, Ombrage. A slight speck on the cornea. A mist or cloud suspended in the urine. See Caligo.

NEBULOUS, Nepheloid.

NECESSARY, Necessarius, (ne, and cessare.) The Necessaries of Life, Vitæ necessitates, (F.) Besoins de la vie, include every thing requisite for the maintenance of life, and particularly food.

NECK, Collum—n. Derbyshire, Bronchocele.

NECK OF THE FOOT, Instep.

NECK, SWELLED, Bronchocele—n. Stiff, Torticollis—n. Wry, Torticollis.

NECKLACE, AN'ODYNE, (F.) Collier anodin. These are formed of the roots of hyoscyamus, Job's tears, allspice steeped in brandy, or the seeds of the wild liquorice vine, to suit the fancy of the prescriber. They are employed to facilitate dentition in children, and to procure sleep in fever. (!)

NECKWEED, Veronica beccabunga, V. peregrina.

NECR'EMIA, from nekros, 'death,' and αἷμα, 'blood.' Death of the blood. Death beginning with the blood.

NECRENCEPHALUS, Mollities cerebri.

NECROCEDIA, Embalming.

NECROCOMIUM, Morgue.

NECRODES, Cadaverous.

NECRODOCHIUM, Morgue.

NECROLOGY, BILLS OF, Mortality, bills of.

NEC'ROMANCY, Necromanti'a, Negromanti'a, Necromanti'a, Nigromanti'a, from nekros, 'death,' and μαντεία, 'divination.' Divination by the dead.

NECROMANTIA, Necromancy.

NECRON, Cadaver.

NECRONARCEMA, Rigor mortis.

NECROPHOB'IA, from nekros, 'death,' and φοβος, 'fear.' Exaggerated fear of death. This symptom occurs in patients where the disease is not mortal; as in hypochondriasis. In fevers, it is not a good symptom.

NECROPNEUMO'NIA, Pneumo'nia gangræno'sa seu typho'sa, Gangræ'na seu Mortificatio seu Anthrax seu Carbunculus Pulmoni, Pneumoseps'is, Pneumo'acē, (F.) Gangrène du Poulmon, Pneumonécrosie, — Piorry; from nekros,

'death,' and pneumonia. Gangrenous inflammation of the lungs. This may be diffused or circumscribed. The only pathognomonic symptom is the extraordinary and repulsive odour of the breath and expectoration. The treatment consists in the use of the chlorides internally, or of chlorine by inhalation; allaying irritation by opium, and supporting the patient by wine- whey, and nourishing diet.

NECROPSIA, Autopsia cadaverica.

NECROPSY, Autopsia cadaverica.

NECROSCOPIA, Autopsia cadaverica.

NECROSCOPY, Autopsia cadaverica.

NECROSED, see Necrosis.

NECROSEMEIOTI'QË, from nekros, 'death,' and σημειον, 'a sign.' The doctrine of the signs of death.

NECRO'SIS, from nekrow, 'I kill.' Mortification. State of a bone or of a portion of a bone deprived of life. Osteogangræ'na, Osteonecro'sis. The bone, in such case, is said to be nekrosed. Necrosis may take place without the surrounding soft parts being struck with gangrene. It is to the bones what gangrene is to the soft parts. The part of the bone affected with necrosis becomes a foreign body, similar to the gangrenous eschar, and its separation must be accomplished by the efforts of nature, or by art. When necrosis occurs in the centre of long bones, it never extends to their articular extremities. The exterior layers of bone form a canal round the dead portion or sequestrum; between these swollen layers and the sequestrum, suppuration takes place; the matter presses against the bony canal; perforates it, and is discharged by apertures, which become fistulous.

In the treatment, the exit of the sequestrum must be facilitated by proper incisions, by the application of the trepan to the bone, &c.

NECROSIS CEREBALIS, Ergotism — n. Dentium, Dental gangrene — n. Ustilaginea, Ergotism.

NECROSTOA, Morgue.

NECROTOMY, Dissection.

NEC'TANDRA CINNAMOMI'DES, Laurus cinnamomoi'des, Cinnamomum sylvestrē Americ'anum: Order, Lauraceæ; native of New Grenada, where it is called Canela; has the odour and taste of cinnamon, and is used as such.

NECTANDRA CYMBARUM, Ocote'a cymbarum seu ama'ra, grows in Oronoko, where it is called *Sass'afra*s. The bark is aromatic, bitter, and stomachic; and Von Martius thinks it is an ingredient in the curare poison.

NECTANDRA PUCHURY, see Pichurim beans — n. Rodiei, see Bebeeru.

NECTAR, νεκταρ, from νη, 'a particle of negation,' and κρω, 'to kill.' A pleasant liquor, feigned by the poets to have been the drink of the gods, and to have rendered immortal those who partook of it. A name given, by the ancients, to many drinks; and particularly to one made with wine, evaporated, and sweetened with honey.

NECTARIUM, Inula belenium.

NECUSIA, see Wound.

NECYOMANTIA, Necromancy.

NEDYIA, Intestines.

NEDYS, νηδys. The belly, abdomen, stomach, uterus.

NEEDLE, Sax. neol, næol, from Teut. neten, 'to sew.' Acus, Bel'onē, Raphis, Raph'ion, Aces'tra, (F.) Aiguille. A steel instrument, used in many professions. In Surgery, a steel, gold, silver, or platina instrument, that may be round, flat, or triangular, straight, or curved, supported or not by a handle, but having always a point, by means of which it penetrates the textures; and often having, either near the point, or more commonly, near the other extremity, an aperture or eye for the reception of a thread or tape, which it introduces into the parts. The Aiguille à appareil of the French is the ordinary sewing needle used in the making of bandages, &c.

NEEDLE, ACUPUNCTURE, (F.) Aiguille à Acupuncture. An inflexible gold or silver needle; conical, very delicate, four inches long, furnished with a handle, and, at times, with a canula shorter than it by about half an inch. An ordinary needle, waxed at the head, will answer as a substitute for this. See Acupuncture.

NEEDLE, CATARACT, Acus ophthalmica, (F.) Aiguille à cataracte. Needles of gold, silver, and steel have been used; the latter, alone, at the present day. The cataract needle is employed to depress or tear the crystalline when opaque. This needle is usually made from 15 to 24 lines long; and is attached to a fine handle. The extremity may be, as in Scarpa's and Langenbeck's, pointed, prismatic, triangular, and curved; in Dupuytren's and Walther's, flat, curved, and sharp-edged; in Hey's, flat, with a semicircular and sharp end; or, as in Beer's, Siebold's, Schmidt's, Himly's, Von Gräfe's, &c., straight and spear-pointed. A mark is generally placed upon the handle to inform the operator,—when the instrument is engaged in the eye,—what side corresponds to the crystalline.

NEEDLE FOR A COUNTER-OPENING, Acus invaginata, (F.) Aiguille à Contre-ouverture ou engagée ou à gaine,—a long, narrow instrument of steel; the point of which is fine and sharp on both sides;—the heel (talon) having an aperture to receive a thread, tape, &c., provided with a flat, silver sheath, shorter than the blade, the point of which it covers when passing through parts that have to be respected.

NEEDLE, DESCHAMP'S, Paupe's needle, (F.) Aiguille de Deschamps, A. à manche, &c., is the last described needle, fixed to a handle. The eye is placed near the point. It is employed in the ligature of deep-seated arteries.

NEEDLE, FIS'TULA, (F.) Aiguille à Fistule. A long, flat, flexible, silver instrument; having an aperture near one extremity; blunt at the other. This was formerly used for passing a seton into fistulous ulcers. On one of its sides was a groove for guiding a bistouri in case of necessity.

Also, a long, steel instrument, terminated by a point like that of a trocar, which Desault employed for penetrating the rectum, when operating for fistula that had no internal aperture.

NEEDLE, HARE-LIP, (F.) Aiguille à Bec de Lièvre. A small, silver canula, to which is attached a spear-point, that can be readily withdrawn. This needle, armed with the point, is introduced at one side of the fissure in the lip, and through the other. The twisted suture is then applied, and the pin withdrawn.

NEEDLE, LIG'ATURE, (F.) Aiguille à ligature. A long, steel instrument, sharp towards one extremity, with an eye near the other, which was formerly used for suspending the circulation of blood prior to amputation, by being passed through the limb, so as to include the principal artery and a part of the muscles and integuments.

Also, a steel instrument of various dimensions, round towards one of its extremities, which was straight, and furnished with an aperture; curved and flat towards the opposite, which was pointed, and had a slight ridge on its concave side. At the commencement of the last century, this instrument was used to pass ligatures around vessels.

Also, a steel instrument of various dimensions, flat, regularly curved in the form of a semicircle, with a sharp or lance point, and a long eye, used with advantage in place of the last.

NEEDLE, PAUPE'S, Needle, Deschamps's.

NEEDLE, SETON, (F.) Aiguille à Séton. A long, narrow, steel blade; pointed and sharp at one extremity; pierced at the other by an aperture. The Aiguille à contre-ouverture may be used for the same purpose.

NEEDLE, SUTURE, (F.) Aiguille à Suture. For the twisted suture, the hare-lip needle is used; for the others, the straight or curved needle: the straight needle is preferable for stitching up the abdomen, &c., in dissection. In the suture of the tendons, a curved needle has been used: flat on both sides, and cutting only at the concave edge, in order that the instrument may pass between the tendinous fibres without dividing them.

NEEDLE-BEARER, Porte-aiguille.

NEEDLE-CARRIER, Porte-aiguille.

NEEM BARK, see Melia azedarach.

NEESING, Sneezing.

NÉFLE, Mespilus (the fruit).

NÉFLIER, Mespilus.

NEFREN'DES, properly, 'sucking pigs.'—Varro. Nodoi, Edentuli (vn, privative, and odous, odovros, 'a tooth.') Persons devoid of teeth. Young children, for instance, who have not cut them; or aged persons, who have lost them. This state is called Nefrendis, Nodostia, Odontia edentula.

NEGOTIUM PARTURITIONIS, Parturition.

NÈGRE BLANC, Albino.

NEGRETIA PRURIENS, Dolichos pruriens.

NEGRO, Nigrita, (F.) Nègre. One of the Æthiopian race. See Homo and Mulatto.

NEGROMANTIA, Necromancy.

NEIÆRA, Abdomen.

NEIGE, Snow.

NEIR, Kidney.

NEIRA, Abdomen.

NEIS, Nasus.

NELUMB'BIUM LU'TEUM, Yellow ne'lumbo, Yellow water lily, Pond lily, Water shield, Water nuts, Water chin'capin, Rattle nut, Sacred bean. A beautiful water plant, common in the United States, and belonging to Nat. Ord. Nymphaeæ; Ser. Syst. Polyandria Polygynia. The leaves are cooling and emollient when applied to the surface. The roots, leaves, and nuts are eaten. The last are called by the Indians and others water chincapins.

NELUMBO, YELLOW, Nelumbium luteum.

NENDO, Angelica lucida.

NENNDORF, MINERAL WATERS OF. Nenndorf is a village three and a half German miles from Hanover. Its cold sulphureous spring is much celebrated.

NENUPHAR, Nymphaea alba—n. Blane, Nymphaea alba—n. Jaune, Nymphaea lutea—n. Lutea, Nymphaea lutea—n. Odorant, Nymphaea odorata.

NEOARTHRO'SIS, from neos, 'new,' and arthron, 'a joint.' A new joint; an artificial joint.

NEOG'ALA, from neos, 'new,' and gala, 'milk.' Milk secreted immediately after the colostrum. Also, the colostrum.

NEOGENES, Nouveau-né.

NEOGILUS, Nouveau-né.

NEOGNUS, Nouveau-né.

NEOGONUS, Nouveau-né.

NEO-MEMBRANE, see Membrane, false.

NEONATUS, Nouveau-né.

NE'OPLASTY, Neoplas'ticē, from neos, 'new,' and πλασσω, πλαττω, 'I form.' An operative process for the formation of new parts. It includes autoplasty, cicatrization of wounds, and the formation of adhesions.—Burdach.

NEOSCYTECHUS, see Craquement de Cuir neuf.

NEOTOCICTERUS, Icterus infantum.

NEOTIA, Goodyera pubescens.

NEP, Nepeta.

NEPENTHA DESTILLATORIA, Bandu'ra. A Ceylonese plant, the root of which is astringent.

NEPENTHES, from νη, negative particle, and πειθος, 'grief.' A remedy much extolled by the ancients against sadness and melancholy.

The women of Thebes, according to Diodorus Siceliotes, alone possessed the secret of its composition; and, according to Homer, Helen introduced it from Egypt. Some suppose it to have been opium.

NEPENTHES, Banguè—n. Opiatum, Pilulæ opiatæ.

NEP'ETA, N. Cata'ria seu vulga'ris, Cata'ria vulga'ris, Herba felis, Nep, Catnep, Catmint, (F.) Herbe aux Chats, Cataire,—so called, because cats are fond of it. Ord. Labiatae. The leaves, Cata'ria, (Ph. U. S.), have a smell and taste like those of an admixture of spearmint and pennyroyal. It has been recommended in uterine disorders, dyspepsia, flatulency, &c., like pennyroyal; and is much used in domestic medicine, on the American continent, in flatulencies, &c., of children.

NEPETA AGRESTIS, Melissa nepeta—n. Glechoma, Glechoma hederacea—n. Vulgaris, Nepeta.

NEPHALIOTES, Temperance.

NEPHELE, Enæorema, Nebula.

NEPHELION, Nebula.

NEPH'ELOID, Nephele'oides, Nephele'oides, Neb'ulosus, Nubilo'sus. From νεφελη, 'a cloud,' and ειδος, 'resemblance.' An epithet applied to urine when it is cloudy—Uri'na nephele'oides.

NEPHOS, Nebula.

NEPHRÆMORRHAGIA, see Hæmaturia.

NEPHRAL'GIA, Dolor Nephret'icus, Neural'gia Renum, (F.) Néuralgie des Reins, Dysnéphro-nervie, from νεφρος, 'a kidney,' and αλγος, 'pain.' Pain and neuralgia in the kidney.

NEPHRALGIA ARENOSA, see Gravel—n. Calculosa, see Gravel—n. Rheumatica, Lumbago.

NEPHRANURIA, Ichuria renalis.

NEPHRAPOS'TASIS, Nephroρρο'sis, Abscessus renal'is, from νεφρος, 'kidney,' and αποστασις, 'abscess.' Renal abscess.

NEPHRATON'IA, from νεφρος, 'kidney,' and ατονια, 'want of tone.' Renum aton'ia seu paral'ysis. Atony of the kidney.

NEPHRAUX'E, from νεφρος, 'a kidney,' and αυξω, 'to increase.' Enlargement of the kidney.

NEPHRELCO'SIS, Nephroρρο'sis, Helco'sis renal'is, from νεφρος, 'kidney,' and ελκωσις, 'ulceration.' Ulceration of the kidney.

NEPHRELMIN'TIC, Nephremlin'ticus, from νεφρος, 'a kidney,' and ελμινθ, ελμινθος, 'a worm.' That which is owing to the presence of worms in the kidney.

NEPHREMPHRAX'IS, from νεφρος, 'a kidney,' and εμφρασσω, 'I obstruct.' A name given by Plouquet to obstruction of the kidneys.

NEPHRETIC, Nephret'icus, Nephret'ic, Nephret'icus, from νεφρος, 'a kidney.' That which relates to the kidney. Applied, especially, to pain, &c., seated in the kidney.

NEPHRETICUM, in Materia Medica, means a medicine employed for the cure of diseases of the kidney.

NEPHRETICUM LIGNUM, Guilandina moringa.

NEPHRETICUS LAPIS, Talcum nephret'icum, (F.) Pierre néphrétique, Jade néphrite ou oriental. A green, fatty kind of stone,—once used as an amulet against epilepsy,—an absurd name, as there can be no such remedy.

NEPHRIA, Kidney, Bright's disease of the.

NEPHRID'ION, Pingu'do renal'is. From νεφρος, 'the kidney.' The fat which surrounds the kidneys.—Hippocrates.

NEPHRIDIDIUM, Capsule, renal.

NEPHRIDIDIUS, Nephretic.

NEPHRINE, Oxyd, cystic, Urea.

NEPHRITIS, Nephritis—n. Albumineuse, Kidney, Bright's disease of the.

NEPHRITES, Asphaltites.

NEPHRITIC, Nephretic.

NEPHRITICUM LIGNUM, Guilandina moringa.

NEPHRITIS, Asphaltites.

NEPHRITIS, Empres'ma Nephritis, from νεφρος, 'kidney,' and ιτις, 'denoting inflammation;' Rennum inflammatio, Nephro-phleg'monè,—Inflammation of the Kidney, (F.) Nephrite, Inflammation des Reins, is characterized by acute pain; burning heat, and a sensation of weight in the region of one or both kidneys; suppression or diminution of urine; fever; dysuria; ischuria; constipation, more or less obstinate; retraction of the testicle, and numbness of the thigh of the same side. It may be distinguished into simple and calculous nephritis—Lithonephritis. In the latter, the urine often contains small particles of uric acid or of urate of ammonia. The most common causes of nephritis are,—excess in irritating and alcoholic drinks; abuse of diuretics; blows or falls on the region of the kidneys; the presence of renal calculi, &c. It may be distinguished from lumbago by the pain which attends the latter on the slightest motion, &c. It usually terminates by resolution in from one week to two or three. It may, however, end in suppuration—pyonephrite; or may become chronic—chrononephrite, (Piorry.) In the treatment, antiphlogistics, as bleeding, baths, &c., are required to the full extent; with the use of diluents, opiates, &c.

NEPHRITIS ALBUMINENSIS, Kidney, Bright's disease of the—n. Albuminosa, Kidney, Bright's disease of the—n. Associated, Kidney, Bright's disease of the—n. Cachectic, Kidney, Bright's disease of the—n. Calculous, see Nephritis—n. Sociata, Kidney, Bright's disease of the.

NEPHROCHALAZOSIS, Kidney, Bright's disease of the.

NEPHROCOCCOSIS, Kidney, Bright's disease of the.

NEPHROCYSTO'SIS, from νεφρος, 'a kidney,' and κυστις, 'a cyst or bladder.' A morbid condition, which consists in the formation of cysts in the bladder.

NEPHROCOLICA, Colica nephretica.

NEPHRODES, Nephroid.

NEPHRODIUM FILIX MAS, Polypodium filix mas.

NEPHROGRAPHY, from νεφρος, 'a kidney,' and γραφη, 'a description.' An anatomical description of the kidney.

NEPHROHÆMIA, from νεφρος, 'kidney,' and αιμα, 'blood.' Hyperæmia or congestion of the kidney.

NEPHROID, Nephro'ides, Nephro'ides, Reniform'is, from νεφρος, 'kidney,' and ειδος, 'form, resemblance.' Reniform. Having a resemblance to a kidney—as 'nephroid cancer,' so called because the morbid growth resembles the kidney in structure.

NEPHROLITHIASIS, from νεφρος, 'a kidney,' and λιθος, 'a stone.' The disease of calculus in the kidney; Lith'ia renalis, Lith'asis nephritica, L. Renalis. See Gravel.

NEPHROLITHIC, same etymon. Belonging to calculi in the kidneys. This epithet has been applied to ischuria, occasioned by calculi formed in the kidneys.

NEPHRO-LITHOTOMY, Nephrotomy.

NEPHROLOG'Y, Nephrolog'ia, from νεφρος, 'kidney,' and λογος, 'a treatise.' A treatise on the kidneys. Dissertation on the kidneys and their functions.

NEPHROMALA'CIA, from νεφρος, 'kidney,' and μαλακία, 'softness.' Softening of the kidney.

NEPHROMETRÆ, Psoæ.

NEPHRON'CUS, Tumor renalis, from νεφρος, 'kidney,' and ογκος, 'a tumour.' A tumefaction of the kidney.

NEPHROPHLEGMAT'IC, Nephro-phlegmat'icus, from νεφρος, 'kidney,' and φλεγμα, φλεγματος, 'phlegm.' A name given, by some authors, to ischuria produced by mucus contained in the urine.

NEPHROPHLEGMONE, Nephritis.

NEPHROPHTHI'SIS, from νεφρος, 'kidney,' and φθισις, 'consumption.' Phtthisis from suppuration of the kidney.

NEPHROPLETHOR'IC, Nephro-plethoricus, from νεφρος, 'a kidney,' and πληθωρα, 'plethora.' Belonging to plethora of the kidneys. An epithet given to ischuria dependent upon this cause.

NEPHROPY'IC, Nephro-py'icus, from νεφρος, 'a kidney,' and πυον, 'pus.' Belonging to suppuration of the kidney.

NEPHROPYOSIS, Nephropostasis, Nephrelcosis.

NEPHRORRHAG'IA, Hæmaturia renalis, Hæmorrhag'ia renum, from νεφρος, 'kidney,' and ραγη, 'rupture'; Profluvium sanguinis e renibus. Hemorrhage from the kidney.

NEPHROS, Kidney.

NEPHROSCLE'RIA, from νεφρος, 'kidney,' and σκληρία, 'hardness'; Induratio renum. Induration of the kidneys.

NEPHROSPAS'TIC, Nephrospas'ticus, from νεφρος, 'a kidney,' and σπασω, 'I draw.' That which depends upon spasm of the kidney. An epithet given to a variety of ischuria.

NEPHROTHROM'BOID, Nephro-thrombo'idēs, from νεφρος, 'a kidney,' and θρομβος, 'a clot.' That which depends upon clots of blood, contained in the kidneys or their ducts. An epithet for a species of ischuria.

NEPHROT'OMY, Nephro-lithotomy, Nephrotom'ia, Nephro-lithotom'ia, Sectio renalis, S. renis, from νεφρος, 'a kidney,' and τεμνειν, 'to cut.' Dissection of the kidney. Also, an operation proposed with the view of extracting calculi formed in the kidney, by means of an incision into the tissue of that organ.

NEPHRUS, Kidney.

NEPIOS, Infans.

NEPIOTES, Infancy.

NÉRION, Nerium oleander.

NÉRIS, MINERAL WATERS OF. Nérís is on the high road from Moulins to Limoges, eighty leagues from Paris. There are four springs, the water of which is clear, inodorous, tasteless, and has an unctuous feel. It contains carbonic acid gas, carbonate of soda, and sulphate of soda, chloride of sodium, silex, and an animal matter to which its 'oleaginous' property is probably owing. The waters are generally used in the form of thermal baths.

NE'R'IUM, from νηρος, 'humid,' because growing in moist places. N. oleander.

NE'R'IUM ANTIDYSENTER'ICUM, Wright'ia antidysenter'ica. The tree which affords the Codagapala Bark. Cones'si cortex, Tillicher'ry cortex, Cortex profluvii. Family, Apocynæ. Sex. Syst. Pentandria Monogynia. (F.) Codagapale, Cropale. The bark of this Malabar tree is of a black colour, externally, and is generally covered with a white moss or scurf. It has an austere, bitter taste, and has been recommended as an astringent in diarrhœa, dysentery, &c.

NE'R'IUM OLEAN'DER, Nerium, Rhododaph'nis, Rosa'ga, (F.) Laurier rose, Laurasc, Nérion, Rosage, Rhododaphné. The leaves are reputed to be narcotic. The infusion is employed internally, in herpetic affections, and the powder, incorporated with lard, is used in the itch.

NERONIA'NA seu NERO'NICA (PHLEBOTOM'IA.) An epithet given, for some cause, to phlebotomy, when more than one vein was opened on the same day, or to bleeding coup sur coup. Termed Neroniana, because the philosopher Seneca was bled to death under Nero [?].

NERPRUN PURGATIF, Rhamnus.

NERVE, Nervus, Neuron, νευρον, 'a string.' (F.) Nerf. Neuron and Nervus meant also, with the ancients, a tendon and a ligament, Partes nervosæ; and hence the different acceptations of 'nervous;'—'a man of nerve—a strong, nervous man; and a weak, nervous woman.' The nerves are tubular cords of the same substance as that which composes the encephalon and spinal marrow. They extend from one or other of the nervous centres to every part of the body, communicating, frequently, with each other; forming plexuses, and, occasionally, ganglions; and being, at length, lost in the parenchyma of organs. There are 42 pairs, and, according to their origin, they are termed Cranial or Encephalic, and Spinal. Each nerve is composed of several filaments or cords placed alongside each other, and is surrounded by a neurilemma. The encephalic nerves, in general, have only one root in the brain, whilst the spinal arise from the marrow by two roots: the one from an anterior fasciculus of filaments, the other from a posterior, separated from each other by the Ligamentum denticulatum; uniting outside this ligament, and presenting, near the intervertebral foramen, a ganglion formed only by the posterior root. The two roots make, afterwards, but one nerve; and, like the encephalic nerves, proceed to their destination, subdividing into rami and ramusculi, until they are finally lost in the texture of the organs. The trunks first formed are commonly round, and proceed alone, or accompany the great vessels, being placed in the areolar spaces which separate the organs, and are thus protected from injury. Their manner of termination we are not acquainted with; whether the nervous pulp, for instance, as is more probably the fact, be distributed or lost in a membrane, as seems to be the case with the nerves of sight, hearing, and smell,—or are looped. Certain it is, that there is considerable difference in the organs, as respects the quantity of nerves that terminate in them; and the particular arrangement of the nervous extremities. Some organs have numerous nerves; others seem to have none: a circumstance which influences considerably the sensibility of parts.

The Encephalic Nerves arise from the encephalon, or are inserted into it; (according as we consider the brain the origin or termination of the nerves;) and make their exit by foramina at the base of the skull. They are 12 in number. The spinal nerves are 31 in number, 8 cervical, 12 dorsal, 5 lumbar, and 6 sacral: the four inferior cervical being much larger than the superior, because they furnish the nerves of the upper extremities.

SYNOPTICAL TABLE OF THE NERVES.

I. Cranial or Encephalic Nerves.
1. Olfactory (1st pair.)	} Divided into internal, external, and middle branches, which are distributed on the Schneiderian membrane.	6. Abducentes (6th pair.)
2. Optic (2d pair.)		To the rectus externus oculi.
3. Motores Oculorum . (3d pair.)	} Superior Branch. To the rectus superior oculi and levator palpebræ superioris. Inferior Branch. To the rectus internus, rectus inferior and lesser oblique muscles; a filament which goes to the ophthalmic ganglion.	7. Facial (Portio dura of the 7th pair.)
4. Pathetic (4th pair.)		To the greater oblique muscle of the eye.	} To the vestibule, semi circular canals, and cochlea.
5. 1^{er} Trigeminum . (5th pair.)	} Ophthalmic Branch. Divided into three branches. 1. The lacrimal branch , to the lacrimal gland and upper eye-lid. 2. Frontal branch , to the forehead and upper eyelid. 3. Nasal branch , to the eyelids, nasal fosse, and nose. Superior Maxillary Branch. 1. The orbital branch , to the orbit. 2. The posterior and superior dental , to the last three molar teeth and gums. 3. The anterior dental , to the incisor, canine, and two lesser molares. 4. Infra-orbital , to the upper lip, cheek, and nose. Inferior Maxillary Branch. 1. Temporal profound branches, to the temporal muscle. 2. Masseterine branch, to the masseter muscle. 3. Buccal , to the inner surface of the cheek. 4. Pterygoid , to the internal pterygoid muscle. 5. Lingual , to the mucous membrane of the tongue. 6. Inferior dental , to the teeth of the lower jaw, and to the lower lip. 7. Auricular branch, to the pavilion of the ear and forehead.	8. Auditory (Portio mollis of the 7th pair.)
			9. Glossopharyngeal . (Portion of the 8th pair.)
		10. Par Vagum (8th pair.)
		11. Spinal or Accessory of Willis.....	} At its exit from the cranium—the accessory of the pneumogastric nerve anastomosing with this nerve. In the neck—filaments to the trapezius muscle. Cervicalis descendens , to the muscles of the inferior hyoid region, and to the cervical nerves. Filaments to the muscles of the tongue.
		12. Hypoglossal (9th pair.)

II. Spinal or Vertebral Nerves.

1. Cervical Nerves.

1st Cervical Pair..... { Anterior Branch. Anastomosing par arcade with the second pair.
 2d Cervical Pair..... { Anterior Branch. A branch anastomosing with the first pair: a branch which goes to the cervical plexus
 3d and 4th Cervical Pairs..... { Anterior Branch. Concurring in the cervical plexus.
 The Posterior Branch of these four pairs ramifies on the occiput and muscles of the superficial and deep-seated cervico-occipital regions.

DESCENDING BRANCHES.—1. Internal descending, anastomosing with a branch of the hypoglossus. 2. Phrenic branch, to the diaphragm. 3. External descending branches, dividing into supra-clavicular, supra-acromial, infra-clavicular, and cervicales profundi, to the muscles and integuments of the upper part of the chest and shoulder, to the trapezius, levator scapulae, rhomboides, &c.
 ASCENDING BRANCHES.—1. Mastoid, to the posterior and lateral part of the head and the inner surface of the pavilion of the ear. 2. Auricular, to the parotid gland and pavilion of the ear.
Superficial Cervical Branches.
 (2.) To the platysma myoides, digastricus, the integuments of the neck, &c.
Anterior Branches. Assisting in the formation of the brachial plexus.
Posterior Branches. To the muscles and integuments of the posterior part of the neck and upper part of the back.

Cervical Plexus.....

5th, 6th, and 7th Cervical Pairs.....

Brachial Plexus.....

1. Thoracic Branches. (2.) to the anterior and lateral parts of the chest. 2. Supra-scapular branch to the muscles of the posterior scapular region. 3. Infra-scapular branches (3.) to the subscapularis, teres major, teres minor, and latissimus dorsi. 4. The brachial interna cutaneous, to the integuments of the palmar and dorsal surfaces of the forearm, near the ulnar margin. 5. The brachial externa cutaneous, principally to the integuments of the palmar and dorsal surfaces of the forearm, near the radial margin. 6. The median nerve, to the forearm, hand, and palmar surface of all the fingers. 7. The cubital nerve, to the last two fingers. 8. The radial, to the first three. 9. The axillary, around the shoulder-joint, and to the neighbouring muscles.

2. Dorsal Nerves, (Nervi dorsales.)

1st Dorsal Pair..... { Anterior Branch. To the brachial plexus.
 2d and 3d Dorsal Pairs..... { Anterior Branches. An intercostal and brachial branch.
 4th, 5th, 6th, and 7th Dorsal Pairs..... { Anterior Branches. Internal branches, to the intercostals, triangularis sterni, pectoralis major, and to the skin. External branches to the 4th, 5th, 6th, and 7th Dorsal Pairs..... { integuments of the chest, the obliquus externus abdominis, and the skin of the abdomen.

 8th, 9th, 10th, and 11th Dorsal Pairs... { Anterior Branches. Internal branches, to the transversalis, obliquus internus, and rectus muscles, and to the skin of the abdomen. External branches, to the integuments of the chest, and to the muscles and skin of the abdomen.
 12th Dorsal Pair..... { Anterior Branch. To the first lumbar nerve, and to the muscles and skin of the abdomen as far as the iliac crest.

The Posterior Branches of the dorsal nerves are distributed to the muscles and integuments of the back and loins.

3. Lumbar Nerves.

1st, 2d, 3d, and 4th Lumbar Pairs..... { Anterior Branches. Concurring to form the lumbar plexus.
 5th Pair..... { Anterior Branch. Aiding in forming the sciatic plexus.
 The Posterior Branches of the lumbar nerves are distributed to the loins, sacrum, and nates.

Lumbar Plexus.....

1. Musculo-cutaneous Branches, to the number of three. One superior, to the muscles of the abdomen, to the fold of the groin, and the scrotum: a middle, to the integuments and muscles of the abdomen: and an inferior, to the skin of the thigh. 2. A genio-crural branch to the integuments of the scrotum, the groin, and the thigh. 3. The crural nerve, to the integuments and muscles of the thigh, skin of the leg, and foot. 4. The obturator nerve, to the muscles at the inner part of the thigh. 5. The lumbo-sacral, to the sciatic plexus. It gives off the gluteal nerve to the glutæi muscles.

4. Sacral Nerves.

1st, 2d, 3d, and 4th Sacral Pairs..... { Anterior Branches. They form by their union the sciatic plexus.
 5th and 6th Pairs..... { Anterior Branches. To the parts in the vicinity of the coccyx.
 The Posterior Branches ramify on the muscles and integuments of the nates.

Sciatic Plexus.....

1. Hemorrhoidal nerves, to the rectum. 2. Vesical, to the bladder. 3. Uterine and vaginal, to the vagina and uterus. 4. Inferior gluteal, to the gluteal muscles, perineum, and integuments of the posterior part of the thigh. 5. Pudic, to the perineum, penis, or vulva. 6. Sciatic, divided into the external popliteal, which ramifies on the integuments and muscles of the external side of the leg, on the dorsum of the foot, and the dorsal surface of the toes: and into the internal popliteal, distributed on the dorsal surface of the two last toes, to the muscles of the foot, and on the plantar surface of all the toes.

Classifications of the nerves have been recommended according to their uses, in preference to the ordinary anatomical arrangement. It has been remarked that the encephalic nerves have generally one root; the spinal two. Experiments and pathological facts have proved, that the anterior column of the marrow and the anterior roots of the spinal nerves are inservient to volition or voluntary motion: and that the posterior column and roots are destined for sensibility. Hence the spinal nerves, which have two roots, must be the conductors both of motion and feeling; whilst the encephalic, which, with but few exceptions, have but one, can possess but one of these properties:—they must be either sensitive or motor, according as they arise from the posterior or anterior column of the medulla: and, consequently, three classes of nerves may be distinguished.

- | | | |
|-----------------------------------|---|---|
| 1. Sensory | } | Arising, by a single root, from the posterior column of the medulla oblongata or spinal marrow. |
| 2. Motor | | Arising, by a single root, from the anterior column of the same parts. |
| 3. Sensory and Motor | | Which have two roots: one from the anterior, and one from the posterior column. |

According to Sir Charles Bell, the medulla oblongata is composed of three columns on each side; an anterior, a middle, and a posterior. Whilst the anterior and posterior columns produce the nerves of motion and sensation respectively, the middle, according to Sir Charles, gives rise to a third set of nerves—the respiratory. To this order belong:—

1. The accessory nerve of Willis, or superior respiratory.
2. The par vagum.
3. The glosso-pharyngeal.
4. The facial or respiratory of the face.
5. The phrenic.
6. A nerve which has the same origin as the phrenic;—the external respiratory.

When a horse has been hard-riden, every one of these nerves is in action.

This division is now, however, generally abandoned, and there does not seem to be a third column, especially destined for respiration.

Sir C. Bell, again, reduced the system of nerves to two great classes. 1. Those that are regular, primitive, symmetrical, and common to all animals, from the worm to man; which have double roots, and preside over sensibility and motion: and, 2. The irregular or superadded, which are added to the preceding, in proportion as the organization of animals offers new or more complicated organs. To the first class belong all the spinal nerves and at least one encephalic—the 5th pair;—to the second, the rest of the nervous system.

Dr. Marshall Hall has proposed a division of the nervous system, which is calculated to explain many of the anomalous circumstances so frequently witnessed. He proposes to divide all the nerves into, 1. The cerebral or the sentient and voluntary. 2. The true spinal or excito-motory. 3. The ganglionic or cyclo-ganglionic,—the nutrient and secretory. If the sentient and voluntary functions be destroyed by a blow upon the head, the sphincter muscles will still contract when irritated, because the irritation is conveyed to the spine, and the reflex action takes place to the muscle so as to throw it into contraction. But if the spinal marrow be now destroyed, the sphincters remain entirely motionless, because the centre of the system is destroyed. Dr. Hall thinks that a peculiar set of nerves constitutes, with the vesicular centre of the marrow as their axis, the second subdivision of the nervous system; and as those of the first subdivision are distinguished into sentient and voluntary, these may be distinguished into the excitor and motory. The first, or the excitor nerves, pursue their course principally from internal surfaces, characterized by peculiar excitabilities, to the centre of the medulla oblongata and m. spinalis; the second, or the motor nerves, pursue a reflex course from the medulla to the muscles, having peculiar actions concerned principally in ingestion and egestion. The motions connected with the first or cerebral subdivision are sometimes, indeed frequently, spontaneous; those connected with the true spinal are, he believes, always excited. Dr. Hall thinks, too, that there is good reason for viewing the fifth, and posterior spinal nerves as constituting an external ganglionic system for the nutrition of the external organs; and he proposes to divide the ganglionic subdivision of the nervous system into, 1. The internal ganglionic, which includes that usually denominated the sympathetic, and probably filaments of the pneumogastric; and, 2. The external ganglionic, embracing the fifth and posterior spinal nerves. To the cerebral system he assigns all diseases of sensation, perception, judgment, and volition—therefore all painful, mental, and comatose, and some paralytic diseases. To the true spinal, excito-motory, reflex, or diastaltic nervous system, belong all spasmodic and certain paralytic diseases. He properly adds, that these two parts of the nervous system influence each other both in health and disease, as they both influence the ganglionic system.

The main views of Dr. Hall on the excito-motory function have been generally embraced.

The following tabular view of the arrangement and connexions of the nerves and nervous centres has been given by Dr. Carpenter. It affords a good general view, although some of the details might admit of modification.

TABULAR VIEW OF THE NERVOUS CENTRES.

Afferent fibres derived from Sensory Ganglia; efferent fibres transmitted to motor centres.	CEREBRAL GANGLIA, the seat of the formation of Ideas, and the instrument of the Reasoning processes and Will; participating also with the Sensory Ganglia in the formation of the Emotions; and thus the original source of Voluntary and Emotional movements.	Afferent fibres derived from Sensory Ganglia; efferent fibres transmitted to motor centres.
---	---	---

Afferent fibres derived from posterior column of spinal cord; efferent fibres transmitted into posterior column.	CEREBELLIC GANGLIA, for harmonization of muscular actions; including also the ganglionic centre of the sexual sense (?).	Afferent fibres derived from posterior column of spinal cord; efferent fibres transmitted into motor column.

CRANIO-SPINAL AXIS, or centre of Automatic actions; including—
Radiating fibres to Cerebral Ganglia;—Nerves of Common and Special Sensation;—Motor nerves forming part of general motor system.	SENSORY GANGLIA, the seat of Sensation, and centre of Consensual (or Instinctive) movements, or of Automatic actions involving sensation.	Radiating fibres to Cerebral Ganglia;—Nerves of Common and Special Sensation;—Motor nerves forming part of general motor system.

Afferent and motor nerves of Respiration, Deglutition, &c.	RESPIRATORY and STOMATO-GASTRIC GANGLIA, forming the true centres of the Medulla Oblongata ; instruments of Reflex movements or automatic actions independent of sensation.	Afferent and motor nerves of Respiration, Deglutition, &c.
Fibrous strands connecting the Spinal Cord and Sensory Ganglia.		Fibrous strands, connecting the Spinal Cord and Sensory Ganglia.

Afferent and motor fibres, forming Trunks of Spinal Nerves.	SPINAL GANGLION, or True Spinal Cord , consisting of a coalesced series of segmental ganglia, the instruments of Reflex operations, or Automatic actions independent of Sensation.	Afferent and motor fibres, forming Trunks of Spinal Nerves.
Fibrous strands connecting different segments with each other; and with Medulla Oblongata and Sensory Ganglia.		Fibrous strands, connecting different segments with each other; and with Medulla Oblongata and Sensory Ganglia.

The nerves are sheathed, and are united to the neighbouring parts, by an abundant layer of fatty areolar texture, which sends, inwards, prolongations that separate the nervous cords and filaments from each other. The arterial trunks, distributed to them, transmit branches into their interior. The veins follow the same course as the arteries. Absorbents are not easily traced even on the greatest trunks.

NERVE FIBRES, Fila ner'væ, Fibræ ner'væ. In the nerves of the higher animals, two forms of nerve fibre exist—the tubular, and the gelatinous. In the minute fibrils or tubules, Tu'buli ner'vei, full of nervous matter, which constitute the former, there is a difference between the central and peripheral portion:—the former has been called the axis cylinder and primitive band; the latter, the medullary or white substance of Schwann,—being that to which the peculiarly white aspect of cerebrospinal nerves is principally due. In the gelatinous fibre, no tubular envelope can be distinguished, and the white substance of Schwann seems to be wanting. It contains numerous nuclei. See Neurine.

NERVI MOLLES. 'Soft nerves.' The anterior branches of the superior cervical ganglion of the great sympathetic, which accompany the carotid artery and its branches, around which they form intricate plexuses, and, here and there, small ganglia. They are called molles from their softness, and subrufi, from their reddish hue.

NERVI ODORATORII, Olfactory nerves—n. Reversivi, Laryngeal inferior nerves—n. Subrufi, Nervi molles—n. Vulneratio, Neurotrosis.

NERVIMOTION, Nervimotio, from nervus, 'nerve,' and motio, 'motion.' A name given, by M. Dutrochet, to the movement which is caused in the organs of the senses by external agents, and transmitted to the muscles by the nerves.

NERVIMOTOR, (F.) Nervimoteur. An epithet given, by M. Dutrochet, to external agents, which are capable of causing nervimotion.

NERVINE, Nervi'nus, Neuro'ic, Neuritic, Antineurotic, Antineuropath'ic, (F.) Névrotique, from nervus, 'a nerve.' A medicine which acts on the nervous system.

NERVOUS, Nervo'sus, Neuro'des, Ner'veus, Neur'ricus, (F.) Nerveux. Same etymon. Relating or belonging to the nerves. Strong. Also, weak, irritable.

NERVOUS ATTACK, (F.) Attaque des nerfs, is an affection accompanied with spasm, pain, and different nervous symptoms, to which impressible individuals are liable.

NERVOUS CENTRES, see Centres, nervous.

NERVOUS DIATHESIS is termed Atax'ia spir'ituum, Anomalia nervo'rum, Status nervo'sus seu erethic'us, Diath'esis seu Constitutio nervo'sa, Ner'vousness. Medically, nervousness means unusual impressibility of the nervous system. Formerly, it signified strength, force, and vigour. Recently, it has been applied to a hypochondriacal condition verging upon insanity, occasionally occurring in those in whom the brain has been unduly tasked;—a condition termed by some cerebrop'athy; by others, brain-fag.

NERVOUS DISEASES, Morbi nervo'si, (F.) Maladies nerveuses. Affections seated in the nervous system. To purely functional disease of the nerves, Dr. Laycock has given the name neuræmia, and to the class of diseases he applies the epithet neuræmia.

NERVOUS FLUID, Nervous principle, Flu'idum seu Liq'uidum ner'veum, Succus nervo'sus, Spir'itus vitalis. The fluid which is supposed to circulate through the nerves, and which has been regarded as the agent of sensation and motion. Of this fluid we know nothing, except that it resembles, in many respects, the electric or galvanic. It was formerly called Animal spirits, Spir'itus animal'es, (F.) Esprits animaux.

NERVOUS PAIN, Neuralgia.

NERVOUS POWER, Nerve power, Vis nervo'sa seu nervo'rum, Neurodyn'emia, Neurody'namis. The power of the nerves as exhibited in the living organism.

NERVOUS PRINCIPLE, Nervous fluid.

NEURAL'GIA, from νευρον, 'a nerve,' and αλγος, 'pain.' Rheumatismus spir'itus nervo'sus, Neurodyn'ia, (F.) Néuralgie, Néurody'nie, Ner- ous pain. A generic name for a certain number of diseases, the chief symptom of which is a very acute pain, exacerbating or intermitting, which follows the course of a nervous branch, extends to its ramifications, and seems, therefore, to be seated in the nerve. The principal neuralgiae have been distinguished by the names facial (of which the infra-orbital, maxillary, and frontal are but divisions)—the ilio-rotal, femoro-popliteal, femoro-pretibial, plantar, and cubito-digital. A division of anomalous neuralgiae has likewise been admitted.

All varieties of neuralgia are obstinate, and the greatest diversity of means has been made use of:—bleeding, general and local, —emetics, purgatives, rubefacients, vesicants, actual cautery, parotics, mercurial frictions, electricity; destruction of a portion of the nerve, &c. The most successful remedy, perhaps, is the carbonate of iron, given in doses of some magnitude; as, for instance, ℞ss or ℞ij, twice or thrice a day, in molasses. This plan of treatment, continued for a month or two, will often relieve, and ultimately remove this much dreaded affection. The mode in which it acts is by no means clear; but it is almost as certain as any other remedy used in disease in producing its salutary effects. The bowels must be kept free; and all inflammatory symptoms removed during its administration.

NEURALGIA ANOMALOUS. Under this name Chaussier has included different neuroses, some of which are characterized by acute pains circumscribed within a short compass, or extending by irradiations, but not having their seat in the course of a nerve; and others which are occasioned by tumours in the course of a nerve, or which succeed contusions or incomplete divisions of nerves.

NEURALGIA BRACHIALIS, Brachialgia—n. Brachio-thoracica, Angina pectoris—n. Cerebralis, Hemiplegia—n. Coeliaca, Neuralgia of the solar plexus (Romberg)—n. Cruralis, N. femoro-tibialis.

NEURALGIA CUBITO-DIGITALIS, Ischias nervosa digitalis. In this variety the pain extends from the part where the nerve passes under the inner condyle to the back of the hand and to its cubital edge.

NEURALGIA DENTALIS, Odontalgia nervosa.

NEURALGIA FACIAL, Neuralgia faciei, Trismus maxillaris seu Dolorificus seu Clonificus, Opioidalgia, Dolor crivicians faciei seu faciei periodicus, Hemicrania idiopathica, Autalgia dolorosa, Tic douloureux, Dolor faciei seu faciei typico caractere seu faciei Fothergillii, Rheumatis mus canerosus, Rheumatis mus larvatus. Prosopalgia, Prosopodyn'ia, Febris top'ica, Ophthalmodyn'ia periodica, Tortura Oris, Affectus spasmodico-convulsivus Labiorum, Face ague, is characterized by acute lancinating pains, returning at intervals; and by twinges in certain parts of the face, producing convulsive twitches in the corresponding muscles. It may be seated in the frontal nerve, in the infra-orbital, or in the maxillary branch of the fifth pair.

Metopodyn'ia, Brow-ague, Neuralgia frontalis, Ophthalmodyn'ia, Tic douloureux, Dolor periodicus, &c., commences at the superciliary foramen and extends along the ramifications of the frontal nerve that are distributed on the forehead, upper eyelid, caruncula lacrymalis, and nasal angle of the eyelids. Sometimes it is felt particularly in the orbit.

Neuralgia infra-orbitaria, Dolor faciei atrox, Rheumatis mus canerosus, Trismus clonificus, Prosopalgia, Febris top'ica, Odontalgia remittens et intermit'tens, Hemicrania sava, Infra-orbital neuralgia, Tic douloureux, is chiefly felt in the infra-orbital foramen, whence it passes to the cheek, upper lip, ala nasi, lower eyelid, &c.

In Neuralgia maxillaris, Gnathalgia, Gnathoneuralgia, Tic douloureux, Trismus catarrhalis maxillaris, the pain usually sets out from the mental foramen and passes to the chin, lips, temple, teeth, and tongue.

NEURALGIA, FALSE. A term assigned to pains along a nerve or its ramifications, produced by some body compressing it,—those pains terminating with the removal of the compressing cause.

NEURALGIA FEMORO-POPULITÆA, N. Ischiad'ica, Sciat'ica, Schias, Malum ischiad'icum, Morbus ischiad'icus, Passio ischiad'ica, Ischi'agra, Ischiad'algia, Ischio'sis, Ischioneuralgia, Coxal'gia, Dolor Ischiad'icus nervosus, Is'chias, I. nervosa Cotunnii seu Cotunnii, I. nervosa post'ica seu rheumatis'ca, Neurisch'ias, Cox'agra, Ischiad'ica, Ischoneural'gia, (Prov. Devonshire) Bone-shave, (F.) Sciaticque, Goutte sciaticque. This is characterized by pain following the great sciatic nerve from the ischiatic notch to the ham, and along the peroneal surface of the leg to the sole of the foot.

NEURALGIA FEMORO-PRETIBIALIS, N. cruralis, Ischias nervosa anti'ca, Seetal'gia anti'ca. In this, the pain, setting out from the groin, spreads along the fore part of the thigh, and passes down, chiefly on the inner side of the leg, to the inner ankle and back of the foot.

NEURALGIA OF THE HEART, Angina pectoris—n. Hepatica, Hepatalgia.

NEURALGIA ILLIO-SCROTAL has been rarely observed. It is characterized by a very acute pain, in the course of the branches of the first lumbar pair; this pain follows the crista ilii and accompanies the spermatic vessels to the testicle, which is often painfully retracted.

NEURALGIA, LEAD, see Lead rheumatism—n. Lienis, Splenalgia.

NEURALGIA MAMMÆ, Irritable breast. An exceedingly painful affection of the female mamma, unaccompanied by inflammation.

NEURALGIA PLANTARIS. This is rare; and the pain is confined to the course of the plantar nerves.

NEURALGIA RENUM, Nephralgia—n. Spinalis, Spinal irritation—n. Testis, Orethidalgia.

NEURANAGENESIS, Neuranaph'ysis, νευρον, 'a nerve,' and αναγεννω, 'to regenerate.' Regeneration or renewal of a nerve.

NEURANAPHYSIS, Neuranagenesis.

NEURAPOPHYSIS, see Vertebrae.

NEURASTHENIA, Neuradyna'mia, Debilitas nervosa. Debility or impaired activity of the nerves; from νευρον, 'a nerve,' and ασθενεια, 'debility.'—See Irritable.

NEURECTOMIA, from νευρον, 'a nerve,' and εκτομη, 'excision.' Excision of a nerve.

NEURICUS, Nervous.

NEURILEMMA, Neurile'ma, Neurily'mo, Neurymen, Perineurion, Fistula seu Tubulus seu Cap'sula seu Involucrum nervorum, Membrana seu Membran'ula seu Tunica seu Indumentum nervorum, Vagi'na nervorum; (F.) Névrilème, Périnèvre; from νευρον, 'a nerve,' and λεμμα, 'a coat.' The fine transparent, and apparently fibrous membrane that surrounds the nerves—to every filament of which it forms a true canal.

Robin restricts the term perinèvre to the structure that invests the primitive bundles of nerves; and every nervous filament. It differs from the neurilemma, in its ordinary acceptation, which forms a coat of some thickness in the larger nerves, and supports the nutrient vessels, whilst the perinèvre exhibits no capillaries.

NEURILEMMATITIS, Neurilemmitis.

NEURILEMMITIS, Neurilemmat'itis, Neurolemmat'itis, Neurilit'is, (F.) Névrilémite, from neurilemma, and itis, denoting inflammation. Same etymon. Inflammation of the neurilemma.

NEURILITIS, Neurilemmitis.

NEURILYMA, Neurilemma.

NEURINE, Medull'a nervorum, (F.) Névine, Albumine cérébrale ou du cerveau, from νευρον, 'a nerve.' The substance of which the nervous system is composed. It consists chiefly of albumen and a peculiar fatty matter, associated with phosphorus. There are two kinds of neurine—the one vesicular or consisting essentially of nerve vesicles or nerve cells or corpuscles, or, as they are sometimes called, from their prevailing in the ganglia—ganglion corpuscles and ganglion globules; the other, the tubular, formed—as the word imports—of tubules. The former is the cineritious or cortical nervous matter of the older anatomists;—the latter, the white or medullary. The vesicular neurine has appeared to be restricted to the production and distribution of nerve-power; the tubular, to its conduction; yet the experiments of Dr. Brown-Séquard show, that the former conveys sensitive impressions from the posterior spinal roots to the brain.

NEURISCHIAS, Neuralgia femoro-poplitea.

NEURITIC, Nervine.

NEURITIS, Inflammatio nervorum, Neurophlogos'is, Neurophlegmonē, (F.) Inflammation des Nerfs, Névrite, from νευρον, 'a nerve,' and itis, a suffix denoting inflammation. Inflammation of a nerve.

NEUROBLACIA, from νευρον, 'a nerve,' and βλακεια, 'stupor.' Insensibility of the nerves.

NEUROCHONDRO'DES, from νευρον, 'a sinew,' χονδρος, 'a cartilage,' and ειδος, 'resemblance.' A hard substance between a sinew and a cartilage.

NEURODES, Nervous.

NEURODYNAMIA, Nervous power.

NEURODYNAMIS, Nervous power.

NEURODYNIA, Neuralgia.

NEUROGAMIA, Magnetism, animal.

NEUROGRAPHY, Neurograph'ia; from νευρον, 'a nerve,' and γραφη, 'a description.' The part of anatomy which describes the nerves.

NEUROHYPNOL'OGY, Neurohypnol'og'ia, from νευρον, 'a nerve,' υπνος, 'sleep,' and λογος, 'a treatise.' A name given by Mr. Braid to his theory of magnetic sleep. See Magnetism, animal.

NEURO-HYPNOTISM, see Magnetism, animal.

NEUROLEMMATITIS, Neurilemmitis.

NEUROLOG'Y, Neurolog'ia, (F.) Névrologie, from νευρον, 'a nerve,' and λογος, 'a discourse.' The part of anatomy which treats of the nerves.

NEURO'MA, (F.) Névrome, from νευρον, 'a nerve.' A morbid enlargement of a nerve. Applied to subcutaneous, circumscribed, and highly painful tumours formed on the tissue of the nerves; and likewise to a small, hard, grayish tumour, Neuromat'ion, Nervous ganglion, painful tubercle, of the size of a pea, which is observed in the course of nerves, and appears to be formed from the neurilemma.

NEUROMALACIA; from νευρον, 'a nerve,' and μαλακεια, 'softening.' Softening of nerves.

NEUROMATION, Neuroma.

NEUROMETERES, Psœæ.

NEUROMYELITIS, from νευρον, 'a nerve,' μυελος, 'marrow,' and itis, denoting inflammation. Inflammation of the medullary matter of the nerves.

NEURON, see Nerve.

NEURON'OSOS, Neuron'os'os, from νευρον, 'a nerve,' and νοσος, 'a disease.' A disease of the nerves.

NEURONYG'MĒ, Neuronyg'mus, Neuronyx'is, from νευρον, 'a nerve,' and πυγμα, 'puncture;' Punctio nervi. Puncture of a nerve.

NEUROPATHIC, Neuropath'icus, from νευρον, 'a nerve,' and παθος, 'a disease.' Belonging to disease of the nerves, to Neuropath'a or Neuron'os'os.

NEUROPHLEGMONE, Neuritis.

NEUROPHLOGOSIS, Neuritis.

NEUROPLAS'TY, Neuroplast'icē, (F.) Névroplastie, from νευρον, 'a nerve,' and πλαστικός, 'forming.' M. Serres applies this term to a ganglionic alteration of the peripheral nerves.

NEUROPYRA, Fever, nervous, Typhus mitior.

NEUROPYRETUS, Fever, nervous, Typhus mitior.

NEURO'SES, (F.) Névroses, from νευρον, 'a nerve.' A generic name for diseases supposed to have their seat in the nervous system, and which are indicated by disordered sensation, volition, or mental manifestation; without any evident lesion in the structure of the parts, and without any material agent producing them. Such is the usual definition. Broussais attributes them to a state of irritation of the brain and spinal marrow.

NEURO-SKELETON, see Skeleton.

NEUROSPASMI, see Spasm.

NEUROSTHENIA, (F.) Névrosthénie, from νευρον, 'a nerve,' and σθενεια, 'strength.' Excess of nervous irritation. Nervous irritation.

NEUROTHELIC APPARATUS, Corpus papillare.

NEUROTIC, Nervine.

NEUROTICA. Diseases of the nervous function. The 4th class of Good's Nosology.

NEUROTOME, Névrotonie.

NEUROTOMY, Neurom'ia, (F.) Névrotonie. Same etymon. Dissection of nerves. Also, an incised wound of a nerve.

NEUROTOSIS, Neurotros'mus, from νευρον, 'a nerve,' and τραωσις, 'wounding.' Nervi vulneratio. Wound or wounding of a nerve.

NEUROTOSMUS, Neurotroosis.

NEURYMEN, Neurilemma.

NEUTA, Neutha. A membrane, according to Paracelsus, which covers the eyes and ears of the fœtus in utero.

NEUTRAL, from neuter, 'neither.' Belonging to neither in particular.

NEUTRAL SALTS, Secondary salts, (F.) Sels neutres. Salts, composed of two primitive saline substances, combined together, and not possessing the characters of acid or of base.

NÉVIS, MINERAL WATERS OF. Thermal springs in the department of Allier, France. Temperature, 136° to 148° Fahrenheit.

NÉVRALGIE, Neuralgia—n. du Foie, Hepatalgia—n. des Reins, Nephralgia—n. de l'Utérus, Hysteralgia.

NÉVRILÈME, Neurilemma.

NÉVRILÉMITE, Neurilemmitis.

NÉVRINE, Neurine.

NÉVRITE, Neuritis.

NÉVRODYNIE, Neuralgia.

NÉVROLOGIE, Neurology.

NÉVROME, Neuroma.

NÉVROSE DU CŒUR, Angina pectoris.

NEVROSES, Neuroses.

NÉVROSTHÉNIE, Neurosthenia.

NÉVROTÈLE, from νευρον, 'nerve,' and θηλη, 'papilla.' Concerning the papillæ of the skin.

APPAREIL NÉVROTÈLE. The papillary apparatus, or arrangement of the skin in the aggregate.—Breschet.

NÉVROTOMIE, Neurotome, Neurotomus; from νευρον, 'a nerve,' and τεμνω, 'I cut,' 'I dissect.' An instrument used by anatomists to dissect the nerves. It is a long and very narrow scalpel, having two edges.

NÉVROTOMIE, Neurotomy.

NEVUS, Nævus.

NEW JERSEY, MINERAL WATERS OF. In the upper part of Morris county and in the county of Hunterdon, near the top of Musconetcong mountain, there are chalybeate springs, which are resorted to. See Schooley's Mountain.

NEW YORK, MINERAL WATERS OF. The chief waters are those of Saratoga, Ballston, Sharon, and Avon.

NEXUS STAMINEUS OCULI, Ciliary body.

NEZ, Nasus.

NGERENGERE. A singular disease, with the New Zealanders, which Dr. Arthur S. Thomson considers to be a variety of such diseases as the Elephantiasis Græcorum, Lepra of the Cosacks, &c., and which he proposes to call Lepra gangræno'sa.

NIANDRIA ANOMALA, Anisodus luridus.

NICARAGUA WOOD, see Cæsalpinia.

NIC'COLI SALES, Salts of Nickel, (F.) Sels de Nickel. These salts are gentle tonics, and have been given with advantage in periodic headache, and in chlorosis and amenorrhœa. The dose of the sulphate is gr. ss or gr. j, three times a day.

NICCOLUM, Nickel.

NICE, CLIMATE OF. The climate of Nice possesses some advantages over the neighbouring climates of Provence and Italy, being free from the sirocco of the latter, and protected from the mistral of the former. Spring is the most unfavourable season. The climate is very dry. It has been a great winter retreat for the consumptive; but does not deserve the encomiums that have been passed upon it.

NICKAR TREE, Gymnocladus Canadensis.

NICKEL, Niccolum, from (G.) Nickel, 'a prostitute.' A term of detraction, having been applied by the old German writers to what was regarded as a kind of false copper ore. A white malleable metal, s. g. 8.8; less oxidizable than iron. The sulphate has been given as a tonic in the dose of half a grain to a grain.

NICODEMI O'LEUM, Oil of Nicodemus.

An oil made by digesting, for some time, — in a mixture of white wine and olive oil, — old turpentine, litharge, aloes, saffron, oxyd of zinc, &c.

NICOTIANA, N. tabacum — n. Minor, N. rustica.

NICOTIANA RUS'TICA, called after Nicot, who carried it to Europe; N. minor, Priapeia, Hyoscyamus luteus, English or Wild Tobacco. Ord. Solanaceæ. The leaves possess the properties of tobacco, but are milder.

NICOTIANA TAB'ACUM, Nicotiana, Herba tabaci, Tabacum, Petum, Petum, Hyoscyamus Peruvia'nus, Tobacco, Virgin'ia tobacco, Drunkwort, (F.) Tabac, Nicotiane. Tobacco is a violent acro-narcotic; its properties seeming to depend upon a peculiar principle, Nicotin or Nicotianin. It is narcotic, sedative, diuretic, emetic, cathartic, and errhine. In incarcerated hernia, it is injected, in the form of smoke or infusion, but requires great caution. It is extensively and habitually used as an errhine and sialogogue. The infusion is used to kill vermin, and in some cutaneous eruptions.

NICOTIANE, Nicotiana tabacum.

NICOTIANIN, see Nicotiana tabacum.

NICOTIN, see Nicotiana tabacum.

NICTATIO, Hippus, Nictatio.

NICTATION, Nictatio, Nictatio, from nictare, nictatum, 'to wink.' Clonus nictatio, Ble- pharism'us, Palpebratio, Twinkling of the eye, (F.) Clignement, Cillement. A rapid and repeated movement of the eyelids, which open and shut alternately. As occasionally performed, it is physiological; if repeatedly, a disease. It seems to be executed chiefly by the motor 7th pair of nerves; but it is necessary that the excitor 5th pair should likewise be in a state of integrity.

NIDAMENTUM, Decidua.

NIDDICK, Nucha.

NIDOREUX, Nidorous.

NIDOROUS, Nidorosus, (F.) Nidoreux, from Nidor, Cuiassa, 'the smell of any thing burnt,' &c. Having the smell of burnt or corrupt animal matter.

NIDUS, Nidus hirundinis.

NIDUS HIRUN'DINIS, Nidus, Swallows' Nest. A deep fossa in the cerebellum — so called from its fancied resemblance — situate between the velum medullare posterior in front, and the nodulus and uvula behind.

NIEDERBRONN, MINERAL WATERS OF. Saline waters in the department of Bas-Rhin, France, which contain chloride of sodium, sulphate of magnesia, and carbonic acid.

NIELLE, Nigella.

NIEPA BARK, see Samadera Indica.

NIGELLA, Coptis.

NIGELLA, N. Sati'va; Ord. Ranunculaceæ; (nigrella, from niger, 'black.') Melan'thium, Cum'num Nigrum, Fennel flower, Nutmeg flower, Devil in a bush, (F.) Nigelle, Nielle, Faux cumin, Fleur Sainte-Catherine. This small southern European and Syrian plant was formerly used medicinally as an expectorant and deobstruent, errhine, sialogogue, &c.

NIGELLE, Nigella.

NIGHT-BLINDNESS, Hemeralopia.

NIGHT EYES, Crusta genu equinæ — n. Mare, Incubus.

NIGHTSHADE, AMERICAN, Phytolacca decandra — n. Bittersweet, Solanum dulcamara — n. Common, Solanum — n. Deadly, Atropa belladonna — n. Echanter's, Circæa Lutetiana — n. Garden, Solanum — n. Palestine, Solanum sanctum — n. Stinking, Hyoscyamus niger — n. Vine, Solanum dulcamara — n. Woody, Solanum dulcamara.

NIGREDO À SOLE, Ephelides.

NIGRITA, Negro.

NIGRITIES, Melanopathia — n. Ossium, Caries.

NIGRITISM, Melanopathia.

NIGRITUDO, Melanosis — n. Pulmonum, Melanosis pulmonum.

NIGROMANTIA, Necromancy.

NIGROR, Melasma.

NIGRUM OCULI, Pupil.

NIHIL ALBUM, Zinci oxydum — n. Griseum, Zinci oxydum.

NILIACUM, Mel.

NIMA QUASSIOIDES, Sima'ba quassioides, a native of Nepal and the Himalaya mountains, is as bitter as quassia, and is used like it.

NINDSIN, Sium ninsi.

NINE BARK, Spiræa opulifolia.

NINE-DAY FITS, Trismus nascentium.

NINSI, Sium ninsi.

NINSING, Panax quinquefolium.

NINZIN, Sium ninsi.

NIPPLE, Sax. nyppe. The Teat, Tit, Tet, Dug, Pap, (Old Eng.) Nebbe, Titty; Aceromas'tium, Uber, Staphyl'is, Staphyl'ium, Bubona, Mammilla, Mammella, Papilla, P. mammae, Uberis apex, Thelè, Tithè, Tithos, Tithion, Tithis, (F.) Mamelon, Bout de sein. The conical tubercle, situate at the centre of the breast. Towards the central part of each breast the skin changes colour, and assumes a rosy tint in young females, or a reddish brown in those who have suckled several children. The circle is called the Areola or Aureola of the nipple. The nipple is capable of erection on being excited.

NIPPLE, ARTIFICIAL, Bout de Sein.

NIPPLEWORT, Lapsana.

NIRLES, Herpes phlyctenodes.

NIRMALLEES, Strychnos potatorum.

NIRMILLIES, Strychnos potatorum.

NISUS, Nixus, Peira, Straining, from Lat. nitor, nixus, and nixus, 'to endeavour.' A voluntary retention of the breath, so as to force down the diaphragm; the abdominal muscles being at the same time contracted forcibly. In this manner the contents of the abdomen are compressed; and the evacuation of the fæces, urine, &c., is effected.

NISUS, Effort — n. Formativus, Plastic force.

NISUS PARTURIENTIUM. The efforts or forcing during parturition.

NITEDULA, Cicindela.

NITON, MINERAL WATERS OF. These springs in the Isle of Wight contain iron, and sulphate of alumina and potassa.

NITRAS, Nitrate — n. Hydrargyricus, see Hydrargyri nitras — n. Hydrargyrosus, Hydrargyri nitras — n. Kalicus, Potassæ nitras — n. Lixivie, Potassæ nitras — n. Natricum, Soda, nitrate of — n. Plumbicus, Plumbi nitras — n. Potassæ cum sulphure fusus, Potassæ nitras fusus sulphatis paucillo mixtus — n. Sub-bismuthicum, Bismuth, sub-nitrate of.

NITRATE, Nitras, Azotate. A salt, formed of a base and nitric acid. Several nitrates are employed in medicine.

NITRATE ACIDE DE MERCURE, see Hydrargyri nitras — n. d'Ammoniaque, Ammoniac nitras — n. d'Argent, Argenti nitras — n. Mercuræuz, Hydrargyri nitras.

NITRE, Potassæ nitras — n. Cubic, Soda, nitrate of.

NITRIC, Nitricus, (F.) Nitrique, from nitrum, 'nitre.' Appertaining or relating to nitre.

NITRIC ACID, Acidum nitricum seu azoticum seu septicum seu nitri, Aqua fortis, Nitrous acid, Spiritus nitri duplex seu nitri fumans seu nitri Glauberi seu nitri ac'idus, Azotic acid, Dephlogisticated nitrous acid, Oxyseptonic acid, (F.) Acide nitrique ou azotique. Nitric acid is obtained from nitre—Nitrate of potassa. Its odour is suffocating; taste very acid and caustic. It is corrosive, liquid, colourless, and transparent. S. g. 1.500.

Strong nitric acid is rarely used except as an application to foul, indolent ulcers, or to warts. When given internally, it is in the form of the ACIDUM NITRICUM DILUTUM, Spiritus nitri simplex seu nitri vulgaris — Diluted nitric acid, which, in the Pharmacopœia of the United States, consists of nitric acid, ℥i, water, ℥ix by measure. Diluted largely with water, it is used, as a drink in fevers of the typhoid kind; in chronic affections of the liver, syphilis, &c.; but in the latter affections, it is not to be depended upon.

NITROGEN, from νιτρον, 'nitre,' and γενναω, 'I generate.' Azote.

NITROGEN, GASEOUS OXIDE OF, Nitrous oxide, Protoxide of nitrogen or of azote, Paradise, Intoxicating or Laughing gas, Dephlogisticated nitrous gas, Gas azoticum oxygenatum. This gas, when respired, produces singular effects; great mental and corporeal excitement; and, generally, so much exhilaration as to render the appellation, "laughing gas" by no means inappropriate. It has not been much used in medicine, although recommended in paralysis. Its effects are too violent and too transient to render it a valuable remedial agent; and, in the delicate, it has been productive of unpleasant effects, inducing palpitation, fainting, and convulsions.

NITROGEN, PROTOXIDE OF, Nitrogen, gaseous oxide of.

NITROGENE, Azote.

NITROGENIUM, Azote.

NITROGENIZED, Azoted, Azotized, (F.) Azoté. Containing nitrogen or azote:—as a nitrogenized, azoted, or azotized aliment.

NITRO-MURIATIC ACID, Ac'idum nitro-muriaticum seu muriaticum nitroso-oxygenatum, Mens'trum auri, Nitro-hydrochloric or Hydrochloro-nitric acid, Aqua regia seu styg'ia seu regis Chrysalea, (F.) Eau régale. A mixture of the nitric and muriatic acids, has been used in diseases of the liver, in the form of a bath for the feet and legs, made sharply acidulous. It has, also, been employed, and with more uniform results, in cutaneous affections. Whatever advantage it may possess in internal diseases—and these advantages are doubtful—they are probably dependent upon the chlorine formed by the mixture, or upon the properties possessed by the mineral acids in general. See Chlorine.

The Acidum nitro-muriaticum of the Pharmacopœia of the United States is formed by mixing four fluidounces of nitric acid with eight of muriatic acid.

NITROUS OXIDE, Nitrogen, gaseous oxide of.

NITRUM, Natron, Potassæ nitras — n. Antiquorum, Soda — n. Cubicum, Soda, nitrate of — n. Facitium, Borax — n. Flammans, Ammoniac nitras — n. Lunare, Argenti nitras — n. Prismaticum, Potassæ nitras — n. Rhomboidale, Soda, nitrate of — n. Saturninum, Plumbi nitras — n. Vitriolatum Schroederi, Potassæ sulphas — n. Tabulatum, Potassæ nitras fusus sulphatis paucillo mixtus — n. Vitriolatum, Potassæ sulphas.

NIX, Snow — n. Fumans, Calx viva — n. Zinci, Zinci oxydum.

NIXUS, Nisus — n. Parturientium, Nisus parturientium.

NOAH'S ARK, Cypripedium luteum.

NOBLE, Nobilis. Principal, Essential.

NOBLE PARTS, Partes essential'es. Some anatomists have given this name to parts, without which life cannot exist; such as the heart, liver, lungs, brain, &c. The organs of generation have, likewise, been so called.

NOCAR, νωκαρ, Torpor Soporificus. Lethargic torpor.

NOCTAMBULATIO, Somnambulism.

NOCTAMBULISMUS, Somnambulism.

NOCTAMBULUS, Somnambulist.

NOCTISURGIUM, Somnambulism.

NOCTURNI OCULI. Gray or blue eyes. — Castelli.

NOCTURNA BELLA, Coitus.

NOCTURNAL, Nocturnus, Nycterinus, from nox, noctis, 'night.' Relating to night, as Febris nocturna seu nyctericina. A fever occurring in the night.

NODDING, Annutio, Nutatio.

NODDLEPOX, Syphilomania.

NODE, Nodus, Emphy'ma exosto sis perios'tea, (F.) Nodosité, Nœud; from Hebr. גל, 'a heap.' A hard concretion or incrustation, which forms around joints attacked with rheumatism or gout. Some include, under this name, exostoses, articular calculi, ganglions, and even the chronic swellings of the joints known under the name of white swellings.

NODES, Edentulus.

NODI DIGITORUM MANUS, Phalanges of the fingers — n. Lactea, Infarctus mammae lacteus — n. Nervorum, Ganglions, nervous — n. Hæmorrhoidales, see Hæmorrhoids.

NODOLI, Nefrendes.

NODOSIA, see Nefrendes.

NODOSITÉ, Node.

NOD'ULI ARAN'TII, Noduli Morgagn'i, Corpora Aran'tii. The small sesamoid bodies situate on the periphery of the semilunar valves of the aorta and pulmonary artery for the better occlusion of the artery.

NODULI MORGAGNI, Noduli Arantii — n. Nervorum, Ganglions, nervous.

NOD'ULUS, diminutive of nodus, 'a knot.' A small knot. A small prominence or lobe in the portion of the cerebellum, which forms the posterior boundary of the fourth ventricle. The nodulus is on the median line, and before the uvula. See Vermiform process, inferior.

NODULUS UTERINUS, Pessary.

NODUS, Articulation, Edentulus, Encystis, Hamma — n. Cerebri, Pons Varolii — n. Chirurgicus, Knot, surgeon's — n. Encephali, Nœud de l'Encéphale, Pons Varolii — n. Hystericus, Angone — n. Vitæ, Centrum vitale.

NOESIS, Intellect.

NŒUD, Node — n. du Chirurgien, Knot, surgeon's — n. d'Emballeur, Knot, packer's.

NŒUD DE L'ENCÉPHALE (F.), Nodus Enceph'ali. M. Cruveilhier, under this name, includes the pons Varolii, peduncles of the cerebrum and cerebellum, and the tubercula quadrigemina.

NŒUD VITAL, Centrum vitale.

NŒUDS, Calculi, arthritic.

NOIR ANIMAL, Carbo animalis — n. d'Os, Carbo animalis.

NOISETIER, Corylus avellana.

NOISETTE, Corylus avellana (nut).

NOLX, Juglans regia (nut) — n. Américaine, Jatropha curcas — n. des Barbades, Jatropha curcas — n. Cathartique, Jatropha curcas — n. d'Eau, Trapa natans — n. de Galle, see Quercus infectoria — n. d'Iyasur, Ignatia amara — n. de Serpent, see Thevetia Ahouai — n. Vomique, see Strychnos nux vomica.

NOLA CULINARIA, Anemone pulsatilla.

NOLI ME TANGERE, Lupus, see Chancreux (Bouton).

NOMA, Cancer aquaticus — n. Pudendorum, Colpocæe infantilis.

NOMAD, Nomade, Nomas, (νομας, νομαδος), from νομη, 'pasturage.' An epithet given to people who have no fixed habitation, and who travel, with their flocks, from country to country, for pasturage. Such are the Tartars. By analogy, the word Nomad'ic has been applied to a spreading ulcer.

NOMBRIL, Umbilicus — n. de Vénus, Cotyledon umbilicus.

NOME, Cancer aquaticus, Phagedenic ulcer.

NOMENCLATURE, Nomenclatio, Nomenclatur'a, Onomatolog'ia, Onomatocle'sis, Termonol'ogy, Terminol'ogy, Glossol'ogy, Orismol'ogy, from νομα, 'name,' and καλεω, 'I call.' A collection of terms or words peculiar to a science or art. In all sciences, nomenclature is an object of importance; and each term should convey to the student a definite meaning. The Lavoisierian nomenclature was a valuable gift to chemistry; and anatomy has derived advantage from the labours of Barclay, Dumas, and Chaussier, who have given names to parts indicative of their situation. See Muscle. The nomenclature of pathology has required the greatest attention: and although repeated attempts have been made to improve it, the barbarous terms that disgrace it are still frequently adopted. It consists of Hebrew and Arabic terms; Greek and Latin, French, Italian, Spanish, German, English, and even Indian, African, and Mexican; often barbarously and illegitimately compounded. A want of principle in founding the technical terms of medicine is every where observable. They have been formed:—1. From colour; as Melæna, Melas, Atrabilis, Leuce, Alphos, Chlorosis, Rubeola, Scarlatina, Purpura, &c. 2. From duration; as ephemeral, quotidian, tertian, and quartan, continued, and intermittent, &c. 3. From Birds, Beasts, Fishes, Insects, and Plants; as Rabies canina, Cynanche, Boulimia, Pica, Hippopyon, Elephantiasis, Urticaria, Lichen, Ichthyosis, &c. 4. From Persons or Places; as Morbus Herculeus, Facies Hippocratica, Lepra Arabum, Plica Polonica, Sudor Anglicus, Morbus Gallicus, Iguis Sancti Antonii, Chorea Sancti Viti, &c.

NOMUS, Cancer aquaticus.

NON-COMPOS, Lunatic.

NON-COMPOS MENTIS, Lunatic.

NON-NATURALIS, Non natural'ia. Under this term the ancient physicians comprehended air, meat, and drink, sleep and watching, motion and rest, the retentions and excretions, and the affections of the mind. They were so called, because they affect man without entering into his composition, or constituting his nature; but yet are so necessary that he cannot live without them.

NONPLACENTAL, see Placental.

NON-SANE, Insane.

NON-STRIATED MUSCULAR FIBRE, see Muscular fibre.

NONUS HUMERI PLACENTINI, Teres minor — n. Lingux musculus, Genio-glossus — n. Vesalii, Peronæus tertius.

NOOS, Intellect.

NORICE, Nurse.

NORMA VERTICALIS, see Normal.

NORMAL, Normal'is, from norma, 'a perpendicular,' 'a rule.' According to rule; perpendicular.

The normal line, norma vertical'is, of Blumenbach, is a vertical line let fall from the prominence of the frontal bone and shaving the superior maxillary, so as to mark the projection of the latter bone beyond the arch of the forehead.

NORRIS'S DROPS, see Antimonium tartarizatum.

NORTH CAROLINA, MINERAL WATERS OF. The chief springs are the Warm and Hot Springs of Buncombe. Temperatures varying from 94° to 104° Fahr. They have not much mineral impregnation, and have the properties of the thermal waters in general.

NORTON'S DROPS, Liquor hydrargyri oxy-muriatis.

NORYSS, Nurse.

NOSACERUS, Sickly.

NOSE, Nasus — n. Bleed, Epistaxis.

NOSE, RUNNING AT THE, Coryza.

NOSELIA, νοσηλια, Nosocome'sis, Nosocomi'a, from νοσος, 'disease.' Care of the sick.

NOSEMA, Disease.

NOSENCEPHALUS, (F.) Nosencéphale, from νοσος, 'disease,' and εγκεφαλος, 'brain.' A monster whose skull is open only on the frontal and parietal regions, the posterior fontanelle being distinctly present.

NOSEROS, Insalubrious, Sick.

NOSEUMA, Disease.

NOSOCOMESIS, Noselia.

NOSOCOMIA, Noselia.

NOSOCOMIAL, Nosocomia'lis, from νοσοκομιον, (νοσος, 'a disease,' and κομω, 'I take care of,') 'an hospital.' Relating to an hospital, — as 'nosocomial or hospital fever.'

NOSOCOMIUM, Hospital.

NOSOCOMUS, Infirmier.

NOSOCRATIC, Specific.

NOSODES, Insalubrious, Sick, Sickly.

NOSODOCHIUM, Hospital.

NOSOGENESIS, Pathogeny

NOSOGENIA, Pathogeny.

NOSOGENY, Pathogeny.

NOSOGEOGRAPHY, Geography, medical.

NOSOGRAPHY, Nosograph'ia, from νοσος, 'a disease,' and γραφω, 'I describe.' A description of diseases.

NOSOL'OGY, Nosolog'ia, from νοσος, 'a disease,' and λογος, 'a discourse.' A name given to that part of medicine whose object is the classification of diseases. The most celebrated nosological systems have been those of Sauvages (1763), Linnæus (1763), Vogel (1764), Sagar (1776), Macbride (1772), Cullen (1772), Darwin (1796), Selle, Crichton (1804), Parr (1809), Swediaur (1812), Pinel (1813), Young (1813), Good (1817), Hosack (1818), &c. Besides these general nosographies, others have been published on Surgery exclusively, none of which are particularly worthy of enumeration amongst nosological systems. Nosological arrangements have, also, been formed of single families or groups of diseases. Plenck, of Baden, is the author of two different treatises of this kind: the one, a methodical arrangement of the diseases of the eyes, and the other, of cutaneous diseases. Dr. Willan published an arrangement of cutaneous diseases, which was completed by Dr. Bateman, and adopted into the Nosology of Dr. Hosack. Mr. Abernethy, also, published a methodical classification of tumours, and many other partial nosological classifications might be enumerated. Also, Pathology.

NOSON'OMY, Nosonom'ia, from νοσος, 'a disease,' and ονομα, 'name.' The nomenclature of diseases.

NOSOPHYTA, from νοσος, 'disease,' and φυτον, 'a plant.' A disease supposed to be produced by, or to consist in the development of parasitic plants—as porrigo, mentagra, &c.—Gruby.

NOSOPH'US, Nosopoit'icus, from νοσος, 'disease,' and ποιω, 'I make.' That which causes disease.

NOSOS, Disease.

NOSOTAX'Y, Nosotax'ia, from νοσος, 'a disease,' and ταξις, 'arrangement.' The distribution and classification of diseases.

NOSOTHEO'RIA, from νοσος, 'disease,' and θεωρια, 'doctrine.' The doctrine or theory of disease.

NOSTAL'GIA, from νοστος, 'return,' 'a journey home,' and αλγος, 'pain.' Nostoma'nia, Nostros'sia, Apodemial'gia, Pathopatrial'gia, Patopatrial'gia, Philopatridal'gia, Philopatridoma'nia, Ademon'ia, Ademos'gñe, Home-sickness, (F.) Nostalgie, Maladie du pays. An affection produced by the desire of returning to one's country. It is commonly attended by slow wasting, and sometimes by hectic, which may speedily induce death. M. Pinel properly regards it as a variety of melancholy.

NOSTOMANIA, Nostalgia.

NOSTRASSIA, Nostalgia.

NOSTRILS, Nares.

NOSTRUM, Arcanum.

NOSTRUM, CHITTICK'S. An empirical remedy for stone in the bladder, said to be a solution of alkali in veal-broth.

NOTA MATERNA, Nævus — n. Primitiva, Groove, primitive.

NOTÆ INFANTUM, Nævi.

NOTAL, Dorsal.

NOTAL'GIA, Notial'gia, (Nostalgia, improperly, of Köchlin and others,) from νοστος, 'the back,' and αλγος, 'pain.' Pain in the back. Spinal irritation.

NOTANENCEPHALIA, see Notencephalus.

NOTCH, Teut. Nocke, Ital. Nocchia, Emarginatio, Emarginatur'a, (F.) Échancre. A depression or indentation of different shape and size, observed on the circumference or edges of certain bones.

NOTCH OF THE CONCHA, Incisura tragica.

NOTCH, ETHMOID'AL, (F.) Échancre ethmoïdale, is situate on the frontal bone, and joins the ethmoid.

NOTCHES, ISCHIAT'IC, (F.) Échancreures Ischiaticques, are two in number: — the greater and the less. The former is large, situate at the inferior part of the pelvis, and formed by the sacrum and ilium. It gives passage to the sciatic nerve, pyramidalis muscle, and to the superior gluteal vessels and nerves. The latter is much smaller than the other, from which it is separated by the sciatic spine. It gives passage to the tendon of the obturator internus, and to the internal pudic vessels and nerves.

NOTCH, PAROT'ID, (F.) Échancre parotidienne, is the triangular space comprised between the parotid edge of the inferior maxillary bone and the mastoid process; so called, because it lodges the parotid gland. The notches in soft parts are generally called Fissures.

NOTCH, SCAP'ULAR, Incisura scapular'is, Lumula scapular'e, (F.) Échancre scapulaire. The notch on the superior edge or costa of the scapula, which is converted into a foramen by means of a ligament, and gives passage to the suprascapular nerve.

NOTCH, SEMILUNAR OF THE STERNUM, Fourchette.

NOTENCEPHALIA, see Notencephalus.

NOTENCEPH'ALUS, from νοστος, 'the back,' and εγκεφαλος, 'the brain.' A monster whose head, with the brain, is on the back. The condition is termed Notencephalia and Notanencephalia. — I. G. St. Hilaire.

NOTHEUSIS, Degeneration.

NOTHIA, Degeneration.

NOTHROTOS, Torpor.

NOTHUS, False.

NOTLEUS, Dorsal — n. Myelus, Medulla spinalis.

NOTIALGIA, Notalgia.

NOTOM'ELES, from νοστος, 'the back,' and μελεος, 'unprofitable.' A monster with superfluous flesh on the back.

NOTOMYELITIS, Myelitis.

NOTOMYELUS, Medulla spinalis.

NOTON, Dorsum.

NOTOS, Dorsum, Vertebral column

NOUAGE DE LA CORNÉE, Caligo.

NOUÉ, (Bandage) (F.); 'knotted,' from nodus, 'a knot.' A bandage which has a considerable number of knots placed over each other. It is made with a roller, 6 or 7 ells long, rolled into two balls, and is used to compress the parotid region, after the extirpation of the parotid gland.

Also, an epithet applied to children in whom the disease of rickets has swollen the articulations.

It is, likewise, applied to the gout when it has caused nodes on the joints.

NOUET (F.), Nod'ulus. A bag filled with medicinal substances, and infused in a liquid to communicate their properties to it.

NOUFFER'S, MADAME, REMEDY, Polypodium filix mas.

NOURRICE, Nurse.

NOURRICIER, Nutritious.

NOURRITURE, Aliment.

NOUS, Intellect.

NOUURE, Rachitis.

NOUVEAU-NÉ (F.), ('new-born,') Neonatus, nuperrimè Natus, Neog'enes, Neog'iles, Neog'ilus, Neog'onus, Neog'nus, Infans recens natus. That which has been just born. A new-born infant.

NOVACULA, Razor.

NOW, Vertex.

NOYAU, see Cytoblast.
NOYAU CENTRAL DES PÉDONCULES
DU CERVELET, Corpus dentatum.

NOYER, Juglans regia—n. de Ceylon, Adhatoda.

NOYRIS, Nurse.

NUAGE, Nebula.

NUBECULA, Enaorema, Nebula.

NUBES, Enaorema, Nebula.

NUBILE, Nubilis, 'marriageable,' 'fit to marry.' Generally, the period of puberty is considered to be the age at which both sexes are nubile. They are truly nubile, however, only when they are fitted to procreate healthy and vigorous children, and are competent to discharge their duties as parents.

NUBILITY, Nubilitas, (F.) Nubilité; same etymon. The state of being nubile or marriageable.

NUBILOSUS, Nepheloid.

NUCES AQUATICÆ, see Trapa natans—n. Quercus, see Quercus alba.

NUCHA, In'ium, Nucha cap'itis, (F.) Nuque. The nuke, hinder part or nape of the neck, (Prov.) Niddick. The part where the spinal marrow begins.

Ligamentum Nucha. A strong ligament from the neck, proceeding from one spinous process to another, and inserted into the occipital bone. It is very strong in quadrupeds. It is called in them Paxwaxy, Paxwax, Packwax, formerly, Faxwax, and Taxwax.

NUCHAL RE'GION, Re'gio nuchæ seu nuchallis seu occipitalis infe'rior, from nucha. The region of the nucha or nape of the neck.

NUCISTA, see Myristica moschata.

NUCK, CANAL OF. A small prolongation of the peritoneum often sent into the inguinal canal of the female fetus. So called from Nuck, who first described it.

NU'CLEATED, Nucleatus, from nucleus, 'a kernel.' Having a nucleus or central particle. Applied to the elementary cells of organized tissues; the vital properties of which are seated in the nucleus. See Cytoblast.

NUCLEATED CELL, see Cytoblast.

NUCLEI CEMBRÆ, see Pinus Cembra—n. Ossei, Ossification, points of—n. Pineæ, see Pinus pinea.

NUCLEIN, see Globules of the blood.

NUCLEOLE, see Cytoblast.

NUCLEOLULE, see Cytoblast.

NUCLEOLUS, see Cytoblast.

NUCLEUS, see Cytoblast—n. Blastodermatis, Tache embryonnaire—n. Centralis, Corpus dentatum—n. Ciatriculæ, Tache embryonnaire—n. Dentatus, Corpus dentatum—n. Dentis, Dental pulp—n. Encased, Cytoblast—n. Fimbriatus, Corpus dentatum—n. Furunculi, see Furunculus—n. Germinal, see Molecule—n. Germinativus, see Molecule—n. Olivæ, Corpus dentatum—n. Ossificationis, Ossification, point of—n. Rhomboidalis, see Corpus dentatum.

NUCULA TERRESTRIS, Bunium bulbocastanum.

NUKE, Nucha.

NULE-KNEED, Entogonyancon.

NUMERICAL METHOD, see Method, numerical.

NUM'MULAR, Nummularis. Relating to money, from nummus, 'money.' An epithet applied to the sputa in phthisis, when they flatten at the bottom of the vessel, like a piece of money, and to the mode of aggregation of the red corpuscles of the blood—'nummular rolls.'

NUMMULARIA, Lysimachia nummularia.

NUMPOST, Abscess.

NUPHAR AD'VENA, Nymphæa ad'vena, Yellow Pond Lily, Spatterdock. Order, Nym-phaceæ; indigenous in Canada and the United States. The root is a popular tonic, and the fresh root bruised is applied as a cataplasm.

NUPHAR LUTEUM, Nymphæa lutea.

NUQUE, Nucha.

NURICE, Nurse.

NURSE, Sax. noþice, Nutrix, (from nourish, itself from nutrire,) Tithe'né, Trephou'sa, Lactans, Lacticans, Nut'riens, Thelas'tria, Mamma, (I.) Nutrice, (F.) Nourrice, (Sc.) Noyris, Noryes, Nurice, Norice. One who suckles her own child or another's. Also, one that has the care of a sick person, Care-taker, (F.) Garde-malade.

NURSE, DRY. One who gives every care to a child, but does not suckle it.

NURSE, MONTHLY. One who attends a woman during the month of her parturient state.

NURSE, WET, (Sc.) Milkwoman. A female, who suckles the child of another.

To 'nurse artificially,' is to bring up a child by the hand.

NÛS, Intellect.

NUSUS, Disease.

NUT, BRAZILIAN, see Pichurim beans—n. Butter, Juglans cinerea—n. Cembra, see Pinus cembra—n. Clearing, Strychnos potatorum—n. French, Juglans regia—*n. NUT TREE, MALABAR, Adhatoda.

NUT, VOMIC, see Strychnos nux vomica—n. Zirbel, see Pinus picea.

NUTA'TION, Nuta'tio, from nutare, nutatum, 'to nod.' Nodding. Also, a constant oscillation of the head, by which it moves involuntarily in one or more directions.

NUTATOR CAPITIS, Sterno-cleido-mastoides.

NUTMEG, see Myristica moschata—n. Butter, see Myristica—n. Flower, Nigella—n. Liver, Liver, nutmeg.

NUTMEGS, Testes.

NUTRICATIO, Nutrition.

NUTRICIER, Nutritious.

NUTRICIUS, Nutritious.

NUTRIENS, Aliment, Nurse.

NUTRIMEN, Aliment.

NUTRIMEN'TAL, Nutrimentalis, Aliment'al, Aliment'ary, Alimenta'lis, (F.) Alimenteux, from nutrimen, 'aliment.' Having the qualities of food or nutriment.

NUTRIMENTUM, Aliment, Pabulum.

NUTRIT'ION, Nutrit'io, Nutrica'tio, Nutri'tus, Alitu'ra, Threpsis, from nutrire, nutritum, 'to nourish.' Nutrition is that function by which the nutritive matter already elaborated by the various organic actions, loses its own nature, and assumes that of the different living tissues,—to repair their losses and maintain their strength. Sometimes the word is used in a more extended signification, to express the whole series of actions by which the two constant movements of composition and decomposition are accomplished, in organized bodies. Nutrition, then, would comprehend digestion, absorption, respiration, circulation, and assimilation; the latter being nutrition, properly so called, and being effected in the intermediate system over the whole of the body,—the cells of the tissues attracting from the blood the elements necessary for their reparation.

NUTRITION, FORCE OF, Plastic force.

NUTRIT'IOUS, Nutric'ius, Nu'tritive, Alib'ilis, Trophi'mos, Tropho'des, (F.) Nourricier, Nutricier, Alibile. Same etymon. Having the quality of nourishing: as nutritious food, nutritious lymph, &c.

NUTRITIVES or NUTRITIVE ARTERIES, (F.) Arteries nutritivæ. Arterial branches which enter the foramina nutritiva of long bones, and penetrate to the medullary membrane.

NUTRITIVE, Nutritious, (F.) Nutritif. Also, relating to nutrition: hence the 'nutritive functions,' or those that are concerned in nutrition.

NUTRITUS, Aliment, Nutrition.

NUTRIX, Mamma, Nurse.

NUTS, WATER, Nelumbium luteum.

NUX AROMATICA, see Myristica moschata—n. Avellana, Corylus avellana (nut)—n. Barbadosis, Jatropha curcas—n. Becuiba, Ibicuiba—n. Cathartica Americana, Jatropha curcas—n. Gallæ, see Quercus cerris—n. Juglans, Juglans regia—n. Medica, Coco of the Maldives—n. Metella, Strychnos nux vomica—n. Methel, Datura stramonium—n. Moschata, see Myristica moschata—n. Myristica, see Myristica moschata—n. Pistacia, see Pistacia vera—n. Unguentaria, see Myristica moschata—n. Vomica, Strychnos nux vomica.

NYCTALOPE, see Nyctalopia.

NYCTALOPEX, see Nyctalopia.

NYCTALOP'IA, from νύξ, νυκτος, 'night,' and οπτοια, 'I see?' Parop'sis Lucifuga, Nyctalop'iasis, Cæcitas diurna, Visus nocturnus, Oxyop'ia, Hemeralop'ia (moderns), Amblyop'ia meridiana, Hemeratyp'hlo'sis, Hemerotyphlo'sis, Photophob'ia, Photophobop'hthalm'ia, Dysop'ia luminis, Visus a'erior, Nyctalopy, Dayblindness, Diurnal amauro'sis, (F.) Vue nocturne, Aveuglement de Jour. The faculty of seeing during the night, with privation of the faculty during the day. It affects both eyes at once, when idiopathic. Its duration is uncertain, and treatment very obscure. It is, however, a disease of nervous irritability, and one of excitement of the visual nerve in particular. The indications of cure will consequently be—to allay direct irritation in every way; to excite counter-irritation by blisters; and to gradually accustom the eye to the impression of light.

One labouring under this affection is called a Nyctalope, Nyctalops, Nyctalo'per.

Nyctalopia has also been used for night blindness. See Hemeralopia.

NYCTALOPS, see Nyctalopia.

NYCTALOPY, Nyctalopia.

NYCTERINUS, Nocturnal.

NYCTHEMERON, see Dies.

NYCTHEMERUM, from νύξ, νυκτος, 'night,' and ημερα, 'day.' The space of 24 hours, or of a day and night. Certain complaints continue only so long.

NYCTOBADIA, Somnambulism.

NYCTOBASIS, Somnambulism.

NYCTOBATESIS, Somnambulism.

NYCTOBATIA, Somnambulism.

NYCTOTYPHLOSIS, Hemeralopia.

NYGMA, Wound, punctured.

NYGMATICUM EMPLASTRUM, Emplastrum resinæ.

NYMPHA, Clitoris.

NYMPHÆ, from νυμφη, 'a water nymph.' Alæ minores seu inter'næ minores clitor'is seu muliebres minores, Carunculæ cuticulæres, Oris tæ clitor'idis, Colliculi vaginæ, Myrtochi'la, Myrtoche'lidis, Labia minora seu inter'næ seu pudendi minora, (F.) Nymphæ, Petites lèvres. Two membranous folds, which arise from the lateral parts of the prepuce of the clitoris, and descend on the inner surface of the labia majora; terminating, by becoming gradually thinner, about the middle of the circumference of the orifice of the vagina. They are formed each of two folds of the mucous membrane of the vulva; and contain, in their substance, a thin layer of spongy erectile tissue. Their use seems to be,—not, as was once supposed, to direct the course of the urine, which notion gave rise to their name, but to favour the elongation and dilatation of the vagina in pregnancy and labour.

The word νυμφη, Nymphæ, has also been used synonymously with clitoris by Oribasius, Aëtius, &c.

NYMPHÆA ADVENA, Nuphar advena.

NYMPHÆA ALBA, Leuconymphæ'a, Nenu'phar, Microleuconymphæ'a, Casta'lia speciosa, White Water Lily, (Sc.) Cambie-leaf, (F.) Nénu'phar ou Nénufar blanc, Lis des étangs, Lune ou Volant d'Eau. Nat. Ord. Ranunculaceæ. Sex. Syst. Polyandria Monogynia. Formerly employed as a demulcent, antaphrodisiac, emollient, and slightly anodyne remedy.

NYMPHÆA INDICA, N. nelumbo—n. Major lutea, N. lutea.

NYMPHÆA LU'TEA, N. major lutea seu umbilicalis, Nuphar lu'teum, Nenu'phar lutea, Nyphozanthus vulgaris, Yellow Water Lily, (Sc.) Cambie-leaf, (F.) Nénu'phar jaune. Used for the same purposes as Nymphæ'a alba. The flowers are called in Norfolk, England, Brandy bottles.

NYMPHÆA NELUM'BO, N. Indica, Faba Ægyptiaca, Cy'anus Ægyptiacus, Pontic or Ægyptian Bean. The fruit of this is eaten raw in Egypt and some of the neighbouring countries; and is considered to be tonic and astringent.

NYMPHÆA ODORA'TA, Sweet-scented Water Lily, Sweet water or White pond or Toad Lily, Cow or Water Cabbage, (F.) Nénu'phar odorant. An indigenous plant, growing in most parts of the United States in fresh water ponds, and on the borders of streams, and having large white, beautiful, sweet-scented flowers. The root is very astringent and bitter. It is sometimes made into a poultice and used as a discutient.

NYMPHÆA UMBILICALIS, N. lutea.

NYMPHE, Clitoris.

NYMPHES, Nymphæ.

NYMPHITIS; from νυμφη, 'the clitoris,' and itis, denoting inflammation. Epiderrh'itis, Inflammatio Clitor'idis. Inflammation of the clitoris.

NYMPHOCLUIA, Nymphomania.

NYMPHOMA'NIA, from νυμφη, 'a bride,' and μανια, 'fury;' Furor uter'inus, Uteroma'nia, Lagne'sis furor femini'nus, Metroma'nia, Edæogargalus, Edæogargaris'mus, Thelygon'ia, Erotoma'nia, Edæma'nia, Aidoioma'nia, Melancho'lia uter'ina, Nymphoclui'a, Sympto'ma turpitudinis, Androma'nia, Gynæcoma'nia, Machlos'ynê, Entelipathi'a, Tenti'go vene'rea, Hysteroma'nia, Salac'itias vulvæ, Uteri prur'itus, Brachu'na, Aras'con, Aras'tum, Æstroma'nia, (F.) Nymphomanie, Fureur utérine. An irresistible and insatiable desire, in females, for the venereal act. It occurs in those particularly, who possess a nervous temperament, and vivid imagination, especially if excited by improper language, masturbation, &c. Its course, as described, is as follows. In the commencement the sufferer is a prey to perpetual contests between feelings of modesty and impetuous desires. At an after period, she abandons herself to the latter, seeking no longer to restrain them. In the last stage the obscenity is disgusting; and the mental alienation, for such it is, becomes complete. The treatment consists in the use of the same means as are required in the satyriasis of man. When the mental alienation is complete, solitude is indispensable.

NYMPHON'CUS, from νυμφη, 'the nymph,' and γκως, 'a tumour.' A morbid tumefaction of the nymphæ.

NYMPHOT'OMY, Nymphotom'ia, Nymphat'um Sec'tio, (F.) Nymphotomie, from νυμφη, and τρυφειν, 'to cut.' An operation, known and practised for a long time, which consists in the excision of the nymphæ. The operation is had recourse to, when they are attacked with scirrhus, cancer, fungus, or gangrene; or when they are so large as to interfere with walking or coition. Nymphotomy is the circumcision of the female. It is practised in some countries.

Some authors have used the term Nymphotomy for amputation of the clitoris.

NYPHOZANTHUS VULGARIS, Nymphæa lutea.

NYSTAG'MUS. A partial rotatory movement of the eyeball from side to side. Also, Coma vigil.

NYXIS, Puncture.

O.

OAK, BLACK, Quercus tinctoria—o. Common, Quercus robur—o. Jerusalem, Chenopodium botrys.

OAK LUNGS, Lichen pulmonarius.

OAK ORCHARD ACID SPRINGS. These springs—eight in number—are in Genesee county, New York, eight miles from Lockport. They are acid salines, consisting of free sulphuric acid, sulphate of protoxide of iron, and sulphates of alumina, magnesia and lime. They are powerfully astringent and tonic.

OAK, POISON, Rhus toxicodendron—o. Red, Quercus rubra montana—o. Sea, Fucus vesiculosus—o. Spanish, Quercus rubra montana—o. White, Quercus alba.

OARIOCYESIS, Pregnancy, ovarian.

OARION, Ovary.

OARION'CUS, Oariophy'ma, Ovarium tu'midum, Tumor Ovari'i, from ωαριον, (diminutive of ωον, 'an egg,') 'the ovarium,' and ογκος, 'swelling.' Ovarian tumour.

OARIOPAREC'TAMA, Oophorauw'z, from ωαριον, 'ovarium,' and παρεκτεινεν, 'to extend.' Enlargement of the ovary.

OARIORRHEX'IS, from ωαριον, 'ovarium,' and ρηξις, 'rupture.' Ruptu'ra Ovari'i. Rupture of the ovary.

OARIOT'OMY, Oariotom'ia, Ovariotom'ia, Ovariotomy, from ωαριον, 'the ovarium,' and τομη, 'incision.' The operation for removing the ovary.

OAR'ITIS, Oöphoritis, Oorit'is, Inflammatio Ovari'i, Ovari'itis, (F.) Inflammation de l'Ovaire, from ωαριον, 'the ovarium,' and itis, the termination denoting inflammation. Inflammation of the ovarium. When occurring in childhood, it is the Lochoöphoritis of some.

OARIUM, Ovary.

OARTHROC'ACÉ, formed by contraction from omo-artroceae. Said to be used by Rust to designate inflammation of the scapulo-humeral articular surfaces.—Nysten.

OATMEAL, see Avena.

OATS, Avena.

OBAUDITIO, Baryecocia.

OBAUDITUS, Baryecocia.

OBCÆCATIO, Cæcitas.

OB'DORMIT'IO, from ob, and dormio, dormitum, 'to sleep.' The state of the limbs being asleep;—Stupor artuum.

OB'DUCTIO LEGALIS, Autopsia cadaverica legalis.

OBELÆA RAPHE, Sagittal suture.

OBESITY, Polysarcia.

OBESUS, Corpulent.

OB'FUSCATIO, Amaurosis.

OBITUS, Death.

OBJECTIVE CONE. The cone of light proceeding from an object, the apex of which is on the object, and the base on the cornea.

OBJECTIVE SENSATIONS, see Sensation.

OBLINITIO, Inunction.

OBLIQUE', Obli'quus, Any thing inclined, or which deviates from the vertical line. Anatomists have given this name to certain muscles, which have an oblique direction as regards the plane that divides the body into two equal and symmetrical halves. These are:—

OBLIQUE MUSCLES OF THE ABDOMEN. They are two in number, and distinguished into: 1. Obliquus Exter'nus Abdom'inis seu descen'dens exter'nus seu descendens seu major, (F.) Ilio-pubo costo-abdom'inal, Costo-abdom'inal (Ch.), Grand oblique, Oblique externe. One of the broadest muscles of the body. It is situate at the lateral and anterior part of the abdomen; and is flat and quadrilateral. It is attached, above, to the outer surface and lower edge of the 7 or 8 last ribs: below, to the anterior third of the external lip of the crista illi: before, it terminates at the linea alba by means of a broad and strong aponeurosis, which covers the rectus, and presents towards its inferior part two very solid fibrous fasciculi, which are inserted,—the one at the symphysis, the other at the spine of the pubis,—under the name of Pillars of the Abdominal Ring. These pillars leave between them an opening, which forms the inferior orifice of the inguinal canal. The obliquus externus abdominis depresses the ribs, and carries them backwards during a strong expiration. It impresses on the chest a movement of rotation, and bends the thorax upon the pelvis, and conversely. It contracts, also, the abdominal cavity. 2. Obliquus Inter'nus Abdom'inis seu ascendens seu minor seu internus seu ascendens internus, Mus'culus accli'vis, (F.) Ilio-lombo-costo-abdom'inal, Ilio-abdom'inal (Ch.), Muscle petit oblique ou oblique interne, is broad, especially before; thin, and irregularly quadrilateral, like the preceding, beneath which it is situate. It is attached, above, to the inferior edge of the cartilages of the 5th, 4th, 3d, and 2d false ribs; below, to the anterior two-thirds of the interstice of the crista illi, to the posterior part of the crural arch, and to the pubis; behind, to the spinous processes of the last two lumbar vertebræ, and to those of the first two portions of the sacrum; before, to the linea alba. Its upper fibres run obliquely upwards and forwards; the middle are horizontal; and the lower pass obliquely downwards and forwards.

These last, in the male, are dragged down through the inguinal ring, when the testicle descends, and form the two fasciculi of the cremaster.

The obliquus internus resembles the O. externus in function.

OBLIQUE MUSCLES OF THE EYE, Amato'rii, Circumagen'tes, Rotato'res Oculi, are two in number.

They are distinguished into: 1. Obliquus Superior Oculi, Amatorius musculus, Trochlearis, Trochlearior, Obliquus major. Circumductio'nis op'ifex, Longis'simus oculi, (F.) Optico-trochlei scleroticien, Grand trochléateur (Ch.), Grand oblique de l'œil, O. supérieur de l'œil, Amoureux (Muscle), is situate at the inner and upper part of the orbit. It is small, round, fusiform, and reflected upon itself in the middle of its course. Behind, it is attached to the inside of the foramen opticum; and when it arrives opposite the internal orbital process, it becomes a small, round tendon, which slides in a cartilaginous pulley fixed to the os frontis, and is reflected, at an acute angle, to proceed downwards and outwards, and to attach itself to the outer and back part of the globe of the eye. This muscle carries the globe of the eye forwards and inwards; making it experience a movement of rotation, which directs the pupil downwards and inwards. This is conceived to be an involuntary muscle as well as the next. In sleep, according to Sir C. Bell, when the power over the straight or voluntary muscles of the organ is nearly lost, the eye is given up to the oblique muscles, which lodge the transparent cornea under the upper eyelid. At the approach of death, the same thing is observable; hence, the turning up of the eye, at such time, is not an evidence of agony or suffering, but of insensibility. 2. Obliquus Inferior seu minor oculi, (F.) Moxillo-scleroticien, Petit Trochléateur (Ch.), Petit oblique ou oblique inférieur de l'œil, is situate at the anterior and inferior part of the orbit. It is flat and attached to the inner and anterior part of the orbital surface of the superior maxillary bone, on the outside of the lachrymal gutter; from thence it passes outwards and backwards, and terminates by an aponeurosis, at the posterior and inner part of the globe of the eye. It carries the globe of the eye inwards and forwards; and directs the pupil upwards and outwards.

OBLIQUE MUSCLES OF THE HEAD. These are two in number. 1. Obliquus Superior seu minor Capitis, (F.) Trachélo-atloïdo-occipital, Atloïdo-sous-mastoidien (Ch.), Muscle oblique supérieur ou petit oblique de la tête. This muscle is situate at the sides of, and behind, the articulation of the head: it is flat and attached, on the one hand, to the top of the transverse process of the atlas; and, on the other, terminates at the occipital bone, beneath the inferior curved line, and sometimes, also, at the mastoid region of the temporal bone. It extends the head,—inclining it to one side. 2. Obliquus Inferior Capitis, Obliquus major, (F.) Spino-axoïdo-trachéli-atloïdien, Axoïdo-atloïdien (Ch.), Oblique inférieur ou grand oblique de la tête, is situate at the posterior part of the neck and head. It is round, fusiform; attached to the spinous process of the axis, and proceeds to terminate behind and below the summit of the transverse process of the atlas. It impresses, on the first vertebra and the head, a movement of rotation, which turns the face to one side.

OBLIQUE PROCESSES, see Vertebrae.

OBLITERATED, Obliteratus; from obliterare, (ob, and litera), 'to efface.' A vessel or duct is said to be obliterated, when its parietes have approximated and contracted such an adhesion to each other that the cavity has completely disappeared.

OBLITERATIO COMPLETA, Ilapantismus.

OBLIVIO, Amnesia—o. Iners, Lethargy.

OBOBIUM, Antilobium.

OB'OLUS, Onolosat. A weight of 9 or 10 grains.

OBSCÈNE PARTES, Genital organs.

OBSOURCISSEMENT DE LA VUE, Caligo.

OBSERVATION, Observatio, (from ob, and servare, servatum, 'to keep,' e.g. in sight.) Tere'sis, Symparateres'is. Act of examining a thing by means of the external senses. This word is employed in several acceptations. It expresses—1. The action of observing—2. The aggregate of knowledge, afforded by observation. In French—but not in English—it means the case or history of the phenomena presented by a patient in the course of a disease.

OBSERVATION, Case—o. Method of, Numerical method.

OBSTET'RIC, Obstet'ricus, Obstet'rical; same etymon as obstetrics. Relating or appertaining to obstetrics,—as 'obstetric auscultation,' 'obstetric exploration,' &c.

OBSTETRIC CHAIR, Labour-chair.

OBSTETRICIANS, Accoucheur.

OBSTET'RICS, from Obstet'ric, 'a midwife,' (obstare, ob, and stare, 'to stand before.') Tokol'ogy, Tocol'ogy, Maiei'a, Maei'a, Moei'a, Maeen'ticu ars, Ars obstetric'ia, Obstet'ricy, (F.) Obstétrique. The art of midwifery. Midwifery in general.

OBSTETRICY, Obstetrics.

OBSTÉTRIQUE, Obstetrics.

OBSTETRIX, Midwife.

OBSTIPATIO, Constipation—o. Tenesmus, Tenesmus.

OBSTIPATIO, see Hump.

OBSTIPITAS, Torticollis—o. Capitis seu Colli, Torticollis.

OBSTRUCTION, Emphraxis, Stegnosis—o. Alvi, Constipation—o. Ductûs Alimentarii, Constipation—o. Ductûs Stenoniani, Stenostenosis—o. Intestinalis, Constipation—o. Recti Spastica, Stricture of the Rectum, spasmodic—o. Pulmonum pituitosa fibrilis, Peripneumonia notha.

OBSTRUCTION OF THE INTESTINES, Enteremphraxis.

OB'STRUENS, from obstruo, (ob, and struere, 'to build,' 'I stop up by building against.' Oppilativus). A medicine which closes the orifices of ducts or vessels.

OBSTUPEFACIENTIA, Narcotics.

OBTONDANT, Obtundens.

OBTRUNCATIO, Decollation.

OBTUMESCENCIA, Mutitas.

OBTUN'DENS, (F.) Obtundant, from obtundere, (ob and tundere, 'to beat,') 'to beat against,' and therefore to blunt the edge. An epithet applied to remedies that were supposed, according to an erroneous theory, to be possessed of the power of blunting the acrimony of the humours. A demulcent is one of these.

OBTURAMENTUM, Emphragma.

OBTURATEUR, Obturator.

OBTURATEUR DU PALAIS, Palate, artificial.

OBTURATIO, Emphraxis.

OBTURATOR, Obturatorius, (F.) Obturator, from obturare, (akin to Supa, 'a door,'[?]) 'to close,' 'stop up the entrance.' A name given in anatomy, to several parts.

OBTURATOR ARTERY, Arteria obturatoria seu obturatoria, (F.) Sous-pubio-fémorale (Ch.), Artère obturatrice, arises, most commonly, from the hypogastric. It is, however, frequently given off from the epigastric; a matter of importance to be determined in cases of femoral hernia. Of 500 obturator arteries examined by M. J. Cloquet, 340 were furnished by the hypogastric, and 152 by the epigastric or crural. When it arises from the hypogastric, it passes forwards and outwards, and then turns horizontally into the cavity of the pelvis, to issue from this cavity by the opening left at the upper part of the obturator membrane. When, on the contrary, the obturator artery arises from the epigastric or the crural, it descends obliquely inwards, behind the os pubis, to the obturator foramen. At its exit from the pelvis, the artery divides into two branches, a posterior and an anterior, which are distributed to the muscles of the anterior and superior part of the thigh.

OBTURATOR FORAMEN, Foramen Obturatorium seu obturatum seu infra-pubianum seu ovoides seu thyroïdeum seu Thyroïdes seu Ampulum Pelvis, (F.) Trou sous-pubien. A large opening, of an oval or triangular form, in the anterior part of the os innominatum, on the outside of the symphysis pubis and beneath the horizontal ramus of the os pubis. This foramen is closed by a membranous ligament.

OBTURATOR LIGAMENT OR MEMBRANE, Subpubic membrane, is a fibrous membrane, fixed to the whole circumference of the obturator foramen, except above, where an opening remains for the passage of the vessels and nerves of the same name.

OBTURATOR MUSCLES, Obturatores, Rotatores femoris. These are two in number. They are divided into a. Obturator Externus, Extra-pelvio-pubi-trochantérien, Sous-pubio-trochantérien externe (Ch.) A muscle, situate at the anterior and inner part of the thigh. It is broad, flat, and triangular; and is attached, on the one hand, to the anterior surface of the os pubis, to that of the ischium, and to the anterior surface of the obturator ligament. Its fleshy fibres converge to the tendon, which proceeds to be inserted at the inferior part of the cavity of the great trochanter. This muscle rotates the thigh outwards.

b. Obturator Internus, Marsupialis, Bursa'lis, Intra-pelvio-trochantérien, Sous-pubio-trochantérien interne (Ch.) is seated, almost entirely, in the pelvis. It arises from the inner surface of the obturator ligament, and from the posterior part of the circumference of the obturator foramen, and is inserted, by means of a strong tendon, running between the two portions of the gemini, into the cavity at the root of the great trochanter; after having turned upon the ischium, which forms for it a kind of pulley. This muscle also rotates the thigh outwards.

OBTURATOR NERVE, Sous-pubio-fémoral, (Ch.), proceeds principally from the 2d and 3d lumbar nerves. It descends into the pelvis; gains the obturator foramen; gives branches to the obturator muscles, and divides, behind the abductor primus and pectinalis, into two branches; one anterior, whose branches are distributed to the first two adductors, gracilis, and integuments; the other, posterior, distributing its ramifications to the obturator externus and third adductor.

OBTURATOR VEIN has, ordinarily, the same arrangement as the artery. It is common, however, to find it arising from the epigastric; whilst the corresponding artery proceeds from the hypogastric, and conversely.

The term obturator, (F.) Obturateur, is, also, applied to an instrument, adapted for closing an opening caused by a wound or disease.

OBTURATOIRES, Obturator muscles.

OBVOLVENTIA, Demulcents.

OCA, Oxalis tuberosa.

OCCÆCATIO, Cæcitas.

OCCIP'ITAL, Occipitalis. That which belongs to the occiput.

OCCIPITAL ARTERY. This arises from the posterior part of the external carotid, beneath the parotid. It proceeds backwards, passes between the mastoid process and the transverse process of the atlas; reaches the occipital bone and divides into two branches, which may be called ascending posterior and anterior, and are distributed to the neighbouring muscles and ligaments.

OCCIP'ITAL BONE, Os occip'itis seu occip'iti seu occipital'is seu sphenobasil'rè seu memoriæ seu nero'sum seu basila'rè seu proræ seu pyx'idis seu sextum cranii seu lambda'des seu lambdae seu laudæ seu puppis seu nero'sum seu fibro'sum seu pelvicephal'icum, (F.) Os occipital, is situate at the posterior and inferior part of the cranium, which it assists in forming. It is flat, symmetrical, and curved upon itself. It presents, 1. An occipital or posterior surface, which is convex, and has, upon the median line, the basilary surface, the foramen magnum, through which passes the spinal marrow with its membranes and vessels,—the external occipital crest, the external occipital protuberance; and, at the sides, the upper curved line, large rough arched ridge or transverse arch or linea semicircularis, the lower curved line, the posterior condyloid fossæ, the condyles for the articulation of this bone with the atlas; and the anterior condyloid fossæ, pierced by a foramen for the passage of the ninth pair of nerves. 2. A cerebral or anterior surface. On the median line are: the basilary fossæ, the inner orifice of the foramen magnum, the internal occipital crest, the internal occipital protuberance, the cruciform spine; a channel, which lodges the termination of the straight sinus, and on each side, the occipital fossæ, distinguished into superior or cerebral, and inferior or cerebellous, and separated by a groove which lodges the lateral sinus. 3. The surfaces of the occipital bone are separated by four ridges and four angles. The two superior edges are articulated with the parietal bones; the two lower join the temporal; and the anterior angle, under the name basilary process, is united to the sphenoid.

The occipital bone is developed from four points of ossification; and sometimes from a greater number.

OCCIPITAL MUSCLE, Occipitalis. Many anatomists have given this name to the posterior fasciculus of the occipito-frontalis.

OCCIPITAL NERVE, Sub-occipital nerve, (F.) Première paire trachélienne (Ch.), Nerf occipital ou sous occipital. It arises from the upper part of the spinal marrow by eight or ten filaments, united in two fasciculi. Thus formed, it passes between the foramen magnum and the posterior arch of the atlas; and, at this place, forms a long ganglion, afterwards dividing into two branches. Of these, the anterior, which is long and small, makes a turn above the transverse process of the atlas and forms an anastomotic noose with a branch of the second cervical nerve. The posterior branch, larger and shorter, divides into seven or eight branches, which are distributed to the muscles of the upper and back part of the neck.

OCCIPITAL REGION, Occiput.

OCCIPITAL VEIN. Its roots follow exactly the course of the branches of the artery, and unite into a single trunk, which opens into the internal jugular vein, and sometimes into the external.

OCCIPITIUM, Occiput.

OCCIPITO-AT'LOID, Occipito-atloïdeus, (F.) Occipito-atloïdien. That which has reference to the occiput and atlas.

OCCIPITO-ATLOID ARTICULATION is the articulation of the condyles of the occipital bone with the superior articular cavities of the atlas. It is strengthened by two ligaments; the one anterior, the other posterior, called occipito-atloid ligaments: the one extends from the anterior, the other from the posterior, arch of the atlas, to the corresponding portion of the circumference of the foramen magnum.

OCCIPITO-AX'OID, Occipito-axoïdeus, (F.) Occipito-axoïdien. That which relates to the occipital bone and the axis or second vertebra.

OCCIPITO-AXOID ARTICULATION is the connexion of the occipital bone with the axis or second vertebra, although these bones are not really articulated, but are merely retained in apposition by three strong ligaments, the posterior of which is called the occipito-axoid, and the two others odontoid.

OCCIPITO-FRONTA'LIS, Digastricus cranii, Epicranius, Frontalis et occipitalis. The majority of anatomists call by this name the whole of the fleshy plane, with the epicranial or coronal aponeurosis, (see Calotte,) which covers the head from the occiput to the forehead. It is attached, by its posterior fasciculus, to the two outer thirds of the upper curved line of the occipital bone, and to the outer surface of the mastoid portion of the temporal; and, by its anterior fasciculus, it terminates at the eyebrow, where it becomes confounded with the superciliaris, pyramidalis nasi, and orbicularis palpebrarum.

The occipito-frontalis, by the contraction of its anterior fasciculus, draws forward a part of the integuments of the cranium. It wrinkles the skin of the forehead transversely, and may, also contribute to open the eye by its decussation with the orbicularis palpebrarum. The posterior fasciculus of the muscle draws backwards a part of the skin of the cranium, and assists in stretching the common aponeurosis.

OCCIPITO-MENINGE'AL. That which belongs to the occipital bone, and to the meninge or dura mater.

OCCIPITO-MENINGEAL ARTERY, in Chaussier's nomenclature, is a branch of the vertebral, given off to the dura mater at its entrance into the cranium.

OCCIPUT, Occipitium (ob, and caput), Regio occipitalis, Inion, Opisthocranium, Opisthocephalon, Hysteroocranium, Prora, Occipitium. The back part of the head, formed by the occipital bone.

OCCIPUT, SOFT, Craniotabes.

OCCLU'SION, Occlusio, Mycē, from occludere, occlusum, 'to shut up.' Sometimes this word signifies, simply, the transient approximation of the edges of a natural opening—the occlusion of the eyelids, for example; at others it is synonymous with imperforation, as occlusion of the pupil, vagina, &c.

OCCULT DISEASES, see Latent.

OCEAN SPRINGS, see Mississippi, Mineral waters of.

OHEMA, Vehicle.

OCHETEUMATA, Nares.

OCHELOS, Canal.

OCHIEUS, Scrotum.

OCHLE'SIS, from οχλος, 'a crowd.' A term, applied by Dr. George Gregory to a morbid condition induced by the crowding together of sick persons under one roof.

OCHREA RUBRA, Hæmatites.

OCHRIASIS, Paleness.

OCHROMA, Paleness.

OCHROPYRA, Fever, yellow.

OCHROTES, Paleness.

OCHROTYPHIUS, Fever, yellow.

OCHTHIASIS, Molluscum.

OCHTHODES, Callous.

OCIMUM ADSCENDENS, O. Basilicum.

OCIMUM BASIL'ICUM, O. adscendens seu pilosum seu racemosum seu citra'tum, Beren'daros, Basil'icum, B. majus seu citra'tum, Common or Citron basil, (F.) Basilic commun; Ωκίρον, from ωκς, 'swift,' owing to its swift growth. Nat. Ord. Labiatae. Sex. Syst. Didynamia Gymnospermia. This herb has a fragrant odour and aromatic taste. It is used as a condiment, and has been supposed to possess nerve properties.

OCIMUM CARYOPHYLLA'TUM, O. minutum, Small or Bush basil. Possesses properties similar to the former. It is sometimes used as snuff.

OCIMUM CITRATUM, O. Basilicum—o. Pilosum, O. Basilicum—o. Racemosum, O. Basilicum.

OCOTEA AMARA, Nectandra cymbarum—o. Cymbarum, Nectandra cymbarum—o. Pichurim, see Pichurim beans—o. Puchury, see Pichurim beans.

OCREA, Hippocampus minor, Shin.

OCTA'NA, Hebdomada'ria, Febris hebdomada'ria, from octo, 'eight.' A fever whose paroxysms recur every week;—a supposititious case.

OCTA'RIOUS. A pint. The eighth part of a wine-gallon. Same etymon. It contains sixteen fluidounces (Ph. U. S.),—20 fluidounces imperial measure.

OCTOPUS, Synapheocephalus, Hemipages.

OCTUNX, from octo, 'eight,' and uncia, 'an ounce.' A weight of eight ounces.

OC'ULAR, Ocularis, (F.) Oculaire, from oculus, 'an eye.' Of or belonging to the eye.

OCULAR CONE. The cone formed within the eye by a pencil of rays proceeding from an object; the base of the cone being on the cornea,—the apex on the retina.

OCULARES COMMUNES, Motors oculorum—o. Dentes. Canine teeth.

OCULARIA, Euphrasia officinalis.

OCULI MARMARYGODES, Metamorphopsia—o. Palpebrarum scabies pruriginosa, Ophthalmia tarsi.

OC'ULIST, Oculis'ta, Ophthalmia'ter, Med'icus ocula'rius seu ophthal'micus, from oculus, 'an eye.' One who occupies himself, chiefly, with the management of diseases of the eye.

OCULISTIQUE, Ophthalmology.

OCULO-MUSCULAR NERVES, COMMON, Motors oculorum.

OCULUM MOVENS PRIMUS, Rectus internus oculi—o. Movens quartus, Rectus inferior oculi—o. Movens secundus, Rectus externus oculi—o. Movens tertius, Rectus superior oculi.

OCYMIUM, see Ocimum—o. Sylvestre, Clinopodium vulgare.

OCYODYNIC, Ocytotic.

OCYPH'ONUS, from ωκς, 'quick,' and φονος, 'murder.' An agent that kills speedily.

OCYTOCEUS, Ocytotic.

OCYTOC'IC, Oxytotic, Ocytoc'eus, Ocytoc'i'us, Ocy'toc'us, Ocyody'nic, Odinago'gus, from αξς, 'quick,' and τοκος, 'labour.' Any thing that expedites parturition.

OCYTOCIUS, Ocytotic.

OCYTOCUS, Ocytotic.

OD. A term, employed by Reichenbach to designate an "effective force," which, according to him, not only manifests itself in contact with man, as in the case of magnets, crystals, the hands, &c., but, also, at distances, as from the sun, moon, and stars—indeed from all matter. Such a force is termed by him odie.

ODAXIS'MUS, Odaxes'mus, Odontocne'sis, Odontocenes'mus, οδάζημος; a sensation of biting or pricking, as that in the gums which precedes the appearance of the teeth.

ODES. A suffix, see Eidos.

ODEUR, Odour.

ODIC, see Od.

ODIN, Pains, (labour.)

ODINAGOGUS, Ocyctic.

ODINOLYSIS, from οδιν, 'labour pains,' and λυσις, 'solution.' Mitigation of labour pains.

ODINOPŒA, from οδιν, 'labour pains,' and ποιεω, 'I make.' Agents that encourage labour pains.

ODIS, Pains, labour.

ODME, Odour.

ODONTAGOGON, Dentagra.

ODONTAGRA, from οδους, οδοντος, 'a tooth,' and αγρα, 'a seizure.' A rheumatic or gouty pain in the teeth. Dentagra.

ODONTAL'GIA, from οδους, οδοντος, 'a tooth,' and αλγος, 'pain.' Dentitium dolor, Toothach, Odontia, O. dolorosa, Gomphi'asis, Gomphias'mus, Odontodyn'ia, (F.) Douleur des dents, Fluxion sur les dents, Mal de dent ou d'amour. A disease dependent upon a variety of causes affecting the cavity of the tooth; but generally owing to caries, which exposes the cavity to the action of the air, and to extraneous matters in general. Hence, the treatment consists in plugging the tooth, or destroying the sensibility of the nerve by powerful stimulants; and, if these means fail, in extracting the tooth.

ODONTALGIA CARIOSA, Dental gangrene—o. Dentitionis, Dentition—o. Hæmodia, Hæmodia.

ODONTALGIA NERVO'SA, Neuralgia Dentalis. Neuralgia of the teeth. Characterized by periodical pain, shooting with the utmost violence along the branches of the fifth pair distributed to the affected jaw.

ODONTALGIA REMITTENS ET INTERMITTENS, Neuralgia infra-orbitaria.

ODONTALGIC, Anti-odontalgic.

ODONTAMBLYGOMUS, Hæmodia.

ODONTHEMODIA, Hæmodia.

ODONTHARPAGA, Dentagra.

ODONTYPERÆSTHESIS, Hæmodia.

ODONTIA, Odontalgia.

ODON'TIA DEFOR'MIS. Deformity of the teeth from error of shape, position, or number.—Good.

ODONTIA DENTITIONIS LACTANTIUM, see Dentition (first)—o. Dentitionis puerilis, see Dentition (second)—o. Edentula, see Nefrendes—o. Excrecens, Epulis—o. Incrustans, Odontolithos—o. Stuporis, Hæmodia.

ODONTIASIS, Dentition.

ODONTIATER, Dentist.

ODONTIATRIA, Dentistry.

ODONTIC, Anti-odontalgic.

ODONTITIS, Odontophlegmonē, from οδους, οδοντος, 'a tooth,' and itis, denoting inflammation. Inflammation of the teeth.

ODONTOBOTHRI'TIS, Odontophatni'tis, Inflammatio alveolarum, from odontobothrium, (οδους, οδοντος, 'a tooth,' and βοθριον, 'alveolus,') and itis, denoting inflammation. Inflammation of the alveoli.

ODONTOBOTHRIUM, Alveolus.

ODONTOCLA'SIS, from οδους, οδοντος, 'a tooth,' and κλασις, 'fracture; Fractura dentis. Fracture of a tooth.

ODONTOCNESIS, Odaxismus.

ODONTOCNESMUS, Odaxismus.

ODONTODES, Odontoid.

ODONTODYNIA, Odontalgia.

ODONTOG'ENY, Odontogen'ia, from οδους, οδοντος, 'a tooth,' and γενεσις, 'generation.' Generation or mode of development of the teeth.

ODONTOGLYPHON, Dentiscalpium, Gum lancet.

ODONTOGLYPHUM, Dentiscalpium, Gum lancet.

ODONTOG'RAPHY, Odontograph'ia, from οδους, οδοντος, 'a tooth,' and γραφη, 'a description.' A description of the teeth.

ODON'TOID, Odontoi'des, Odonto'des, Dentiform'is, Denta'lis, Dentoides, Pyrenoï'des, from οδους, οδοντος, 'a tooth,' and ειδος, 'shape,' 'resemblance.' An epithet given to the Processus dentatus of the second vertebra or axis.

ODONTOID LIG'AMENTS, Ligamenta alar'ia seu Mauchar'ti, (F.) Ligaments odontoidiens, are two strong and short conical fasciuli, whose truncated summits embrace the sides of the odontoid process, and whose bases are fixed in the fossæ at the inner side of the condyles of the occipital bone. Their direction is obliquely outwards and slightly upwards. They enter into the composition of the occipito-axis articulation, strengthen the junction of the head with the vertebral column, and limit the movement of rotation of the atlas on the axis.

Other ligamentous fibres pass from the highest portion of the processus dentatus to the anterior margin of the foramen magnum of the occipital bone—constituting the Ligamentum suspensorium dentis.

ODONTOL'ITHOS, (F.) Odontolithe, from οδους, οδοντος, 'a tooth,' and λιθος, 'a stone.' A sort of incrustation, of a yellowish colour, which forms at the coronæ of the teeth, and is called Tartar, Tartarus Dentium, Odontia incrustans, Calculus dentalis, (F.) Tartre des dents, T. dentaire. It consists of seventy-nine parts of phosphate of lime; twelve and a half of mucus; one of a particular salivary matter, and seven and a half of animal substance, soluble in chlorohydric acid. A species of infusoria, Denticola hominis, has been found in it.

ODONTOL'OGY, Odontolog'ia, from οδους, οδοντος, 'a tooth,' and λογος, 'a discourse.' An anatomical treatise of the teeth.

ODONTONECROSIS, Dental gangrene.

ODONTOPARALLAX'IS, from οδους, οδοντος, 'a tooth,' and παρλλαξις, 'deviation.' Irregularity and obliquity of the teeth; (Prov.) Snaggle teeth.

ODONTOPIHATNE, Alveolus.

ODONTOPIHATNITIS, Odontobothritis.

ODONTOPLEROSIS, see Filling.

ODONTOPHYIA, Dentition.

ODONTOPRISIS, Brygmus, Stridor dentium.

ODONTOSEY'SIS, Odontoseis'mus, Dentium vacillan'tia, from οδους, οδοντος, 'a tooth,' and σεισις, 'shaking.' Looseness of the teeth.

ODONTOSEISMUS, Odontoseisis.

ODONTOSMEGMA, Dentifrice.

ODONTOSPHACELISIS, Dental gangrene.

ODONTOSPHACELISMUS, Dental gangrene.

ODONTOSTERE'SIS, from οδους, οδοντος, 'a tooth,' and στερησις, 'privation.' Loss of the teeth.

ODONTOSYNERISM'US, from οδους, οδοντος, 'a tooth,' and συνερισεν, 'to strike together;' (F.) Claquement. Chattering of the teeth.

ODONTOTECHNY, Dentistry.

ODONTOTHERAPIA, Dentistry.

ODONTOTRIMMA, Dentifrice.

ODONTOTRYPY, Odonttrypy.

ODON'TRYPY, Odontotrypy, Odontotryp'ia, from οδους, οδοντος, 'a tooth,' and τρυπω, 'I perforate.' The operation of perforating a tooth to evacuate purulent matter confined in the cavity of the pulp.

ODORAMENTUM, Odoriferum.

ODORANT, see Odour.

ODORAT, Olfaction.

ODORATIO, Olfaction.

ODORATUS, Olfaction—o. Deperditus, Anosmia.

ODORIFERUM, from odor, odoris, 'odour,' and fero, 'I carry;' Odoramentum. A medicine that gives odour or flavour. A scent. A perfume.

ODOROUS, see Odour.

ODOS, Way.

O'DOOR, Odor, Odmē, Osmē, (F.) Odeur. A smell. Odours are subtle particles, constantly escaping from the surface of certain bodies hence called o'dorous, (F.) Odorant. They act, in some manner, by actual contact with the nerves of the Schneiderian membrane, and give occasion to the sense of smell or olfaction.

ODOUS, see Teeth.

OD'YNĒ, odynē, 'pain,' Dolor, Odyne'ma. A very common suffix to words; as in Pleurodyne.

ODYNEMA, Odyne.

OCIOMA'NIA, Oikeioma'nia, from οικετος, 'belonging to a household or family,' and mania. A form of moral insanity, characterized by domestic perversity.

ŒCONOMIA, Economy—œ. Animalis, Physiology.

ŒDALICUS, Œdematous.

ŒDALIUS, Œdematous.

ŒDE'MA, from œdēō, 'I am swollen.' Hydron'eus, Œlema'tia, Hyderon'eus, Hydron'eus, Hydrocœ'dema, Hydred'e'na, Hydrops cellula'ris ar'tium, Phlegma'tia, Leucophlegma'tia, Ephy'ma œdemat'icum, (F.) Œdème, Œlématie, Enflure. Swelling produced by the accumulation of a serous fluid in the interstices of the areolar texture. This swelling is soft; yields under the finger; preserves the impression for some time, and is pale and without pain. It presents the same characters as anasarca, which is general œdema. Its etiology and treatment are also the same. See Anasarca.

ŒDEMA ACUTUM, see Anasarca.

ŒDEMA ARSENICA'LIS. The swelling of the eyelids and face, induced by continued use of the preparations of arsenic.

ŒDEMA CALIDUM, see Anasarca—œ. Capitis, Hydrocephalus externus.

ŒDE'MA CER'E'BRI, (F.) Œdème du cerveau. Œdema of the brain. A condition of the cerebral pulp, in which there is an infiltration of serous fluid into it, so that it appears more moist or watery than common; and, when sliced or pressed, small drops of water are seen to ooze out.

ŒDEMA COMPACT, Induration of the cellular tissue—œ. Cruentum, Suggillation—œ. Febrile, see Anasarca—œ. Fugax, Anathymiasis—œ. Hystericum, Anathymiasis.

ŒDEMA OF THE GLOTTIS, Œ. glott'idis, Œdem'atous Laryngi'tis or angina, Laryngi'tis submuc'o'sa seu œdemat'o'sa seu sero-purulen'ta, Hydrops glot'tid'is, Ang'na aquo'sa seu laryng'e'a œdemat'o'sa, Submu'cus Laryngi'tis, (F.) Laryngite œdémateuse, L. œdémateuse et séro-purulente ou sus-glotte-tique ou sous-muqueuse, Angine laryngée œdémateuse, Œdème de la glotte. A disease consisting of serous or sero-purulent infiltration into the submucous tissue of the glottis. The symptoms resemble those of croup; but the disease attacks the adult rather than the child. The age is, indeed, a principal means of diagnosis between the two affections.

The disease is almost always fatal. The treatment has to vary according to the accompanying general symptoms.

ŒDEMA LACTEUM, Phlegmatia dolens.

ŒDEMA OF THE LUNGS, Œ. pulmo'num, Pneumoch'ysis, Pneumonocœ'dema, Hydrops seu anasar'ca Pulmo'num, Hydropneumo'nia, (F.) Œdème du poulmon. Laënnec has so called the infiltration of serum into the tissue of the lung, carried to such an extent as to diminish its permeability to air. It is not an uncommon sequela of pneumonia, and the major exanthemata. The respiration is laborious; the respiratory murmur scarcely perceptible, although the thorax is largely expanded, and there is a slight râle crépissant, particularly at the base and inferior part of the lung. The sound on percussion is clear, and on both sides equally so. The cough is attended with aqueous expectoration. In some cases the respiration becomes purrile in a small portion of the summit of the lung.

ŒDEMA NŒONATORUM, Induration of the cellular tissue—œ. Palpebrarum, Hydroblepharon—œ. Puerperarum, Phlegmatia dolens—œ. Pulmonum, Œdema of the lungs—œ. Pulmonum chronicum, Hydropneumonia—œ. Scroti aquosum, Oschydrocœ'dema—œ. Scroti cruentum, Oschæmatœ'dema—œ. Scroti purulentum, Oscheopyœ'dema—œ. Scroti urinosum, Urocele—œ. Spasticum, Anathymiasis—œ. Uvule, Staphylœ'dema.

ŒDEMATIA, Œdema.

ŒDÉMATIE, Œdema.

ŒDEMATOSARCA, Œdemosarca.

ŒDEMATOSCHEOCE'LE, Œdemoscheocœ'le, Oscheocœ'le œdemat'ica. Oscheocœcle with œdema of the serotum.

ŒDEMATOUS, Œdemat'o'sus, Œdemat'icus, Œdemat'o'ses, Œdal'ius, Œdal'icus, Edem'atous, (F.) Œdémateux. Affected with œdema, (F.) Œlématie, of the nature of œdema.

ŒDÉME, Œdema—œ. du Cerveau, Œdema cerebri—œ. Dououreux des femmes en couche, Phlegmatia dolens—œ. des Nouvelles accouchées, Phlegmatia dolens—œ. actif des Nouvelles accouchées, Phlegmatia dolens—œ. de la Glotte, Œdema of the glottis—œ. de la Glotte, Angina œdematosa—œ. du Tissu cellulaire des nouveaunés, Induration of the cellular tissue.

ŒDEMOSAR'CA, Œdematosar'ca. A species of tumour mentioned by M. A. Severinus, which holds a middle place between œdema and sarcoma.

ŒDEMOSCHEOCELE, Œdematoscheocœle.

ŒIL, Eye—œ. de Bœuf, Anthemis tinctoria—œ. Double, Binoculus—œ. de Lièvre, Lagophthalmus—œ. Simple, see Monoculus.

ŒILLET GIROFLÉE, Dianthus caryophyllus.

ŒILLIÈRE, Scaphium oculare.

ŒNAN'THĒ, Œ. croc'ata seu chærophylli foli'is, Hemlock dropwort, Hemlock water-dropwort. Nat. Ord. Umbelliferae. Ser. Syst. Pentandria Digynia, from oinos, 'wine,' and ανθος, 'a flower,' its flowers smelling like the vine. A violent poison of the acro-narcotic class. Its juice has been recommended in certain cutaneous diseases: but it is scarcely ever used. It is employed in fomentations.

ŒNANTHE AQUATICA, Phellandrium aquaticum—œ. Phellandrium, Phellandrium aquaticum—œ. Striata rigida, Seseli tortuosum.

ŒNELË'ON, from oinos, 'wine,' and ελαιον, 'oil.' A mixture of oil and wine.—Galen. Also, rectified spirit or alcohol.

ŒNOG'ALA, oinog'ala, from oinos, 'wine,' and γαλα, 'milk,'—'a mixture of wine and milk.' According to some, wine as warm as new milk.

ŒNOG'ARON, Garum vino mistum. Wine mixed with garum.—Aëtius.

ŒNOLATURE, see Vinum.

ŒNOLÉ, see Vinum.

ŒNOLOTIF (F.). A name given by M

Béral to a medicine intended for external use, whose excipient is wine.

ENOIDES, Vinous.

ENOMANIA, Enomonia, from oinos, 'wine,' and mania. Delirium tremens. Properly, wine-mania. An insatiable desire for intoxicating liquors.

ENOMEL, Enomeli, from oinos, 'wine,' and meli, 'honey.' Mel vino'sum, Mulsum Vino'sum. Honey wine. Wine mead. See Hydromel.

ENOPHLYGIA, Temulentia.

ENOPHLYXIS, Temulentia.

ENOS, Wine.

ENOSTAGMA, Spiritus vini rectificatus.

ENOTHERA BIENNIS, Æ. Mollis'sima seu murica'ta seu gaurō'des, On'agra, Evening Primrose, Tree Primrose, Primrose tree, Cure-all, Scabish. An indigenous plant, common on the borders of fields, and in natural hedges. Ord. Onagraceæ. Sec. Syst. Octandria Monogynia. Its properties are mucilaginous and slightly acrid. A decoction has been used in cases of infantile and other eruptions.

ENOTHERA GAURIDES, O. biennis — Æ. Muricata. O. biennis.

ESOPHAGE'AL, Esophagæ'us, (F.) Esophagiæ'n. Same etymon as oesophagus. Relating or belonging to the oesophagus.

ESOPHAGEAL AP'ERTURE OF THE DI'APHRAGM, Fora'men œsophagæ'um, (F.) Ouverture œsophagi'enne du diaphragme. An opening in the diaphragm for the passage of the oesophagus.

ESOPHAGEAL AP'ERTURE OF THE STOMACH. A name given to the superior or cardiac orifice of the stomach, to distinguish it from the inferior or pyloric. See Cardia.

ESOPHAGEAL MUSCLE, Esophagæ'us. Some anatomists have given this name to the transverse muscular fibres which surround the oesophagus at its upper extremity.

ESOPHAGEAL TUBE, see Tube, œsophageal.

ESOPHAGEURYS'MA, Esoph'agus succenturiat'us, from oesophagos, 'the oesophagus,' and σπασμα, 'dilatation.' Dilatation of the oesophagus.

ESOPHAGIALGIA, Esophagismus.

ESOPHAGIARCTIA, Dysphagia constricta.

ESOPHAGIEN, (muscle), Constrictor œsophagi.

ESOPHAGIS'MUS, Esophagis'mum. A name given by Vogel to spasm of the oesophagus, Dysphagia Spasmod'ica seu Spas'tica seu Nervo'sa, Strictu'ra œsoph'agi spasmod'ica, Esophagial'gia, Esophagospas'mus, Tenes'mus Gulæ, (F.) Ténésme de l'œsophage. By some used synonymously with oesophagitis, dysphagia, and contraction of the oesophagus.

ESOPHAGITIS, Angi'na seu Cyan'chê œsophagæ'a, Dysph'agia inflammato'ria, Inflammat'io œsoph'agi seu Gulæ, (F.) Angine œsophagi'enne. Inflammation of the oesophagus.

ESOPHAGODYN'IA, from oesophagos, 'the oesophagus,' and ὀδυνή, 'pain.' Pain in the oesophagus.

ESOPHAGOPATHI'A, Morbus Esoph'agi, from oesophagos, 'the oesophagus,' and πάθος, 'disease.' A morbid condition of the oesophagus.

ESOPHAGOPLE'GIA, Dysph'agia paralyt'ica, Læmoparaly'sis, from oesophagos, 'the oesophagus,' and πληγή, 'a stroke.' Paralysis of the oesophagus.

ESOPHAGORRHAG'IA, from oesophagos, 'the oesophagus,' and ραγή, 'a rupture.' Hemorrhage from the oesophagus.

ESOPHAGORRHE'A, from oesophagos, 'the oesophagus,' and ρῶα, 'I flow.' Discharge of blood or mucus from the oesophagus.

ESOPHAGOSPAS'MUS, from oesophagos, 'the oesophagus,' and σπασμος, 'spasm.' Spasm of the oesophagus.

ESOPHAGOT'OMY, Esophagotom'ia, from oesophagos, 'the oesophagus,' and τεμνεν, 'to cut.' An incision made into the oesophagus for the purpose of extracting foreign bodies from it.

ESOPH'AGUS, from οἶα, 'future' οἶα, 'I carry,' and φαγῶ, 'I eat'; Gula, Fist'ula cibi'alis, Fist'ula seu Infundib'ulum Ventric'uli, Via stom'achi et ventris, Gluttus. The Gullet, (Prov.) Wizen. A musculo-membranous canal, cylindrical, and depressed from before to behind, which extends from the inferior extremity of the pharynx to the upper orifice of the stomach. At its origin, it is situate in the median line; but beneath the larynx, it deviates to the left, and in the chest experiences different reflections. In its cervical portion, it corresponds, behind, with the spine; before, with the larynx and trachea; and, at the sides, it is close to the primitive carotids, internal jugular veins, par vagum, recurrent nerves, &c. In its inferior or thoracic portion, the oesophagus is entirely contained in the posterior mediastinum; and enters the abdomen through the oesophageal aperture, Fora'men œsophagæ'um, of the diaphragm. The oesophagus is composed of a very strong muscular layer, sometimes called Tunica vagin'alis gulæ; formed, itself, of two sets of fibres, the external being general longitudinal, the internal transverse or annular. 2. Of a mucous membrane which is soft, fine, thin, and white, especially at its lower part. It is continuous, above, with the mucous membrane of the pharynx. The mucous follicles, found beneath it, are not numerous, and have been called Esophageal glands. The arteries of the oesophagus proceed, in the neck, from the thyroid; in the chest, from the bronchial arteries and directly from the aorta;—in the abdomen, from the inferior phrenic, and coronaria ventriculi. Its veins empty themselves into the inferior thyroid, the vena cava superior, the internal mammary, azygos, bronchial, phrenic, and coronaria ventriculi. Its lymphatics pass into the ganglia surrounding it. Its nerves are afforded by the pharyngeal and pulmonary plexuses; by the cardiac nerves; the thoracic ganglia, and, especially, by the pneumogastriacs and their recurrent branches.

ESOPHAGUS SUCCENTURIATUS, Pharyngocele.

ESTROMANIA, Nymphomania.

ESTRURATION, Orgasm, see Heat.

ESTRUM, Clitoris.

ESTRUM VENERIS, Æ. venereum, Æstrus venereus; from αιστρος, æstrus, 'a violent impulse or desire.' A vehement desire for sexual intercourse. Orgasm. With some, æstrum signifies Clitoris.

ESTRUS, Clitoris, see Ectozoa—œ. Veneris, Æstrum venereum.

ESY'PUS, from οἶς, 'a sheep.' The greasy matter of unwashed wool; formerly employed in friction in diseased joints.

EUFS, Ova.

OFFICE, PHYSICIAN'S or SURGEON'S, Iatronic.

OFFICINA, Pharmacopolium.

OFFIC'INAL, Officina'lis, from officina, for opificina, (from opifex (opus and facio), 'a workman,') 'a shop.' An epithet for medicines found in the shop of the apothecary, ready prepared—usua'lia; in opposition to magistral or extemporaneous,—those prepared after the prescription of the physician.

OFFIUM, Affion, Opium.

OFFSPRING, Epigone.

OFFUSCATIO, Amaurosis.

OGLA, Oogala.

O GNON, a Corn—o. Marin, Scilla.

OHIO, MINERAL WATERS OF. Yellow Spring is a chalybeate, situate in Greene county, 64 miles from Cincinnati. It is somewhat frequented.

OIL, FUSEL, Al'cohol amylicum (Ph. D.), Fousel oil, Pota'to oil, Grain oil, Cornspirit oil, Pota'to spirit oil, Oil of potatoes, Amylic al'cohol, Hydrated oxide of amyle, (G.) Fusel, an epithet for poor brandy.) An acrid volatile oil, formed in the manufacture of potato brandy, and which is not easily separable from it. Its chemical constitution is analogous to that of alcohol. It exhales a powerful and peculiarly suffocating odour. S. g. '818. In small doses it is highly stimulating,—acting like narcotics in general. In large doses it destroys the mucous membrane of the stomach. It is used by the Dublin College in the preparation of Sodæ valerianæ.

OIL, GRAIN, Oil, fusel.

OIL, HAERLEM. An empirical preparation supposed to consist chiefly of petroleum, turpentine, and balsam of sulphur. Used internally in renal and rheumatic affections.

OÏOCALYMMMA, Oïocalyp'trum; from οἶον, ov, 'egg,' and καλυπτειν, 'to cover;' Membra'na O'vuli cortica'lis. The membrane of the egg-shell.

OKRA, Hibiscus esculentus.

OLD AGE, Senectus.

OLD MAN, Artemisia abrotanum.

OLD WIFE'S SHIRT, Liriodendron.

OLEA ANIMAL'IA, Animal oils, (F.) Huiles animales. A name given to fixed oils holding in solution the mucilaginous and gelatinous principles of certain animals, as the Oil of Frogs, Oil of scorpions, Oil of spiders, &c. Sometimes, also, the term animal oils is given to empyreumatic oils, produced during the decomposition of animal substances by heat.

OLEA DESTILLATA, O. Volatilia.

OLEA EMPYREUMAT'ICA, Empyreumatic oils, (F.) Huiles empyreumatiques ou pyrogénées, Pyrelaïnes. Oils which have an empyreumatic or burnt smell. They are obtained by treating vegetable or animal matters by heat, in close vessels. They do not exist in organized bodies, but are formed during their decomposition by fire. The animal oil of Dippel is an empyreumatic oil.

OLEA EUROPE'IA, O. sativa seu lanceifolia seu polymorpha seu Gall'ica, Oli'va, Olive tree, ελατα, Ela'a, (F.) Olivier; (Fruit) Olive. Nat. Ord. Jasminæ. Sex. Syst. Diandria Monogynia. The leaves of the olive are bitter, and an extract prepared from them, and a substance called olivi'na, the bitter principle of the leaves, have been given in Italy as antiperiodics. The fruit, when pickled, is extremely grateful to some stomachs. Olives, as met with in the shops, are prepared from the green, unripe fruit, repeatedly steeped in water. To this, some quicklime or alkaline salt is added, and, afterwards, they are washed and preserved in a pickle of common salt and water. From this fruit is prepared the Olive oil or Salad oil of the Pharmacopœias, which is obtained by grinding and pressing the olives, when thoroughly ripe. The finer and purer oil issues first by gentle pressure, and the inferior sort on heating what is left, and pressing it more strongly. See Oleum Olivæ. In Calabria, an odorous resin exudes from its trunk, which is employed as a perfume by the Neapolitans.

A gum flows from certain wild olives, in warm countries, which consists, according to Pelletier, of a resin, a little benzoic acid, and a peculiar substance, called Olivile. It is in yellow masses, of a slightly acid taste, and of a vanilla smell. It is called Olea gummi, O. resi'na, and O. bals'amum, (F.) Gomme olivier, and is esteemed astringent and detersive.

OLEA FIXA SEU PIN'GUIA, Expressed, Fixed or Fatty oils, (F.) Huiles fixes ou grasses, Oléols. All the oils obtained from the seeds or pericarps of vegetables, without distillation, and which are viscid, but slightly odorous and sapid; lighter than water, and insoluble in alcohol. The rancidity of oils depends on the absorption of oxygen, and therefore they should be kept in bulk as much as possible, and in narrow-necked bottles, so that a very small surface only can be exposed to the air. All the fixed oils are emollient, and, in a certain dose, they act as purgatives and emetics. They are prepared by expressing the fruit or seed containing them.

OLEA FUGA'CIA, Fuga'cious oils, (F.) Huiles fugaces. A name given to oils which are so volatile that, in order to obtain them, recourse must be had to a different process from that employed for other essential oils. Such are the oils of jessamine, lily, violet, &c.

OLEA GALLICA, O. Europæa—o. Lanceifolia, O. Europæa.

OLEA MEDICINA'LIA, Medic'inal oils, (F.) Huiles Médicinales, Eléolés, Solution par les huiles. A name given to oils prepared by macerating, infusing, or boiling medicinal substances in olive or any other fixed oils. These oils may then be regarded as oily solutions of certain medicinal substances; whence they can never be simple. They have, however, been divided into simple and compound medicinal oils. To the former belong the Oils of St. John's wort, of the Solanum nigrum, &c.; to the other—which have often been called Oily balsams, (F.) Baumes huileux—the Balsams of Fioraventi, Metz, &c. Medicinal oils are, almost always, employed externally.

OLEA POLYMORPHA, O. Europæa—o. Sativa, O. Europæa.

OLEA VOLATIL'IA, O. destillata, Æthero'lea, Vol'atile, Ethe'real, Essential, or Distill'd oils, Es'sences, (F.) Huiles volatiles ou essentielles ou distillées ou éthérées, oléolats, oléules, oléoles. Oils found in aromatic vegetables, and in every part of them, except in the interior of the seeds. The majority are obtained by distillation; but some by expression. They possess unctuousity, inflammability, and viscosity, like the fixed oils; but they are generally odoriferous, pungent, and acid. The greater part are lighter than water; but some are heavier, and congeal at a moderate temperature. They dissolve, in small quantity, in distilled water, by simple agitation. Almost all are soluble in alcohol. The odour and taste are the usual tests of their goodness. To preserve them, they should be kept in a cool place, in small bottles, quite full and well corked. Volatile oils are possessed of the aromatic properties of the plants whence they are obtained. They are all, when applied externally, stimulant and rubefacient. Pharmaceutical preparations, in which substances are dissolved in volatile oils, (F.) Solutions par les huiles volatiles, are termed by Béral, Myrolés.

OLEAG'INOUS, Oleaginosus, Oleo'sus, (F.) Oléagineux; from oleum, 'oil.' Oily; containing oil,—as 'an oleaginous or oily mixture.'

OLEA'MEN, Oleamen'tum. Same etymon. Any soft ointment prepared of oil.—Scribonius.

OLEANDER, Rhododendron chrysanthemum.

OLECRANARTH'RITIS, from olecranon, αρθρον, 'joint,' and itis, denoting inflammation. Inflammation of the elbow joint.

OLECRANARTHROC'ACÉ, from ωλεκρανον, 'the olecranon,' αρθρον, 'articulation,' and κακία, 'vice or disease.' Inflammation of the articular surfaces of the elbow.—Rust.

OLECRAN'IAL, (F.) Olécranien. Relating or belonging to the olecranon.

OLECRANOID CAVITY, see Ulna.

OLEC'RANON, Otecranon, Olecranonum, Olecranon mobilē; from ωλεον, 'the elbow,' and κρανον, 'the head.' Acrole'nion, Additamen'tum ne'ca'tum, Ancon, Proces'sus ancon'eus seu uncinatus, Glans seu Coro'na seu Coro'na posterior seu Additamen'tum unca'tum Ulnæ, Vertex Ca'biti, Patel'la fixa, Rostrum exter'nium seu post'e'rius, Top of the cubit. Head or protection of the elbow. A large process at the upper extremity of the ulna, on which we lean. When this process is fractured, it is apt to be drawn up by the triceps, and much care is required to keep the parts in apposition.

OLEFIANT GAS, CHLORIDE OF, see Anæsthetic.

OLEIN, see Fat—o. Codliver, see Oleum jecoris aselli.

OLENE, Ulna.

OLEO-CERATUM, Cerate—o. c. Aquâ subac'tum, Ceratum Galeni.

OLÉO-CÉROLÉ, Cerate.

OLÉO-CÉROLÉ RÉSINEUX, Unguentum.

OLÉOLATS, Olea volatilia.

OLÉOLÉS, Olea volatilia.

OLÉOLS, Olea fixa.

OLÉO-SACCHAROLÉ, Elæosaccharum.

OLEOSACCHARUM, Elæosaccharum.

OLEOSUS, Oleaginous.

OLERA, see Lachanon.

OLLETTE, MINERAL WATERS OF. At Olette, in the department Pyrénées Orientales, is a thermal spring, which raises the thermometer to 190° Fahr. It is the hottest in France.

OLÉULES, Olea volatilia.

OLEUM, Oil—o. Abietis, see Pinus picea—o. Absinthii, Artemisia absinthium, (oil of)—o. Acusticum, Huile acoustique.

OLEUM ÆTHE'REUM, Spir'itus æ'theris oleo'sus, Æthe'ral oil (formed in the distillation of ether), Oleum vini, Oil of wine, Heavy oil of wine, Sweet oil of vit'riol, (F.) Huile douce de vin. A peculiar oleaginous matter, obtained by continuing the distillation, after the whole of the sulphuric ether has passed over in the process for the preparation of the latter. It is used only as an ingredient in the compound spirit of ether. It is official in the Ph. U. S.

OLEUM AMMONIATUM, Linimentum ammoniæ fortius.

OLEUM AMYGDALÆ AMA'RE, Oil of Bitter Almonds. An oil, obtained by distilling with water the kernels or the fruit of Amygdalus communis—variety, Amara. Its action is like that of hydrocyanic acid—four drops having destroyed a dog. Dose, a quarter of a drop to a drop. A drop to a fluidounce of water forms a wash, which has been used in Prurigo senilis, and other forms of itching.

OLEUM AMYGDALA'RUM, Oleum amygdalæ, Oil of Almonds, (F.) Huile d'amandes. (Expressed from both sweet and bitter almonds.—Amygdalus communis.) $\frac{3}{4}$ xvj of almonds yield $\frac{3}{4}$ v of oil. It is inodorous, insipid, and of a pale straw colour, and is employed as a demulcent and emollient.

OLEUM ANACARDII, see Anacardium occidentale.

OLEUM ANIMA'LĒ, Animal oil, (F.) Huile animale. An oil obtained by the decomposition of the immediate principles of animals, subjected to the action of heat. It is fetid, and always contains a certain quantity of subcarbonate of ammonia. See Olea Empyreumatica. The name animal oil is sometimes also given to the fat contained in the fatty vesicles. The composition of this fat does not, indeed, differ from that of the fixed oil.

OLEUM ANIMA'LĒ DIPPÉ'LI, O. cornu cervi, O. C. C. rectificatum, O. pyro-animalē depuratum seu animalē æthe'reum, Pyro'leum os'sium rectificatum, Animal oil, Animal oil of Dippel, (F.) Huile animale de Dippel ou de corne de cerf, is obtained by distilling animal matters, especially hartshorn, on the naked fire. The subcarbonate of ammonia, which it contains, renders it partly soluble in water, and communicates to it the stimulant properties for which it is used in medicine. It is employed as an antispasmodic.

OLEUM ANIMA'LĒ EMPYREUMAT'ICUM CHABER'TI, O. Empyreumaticum seu anthelminticum seu contra tæ'niam Chabert'i, Empyreumatic oil of Chabert, Oil of Chabert, (F.) Huile anthelmintique de Chabert, is made by adding one part of animal oil to three parts of oil of turpentine, leaving them to combine for four days, and then distilling three parts. An effective anthelmintic. Dose, a teaspoonful three times a day.

OLEUM ANIMALIZA'TUM PER INFUSIO'NEM, (F.) Huile animalisée par infusion, H. aromatique ou de petits chiens. A preparation, formerly esteemed tonic and cephalic. It was obtained by boiling new-born puppies in oil, first depriving them of their blood, skin, and intestines. When the decoction was cold, origanum, thyme, pennyroyal, St. John's wort, and marjoram were added.

OLEUM ANISI, see Pimpinella anisum—o. Anthelminticum Chaberti, Oleum animale empyreumaticum Chaberti—o. Anthemidis, see Anthemis nobilis—o. Aurantii, see Citrus aurantium—o. Balaninum, Guilandina moringa (oleum)—o. Balsami, see Amyris opobalsamum.

OLEUM BENZO'INI, Oil of Benzoin or Benjamin. An oil obtained by heating, in a sand-bath, the matter which remains after benzoic acid has been separated from benzoin by the aid of heat. It has been regarded as balsamic and sudorific.

OLEUM BERGAMII, see Bergamot.

OLEUM BU'BULUM, Neat's-foot oil, (F.) Huile de pieds de bœuf. It is obtained by boiling in water for a long time the feet of the beef—Bos domes'ticus—previously deprived of the hoof. It is introduced into the official list of the Ph. U. S. as an ingredient of the ointment of nitrate of mercury.

OLEUM CACAO SPISSATUM, Butter of Cacao—o. Cadinum, see Juniperus oxycedrus—o. Cajuputi, Caieput (oil)—o. Camphoratum, Linimentum camphoræ—o. Cari seu Carui, Carum (oleum)—o. Caryophylli, see Eugenia caryophyllata.
